NAPLES.—The "good King" of the Two Sicilies, finding his kingdom in a state of perfect tranquility, has begun to show what he understands by the "blessings of peace," and what is his example of moderation he has set his loyal subjects, by adopting the most harsh and violent measures against those who are known to be favourable to a constitutional form of Government. Accounts, dated the 5th, state that the Neapolitan prisons have been sent into exile.—MM. Leanza, a celebrated physician of Naples, and his son; Mancini, ex-deputy; Pisanelli, ex deputy; Francisco Ruggiero, late Minister of the Finances; Conforte, late Minister of the Interior; Pironte, ex-Prefect of Naples; Duke Donato Casati; Giordano, architect and professor of mathematics, ex-deputy. These persons all disembarked at Genoa. They are only the first instalment, as they are to be followed by a great number more, who have either quitted or have been taken to flight as marked men. Besides these, a great number of ex-deputies have been arrested, and now fill the prisons of Naples. Among them are MM. Scialoia, Marzia, Capone, Cardona, de Luca, the two brothers Gaetan, and André Zir, the cousins of Dragonetti.

It is strange that M. Ruggiero should be among the proscribed. He was a member of the Provisional Government, and was called a reactionary cabinet, because under it the revolt of the 15th of May, 1848, was suppressed, and the Emperor of the system of a constitutional monarchy, which at that time had just been installed, was suppressed by military force. Altogether, out of the 120 members who composed the Deputies of 1848 have left the Kingdom, or have been detained, and it is stated that orders have been given to arrestall the others.

It is impossible to conjecture what is the object of King Ferdinand in authorising such measures. Some think it is to put to flight enlightened and moderate [illegible], and to suppress the Constitution; others are of opinion that it is to strike terror into the public mind, and that it is but the commencement of rigorous which will end in the entire abolition of the Constitution.

ROME.—There is no news of interest from the Eternal City. The rumour of the Pope's speedy return was very prevalent.

PIEDMONT.—The Piedmontese Gazette publishes a law of the 29th ult., allowing a further subsidy of 100,000f for the assistance of Italian refugees. Garibaldi sailed from the island of Maddalena for Gibraltar and England, where he is to embark for New York.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

The news from the Danube this week is of a sanguinary character; and, though the late events in Hungary have familiarised men's minds with bloodshed, and thereby rendered them less easily shocked by instances of human slaughter, the execution at Pesth of one of the highest and noblest magnates of the Magyar aristocracy (Count Louis Batthyany, the late Prime Minister of Hungary) has produced the most gloomy sensations, and feelings of mingled terror, hatred, and disgust amongst all the Liberals of the Austrian empire.

The unfortunate nobleman, for his participation in the late insurrection, was originally sentenced to be hanged, in order that his death might be as ignominious as possible; but, further to gratify the foul spirit of revenge, the execution was fixed for the 6th instant, the anniversary of the murder of the Austrian Minister of War (Count Latour) last year, at Vienna, in which crime Count Louis Batthyany was a participator by instigation. This, however, is most probably a calumny. To avoid the infamy of death by the rope, the unfortunate noble had wounded himself with a dagger (sent by his wife) in the throat, intending to commit suicide; and, although the attempt at self-destruction failed, yet he escaped the ordeal of hanging, to which he had been condemned. About twelve hours subsequently, viz. at six o'clock in the evening of the 6th, he received a soldier's death, as the wounds in his neck did not admit of his being hanged. He walked erect, with a firm step, to the place of execution, although pale and haggard; and, on arriving at the fatal spot, behind the Neugebaude, he passed a few seconds in prayer. His eyes were then bound with a handkerchief, a signal was given with the drum; three riflemen advanced close up to him—fired—and the unfortunate man fell dead, without either groan or struggle. The last words he uttered were, "Elijen a hazal!" ("My country for ever!")

Eight of the Magyar generals were hanged, and four were shot, at Arad on the same day. The names of the Hungarian generals hanged are: Schmidel, Damjanich (whose obsequies passed off quietly up Arad), Nagy-Sandor, Knesich, Aulich, Versey, Piltenberg, Türök. Those who were shot, their sentence having been commuted to death by powder and lead, were Ernst Kiss, Aristides Desewffy, Lazar, and Leiningen. It is said that an imperial reprieve was sent to Arad for the prisoners, but so late as to create suspicion that it was merely intended to give a varnish of clemency to the Court, without rescuing the victims from punishment. Several other victims of minor note have been put to death; amongst them some Catholic priests.

Count Stephen Karoly, at Pesth, was condemned to two years' imprisonment in a fortress and 150,000 florins fine.

Several Hungarian officers of those furnished with passports from Comorn have passed through Berlin on their way to the west. Some of them are going to America. Kapka is said to have been among these refugees, and to have announced the resolution of crossing the Atlantic

The Cologne Gazette confirms the statement that General Bem, having embraced the Mahommedan faith, received the name of Amurath, and was immediately raised to the dignity of a Pasha with three tails.

RUSSIA.

Success smiles for the nonce on the arms of the Czar. On the 29th of August the fortress of Akulga, the capital of the Circassian chief Schamil, in the Caucasian Mountains, was taken after a siege of eleven months. The engagement was very severe, Schamil had 1000 men killed, besides wounded, and 800 of his men were made prisoners; the Russians had 444 killed, and many wounded. Schamil, one of his sons, and a certain number of his wives had disappeared; another wife and a second son were killed, and a third son was made prisoner. Schamil was wounded in the arm by a bullet.

UNITED STATES.

Advices to the 3rd inst., from New York, have been received this week.

The alleged correspondence between Mr. Clayton, the Secretary of State, and Mr. Crampton, the British Minister, relative to the affairs of the Mosquito territory, has, according to the newspaper organ of Mr. Clayton, never taken place!

The disturbance of the relations with France seems to produce some apprehension, not absolutely of war, but interruption of the friendly intercourse which has so long subsisted between the two countries.

M. Poussin, the French Minister, had left Washington for New York, where he intended awaiting instructions from his Government. Previous to leaving Washington he made repeated efforts to have an interview with the President and Secretary of State, and, for this purpose, the friendly services of Mr. Crampton, the British Charge, were interposed. They were unsuccessful, however, as neither General Taylor nor Mr. Clayton would receive it proper, after the steps that had already been taken, to hold any intercourse which might become of an official character with M. Poussin.

The affair of the Mouse rioters, in the Macready and Forrest affair, have been convicted of participation in the disgraceful scenes on the memorable 10th of May last. After a long and wearisome trial, a verdict of guilty was returned.

There had been terrible destructive fires at Owego, Cincinnati, and other towns. That at Owego commenced in a boot store, and resisted all efforts to arrest its progress until the entire business portion of the town was laid in ruins —only two stores of any note escaping the flames. The number of buildings destroyed is about 80, among which are all those on Main-street, and all on Lake-street as far down as the Central Hotel. The large bridge across the Susquehanna was burned. The loss is roughly set down at 500,000 dollars. Among the property destroyed is the post-office, with all that it contained. A fortunate change of wind saved the remainder of the town.

Yucatan accounts mention that England was about to intervene for the pacification of the Peninsula by virtue of a contract with the President of the Republic, on condition that the Art of Bucalos and jurisdiction be ceded to England.

CANADA.

Accounts from Montreal, under date of the 28th ult., state that the riots at Bytown had been renewed. The two parties had met, and a terrible conflict ensued. Numbers had been dreadfully wounded, and eight lives were reported to be lost.

There was a rumour of an intention to remove the Administration from Montreal.

CALIFORNIA.

We have advices from San Francisco to August 18th.

The news from the mines represents the yield of gold as steady. It is estimated that the average product of all the mines together thus far, since the beginning of the season, has been 2,000,000 dollars per month, and there was thought to be no doubt of its continuance at the same rate of abundance.

The Americans had determined that the American Citizens who were at the mines should no longer enjoy the privilege of digging.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The racing fixtures for the remainder of the present month comprehend the Newmarket Houghton Meeting, commencing on Monday, and terminating on Saturday; Leek on Monday, Ilkley on Friday, and Richmond on Tuesday, in the succeeding week. There will be a sort of after season in November, made up of flat and steeple racing, to which will succeed the regular winter campaign. It promises to be a good but not a brilliant one. Sickness has prevailed to so great an extent in the racing stables at Newmarket, that the sport there next week will, as regards matches, fall below the average; at least we collect as much from the diminution in handicap horses at the late meeting: the list, however, contains an immense number of proposed plates, handicaps, and selling stakes, in addition to the Cambridgeshire (to be run for on Tuesday) and other standing engagements, so that we may fairly anticipate a large quantity of racing. The coursing fixtures next week comprehend Hutton Moor on Monday, North Berwick and Ettrick Forest on Tuesday, and Glossop on Wednesday—nothing to report the metropolitan lovers of the leash. The "Steeple-Chase Calendar" is "blank."

TATTERSALL'S.

THURSDAY.—A tolerably lively afternoon on the whole as regarded the Cambridgeshire—Ruby, Ribality, Woolwich, Alarm, Collingwood, and Gwendoline for the favourite, with plenty of backers; per contra, Legerdemain and Joe-o'-Sot were sent to the right about. An immense field is expected. The Knight of Avenel and Ghilie Calum were in demand on Saturday at improved quotations

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.
1 to 1 agst Rathmines (x)	14 to 1 agst Vanguard	25 to 1 agst Over-fork-over (t)
10 to 1 ——— Ribality (x)	15 to 1 ——— Collingwood	30 to 1 ——— Minimum
11 to 1 ——— Ruby (x)	15 to 1 ——— Rizzio	50 to 1 ——— Legerdemain
13 to 1 ——— Woolwich (t)	20 to 1 ——— Malton	50 to 1 ——— Joe-o'-Sot
13 to 1 ——— Glaucus		66 to 1 ——— Fitzpatrick
CHESTERTON.
2 to 1 agst The Nigger (t)	4 to 1 agst Tordeallas
DERBY.
8 to 1 agst Lord Eglinton's colt (x)	17 to 1 agst Ghilie Calum	33 to 1 agst Penang
11 to 1 ——— Bridgebrake	20 to 1 ——— Climber	40 to 1 ——— Deacon
13 to 1 ——— Knight of Avenel	25 to 1 ——— Cyprus	40 to 1 ——— The Nigger
	25 to 1 ——— Beerdhaert	40 to 1 ——— Windhound (t)

SEWERS COMMISSION.—On Wednesday, at one o'clock, the members of the New Commission of Sewers, appointed under an act passed in the last session of Parliament, held their first meeting at the Mitre Tavern, Soho. The following members of the commission were present:—Capt. Vetch, Sir John Burgoyne, Sir Henry De la Beche, Lieut.-Colonel Alderson, Capt. Robert K. Dawbeny, Capt. Pechell, R.N., Capt. Phillips, R.E., Capt. Harness; S. M. Peto, Esq., M.P; J. M. Rendall, Esq.; Viscount Ebrington, and Thomas Hawes, Esq. The only member of the commission absent was Robert Stephenson, Esq., M.P. After the proceedings having been moved to the chair, explained the object of the commission, and the duties of the commissioners, and expressed a hope that a more cordial spirit would be evinced, and a more uniform course of conduct be observed by the commissioners and their officers, than had characterised the proceedings of the last commission. The commissioners then proceeded to the election of the officers of the commission, when Mr. [illegible] was unanimously elected chairman, and Mr. [illegible] was appointed secretary. Mr. [illegible] was appointed [illegible]

THE KING'S-ROAD, EATON-SQUARE.—This fashionable locality, so far as the central portion of it, called the King's-road, which leads in a direct line to the westward from the Palace, is still, owing to the non-arrangement of the misunderstanding which exists between the local authorities and the contractors, in a state of total darkness. The road lamps are left entirely unlighted at night, which is the cause of much inconvenience and danger to pedestrians, as well as to the drivers of vehicles passing along the road, and which will, of course, not be at all lessened by the advent of dark nights and bad weather, to be expected at the ensuing season. The present condition of the place is certainly very inconvenient to the public, and very disgraceful to the parties concerned, and it is hoped that some satisfactory arrangement will speedily be come to on the subject. Above all things, the inhabitants should remember that they cannot be compelled to pay their paving, lighting, and watering rates so long as the principal thoroughfares in the district are neither repaired, lighted, nor watered.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

ARRIVAL OF THE COURT AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

Her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by the ladies and gentlemen of the Royal household, left Buckingham Palace at ten minutes past one o'clock on Saturday last, for Windsor Castle. Her Majesty and his Royal Highness were escorted, by a detachment of Hussars, from the Palace to the Nine Elms station of the London and South-Western Railway (for the first time) by a special train on that London and South-Western Railway (for the first time) by a special train on the London and South-Western Railway and were escorted by a detachment of the 1st Life Guards (commanded by the Earl of Mountcharles) to Windsor Castle, where they arrived at a quarter-past two o'clock. The Prince of Wales and the other youthful branches of the Royal family had arrived at the Castle about an hour previously, from the Isle of Wight.

The Queen and Prince Albert, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household attended divine service on Sunday morning in the private chapel of the Castle. The Hon. and Rev. G. Wellesley officiated.

His Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar joined the Royal dinner circle on Monday.

On Tuesday the Queen and the Prince took their accustomed early morning walk. His Royal Highness afterwards enjoyed the sport of pheasant shooting. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent dined at the Castle in the evening.

The Earl of Carlisle arrived at the Castle on Wednesday, on a visit to her Majesty and the Prince Consort.

The Count and Countess de Neuilly, accompanied by the Prince de Joinville, the Duke d'Aumale, and by Prince Alexander of Wurtemberg and Prince Philippe of Wurtemberg, visited the Queen and Prince Albert on Thursday, and partook of luncheon at Windsor Castle.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

We announced last week, with very sincere regret, the serious indisposition of her Majesty the Queen Dowager. We are sorry to say that no favourable change has since taken place in her Majesty's symptoms; and great fears are entertained for the result

Sir Benjamin Brodie and Mr. Keate are in attendance upon her Majesty, and we believe that Dr. Bright has been sent for from Scotland to consult with the former gentlemen. On Dr. Bright's arrival, there is too much reason to fear that bulletins will be issued

The Queen and Prince Albert visited their illustrious relative on Friday last, at Bentley Priory. The Duchess of Cambridge, the Hereditary Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg Strelitz, and Prince George, have also visited her Majesty within the last few days.

The Bishop of London was in attendance upon her Majesty on Thursday.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, attended by Lady Anna Maria Dawson and the Baroness de Speth, left her residence, Clarence House, St. James's, on Tuesday morning, for Frogmore House.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester received their Royal Highness the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge at dinner on Monday, at her residence, Richmond Park.

The Count and Countess de Neuilly visited her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent on Saturday, at Clarence House, St. James's.

His Royal Highness the Infante Don Juan of Spain, accompanied by Gen. Cevera, left town on Tuesday night for the Continent.

Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess (Dowager) of Baden and suite have arrived at the Clarendon Hotel.

The Princess Lieven has left town for Paris.

The Prince and Princess Duria Pamphili and their youthful family have left town for the Continent.

The Duke and Duchess of Montrose have arrived in town, from a tour of the German Spas. The noble Duke and Duchess shortly leave for Buchanan Castle, North Britain.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Douglas and family have left town for Scotland

The Earl of Durham has just been added to the Commission of the Peace for the county of Northumberland, by the Lord-Lieutenant, Earl Grey

The Viscountess Maidstone was safely delivered of a daughter on Saturday last, at Alnwick Castle.

The Viscount Brackley is said to be progressing favourably towards recovery.

Lord Brougham has arrived at his château at Cannes, in the south of France, where his Lordship proposes remaining for about three months.

Colonel the Hon. N. Hood has relieved Sir Edward Bowater in his duties as Groom in Waiting to the Queen. The Hon. Miss Cavendish has also arrived at the Castle, to take her duty as Maid of Honour in Waiting.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

The Regius Professor of Divinity proposes to resume the reading of Dr. Routh's Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Opuscula, on Thursday, the 25th inst.

The Rev. Professor Powell, of Oriel College, to commence a course of public lectures on Monday, the 19th of November, at one o'clock, at Christ Church.

The following Heads of Houses have been nominated by the Vice-Chancellor to act as Pro-Vice-Chancellors during his absence at any time from the University viz. Dr. Wynter, President of St. John's; Dr. Symons, Warden of Wadham; Dr. Richards, Rector of Exeter; Dr. Cotton, Provost of Worcester.

The Rev. W. S. Newman, M.A., of Wadham College, and Assistant-Master of the Grammar School, Warwick, has been appointed Master of Dr. Challoner's Grammar-School, Amersham, Bucks.

The Rev. Stephen Lee, a Fellowship belonging to the six counties of North Wales being now vacant, a native of one of the counties aforesaid, who can speak the Welsh language, will be elected into the vacant Fellowship on the 28th inst.

The Savilian Professor of Geometry proposes to commence a course of lectures at his house, in New College-lane, on Tuesday, the 23rd instant, at two o'clock. These lectures comprise preliminary Illustrations, by means of models &c., of the conic sections and other curves and surfaces, the principles of algebraic geometry and of the differential and integral calculus, with outlines of the history of mathematics. Gentlemen who wish to attend are requested to call on Professor Price, on Monday, the 22nd instant, at two o'clock.

The Reader in Experimental Philosophy will commence a course of lectures on mechanics, at the Clarendon, on Wednesday, Oct. 24, at one o clock These lectures will be continued at the same hour every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, until completed. Gentlemen desirous of attending are requested to put down their names at the lecture-room, in the Clarendon, on the day preceding the commencement of the lectures, or at the close of the first lecture.

The Laudian Professor of Arabic proposes to begin an elementary lecture at the Clarendon on Wednesday, the 24th instant, at three o'clock.

Dean Ireland's Professor of the Exegesis of Holy Scripture proposes to commence a course of lectures, by lecture in the Clarendon, at two o'clock on Tuesday, the 23rd of October. These lectures are open to members of the University who have passed the examination for the degrees of B.A.; and those who desire to attend them are requested to leave their names at the Professor's house on Monday, Oct 22.

An election will take place at Oriel College on Friday, Nov. 2, of two scholars. Candidates must not have exceeded twenty years of age, nor if members of the University have matriculated more than eight terms. Certificates of time of birth and baptism, and testimonials of good conduct, to be presented to the Provost of Oriel on or before Monday, Oct. 28.

CAMBRIDGE.

At a congregation, held on Wednesday last, the under-mentioned degrees were conferred:—B.D., Rev. C. J. Abraham, King's College. M.B., J. Anthony, Caius College. At the same congregation, the following graces passed the senate:—To appoint Dr. Bond, of Corpus Christi College, examiner for medical degrees during the ensuing year; to appoint Dr. Woodham, of Jesus College, an examiner for the Le Bas prize of the present year; to appoint Mr. Humphry, of Trinity College, an examiner for the Le Bas prize of the present year; to allow Mr. Skinner, of Jesus, Mr. Frere, of Downing, Mr. Birkett, of Jesus, Mr. Richardson, of Trinity, and Mr. Power, of Pembroke College, to remain their regencys; to authorise his Vice-Chancellor to register in the names of the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars, £1800 Eastern Counties Railway guaranteed Stock No 2, the certificates of which have been transferred to the university for the purpose of founding the Adams Prize.

PREFERMENTS.—Rev. P. C. Marshall to St. John's Weston C., near Bath, dio. B. and W.; patron, the Bishop of Chancellor. Rev. [illegible] to William Friary P. C., Somerset, dio. B. and W.; [illegible] tron, Duke of Somerset. Rev F. Bourdillon, to [illegible] Value, without residence, £400; patron, Rev. L. T. Beaumont and wife. Rev. T. B. Powell, Vicar of Newick, Sussex, collated to the prebendal stall of Sidlesham, in Chichester Cathedral, vacant by the death of W. P. Woodward; patron, Bishop of Chichester. Rev. E. W. Dickinson, to Shillingstone with West Chinnock C., dio. B. and W.; patron, Earl of Egremont.—Rev. C Wharton, to Sturry [illegible] tio of Canterbury; £219 with residence; vacant by the resignation of [illegible] patron, the Archbishop of Canterbury.—Rev. J. J. Wilkinson, to [illegible] dio. of Canterbury, vacant by the death of Rev. R. Davies; [illegible] W. Booker, to Stodmarsh P. C., Kent, dio. of Canterbury, [illegible] the cession of Rev. R. Fraser; patron, the Archdeacon [illegible] hor R., Glamorganshire, diocese St. David's, £180, [illegible] H. W. Jones; patron, the Lord Chancellor. Lunch R., Staffordshire, diocese St. David's, void by death of Rev. G. [illegible] 40; patron, T. Lloyd, Esq., Bronwydd, Newcastle Emlyn.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—On Tuesday, the day appointed for the opening of the session of the Faculty of Arts and Laws at the Institution, the course of studies was introduced in a lecture by the Professor of Chemistry, Dr. Williamson. The Botanical Theatre, in which the address was delivered, was well filled, the students appeared in academic costume, and the scene was animated by the presence of a considerable number of ladies.

COUNTRY NEWS.

PROTECTION TO AGRICULTURE.—NEW SCHEME OF AGITATION.

The Protectionists continue their agitation, and the movement begins to assume some shape.

On Tuesday there was a meeting of the committee of the Reigate Protectionist Society held at Reigate, the proceedings at which were of some importance, as foreshadowing and taking the initiatory step in the movement which has been resolved upon by the National Association for the Protection of British Industry, with the view of obtaining a dissolution of the present Parliament, and the election of another in favour of Protectionist principles. Mr. G. F. Young, the chairman of the National Association, and Mr. Cayley Worsley, were also present, on the invitation of the committee.

Mr. Paul Foskett, who occupied the chair, explained the present position of the case. At the last meeting of the committee it was agreed that a circular should be sent to those gentlemen in the various counties of England on whom they could place the greatest reliance as the approved friends of the principle of protection to native industry, and, in pursuance of that determination, the following circular had been addressed to them:—

Eastwood Lodge, Reigate, Sept. 29, 1849.

Dear Sir,—I am directed by a committee of the Reigate Protection Society to solicit the favour of your advice and co-operation. We are anxious to learn from you whether, in the event of measures being taken, early and constitutionally, to obtain "Justice to British industry," you would be prepared to carry out a similar plan. It is right that I should state that our first endeavour will be to obtain a dissolution of the present Parliament, believing such a step would be immediately followed in your neighbourhood? It has been suggested that meetings in large market-towns and seaports throughout the kingdom would be more desirable than county meetings. Will you favour me with your opinion upon this point also?

Perceiving that immediately the invitation was issued, the gentlemen present expressed through a continuance of the ill-advised and pernicious legislation of the last few years, and well knowing the deep interest you take in the welfare of all classes, I believe it to be unnecessary to apologise to you for this communication.

May I solicit the favour of an early answer, and remain,

Dear Sir, faithfully yours, PAUL FOSKETT.

In answer to this communication, upwards of one hundred and sixty letters had been received, seven of which only expressed any doubt with regard to the proposal, and three only met it with a decided negative—the three being Mr. Thomas Ellman, Sussex; Mr. Robert Baker, of Writtle, who was not now so strongly with them as he used to be; and Mr Goldhawk, of Guildford. The whole of the remaining letters were in the most decided approval. (Cheers.) At the meeting of the committee to which he had referred, it was also suggested that no active proceedings should be adopted until they had heard whether or not the opinion of the country was with them. It had been turned out to be the case, they should then take the initiative; but it had so happened that there was no necessity for them to take the initiative, inasmuch as it had already been taken by the National Association, of which they had the honour of seeing then present. (Cheers.) No sooner had that gentleman returned from the Continent than he summoned the acting committee of the association together for the purpose of doing something for the relief of those interests, agriculture amongst them, which were now suffering so severely from the effects of free trade. That committee assembled in London the day previous, when it was determined by them that the step which the Reigate Society had proposed, as an isolated body, should be followed out by the National Society. (Cheers.)

Several of the letters received in answer to the circular were then read to the meeting, including one from the Duke of Richmond, one from the Earl of Winchilsea, and a characteristic one from Mr. Munts, the member for Birmingham, in which the hon. gentleman says:

I am pleased to learn from it that agriculturists are now aware of the ruin which I have long ago foretold must fall upon them, with free imports and a currency on a gold system. The former would not have injured them if it had not been assisted by the latter, and the old system of protection only acted there against the effects of the new system, when there was a short supply, and thereby committed a gross injustice upon all other industry which had to compete with foreign labour.

Mr. G. F. Young, the President of the National Association, in the course of his observations having adverted to Mr. Disraeli, as

A respected individual from whom they had already received much good, but from whom he expected much more, if the vivacity of his imagination should not unfortunately prompt him to rash precipitancy into a course in which his transcendant talents might be thrown away, thus dealt with that hon. gentleman's new financial scheme:

Now, when he saw that gentleman was proposing the imposition of a land-tax and the application of the produce of that tax to some particular end—and he did not wish to speak disrespectfully of it, or characterise it as a cockney cab—he (Mr. Young) felt that in view which had been hastily taken up by Mr. Disraeli, and that it would not meet with the universal concurrence of the protective classes in the country. (Hear, hear.) But if half (cheers) of those voices, "No, no.") He was certain that it had not. (Hear, hear.) Well, that had been attained by the majority pronounced, and they were now in a position to consider a course without a diminution of taxation, the surplus of income over expenditure to be appealed to a proper object, by aid of a sinking fund, in the course of a period not defined, but which must necessarily be very remote, was to bring that relief to those which they were all so clamorous for obtaining. Now, if they were to reduce the national debt by £5,000,000, and the interest thereon were 3 per cents. how much of annual taxation, he would ask, would they be thereby enabled to take off, so as to give relief to suffering British interests? (Hear.)

Mr. Young thus sketched out the new scheme of agitation:—

It would not, perhaps, be quite consistent with the position he held if he gave verbatim et literatim the resolutions which were to come to at the meeting in London next Tuesday; but the substance of them he had no hesitation in stating frankly and plainly. It was this. That, in the judgment of the committee, considering the great variety of opinions that prevailed throughout the country, and among the different interests of the community, as to the specific measures of relief that ought to be contended for, no more effectual way, with universality in the opinion that protection to all interests ought to be insisted upon, it was unwise and impolitic to pledge themselves, or the Association of which they were all so honourably members, to any particular measure, but that they should take their stand upon the broad principle, and upon all the friends of protection in the country ourselves to effect the re-establishment of the principle of Protection as the groundwork and guide of legislative policy. (Cheers.) Protection, then, was their first position. Then they went on to say how they were to contend for it; and that they were of opinion that the dissolution of Parliament and a change of Ministry That was a practical corollary (Cheers.) And, therefore, they presented itself, from the universal cry for dissolution of Parliament and a change of Ministry? The answer was, through the strongest and most universal expression of public opinion that could be obtained, and, indeed, bringing the expression of that opinion to bear in a constitutional manner upon the Crown. That was their recommendation. Following up the Reigate Society's example, and before them, town and district meetings throughout the country, united for the same object of addressing the Crown, would be the best means by which to bring that pressure to bear. And, lastly, a committee was appointed, whose duty it would be to take the necessary steps for carrying out these arrangements Thus, through the medium of addresses, declaring their belief that Parliament, as at present constituted, did not express the sentiments of the people —that the policy which that Parliament had followed had produced great difficulty and distress, and threatened ruin to the community—and that they were determined, as British subjects, to the protection of the British Crown and legislature—they could call upon her Majesty to give the people an opportunity, by the unequivocal mode of a general election, to place in the legislature such men as might faithfully represent their sentiments and opinions (Loud cheers.)

The course adopted by the Committee of the Association, with respect to Mr. Disraeli's financial measure, was as follows:—

To avoid placing themselves in a position of antagonism to that gentleman, they, therefore, passed a resolution expressive of their strong confidence in him and in his intentions, and of their extreme regret that they could not give their sanction to the course of policy which he had indicated, and which was supported by so many of his colleagues. They also appointed a deputation to wait upon Mr. Disraeli for the purpose of explaining their views

The adoption of resolutions in accordance with the object of the meeting closed the proceedings.

SUPPOSED CASE OF CATALEPSY.—On Friday morning week, at half-past nine o'clock, Mr. Byron Blythe, residing at Orchard-street, Bristol, son of a gentleman of independent property residing in London, and nephew of Mr Blythe, of the firm of Blythe and Green, the celebrated sub-miners, of London, was apparently taken with cholera, and the disease, in spite of medical aid, assumed a most alarming appearance, and, notwithstanding the unremitting attention of Dr. Green, Dr. Wallis, and Mr. Kelson, he gradually sank, and about half-past two o'clock, on Saturday morning it was announced that he had expired. When Dr. Green left him late on Friday night, he considered that there were exhibited evident symptoms of his rallying, and at the early hour of six o'clock on Saturday morning he got up for the purpose of visiting him. On his way he was met by a person who told him that Mr. Blythe was dead, but that if he wished he could see the body. Dr. Green was rather surprised at the sudden decease of the gentleman, considering the favourable symptoms he had exhibited a few hours before, and, on reaching the house, felt the body, and found that in the interim the body had been screwed down, but as the carpenter was present he insisted upon having him unscrewed. The body was covered with sawdust, on the removal of which there were no traces of decomposition, and it was still warm. Dr. Green accordingly ordered that the body should not be interred till he had again seen it, and he proceeded to Dr. Wallis and Mr. Kelson, and informed them of the circumstances of the case. All the medical gentlemen again saw the body at nine o'clock on Sunday morning, and decided upon not proceeding for twelve o'clock, in the meantime directing that the funeral should not take place. At that time they were accompanied by Dr. Gillow, of Clifton, and Mr. James Ford, surgeon, of Bristol, with whom the above gentlemen had been in consultation, and further steps were then taken for instruction. Mr. Gore, galvanist, was likewise present. The body was still warm, and they accordingly resolved to make some experiments upon it. They first injected the viscera with warm salt and water, but without producing any effect. They then subjected the body to powerful galvanic shocks, which had the effect of changing the colour and rendering the hands more supple. It likewise produced motion at the extremities, but there were no other perceptible signs of life. The body was then ordered to be laid out in the usual manner out of a coffin, and without any sawdust or anything about it. After this the whole of the night, the extraordinary warmth of the body continued up to Wednesday morning, and the limbs and muscles showed neither the rigidity nor the decomposition of death. At length, on Wednesday afternoon, the first appearances of death began to manifest themselves. The hand and arm exhibited strong traces of decomposition, and the arms were quite blue. An inquest was commenced on the body the same evening, before the Coroner, J. B. Brandon, Esq.; and the jury viewed it prior to its being interred in the cemetery. No evidence, however, was taken, and the inquest was adjourned for some days, when medical evidence, tending to show the causes of the very extraordinary appearances presented in this case, will be given.

A man named John Deval died last week from the effects of the bite of a tiger, which he received whilst visiting Batty's menagerie at Birmingham fair. Deval was drunk when he entered the show, and he incautiously leant his arm on the framework of the den in which the animal was confined.

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.

The "Financial and Parliamentary Reformers" are not behind their Protectionist antagonists in strenuous exertion to win the popular favour, to advance their own especial movement.

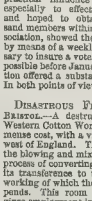
A meeting, described as "decidedly the largest, the most enthusiastic, and the most important, which has taken place in Aberdeen for a long time," was held at the Union Hall in that town, on Monday last, in support of the principles of the Metropolitan Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association. About 2000 persons were present. On the platform were Sir Joshua Walmsley, M.P. for Bolton; George Thompson, Esq., M.P.; and Mr. Cuninghame, his colleague for the representation of Brighton, and a member of the council, who attended as a deputation from the Metropolitan Association. Feargus O'Connor, Esq., M.P., was also present. Speeches, and the adoption of resolutions of the usual character, formed the proceedings, which were closed by the appointment of a committee to superintend the formation of a local branch association.

On Tuesday a meeting of the association at Stratford was held, at which explanations were given on the freehold land scheme. The council wished to devise practical measures, as it was only through the representative body that any peaceable change could be effected, and it was solely by peaceable means that the council sought to attain its object. The subscription of one shilling a week for a few years would give to the working classes a practical influence in the country. The association was established especially to effect that object, and was proceeding most satisfactorily, and hoped to obtain in the metropolis alone from twenty to thirty thousand members within a twelvemonth. A report, issued by the Birmingham Association, showed the thorough practicability of securing a freehold in five years by means of a weekly subscription of 1s. As a six months' possession was necessary to insure a vote, the association wished to obtain as many subscriptions as possible before January next. Not only could a vote be secured, but the association offered a substantial and safe investment for the working man's savings. In both points of view the object was most important.

DISASTROUS FIRE AT THE GREAT WESTERN COTTON WORKS, BRISTOL.—A destructive fire broke out on Friday night week, at the Great Western Cotton Works, Barton-hill, Bristol, a pile of buildings erected at an immense cost, with a view to the introduction of the cotton manufactures into the west of England. The fire was discovered first, at a little before five o'clock, in the blowing and mixing room—a compartment of the factory in which the first process of converting the cotton from its raw material takes place, previous to its transference to the spinning-rooms, and upon the regular and successful working of which the conduct of the entire manufactory in a main degree depends. This room was filled with complicated and expensive machinery; it gives employment immediately to about 100 boys and girls, but the whole of the hands engaged in the works, numbering about 1800, will be stopped by the catastrophe. The fire was not got under until the part of the building in which it originated was completely gutted, and the whole of the valuable machinery and some thousand pounds' worth of raw cotton reduced to ashes.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

EDWARD, BISHOP OF LLANDAFF



This learned and estimable Prelate, distinguished alike for his classical attainments, his episcopal ability, and his preeminently excellent private life, died on Sunday, the 14th inst., aged 73. His Lordship was son of the Rev. John Bradford Copleston, Prebendary of Exeter, and derived his descent from one of the oldest families in England. There is an old proverbial distich in Devon, allusive to the antiquity of the name:—

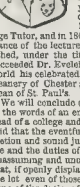
Croker, Crewys, and Copleston,
When the Conqueror came, were at home.

His early education he followed under the paternal roof, with such success, that, at the age of 15, he was elected a scholar of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and within three years gained the prize for Latin verse, which was then the only prize for which undergraduates could contend. In 1790 he became a Fellow of Oriel, in 1797 was appointed College Tutor, and in 1802 had the Professorship of Poetry conferred on him. The substance of the lectures he delivered while filling that chair he subsequently published, under the title of "Prælectiones Academicæ." In 1814, Dr. Copleston succeeded Dr. Eveleigh as Provost of Oriel, and not very long after gave to the world his celebrated work on Predestination. In 1826 he was presented to the Deanery of Chester; and, in the following year, became Bishop of Llandaff and Dean of St. Paul's.

We will conclude our brief summary of this distinguished churchman's career with the eminent commendation bestowed upon him with the close of his career as the head of a college and a leading member of the University of Oxford, it may be said that the eventful portion of his life in a great degree terminated. The distinction and influence which he manifested in conducting the affairs of his see and the duties of his deanery, left little that was open to reproach; while his unassuming and unostentatious spirit withdrew much from public observation, that, if openly displayed, must have elicited more praise than ordinarily falls to the lot even of those who fill the highest places in our Established Church. In none of the duties of private life or of the episcopal office was he in any respect deficient; and if the next Bishop of Llandaff be fortunate enough to incur as little censure, and receive as much approbation, as Dr. Copleston, he may, indeed, congratulate himself upon a successful and blameless career."

The Bishop has died unmarried.

LE GENDRE-NICHOLAS STARKIE, ESQ., OF HUNTROYDE, CO. LANCASTER.



THE decease of this gentleman is just announced. He was the county magistrate of large landed property, and represented a very old and eminent family, which acquired the lands of Huntroyde so far back as 1464, when Edmund Starkie, son and heir of William Starkie, Esq., of Manning, in Cheshire, married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Nicholas, of Simondstone and Huntroyde.

Mr. Starkie was the eldest son of Le Gendre Piers Starkie, Esq., of Huntroyde, High Sheriff of Lancashire in 1805, by Charlotte his wife, daughter of Benjamin Precly, D.D., Rector of Prington, co. Northampton. He married Anne, daughter of A. Chamberlain, Esq., of Ilkston, co. York, and has left three sons and one daughter.

ADMIRAL SIR EDWARD WILLIAM CAMPBELL RICH OWEN, G.C.B.

We regret to have to add to our obituary the name of this gallant and distinguished officer, who died on the 8th instant, at his seat in Surrey. He entered the Royal navy 11th August, 1775, being then about 14 years of age, obtained the Lieutenancy 6th November, 1793, and the command of the bomb-vessel Admiral of the White in 1846. His services extend, in consequence, over the most eventful period of our naval annals; but, in our limited space, we can only refer to the more important passages in Sir Edward's career.

On the renewal of hostilities, after the peace of Amiens, Captain Owen was stationed, with several sloops and smaller vessels under his orders, on the coast of France, and, by his active and skilful mode of attack, kept the enemy in a constant state of alarm, at one time driving their ships on shore, and at another bombarding the seaboard towns of Dieppe and St. Valery. Subsequently, in 1806, Commodore Owen (the gallant officer had then hoisted a broad pendant) supported with very successful attack on Boulogne, and in 1809 accompanied the expedition to the Walcheren, where he gained warm commendation for the ability and energy displayed in the arduous duties he was imposed upon him. In 1815 the Commodore was honoured with the insignia of the Bath, in 1821 appointed a Colonel of Marines, and in 1825 advanced to flag-rank. From 1824 to 1832 he held the chief command on the East India station, and from 1841 to 1845 that in the Mediterranean.

Sir Edward Owen was M.P. for Sandwich from 1826 to 1829, became Surveyor-General of the Ordnance in 1837, was a member of the Duke of Clarence's Council when his Royal Highness was Lord High Admiral, and held office again in 1834 as Clerk of the Ordnance.

The deceased Admiral was son of Captain William Owen, R.N., and nephew of Owen Owen, Esq., of Cefn Hawod, High Sheriff of Montgomeryshire in 1763; whose sons were the late Sir Arthur Davies Owen, Knt., of Glansevern; the Rev. David Owen, the distinguished scholar, Senior-wrangler at Cambridge in 1777; and William Owen, Esq., of Glansevern, King's Counsel. The latter, one of great antiquity in the Principality, derives descent from the Hon. John Croyke, of Burleigh-on-the-Hill, county Rutland, who was a descendant of the ancient Yorkshire family of Croyke of Manton. Captain Croyke entered the navy in 1690, participated in the battle of St. Boniface in 1695, was present at the operations against Copenhagen in 1807, and accompanied home in 1808 the fleet which had surrendered in the Tagus. He also took part in the defence of the French capping in Basque roads, was employed at the siege of Flushing, and assisted in the capture of La Confiance, with colonial produce on board to the value of £150,000. He obtained Commander's rank in 1812, and was made Post Captain in 1814. The gallant officer married, in 1818, Harriet Elizabeth, daughter of the Rev. James Furneaux, of Swilly, in Devon, and has left issue.

At Glasgow, on Wednesday night, two lads, who slept in a room in which a fire had been left burning to dry the newly-painted walls, were suffocated by the noxious fumes of the coals. An unfortunate lark, whose cage had been placed in the room, shared their fate.

On Sunday last a sermon in aid of the funds of the Middlesex Hospital was delivered at the church of St. John's, Hampstead, by the Rev. John Jackson, M.A., Rector of St. James's, Westminster, and Chaplain in Ordinary to her Majesty. Subsequently a collection was made, amounting to £37 17s.

COLUMNS FROM CONSTANTINOPLE.

BY ALBERT SMITH.

PART OF CONSTANTINOPLE, AND THE GOLDEN HORN.

If your readers can imagine a beautiful dissolving view, with a bright blue sea in the foreground covered with fairy boats and noble vessels from every corner of the world, from which a glorious city rises, with a hundred domes and minarets glittering in the sunlight, and graceful trees springing up everywhere amongst the mosques and palaces; if they can imagine this most lovely coup d'œil fading away suddenly into another something between an out-door scene in "The Forty Thieves" rather the worse for wear, and the dirtiest part of Holywell-street, in the Strand, when the pavement has been hurriedly relaid over a suspicious pipe, and all the inhabitants have put on the secondhand costumes of masquerade Turks—they may be able to form some slight idea of the difference of emotions excited by the first view of Constantinople from the Bosphorus, and the first glance of its interior. If they wish to realise the notions they have formed of the gorgeous East from flowery authors and vivid artists, let them anchor in the Golden Horn, and, having allowed their eyes to drink in the wondrous beauty of the panorama around them, let them depart again without having set foot on shore, and then they will always believe that of all the seacities of the world, Constantinople is the most superb, even with Genoa, Venice, and Naples fresh in their memories.

I am not, in this letter, going to commence a work upon Stamboul; but I have thought that a few light sketches of the subjects which struck me most upon my arrival might not be without interest to your readers. Let me mention, by the way, that the view of the Simplon, which I forwarded to you from Milan, has found its way back to Turkey in the ILLUSTRATED NEWS, and it has been most correctly engraved.

You land from the steamer in boats called caïques, so very light that you are obliged to sit down in the bottom with great care, or else you go over. The oars are balanced by a huge bulb of wood at the handle, and work in a thong of leather slipped round a single rowlock. Both on getting from the steamer and landing, there is great fighting and screaming amongst the boatmen, and you think they are going to murder each other. But they do not; and, having landed, your luggage is seized by a porter, or hamal, who carries his knot half-way down his back, and you follow him up the steep, dirty hill of Galata—the Wapping of Constantinople—to Pera, the suburb in which all the Franks, or Christians, reside.

The streets are everywhere narrow, ill paved, and exceedingly dirty. Near my hotel—and I suppose it is the same everywhere else—they are never swept, but the roadway is clogged with dead rats, melon rinds, brick rubbish, and large stones; nor are they lighted, but at night you carry a paper lantern, which folds up and goes in your pocket. You are obliged to do that, or you run the risk of being taken up for a thief. The pavement is very rugged, and, at first, painful to walk about much upon. As for the breadth of the thoroughfares, there is a little street in London which runs from Clare Market to a back gate of St. Clement's Inn, of which I am always reminded when passing through them; and, indeed, its open potato sheds are not altogether unlike Eastern shops. But they are far daintier wares—slippers, pipes, shawls, perfumery, and sweetmeats.

On turning out for your first walk the dogs first attract notice, and then the veiled women. The former, lazy, thin, wolf-like curs, lie about by hundreds, literally, in all directions. I counted ten before one shop. They are nobody's property, but are allowed to multiply without check. They do not get out of anybody's way. They sleep all day, and fight and howl all night, and live as they can. Each pack has its own territory; and if an alien intrudes he is terribly mangled. When one dies he is eaten up by the others—an uncommon circumstance, I believe, in canine economy. They may, besides, be considered, in some degree, the scavengers of the city; but this does not appear to be the account on which they are tolerated. If you have to return home late at night, it is advisable to carry a stone or two in your hand, as they occasionally show their teeth.

WATER CARRIER.

The appearance of the women, with their faces always muffled up, is, to a newcomer, exceedingly curious. The yashmac, or veil, is worn as I have shown. It is of very thin muslin, and does not conceal the features so entirely as we suppose. Some of the women—the Circassian slaves, or wives (for the terms are nearly synonymous) especially—are very beautiful, and these affect the most gossamer texture for their veils. The lustre of their large, floating, gazelle like eyes is very remarkable, and even coquettish; elsewise the yashmac gives rather a corpse-like appearance to the person, reminding one forcibly of the nuns in "Robert the Devil," before their resuscitation. They dye the tips of their fingers, which makes them look as though they had been picking blackberries for an indefinite period; and also prolong their eye-brows with paint, until they meet. They are only seen to advantage in their odd carriages, lounging back and pretending to shrink from your gaze; for their walk is very inelegant. They wrap themselves about with a coarse, cumbersome tunic, and wear a species of large awkward yellow Wellington boot, which is again thrust into a yellow slipper without a heel, and in this, turning their toes in, they contrive to shuffle along, and "shop," which they delight in doing at the drapery bazaars. Here you will see groups of them, having all the goods displayed in succession, and giving the merchant as much trouble as though they were London ladies at an "awful sacrifice."

The bad state of the pavements and narrow streets are not fitted for carriages, or, indeed, things upon wheels of any description. Everything is therefore transported by men, horses, mules, and donkeys—even to timber and paving-stones. These constantly encumber the thoroughfares; and, as they are always laden, especially the two latter, in a most inconvenient manner, and, on the steep hill going up from Galata to Pera, are always tumbling down and shooting over their burthens, the streets are not always passable. As it is, a horse, heavily laden takes up the entire way; and, when two strings of them meet, a frightful scene of bawling and confusion ensues, and they block up all progress for a longer time than anybody has ever yet had the patience to wait to see the end of.

Every few weeks a terrible fire takes place, and houses are burnt down—not by twos and threes, but always by hundreds, and sometimes thousands. There are two causes for this: the material of which they are composed, and the want of water. To say that they are of wood, gives no idea of their combustibility; an edifice of lath and bandbox, high dried in a burning sun, and overladen with tiles, would alone equal the rapidity of their destruction. Fire-plugs there are none; and at Pera there is but one public engine ready for use—a little thing, to be carried by two persons when wanted, and certainly not so efficacious as those used for gardens in England. When notice is given of a fire, the Sakas, or water-carriers, assemble with their leathern buckets, which are something in shape like a hurdy-gurdy case: with these they fill the engine from the fountains; but they will not stir a step before they are paid. There are few ruins after a fire, because everything is burnt up except the chimnies; and these, being of brick and stone, remain standing, and have a very singular appearance. The Turks learn nothing by experience, but build their next houses up again exactly in the same grim-crack manner. High up in the Frank quarter, however, handsome structures are rising, which might rival some on the Boulevards at Paris; but these are as yet unfinished. The fires are the chief sanitary agents. If the Turks were not thus occasionally routed out of their filthy homes, Constantinople would not certainly be so free from the plague as she has been for the last few years.

TURKISH WOMEN. DANCING DERVISH. HAMAL OR PORTER. BLACK SLAVE.

COLUMNS FROM CONSTANTINOPLE.

Many of their graveyards are in the very heart of the city; others, in the immediate suburbs, are miles in length, and overgrown with cypress trees. They are sad, desolate, uncared-for, tumble-down places. The tombstones of the men have turbans on their tops: some of these, lying on the ground, have been knocked off from the monuments of the Janissaries; and the whole tract resembles a field of enormous ninepins. Cocks and hens scratch about amongst them; dogs go to sleep in their shade; and the descriptions given of them in guide-books, as to their picturesque appearance, are—what guide-book descriptions usually are.

MULE LADEN WITH TIMBER.

The bazaars are long covered avenues of shops, each article having a gallery, so to speak, to itself. Thus, there is the drug bazaar, the arms bazaar, the shoe bazaar, the silk bazaar, and so on. But though so many dealers in the same stores reside together, the [illegible] never deserve for instance, in the shoe bazaar with us, each one would be trying to out-placard his neighbours. We should read, yards off, such inscriptions as "Talk about cheap bluchers—look here, at four-and-six!" or "Prince Wellingtons, 14s!" or "Yes, this is the noted shop or gent.'s half-guinea Alberts!!" But here there is nothing of the kind. The merchant sits on his shop-board, with his pipe, or "bubble-bubble," and scarcely troubles himself to show you his wares; on the contrary, he appears relieved if he has nothing to sell you, and you go away. There is one uniform method of dealing with these gentry. You offer exactly half of what they ask. This they directly accept, when you feel hurt, and offer a still less sum, walking away. Then they call after you, and the bargain is finished. The bazaars are thoroughfares for horses, and some for carriages: at Smyrna I met a string of camels in one. Purveyors of refreshments also circulate through them

THE STREET DOGS.

PART OF A BAZAAR.

—some with grapes, the finest of which, called chor-ooch (at least so it is pronounced), are, really and honestly, as large as plovers' eggs; chesnuts, pancakes, and sweetmeats are also sold. Kebobs are little pieces of meat spitted on a skewer, and eaten with pepper, salt, and chopped onions, and very nice they are. Sherbet is the "cherryade" of our evening parties, sold at half a piastre (about a penny) a tumbler, in which is included a bit of compressed snow. Pillau is boiled rice, in which are found suspicious pieces of fat, which it is best to avoid. The most popular strong drink of the Turks (who are not such teetotallers as is popularly imagined) is rakee, which, to my taste, is one degree nastier than the French absinthe, and resembles bad mastic varnish. The superiority of their coffee is all nonsense. It is a muddy compound, served up, grouts and all, in English doll's tea-cups. Indeed, English crockery is everywhere to be met with, and the old blue willow pattern constantly meets the eye. You can also buy Day and Martin's blacking, Burgess's mixed pickles, Atkinson's bear's grease, Rowland's macassar oil, and pale ale and stout in any quantities. And as I started in a steamer, the other day, from the "Golden Horn," to go up to Buyukdere, near the Black Sea, amidst the thousand red caps, and the din

Turkish, Armenian, Persian, Greek, and Tartar tongues, I looked down a hatchway and saw the inscription, "J. Penn and Son, Engineers, Greenwich," in honest English, upon the engines. They cannot do without us. Maudslay's and Nasmyth's machines revolve and clatter at the gun factory under the able direction of Mr. Taylor; so they do at the mint, to strike off the beautiful work of Mr. Robertson, the chief engraver. Mr. Smith, the architect, has shewn the Turks how to build the most sumptuous palaces; Mr. Langland conducts the Fez (or red cap) manufactory; and if the engineer of the beautiful government boat the Nile, in which I expect to go from here to Alexandria, was addressed in any other language of command than "Ease her!" "Stop her!" he would indulge in a series of sound Saxon oaths that would stagger a bargeman.

Near my hotel is the monastery, if I may call it so, of a set of consummate rascals called the "Dancing Dervishes," who exhibit in public twice a week. There are some two dozen of them; and after bowing and praying, and going through certain ceremonies to very melancholy music and chanting, they begin to spin round and round until ready to drop. They are dressed in white, with felt cape, as I have shewn. There are others over the water, at Scutari, who howl and toss themselves from side to side, all of a row and in unison; but the rooms in which they exhibit are so hot and unsavoury, and you feel such a desperate desire to hit them all hard in the face, that the spectacle only serves to ruffle your temper from the placidity into which a few weeks in the easy-going East has already plunged it. Nevertheless, the night ought not to be missed.

TURKISH CHILDREN.

BURIAL-GROUND.

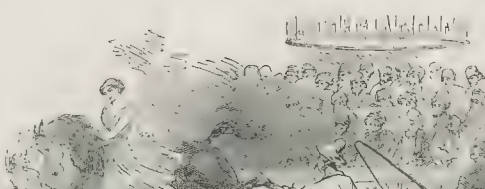
At the top of our hill, on a piece of vacant ground, certain Italian peripatetics went the other evening, and was presented with a play-bill in Turkish, Italian, and Armenian; but you may judge my surprise when a regular Mr. Merriman jumped into the ring, and saluted the grave, red-capped, smoking audience with "Here we are—all in a lump!" I afterwards found the troupe had come from Malta. The prima donna of the arena, La Signorina Maddalena Guillaume, was very pretty, and her unveiled beauty made as great an impression on the Turks as her daring equitation. She flew round the ring, and leapt over boards, with one foot in a strap at the horse's side—the other now and then touching the ground. The descendants of the Prophet did not applaud, but they said "Mashalla!" and were evidently bewildered. Mr. Merriman himself was an Englishman, and appeared to be exceedingly popular.



THE CIRCUS.

I have seen the principal mosques—those of St. Sophia, Achmed, and Suleiman, but was rather disappointed than astonished. The fact is, no artist represents a foreign "lion" faithfully. Each studies to make an effective, rather than a correct, picture; and even the majority of travellers get infected with guide-book enthusiasm, and write accordingly, thinking that they must fall into raptures with certain objects because others have conventionally done so before them. I have known many who really tried hard to deceive themselves into a belief that something they saw came up to their anticipations, when it had in reality turned out almost a failure. You can only see these mosques by means of a firman—a document which costs eight pounds, but then any number may go with it. Some speculating valet de place buys a firman, and makes up a party; it cost us about six or seven shillings each. In the absence of the Sultan and his Court, we were also admitted to the innermost recesses of the Seraglio; in all places being compelled to take off our shoes before entering. All the windows are blinded with wicker lattice. In a long gallery, where the women take exercise in bad weather, are many pictures to amuse them. I noticed amongst them some engravings from Turner's "Ancient and Modern Italy," Stanfield's "Wreckers," and a large print of Grace Darling.

I shall send this by the French packet, as the Austrian police have an ugly knack of opening all the letters that come through their post, more especially if they are addressed to a journal. And this is a busy time here with all the politicians; the retreat of the Sultan to give up the Hungarian refugees, and the departure of the Russian Ambassador, having created the greatest sensation. Soldiers are forming camps about the city; some dozen and a half of fine Turkish men-of-war are lying in the Bosphorus, steamers are kept back for despatches, and everywhere there is much excitement. Meanwhile the English are certainly very popular—that is to say, popular as Franks can be in the East; for the Turks have some notion that we shall support them, and look with comfort to our floating thunderbolts, now lying in the harbour at Malta, with the Terrible at their head. At the same time the Sultan's "pluck" has gained him hosts of admirers. I was at a dinner in Pera on the evening that his reply to Russia was made known, and his health was immediately drunk with real enthusiasm.

Finally, let me add, under the head of "Varieties," that quails and red mullet are as common here as pigeons and herrings with us that to-day is as raw, damp, and gloomy a November one as I remember at home that all the stories about sacks, executions, and the Bosphorus, are traveller's legends—that the Turkish soldiers and the Seraskier are not like those we recollect in "the siege of Belgrade"—that the Sultan is only six and twenty, but looks forty, having led the life of a very "fast man" indeed, according to popular report—that everything, even sponge and attar of roses, to say nothing of Brussa silks and red caps, is very dear—that, looking to some of the old coinages, before Mr. Robertson took it in hand, one has an impression that a person with a sheet of tin and a gun-punch could make his fortune; but, on the whole, there is so much to amuse and interest, that, were the journey to cost treble the time and money, such would not be ill spent.

ALBERT SMITH.

Constantinople, September, 1849.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, October 21.—Twentieth Sunday after Trinity. Battle of Trafalgar, 1805.
MONDAY, 22 Sun rises 6h. 36m., sets 4h. 52m.
TUESDAY, 23 The Royal Exchange founded, 1567.
WEDNESDAY, 24.—Moon's first quarter, 7h. 4m., A.M. Day breaks 4h. 47m.
THURSDAY, 25 St. Crispin.
FRIDAY, 26.—Hogarth died, 1764.
SATURDAY, 27.—Sun rises 6h. 46m., sets 4h. 41m.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 27, 1849.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.
4 45 / 5 05	5 30 / 5 49	6 16 / 6 36	7 1 / 7 20	7 45 / 8 5	8 30 / 8 50	9 15 / 9 35
10 27 / 11 0

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr W. BATTY. Continued increasing success of Fitzhall's New and Grand Equestrian Drama of THE PROPHET, the most gorgeous and intensely interesting hippodramatic production ever produced at the Amphitheatre.—On MONDAY, October 22nd, the Performances will commence with Fitzhall's New and Magnificent Spectacle of THE PROPHET; in which Mr W. West will appear. To be succeeded by the first brilliant SCENES of the CIRCLE; supported by the unsurpassable Equestrian Talent of this Establishment. The whole to conclude with the powerful and domestic Drama of THE DUMB DRIVER.—Box-office open from 11 till 4.—Stage Manager, Mr W West

LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.—EXETER-HALL. The FIRST of a SERIES of FIFTEEN CONCERTS, to be held on consecutive Wednesday Evenings, at 8 o'clock precisely, on WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 24th. The Programme is now ready, and may be had of all Musicsellers, and at No. 4, Exeter-hall. Terms of Subscription—Area and Platform, One Guinea. Reserved Seat, Two Guineas. Double subscription, Three Guineas. Stalls, Three Guineas. Double Subscription, Five Guineas. Tickets to be had, and Reserved Seats, to obtain, 7s
4, Exeter-hall JOSEPH STAMMERS, Managing Director.

OPEN DAILY, from Eleven till Five, and EVERY EVENING EXCEPT SATURDAY, from Seven till Half-past Ten.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—Dissolving Views of Rome Lectures and Experiments with the Hydro-Electric Machine. Lectures on Chemistry Exhibition of the Oxy-Hydrogen Microscope Diver and Diving-Bell. The Chromatrope Explanation of Models and Machinery.—Admission, 1s. Schools, Half-price.

THE MISSISSIPPI and MISSOURI RIVERS, exhibited, by command, to her Majesty the Queen, H R H Prince Albert, and Royal Family, at WILLIS'S ROOMS.—New Views, showing the Western Banks of the Mississippi River, Towns, Villages, &c., &c. Now open, being the largest picture ever executed by man. Exhibiting at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, every morning at half-past two, evening at half-past seven.—Admission, lower seats, 2s; gallery, 1s.

IMPROVED METROPOLITAN WATER SUPPLY.—A PUBLIC MEETING will be held at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on MONDAY, the 22nd instant, for the purpose of taking into consideration the best means of improving the whole Water Supply of the Metropolis, and of placing the entire control thereof in the hands of the inhabitants themselves. CHARLES LUSHINGTON, Esq., M.P. for Westminster, will take the Chair at Six o'Clock P.M. All supporters of physical, moral, and social progress and the sanitary preservation of all classes of the community, are earnestly requested to attend.
October 15, 1849
N.B. Mr John Louis Tabberner, and a deputation from the Metropolitan Water Supply Association, will be in attendance to explain their plan for the attainment of the above great object.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A Correspondent."—The salary of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland is £20,000 per annum.

"Asem." Edward VI. was the first who introduced the date upon English money date 1547.

"A Subscriber," Hereford.—The impressions sent are from two early British gold coins, which formed part of the extensive find at Whaddon Chase, Buckinghamshire. Their numismatic value is from 11*s. to* 20*s., all depending on the clearness of the type.*

"G. P. R.," Colsford, had better consult a solicitor.

"Co ifyrwch" can mean any one in the Fields.

"M. A. T."—Apply at the Government Annuity Office, Old Jewry.

"H. S."—Alas, we behave.

"Tu Asna." See Hart's "Army List."

"W. R." is thanked for the hint.

"R. G. V., Kingsland.—The cipher or character in question is a monogram, an abbreviation as ancient as the earliest Greek coins

"W. J. S.," Maidstone.—By charter of Edward IV. the city of Canterbury is also a county.

"R. H. D." should apply, with the autographs, to Mr. Waller, bookseller, Fleet-street.

"Ode to Birds." Declined.

"A. J. Z." Chesterfield.—We cannot inform you.

"A. T. E."—Burnet's "General Armoury."

"H. J. B."—The crest named is borne by several families

"R. G."—A motto may be adopted at fashion. A crest, to be used legally, must originate from the Heralds' College

"A. S.," Lynn.—We will supply the information next week.

"J. M. B."—The arms of the Cheshire family were, undoubtedly, "Erm. a lion rampt. gu. over all a bend sa. semée." Under the circumstances, our Correspondent had best adopt this coat.

"Arabella." The Honourable Robert Curzon is her apparent to the barony of De la Zouche, now possessed by his mother. The late is descendable to the female heir as well as in the male line. Lady de la Zouche is elder daughter of the late Sir Cecil Bisshopp, Bart (who was summoned to Parliament as Baron de la Zouche in 1819), and sister of the Hon Mr. Pendell.

"A. B.," Hailsford, has not, we think, consulted the article "Mortality, Law of," in the "Penny Cyclopædia."

"L. L." Appleby, should address his inquiry to the Wesleyan Times newspaper.

"Inquirer." "Sa." stands for "Sable" Any one may choose his own motto.

"Senex" is quite right.

"A Subscriber of Six Years."—The expense of taking the additional name would be £52 10*s. Apply to George Harrison, Esq., Windsor Herald, College-of-Arms, Doctors' Commons.*

"J. N. R."—We can trace no arms in England appertaining to the name of Litherland, which is probably of German origin.

"J. C.," Birmingham.—Prince Albert's arms are, "Quarterly 1st and 4th: The Royal arms differenced by a label of three points, on the centre point a cross gu. 2nd and 3rd: Barry of ten, sa. and arg. a cross treflé vert, for Saxony." His Royal Highness's supporters are "Two lions rampant or crowned ppr." each charged on the shoulder with a label as in the arms.

"J. B., a Subscriber," York.—The arms are, "Arg. on a bend cottised sa., three lions rampant of the field."

"X."—The unmarried daughter of an Earl may bear the arms and supporters of her father without a coronet. If she married, her husband would impale the ensigns.

"W. B. S."—The Amateur Musical Society, of which Mr. H. Leslie, Conduit-street, is the Hon. Secretary; the Choral Harmonists, held at the London Tavern, Mr. C. Herring, Secretary; the Sacred Harmonic Soc ety, Exeter Hall, Mr. Bowley, Secretary; and the Croxton Society, London-road.

"Musicus." Address a letter to the Secretary of the Royal Academy of Music, Tenterden-street, who will give the particulars. The "Revue et Gazette Musicale," of Paris, is to had of Cramer, Beale, and Co.

"Transient."—Handel's oratorio of "Solomon" was composed and performed in Covent-Garden Theatre in 1749; and "Theodore," in 1750; and "Jephtha," his last work, in 1751. He died Jan. 13, 1759

"H. B. W.," Kingston.—The Directors are respectable, and have obtained their Act according to the usual Parliamentary provisions; but we give no opinion as to the merits of the concern.

"B. E."—It is not indispensable that an indenture be filled up by an attorney, though it is advisable.

"J. B. G.," Wingham, has better send a neat impression.

"Emma."—We do not recommend your display.

"Cymry."—See Mackenzie's "Emigrant's Guide;" or apply to Orr and Co., publishers, Strand.

"W. H.," Salisbury.—We cannot, with the information sent, advise you.

We were in error in attributing the paper on Music, in a recent Number of the Quarterly Review, to Mr. Hogarth; it is from the highly-gifted authoress of "Letters from the Baltic." "A. J." is thanked for her correction.

"Bancs."—Say No. 34, King-street, Covent-garden.

"Cape Inscription."—We have not room.

"Philo-Hahnemann" we do not know.

"A German Subscriber." See the Shilling Red-Books, now publishing by Weale, Holborn

"An Inquirer."—The moderns are agreed as to the situation of Scylla, on the coast of Italy; but are much divided as to that of Charybdis.

"J. S.," Newport.—We consider the chairman to have been right in each case.

"Omicron," Knaresborough.—See the "Nuisances Removal Act," a copy of which may be had for a trifle. A banker will not you on the value matter. Dr. Arnott liberally gives his invention to the public.

"S. H. W.," Pimlico, is right.

"Twitnigh," Dryden.—Three should be two witnesses to a will.

"Verses on the Cholera" we have not room for

"J. T.," Carlisle.—The subscription to our Journal is Six Shillings and Sixpence per quarter, payable in advance. The readiest way for you to remit is by Post-Office order

"Cydnus."—The copyright of a book published in 1820 expired in 1848. An abridgement of a work, without the consent of the author or proprietor, would be an infringement of copyright.

"M. G.," Manchester, will be liable for the debts.

"Infelona," Camberwell.—Emigration is the only remedy we can suggest.

"B. C."—We have not room for the lines.

"J. G. L. B."—No. 1 is a token, and we should say it is an lead, instead of silver. No. 2, Edward II., great, struck at London; No. 3, Henry IV., V., or VI., groat, struck at London; worth 1*s. or* 2*s. each. The coin of Anne, dated* 1701, is not a farthing, but merely a worthless jetton.

"A Correspondent." The arms of Richard de Clare, surnamed Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke, were, "Or, three chevrons gu. a label of five points az.

"Cæsar."—The expense of a grant of arms is about 75 guineas. There is no penalty for assuming arms without right.

"A Flab."—The present Earl of Lonsdale has never been married. Georgiana, wife of Henry, third Earl Bathurst, and daughter of Lord George Lennox, died Jan. 30, 1841.

"A Subscriber from the First."—For the arms of Shutt, apply to the gentleman who married his sister: he will at once supply them.

"N. W." Blackfriars, is thanked. The back Numbers in question are 1*s. each. We shall be glad to serve you hereafter.*

"A Young Artist." See No. 114 of our Journal, for instructions in Wood Engraving Inquire at Penn's, Newgate-street.

"Argumentum" had better consult a solicitor, or undersetter.

"D. B." we think liable, according to the terms he states.

"Tyro," Manchester.—Next week

"A Subscriber from the First."—On our coins signifies "Dei Gratiâ Fidei Defensor."

"Josephine." The taste of some forty years has produced the change in the politics of Europe, especially as to "intervention" in continental disputes.

"A Lancastrian," Bolton.—Your letter will be sufficient address.

"Ignoramus."—Æsthetics is high feeling, or intimately related to sentiment.

"Mountaineer" "Is there no motto to the seal? Send an impression.

"H. W. C." Mr. Pugin's Catholic Church (St. George's) is not yet finished. It will contain about 300 sittings. See No. 325 of our Journal.

"I. O. U." See THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK for 1845.

"Nemo."—The term Strath, in Scotland, generally signifies a valley of considerable size It is pronounced as written.

"F. S." Apply at Grugeon's drawing academy.

"Q. Q. Q."—It would not be legal to adopt the arms of the paternal grandmother. A new grant of arms (the expense of which is about seventy-five guineas) would be the only correct mode of proceeding.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Health Made Easy ——Bentley on Education. Adventures of a Medical Student - Idol and Trial.——De la Motte on Anastatic Printing.——Dr. Mus-pratt's Plaitner on the Blowpipe.

EARLY IN NOVEMBER WILL BE PUBLISHED
THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK
FOR 1850;
Being the Sixth Annual Issue of this most beautifully embellished and useful Almanack. Illustrated by DUNCAN and other Eminent Artists. The Notes of the Month, by MRS. LOUDON; besides a variety of new and useful Tables, &c. &c. The Astronomical Department by JAMES GLAISHER, Esq., F.R.A.S., and of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.
Published by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, London
 Country orders supplied for Cash only.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1849.

It has been generally known for some time past that his Royal Highness Prince Albert suggested to the Royal Society of Arts, of which he is President, a grand Exhibition in London of the Arts and Manufactures of all Nations. A deputation of the Society of Arts waited upon the Lord Mayor on Wednesday, to explain more fully the design of his Royal Highness, and to ascertain the feelings of the City of London upon the subject. It is proposed that the Exhibition shall take place in the spring or summer of 1851, and that it shall include—firstly, raw materials; secondly, machinery and mechanical inventions; thirdly, manufactured articles of all kinds; and, fourthly, specimens of sculpture and the plastic art in general. It is also proposed, if the project be successful, that there shall be a similar Exhibition every five years. To his Royal Highness belongs exclusively the merit of this idea. Its great utility, its universal interest, and its enlightened comprehensiveness will ensure for its originator the respect, not merely of the British nation, well acquainted with his public and private virtues, but of all the nations of the civilized world, whose citizens shall contribute, by their productions, to the splendour and the success of the Exhibition. His Royal Highness, before asking for the approval of the City of London, solicited, through the Society of Arts, the opinions of upwards of six hundred of the principal manufacturers of the country in every department of our multifarious industry. The answer was unanimous in support of the plan, and especially of that essential portion of it that the Exhibition should be open to all the nations of the world. It is almost needless to add that the approbation of the City of London was not withheld, and that its principal merchants, traders, and manufacturers entered cordially into the views of his Royal Highness, and pledged themselves to lend their most strenuous aid towards carrying them into effect. It is supposed that the sum of £100,000 will be necessary for the purpose; but we should think that treble that sum might be easily raised, in case of need. There is no edifice in London or in England capable of containing the objects that may be expected to pour into this Exhibition from every part of the world—from Hindostan in the one hemisphere, to Oregon and the Hudson's Bay territories in the other, and it will therefore be necessary to construct buildings for the purpose. The space in Hyde-park between Rotten-row and Kensington-gardens has been suggested as the most convenient and appropriate site. The expense of transit will be cheerfully borne by the exhibitors; and possibly the various railway companies, in generous rivalry, will upon such an occasion convey at the smallest rate, or even gratuitously, the specimens of art and manufacture which not merely their own countrymen, but the industrious of other nations, shall be desirous of transmitting to London. We trust that the arrangements of the committee to whom the preliminary details of the exposition will be confided will be careful and judicious; that they will avoid the danger, as one of the speakers at the meeting at the Mansion House expressed it, of engulphing the scheme under its own magnificence; that the judges who shall award the prizes will be composed both of Englishmen and foreigners; and that in all its preliminaries, in its progress and in its results, the exhibition of 1851 may prove a source of satisfaction to every one who wishes well to the principles and who is desirous that it shall be but the first of a long and brilliant series. There is, however, little or no room for doubt upon these points. The cordiality and unanimity displayed augur favourably for success; and the business tact of Englishmen may, we should think, be safely entrusted with the details. This will be indeed a "Peace Congress," of which the kindly and beneficial influence will be felt among all civilized nations, and which will teach them practically that it is the true interest of every nation upon the earth to remain at peace with each other, to exchange the commodities and information of each with all, and to compete with arts not with arms.

The generals and advisers of the young Emperor of Austria are endangering the stability of his throne, in the moment of their triumph, by their inhuman ferocity towards the conquered. It might not, perhaps, be a political error to commit the unmanly barbarism of flogging women. Such atrocities, though they scandalise Western Europe, seem indigenous in the East, and possibly are not looked upon with the disgust that is felt in more chivalrous and civilised nations; but when such bloody deeds as the execution of the unfortunate Count Batthyani are committed with the sanction of law, it becomes evident that the Emperor of Austria is in bad hands, and that his generals are not only savage men, but very foolish and short-sighted politicians. General Haynau, if not stopped in his career, will undo all that has been done for the pacification of Austria, and will render utterly vain the sacrifices that have been made to hold that empire together. Such deeds are more dangerous to the Emperor's throne than the armed opposition of a hundred thousand men. A large army may be destroyed, but not all the armies of the world can destroy the ill effect of such severity as Haynau has exercised. The blood of Batthyani and the other victims, whose names or numbers Europe does not know, who have been offered up, not to any state necessity, but to appease the vengeance of individuals, will cry for retribution, and plead the cause of Hungary with a voice of thunder, until a new revolution shall break out, more formidable than its predecessor. Modern history offers no parallel to the character of General Haynau. On representations being made to him against these executions, he replied by holding out the parchment which conferred unlimited powers upon him. "They style me," he said, "a bloodhound, a tiger, a hyæna; I am ready to take upon myself the responsibility of my acts." "So much is he feared," says a letter from Vienna of the 10th inst., "that the officials in Pesth trembled for their lives because they had not hanged Batthyani at once, instead of postponing the execution for twelve hours." It is truly unfortunate for the Emperor, whose inexperience is necessarily great at his early age, and whose goodness of disposition is highly spoken of, that he should be under the guidance of such men as Haynau. Austria wants statesmen at this moment, and not executioners; and if she do not find them, and that very speedily, the bayonets of the Russians will again be necessary to save her from destruction.

POSTSCRIPT.

THE VACANT DIOCESE OF LLANDAFF.—On Thursday evening a public meeting of Welshmen resident in London was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, to take into consideration the desirableness of taking measures for securing the appointment of a native of the Principality to the vacant diocese of Llandaff. Mr. Benjamin Lawrence presided; and the meeting was addressed by Mr. Gwynne, Mr. Owen Rowland, Dr. Evans, Mr. Meredith, Mr. William Thomas, the Rev. R. Jones, the Rev. M. Davis, the Rev. Charles Phillips, Mr. James, and other gentlemen. It was stated that since the House of Brunswick had reigned in this country no Welshman had ever been appointed to a Welsh bishopric, the effect of which was that thousands had been driven out of the Church, and had joined the ranks of the Dissenters. Wales had a national right to a Welsh Bishop, and their only plea was to demand such an appointment at the hands of the Premier. The present system was destructive alike to the people of Wales and to the Church itself. Resolutions which affirmed the desirableness of the appointment of a native of Wales to the vacant see having been adopted, a memorial to that effect was drawn up for presentation to Lord John Russell, and a committee was appointed for the purpose of waiting upon his Lordship, to ascertain his views upon the matter.

THE FLORIN.—The new two-shilling piece, known as the florin, is not about to be called in because of the omission of the words "Dei Gratia." The words in question were omitted by the consent of her Majesty and the Prince Consort, in both of whom the original design, as drawn by Mr. Wyon, the Royal Mint, was warmly approved. In consequence of the dissatisfaction expressed by a large portion of the public at the omission, the Chancellor of the Exchequer ordered a search for precedents of such omission. The result has been, that some most interesting details on the subject of the coinage of these realms have been brought forth. It would appear that no example was discovered of the omission of the words had been mentioned from any of the silver coins, but many examples of the omission were found as regarded the copper coinage. The words "Fidei Defensor" have also been omitted. It further appears that "Dei Gratia" was not used on any of the English copper money from the Restoration till 1797; and also that "Fidei Defensor" was not used for the whole of that period. Charles II., William III., and Mary, George II., and George III. omitted the words from copper coins. The rupee and other coins in India merely bear the words "Victoria, Queen." It may now be added that the eminent personage at whose suggestion the omission was made in the florin, thought that the words "Victoria Regina" alone would give the coin a more emphatic character.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The schism in France between the President and M. Thiers has assumed a milder aspect, and on Friday (yesterday) morning it was also generally believed that an amicable arrangement had been entered into which would prevent any serious rupture.

The discussion on M. Thiers' report was commenced on Thursday, when the Minister of Foreign Affairs (M. de Tocqueville) justified the expedition to Rome, the object of which was to restore the Pope to his dominions, not only in accordance with the wishes of those who supported that object, but for the strong desire of the Roman people themselves. France could not coerce the will of his Holiness, but she could and had exercised an influence over him with a view of indicating those liberal institutions suitable to the circumstances of the times. M. de Tocqueville then pointed out the reforms advisable to be adopted, which conditions were faithfully described in the letter of the President to Colonel Ney. It was therefore untrue, as had been asserted, that the President had acted at all in opposition to his Cabinet. The Assembly had not come to a decision on the question at the date of our latest advices

An address from the Democrats has arrived in Paris, and has had an audience with the Minister of Foreign Affairs. The purport of the communication from his Imperial Majesty, it is said, was, that he should consider the entrance of a French fleet into the Dardanelles as a declaration of war.

GERMAN STATES.

Accounts from Berlin, of the evening of the 16th inst announce the arrival from Vienna of the expected ratification of the Commission Treaty. The Prussian Ministry was to lay the treaty before the Chambers forthwith.

The King's birthday was celebrated in Berlin on the 15th, with more solemnity than had been observed since the year 1840.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

Pesth has been the scene of fresh tragedies. On the 9th October, Ladislaus Csanyi and Baron John Jessenak were put to death by the rope. Another of the first "notables" of Hungary, the octogenarian Eugene von Beothy, is a prisoner, and is dying of a violent fever. Batthyani's large property, amounting to 7,000,000 florins, has been confiscated; it is now said that his widow will settle in Bavaria.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

VISIT OF HER MAJESTY TO THE CITY.

At the Court of Common Council held on Tuesday last, the Lord Mayor laid before the members the following letter from Lord John Russell

Downing-street, Oct. 15, 1849.

My Lord,—I have the satisfaction to inform you that her Majesty will visit the City of London on the 30th inst., on the day of the opening of the Coal Exchange.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

J. RUSSELL.

To the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor.

(Enthusiastic cheers.)

Upon which Mr. John Wood, the chairman of the Coal, Corn, and Finance Committee, brought up a report on the subject; and the Court, with loud cheers, referred it back to the committee, to make the necessary steps for the receiving and accommodation of her Majesty and suite.

At an audience granted by the Prince Consort to the Lord Mayor, on Thursday last, at Windsor Castle, the following arrangements in reference to the Queen's visit were communicated to his Lordship:—Her Majesty will embark on board the Queen's State Barge at Whitehall, at half-past twelve o'clock, arriving about one o'clock at the Custom-house Quay, where every proper convenience will be made for the reception of her Majesty and suite, who will be conveyed on to the procession to the Coal Exchange. Her Majesty will be accompanied by his Royal Highness the Prince Albert, and, it is hoped, by the Prince of Wales. Her Majesty will return by water between two and three o'clock. No steam-boats or laden craft will be allowed to move on the river between Whitehall and the eastern end of the Custom-house from eleven till four; and it is particularly requested that no guns may be fired on the banks of the river.

BANQUET AT THE MANSION HOUSE.—On Monday, the Lord Mayor gave a grand entertainment to the Provost, Magistracy, and Town Council of Edinburgh. Covers were laid for 160. There were amongst the company the Lord Mayor elect, Sir James Forrest, Bart.; Aldarman Hunter and Miss Hunter, Alderman Gabbett and Mrs. Gabbett; Mr. Sheriff Nicoll; Mr. Masterman, M.P.; Mr. Pearson, M.P., and Mrs. Pearson; Mr. Sergeant Adams, &c. The usual loyal toasts having been given and responded to, the Lord Mayor proposed "The health of the Town Council of Edinburgh and Sir James Forrest," whom for some hospitality he had lately experienced, and who had travelled four hundred miles to do him the honour of being numbered among his guests. He had only to regret the absence of the Lord Provost, whose presence would have been a great addition to his happiness; and to express a hope that the performance of his duties as chief magistrate of London had given satisfaction to his countrymen. (Loud cheers.) Lord Melville returned thanks, and did the Lord Mayor ample justice in speaking of his exertions to sustain the dignity and high character of the City of London, by his manly and independent conduct, and by his courtesy and liberal hospitality.

THE RECENT FIRE IN THE CITY.—On Saturday it was ascertained by the surveyors connected with the different insurance companies that policies to the under-mentioned amounts had been effected at the respective offices for property deposited upon the premises belonging to Messrs. Goodhart and Smith, in London-wall, and which were burned down on Saturday week, as reported in this journal of last week.

The Sun Insurance Company	.. ..	£18,000
The Alliance Insurance Company	.. ..	.. 11,500
The Atlas Insurance Company	.. ..	.. 6,000
The Union Office	.. ..	.. 6,500
The Imperial Commercial	.. ..	.. 12,000
The Imperial Office	.. ..	.. 9,000
Total	.. ..	.. £66,500

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—The number of births registered throughout the metropolis during the week ending Saturday last, the 13th inst., was 1271, and the deaths 1075. The weekly average derived from deaths in the annual quarter (which commences with the present month) of five previous years is 1169; the weekly return, therefore, now exhibits a decrease on the average, after a period of more than three months, during which it has been a considerable, and, in eleven consecutive weeks, an enormous excess above the usual rate of mortality. The decrease is observed in the west, north, and central districts; the mortality in the east and south, where the deaths from cholera are still the most numerous, is about the average. The deaths from cholera in the last week were 110; in five previous weeks they were 2026 (the highest number which, exclusive of those from diarrhœa, the epidemic attained), 1832, 839, 434, 268. In last week, the deaths from diarrhœa and dysentery (the mortality of which is more steadily maintained) were 105, almost as numerous as deaths from cholera, and more considerably more than usual at this advanced season of the year. The aggregate deaths from these three kindred diseases were therefore 215; whilst the weekly average is only 33. Among last week's deaths from cholera, one occurred at the age of 16; on Wednesday there were only 11. In the districts of St. James (Westminster), Islington, St. Giles, Holborn, Camberwell, and Rotherhithe, no deaths from cholera were registered during the week. In Kensington there were 6; in Hackney, 5; in Bethnal-green, 7; in Shoreditch, 12; in Poplar, 5; in St. Saviour, 6, in Bermondsey, 6; in St. George (Southwark), Lambeth, Wandsworth, 7 each, and in Greenwich, 8. In all other districts the mortality from the epidemic did not range higher than 4 deaths. All other epidemics are at present under the average; small-pox and measles remarkably low; but scarlatina becomes more fatal, the deaths having risen from 29 in the previous week to 36 in the last (the average being 64). Typhus was fatal in 47 cases.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean height of the barometer in the week was 29·540 inches; the mean temperature was 46 deg. 7 min., which is 4 deg. 7 min. less than the average of the same week in seven years; it also shows a decrease on the mean of the previous week of 5 degrees.

LARGE LOSS OF LIFE IN A SEWER.

On the night of Friday week, an accident, which proved fatal to Mr. Henry Wells, surgeon, and John Walsh, a constable of the B division of the metropolitan police force, took place at Willow-walk, Pimlico, where a number of new streets are at present in progress of completion. Near the top of Warwick-street a new sewer has been commenced, named Kenilworth-street, in which a short branch sewer runs from the main sewer in Warwick-street, and the end of it has been bricked up, to prevent the sewage from flowing into the adjacent fields. Between six and seven o'clock on Friday evening, fears began to be entertained of the safety of three men who had gone at an early hour that morning into the sewer in Warwick-street, and had not been seen or heard of afterwards. A search from an opening in the street having proved ineffectual for their recovery, on that of their bodies, the end of the sewer in Kenilworth-street, which had been bricked up, was opened for the purpose. Three names were then read, Pearl, and Attwood, and they had entered the sewer to make the necessary measurements preparatory to having it flushed.

On Monday, at the inquest, the evidence of Christmas, a bricklayer, employed in the search, supplies the following details of the catastrophe. Having stated that, in the first search made from the Warwick-street side, he had felt the bodies of the men lying in the sewer, but was unable to get them out, from the confined limits of the spot, he proceeded: Alsop knocked down the wall at the end of the sewer with a pickaxe. At this time the deceased (Mr. Wells) was present. I had previously called at his house to tell him what had happened, and I afterwards called at two house before we could get at the bodies. When we had broken into the wall in Mr. Cubitt's field, I sent to Mr. Wells to tell him know he had effected an entrance, and he returned to the spot. We then went on. Alsop went in first, then Mr. Wells: I followed Mr. Wells, and Turner followed me. When we had proceeded about 100 feet up the sewer, Mr. Wells's dog, which had gone with us, fell down. He turned back, and I also, with the intention to let him out; but before I got to the opening in the wall by which we had entered, Alsop called out that the doctor had fallen down. I returned with the intention of assisting the doctor, but saw Alsop coming away, saying he could not stand. I turned again to leave the sewer, but before I could reach the outer I fell down insensible, and have no recollection of what followed. I believe I was dragged out, and laid upon the bank. Before I was overcome I smelt a strong smell, but nothing uncommon in sewers, or such as to cause any alarm. The fumes were from about 200 feet from the opening in Mr. Cubitt's field, by which a current of air was passed through the sewer. The men went in for the purpose of measuring the sewer, and to remove the rubbish. By the Jury: The heads of the three men were lying towards the Warwick-street opening, as though they had been in the act of returning back when they fell. When I first went into the sewer from the Warwick-street opening I felt no kind of oppression whatever; and when I was seized, after my entrance from Mr. Cubitt's field, I was taken all at once—in a moment. I had not been cautioned before I went in. I had not observed any gurgling sound from anybody.

Mr. Nicholas Lidstone, a master butcher, in Brewer-street, who was present at the time the men entered, heard, in a few minutes, a splash and a groan, and he immediately rushed in, and communicated the circumstance to everybody of the effluvia. He saw the policeman Walsh go in and bring out the body of Mr. Wells, who vomited a great deal of mud. He was brought to the Clarendon Tavern, and washed, but life was extinct. Walsh's death was caused by his thoughtless gallantry. After the recovery of Mr. Wells's body, Alsop proceeded, and returned, and a second time appeared at the entrance, carrying with him a labourer, named Sherwan, who had also been overpowered by the noxious influences of the gases, but who left the sewer fortunately preserved. A third time Alsop entered the sewer, probably overcome by the excitement of the moment and the stupifying influences of the atmosphere which he was breathing, for his doing so could serve no purpose. The crowd outside waited anxiously to return, but he did not reappear. After some time his dead body was recovered by one of the sewers men.

The bodies of the first three victims (Gee, Pearl, and Attwood) having lain several hours in the sewer, subjected to the influences of the noxious gases, the appearance which they presented, when recovered, was most remarkable, the skin being changed to a colour not unlike that of a bronze statue. They were not got out until three o'clock on Saturday morning.

The inquest was adjourned to Thursday, when it was resumed, and further evidence (that of Mr. Phillips, Chief Surveyor to the Commissioners of Sewers) showed that the sewer was built by Mr. T. Cubitt, in January, 1848, under the inspect on of the officer in charge of the district, and that, so far as the works had gone, the printed regulations of the Commissioners had been complied with. It was a brick sewer, 4 ft. 11 in. long, 9 in. thick, 3 ft. high, and 2 ft. 6in. wide. It had scarcely any fall; but if it had any, it was into the Warwick-street sewer. The Commissioners had done nothing to cleanse it since its formation. The flushing system had not been applied to the locality; and he considered that those sewers, as having been properly constructed, ought to carry off the refuse. Dr. Ure gave evidence of a character similar to the purport of his report on the subject (given below).

The inquiry was further adjourned.

On Wednesday a subscription of twopence each was entered into by the private constables of the police to assist the widow of the late policeman. The sum thus raised, it is presumed, will amount to about £30. It is also proposed to open a public subscription for Mrs. Wells, whose husband perished on the same occasion.

THE POISON OF SEWERS.—At the meeting, noticed in another place, of the newly-formed Commission of Sewers, on Wednesday, the following report from Dr. Ure, of the analysis of a variety of gases found in the air from the bottom of the sewer, at Pimlico, and of a greenish earthy matter, taken from the ground over the sewer, was submitted to the board:—"I find that the earthy matter is the refuse lime of gas-works, impregnated with sulphuret of lime, with ammoniacal prussic acid compounds, and a little ammonia, as hydrosulphuret. These three substances are all exceedingly noxious to life in their separate state, and they are liable to be liberated by the action of the moisture of the atmosphere, aided to be washed out by the rains, and to percolate down through the crevices and joints of the arched roof of the sewer. That this is the case is demonstrated by the analysis of the water in the sewer, which gave that greenish green colour imparted to pure water by the calcareous compound, possesses the very peculiar fœtid smell of sulphuretted hydrogen, and affords to chemical reagents the characters of this gas, as also of prussic acid and ammonia. Certain animal exuvia may also be readily detected in the said water, as urine, &c.; the whole forming a mixture remarkably deleterious, and emitting most offensive and oppressive exhalations, so that paper dipped for a few minutes in acetate of lead, and held over a vessel containing some of that green liquor, becomes immediately of that glistening black colour, corresponding somewhat to the hue imparted to the skin and blood of persons killed by breathing an air impregnated by such matters. The presence of this prussic acid, or sulphocyanogen poisons, in these effluvia, is a striking peculiarity, proceeding, no doubt, from the layer of gas-lime imprudently shot as a filling-up rubbish into the sewers. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that a very few inhalations in the atmosphere in the said sewer should have caused asphyxia and death in Mr. Wells and the men who accompanied him. I may observe that sulphuretted hydrogen and carbonic acid gas, both present in the sewer, being in mixture with prussic vapour, form an air heavier than that of the atmosphere, and thereby would be found to prevail chiefly near the bottom of the sewer; so that Mr. Wells, in his impulsive, and no doubt well-meaning zeal to save the life of the workmen lying there, would come to inhale the concentrated gaseous poison, and drop instantly down on their faces, in which position their own bodies were observed to be found by their companions."

CITY COMMITTEE OF HEALTH.—On Wednesday the Board of Health of the City of London assembled at the Guildhall. The City Solicitor read a portion of the draft report prepared by the direction of the committee; but, before its completion, it would, he said, be necessary for them to give some specific directions upon several points, at present untouched by the draft report. In his opinion, the committee should recommend the court to appoint a permanent committee of health, superintend the sanitary arrangements of the state of the city required. The committee finally resolved that the report should embrace recommendations:—1. To appoint a permanent corporate Board of Health. 2. To recommend suburban interments. 3. To advise the powers of inhabitants to cellars, and to regulate the slaughtering cattle in general in the City. 4. To recommend measures to be taken to improve the dwellings of the poor. 5. To consider an improved water supply, and an increased supply. The new City Solicitor engaged to prepare a draft report by the next meeting of the committee.

THE ROYAL NAVAL BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.—On Monday, the quarterly meeting of this institution, establi-hed in 1739, "for affording relief to officers of the Royal Navy, their widows and families, under circumstances of misfortune and consequent distress," was held at the Thatched House Tavern, St. James's-street. Admiral Sir Thomas Briggs, who presided, was supported by a large number of naval officers. Captain Dickson, the secretary, read the statement of receipts and disbursements from July 1st to September 30, 1849. The former, including a balance of £1014 4s. and an income of £624 for interest, amounted to 1858; deducting expenses, a residue was left of £1295.

EXPLOSION AND LOSS OF LIFE.—On Friday night week, shortly before eleven o'clock, an explosion took place at No. 4, Brook-street, Bermondsey, upon the premises of Mr. Bachn, firework-maker, by which four lives were sacrificed, and several persons severely injured. At the time of the calamity thirteen persons were in the premises, when suddenly a loud explosion was heard, which blew the tiles off the roof of the house, forced the doors and sashes in the front, lifted the floorings from their bearings, and sent two children, sleeping in the first floor, out of the window. Immediately a sheet of blue and purple flame issued from the various apertures in the building, in which, unhappily, the children rushed out, with frantic cries for assistance. The disaster was caused in the parlour, where the parties were at work making fireworks; the snuff of a naphtha lamp, hung up from the ceiling, being accidentally knocked down amongst the combustibles on the table, which immediately exploded. At the moment, the youngest children, James and Alfred (both killed by the explosion), were asleep in the front room, upstairs, and three others, who escaped with life, the latter were rescued before the flames, which completely destroyed the house, obtained a mastery. In the search among the ruins there were found, besides the bodies of the two children, who were aged ten and four years respectively, those of James Baldwin, aged forty-five years, who was in Mr. Bachn's employ, and Mr. Bachn's eldest son William, aged twenty. The survivors in Guy's Hospital are, Mr. Bachn, aged forty-six, with severe burns over the arms, face, and head; Mrs. Bachn, his wife, aged forty, face, head, and lower part of the body very much burnt; Charles Bachn, aged seventeen, so of the above, face shockingly disfigured, and arms and chest burnt. Phœbe Wynn, aged twenty-two, sustained a laceration of the thigh by falling on some spikes in leaping from the first floor window. This woman, on being extricated from the spikes, attempted to reach her mother's house in Newington, but fell down in the street from loss of blood, and was found in the neighbourhood of Newington, by the police.

EQUALIZATION OF THE LAND-TAX

A meeting of the rate-payers and inhabitants of the united parishes of St. Andrew, Holborn, and St. George the Martyr, Middlesex, was held on Wednesday, in pursuance of a requisition by the rate-payers to the Board of Governors and Directors, to consider whether any and what steps should be taken "to obtain an alteration in the illegal and unjust mode of separately assessing the parishes comprising the Holborn division."

Mr. Hopwood, the chairman of the Board of Guardians, who presided, stated, as an instance of the inequality of the taxation, that he was paying annually a land-tax amounting to £3 upon a rental of between £60 and £90; whereas, had he happened to reside within 100 yards of the spot from which he addressed the meeting, instead of £6, he would, in fact, be paying only about ten shillings.

Mr. R. Scothea, a solicitor, in moving the first resolution, supplied the following details respecting the land-tax. It was a tax which formed part of the feudal system, having been levied under the name of "scutage." In the reign of Richard the Second it was levied under the name of "subsidy," and so it continued to be levied down to the year 1670. The "glorious revolution," as they had all been taught to term and consider the revolution of 1688, had the effect of fixing this heavy burden upon them. In 1689 was passed the statute of William and Mary, under which the land-tax duration was made, and the land-tax became the subject of an annual vote. Under that act the land-tax continued to be levied annually, from 1692 to 1798. The statute directed that the tax should be levied under the authority of commissioners, and that it should be assessed fairly and equally throughout the kingdom; and commissioners were appointed for each county and each division of a county. He would confine himself to Middlesex, and more especially to his own division. In 1798 Mr. Pitt introduced a plan for the redemption of the land-tax. Apportion of the tax was actually redeemed Mr. Pitt contemplated that the whole would be redeemed, but the redemption extended only to a small portion, and the process had been going on from that time to the present. Now it was directed by the act of 1798 that the levy should be made in fair and equal quotas. The county of Middlesex was assessed by divisions. For the year 1849 the county of London was £3303 5s. 7d.; for Westminster-inn, £31 4s.—the lawyers, it would be observed, were let off easily—(Laughter)—for the Inner Temple, £400, for the Middle Temple, £272 19s.; for Lincoln's Inn, £241 7s. 6d.; for Whitehall and St. James's Palaces, £1482 2s. The assessment for the whole of Middlesex was £63,387 6s. 8d., or one shilling in the pound; in St. Mary-le-bone, £3564 5s. 1d., or one-eighth of a penny in the pound; in St. Pancras, £1399 9s. 2d., or one farthing in the pound St. John's Hampstead, £883 12s. 4d., or 3d. in the pound; and in Paddington £304 6s. 10d., or one-seventh of a penny in the pound. So that, although the Act of Parliament declared that the commissioners should assess the property in the division fairly and equally, the assessment was, in fact, so unfair and so unequal, that it varied from 2s. 3d. to one-eighth of a penny. (Hear, hear.) Surely this could not be tolerated after it became known.

The resolution moved and agreed to was as follows:—

That, as the Holborn division of the county of Middlesex for the assessment of the land-tax, according to the public assessment, filed by the commissioners for the division for the year 1799, comprises the following parishes:—St. Andrew, Holborn; and St. George-the-Martyr, Queen-square, Ormond-yard, Red Lion-square, Great Ormond-street, Bedford-row, Hampstead, and Paddington; and, inasmuch as the same assessment is not made, in the language and spirit of the Act of Parliament, indifferently and equally on the said several parishes within the division by an equal pound-rate, it is the opinion of this meeting that such assessment is illegal and unjust, and that a new assessment, on the principle of an equal pound-rate, ought to be raised throughout the whole division.

That the following resolutions were also passed:—

That this meeting is of opinion that measures should be taken to obtain an equal and legitimate assessment of the land-tax within the Holborn division.

3. That, in order to meet the expenses necessary for obtaining an equal and legal assessment of the land-tax, a subscription be entered into, and a committee appointed to carry the same, and for carrying these resolutions into effect

THE METROPOLITAN BURIAL-GROUNDS.

The following orders have been issued by the General Board of Health to the churchwardens of several parishes in the metropolis:

"1. That the whole surface of the burial-ground (excepting such part thereof as are now used as footpaths, or are now covered with flat stones) shall be forthwith covered with quicklime of an uniform thickness of three inches at the least.

"2. That, when any portion of the said lime shall be removed for the purpose of making or digging any grave in the said burial-ground, or for any other purpose, such lime shall be replaced immediately after the filling up of the grave, or the completion of such purpose, and a sufficient quantity of quicklime shall be provided, and from time to time shall be applied so as to keep the whole of the said burying-ground (except the parts above excepted) covered therewith to the thickness of three inches, at aforesaid.

"3. That every grave which shall be made or dug in the said burial-ground shall be deepened so that the bottom thereof will contain a quantity of earth of the thickness of three inches at least, upon which covering of lime the coffin containing the corpse, which shall be buried or deposited in such grave, shall be placed.

"4. That every grave which shall be made or dug, or deepened, in any grave, and every grave in which any corpse shall be buried or deposited shall be filled up to the level of the ordinary surface of the said burial-ground immediately upon the corpse being buried or deposited therein; and no further burial shall take place in the same grave, nor shall any other grave be dug or deepened therein.

"5. That no corpse shall be buried or deposited in any grave in the said burial-ground at a less distance than two feet and six inches from any other grave, and at a distance to be ascertained from that part of the coffin containing such corpse which is nearest to such other grave

"6. That no corpse shall be buried or deposited in any grave in the said burial-ground which shall not be covered with a sufficient depth of earth, or at least five feet of earth remaining between the ordinary surface of the said burial-ground and the upper part of the coffin in which such corpse shall be contained.

"7. Provided always that the foregoing directions and regulations shall not, as respectively numbered 3, 4, 5, and 6, shall not apply to burials in stone or brick graves, vaults, or catacombs.

"8. That no corpse shall be deposited in any stone or brick grave, vault, or catacomb in the said burial-ground, or in any vault or receptacle connected therewith, unless such corpse shall be enclosed in a coffin made of or lined with lead of the weight of six pounds to every superficial foot thereof, and shall be soldered throughout of one-tenth of an inch, nor unless such coffin or lining be so-dered up, or otherwise secured so as to be perfectly air-tight.

"9. That in the making or digging any grave in the said burial-ground, or in opening any part of the said burial-ground for any purpose whatever, any human bone, or other part of a human body, or any coffin or portion of a coffin shall be found, or become visible, the earth that shall have been disturbed by such making, digging, or opening shall be forthwith filled in and covered with quicklime to the depth of at least three inches, in addition to the uniform thickness of lime with which the surface of the said burial-ground is hereinbefore directed to be covered.

"10. That no grave shall be made or dug, nor shall the ground, for any purpose, or upon any pretence, be opened in any part of the said burial-ground within a certain period, to be named by the board, of ten years from the date hereof.

The burial-grounds named are—The Crossbones, Redcross-street, Southwark; Tottenham-court-road Chapel-ground; Churchyard of St. Olave and St. John, Bermondsey-street, Southwark; St. George-the-Martyr, Southwark; Somers-town, Clerkenwell; St. Paul, Covent-garden; St. Giles-in-the-Fields; New Bunhill fields; Collier's Rents, Southwark; St. John, Clerkenwell, and the ground in Northumberland-court, St. Mary, Newington; Thomas's burial-ground, Golden-lane, St. Luke's, and Tavistock burial-ground, Drury-lane.

THE POST-OFFICE.—DESECRATION OF THE SABBATH.—A memorial from the Archdeacons and clergy of the Archdeaconry of Middlesex to the Lords of the Treasury against the increase of Sunday duty at the Central Post-office, has been already signed by 198 clergymen of the metropolis and neighbourhood. The memorialists, without pronouncing any opinion as to the attention of the Post-office authorities, express their earnest hope that Government, instead of carrying the proposed arrangements into effect, will make a movement in the opposite direction, and afford additional facilities for the observance of the Lord's-day "as a course which," as they observe, "Christian principles and sound policy unite in recommending, and to which the present strong demonstration of religious feeling on the part of the people affords every encouragement."

WINDSOR CASTLE.

THE return of the Court to Windsor suggests the resumption of our series of illustrations of the ugly Royal Castle.

THE NORTH TERRACE.

In the first scene is shown a portion of the North Terrace, with the view of Eton College, with its "distant spires" and "antique towers," and which the poet Gray has enshrined in a delightful "Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College." His noble Terrace was built by Queen Elizabeth; and before the laying out of the Eastern Garden and Terrace, it was the great promenade of visitors, when George the Third was King. The prospect is one to dwell upon. "The glorious view from the North Terrace (says one well acquainted with every nook and corner of the locality), how can it be comprehended in half an hour? The river is glowing under the setting sun; one flood of light bathes all the west, and the distant hills of Berkshire and Oxfordshire mingle their gold with the golden sky. Come here in the grey morning, and the Thames shall creep like a silent thread through the green plain, sending up its vaporous wreaths to mingle with the blue mists of the distance."—The Land we Live in.

> The expanse below
> Of grove, of lawn, of mead,

STATE APARTMENTS THE QUEEN'S AUDIENCE CHAMBER.

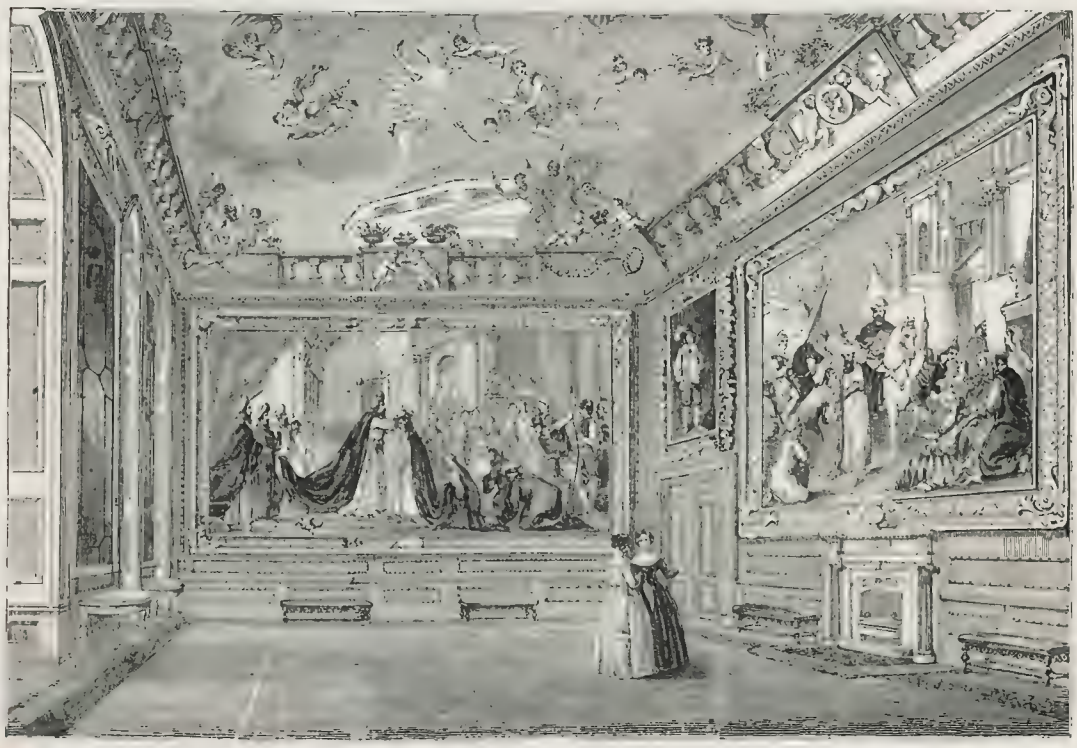
This is the first of the suite of apartments to which the public are admitted.

The ceiling of the chamber bears one of the allegorical compositions in which Verrio revelled, to delight his Royal patron, Charles II. The allegory is Queen Catherine as Britannia, advancing to the Temple of Virtue, in a car drawn by swans, and accompanied by Ceres, Flora, Pomona, &c.;

WINDSOR CASTLE.

PART OF THE GREAT TERRACE, AND VIEW OF ETON.

the minor decorations of the ceiling being heightened with gold. Upon the walls are three fine specimens of Gobelin tapestry, representing a portion of the history of Esther. In one compartment, the maiden is being placed in the care of Hegai, keeper of the women; in the centre, over the fireplace, is represented the Triumph of Mordecai; and in the third piece, occupying the west end of the room, Ahasuerus is placing the crown on the head of Esther. Over the doorways of the room are three fine paintings, in frames of Gibbons's richest carving. Two of these are portraits of Frederick Henry, Prince of Orange, "the Father of the Soldiers," who died in 1647; and William, Prince of Orange, son of Frederick Henry, and father of William III., King of Great Britain: both these portraits are by Gerard Honthorst. The third picture is a very interesting whole-length portrait of Mary Queen o. Scots, in a mourning habit, with a crucifix in her right hand and a breviary in the other: in the background is represented her execution at Fotheringhay. The painting bears three long inscriptions. It has lately been engraved, by permission of her Majesty, as the frontispiece to Mr. Mackie's "Castles Palaces, and Prisons of Mary, Queen of Scotland;" a work fully entitled to the high patronage under which it has been produced.



STATE APARTMENTS.—THE QUEEN'S AUDIENCE CHAMBER.

THE VINTAGE IN TUSCANY.

GRAPE GATHERING.

How beautiful are the vines when married, as here, and trained round the field, from tree to tree, in double and intersecting festoons! How greatly they exceed, as a picture, the common vineyard, which looks at a distance like a field of turnips!—Forsyth's "Italy."

Tuscany has been styled the Paradise of Bacchus; and it would almost exhaust language to describe its luxuriant and picturesque beauty. Leigh Hunt, in the notes to his translation of "Bacco in Toscana," says: "The vines of the South seem as if they were meant to supply the waste of animal spirits occasioned by the vivacity of the natives. Tuscany is one huge vineyard and olive-ground. What would be fields and common hedges in England, are here a mass of orchards, producing wine and oil, so that the sight becomes tiresome in its very beauty. About noon, the labourers, peasantry, and small shopkeepers in Tuscany may be imagined taking their flask of wine. You see them all about Florence fetching it under their arms. The effect is perceptible after dinner, though no disorder ensues; the wine being only just strong enough to move the brain pleasantly, without intoxication: a man can get drunk with it if he pl · ses; but drunkenness is thought as great a vice here as gallantry is with us."

It has been pertinently remarked by a popular writer, that "a vineyard, associated as it is with all our ideas of beauty and plenty, is, in general, a disappointing object. In France, the vines are trained upon poles, seldom more than three or four feet in height; and the 'pole-clipped vineyard' of poetry is not the most inviting of real objects. In Spain, poles for supporting vines are not used; but cuttings are planted, which are not permitted to grow very high, but gradually form thick and stout stocks. In Switzerland, and in the German provinces, the vineyards are as formal as those of France. But in Italy is found the true vine of poetry, surrounding the stone cottage with its girdle, flinging its pliant and luxuriant branches over the rustic verandа, or twining its long garland from tree to tree." It was the luxuriance and beauty of her vines, and her olives, that tempted the rude people of the North to pour down upon her fertile fields:—

> The prostrate South to the destroyer yields
> Her boasted vitbes, and her golden fields;
> With grim delight, the brood of winter view
> A brighter day, and heavens of azure hue—
> Scent the new fragrance of the breathing rose,
> And quaff the purple vintage as it grows.

Associated, too, as Italy is with all the classic lore of mythology, where

THE GRAPE CART.

Sweet is the vintage, when the showering grapes,
In bacchanal profusion reel to earth
Purple and gushing: sweet are our escapes,
From civic revelry to rural mirth—

we might reasonably expect to find the choicest wines among the produces of her delightful clime. Yet, such is not the case; for, in proportion as nature has been more bountiful here than in other countries, have the culture of the plant, and the manufacture of the wine, been neglected by the indolence of the people. The vines are left to luxuriate amidst fences or the boundaries of fields, and the rude growth supplies the Italian peasant with sufficient wine for his own consumption. Even where cultivation is attempted, the vine appears to be a secondary object; the trade is not a part of the husbandry of the farm, but is planted, drawn in festoons from elm to elm, not only bounding the enclosures, but traversing them in lines so near to each other, that, in England, nothing could grow beneath but rank and rushy grass. Here, however, are sown corn, or artificial grasses, and various sorts of garden vegetables; the shade of Italy being so productive as the sunshine of England. Again, such pictures of neglect as the following are by no means rare among the delights of an Italian villa:—"There was a long trellis, over which vines were trained: under this was a walk, but the place was so suffocating, that it was not worth while to desire the gardener to clear away the weeds, with which, as they hindered not the ripening of the grapes, he moved the walk to be encumbered."

The process of wine making is better understood, and a greater number of good wines are produced in the Tuscan dominions than in any of the other states of Italy. The Grand Duke have taken considerable pains to improve their vineyards, by importing the best species of vines from other countries, as, for instance, from France, Spain, and the Canaries; and the wines made at their villas show that their labours have been attended with considerable success." According to Redi's patriotic dithyrambic, entitled "Bacco in Toscana," the wines of Tuscany are the first in the world; and they perhaps might be, if a better choice were displayed in the soils appropriated for their growth, and if greater science were displayed in the fermentation. That it is not from ignorance on the former of these points that the Tuscans so often err, appears from several passages of the poem just mentioned, in which the author anathematizes those who first dared to plant the vine on low soils, and celebrates the excellence of the juice which flows

—— dall' ave brune
Di vigne ecamosissime Toscane.

"Among the ancient laws of the city of Arezzo," he remarks in a note, "was one granting free permission to plant vines on such hills as were calculated to produce good wine, but strictly prohibiting the cultivation of vines on the low grounds destined to the growth of corn." The injudicious method, also, of training the vine excites his just indignation.

In the description of Tuscan wines much confusion has arisen from not attending to their different qualities. As the press is little used, and the grapes have, in general, attained their full maturity, being, besides, in the case of the choicer wines, dried for six or seven weeks within doors before they are pressed, the first juice (mustum luteum) necessarily abounds in saccharine matter, and the wine procured from it will consequently belong to the sweet class. But, when this is drawn off, it is customary to add a quantity of water to the murk, which after a short fermentation, yields a very tolerable wine; and a repetition of the process furnishes an inferior sort. In this way a great proportion of the ordinary wines of the country are made; but all the choicest growths, all the vins d'entremets, are more or less sweet.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

The pair of graceful pictures has been chosen by our artist from a Vineyard between Florence and Vallombrosa. In the first view, the Vineyard, the gathering of the grapes is in progress; and, to the right, the fruit is being placed in rough open tubs, into which the "wine-maker" is ramming by the rich and luscious bunches, the press being, as already stated, but little used in the Tuscan vintage. This is a charming scene of the vineyard and the distant hills; the figures are characteristic, even in gesticulation, though these elegant forms of the children of the "sunny south" might, but for this explanation, lead some to regard them merely as a composition

In the companion picture, we have the Grape-Cart, drawn by oxen, a feature of bucolic simplicity. They are guided by rope reins fixed to rings, which are inserted in their nostrils: "Sometimes," says Mr. Forsyth, "two horns joined like pincers are used, like the pastorals of Lucilius, which has teased so, nurses and mothers from the present antiquaries." The light-and-shade of this picture is very beautiful. The broad-eaved buildings, the vine flinging its luxuriance over the wall, and the distant poplars, are so many characteristic accessories to this genuine Italian landscape.

FINE ARTS.

FISHER'S DRAWINGROOM SCRAP-BOOK. 1850. By CHARLES MACKAY, LL.D. Peter Jackson, London and Paris

This monarch of the Annuals has outlived nearly all his race—beautiful and numerous as once were the triumphs of Art and Song, of Illustration and Romance, that, at the present season of the year, were wont to begin to stud our drawingroom tables with

The heads of memory's rosary,
Wherein she reckons kind remembrances
Of friends and old affections

The artistic wealth of the present volume numbers some thirty-five large coloured plates and a vignette, exquisitely engraved on steel. "Cheerfulness," the frontispiece. Is a group of three gracefully joyous figures, by Parris; one equipped with bow and quiver, the second with hunter's horn, and the third bearing a basket of rich fruits—the whole into a wreath of bell to delight the "healthful pleasures of the rural life." The opposite vignette (by Topham) is full of poetic melancholy; it is a scene of shipwreck, with the foundering hull, the sea breaking over the once proud mast, now prostrate upon it, while sea-birds pour forth their painitive wail over the desolation their white forms gleaming in the dark cloads of the stormy horizon.

The volume opens with an introduction to "the Harp of Erin," the illustration being the Genius of Ireland, and a companion figure, seated upon a rock, the former with her national harp; in her hair and around her arm she wears the shamrock, and her foot rests upon the shank of an anchor, the emblem of Hope, whilst the distant ocean betokens a favouring gale. This well-traced and well timed composition is from the pencil of Mr. Parris. Mr. Cattermole has contributed "the Genius of Pride"—a stately form in a cathedral aisle, the mailed effigy lying upon its top, and a monk kneeling in devotion at its base. This is a scene of gloom and grandeur, illumined with a few bright lights, the better to show the sad scene to which human pride "must come at last." It is full of touching poetry. "The Offered Flower" is one of Mr. J. W. Wright's richly-costumed and fine creations, playfully presenting a rose. "The Anglers" is a charming mountain stream, by Allen. Three portraits—Lamartine and the President Louis Napoleon, and Lord Gough—are seasonable enough. The "Lake D'Oo, High Pyrenees," is another of Mr. Allom's sublime scenes "Ellen Evelina" is a figure, mask in hand, reclining within a gondola; it is a clever, lovelie composition by Haynes. "Fortune," a pair of reclining figures, beneath a palmate, is by J. Herbert. "The Fall of Manna" is from N. Poussin's celebrated picture. "The Festival of the Dragon Boat" is the gorgeous Chinese scene, by Allom. "Miss Prada, the Spanish Dancer," by Lewis, is accompanied by some playful lines by Lady Blessington. "The Brides of Venice," by Mr. Herbert, has a dramatic fragment by J. A. Herand. "Faithful Gerty," a watching over a gentle child, is by Mackay. "Sunset on the Country," is a youthful beauty," by J. Hayter. We have only space to name three others—"The Carousal," and "Raising the Standard," and "The Minstrel's Song," each by Cattermole, and worthy of the high reputation. The latter, a fine Rembrandtish scene, has the following accompaniment by the Editor

WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

Great William spread before him
All his stores of wealth untold—
Diamonds, emeralds, and rubies,
Heaps on heaps of massed gold.
Mournfully as gazed upon it,
As it glittered in the sun,
"O treasure!
For the slumbers of a child."

Great William from his turret
Heard the martial trumpet blow.
The armed warriors thronging
Of a mighty people knew.
Saw their weapons flash in sunlight,
As the squadron trod the sward.

A thousand spears in rest,
A thousand lances high,
A thousand pennons flying
Gaily to the sky.
A thousand knights and squires
Around their leader's path,
A thousand steeds that champ the bit
And foam and fret in wrath.

Great William stood on Windsor,
Looking from its castled height,
O'er that fair wide-spread realm of his
Which he won in single fight.
Glistering in the morning light,
Looking on the tranquil view,
And the forest waving free.
And he sighed, "Oh! land of beauty,
I could be thy death-song."

Mine then art, but I would yield thee,
And for happy, godly gain,
In exchange, a peasant's garden,
To be tended by the plough.

The majority of the lyric accompaniments to the several plates are from the pen of the Editor: they are graceful compositions, appropriate to the artistic themes.

APPROACHING MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.—The nuptials of the Earl of Winchilsea and Miss Rice, the eldest daughter of Edward Lloyd Rice, Esq., M.P. for Dover, are expected to be solemnised towards the end of this month. A matrimonial alliance is said to be about to take place between the Earl of Rosslyn and Lady Isabella, the late Sir John Diggle Baker Dyke, of Eversleigh, Bart., and sister to the Viscountess Torrington. The marriage of Master St. John Mildmay, of Hazley Grove, in the county of Somerset, Esq., to Adeline, the late Sir Henry St. John Mildmay, of Dogmersfield Park, Bart., and Caroline Adelaïza, daughter of the late Orlando and Lady Lucy Standish, and granddaughter to the Countess Dowager of Limerick, will, it is said, be solemnized at the end of the ensuing month.

By an act passed in the late session, an alteration was made in the manner of giving rewards to Custom-house officers on making seizures. The act in question (12 and 13 Vic., cap. 80) declares it to be expedient that power should be given to the Commissioners of the Treasury and the Commissioners of the Customs to alter and vary the distribution of such rewards in such cases as they may think fit, and accordingly power is given to them by a specific section.

Hudson, the Irish comedian, has been several times hissed lately in New York, in the representation of his favourite characters, on the ground that he exaggerates them. He was in consequence compelled to avoid the offence and state that the comedies would be altered so as to avoid the obnoxious parts.

THE THEATRES.

ADELPHI

"Mrs. Bunbury's Spoons" is the name of a pièce de circonstance, by Mr. Sterling Coyne, produced on Monday. It is an adaptation of the "Pas des Patineurs," in the shape of an extravaganza. Mrs Bunbury, herself, a confectioner, is supported by Mrs. C. Matthews. Between her and her baker, Jeb Smith (Mr. G. Smith), an amorous entr'acte is pioneered and aggravated by a lawsuit. The Husbury Barnes, and Bob Tomkis, his clerk (Mr. Paul Bedford an M. [illegible]). The fun, it may be readily conceived, is "fast and furious." [illegible] the frozen lake at the Surrey Zoological Gardens gives occasion for a Kathleen scene, in which these worthies appear in grotesque costumes—Mrs. F. Matthews as an Hungarian, Mr. Bedford as a Tinnie harlequin, and Mr. G. Smith as a devil. A piece of this practical character is certain to excite riotous merriment—the applause at the conclusion was, indeed, remarkable for its vehemence. Some tableaux in the course of the evening were skilfully grouped, and the dances gracefully executed.

LYCEUM.

A new but not original piece, under the title of "A Lady in Difficulties," has been produced here. It is a translation of the comédie-vaudeville, "Le Chevalier d'Essonne," by Mr. Planché, who has reduced the original from three acts to two. The interest in the vaudeville turns on a French lady assuming masculine attire, by which she is brought into trouble with the Vicomte de Nangis; on whom, however, she ultimately makes her hand. The adapter has transferred the scene to Prussia, and the names of the persons are accordingly altered. The female chevalier becomes Madame Dechaff (Miss Gilbert); and the military lover, Count Nantzmer (Mr. G. Mathews), whose tedious behaviour is well persuaded by this lively actor. The little drama was successful, though not very exciting either in its plot or conduct.

SURREY.

We are glad to find, that, owing to the success of "Richelieu," the performance of that play has been continued during the whole of this week, as well as the last. On next Monday the new drama, entitled "Ellen Percy," will be produced. The entire will commence. The series will be inaugurated by a poetic drama, in three acts, entitled "The False Position," and written in conjunction by Mr. Westland Marston and Mr. Bayle Bernard.

PRINCESS'.

Miss Louisa Pyne has considerably added to the favourable notions entertained of her début in Zerlina, in Mozart's "Don Giovanni," by her interesting performance of the sleep-walking heroine of Bellini's opera—Amina. It is not that her delineation is distinguished by histrionic genius or much dramatic impulse, but there is a quiet naturalness in her acting, and a pathos in her singing sometimes touching. It is grateful to be relieved now and then from the conventional stage trammels; and, although Miss Pyne's version is the most tranquil that can be conceived, it is marked by a certain awkwardness, it makes its way, and awakens the sensibilities of her auditory. Her vocalisation demands almost unqualified eulogium. If nature have bestowed on her but a moderate degree of power, there is enough vigour for the display of her skill, thanks to the conductor's careful subduing of the accompaniments. It was in the opening cavatina and in the concluding scena that Miss Pyne achieved her greatest success. Her interpretation of the slow movement of the latter was highly artistic; and she poured forth a series of florid divisions, terminating with a brilliantly-articulated shake in the upper octave, with admirable precision, creating quite a sensation in fact by her neat and facile execution.

Mr. Macfarren's new opera, founded on the popular comedy of "Charles the Second," will be the earliest operatic novelty. It is to be produced in the course of the ensuing week. Madame Macfarren will make her first appearance on the stage, in the part of the Page. Mary Copp will be represented by Miss Louisa Pyne. The Merry Monarch is to be enacted by Mr. Harrison, Rochester by Mr. Corri, and Captain Copp by Mr. Weiss.

In the course of next week, the long-announced revival of "Antony and Cleopatra" will take place at SADLER'S WELLS. It will, we understand, be mounted in superb style, and, having been in rehearsal with great care, is expected to be, in all respects, a complete performance.

MUSIC.

The Prospectus of the London Wednesday Concerts, and the circulars of the Sacred Harmonic Society and London Sacred Harmonic Society, have been issued. These programmes are deserving of attention. The directors of the Exeter-Hall LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS dwell with exultation on the unparalleled success of the past season, twenty-seven concerts having been given, which were attended by 60,000 persons, and which produced the payment of upwards of £3000 for professional services alone. It is gratifying to find that the directors pledge themselves "to raise by every means the character and quality of the entertainment; and while they can hardly hope that it shall please all, they will be careful that it shall be so conducted as to offend none." Of this promise of improvement we take a note: we called upon the directors last year to select their schemes to elevate the taste of the million, and to render the concerts almost equally popular not-house style of ballad-mongering. Amongst the artistes engaged are Mrs. A. Newton, Misses Rainforth, Dolby, Lucombe, A. and M. Williams, A. Nunn, R. Isaacs, Bolingbroke, Hoddart, and Peters; Messrs. Lockey, Land, Lange, Frodsham, and Braham, Herr Formès (exclusively engaged for these concerts); Signori Ronconi, F. Ronconi, and Bartolini. Sims Reeves is promised, "if his restoration to the full health will permit." Best as the English tenor is now singing in great force in opera, with Miss Lucombe and Mr. Whitworth, it may be presumed that he will be forthcoming. Mr. Bridge retains his as an organist, and Mr. Willy, the pianist, will make his second season. Ronconi's advent we take to be doubtful; he was last week in Italy, and, as he has to open the Italian Opera House in Paris, on the 6th of November, he can, at all events, hardly be here before the end of December. Braham is announced for eight farewell concerts, when he is to retire into private life. The directors announce that negotiations are pending with the celebrated Madame Pleyel, "for the introduction, at the Wednesday Concerts, of her unique and original M. Thalberg, Misses Day, Woolf, Ward, Mr. W. S. Bennett, and Mr. W. H. Holmes (pianists); and the Dustine, who have just returned from their trip to the United States; Messrs. G. Collins, V. Collins, Jarrett, Rhea, Richardson, Salmon, Piatti, Nicholson, and Enkermann. Here's attraction enough, with taste and taste in the selection of music, to sustain the popularity of these novel concerts. Next Wednesday (the 24th) will be the opening concert, to be continued every consecutive Wednesday up to January 30, 1850. The series of fifteen may be subscribed for at a reduced tariff.

The committee of the SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY announce the opening of the season on Monday, November 12, the centenary of the production of Handel's oratorio "Solomon," which will be, therefore, performed, supported by the Misses A. and M. Williams, Miss Stewart, Messrs. Lockey and Lawler. The announcement states the circular, "the commencement of a new season, the committee advert, with much gratification, to the unanimously expressed opinions as to the great improvement which has taken place in the society's performances, since the introduction of the new system, and to the prediction of the most sanguine, confident expectation that, under the same able direction, the performances of the coming season will attain a still higher degree of excellence. The committee hope to include in the performances of the ensuing season the following favourite works:—'Israel in Egypt,' 'Solomon,' 'Messiah,' 'Israel in Egypt,' 'Saul,' Mendelssohn's 'Elijah,' 'St. Paul,' 'Lauda Sion,' Spohr's 'Last Judgment,' Haydn's 'Creation,' and some of his church music." The committee also intimate that some other works, new to the Society, may be brought forward, among which we petition strongly for Beethoven's sacred Mass in D, and Bach's "Passions."

The LONDON SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, under Mr. Surman's direction, will commence the season on Friday, the 2nd of November, with Handel's "Messiah." "This Society," it is mentioned in the circular, "which numbers upwards of 400 performers, has the practice and performance of sacred music, including oratorios, anthems, services, chants, &c. The Society has in view the improvement of its members in choral harmony, the cultivation of natural taste, and the encouragement of native talent, in the concentration and execution of sacred music. Immense advantages are offered for the attainment of these ends, in the large stock of music placed at the Society's disposal by Mr. Surman, the conductor, whose strenuous exertions during the last seventeen years, in the production of the new oratorios of the great composers, and whose long-tried experience in conducting their public performance, eminent y qualify him for the post which he holds."

MUSICAL TOURS.—Madame Anna Bishop has been singing this week at Plymouth and Exeter, with the two Lablaches, Signori Cazzolari and Bellotti, and with M. Thalberg as pianist. Miss Catherine Hayes will commence her English tour on the 29th inst., with a quartet at Manchester, in which Miss Poole, Mr. Benson, and Mr. Burdini; Benedict being the conductor. On the 30th, Miss Hayes will sing at Liverpool; on the 31st, at Sheffield; and on the 1st and 2nd of November at Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Leeds. On the 5th of November Miss Hayes will sing at the Philharmonic Concert, at Dublin; and from the 6th to the 10th, will perform in "Lucia," "Norma," and the "Sonnambula," with Miss Poole, Signor Pacini, Mr. Harrison, and Herr Damcke. Miss Hayes will afterwards visit her native city, Limerick; and will also perform at Cork.—Mr. Joan Parry's provincial trip continues to be prosperous.

Mr. Henry Phillips has also been giving his Musical Entertainments, consisting of Moore's "Melodies" and Dibdin's "Songs," in the country; and Mr. Samuel Lover, his Irish and American budgets.——An Italian operatic company, of which Madame Montenegro and Signor Santiago are the principals, have been visiting the quiet towns in the Midland counties. The Pyne and Harrison Concerts, in Free-trade Hall, Manchester, have been extremely well attended. Italian vocalists have met with great success at Liverpool, Manchester, and Preston. Mr. Thalberg is giving his Musical Soirées in Scotland, and entertainments in the north.——Madame Dulcken, with Hontan the violinist, Hausmann violoncellist, and Molle. Schloss and Herr Sedelhoff vocalists, are likewise proving a source of success.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS.—The attractions in Paris are Perrot's new ballet, "Le Palsage des Fées," with Adolphe Adam's pretty music and Carlotta Grisi's charming dancing, at the Grand Opera, and Halévy's new opera, "Le Fée aux Roses," at the Opéra Comique, so fairyland is now in the ascendant, just as Gaillarde was some seasons since.——Mdme. Castel an has been singing Alice in Meyerbeer's "Robert," with great success. Mariglio, the celebrated Italian violoncellist, the master of Piatti, has just died in Milan.

THE PLAGUE COMES, AND THE PLAGUE GOES.

Nor often was crime so unmask'd as now—
Oh! not often was earth less blameless;
Great crowds seem to Moloch their lives to vow,
Red murder floats plumed from the Prussic brow—
To the pr d of love few worshippers bow,
And all unrevolting things have grown shameless.

Unbelief and base sensual greed in grain
The wan texture of modern feelings;
And the paying angels with grief compliin
That their whisper'd advice is almost vain—
That the foulest of passions grimly re zn
In the midst of the foulest dealings.

And loud wars, and rumours of war prevail,
And red blood is pour'd forth like water;
And the world is fill'd with a far-spread wail
And such horrors are done as cannot fail
To make men wax furious and women grow pale,
With the rage, or the dread, of slaughter.

But no more need the murd'rer raise his hand,
In his vengeance or mad contention!
A shake has been giv'n to the mortal sand
Which tastes the days of a numberless band—
They are mark'd and call'd to a diff'rent land—
Oh, brief is their time of dissension!

Nor murder, nor war, has perform'd the deeds
Which a judgment will soon exhibit;
The murd'rer recoils as his victim bleeds,
And the conqueror spares certain lands and reeds—
The latter has lines which he ne'er exceeds,
And the former still fears the gibbet.

But THAT which is coming cares nought for kind,
And respects not any condition;
Its path is mark'd out, though its eyes be blind,
And its breath is an arrowy silent wind,
And each step it takes is a doom ordain'd,
With a sure and a dread precision.

The vengeance arrives; but how changed the view!
While the earth lay stricken and pining,
Fair Charity hasten'd, all kind and true,
And o'er many a horror its mantle threw,
And from rich to poor, like an angel, flew,
And e'en from above quick relenting drew—
For some gold 'mid the dross was shining.

Yes, the furnace blazed, and the furnace burn'd,
But the ill was not past redeeming;
The assessions Judge something kind discern'd,
And his wrath was sooth'd and his vengeance turn'd,
And his heart towards mercy and pardon yearn'd
Oh! some gold 'mid the dross was beaming!

MILES GERALD KEON.

LITERATURE.

A NAVAL BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY, by WILLIAM O'BYRNE, Esq. Murray. Contemporary biography is, at all times, a labour demanding extraordinary discrimination to ensure success. The extent to which this qualification has been exhibited in the work before us shows an almost amount to a marvel, of which but a very imperfect idea can be formed from books of the same class published hitherto. All other biographical dictionaries in our language must yield to this in extent and variety of contents; for it accomplishes more for a class than they have done for the entire community. Here is a large 8vo volume of some 1400 pages, and twice as many compactly printed columns; comprising an account, more or less detailed, of nearly two thousand officers; or, in the words of the title-page, "the Life and Services of every Living Officer in her Majesty's Navy, from the rank of Admiral of the Fleet to that of Lieutenant inclusive." Its production has been six years' unremitting toil, mental and physical. The author is a civilian, and there is something remarkable in his setting about the work: he saw the necessity that existed for such a book; "it was due," to the services, he says, and also, to the country. To the country, it was due that it should be made acquainted with the merits, individually, of men to whose collective efforts it is, in the main, indebted for its proud pre-eminence in the seals of nations; and upon whom it must, in days to come, look for a great measure for permanent security. To the Profession, it was due that some exertion should be made to furnish a public memorial of the services performed, the dangers braved, the honours attained, and the disappointments suffered, by those who lived and died in support of England's greatness, and who, during a long period of peace, have equally maintained her dignity, afforded protection to her commerce, and in every way guarded her interests."

It is gratifying to learn that one of Mr. O'Byrne's staple sources of authority is his communications from the individuals to whose professional biography the work relates, in the shape of memoirs, many of which have been sent to secretary. Another important recommendation is the author's confining his commendation to the language adopted in public despatches, or other official documents. On the assurance that he has carefully examined the London Gazette, affixing in every instance to a memoir, by way of note, the date and page of the Gazette in which the officer's name stands recorded: with the single exception of Captain Marryat, and on the express authority of the present able Secretary of the Admiralty, Captain W. A. B. Hamilton, and his venerable predecessor, Sir John Barrow, as well as Mr. Barrow, Keeper of the Admiralty Records. The value of such official aid cannot be too highly rated; and the contribution is duly acknowledged in the preface.

The Memoirs are, of course, in extent, proportioned to the services of the individuals We shall add, however, mention that as the printing of this bulky volume has occupied a considerable time, the services of several officers (upwards of 600) now deceased are of necessity given; and, subject to this necessity, all are included whose names are contained in the Navy List for Jan. 1849. Thus, about the middle of the volume we find the memoir of Sir Robert Waller Otway occupying five columns, an unusually large extent, yet not greater than his five years' service demand for an officer who, during the term of his career afloat, had been not less than one hundred times engaged with the enemies of his country. To show that, compendious as the Memoirs are, they are not mere dry details, we may refer to an adventure in Otway's life which is vividly told by Mr. O'Byrne

In July, 1799, this officer formed a plan for cutting out the late British frigate Hermione, whose crew had mutinied, and carried her, as reported, into the port of Laguira. For this purpose he left the Penet, with two boats, and at 1, A.M., on the 8th, after a fatiguing row of many hours, entered the enemy's anchorage but, to his mor ification, found that the object of his search was not there. The brig, however, was discovered, and made a dart at a vessel (apparently a corvette), which his pilot informed him had lately arrived from Spain. Although knocked back, while in the act of boarding, by the discharge of a musket, whose contents passed close along his cheek, his determined spirit was not to be daunted by a few musketry shots, so at his re-appearance were in full possession of their trophy. By break of day, they had succeeded in towing her clear of a heavy fire which had been opened upon her from the batteries; but, as the wind had become light, they were yet at a great distance from the entrance of the harbour in pursuit. As a dead calm had by this time set in, and as it was perfectly impossible to compete with a force so overwhelming, the only question that remained was, how they should themselves escape from the enemy's gunboats. Otway's plan was invested with the command (which he retained about twelve months) of the Penn, a sixth-rat, for the purpose of proceeding in search of, and conveying relief to, some missing whalers which had been frozen up in Baffin's Bay. He was subsequently, until 1838, employed in making a magnetic survey of Great Britain and Ireland, by order of Captain Sir Edward Sabine, and on April 5, 1830, he was appointed to the command, in the Erebus bomb, of an expedition (consisting of that vessel and of the Terror), which, in the ensuing September, sailed from England for the purpose of magnetic research and geographical discovery in the Antarctic Seas. During an absence of four years, three persevering attempts were made to penetrate the icy limits of the South Pole. In the course of their cruises, the ships discovered a vast continent, ranged with a barrier of not 150 feet in height; they, nevertheless, adventurously persisted, and, in spite of many perils, succeeded in arriving within 157 miles of the Pole (lat. 78° 10′). Among other distinctions of the kind, by order of Parliament, the Polar Star, and the KING'S Guelphic Order, and also the Swedish Polar Star, and the Hanoverian Guelphic Order, and also the Swedish Polar Star, and the Hanoverian Guelphic Order, and also the Swedish Polar Star, and the Hanoverian under whom such things were sanctioned. What can be said in justification of the treatment of Lieutenant Fitton, who entered the Navy in 1793, (under the assumed name of Lord Keppel,) as Captain's servant, on board the Vestal, 28, Captain George Keppel. In that frigate, besides assisting at the capture of the Pomone, a heavy privateer, he witnessed that of an American packet, having on board Mr. Lewines, late President of the Rebel Congress, who was proceeding to Holland with a secret treaty of alliance with the Dutch. This treaty, previous to the final capture of the ship, had been thrown in a bag overboard, and would never have been discovered but for Mr. Fitton, who, being at the same moment employed in furling the fore-top-gallant sail, observed what he considered to be a mail overboard, and instantly made a report which led to its recovery. A declaration of war against the Dutch, and the immediate sweeping of their numerous vessels from the face of the sea, were thus the momentous results of Mr. Fitton's keenness. Next we find him as purser on board the Stork sloop, during the great mutiny at the Nore, where he was greatly instrumental to the preservation of order; and, on his arrival in the West Indies, Mr. Fitton, with a single boat, destroyed a privateer which the Stork had driven on shore.

On a cruise on a Spanish Main, on 23rd January, 1801, in command of a small worm-out felucca, he drove on shore a Spanish cardacosta, which was boarded and carried, through the irresistible heroism of Mr. Fitton, who, with his sword in his mouth, followed by the greater part of his crew similarly armed, plunged into the sea and swam to her. Notwithstanding this and other valiant exploits, Mr. Fitton was sent home at the peace without either promotion or reward! Although the "zeal and perseverance, the very gallant conduct, and superior professional abilities" displayed by Fitton on other occasions were officially reported by the Commander-in-Chief, he was, nevertheless, after having further captured a privateer and an armed schooner, superseded; "not," as observed by Mr. James, in his "Naval History," "to be promoted to the rank of Commander, but to be turned adrift as an unemployed Lieutenant." All he got was the thanks of the Admiralty, and a sword from the Patriotic Society, value £30!

This is, certainly, one of the "plague spots" of the Service chronicles; and the reader will gladly turn from such records to brighter scenes of heroism crowned and cherished by a grateful country, and honourably rewarded from its Treasury; instances such as are to be found a hundredfold in Mr. O'Byrne's biographies.

PROPOSED EXHIBITION OF WORKS OF ART IN 1851.

A deputation from the Society of Arts waited on the Lord Mayor, at the Mansion-house, on Wednesday, at twelve o'clock, to lay before him and several of the principal merchants of the City, who had been invited to meet them, the proposal of H.R.H. Prince Albert, that a great exhibition of industry of all nations be held in Hyde-park in the year 1851.

The Lord Mayor having detailed the circumstances under which he had been induced to convene the meeting, and dwelt on the advantages which the metropolis and the country were likely to derive from the proposed exhibition, called upon Mr. Cole, the secretary of the Society of Arts, to explain the particulars of the plan.

Mr. Cole proceeded accordingly to do so; but, as the circumstances have already appeared more than once in the papers, it is unnecessary to repeat them at present.

Mr. Prescott then proposed a resolution, thanking H.R.H. Prince Albert for the plan which he had proposed, and expressing the willingness of the meeting to assist in carrying it into execution; and, in doing so, entered concisely into what had been said of the great advantages which might be expected to accrue from the contemplated exhibition.

Mr. Dillon seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. Joseph Hume, M.P., moved a resolution to the effect that the meeting was of opinion that the cost of the proposed exhibition should be defrayed by voluntary subscription, and not out of the general taxation. An experience of more than three years of public life had convinced him that whenever a Government interfered in such matters they only did mischief. It was of the utmost importance that they should have the sanction of the Government, but it was also of the utmost importance that the whole cost of the exhibition be borne by those who were to benefit by it, and to carry it out. There could be no doubt whatever that ample funds could easily be found for so great an enterprise. He must say, however, he did not think it necessary that the prizes ought to be large; and he doubted whether it would be desirable that the commission to decide the prizes should be appointed by the Government.

Alderman Salomons seconded the resolution, which was also carried unanimously.

Mr. Masterman moved that a committee of merchants, bankers, and traders of the City of London be appointed to assist in carrying out the proposed scheme.

The motion was seconded by Sir John Pelly, and carried.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS

DUBLIN AND KINGSTOWN.—October 13: Half-yearly Meeting, Dublin: Mr. Roe in the chair.—Considerable reductions have been made in the working expenditure, though her Majesty's visit had necessitated an extra outlay. A 4 per cent. dividend was declared for the half-year, with a rest of £3200 to be carried to next half-year. The shareholders and directors reciprocated congratulations on the state of the property, and the benefit from the Queen's use of their line, and her gracious ness generally to her Irish subjects.

WEST LONDON.—Oct. 18: Special meeting: London: S. Bird, Esq., in the chair.—It was resolved to take legal proceedings to compel the London and North-western Company to carry out the provisions of the lease of this line, which they entered into in 1845, and which they have hitherto held in abeyance.

The line from CARNARVON to BANGOR is determined upon, and a sufficient pecuniary deposit has been collected. The line will commence from the Britannia Bridge, and is under the sanction of the Chester and Holyhead, although the contractors form a distinct company.

The final lift of the first great tube out of the four tubes between the tower of the BRITANNIA BRIDGE over the Menai Straits, to its final level, took place on the 13th. It is expected that the first public transit for trains through the whole tubular tunnel will be accomplished about the beginning of March.

The NOTTINGHAM and MANSFIELD line was opened on the 11th, as promised, to the public.

A section of the GLASGOW, DUMFRIES, and CARLISLE, extending twelve miles between Dumfries a. d Closeburn, was opened on the 15th. The line traverses one of the most picturesque districts of Scotland.

The Extension of the LONDONDERRY and ENNISKILLEN, which will afford much winter employment to the poor, was commenced on the 8th. The proximity of the station to Londonderry will prove of great advantage.

The promoters of the GREAT NORTH OF SCOTLAND, which is to join the Aberdeen, and through Elgin to Inverness, have addressed the various landowners to lend their assistance in the promotion of the project by liberal arrangements for the purchase of the necessary land.

THE NEW POST-OFFICE REGULATIONS.—On Tuesday a meeting of the London clergy took place at the hall of Sion College, for the purpose of "expressing their opinion upon the evil of an increased transmission of letters from the General Post-office on Sundays." The meeting was convened by the Venerable the Archdeacon of London (who presided on the occasion), on the requisition of a numerously-signed requisition, of which the following is a copy:—"We the undersigned request you to convene a meeting of the clergy of the archdeaconry of London, in order to the expression of their opinion on the evil of an increased transmission of letters from the General Post-office on Sundays, and also to consider the necessity of presenting petitions to Parliament declaratory of their opinion that it is paramount duty of the Government of a Christian nation to protect the Sabbath from being desecrated by public trading or otherwise, and to secure to all orders of men the sacred enjoyment of that day of rest which the Creator, in mercy, has ordained for mankind."—The Venerable Chairman having opened the proceedings with prayer, read a series of resolutions expressive of sympathy with the various meetings of the laity which had already unapproved of the proposed changes in the Post-office. The resolutions also declared it to be the duty of a Christian Government to secure to all its subjects rest from labour, and an opportunity of worshipping God on the Lord's Day.—The Rev. Dr. Croly observed, in proof that the Sabbath should be regarded as an ordinance of God, that it was a most remarkable circumstance that of all the ordinances of religion this was the first, and one deemed of so much importance, that it took up the seventh portion of every man's existence. There were seven remarkable occasions on which the importance of this ordinance was impressed on the minds of mankind. The observation of the Sabbath was imposed by the Deity on man on the very day after his existence. Secondly, the command was renovated when the children of Israel were delivered out of Egypt. Thirdly, it was engraven on the tables of the law given to Moses. Fourthly, it was brought prominently before the minds of the children of Israel every Sabbatical year, when slaves were emancipated. Fifthly, on the year of jubilee, its importance and advantages were recommended to the Jewish people, when not only slaves were liberated, but the fallen families of Israel had their estates restored to them. Sixthly, the term of seventy years captivity in Babylon was proportioned to the defection of the Jews with regard to the observance of the Sabbath Day; and, lastly, St Paul refers to the institution as a type of the κατασκηνη or σαββατισμος—the rest which remains for the people of God. The new gentleman, in moving the statement of the Post-office authorities that the proposed arrangements would have a tendency to diminish Sunday labour, remarked that the agitation against the measure was entirely confined to Post-office clerks, letter-carriers, and other parties most especially to form a right decision upon the matter. (Hear, hear.)—The Rev. Mr. Murray, of St. Dunstan's-in-the-East, also inculcated the necessity of Sabbath observance. The meeting was subsequently addressed by the Rev. Mr. Rooby; the Rev. J. V. Polit, Rector of London; the Rev. Mr. Gibbs, Vicar of Christ Church, Newgate-street; the Rev. Mr. Wood; the Rev. Mr. Dear, of Hanwell; the Rev. John Sandys, Incumbent of St. Paul's, Islington; and the Rev. Mr. Evans, Rector of St. Sepulchre; and it was agreed that the resolutions should be embodied in a memorial, which, when signed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, should be presented by the Archdeacon to the First Lord of the Treasury, the Postmaster-general, and the Secretary of State for the Home Department. The meeting then separated.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"B. B.," Homerton.—The position presents some difficulties, but we believe White could win.

"W. S. D." Kelso; "Incertus."—You are quite wrong, as you may see by referring to Staunton.

"Indignans."—We cordially concur in our Correspondent's opinion, that it is high time that the right-thinking portion of the Chess community should combine to put down the system of playing Chess for a stake in public rooms. The custom may have its advantages in a Club, where there is some guarantee for the respectability of the players; but as places open to any one, it is calculated to operate most injuriously upon the interests of the game, by encouraging a set of idle and unscrupulous persons to practise Chess solely for the purpose of reaping a profit from unwary visitors.

"C. P." The variety you ought to see that mate cannot be given in two moves, unless Rtx1 has the power of checking with his Rook.

"J. L. F."—It is lawful to Castle after having been in check, provided neither the King nor Rook have moved.

"Jemmy," "A. S.," North Shields; "S. U." and others, are mistaken. Problem No 299 cannot possibly be solved in two moves.

"A Constant Reader."—The first move in the solution of Mr. Stanley's clever Problem No. 298 is Kt to K B 5th, not Kt to Q 8 5th.

"H. R. E. C.," Blackheath.—Your notation is unintelligible, study the method of describing the moves which is given in the "Chess-Player's Text-Book."

"B. B." appears to have overlooked a tolerably obvious mode of solving his Problem in three moves instead of five, by 1. P to K 6th (ch); 2. Kt to Q 6th (ch); and 3. Q to K 7th or 8th—mate.

"G. R."—If "G. R." will favour us with his address, the information he requires shall be forwarded. His problems, always acceptable, are now under consideration.

"J. L. S."—In the position submitted, your antagonist's King is in check, notwithstanding the checking Piece is unable to move.

"Milo."—You will probably thank the following from the Berlin Magazine sufficiently difficult:—White: K at Q 3d, R at K B 7th, B at Q Kt 3d, Kt at Q B 8th, P at K 2d. Black: K at Q 3d, P's at K B 5th and Q B 4th. White to mate in five moves.

"Veteran."—True. For the most part, the Chess-men intended for play (we say nothing of the merely ornamental ones, such as Fleximan's, or the Oriental pin-cracks) have been designed by the manufacturers alone; and they, knowing nothing of the requirements of the game, have given us patterns as ugly and as inappropriate as could well be conceived. The first attempt to combine utility with something like beauty of form, was made a few years back in the "Edinburgh Men." These were evidently designed by a player; and, with them, we have found very sufficient combinations to make us forget and overlook many things in the other men in use. Unfortunately, however, they want stability. In the leading pieces, the base is too small for the pillar, and one is in constant fear of their toppling over. Now this defect is remedied completely in the new pieces called "The Staunton Chess-men," in which, while the base is unusually broad, the shaft and crown are sufficiently light and slender to prevent their offering any impediment to the view of the looser men. So great, indeed, are their advantages in this regard, as well as in many others, that we do not hesitate to say that an inexperienced player will learn the game not only better, but in half the time, with them, that he would with any others.

"A Chess-player" wishing to try a game by correspondence may hear of his match by addressing to "Secundus Pulli," Post-office, Borough-bridge, Yorkshire.

"W. H. G." 1. Your solution is wrong! In the Staunton Chess-men the Pawns have no mark to distinguish them, but the Pieces on the King's side are indented by a small crown, and this will be found of incalculable service in playing over a written game, and in examining positions

"J. B." Manchester.—With the best play on both sides, your game would most probably be drawn

"S. B.," Hull.—Neat, but the modus operandi is too apparent in all of them.

Solutions by "S. P. C." "A Puzzled Beginner," "M. E. R.," "J. G. M." "C. P. G.," "Kirkham," "Byro," "B. B.," "Bellamy," "S. U." "Mr. Pips," "Causa," "J. J. A.," and "Eliza," are correct. Those by "Incertus," "W. S. D.," "R. B.," "J. L. S.," "M. P.," "Yo-son," are wrong.

 The answers to several communications are deferred, from want of space.

Any amateur desirous of playing a game at Chess by Correspondence, may meet with an opponent by addressing "H. E. K., Post-office, York."

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 299.

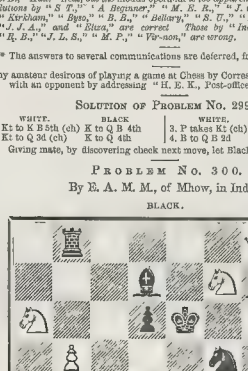
WHITE.	BLACK	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to K B 5th (ch)	K to Q B 4th	3. P takes Kt (ch)	K takes R
2. Kt to Q 3d (ch)	K to Q 4th	4. B to Q B 2d

Giving mate, by discovering check next move, let Black play as he may.

PROBLEM NO. 300.

By E. A. M. M., of Mhow, in India.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in six moves.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
"	K to Q 4th

Amsterdam to play.

CHESS IN THE METROPOLIS.

Mr. Staunton gives his Queen's Rook to an Amateur in return for the Pawn and move

(Remove White's Q's Rook and Black's K B's Pawn from the board.)

WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr. —.)	WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr. —)
1. P to K 4th	Q Kt to B 3d	14. P takes R	Q Kt takes P (c)
2. Q kt to B 3d	P to K 3d	15. K Kt to his 5th (ch)	K to B sq
3. P to Q 4th	K B to Q Kt 5th	16. P to K B 4th	Q Kt takes K Kt
4. K Kt to B 3d	P to Q 4th	17. P takes P	P (d)
5. P to K 5th	K Kt to K 2d	17. K R to K Kt sq	P to K 4th
6. K B to Q 3d	Castles	18. P to K R 3d	P takes K B P
7. B takes K R P (ch)	K takes B	19. Q B takes P	Q to K 2d (ch)
8. K Kt to his 4th (ch)	K to K Kt sq (a)	20. K to Q sq	Q Kt to K B 3d
9. Q to K R 5th	R to K B 4th	21. R to K sq	Q Kt to K 5th
10. Q to K R 7th (ch)	K to B sq	22. B to Q 2d (ch)	Q B to K 3d
11. Q to K R 8th (ch)	Kt to his sq	23. K Kt takes B	Q takes K Kt
12. Kt to K R 7th (ch)	K to B 2d	24. Q Kt takes Kt	B takes B
13. P to K Kt 4th	B takes K P (ch)	25. R to K B sq (ch)	B to K B sq (ch)
	(b)	and B ack surrendered

(a) The moves up to this point are the same on both sides as those given in the analysis of the odds of Pawn move in "The Chess-Player's Companion." The game proceeds as follows —

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
8.	K to Kt 3d	12. P to K B 5th	K to Kt 4th
9. Q to her 3d (ch)	K to K B 4th	13. Kt takes K P	Q to K B 3d
10. P to K 4th	Q to K sq (best)	14. Kt takes R (ch)	Q takes Kt
11. P to K 5th	K to Kt 5th (ch)	15. P takes Kt

(b) He appears to have forgotten that he could have taken Kt at K B P. White's reply would be K Kt to his 4th (ch) before taking P, &c.

Had he played Q to Q 3d instead, his situation in a few moves would have been still worse for him.

		17. Kt to K R 7th (ch)	K to his 2.
		18. B to K Kt 5th (ch), and White must win.

(c) Q takes P (ch) would have been better, but in any case Black has a very bad game.

(d) If, instead of persisting in the attack at once, he had played Q to Q 3d, with the intention of pursuing the attack at once; but on the move made, however, we believe Black might have escaped with a drawn game.

		25. K to Q 2d (best)	Kt to his 3d (ch)
		26. K to Q sq	Kt to Q 5th

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

On Saturday, in consequence of the refusal of the colonists at the Cape and Sydney to receive convicts from England, orders were issued from the Home-office for the convicts now waiting to be expatriated to be forwarded to Merton Bay and Norfolk Island. To the latter place a body of 200 out-pensioners of Chelsea Hospital are about to be sent. Most advantageous offers have been made to these men to induce them to locate at Norfolk Island: on the passage out they will act as convict guards, and on their arrival in the settlement perform duty as military colonists. The number of convicts awaiting transportation is 1460.

On the 18th inst., sixteen of the political prisoners at Rastadt (Bavaria), among whom were some of the most seriously compromised, escaped from the fortress; and though cannon were instantly fired to give an alarm, they were not captured.

On the night of the 1st inst., during a violent gale of wind, preceded by a thunderstorm, the suspension-bridge of Savines, in the Hautes Alps, was carried away. The accident is attributed to the force of the wind, although some think that the lightning affected the cast-iron work of the bridge

On Saturday morning, between seven and eight o'clock, a man named Harvey Thompson, engaged loading a cart of grains at Sir Henry Meux's brewery, Tottenham court-road, whilst leveling the grains on the top of the cart, was suddenly seized with a fit of epilepsy; the workmen above, unaware of the circumstance, continued to shovel out the grains till the man was completely covered. A passer-by, having witnessed his struggles, raised an alarm, and the poor fellow was rescued and conveyed to St. Giles's Infirmary, but before he reached there life was found to be extinct.

Some of the works of Thorwaldsen have been lately sold by auction at Copenhagen. The Spanish minister bought a Ganymede for 2000 dollars. The Gamymede with the eagle was purchased for the Copenhagen Museum. Some purchases were also made for the French Academy.

The hall built by Mr. Hullah's musical classes in Long-acre, nearly opposite Sow-street, is to be called St. Martin's Hall. It will afford sitting room for two thousand persons.

The sands on the north and south of Bridlington are almost covered with wrecks and coals, there being about 1400 tons lost by the gale on the 7th. Some fishermen have got twenty tons of coals.

On Thursday week, an eel which weighed 18 ounces was caught in the Eden by Mr. Richard Ellison, of Appleby, whilst fishing for trout with fly.

An act of Parliament was passed shortly before the prorogation, to extend to the officers of inland revenue the privilege of becoming members of the Excise Benevolent Fund Society. It appears that the society was established under the sanction of the Commissioners of Excise for their officers; and, in consequence of the consolidation of the stamps and the excise, it is considered necessary to extend the society to the inland officers, and for that purpose this statute is to be taken notice of as a public act.

The number of dispensaries, fever hospitals, and infirmaries for which county presentments were made in Ireland in the year 1848, amounted to 173 (against 8.3 in 1847), the amount of presentments was £83,506, and the amount of subscriptions £38,393, making a sum total of £116,899. The total amount of the sums advanced and granted for fever hospitals in Ireland at the presenting sessions preparatory to the spring assizes of 1849 was £7885. The number of fever hospitals supported by the poor-rates in 1848 amounted to 233 under the temporary fever act, the cost of which was £81,448; and to 80 not under that act, the cost of which was £31,789

A short time back, Mr. Dixon, of the Red Lion, Henley-on-Thames, was entertained to dinner by some of his supporters, and among the dishes was a haunch of venison. The meat was so "high" that it was sent from the table untasted, but on the following day a portion of it was hashed up for the family dinner, and immediately after partaking of it Mr. Dixon and his two brothers, together with the cook and boots, were seized with a sudden illness, and all of them, it is said, died in the course of a few hours.

A letter addressed to the editor of the Plymouth Times states that it is currently reported that one of the persons who took the most active part at the public meetings as well as at the inquiry before the Bishop of Exeter, against the Sisters of Mercy, has actually let his premises to Miss Sellon and the Sisters to form an establishment at Eldad.

George Frederick Manning and Maria Manning his wife were removed from Horsemonger-lane Gaol to Newgate on Monday, preparatory to their trial next week.

On Saturday last the first great tube (or iron tunnel), out of four tubes between the towers, required for the double line of the Chester and Holyhead Railway, in crossing the Menai Straits, was safely hoisted to its final resting-place, or level, without accident to life or limb, which is the more remarkable when the magnitude and height of the works, and the ponderous machinery employed, are taken into consideration. The other tubes will be fixed in their positions early in next spring.

John Dayman, Esq., caused it to be notified to his tenants in Devonshire, by his steward, Mr. J. H. Brimscombe, that at the half-yearly audit for rents due at Lady Day last, held on the 5th day of October, an abatement of 15 per cent. would be made to each of his tenants who should pay up all rent and arrears.

The prospectus of a new Irish paper states "the Dundalk Democrat will advocate an immediate reduction in the rent of land, so as to enable the farmer to live well, when he receives only 30s per barrel for wheat as when he sold it at £3 per barrel."

The Lords of the Treasury have issued a general order approving of Swansea as a port for the importation of tobacco.

At St. Ives, the boats on the mackerel fishery have been very unsuccessful during the past week.

The establishment of baths and washhouses for the labouring classes is likely to be carried into effect at Oxford, the scheme having been taken up with great interest by several benevolent gentlemen, and in particular by Mr. Philip Bury Duncan, at New College, keeper of the Ashmolean Museum, who heads the subscription list with a donation of £50

The member for East Somerset, William Miles, Esq., has most liberally taken off 10 per cent. from his rents at the last settlement. This is the second reduction which Mr. Miles has made

At Aliva Gaol, on Wednesday evening, a fire broke out in an apartment, caused by some oakum becoming ignited. The prisoners were allowed free access to the court-yard, and two or three of them escaped. The fire was promptly extinguished.

During last week, the tides being favourable, large quantities of herrings were caught on the Scottish side of the Solway.

A treaty of marriage between the Prince Royal of Sweden and the Princess Guillelmina Maria, eldest daughter of Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, has just been signed at the Hague. The celebration of the nuptials will take place at the end of January or the beginning of February next year. The Prince Royal was born in May, 1826, and the Princess in April, 1828.

The Marseilles journals announce the death, from cholera, of Madame Manin, wife of the ex-President of the Republic of Venice. This melancholy event took place on Tuesday night week; she had only arrived in Marseilles a few days before, with her husband and family.

The number of persons prosecuted for giving unstamped receipts in 1847 was 102, and in 1848, 119. The penalties recovered vary from £5 to £50. Parties will at once see the importance of not evading the law.

The vacancy in the office of Assistant Physician to St. Thomas's Hospital has been filled up by the appointment of Dr. Thomas B. Peacock.

The committee of the Foundling Hospital have unanimously elected Mr. Brownlow to the office of secretary, vacant by the death of Mr. Lovesley who had that appointment for fifty years.

It is rumoured that Mrs. Butler (Fanny Kemble) is about to marry a Mr. Theodore Sedgwick, of Stockbridge

The officers and men of the Devonport dockyard have formed a fund for the purpose of placing as boarders, in the Royal British Female Orphan Asylum, at Stoke, the orphans of men belonging to the dockyard who have died of the cholera lately. The fund is to be raised by donations and subscriptions, and already most of the officers of the yard, headed by the admiral superintendent, have given either donations or subscriptions, and many both

On Saturday morning last, at four o'clock, James Western, a jobbing gardener, residing in Carpenter's-buildings, Camberwell, got up out of bed, and without any provocation murdered his wife and their child Mary Elizabeth Western, an infant about two years old, by cutting their throats with a razor. The unfortunate man, who was unable to assign any reason for the commission of the deed, and appears to be not of sane mind, gave himself up to the police a few hours after the murder, and he has been committed for trial.

The Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands (now Sir Henry George Ward) has been named by her Majesty a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

The new arrangements proposed for the Post-office have been deferred to the 28th inst.

An evening school for the indigent has been established in the parish of St. Martin in the Fields, in connexion with King's College, and every theological student is required in rotation to give his services as a teacher.

The Rev. Robert Gilchrist, M.D., Chaplain General to the Forces, having returned from his tour of inspection of the regimental schools and libraries in Scotland and Ireland, has resumed his official duties at the Horse Guards

Sweet oil has been found a cure for the mildew which affects grapes. The stems are brushed with the oil daily.

The Pacha of Egypt, in order to test the relative merits of English and Arab horses, has proposed a match to be run in Egypt: the distance to be ten miles; the stakes £15,000, which are the sums, if desired, might be increased to £.0,000; no limitation as to age or weight. The ground over which the match would be run is sand, with a good many stones in it. The challenge is likely to be accepted, on the adoption of certain stipulations proposed by the Turf Club, who it would appear are desirous of making the stakes £15,000 aside, instead of £10,000.

It is said that an intimation has been given by Lord Grey to parties interested in emigration to the Cape of Good Hope that the plan of sending convicts to that colony has been withdrawn. Some definite announcement to this effect was required, since the unsettled state of the question was calculated to interfere injuriously with the proceedings of merchants and others in this country connected with the trade of the place.

WATERING-PLACES OF ENGLAND.—BRIDLINGTON QUAY, YORKSHIRE.

BRIDLINGTON QUAY.

This attractive resort, like the last of our series of the "Watering-places of England," lies on the Yorkshire coast, but at that point where the line turns westward from Flamborough Head, and then, sweeping round to the south, forms the capacious bay called Bridlington Bay, upon the shores of which the sea has made such encroachments as to sweep away the villages of Auburn, Hartburn, and Hyde. In this sheltered harbour, at about a mile south-east of the old town of Bridlington lies the above. It is a modern built place, and is distinctively known as Bridlington Quay; the principal street running direct to the harbour, and being very wide. Within the last sixty years, it has risen from a humble village to the rank of a town numbering above 2000 inhabitants. The north pier commands a view of Flamborough Head, at five miles distance. The bathing accommodation is excellent; and the beach has a fine hard sand, which affords a good walk at low water. An ebbing and flowing spring, which was discovered in 1811, furnishes an abundant supply of water, of remarkable purity. This spring was discovered by the late Benjamin Milne, Esq., collector of the customs at this port; a man who, for this and other services, is justly entitled to rank first among the benefactors of Bridlington. In addition to this ebbing and flowing spring, there is also a chalybeate spring, situate about a quarter of a mile to the north-west of the Quay, and issuing out of a pleasant garden near the Anti-Mills, the medicinal properties of which resemble the chalybeate springs of Scarborough and Cheltenham, though the water seems to be less purgative.

The Esplanade is a spacious level green, commanding a beautiful view of the Holderness Coast, which stretches in a curve as far as the eye can trace. The town has an elegant church, in the Early English style, built in 1840, from the designs of Messrs. Scott and Moffatt. There are also other places of worship.

Among the attractions for visitors is the Victoria Promenade and Polytechnic Rooms, adjoining the North Pier. The building is in the castellated style, from the designs of Messrs. Worth and Frith, of Sheffield, and cost, with the site, about £6000. It contains an upper and lower Promenade Room, News, Billiard, and Exhibition Rooms, with promenade on the roof and prospect tower. The Exhibition Room has this year been graced by a small but excellent collection of paintings in landscape, figure, and composition, subjects chiefly by A. Perigal, W. Shiels, John A. Houston, and other Scottish artists. The rooms are occasionally appropriated for the shows the Bridlington and district Floral and Horticultural Society; besides balls, concerts, &c.

A very meritorious work is now in progress, in the restoration of the fine old Priory Church of Bridlington, the appeal in behalf of which has been liberally responded to.

Bridlington Quay is famed for its fossils of the chalk cliffs. The place is frequently visited by storms. On February 17, 1836, here was one of the heaviest storms ever known; and there was a very severe one here but a few days since.

The neighbourhood abounds with walks and rides, affording extensive prospects of Bessingby, Carnaby, Boynton, Thorpe, Rudston, &c., on the west: Sowerby, Marton, Flamboro', &c., on the north; and Hilderthorpe, Barmston, &c., on the south. The face of the country is generally undulating, and is rich in wood- and scenery.

NEW CHURCH AT EAST WOODHAY, HANTS.

NEW CHURCH OF ST. THOMAS, EAST WOODHAY, HANTS.

On Wednesday, the 10th inst., the new Church, lately erected in the parish of East Woodhay, was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Oxford (acting for the Bishop of Winchester), in the presence of a large attendance of the neighbouring clergy and gentry.

The old Parish Church of East Woodhay being very inconveniently situated, and insufficient for the increasing population of this district, the above new Church has been erected to supply this spiritual want. It is beautifully situated, in a large churchyard. The structure, which is in the early English style (13th century), consists of a Nave and North Aisle (the approach being from the north), with a spacious Chancel. The tower is situated at the north junction of Chancel and Nave, and is surmounted by a light spire of graceful proportions. The Vestry is on the south side of the Chancel. The several gables are surmounted with decorative crosses, and the roofs are finished with neat cresting.

The interior of the Church has been considerably decorated, and many munificent presents have been made by individuals; amongst these gifts may be named a splendid service of Communion plate, an enriched font, a peal of bells, an organ (by Bevington), a reading-desk, and some admirable painted glass in six of the windows (by Clutterbuck). In plan, the Church (including the chancel) measures 87 feet, and will accommodate four hundred persons, the greater portion of the seats being free. The materials are flint and Bath stone.

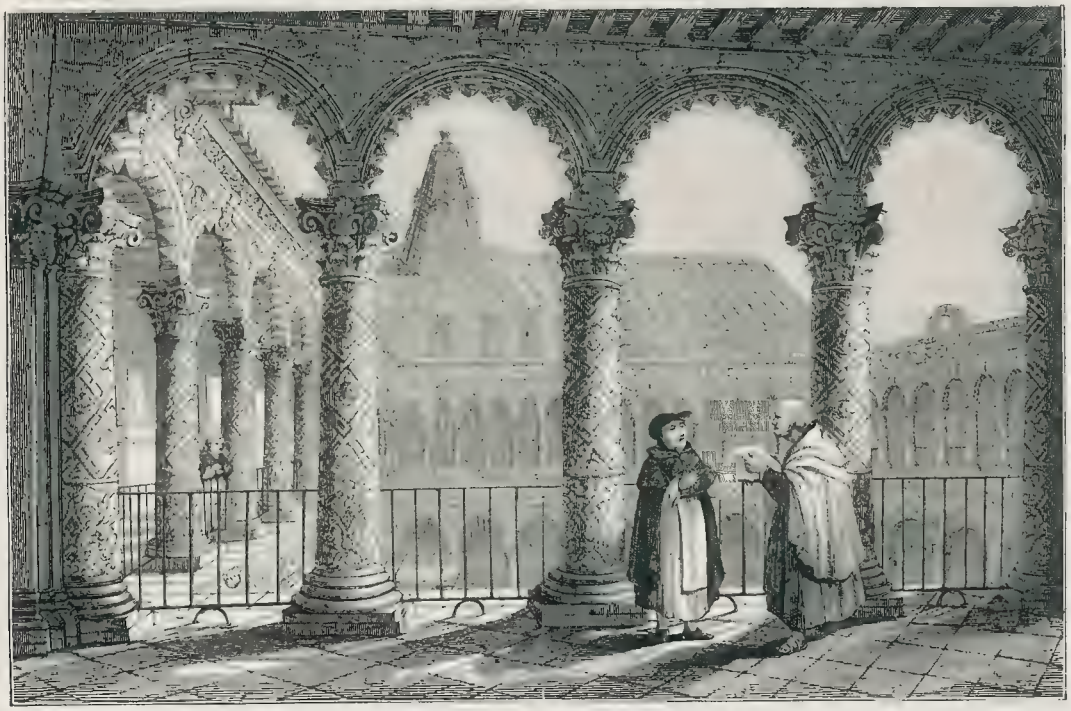
This new Church, to which a district has been assigned, has been built by subscription, aided by grants from the Incorporated and Diocesan Societies. The endowment is given by the Rector, out of the proceeds of the rectory. Considerable ecclesiastical interest is attached to the parish of East Woodhay, the rectory having been held by Bishops Kerr, Hooper, and Lowth.

The approach to the churchyard from the turnpike-road is through a lych-gate of pleasing design. The site of the Church and the adjoining churchyard is a gift. In the adjoining field there are now in course of erection Schools, with a residence for a master.

The Church and Schools are from designs by Messrs. Wyatt and Brandon, architects, of London. Of the Schools we cannot yet speak, as they are only just above the ground; but the Church is a beautiful structure.

Opening of the Waterman's Church at Penge Common.—On Sunday morning this neat and substantial edifice was opened for divine service, a license having been granted by the Bishop of Winchester for that purpose. The consecration by the Bishop is deferred, owing to the insufficiency of funds. The sacred building stands contiguous to the almshouses of the Waterman's Company, at Penge Common. The cost of its erection exceeded £3000, and it is dedicated to St. John the Evangelist. The patronage of the living has also been granted to the Waterman's Company in perpetuity. The sum of £700 is still wanted to complete the building fund, although Mr. Brown, of the Waterman's Company, and some of the neighbouring gentry, have been extremely liberal. As soon as that fund is complete, the church will be consecrated in due form by the Bishop. Two sermons were preached during the day, by the Rev. Joseph Ridgway, M.A., who has been appointed incumbent by the Waterman's Company; and a very respectable congregation was in attendance, who liberally contributed to the funds on leaving the church.

At the recent meeting of the British Association at Birmingham, Sir David Brewster exhibited a specimen of incombustible cloth for the dresses of ladies and children, manufactured at Dundee. Although this cloth burns when it is inflamed by a candle, yet the flame speedily dies away, and its incombustibility is such that the person who wears it can receive no injury, even when it is burnt by a candle or the flame of a fire. As the material which renders the cloth incombustible is removed by washing, the inventor was desirous that some of the eminent chemists of the Association should direct their attention to the subject, with the view of making the incombustibility of the cloth permanent.



THE CONVENT OF LA MERCED, IN THE CITY OF MEXICO.

CONVENTUAL ARCHITECTURE OF MEXICO.

Mexico is one of the finest cities in the world. The numerous churches and convents, with their cupolas and steeples, give the town a magnificent appearance. The cathedral is, in one part, low, and of bad Gothic architecture; but the other, built in the Italian style, is very handsome. With the exterior our readers must be familiar, by an Engraving which has already appeared in this Journal.

The convents are likewise distinguished by their extent, architectural beauty and wealth. We have engraved a portion of one of the convents (that of La Merced), which stands in the south-eastern part of the city, in the Calle de la Merced. The exterior of the building is plain and unadorned; but, as our Illustration shows, within it is highly enriched. We here see the interior of a large quadrangular court, each side of which is occupied by an upper and lower corridor, fronted by columns, with sculptured shafts, in the Lombardic taste, having very rich capitals and supporting arches horizontally zigzaged. The faces of the arcades present a display of florid enrichment; beneath a boldly dentelled cornice runs a moulding comparatively pure, under which is a frieze of rich scroll-work. Each arch has a decorative key-stone, and the mouldings and spandril ornaments are highly beautiful. These open corridors are admirably fitted for the fine climate of Mexico, where the portales, or covered colonnades, are the shops, so to speak, of the capital, which are well supplied with manufactured goods from Europe and China. Inner squares appear to be a general plan for large edifices in Mexico. The palace in which the Viceroy was formerly lodged contains also the senate-house and all the principal public offices, and is a building of great extent, including a number of squares and inner courts, with separate staircases and suites of apartments.

In the accompanying scene, besides the fine architecture, is shown a specimen of the conventual costume.

The Engraving has been copied, by permission, from one of a series of twenty-six finely-executed drawings, entitled "Mexico Illustrated," by John Phillips and A. Rider and published at the Library of Arts, 106, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

MARBLE STATUE OF THE LATE COUNTESS OF ELGIN.

MARBLE STATUE
OF THE LATE COUNTESS OF ELGIN.

This work of monumental sculpture, by John Steele, R.S.A. of Edinburgh, attracted much attention at the last exhibition of the Royal Academy. It is to be placed in the Cathedral of Spanish Town, Jamaica, and is now on the passage to its destination. It was voted by the House of Assembly as a testimonial of the high sense entertained of the piety of the accomplished Lady Elgin, whose amiable disposition and enlightened exertions had great influence in aiding the interests of Christian morality in that part of the world. The statue, accordingly, has a devotional character, and the lady is represented seated with an open Bible on her knee; whilst the face, which is turned upwards, is an exquisite portraiture of faith and hope. Altogether, this statue will bear comparison with either of the artist's former works: it is full of classic and chaste simplicity.

The inscription on the monument states, that it is not intended as a cold tribute of respect due to exalted rank, but to mark the public regret for distinguished worth and talent, so early lost to her country and her family.

THE FORTY-DAY MAIZE IN ST. JAMES'S PARK.

(To the Editor of the Illustrated London News.)

Your Illustrations of the American Indian Corn, Barbadoes Corn, and Hybrid Forty-day Maize Plants, grown in St. James's Park, are very correct. A few words of further explanation may, perhaps, be acceptable to your readers.

I will premise that the Forty-day Maize is so called, because the flower begins to shoot up from the sheath about the fortieth day from the day of sowing; and, in the case of that sown in the Park, the flower was visible on the forty-third day. All the three sorts you represented were sown on the same day, and under like circumstances. The American is from the ordinary Indian corn seed imported into this country, to be met with in Mark-lane and at all the seed-shops. It is large and coarse in the ear, with a flat grain, giving a great deal of bran from flour about as coarse as sawdust, without sweetness, and is only fit for pig-feeding. This sort blossomed in eighty-five days after sowing, and, though still standing in the Park, the ear of seed is not ripe; nor will it ripen, unless sown on hot-beds or under some particular care, in this climate.

The ripe seed of the Barbadoes is so much like the seed of the Forty-day, that it is difficult to distinguish the one from the other. The parties who gave me the seed, insisted that it was identical with the Forty-day Hybrid; and, to prove the fact, I consented to sow them together in the Park. How far they have proved alike, may be seen: the Forty-day has borne its ripe seed, while the flower of the Barbadoes is only just now beginning to peep from the sheath, 140 days after sowing, and no seed ear is yet visible. So much for trusting to Indian corn seed from its look.

Our farmers have nothing to fear from competition in Indian corn. The bulk, compared to its value, is double that of wheat, and freight and charges are consequently double, a natural protection which will give it an advantage over wheat. Whatever may be its price in America, it has ruled in Liverpool during the last two years, for cargoes afloat, at from 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. per bushel, and we have, as yet, no reason to suppose it can be sold cheaper without loss to the importers. Now, a produce of fifty bushels per acre, at 4s., is equal to £10 per acre, without reckoning the great value of the green crop, from the thinnings and strippings during its growth, and a ton per acre of dry sweet food from the leaves, equal to the best hay, neither of which can be got by buying the corn from the Americans. Add to this the greater sweetness and freshness of the home-grown corn, which will always insure it a preference in the market, as alone fit for use for household purposes; and for all these reasons I conclude that the forty-day Hybrid maize should be cultivated in England, and that it is the only variety which will not disappoint the expectations of the grower.

56, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields William Keene.

THE LATE GEORGE EDWARD ANSON, ESQ.

In the Illustrated London News of last week, the decease of the above lamented gentleman was announced, and a brief biography was appended. The portrait of the late Mr. Anson is now presented. He held, during his life, most arduous and responsible positions, and he acquitted himself with a tact and judgment that proved the extent of his capabilities. The political duties entailed on Royalty are performed under the advice and guidance of the constitutional advisers of the Crown; but there are onerous affairs connected with the domestic circle of her Majesty and of her illustrious Consort exacting extreme delicacy and judicious foresight, and Mr. Anson exhibited these qualities in an eminent degree. His courtesy and urbanity in the exercise of his difficult and multifarious functions will be pleasurably recollected by all those persons who had occasion to hold communication with him. He had the strength of mind to be a faithful and conscientious adviser of the Court; and, whilst he was a most devoted and loyal servant, he never forgot what were the true interests of Royalty. He was an elegant and accomplished scholar, and was much attached, even in the midst of his heavy duties, to literature and the fine arts. His premature death is a matter of deep regret to men of all shades of political opinion.

THE LATE MR. G. E. ANSON.

Floating Post-offices.—A correspondent of the Daily News, on the subject of the distribution of the homeward foreign mails, suggests that these mails should be sorted while on the voyage. He says:—"How easy it would be for a Post-office clerk to sort a West India, East India, or Peninsular mail during its passage to England from Bermuda, St. Thomas, Gibraltar, or Vigo. Letters could be stamped, taxed, and sorted on board a steamer as well as in a railway-carriage. There is always at least twelve hours lost before a mail is fit for distribution after it is landed. If a mail were sorted into districts or roads on its homeward voyage, it could be sent east, west, north, and south immediately after it was landed."

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE AND FURLOUGHS

The following circular from the Horse Guards has lately been issued:—

"The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to approve of general officers commanding districts in Great Britain granting leave of absence to officers, and furloughs to non-con missioned officers and soldiers, under the following regulations and restrictions, viz.

"1. The leaves of absence granted under this rule to officers may commence as soon as the half-yearly inspection shall have been made. The furloughs granted to non-commissioned officers and soldiers may commence from the 1st of next month.

"2. These indulgences are to terminate on the 10th of March next, when, in conformity to her Majesty's regulations, all officers and soldiers are to be present with their respective regiments.

"3. One field-officer, one-half of the capta , and one-half of the subaltern officers, are always to be present with their regiments.

"4. No officer (except on the performance of duty, or for the purpose of joining a regiment) is to quit the United Kingdom without having first received her M jesty's special permission.

"5. The officers employed on the recruiting service, or upon the staff of the army, are not to be included in the number hereby fixed for the constant duty of he regiment.

"6. The applications for leave for regimental paymasters and medical officers are to continue to be made in the mode prescribed in the regulations and orders for the army

"7. In cases of short leaves of absence being requested by adjutants, riding-masters, quarter-masters, or veterinary surgeons of regiments, it will be necessary that a special report shall be made as to the mode in which their duties are to be performed during their absence, and that the commanding officer is satisfied.

"8. The proportion of non-commissioned officers, trumpeters, drummers, and private men, to whom furloughs may be granted, is not to exceed ten per troop or company.

"When regiments are not stationed in garrisons or military districts, the officers commanding are at liberty to use their discretion in granting the indulgence of leave of absence, under the foregoing restrictions, to the officers and soldiers under their command.

"This order does not apply to the officers and soldiers doing duty with depôt companies of regiments on foreign service.

"His Grace expects that the general and other officers, who are empowered to grant leave of absence under the provisions of this order, will strictly confine that grant to the proportion of officers herein specified.

(Signed) "JOHN MACDONALD, Adjutant-General."

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S STANDARD.—On Saturday last, the Prince of Wales hoisted his standard for the first time, on the occasion of the Royal Highness, with the other juvenile members of the Royal Family, embarking at Cowes in the Royal yacht Fairy, for Gosport, unaccompanied by her Majesty and Prince Albert. The following officers of the yacht were present on the occasion:—Captain Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, G.C.H.; Commander Crispin; Mr. Welsh, master; and Dr. A. Armstrong, assistant-surgeon. Lord Frederick Fitzclarence and staff received the Royal party in the Gosport yard, and conducted them to the train. The guard of honour was furnished by the 77th Regiment, and commanded by Major Egerton. The worn-out colours of the regiment, on which was embroidered his plume, attracted the notice of Wales's novice, and were presented for his inspection

ANOTHER MILITARY AND NAVAL CLUB.—A number of gentlemen, formerly connected with the East India Company's service, are about to establish a new club. Should the proposal be carried out, the metropolis will contain no less than eight clubs of a "United Service" character. We should add that it has been when we have been in the East India service are eligible for admission into the new club recently established on the premises known as "Crockford's."

RELIEF OF THE HOMEWARD-BOUND.—The Lords of the Admiralty having directed her Majesty's ship Superb, 80, Captain Purcell, to proceed to the shops of the Channel to supply the merchant vessels detained there by the prevalence of the easterly winds with water and provisions, that ship left Spithead on Tuesday morning, at eight o'clock. Their Lordships have also ordered her Majesty's screw steam-ship Hogue to proceed from Cork to the entrance of the Channel, on the same service.

MILITARY INSUBORDINATION.—On Sunday night, at Nottingham, a series of skirmishes took place in the streets between various bodies of the 3rd Dragoon Guards. It appears that the disaffection arising out of the recent election had been manifesting themselves in the barracks near the town, in consequence of many of the privates being confined for a number of days for not having their horses in proper trim. On the night in question the individuals were in a state of scurvy, as the officers say, for want of proper cleansing; while the men assert it was owing to their "eating their oats." By roll call, on Sunday night, nearly forty men were found to have deserted, by scaling the walls and otherwise; and several pickets were ordered out in search of the absentees. This led to a series of encounters, the pursued tearing down rails and pulling up the pavement to procure missiles for defending themselves, and the pursuers using their arms pretty freely. During the night one sergeant lodged his sword in the person of a man who was at the head of a runaway private, the falling blade severely lacerating his face; and another pushed the hilt of his sword into the mouth of one of the deserters, by which he, too, has been lost. Several of the men were for some days missing. The latter will be fully inquired into by court-martial.

IRELAND.

FATAL AFFRAY WITH THE POLICE.

The forcible carrying away of crops poundfed of late by tenants to prevent their being seized for rent by the landlord, has in a recent instance been attended with disastrous results.

The occurrence took place at Killoughy, in the King's County, early on Sunday morning last. The following details are given:—On Saturday night, about eleven o'clock, constable Hall, of the Killoughy joint police-station, received private information that a party of men had passed the cross-roads in the direction of Clonaslee. In a short time his attention was attracted to the approach of a number of cars on the same road, followed by between fifteen and twenty men, who appeared to be armed. In consequence, he obtained from the Mountjoies station a reinforcement of a constable and five policemen. Between two and three o'clock in the morning, the tramp of an approaching party, accompanied by horses and cars, w s heard, and constable Hall planted his small force, leaving six on one side of the barrack, and keeping his own four men in front with himself.

The advancing body arrived nearly on a line with the barrack, driving in front about 15 head of cattle, when the constable called out to the leaders to halt. Upon this, the man that seemed to direct the movements of the party, John Keyes, of Caparagan, near Clonaslee, stepped forward, and said, "Constable Hall, don't you know me? You won't be stopped." I am just removing my crops and cattle, which are not under seizure." The constable stated that the transaction seemed very suspicious, and he was determined, at least, to take down the names of the parties engaged in the movement before he would let them pass. Keyes again expostulated; but the constable evinced a determination to carry out his purpose, when the former exclaimed, "Arms—men to the front!" Immediately there was a movement by the peasant y, which was succeeded by a volley of fire-arms, causing the death of Sub-Constable Patrick Mortimer, inflicting mortal wounds on two others of the party, seriously injuring Constable Balfour, of Mountmellick, on the right hip, also perforating the left fore-arm of Constable Hall, severing Constable Hall of three fingers of his left hand. Four shots were quickly returned by the police, and, it is supposed, with deadly effect. One of them was discharged by Sub-Constable Maclaverty, after receiving his death wound; and by Sub-Constable Gleeson, though he had his thigh broken in two places. Sub-Constable Doyle was dangerously wounded in the groin. After the exchange of shots, the assailing party passed off with great rapidity from the scene of blood shed. It is said that the party consisted of between 150 and 200 pe , and that one-third of them were armed. The police returned to their barracks. Information was immediately forwarded to the Mountjoies station, and a party of police proceeded to the scene of the murder. The coroner committed Joseph Keyes (who had been arrested) for trial and described, as did John Keyes, who had absconded, were recorded all over the country. The magistrates decided on remanding the other parties apprehended until Monday next.

None of the reported wounded rioters has died, at the last accounts, been arrested, although the police from the surrounding districts were scouring the country night and day

A strong reinforcement of police was ordered from Dublin to the King's County, immediately on the accounts being received of the fatal collision there.

The Cork election has been fixed by the Speaker of the House of Commons to take place on the 26th inst.

REPEAL.—At the second meeting of the revived Repeal Association, on Monday, Mr John O'Connell announced the receipt of a letter from the Roman Catholic Bishop of Ardagh, signifying his intention of supporting the renewed agitation with his influence; also the adhesion of the Right Rev. Dr. French, Roman Catholic Bishop of Kilmacduagh, and great cheering. The "rent" was

On Monday night a destructive fire took place on the farm of Mr. William Foto, near Maidenhead, which was supposed to have originated in incendiarism.

POLICE.

THE ATTEMPTED PARRICIDE AT CHISWICK.

On Wednesday, the day appointed for the re-examination of Henry Bathurst Monkhouse, charged with shooting at his father, the accused was brought up at half-past two o'clock, before Mr. Beadon, at Hammersmith Police-office.

Inspector Jenks, I division, deposed to having received the following certificate from the medical gentlemen attending Mr. Monkhouse, senior

"We hereby certify that Mr. John Farmer Monkhouse is gone on well; his general health is improved, and the wound is suppurating kindly; but he is not yet in a state to be removed (Signed) J. BOWLING, } Surgeons.

Hammersmith, Oct. 17, 1849. E. HALFORD, }

Mr. Beadon immediately remanded the prisoner for another week.

THE LATE ROBBERY OF PARCELS FROM THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.—On Wednesday last, at CLERKENWELL Police-office, William (alias Edward) Barton and Henry Hanbury were finally examined on this charge, the particulars of which we have given in a former Number, and were committed for trial. In the course of the proceedings, it was stated that the original parcels, which had been stolen, were left in a mysterious way at the George and Bull Inn, Holborn, and were subsequently transferred to the possession of Messrs. Chaplin and Horne. Immediately after the committal of the prisoners, Mr. Brenchley, the managing clerk to Messrs. Chaplin and Horne at the Paddington goods station of the Great Western Railway, and Mr. Collard, police officer of that establishment, delivered the parcels to the respective consignees.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The English funds opened firmly on Monday at 92½ ⅞ for Money, being an advance of ⅛ per cent. upon the closing price of the preceding week. An improvement to 92¾ ⅞ afterwards occurred, which was followed on Tuesday by a further advance to 92⅞ to ¾, at a later period, however, declining to 92⅝. But on Wednesday (settling day), several violent fluctuations occurred, produced by the state of the Account. Consols for Money opened at 92¾, but the account proving bullish, a reaction to 92⅛ followed; a rally afterwards made quotations 92¾, when the publication of the Paris news, disclosing the hostile position of a majority of the French Chambers to the President, followed by large sales here by parties connected with the Paris market, reduced quotations to 91⅝. On Thursday the market was again agitated, Consols having been sold at 91⅝, after which fluctuations, the account proving a bear, became 91⅝ ⅞ for Money, and 91⅞ ⅜ for Time. Exchequer Bills continue in demand, quoting again improved prices: the same observation applies to India Bonds. At the close of the week, although not much more depressed, was far from buoyant, an uneasy feeling existing with regard to French affairs, added to the unsettled state of the Turkish question. Prices last quoted were—For Bank Stock, 204; 3 per Cent. Reduced, 90¾; Consols, 91¾; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 91⅞; Long Annuities, to expire Jan., 1859, 8⅞; Ditto, 30 years, Oct. 10, 1859, 8⅛; Ditto, 30 years, Jan. 5, 1860, 9-16; India Bonds, £1000, 40s. pm.; Ditto, under £1000, 84 p.; South Sea Stock, Old Annuities, ⅞; Consols for Account, 91⅞; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 47 p.; £500, June, 47 p.; Small, June, 47 p.

Mexican and Portuguese have shown the greatest amount of fluctuation among the Foreign securities, though nearly all have undergone fractional changes. The news received on Monday from Mr. Robertson, that the convention concluded by him with the Mexican executive was not yet ratified, but was expected to pass the Congress, and that the next packet would, probably, bring from 80,000 dollars to 100,000 dollars towards the dividends, did not produce any effect on Monday's prices, which ranged from 27¼ to 26¾. Ditto, Deferred, 5¼ to ⅝. Portuguese have been transacted, and 42¾ to ½ for Money was quoted. A reaction has, however, since taken place, and 42¼ per cent. is the result. Portuguese Four per Cents have been steadily inquired for, quoting 84, which has been exceeded. Spanish Actives have ruled dull at former prices, and Passives have been neglected. Dutch have been in moderate request, and 2½ per Cents sold at 54¼ to ⅝. Belgian have been in fair demand, and 104¾ to ⅞ for Five per Cents have sold. Danish have been in request, and 100¼ to ½ for Three per Cents have been sold. Russian have been steadily inquired for, quoting 109¼ to ⅜ for Five per Cents. Brazilian have been in request, and 77 to ½ for Five per Cents have been sold. Buenos Ayres have been in request, and 73¾ to ¾ for Six per Cents have been sold. Chilian have been in request, and 101¼ to ½ for Six per Cents have been sold. Peruvian have been in request, and 26¾ to ⅞ for Four-and-a-Half per Cents have been sold. Columbian have been in request, and 21¾ to ⅞ for Six per Cents have been sold. Venezuela have been in request, and 11¼ to ½ for Deferred have been sold. Greek have been in request, and 19¾ to ⅞ for Five per Cents have been sold. Ecuador have been in request, and 4¾ to ⅝ for Deferred have been sold.

Railways have been in fair demand, and prices have ruled firm. Caledonian, 15¾; Eastern Counties, 6¼; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 64; Great Northern, 84; Great Western, 51¾; Lancaster and Carlisle, 78; London and Blackwall, 9¼; London and Brighton, 84; London and Croydon, 12¾; London and Greenwich, 3¾; London and North-Western, 107¾; London and South-Western, 72¾; Manchester and Leeds, 70; Midland, 43¾; Midland and Great Western, 19¾; North British, 19¾; Scottish Central, 12¾; Scottish Midland Junction, 11¾; Shrewsbury and Chester, 13¾; Shrewsbury and Hereford, 8¾; Shrewsbury and Shrewsbury, 8¾; South-Eastern, 17; South-Western, 82; Ditto, Half-Shares, 41¼; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 20¾; Ditto, Eighth Shares, 10¼; Ditto, Preference, 50¾; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 25¼; Ditto, Eighth Shares, 12¾; Ditto, Preferred, 40¼; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 20¼; Ditto, Eighth Shares, 10¼; Ditto, Deferred, 5¼; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 2¾; Ditto, Eighth Shares, 1¼; Ditto, Preference, 42¼; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 21¼; Ditto, Eighth Shares, 10¾

NEW BOOKS, &c.

PUNCH'S POCKET-BOOK FOR 1850.—ILLUSTRATED by JOHN LEECH, RICHARD DOYLE, and HABLOT K. BROWNE.
Office, 85, Fleet-street, and all booksellers and newsvendors.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "JANE EYRE."
On the 31st inst. will be published, in 3 vols., post 8vo.
SHIRLEY; a Tale by CURRER BELL.
As first EDITED, and Co. Cornhill.

This day is published price One shilling,
INSTRUCTIONS in the ART of LANDSCAPE PAINTING in OIL COLOURS, containing some useful practical information for the Young Artist and Amateur.
WINSOR and NEWTON, 38, Rathbone-place.

INSANITY TESTED by SCIENCE, and shown to be a Disease readily connected with permanent Organic Lesion of the Brain and, on that account, far more accessible of cure than has hitherto been supposed.
By W. M. BURNETT, M.D.
London: SAMUEL HIGHLEY, 32, Fleet-street.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY.
Just published, by W. DEDOUR, 17A, Great George-street, Westminster,
A SERIES of VIEWS of the MOST BEAUTIFUL and INTERESTING PARTS of the ABBEY. Printed in oil Lithography. No. 1. Exterior of the Abbey. 2. The Choir, with the recent improvements. 3. Shrine of Henry V. 4. The East Window. Shortly will be ready, the South Transept, with the new stained window. Price 2s 6d each. Oblong, 1s 6d. Also, just published, a beautiful Print of the Chapel of Henry VII. Price 5s; in Gold and Colours, £ 1s.

SEA WEEDS.—Instructions to Find, Preserve, and Classify them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 3d, monthly.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

WAXEN FLOWERS.—Instructions in the Model Class, by a PRACTICAL ROYAL ARTIST, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 3d, monthly.—London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

CHILBLAINS.—Their PREVENTION and CURE, the Unitarian and Local Treatment; with all the approved MEDICAL and HOUSEHOLD REMEDIES will appear in No. 31 of the FAMILY FRIEND.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN, and all Booksellers.

WASHING without RUBBING the CLOTHES.—Mr. Twelvetree's Expeditious Method of Washing Without Hard Labour, in the FAMILY FRIEND, No. 7, price 3d.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

MRS. WARREN'S SUPERB DESIGNS in FANCY WORK. FAMILY FRIEND, price 3d, monthly.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN, and all Booksellers.

CHESS.—MATCHES PLAYED by HERR HARRWITZ v. MEMBERS of PROVINCIAL CHESS CLUBS, will appear in the FAMILY FRIEND for NOVEMBER. On receipt from the Provinces, HERR HARRWITZ will REPLY the CHESS DEPARTMENT of the FAMILY FRIEND.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

THE FIRST TEN NUMBERS of the FAMILY FRIEND, containing THREE HUNDRED and TWENTY PAGES, Beautifully Printed and Wrapped, price 8d each, or 5s 8d the number.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN; and all Booksellers.

Just published, Second Edition, in one vol., with a Memoir of the Author, and Frontispiece, price 8s 6d, HOME INFLUENCE. A Tale for Mothers and Daughters. By GRACE AGUILAR.
"This is a clever and interesting book, and will be welcome well to its name, illustrating the silent, constant influence of a wise and affectionate parent over characters the most diverse."—Christian Lady's Magazine.
London: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row.

THE late HERR STRAUSS' ALICE POLKA, performed by the Band of the ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, 3s. So great was the esteem in which those beautiful works were held by the late lamented author, that no fit but last moments requested a copy of each to be placed in his coffin. It is needless to add, his desire was fulfilled.—Jaques' Orchestral and Co. New Burlington-street, London, Publishers in Ordinary to her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen.

NEW SONG.—"YES! I HAVE DARED TO LOVE." The Words by [illegible]. The Music by [illegible]. Sung by Miss [illegible]. Price 2s. (Postage free). This Song will be the greatest favourite of the season, as the Music and words are of the most pleasing and effective character. We recommend it to readers as a gem among vocal and instrumental London. DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW CHEAP MUSIC.—New Music of the best class and character, bound in [illegible] Eighty Shillings for, price, selling for EIGHT, to clear off stock. Best pieces of Czerny, Herz, Kalkbrenner, Strauss, Lanner, Jullien, and all other celebrities. Music at half price and quarter price. Orders for exportation, and Music from subscription, made up to terms which must end in completion, every sort of cheap music kept, without prejudice or favour.—W. MILLS, 17, Soho-square. Catalogues Gratis for Two Stamps. 17, Soho-square, WALKER'S.

CORNELIUS'S FIRST STEP to FRENCH; a Practical and Easy French Grammar, being a Collection of Progressive Familiar Conversations in French and English, Rules, Exercises, Models of Epistolary Correspondence, Mythology, Accidence, and Idioms of the Parts of Speech, in both languages, with Grammatical Observations, on a New Plan. By F. M. DE CHERVILLE.
EFFINGHAM WILSON, Royal Exchange; and MESSRS. LONGMAN.

FRENCH FOR BEGINNERS.
This day, 3s 6d, improved Edition, with Additions, price 3s.
LE PAGE'S FRENCH MASTER for BEGINNERS; or, Easy Lessons in French for Young Students. By L. LE PAGE, Author of "L'Echo de Paris," "The French Reader," &c.
EFFINGHAM WILSON, Royal Exchange; and MESSRS. LONGMAN; of whom also, of Monsieur Le Page's Works may be had, gratis.

GRAMMAR FOR SCHOOLS
Foolscap 8vo, cloth, 6s 6d,
AN INTRODUCTION to PRACTICAL and PHILOSOPHICAL ENGLISH GRAMMAR. By JOHN HUNTER, M.A., Professor of English Literature and Classical Literature in King's College, London.—"One of the most complete Manuals that has for a long time been given to the chosen student. Its principles are sound, its rules are clear, its illustrations are happy, its exercises are well-chosen, and its examples are assisted by an extensive series of wood-cuts."—Athenæum.
London: JOHN W. PARKER, West Strand.

PHYSICS FOR SCHOOLS.
Illustrated with wood-cuts, 7s 6d Edition, fcap 8vo, cloth, 12s 6d,
ELEMENTS of NATURAL PHILOSOPHY: an Experimental Introduction to the Study of the Physical Sciences. By GOLDING BIRD, M.D., F.R.S.
"A volume of sterling merit, and a valuable assistant for the young."—Literary Gazette.
"We should like to know that Dr. Bird's book was associated with every boy's and girl's school throughout the kingdom."—Medical Gazette.
"This work marks an advance which has long been wanting in our system of instruction. Mr. Bird has succeeded in producing an elementary work of great merit."—Athenæum.
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

NEW EDITION, 20,000.
Now ready, Price One Shilling; or Post-free, 1s 6d.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING-BOOK.
Containing, amongst a variety of other matter, by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of the SPELLING, which combines a sufficient exercise in the Dictionary, and by the PLEASING ORIGINAL ILLUSTRATIONS, which enable the learner to advance of his own accord, the whole forming an ILLUSTRATED DICTIONARY UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects [illegible] the most alluring introduction [illegible]
Published at the OFFICE of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London. A liberal Allowance to the Trade and to Schools. Applications, terms may be known.

COMPLETION O. JOHNSTON'S PHYSICAL ATLAS, QUARTO EDITION.
On the 31st of October will be published, in One Volume, Imperial 4to, half-bound, handsomely bound in gilt cloth, price £2 12s 6d,
THE PHYSICAL ATLAS,
Reduced from the Edition in Imperial Folio. For the use of Colleges, Academies, and Families. By ALEX. KEITH JOHNSTON, F.R.S.E., Geographer at Edinburgh to the Queen, and to His Royal Highness the Prince Consort, Author of the Royal Atlas, &c.
"The Physical Atlas of Mr. Keith Johnston is ordinary to be [illegible] Reading Member of the Geographical Society. Berlin.
"Mr. Keith Johnston's Physical Atlas, including a Palæontological and Astronomical Map, is the Maps in each engraved in the highest style of art, express for this Edition, by Messrs. W. and A. K. JOHNSTON, and carefully coloured under the superintendence; with descriptive letterpress, and a very copious Index.
On the same day will be published, PART VIII. (price 3s 6d) of this Work, and the Parts will continue to be issued as monthly, at the end of each month, until the whole is completed. By the publication of the Twelfth Part on the 28th of February, 1850, the convenience of such parties as have subscribed to the Atlas as it appeared from month to month, and who may wish to have it in a complete form before the permitted publication shall have terminated, a few remaining Parts will be got ready, and may be had on the 1st of December.
WILLIAM BLACKWOOD and SONS, Edinburgh and London.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
THE NEW COLONY of NATAL; with Information for Settlers. By [illegible]
Price One Shilling, or free by post for 16 Stamps, with Coloured Engravings.
THE LADIES' GUIDE to the ART of MAKING PAPER FLOWERS, so as to obtain the most perfect imitations of Nature. By Mrs. BARCLEY; with an Introduction by the Author of "Shirley," "Jane Eyre," &c.
Also, price One shilling each,
1. DRESS and ADDRESS.
2. TRUE POLITENESS for GENTLEMEN.
3. TRUE POLITENESS for LADIES.
DARTON and Co., 58, Holborn-hill.

THE FINANCIAL REFORM ALMANACK, "bristling with Statistics," will be Ready with the Magazines for Monday next, 22nd inst.
It will contain complete statistics on the financial condition of the country ever exhibited.—London: "Standard of Freedom" Office, 335, Strand; CHARLES GILPIN, 5, Bishopsgate Without; and may be obtained of all Booksellers.

LIFE AND TRIAL OF MR. AND MRS. MANNING
In a few days will be published (uniform with Clark's Edition of the TRIAL of MANNING and his WIFE, for the MURDER of PATRICK O'CONNOR.
The book will contain upwards of 200 octavo pages, and will be well printed on fine paper. PRICE SIXPENCE.
The Publisher begs to say he has engaged Reginald Shorl-hand Writers, from whom he will receive every particular of the above Trial. The book will likewise contain an authentic BIOGRAPHY of O'CONNOR, Derived from private sources; and also the LIVES of MR. and MRS. MANNING.
Together with every particular that has claim upon the subject, or [illegible] Orders [illegible] Country Booksellers are requested to give [illegible] Portraits (on plate-paper) of Manning and his Wife, stretched in Cords; and a splendid Portrait of the late Mr. O'Connor, with other Engravings
Orders for CLARK'S EDITION of MANNING'S TRIAL immediately [illegible] post-free, 6 stamps.
A few copies of RUSH'S TRIAL still on sale.
London: W. M. CLARK, 17, Warwick-lane; and all Booksellers.

EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY.—NEWMARKET RACES.—[illegible] Trains leave Shoreditch [illegible] Newmarket at Half-past Eight A.M., on the 22nd and 23rd inst., and returning from Newmarket at Quarter to Six P.M., each evening. A Special Train will leave the Bishopsgate Station at Quarter past Five P.M., on Saturday, 27th inst.
Bishopsgate, 16 October 17, 1849.

BOGNOR, SUSSEX.—TO LET, for the winter six months, at 15s a week, A COTTAGE, containing two parlours, drawing-room, five rooms, two attics, and every convenience for the cheapest, well-warmed baths.—For particulars, address 2, SMITH, Bath House, Bognor

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable Style by MR. and MRS. GEORGE BARNETT, at WILLIS'S ROOMS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons at the Academy, Assembly Academy, Mondays and Fridays. A Juvenile Academy, Wednesdays and Saturdays. The Rooms having been Redecorated, are to be LET for Balls, &c.

TO LITERARY TEACHERS.—MR. B. H. SMART, Professor of Elocution, gives gratuitous explanation to ardent and gentlemen using or intending to use any of his Systems of Words in Families, and who find a difficulty in the transition from other works to these. The Works in question are—The ACCIDENCE of ENGLISH GRAMMAR; the PRINCIPLES; The MANUAL of the LANGUAGES, and the ELEMENTARY MANUAL of the Junior and The MANUAL of LOGIC. Their popularity is that they are based on the true relations of sound to thought—a relation never approximately comprehended. No condition will be required but the name of the pupil, and a reference to the book from which the pupil acquires it, or will be in use.—56, Connaught-terrace, Hyde-park. Every Monday Evening at Home.

HUNTING COATS.—HOLYLAND'S new Coat, combining great style, superior quality, and of great durability, namely THE BERKELEY, at the reduced price of three guineas. Also, a SUPERIOR MATERIAL of BRITISH BEAVER CLOTHING WAISTCOAT.—HOLYLAND'S, 150, Strand, Lists of reduced prices for one month.—Observe the present largest demand for economy. Two doors west of Somerset House.

BERDOE'S SUPERIOR OVERCOATS.—For the well-known WATERPROOF PALLIUM, reputed the most useful and gentlemanly garment ever produced, and fitted with fleecy woollen interlining throughout (thus combining warmth with lightness), 42s. The PALLIUM REPIDUM, a truly superior coat; consist of a scissor description, wadded, quilted, silk sleeve linings, &c., 63s. A very large assortment of the best OVERCOATS of all kinds, WRAPPERS, DRIVING CAPES, SHOOTING JACKETS, &c., all guaranteed to resist any amount of rain, and in every respect the most economical ever introduced to the public.—BERDOE, 96, NEW BOND-STREET, and 69, CORNHILL, only.

A NOVELTY for the approaching Season is [illegible] Gossamer Waterproofing Cloth, the name has not yet been seen, but which the Inventors, Messrs NEILSON and [illegible] Glasgow, have much pleasure in announcing to the [illegible] and generally, as being [illegible] Articles ever produced, [illegible] Gossamer Cloth, [illegible] Gossamer Coats, [illegible] Gossamer Capes, [illegible] Gossamer Hats, [illegible] Gossamer Caps, [illegible] Gossamer Boots, [illegible] Gossamer Shoes, [illegible] Gossamer Gloves, [illegible] Gossamer Leggings, [illegible] Gossamer Knapsacks, [illegible] Gossamer Portmanteaus, [illegible] Gossamer Carpet Bags, [illegible] Gossamer Travelling Bags, [illegible] Gossamer Dressing Bags, [illegible] Gossamer Writing Cases, [illegible] Gossamer Envelope Cases, [illegible] Gossamer Purses, [illegible] Gossamer Pocket Books, [illegible] Gossamer Cigar Cases, [illegible] Gossamer Tobacco Pouches, [illegible] Gossamer Dog Collars, [illegible] Gossamer Whips, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Baskets, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Rods, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Lines, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Flies, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Reels, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Hooks, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Nets, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Tackle, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Boots, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Shoes, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Gloves, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Leggings, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Knapsacks, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Portmanteaus, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Carpet Bags, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Travelling Bags, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Dressing Bags, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Writing Cases, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Envelope Cases, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Purses, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Pocket Books, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Cigar Cases, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Tobacco Pouches, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing Dog Collars, [illegible] Gossamer Fishing ran for this peculiarly formed island; and, for the reason above stated (want of a refuge harbour, or ignorance of the excellent holding-ground of the bay), were frequently driven ashore, or foundered in the neighbourhood.

PHEASANT SHOOTING.—(SEE PAGE 271.)

(Continued from page 270.)

Among the vessels lost within the last twenty years are—the Sovereign, from Africa, value £20,000, twenty-eight lives lost; the Ann, bound to Africa, value £14,000, sixteen lives lost; City of Bristol steamer, stranded, value £80,000, crew and cargo saved; Clementson barque, from South America, value £38,000, cargo and two lives lost; Earl of Roden steamer, £30,000, cargo lost, crew saved; Sirius steamer, value £50,000, cargo and twenty lives lost; the Pandora, of Wexford, with all hands, eight or nine in number, value of vessel and cargo £2000; the Falcon schooner, one man lost, with vessel and cargo, value £1700; and the Hebe, Russian barque, value (had she received no injury) about £15,000. It is reasonable to infer that much of this loss of property might have been saved had there been a light on the island; and, had there been a life-boat in the bay, the lives also might have been rescued.

Ballycotton Island rises 170 feet above the level of the sea. The height of the Lighthouse is 60 feet, including the lantern, giving the light an elevation of 230 feet. In February next a powerful "lens light," on a new principle, will be exhibited, and will be visible upwards of 30 miles to sea.

The cost of the Lighthouse, when completed, will be about £10,000.

In the village of Ballycotton, which is an improving fishing hamlet and pleasant bathing-place, considerable industrial operations are carried on under the superintendence of the Protestant clergyman, and chief officer of coast guard, giving employment in the manufacture of nets and fishing gear, together with woollen and linen goods, to about 100 persons. The above gentlemen have published several Reports detailing the success of their experiments, and calculated to excite public interest in the place and people.

The accompanying View of the Island and New Lighthouse is from a clever ketch by Mr. Robert L. Stopford, of Cork.

NEW LIGHTHOUSE ON BALLYCOTTON ISLAND.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1849

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 396.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

FRENCH PARTIES AND THE ROMAN QUESTION.

FRANCE has just passed through a crisis, involving not alone the fate of an Administration, but in a very great degree the personal position of the President and the future prospects of the Republic. The intervention of M. Odillon Barrot in the affairs of Rome was a mistake from the beginning; and in its progress, from the day that General Oudinot landed at Civita Vecchia, until the vote for the money to pay for it was demanded in the Legislative Assembly, it has threatened to cause embarrassment, disgrace, and political convulsion in France. Happily, however, the last of these penalties has for the present been spared. The embarrassment and the disgrace still remain. M. Odillon Barrot has achieved a triumph, by the aid of M. de Montalembert and the religious Conservatives, reinforced for the occasion by M. Thiers and the political Conservatives; but he has virtually betrayed the President, whose Minister he is, and placed him in a false position with the country and the Chamber. In his famous letter to Colonel Ney, the President showed how the intervention of the French arms, anomalous as it was, might be turned to the honour of the French and the benefit of the Roman people; and chalked out a line of conduct for the Pope, which, in his political capacity as a temporal Sovereign, would, sooner or later, have had the effect of reconciling him with his people. The letter was an affirmation, in effect, if not in terms, that the intervention of the French in Italy was more for the sake of the Romans than for the sake of the Pope. Louis Napoleon appears to have deeply felt the inutility, as well as the ungraciousness and cruelty, of forcing back a runaway Sovereign upon his unwilling subjects; and to have done his best, when that intervention was a fait accompli, to turn it to account for the real liberty of the Romans, and their emancipation, in part, if not wholly, from the ecclesiastical yoke of the bigotted and benighted Cardinals by whose agency alone the Pope has hitherto acted.

But there is a large party in France which is not only disgusted with all revolution, both at home and abroad, but which would willingly sacrifice the wishes and rights of the people of the Roman States, however just and reasonable they might be, to the real or supposed advantage of the Pope. This party—of which M. de Montalembert, by far the most eloquent speaker in France, is the chief—includes all the sincere and zealous Roman Catholics. To them, as regards Rome, the Pope is everything—the Roman people nothing. To them, also, the re-instalment of the Pope is a matter to be considered under a French as well as under a Roman or European aspect. Legitimacy and divine right are their watchwords; and the Sovereigns of Europe who exercise their authority by these patents are sacred in their eyes. Not less sacred, for the same reason, are the heirs of such lofty pretensions, who await in poverty and exile the turn of fortune, and their restoration to the high estate from which they have fallen. The Pope, the Count de Chambord, and the Conde de Montemolin, each represent a principle which derives its highest support from the religious feeling of sincere Roman Catholics. That party was highly offended with the President's letter, and openly rejoiced when the Pope, in his last motu proprio, manifested a will of his own, not at all in accordance with the policy which Louis Napoleon, in his extra-official letter, had sketched out for his guidance.

M. Thiers—whose game it is extremely difficult to understand, but whose influence and ability it is not easy to overrate—threw all his weight into the same scale. The parti prêtre was thus reinforced by that large section in the present Assembly who, without any religious convictions at all, bear a very great grudge against the authors of the Revolution of 1848, and hate the Republicans with a most unmistakeable cordiality. The combined strength of these parties forms a considerable majority; and as soon as their coalition was manifest, it became a matter for the serious consideration of the President and his Ministers how the government of the country was to be carried on, in case of the repudiation by the Assembly of the sentiments expressed in the letter to Colonel Ney. That letter was personal, not ministerial. It was the opinion of the President as an individual, and had no official character derivable from the signature of a responsible Minister. Was the Ministry to adopt that letter, and be defeated by the forces combined under Messrs. de Montalembert and Thiers? or was the Ministry to pass it over in silence, accept the Pope's motu proprio, and consent to have no other policy in Rome than that of the reactionary Cardinals? The first course was one of immediate peril to the Ministry, if not to the country; the second was one which postponed to a future and possibly remote day the difficulties and embarrassments of the Roman question, and only involved as its immediate consequence the stultification of the President. M. Odillon Barrot, after long hesitation, decided upon the latter course. The report of M. Thiers —approving the Roman expedition, recommending the credits demanded to cover its expenses, and avoiding to hamper the Pope and the Cardinals by any recommendation of the policy to be pursued for the pacification of the Roman States and the permanence of the Pontifical throne—was adopted by a large majority.

OPENING OF THE GREAT SOUTHERN AND WESTERN RAILWAY FROM DUBLIN TO CORK.—THE MONARD VIADUCT.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The Legitimist party in France consider this a great triumph, and the forerunner of a still greater victory, in which the question will be, not as to the sovereignty of Rome, but as to the sovereignty of France, the Conservatives, who act with M. Thiers, consider it a defeat of the Republicans and Democratic party. In what light it is viewed by M. Odillon Barrot and the Cabinet, we cannot, of course, say. It is generally understood, however, that the President considers that his Ministry have not acted very fairly by him, and that he will either find or make an opportunity of remodelling the Cabinet, and infusing into it a spirit more congenial with his own.

But, notwithstanding the varying and conflicting hopes which are founded upon the unexpected strength displayed by the parti prêtre and the parti Thiers, the conviction thus formed will not save France from the evil consequences of this ill-judged intervention. France, we should suppose, cannot permanently occupy Rome. The moment her troops are withdrawn, the Pope and his people will be left to settle their differences between themselves—with what result, in the present temper of both of them, is easy to anticipate. Without the support of foreign bayonets, the theocracy that rules the secular affairs of Rome must fall. If France should withdraw at present, to intervene hereafter, her second intervention could be on no other grounds, and in support of no other policy than that which the President has recommended, and on which he's Ministers have left him in isolation. Failing the second intervention of France, Austria would of necessity be the Power to which the Pope would look. This result might please M. de Montalembert and the party that dream of a Legitimist restoration in France; but would it satisfy his present ally, M. Thiers? and, what is of more consequence, would it be in accordance with the sentiments of the great bulk of the French people? It seems to us that M. Thiers, in coalescing with the Legitimists upon this occasion, has settled nothing, though he has damaged his own character; that M. de Montalembert and the ultra-Roman Catholic party have miscalculated the real sentiments of the French people on the Roman question; that M. Odillon Barrot has but added one more to the long list of blunders which have signalised his political career; and that Louis Napoleon, though he has been left to stand almost alone by the statesmen who should have supported him, and placed in a situation of extreme delicacy and difficulty, will ultimately rally around him upon this very question the real public opinion of France.

Even in the most favourable issue we suspect that France will have occasion to regret that she ever meddled in the question at all in any other capacity than that of a friendly adviser. She is pledged by her history and antecedents to respect the rights of all other nations, and to interfere with none; and bound to support with her sympathy the progressive party in all countries that struggle for national freedom and responsible government.

LORD CLARENDON'S VISIT TO CORK;
AND OPENING OF THE GREAT SOUTHERN AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

(From our own Correspondent.)

IN our Journal for March the 24th, we recorded the opening of this line of railway from Dublin to Mallow, en route to Cork; and have now much pleasure in laying before our readers the details of its completion to the latter city.

From the many "engineering difficulties" on this portion of the line, it was found impossible to progress with it at the same rate as some of the other portions. Immediately after leaving Mallow, we reach a lengthy viaduct, and next a cutting measuring nearly one mile, with 80 feet of depth. From the time of quitting the terminus at Mallow, to our arrival at Blackpool, the railway may be said to be one continued series of cuttings, fillings, and viaducts. The viaduct near Mallow counts ten arches, and measures 515 feet from buttress to buttress, with an elevation from the bed of the river to the level of the rail of 55 feet. The next viaduct, the Monard (of which we give a View), measures 600 feet from buttress to buttress, and has an elevation from the foundation to the rail of 98 ft.; whilst the next, that of Kilnap (which passes through Mr Shaw's beautifully laid out grounds), has an elevation of 96 feet, by 412 feet from buttress to buttress. The bridge on the old Mallow road, by the way—which was, some few years since, considered a wondrously high bridge—now, contrasted with its more lofty neighbour, sinks into comparative insignificance. One peculiarity in connection with the viaduct of Kilnap is, that, whilst it has a curve, it has also an inclination of 1 in 60 feet; and it is gratifying to be able to state, that, notwithstanding the novelty of the work to many of the hands employed on them, not a single accident occurred during their construction; and Mr. Dargan, the contractor, not only expresses himself content with the attention of those employed, but maintains that no better work could be produced in the entire country.

The present terminus at Blackpool, though surrounded with substantial buildings for stables, hospitals, and workshops, is little more than a wooden shed. From the station to the entrance to the tunnel is but some few hundred yards, and seems to strike all those unacquainted with the powers of steam as fearful, from its great fall said to be 1 in 60; but positively asserted by those almost as well qualified to judge as the officers of the company, to be but 1 in 80.

The Lord-Lieutenant having acceded to the wishes of the Directors, to open their line, on Thursday, the 18th, the day appointed for the ceremony, his Lordship left the Castle of Dublin at nine o'clock, and reached the Mallow station at three, where the officials and others connected with the Cork end of the line awaited his Excellency's arrival. He shortly after started for Cork, leaving the carriage, from time to time, to inspect the different works of interest along the line, and arrived at Cork at half-past five o'clock. One little incident on the road deserves mention: Mr. John Jeffers, the proprietor of Blarney Castle, and one of the best and most scientific farmers of the south of Ireland, accompanied by Mr. Bell and Mr. H. Townsend, with some others, awaited his Lordship's reaching the Blarney station, and presented the Earl with an address from the surrounding agriculturists, which his Lordship was pleased to accept and receive. Whilst all this little scene was passing inside a railway carriage saloon, a much gayer one was taking place a little farther down, at the expense of Mr. Jeffers, who was regaling his tenantry and friends with a true Irish jig, as a wind-up to a pleasant day's harvest-home party.

At the Cork station, the Earl of Bandon's dress carriage, with outriders and postilions in their state livery, awaited the arrival of his Excellency, who, upon alighting from his saloon, and being saluted with military honours, entered the carriage, and was driven through the principal streets to the Imperial Hotel. Here his Lordship was entertained by the Directors of the Company, and most, not by the traders or merchants of the city, but by a few of the private friends of the officials.

It had been intimated to Sir Thomas Deane, some days previously, that his Excellency purported visiting the College next morning, and ten o'clock was the hour announced. Long before that time, the President, Vice-President, Professor Denehy (architect and builder), with a large gathering of respectability, had assembled to meet his Lordship, who, at a quarter past ten o'clock, arrived, accompanied by the Duke of Leinster, the Earl of Bandon, the Lord Chancellor, the Marquis of Kildare, Lord Haywarden, Lord Monteagle, Sir P. Crampton, Sir W. Sommerville, Sir J. N. Redington, Sir W. Lyons, Commissioner Radcliff, &c. His Excellency and the party were shown over the entire edifice.

In the great examination hall of the college several gentlemen were introduced to his Excellency. It is but justice to mention that the distinguished visitors expressed themselves highly gratified with the courteous attention of Sir Thomas Deane and his son; as also with Mr. Woodward, their able partner. Nor was overlooked by the visitors, the admirable manner in which Mr. Butler had contrived to have the ornamental work executed in stone from the neighborhood, and by local tradesmen.

Having remained nearly three-quarters of an hour, and given utterance to the most unqualified admiration of the entire building, his Excellency request d to be shown to the School of Design, now on the eve of being opened. His Lordship was accordingly driven to the school, accompanied as on his arrival. Here the Head Master, Mr. W. Wilks, awaited, and explained to his Excellency the uses of the several apartments.

From the School of Design his Excellency was next driven to the southern face of the tunnel belonging to the railway, which his Lordship entered. Here the men were preparing for a blast, to be fired by means of a powerful galvanic battery. After making several inquiries of the persons connected with the establishment, his Lordship was requested to retire, and immediately upon his doing so, the explosion took place, removing a large mass of stone by several barrows, with the same precision as from one shot.

From the tunnel his Excellency was driven direct to the railway station, where, through some mistake, owing to the engines not having arrived from Mallow, he had to remain from ten minutes before twelve o'clock till a quarter past one o'clock, when the train left homeward.

It has been regretted that some more liberal arrangements had not been made by the railway directors, so as to have brought his Lordship more in contact with the citizens, when his reception would have been more hearty. We believe, from all we can learn, that not one truth in his Lordship's character can be found fault with; and the only conclusion that can be made is that, could possibly, he would divest himself for one day of his prestige, and appear amongst the people as a private gentleman, then, indeed, would he have cause to be proud of his reception amongst the southern Irish. As it is, we fear that his Lordship returned to Dublin with a very poor idea indeed of Cork courtesy.

We quote the following from the Cork Reporter

"A grand dinner was given on Thursday, at the Imperial Hotel, by the directors of the Great Southern and Western Railway Company, on the occasion of the opening of their line to this city. His Excellency the Lord-Lieutenant was present; so, it is said, were several persons of high rank and public eminence —Dukes, Earls, M.P.s, men of great scientific and literary position—in fact, all varieties of people about whose sayings and doings the public is curious to learn something. The occasion was one of great general interest; the proceedings were looked forward to with much anxiety; and yet, though in this city are published three journals, instead of furnishing us accurate and extended reports of any public event as any in the empire, and anxious to make every effort to procure them, public curiosity is not gratified by a line respecting the dinner in question."

It appears that no tickets or admission to the dinner were formally, and in proper time, sent to the offices of the Cork journals for the reporters; no place was provided for them; and, accordingly, the proceedings are not reported by either journal. It is stated in the Cork Reporter, that "the mode in which the invitations for the dinner were distributed seems to have deeply offended the local shareholders, a meeting of whom is called to consider the subject."

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The ministerial difficulty respecting the money credits for the expedition to Rome has passed away without endangering the existence of the Cabinet, M. Odillon Barrot having found means, in a speech of great tact and ability, to reconcile as the fractions of the Party of Order. We consists the majority in the Chamber, to an approval, more or less modified, of the Martial policy in Rome; and the sums required to defray the expenditure were accordingly voted by a large majority, any differences of opinion existing between the Ultras party and the more liberal of the Moderates as to what ought to be the concessions of the Pope to the Romans, being postponed for the present.

The debate, which was of a violent character, was marked by an incident which involved M. Thiers in a duel. M. Mathieu (de la Drome) having in the course of his harangue that M. Thiers had declared that the election of Louis Napoleon would lead to war to France, M. Thiers contradicted the charge, on which M. Bixio affirmed that he had heard M. Thiers say so. The parties immediately left the Chamber, and, accompanied by seconds, proceeded to the Bois de Boulogne, where the duel took place at five o'clock, about an hour after the altercation occurred in the Chamber. The seconds of M. Thiers were M. Piscatory and Heckeren, and those of M. Bixio, MM. Favreau and Victor Lefranc, who encountered, but were unable, to effect a reconciliation. The principals fired once, but neither of them was wounded; and the seconds then came forward to put an end to the duel, declaring that the parties had done all that their honour required. M. Thiers and M. Bixio returned to the Assembly just as the sitting was adjourned. M. Heckeren, whom M. Thiers selected for témoin, is the gentleman who had the misfortune to kill in a duel the celebrated Russian poet, Pouschkin. M. Bixio, the antagonist of M. Thiers, is the gentleman who was so desperately wounded on the first day of the June insurrection, in the faubourg St. Jacques, while gallantly attacking the barricades. He is even still suffering from the effect of his wound. He belongs to the Cavaignac school of Moderate Republicans, and is rather gentle than otherwise in his demeanour.

Another duel took place on Monday, in the Forest of Senart. The principals engaged in the hostilities were M. Thouret, the advocate, and Lieut. Petit, of the Gendarmerie Mobile. A series of quarrels arose out of the trials at Versailles, the former having told the latter that he was ashamed to wear the French uniform. Lieut. Petit felt insulted at the imputation cast upon him, and demanded satisfaction, which was at once granted. The combatants fought with swords, and after the contest had lasted some time, both were so exhausted as to require repose. A short pause ensued, and the struggle was renewed with increased fury, which continued for several minutes longer, when the seconds interposed, declaring that the principals had done enough to satisfy their honour. The combatants then shook hands and left the field. Neither sustained the slightest injury, notwithstanding the vigour and duration of the conflict.

On Monday and Tuesday nothing of interest occurred in the Legislative Assembly. On Wednesday, M. Creton brought before the Assembly his proposition for the repeal of the laws banishing the two branches of the Orleans family. He instanced the abrogation of the Salic law as one obnoxious law. The Minister of the Interior said the proposition in itself was unobjectionable; but the time selected for it was inappropriate. The Government opposed the measure only for the present moment, but when the proper moment arrived, they would consider it a point of honour to introduce a bill upon the subject. The measure was rejected by a majority of 434 to 103.

The health of M. de Lamartine does not improve as satisfactorily as his medical friends could wish, and they have advised him to retire from public life. The determination of the hon. member is not known.

The trials at Versailles are not proceeding as rapidly as they did at their commencement. Repeated interruptions, and lines, not of a stormy kind, are now continually taking place, which go to suspend for a time the inquiry, and detract from the becoming gravity of the Court. Four of these disgraceful scenes occurred on Tuesday; some of the witnesses, in giving their evidence, having used opprobrious epithets in application to a portion of the prisoners, the latter gave full vent to their indignation by the most violent expressions of rage. In one case, the prisoners rushed upon the witness a Liar, and was forthwith condemned by the Court to three months' imprisonment.

The rumours of some Ministerial resignations were renewed during the week, but they did not meet with much credit.

SPAIN.

There is a material crisis at Madrid. Under date of the 19th we learn that the whole of the Narvaez Ministry resigned on the preceding day, and that another Ministry composed of Gener. Cleonard and other men of little note, had been appointed to succeed them. The motive for the resignation of Narvaez and his colleagues is said to have been an intimation from the Queen that her "beloved husband" was not pleased with them. It appears, however, by letters of the 21st, that the reign of the new Ministry had been very short, for on that day General Narvaez is reported to have resumed the direction of affairs. The whole matter appeared to be a mere Court intrigue. A telegraphic despatch, however, of later date, had Paris, announces that the Narvaez Ministry, which had been recalled to office on the 21st, had been again dismissed.

ITALIAN STATES.

ROME.—The Pope's late amnesty is to be modified, thus, according to accounts from Rome, dated the 14th inst.: "The political offenders are to be brought before an assembly to be divided into three classes—the first, consisting of those who are to receive the Republic is to be recalled; the second, consisting of the moderate Republicans who are to be exiled only under surveillance; but in their case is neither to be recalled nor amnestied.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

Accounts from Vienna of the 19th state that, in Hungary, arrests are the order of the day. Kossuth's nephew and the unfortunate Count Batthyany has been forced to enlist as a private soldier in the Austrian service. It is generally understood in Vienna that it is the intention of the Austrian Government to repudiate the Hungarian notes issued by M. Kossuth. This resolution, it is said, is calculated to ruin perhaps 100,000 persons, members of the aristocracy of Hungary, and its action cannot fail to make itself felt beyond the frontier of Hungary.

From the refugees' camp at Widdin, intelligence to the 6th states that the Austrian General, Haverslunt, has arrived there, charged with a mission from Field-Marshal Haynau, General in Command, to the Pacha, relative to the fugitives. Haynau's mission was to demand Haverslunt brought a general pardon for all the men, from the officers downwards. The Pacha immediately had this announcement made to the Magyars assembled without the fortress. The greater number refused to Hungary, and General Haverslunt continued his journey to Constantinople.

According to reports from Pesth, the crown of Hungary is now in England, Kossuth was not with it. Szemere was in league with him, and, on making his escape from Widdin, executed the commission of carrying off the crown jewels to London.

Another singular episode has occurred in Hungarian affairs. It has lately become the fashion to force young Hungarians of birth and education to enlist in the most respectable Austrian regiments. A certain Baron Podmanitzky was thus compelled to take common drover to the artillery, and it so happened that shortly after his joining the army he was ordered to assist in loading on a march lost part of a bag of corn, and the young nobleman was sentenced to be flogged. On the morning after this disgraceful punishment had been inflicted on him, Baron Podmanitzky entered the room of his captain, and offering that officer the choice of two pistols, he challenged him to fight it out on the spot. They fired, and the captain was slightly wounded. Baron Podmanitzky was, of course, placed under arrest, tried, and condemned to capital punishment.

RUSSIA

Advices from St Petersburg of the 9th mention the arrival of Fuad Effendi on the 5th. he had not been, at that date, received by the Emperor, nor was the day of audience fixed. Count Nesselrode delivered a copy of the Sultan's letter to the Czar to Count Nesselrode, with whom he had a long interview. No details are known of what took place at the interview. At St. Petersburgh the general impression was that peace would not be disturbed; that Fuad Effendi will return with the prospect of a possible arrangement. "On his arrival at Constantinople," says a letter from an apparently well-informed quarter, "he will obtain passports for England to be delivered to the refugee chiefs; and, this done, a conciliatory note will be forwarded to St. Petersburg. England will have received a note in reply to that which she addressed to the Russian Cabinet. The tone of that note was very moderate, and that of M. de Nesselrode is equally so. Nevertheless, there is, at bottom, on both, some irritation.

UNITED STATES.

We have advices from New York to the 5th inst.

A fruitful storm had raged in New York, doing much damage to the shipping. President Taylor had again left the White House, his visit on this occasion is to the city of New York, where he would meet with a gratifying reception.

The Mayors of New York, Boston, Brooklyn, &c., and the leading merchants and citizens of these and other cities of the Union, were making great efforts to give a suitable reception to such of the Hungarian Generals as could make America the end of their adoption. The refusal of the Sultan to deliver up the fugitives had created an intense feeling of mingled surprise and satisfaction throughout the Union.

A National Convention was to be held in St. Louis, Missouri, on the 16th inst. Its design was to promote a railroad from that city to the Pacific coast. It was to be followed by another convention of a like nature at Memphis, Tennessee, on the 23rd inst.

The influx of emigration from all parts of Europe, and especially from Ireland and Germany, still continued on a very large scale. Arrangements were being made by the Italian, German, and other sections of the population of the States, to ensure the comfort of those serving from their respective countries.

From Boston we learn that the British brig St. John, Captain Oliver, from Galway, Ireland, anchored inside Minots Ridge about six o'clock A.M. on Sunday, the 7th inst., dragged her anchor, and struck on Grampus Rocks about nine A.M. The captain, officers, and crew (with the exception of the first mate) took to the boats, and landed safe at the Glades. The passengers who were saved got on pieces of the wreck, and landed near Whitehead, north end of Cohasset Harbour. The number of passengers on board was about 164, out of which about 145 are supposed to have been lost. Another account sets down the number at 98. There were 14 cabin passengers, mostly women and children.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

Accounts from Nicaragua to the 20th of August state that the New York company for the construction of the canal had obtained an absolute and unconditional grant from the Nicaraguan Government; and, until the completion of the canal, were to have the exclusive right of navigation of the San Juan River and the Lakes Nicaragua and Leon. It was said that when the English Vice-Consul heard of the wrote to the Nicaraguan Government, complaining of their having exclusively granted what had been stirred up by the British agents, and treating it as a cause of offence. The Government replied that they would appeal to the United States Government for protection.

CALIFORNIA

The dates from California are brought down to the 1st Sept. The excitement still continued against the "foreigners."

At San Francisco it was understood that a constitution would be formed, and members elected to the Legislature by the 1st November.

The commerce between the United States and its golden dependency is daily increasing.

The steam-ship Falcon (arrived at New Orleans on the 6th of October, from Chagres) brought 70,000 dollars in gold dust, a large mail, and 89 passengers for New York.

The steamer Panama brought 500,000 dollars in gold dust, and 169 passengers arrived at Panama on the 22d ult.

The steamship California was reported to have sailed from Panama for San Francisco on the 27th ult., the Senator on the 1st, the Union on the 8th, and the Panama on the 13th. The health of the Isthmus was good, and the roads were more easy for travelling, they having been greatly improved.

WEST INDIES.

Intelligence some days later than our last account has come to hand from Jamaica.

In the House of Assembly committees had been appointed to bring in divers bills; among others the Import Duty Bill, which it was expected would have a clause attached appropriating a portion of the receipts for support of the establishments necessary for the security of peace and order in the island, in case of a rupture with the Government on the subject of retrenchment. The latter bill was laid before the House on the 20th ultimo.

A new proposition for compensating the holders of offices with four years' purchase of their emoluments in reference to their present salaries and the amount proposed to be paid to them, met with little favour from the inhabitants generally throughout the country parts; and, on the other hand, it was doubted whether it would satisfy the holders.

Our accounts from Havannah are to the 28th ult. The quarantine regulations were much relaxed. The rumours of the intended expedition from the United States had produced very little effect, and tranquility was in no way disturbed. The Government of the island had abundant resources at its command to repel any attack, and therefore, such an enterprise, conducted by private adventurers, stood no chance of success.

In Antigua some rain had fallen, but the weather had continued distressingly dry and oppressive. Dysentery was very prevalent, and one case of Asiatic cholera had occurred.

At Demerara cholera had made its appearance, and Lieutenant-Colonel Mills, commanding 1st West India Regiment, had died of it.

The British Legislature was opened by the Governor on the 29th ult., who delivered a speech, in which a censure was passed upon the Council and Assembly for the slow and costly transactions of the simple affairs of this small community, numbering 10,000 people, and whose House of Assembly consists of thirty-six members, each receiving eight shillings per diem.

Later accounts add that the disputes pending between the House of Assembly and the other branches of the Legislature have caused a temporary suspension of the import duty. The Assembly, consisting of sugar planters, have passed a tariff, the old tariff having expired on the 1st Oct.), all goods, wares, and merchandise are entitled to enter free of island duty.

AUSTRALIA.

Accounts from Sydney, to June 30th, have been received. The feeling of the inhabitants on the subject of the renewed system of transportation is shown by the following resolutions, unanimously agreed to at a public meeting of all classes, which was held on the 16th of June:—

1 That, considering the arbitrary and faithless manner in which this colony has been treated by the Right Hon. Sir Grey, this meeting most humbly prays her Majesty to remove that incompetent person from her Majesty's Councils.

2 That it is indispensable to the well-being of this colony, and to the satisfactory conduct of its affairs, that a responsible government no longer be administered by the remote, ill-informed, and irresponsible Colonial Office, but by Ministers present to, and responsible to, the colonists themselves, in accordance with the principles of the British Constitution.

3 That this meeting having unanimously agreed to the preceding two resolutions, the following humble address to her Most Excellent Majesty the Queen, embodying them, be adopted, and that such address be signed by the chairman on behalf of the meeting.

[The address was a mere transcription of the resolutions, [illegible] preliminary form.]

4. That, considering the discretionary power of Sir Fitzroy, the governor to the former meeting and to its deputation, this meeting abstains from appointing a deputation to wait upon his excellency with the preceding resolutions and address, but requests the chairman to transmit them to him, with a written request that his excellency will be pleased to forward the same to her Majesty the Queen for her gracious consideration.

With reference to the arrival of convicts which had just taken place, the Sydney Morning Herald says

All the convicts will be removed from the ship this morning. [illegible] In addition to those previously mentioned as [illegible] under engagement to Mr Fitzgerald, M.C.C. Lawson, and other gentlemen. The forty-three sent to Moreton Bay were forwarded [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

At "Address of Confidence," repudiating the "vote of censure," had been voted to Sir Charles A. Fitzroy. A bill had been brought in and read a first time in the Legislative Assembly, for the appointment of the Hon. Francis Scott as agent for the colony.

THE HOP DUTY.—An account of the duty on hops of the growth of the year 1848, for the under-mentioned districts, distinguishing the old from the new duty:—

	£ s. d.
Barnstaple	10 13 9
Derby	10 .. 2
Gloucester	10 .. 2
Lewes	10 .. 2
Wrexham	1 .. 2
Isle of Wight	1 .. 2
Lincoln	[illegible]
Stourbridge	[illegible]
Suffolk	[illegible]
Worcester	[illegible]
Ware	[illegible]
	[illegible]
Old duty id. 19-20 per lb	[illegible]
New duty at 2d. 8-20 per lb	[illegible]
Additional duty of five per cent., per Act 3, Vict. c. 17	[illegible]
	£45,672 8 8

The above are the only districts from which the returns have reached this office; those for the other districts will be published as soon as received

CHAS. HAWTREY,
Assistant to Accountant-General.

Inland Revenue Office, Broad-street, 23rd Oct., 18[illegible].

COMMISSION TO INQUIRE INTO HER MAJESTY'S FORESTAL RIGHTS.—Her Majesty has appointed three commissioners, and also a secretary, to inquire into and report upon rights or claims over the New Forest, Southampton, and Waltham Chase, in Hampshire. The members of the commission are, Edward Berkeley Baron Portman, John Evelyn Denison, Esq., barrister-at-law, and Dominick [illegible], Esq., barrister-at-law, is the secretary and [illegible] to the commission. The appointments were made under a recent act (12 and 13 Vict., cap. 8.), and courts will be shortly held near the places by the commissioners. It is alleged that encroachments and trespasses have been committed upon the forest rights of the Queen; and on the other hand claims are made by the inhabitants to common and other rights. The commissioners (one of whom may be paid £600 a year, besides the clerk's salary and the [illegible] nature of forest courts. In the members of the commission are, Edward Berkeley rights or claims may attend, and lay the same before him or his assistant, who is to ascertain the boundaries of the two forests, and to inquire into the nature of forest courts, and the expediency of [illegible] or abolishing such courts. The inquiries, examinations, and proceedings of the commissioners are to be entered in books. The expenses of carrying the act into execution are to be defrayed out of the income of the Woods and Forests.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

INTRAMURAL BURIALS.

On Tuesday evening, at a meeting of the National Society for the Abolition of Burials in Towns, held at their rooms, Bridge-street, Blackfriars (Mr. G. A. Walker, president, in the chair), the following letter from the Board of Health to the president of the society was read.

The General Board of Health, Whitehall.
Oct. 22, 1849.

Sir,—I am directed by the General Board of Health to acquaint you, that they propose very shortly to enter upon the consideration of the whole subject of intramural interments, and of the means generally which it may be most advisable to adopt for removing the vast and increasing evils of the present system; and I am to state that the Board of Health will be very glad to receive from you, either by letter or at a personal interview, any suggestions on this important subject which you may desire to communicate, and which your great experience therein will enable you to furnish.

G. A. Walker, Esq. HENRY AUSTIN.

The Chairman said that, without being amenable to the charge of egotism, he could assert that he was in the possession of a large and very valuable collection of facts and opinions on the burial-in-towns question, which, during many years, he had collected and arranged. Those facts and opinions he would lay before the Board of Health, who were doing all in their power to crush for ever the demoralising, disgusting, and dangerous practice of burying the dead amidst the living. (Hear, hear.) Backed by public sympathy, and strong in that support, the Board of Health were dealing with the question in a determined manner; but nothing short of a sweeping legislative enactment could meet the evil. (Hear, hear.)

The following resolution was agreed to:

"That Mr. Walker be requested to communicate to the Board of Health the society's anxious desire for the speedy abolition of intramural burials. And that he be requested to assure the board that the society would aid them by every means in their power to effect that great national object."

Mr. Robert Watt, one of the deputation appointed to inspect the burial-place of St. Giles, Camden Town, deposed that he had, with Dr. E. Johnston and others, visited the place that day; that they had found three open pits, no earth between the coffins, in which coffins were piled one upon another, and side by side, under the wall of the workhouse, and close to the windows of the refractory ward. That the most offensive emanations were passing off from those pits of corruption, which were extremely injurious to the mourners attending funerals and the poor inmates of the workhouse.

Mr. Kingsford said, that, notwithstanding the order from the Board of Health, St. Bride's churchyard was re-opened that day. He feared that a certain power, which at present should be nameless, was marring the operations and good intentions of the Board of Health. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Marshall: Even at St. Giles's they were defying the Board of Health and digging graves during the week. He went to Gye's House on Sunday last, where he was assured that the Board of Health were resolved to co-operate with the public feeling, and if possible prevent such outrages.

Mr. J. Hogg read a horrifying description, both of the Camden-Town cemetery and the old St. Pancras burial-ground. He declared that the latter was saturated with human débris; and that, in the former place, he had seen sixteen holes dug under the walls of the workhouse, and close to the refractory ward. The bodies were buried within a short distance of the surface, and emitted a most overpowering odour. A few days since he questioned the grave-digger of the cemetery respecting the number daily buried there. He said that that day there were only sixteen burials, but that some Sundays between fifty and sixty had been buried in.

Dr. J. Evans brought under the notice of the committee some circumstances having reference to a graveyard in Manchester. In 1842, a portion of the only remaining parish burial-ground was sold to the Manchester and Leeds Railway Company for £3125 5s. 6d. Subsequently the remaining portion was sold to the same company for £8374 in all, for £12,899 5s. 6d. Yet the dean and canons of that city, instead of keeping pace with the urgent requirements of the present time, by establishing a cemetery or cemeteries outside the town, contended that the burial-ground should be near the parish church, as though all the dead were essential, nay, necessary companions to living worshippers, when it had long since been proved they hastened them prematurely to their last account. (Hear.)

INTRAMURAL INTERMENTS.

—A meeting of the churchwardens, overseers of the poor, and other inhabitants of the parish of St. Saviour, Southwark, was held on Monday evening, "to take into consideration an order just issued by the Board of Health, and served upon the wardens, with respect to future interments in their Green-bones' burial-ground, and to determine thereon." The chair was taken by Mr. Thomas Bailey, the warden of the Great Account, who said, if they obeyed the order of the Board of Health strictly, the Cross-bones burial-ground must be closed, although a great deal of the hallowed ground had been found there. The poor of the district would be deprived of ground in which to bury their dead, in the manner their means would enable them; the cost of burials, &c., would be enormous, perhaps 30s. or 40s. in each case, which must be defrayed out of the poor-rates. After some discussion, a resolution to the following effect was adopted:—"That the wardens be empowered to communicate with the Board of Health on the subject of the Cross-bones burial-ground, in order to obtain a consent to a variation of their order to allow the use of the maiden earth in that ground for burials until some legislative measure is passed for stopping intramural interments, and providing the necessary burial-ground.

ROYAL NAVAL CLUB OF 1765.

—The members of the Royal Naval Club of 1765 gave their concluding banquet for the present season on Monday evening, at the Hotel Grand-garde. Admiral the Earl of Ilchester, G.C.B., who served in the Orion, as midshipman, at the battle of Trafalgar, presided, and was supported by several naval officers. The Royal Naval Club of 1765 was established for the purpose of affording relief to the widows and children of naval officers, and since its establishment has expended in that benevolent object upwards of £6800. Amongst its most distinguished members have been his late Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence in 1786; and the Marquis of Anglesea, Admiral Duncan, Lord Collingwood, &c. Amongst the officers who attended the banquet on Monday night were—Admiral Sir Edward Chetham Strode, K.C.B., K.C., Admiral Russel, Captain Bowles, Captain Boxer, Captain Pasfield Oliver, Captain Wynn, Captain R. Douglas, Captain J. Gordon, Captain Robinson, Captain Marshall, Captain C. Jay, Admiral Ross, C.B., Captain Branford, Captain Brain, Captain Rich, Captain Curre, Captain T. Dickenson, Captain C. Greene, &c.

PHILANTHROPIC SOCIETY FOR THE REFORMATION OF JUVENILE OFFENDERS.

—From a statement issued by the committee of this highly useful and important charity, it appears that all the arrangements have at length been completed for the final removal of the school from London to the new institution at Red-hill. Sunday next, with the sanction of the Bishop of Winchester, has been appointed for the delivery of the anniversary and farewell sermon in aid of the society's funds, after which the chapel will be converted into a district church. The proceeds of this final and pecuniary interesting service are to be specially applied to the fitting and furnishing of the new chapel erected at the Farm School, Red-hill.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND YOUNG MEN'S SOCIETY.

—The annual meeting of the South-West London Auxiliary to the Church of England Young Men's Society, for aiding in seeing at home and abroad, was held on Monday eve, at the Horns Assembly Room, Kennington. The Venerable C. J. Hoare, M.A., Archdeacon of Surrey, in the chair. The annual report was read and agreed to, after which the following resolutions were adopted:—That the Church Pastoral Aid Society, the Colonial Church Society, the London Society for Promoting Christianity amongst the Jews, and the Church Missionary Society, present varied and extensive sources for the employment of the zeal and benevolence of, therefore are eminently entitled to the support of this society." 2. "That the Church of England Young Men's Society, having for its object the furtherance of Christian missions, and also the spiritual, moral, and intellectual welfare of young men, justly claims their support, as well as that of the community at large."

PURIFICATION OF THE RIVER THAMES.

—On Monday, Mr. Dover, of New-street, Spring-gardens, the projector of a scheme for deputrifying the sewage of London, in order to prevent the contamination of the river by the sewers, and the consequent evils to public health, gave a further exhibition of his experiments for testing the correctness of his views. The evidence of Mr. Dover's plan have already appeared in the public papers; but we may mention that it is proposed to construct works at the exit of each sewer into the Thames to intercept the sewage, and effect its deodorisation and filtration, and, after undergoing the twofold process, the water will be allowed freely to discharge itself into the river. The sewage is to be pumped up by steam-power into tanks or vats of 10 to 20, 3000 gallons each, and disinfected properly whilst there. At the end of the tank is 7 ft., the contents will be ready for filtering by ascent, and then the residuum is to be removed from the works, in order to be converted into an inodorous fertiliser termed "British guano," the value of which is estimated as more than equivalent to the outlay upon works, machinery, and labour necessary for producing it. The experiment on this occasion was made upon a quantity of pestilential sewage taken in the presence of some of the spectators from an adjacent sewer, and the result was that the water came forth from the apparat is apparently effectually deputrified, but still retaining an acid taste and smell, attributable to the particular disinfecting agent employed. In this state, the effect of the water upon the human frame, it is said, would be rather medicinal than otherwise; and when mixed with the liquid stream flowing down from the lock at Teddington in the proportion which naturally flows from that source, it is considered that the nauseous acid taste and odour will be greatly diminished.

BATHS AND WASH-HOUSES IN LAMBETH.

—On Tuesday, at a meeting in vestry of the inhabitants of the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth, held at the vestry hall, Church-street, for the purpose of determining whether it was "to encourage the establishment of public baths and wash-houses" should be adopted in that parish, it was resolved, "That an Act of Parliament made and passed in the second and third years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled 'An Act to encourage the establishment of public baths and wash-houses,' amended by a certain other act made and passed in the 10th and 11th years of the reign of her said Majesty, ought to be adopted for the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth, in the county of Surrey." In the course of the meeting it was stated that a rate of one penny in the pound would be sufficient to meet the cost of establishing four baths and wash-houses in the parish. By a paper presented to the meeting it appeared that the gross profits of the [illegible] establishment since its foundation have been £2705, the receipts being £6483. The number of bathers in 1849 were 18,970; washers, &c., 5637; and individuals washed for, 23,748. The profits of the St. Martin's Baths, &c. are estimated at 90 per cent.

THE RECENT CATASTROPHE AT PIMLICO.

On Monday the inquest into the cause of the death of five persons who were lately killed in the Kentlworth-street sewer, in Pimlico, was resumed before Mr. Bedford, Coroner for Westminster.

The evidence, which was principally of a chemical character, furnished a remarkable instance of "how doctors differ."

Dr. Lyon Playfair, chemist to the Commissioners of Woods and Forests; Dr. Allen, Professor of Chemistry, King's College; and Dr. Dugald Campbell, of University College, differed altogether from the opinion of Dr. Ure, which we gave at length last week. The latter considered that the gas which killed the men was generated by circulation; while the former gentlemen were of opinion that it resulted from the foul deposit contained in the sewer itself.

Dr. Miller's evidence embraced a report which he had drawn up along with Mr. Dugald Campbell and Mr. Phillips, in which he emphatically stated their "decided conviction that the deaths in question were occasioned by the presence of sulphuretted hydrogen, generated from the ordinary contents of sewers in a state of stagnation, and the absence of a sufficient quantity of atmospheric air, and that the lime waste had nothing to do with the accident in question; also, that its presence in the road materials, as described, can in no way be prejudicial to health."

All the chemical witnesses, however, agreed that, had the sewer been properly ventilated, the gas, no matter how produced, would have been comparatively innocuous.

The jury returned the following verdict:—

"We find that the deceased men, David Peart, Thomas Gee, and John Atwood, died from the inhalation of noxious gas generated in a neglected and unventilated sewer situated in Kenlworth-street; and also find that the deceased Henry Wells and John Walsh met their deaths from the same cause, in their laudable endeavours to save the lives of the three first sufferers. The jury unanimously censure the commissioners and officers of the metropolitan sewers are much to blame for having neglected to avail themselves of the unusual advantages offered from the local situation of the Grosvenor Canal for the purposes of flushing the sewers in this district."

The Coroner said he could only record the finding of the jury so far as it related to the deaths of the deceased. The latter part of the verdict he could not legally record. If the jury attributed blame to any individual, or body of individuals, they must do so by a distinct verdict of manslaughter. As such was not their finding, he should only record the verdict that the deceased came by their deaths from inhaling the noxious gases generated in a neglected sewer.

PROPOSED FUND FOR THE WIDOWS OF SHARPE AND WILLIAMS.

—On Tuesday evening a numerously attended meeting of members of the National Charter Association was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, for the purpose of adopting measures for carrying out a proposition which has been recently made, to raise a fund for the benefit of the widows of the late Joseph Williams and Alexander Sharpe, who died in prison under circumstances with which our readers are familiar. Mr. H. Stiles having been called to the chair, a general committee, which was entrusted with the control of the details of the arrangements by which it is proposed to raise the fund, was appointed, and a sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. Reynolds, Brookes, Pettit, Ferdinando, and Leach, were also nominated, for the purpose of framing an address calling public attention to the intended testimonial.

HOLBORN, &c., PAVING BOARD.

—At a meeting of the St. Andrew's, Holborn, and St. George-the-Martyr's Commissioners of Pavement, held at the Union Workhouse, Gray's-inn-lane, on Monday night, Mr. George Taylor in the chair, Mr. Hopper, a member of the board, submitted an offer, which he had been authorised to make to that and other metropolitan paving boards by Mr. Lowe, the inventor of the "patent stench-trap grid or grating," which has already been adopted, by way of experiment, by the Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers. The offer was to put down, in situations that required them, several specimens of his invention free of all charge to the boards consenting to make the experiment. The surveyor said the board had no power of itself to accede to the proposal, however advantageous. They must apply for permission to the Commissioners of Sewers. But, if any of these traps were to be tried, Red-lion-passage should be one of the localities to have the benefit of one. It was then resolved that application should be made to the Commissioners of Sewers, for leave to lay down several in such places as the Committee of General Purposes should select. At the same meeting some discussion arose as to the propriety of assessing the gas and water companies within the metropolitan City board's jurisdiction to the paving-rate, these companies having hitherto enjoyed an immunity from this tax; and it was ultimately resolved that these companies should be assessed. In bringing on the half-year's assessment, the clerk stated that the "empty houses" in the parish were on the increase. They deprived the board of £300 per annum, from a total annual assessment of £3000, or of about one-tenth of their whole yearly revenue.

CITY COMMISSION OF SEWERS.

—The commissioners assembled on Tuesday, at the Guildhall, Mr. Deputy Peacock in the chair. The report of the surveyor, Mr. Haywood, containing a summary of the improvements made in the sewerage of the City since 1834, was read. It was exceedingly interesting, and received with much applause. A letter from Mr. D. W. Harvey, Commissioner of Police, was also read. The letter suggested, as a means of promoting the sanitary condition of the metropolis, the construction of open areas at the back of houses.

FIRES.—A fire, which was not extinguished before the premises in which it commenced were burned down, and eight or nine private houses were much damaged, broke out on Saturday morning last, between two and three o'clock, at Mr. Bark-read's, Ratcliffe. The flames, which were discovered when burning in a range of buildings about 100 feet long by nearly 30 wide, belonging to Mr. Samuel Whiting, the builder. The houses numbered 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18, in Bark-read's premises, each occupied by a family, were severely damaged at the back parts by fire, the window glass is demolished, and the furniture extensively injured by hasty removal. The origin of the misfortune has not been ascertained.—About the same hour on Saturday, a fire broke out at No. 74, Quadrant, Regent-street, in the tenure of Mr. B. B njamin, a tailor and draper. The whole of the back rooms were extensively burned, and the valuable stock in trade damaged by water. The premises were also injured to some timber running into the chimney, which, becoming ignited, communicated with the upper part of the house. Mr. Benjamin was insured in the Sun Fire Office.—Shortly before three o'clock, on Sunday morning, a fire broke out in Haggle-lane, Wood-street, Cheapside, the property of Mr. H. A Hyde, boot-maker. The stock in trade was very seriously injured, and the pictures of Mr. Bofferey, in the next shop, damaged by smoke.—A fourth fire occurred about the same time, at No. 2, Compton-passage, Clerkenwell, belonging to Mr. W. Wigmore, but, owing to the timely assistance afforded, the flames were speedily extinguished.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.

—The number of births registered in the week ending Saturday, October 20, was 1263, and that of the deaths, 1026. Deaths from cholera, 41. This report includes the whole of the metropolitan districts. The weekly average of five previous autumns, corrected for increase of population, is 1162; the decrease on the average, as shown by the present return, amounts therefore to 134 deaths. This reduction of the mortality is greatest in the districts on the south side of the river, for the deaths of the week in this division were 376, whereas the average is 394. The mortality from cholera now rapidly approaches the average; the deaths having in ten from 1101n the previous week to 41 in the last. In the west districts they have declined from 10 to 4; in the north, from 7 to 1; in the central, from 10 to 5; in the east, from 32 to 17, and in the south, from 46 to 13. There were 5 deaths in each of the districts of Shoreditch and Bethnal-green; in all others, the number of fatal cases of the epidemic was still less. In the whole metropolis the daily number did not, in any instance, exceed 9; on Wednesday and Thursday it was only 5. The deaths from diarrhœa and dysentery were more numerous, and amounted in the week to 63; in the previous week they were 105. Of the 14,538 persons who have died of cholera in London in 56 weeks, 7567, or nearly one-half, died after less than one day's illness (exclusive of the duration of premonitory diarrhœa); and of the remainder, 2496 sunk under the disease before it had reached the second day. At present, small-pox and measles are much less fatal than usual; scarlatina was fatal in 41 cases, the average being 64; typhus in 63 cases, the average being 66.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

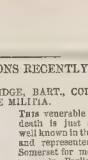
—The reading of the barometer reached 30·04 inches on Thursday, at nine o'clock, A.M.; the mean of the week was 29·89. The mean daily temperature increased from 43° on Sunday to 59°? on Thursday, and continued at nearly this value during the rest of the week. The highest temperature was 59°? on Friday. For the first three days of the week the mean temperature was below the average of corresponding days of seven years; in the last three days it was about 12° above the average. The mean of the week was 52° 4'.

A MIDSHIPMAN OF HER MAJESTY'S SHIP "BELLEROPHON," AND NEW ORLEANS.—On the seventeenth of the 12th instant, Mr. Kemp, a midshipman of her Majesty's ship Bellerophon, 78, Captain Bayntun, C.B., signed off Leghorn, was sent ashore in charge of the cutter to bring off some men who were on leave. He reached the shore, embarked his men, and left to return to his ship. In the meantime, however, the breeze, which was little or nothing on leaving the Bellerophon, had freshened considerably, and it appears, the cutter had proceeded one-third of the distance from the shore to the ship, when, in consequence of the increase of the swell and rise of water, Mr. Kemp bore up for the purpose of returning to the land, the boat at the same time carrying a press of sail. More water was shipped in the act of bearing up, which was kept under by bailing; but, unfortunately, this sail having been lowered, and the boat falling nothing to force her through the water, she became almost waterlogged, and, shipping water on both sides, she filled, and shortly afterwards turned bottom up. This fatal catastrophe having been soon seen from the Bellerophon, and her Majesty's steam-vessel Porcupine, boats were instantly lowered from those vessels, and dispatched to the assistance of the cutter; but before they could reach the spot, the following poor fellows had disappeared, and were drowned:—Mr. Kemp, midshipman; Matthew Odgers, coxswain of the cutter; Jeremiah M'Carty, able seaman; James Gray, ditto; William Deaken, landsman; and John Wilson, ditto; William Short, first-class boy; James Wheat, private marine; John Raynor, ditto; George Watt, ditto; William Harvey, ditto; John Williams, ditto. Mr. Kemp is the son of the late Lieut. Kemp, R.N. He was very steady in his duties, was considered to be very competent in managing boats, and was altogether a very promising young officer.

THE THIRD DRAGOON GUARDS, NOTTINGHAM.—The whole of the regimentary men of this regiment were on Saturday night reported to be in barracks, and about fourteen still remained in the guard-house, the remaining prisoners having been summarily disposed of on Friday and Saturday. The colonel, Earl Cathcart, having reviewed the whole of the troops, and inquired into the late disturbances, upbraidings have been forwarded to the Commander-in-Chief, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, for three general, and six district courts-martial.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

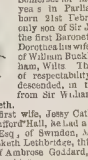
SIR THOMAS BUCKLER LETHBRIDGE, BART., COLONEL 2ND SOMERSETSHIRE MILITIA.



This venerable Baronet, whose death is just announced, was well known in the political world, and represented the county of Somerset for more than twenty years in Parliament. He was born 21st February, 1778, the only son of Sir John Lethbridge, the first Baronet, of Sandhill, by Dorothea his wife, eldest daughter of William Buckler, Esq., of Boreham, Wilts. The family was one of respectability in Devon, and descended, in the female line, from Sir William Persam, Chief Baron of the Exchequer temp. Queen Elizabeth.

Sir Thomas was twice married. By his first wife, Jessy Catherine, sister of Sir Thomas Dairymple Hesketh, Bart., of Rufford Hall, he had a daughter, Jessy Catherine, who married Ambrose Goddard, Esq., of Swindon, M.P., and died in 1843; and one son, the present Sir John Hesketh Lethbridge, third Baronet. Sir Thomas's second wife was Anne, daughter of Ambrose Goddard, Esq., of Swindon, and by her he had two sons and four daughters.

JOHN READE, ESQ., OF IPSDEN HOUSE, OXON.



THE Reades of Ipsden are a branch of the ancient baronetical family of Reade of Shipton Court, deriving from Edward, next brother of the first Sir Compton Reade, and second son of Thomas Reade, Esq., of Barton, by Mary his wife, daughter of Sir Thomas Cornewall, Baron of Burford. Mr. Reade, whose death has just taken place, succeeded to the representation of the Ipsden line at the decease of his grandfather, John Reade, Esq., in 1777, being then only two years old. He married, 9th February, 1796, Anna Maria, eldest daughter of Major John Scott-Waring, M.P., and had a very numerous issue. Mr. Reade of Ipsden was a Magistrate and Deputy-Lieutenant for Oxfordshire, and will be long remembered as a kind landlord, a constant friend to the poor, and a most excellent country gentleman.

SIR JOHN DASHWOOD KING, BART., OF WEST WYCOMBE, BUCKS.

THE decease of this Baronet occurred on the 22nd inst. He had enjoyed the title nearly fifty-six years, having succeeded his father, the late Sir John Dashwood King, in 1793. The first Baronet, Sir Francis Dashwood, M.P. for Winchelsea, married four times. By his second wife, Lady Mary Fane, daughter of Vere, fourth Earl of Westmoreland, he had a son, Sir Francis Dashwood, Lord le Despencer, in right of his mother, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and afterwards Postmaster-General; and by his third wife, Mary, daughter of Major King, he had a son, Sir John Dashwood, who assumed the additional surname of King in 1743, and was father of the gentleman whose death we record.

Sir John married, in 1789, Mary Anne, daughter of the late Theodore Henry Broadhead, Esq., and by her (who died in 1844) has left George Henry, the present Baronet, and other issue.

JOHN JOSEPH WEBBE WESTON, ESQ., OF SUTTON PLACE, SURREY.

THE representative of one of the oldest Catholic families in England, Captain Webbe Weston, early sought employment in the military service of Austria, wherein so many English and Irish Catholics have already gained distinction. At the period of his death, which resulted from cholera, on the 24th ultimo, he was a Captain, of some years' standing, in the 3rd Imperial Light Dragoons, and was serving as Aide-de-camp to General Count Nugent, at the siege of Comorn. He had gained the reputation of a true and fearless soldier, and had fought with gallantry and distinction in the late Hungarian war.

Captain Webbe Weston was born in 1814, the only son of John Joseph Webbe Weston, Esq., of Sutton-place, by Caroline Graham his wife, niece of the Right Hon. Sir James Graham, M.P. He married, 17th May, 1847, Lady Horatia Elizabeth Walpole, niece of the present Earl of Orford, by whom there was issue.

The family of Weston, one of Saxon origin, has long resided at the fine old mansion of Sutton, erected in 1521, by Sir Richard Weston, Knt., Under-Treasurer of England, and Master of the Jewels to Queen Anne Boleyn. Leverius temp. Henry VIII., whose son and heir was the ill-fated Sir Francis Weston, K.B., executed for an alleged criminal intercourse with Queen Anna Boleyn.

EDWARD HAWKE LOCKER, ESQ.

This gentleman was the son of William Locker, Esq., Lieutenant-Governor of Greenwich Hospital, by Lucy his wife, only daughter of Admiral Parry. He entered the public service in his eighteenth year, and continued to fulfil his official duties, from 1804, when he was appointed secretary to Lord Collingwood, Commander-in-Chief of the fleet in India. After ten years' service in the East Indies, the North Seas, and the Mediterranean, he returned home at the general peace, in 1814. In 1819 he accepted the appointment of Secretary to Greenwich Hospital, and was subsequently made Commissioner, which office he held till the year 1844, when he was compelled to resign, from ill-health.

Mr. Locker was formerly well known in the literary world as the author of the "Naval Memoirs," and various other popular sketches. He was a contributor to the Plain Englishman, one of the first magazines that was ever established for the instruction and amusement of "the people." He distinguished himself by his zeal for public improvements and many of the salutary decorations which at present beautify and benefit our metropolis were first recommended by him in an article written in the Quarterly Review.

Mr. Locker was chiefly instrumental in forming the magnificent Naval Gallery of Pictures at Greenwich Hospital. The whole of the paintings were entirely collected by his own exertions; and his aim was not to establish a gallery merely of works of art, but to commemorate those naval heroes who had so often saved their country from desolation and ruin.

Mr. Locker died at Iver, Bucks, on the 16th inst., in his 73d year.

 In last week's Obituary, we were in error as to the death of Nicholas Starkie, Esq., of Huntroyde. It was that gentleman's brother, Percy Legendre Starkie, Esq., who died on the 9th inst.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

INSANITY.

On Wednesday, John William Bird, aged 54, surgeon, was placed at the bar to plead to an indictment, charging him with unlawfully forging and uttering a certificate, purporting to be a certificate that he was a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, with intent to defraud James Sedgwick Lean. Evidence having satisfactorily proved the poor man's insanity, the jury returned a verdict "That the prisoner was of unsound mind;" and the learned Commissioner gave directions that the prisoner should be detained in safe custody until her Majesty's pleasure should be made known respecting him.

The same verdict was given, and a similar order made, in the case of the unfortunate maniac James Weston, who murdered his wife and child a few days ago, at Clapham.

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

On Tuesday, the Grand Jury found a true bill against the two Mannings, for the murder of Patrick O'Connor.

On Thursday, the prisoners, Manning and his wife, were brought to trial before the Lord Chief Baron Pollock, Mr. Justice Maule, and Mr. Justice Cresswell. The court was crowded.

Man ing pleaded "Not Guilty."

Mr. Ballantine, on the part of Mrs. Manning, contended that, as she was a foreigner, she should be tried by a jury composed of one half foreigners, and that she should not therefore be called upon to plead before an English jury.

The Court decided that she must plead first.

Upon being called upon, she answered, in a firm and clear voice, "Not Guilty."

Mr. Ballantine again repeated his objection, and cited various authorities.

The Attorney-General contended that, as she had become the wife of a naturalborn British subject, she could be tried by an English jury just as much as if she were an English-born subject.

The Chief Baron decided against the objects

The objection and answer having been recorded by the learned Judges, the effect of which is that an appeal can be made to the Court of Error in Criminal cases, or to the House of Lords.

The Attorney-General said he should traverse the plea that the female prisoner was born abroad.

Mr. Ballantine said he had an affidavit to prove that sufficient time had not been given to obtain proof of the female prisoner being born abroad, although the fact was notorious, and well known to those who conducted the prosecution.

The jury were then severally sworn, and

The Attorney-General addressed the jury, stating the facts of the case, which have already been placed fully before the public. The same evidence adduced at the police-court was also given.

The case was not closed when the Court rose.

On Tuesday, the whole of the property found in the possession of Mrs. Manning (not identified as belonging to O'Connor) was seized by a process issued from the Sheriff's Office, at the suit of Mr. Bines, Manning's solicitor. This proceeding was taken by the latter gentleman in consequence of the deficiency of funds afforded to him by the police, who held the property. The property consisted of a large quantity of female wearing apparel, of considerable value; several gold rings, brooches, and trinkets; two gold watches, chains, &c. Mr. Bines considered that the property in question had nothing to do with the charge against the prisoners, and that it ought to be handed over to Manning, for the joint defence of himself and wife, and therefore that the police authorities had no right to detain them.

THE DRY DOCK WORKS, UNITED STATES NAVY-YARD, NEW YORK.

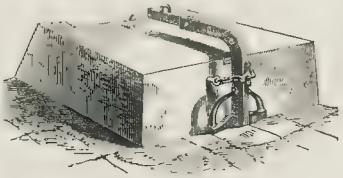
NEW DRY DOCK AT THE UNITED STATES NAVY-YARD.

The Dry Dock at the United States Navy-yard, New York (which has been in progress for upwards of two years and a half), is now nearly completed. It is a work of vast magnitude; for the Dock will have sufficient capacity to receive vessels 350 feet long, 66 feet beam, and with a draught of water of 26 feet. Steamers, whose width at the paddle-wheels does not exceed 90 feet, can also be docked, by removing the lower portion of each wheel.

The history of this work possesses great interest for the engineering profession, not only from the almost insuperable difficulties which were met with in sinking to obtain an adequate foundation for the masonry, but from the many new forms of machines which have been devised for the convenient and economical prosecution of the various operations.

The situation of the dock, in the bight of the "Wallabout" bay, afforded no firm material on which to build. The scourings of the channel of the East river have been here deposited for ages; and in this, silt underlaid by quicksand, it was necessary to prepare a foundation possessing a great degree of stability.

A coffer-dam, formed of rows of sheeting piles, driven at proper intervals, stiffened by range pieces and ties, and filled in with bank gravel, was built around the water front of the work, and extended into the bank far enough to ensure against breaches or leaks. The earth within the area thus encompassed was removed by railway cars, drawn up inclined planes by steam-power, and at the greatest depth, hoisted out in large tubs suspended from boom derricks. It was found, on attempting to excavate for the foundation, that the whole area was occupied by fresh-water springs, having a source highly elevated. These springs, on the crust of earth above them being weakened, by carrying the excavation to a depth of about thirty-six feet below tide, burst up with great violence, bringing with the rush of water large quantities of the fine sand of the substratum. On account of this treacherous nature of the ground, it was necessary to drive the bearing-piles for the foundation at a level some six or eight feet above the proper plane; a small portion of the area was then taken in hand at a time, the earth removed, the piles sawn off, and the concrete, timber, &c., all put in at that spot, without a moment's cessation from the work. Whenever, in spite of these precautions, a spring burst through, it was carried up in tubes to a height sufficient to allow the subsidence of sand in the spring by checking the force of the flow. Thus, step by step, was the whole space occupied by the foundation gone over, and a firm footing established for the superstructure.



COPING-STONE AND LAYING APPARATUS.

The foundation, covering an area of 50,000 square feet, is composed of piles, driven to the point of ultimate resistance, at intervals of 2½ feet from centre to centre. Concrete is filled around them to a depth of 2½ feet, and their tops are capped with yellow pine timber twelve inches square, firmly attached by bolts and trenails. These timbers have concrete filled between them, and are covered with a flooring of three-inch yellow pine plank, jointed and tightly laid. On this floor is another range of timbers with concrete between, and covered with plank in the same manner as the floor below.

The masonry is of the most perfect character: the facing stones are from the celebrated quarries in Sullivan Maine; the interior stone from the numerous granite quarries on the Hudson River. A perfect finish has been given to the face, lids, and joints of the masonry, and the whole laid in the hydraulic cement from the Rosendale works.

At the entrance of the Dock a chamber is prepared to receive a floating caisson as is usual in works of this kind; immediately within this is another chamber, in which move the folding gates; beyond this, to a distance of 300 feet, lies the main chamber of the Dock. A system of inverted arches occupies the whole extent of the lower part of the structure: serving not only to distribute the weight of the walls over the whole surface of the foundation, but to resist the immense hydraulic pressure from beneath.

THE BATTERY, NEW YORK, FROM THE BAY.—FROM AN ORIGINAL SKETCH.

THE BATTERY, NEW YORK, BY MOONLIGHT.—FROM AN ORIGINAL SKETCH.

Both the floating and turning-gates are of wrought iron, on an entirely original plan, and are the first iron gates ever built in this country.

The tides in New York harbour have a range of from five to six feet only. It is, therefore, necessary to pump out the chamber of the Dock. To do this, a condensing beam engine, of 60 inches diameter of cylinder and 12 feet stroke, is provided, working two lifting pumps, of 63 inches diameter and 10 feet stroke, attached directly to each end of the beam. The whole quantity of water to be removed is 610,000 cubic feet, and it is intended that this shall be done in 2½ hours.

The first stone of the works was laid with appropriate ceremonies by Commodore Joseph Smith, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, on the 12th of March, 1847, since which time the work has been prosecuted with unparalleled vigour; and so near is it to completion that the first coping stone was laid on the 4th of July last by Commodore McKeever, commandant of the yard.

This stupendous structure was designed, and the entire work carried on, under the superintendence of William J. M'Alpine, Esq., Chief Engineer, seconded by James O. Morse, Esq., his assistant, and the executive officer of the work.

The first Illustration gives a view of the whole works, with the various cranes, derricks, &c. used in the construction; as well as its appearance at the time of the interesting ceremonies attendant on the laying the "crowning stone" of the great Harbour.

In the adjoining Cut is shown the device by which the first coping-stone (weighing 7½ tons) was slung, without marring any of the show part of the stone by the "lewis holes." All the facing stones of the Dock were laid with a similar implement, and throughout the whole structure none of the "lewis holes" are visible. This important improvement in laying masonry is stated by our Correspondent to have originated in these Dock works.

THE BATTERY, NEW YORK.

We annex two Views of this gay and bustling point of New York, from original Sketches by one of our own Artists. Mr. Alexander Mackay's able work, entitled "The Western World," published a few months since, thus sketches the situation of the city and the Battery, with its characteristic gaiety:—

Situated on the Atlantic, New York is completely sheltered from its turbulence by a group of intervening islands, which screen the ocean from its view. Its only water prospect is that afforded to it by the noble bay into which it projects. Nothing can surpass the security of its position, or the safety and practicability of its approaches. It stands, the insulated centre of a spacious and varied panorama; the objects which contribute, by their combination, to render its position exquisitely picturesque, also serving, in a double sense, as a security to it, inasmuch as they protect it from the turbulence of the ocean, and defend it from the attacks of a hostile power. Thus, in beautifying and enriching its prospect, nature has sacrificed nothing essential to its position as a great maritime town.

The Hudson river, after running a lengthened course, due north and south, expands, about forty miles above its embouchure, into a spacious estuary, designated by the Dutch colonists the Tappan Zee. The western or New Jersey shore of this estuary, after running a considerable distance further to the south than the opposite bank, takes a long sweep to the eastward, terminating in the heights of Neversink, on the Atlantic. The east or New York bank runs parallel with the other, until it abruptly terminates at the Battery, which is the most southerly point of the city.

RECEPTION OF THE REMAINS OF CHARLES ALBERT, AT GENOA.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.

On this point, and, as it were, at the foot of the town, is the Battery. Let not the reader be deceived by the formidable sound of its name, into picturing to himself a lofty mound, crested with massive walls, perforated with embrasures, and bristling with cannon. It derives its name from a purpose to which it was once applied, but to which it is unlikely that it will ever be applied again. It is a low spot of ground, almost level with high-water mark, and defended from the encroachments of the bay by a wall but a few feet in height, on a level with the top of which is a broad gravel walk, having along its outward side a slight open railing, which is all that protects the pedestrian, passing to and fro, from the bay. Back of this walk are plots of grass of various shapes and sizes, intersected by other walks, broad and spacious like that which skirts the water. These promenades are all shaded by magnificent trees, which form shady avenues in all directions through the grounds, which are a little more than half the size of St. James's Park. When the trees are in full leaf, the Battery has a fine effect seen from the bay, as a foreground to the town. It is a place much frequented in summer evenings by the New Yorkers, who are attracted to it not only by the shade which its foliage affords them, but also by the fresh breezes which generally play along its avenues from the bay. It is not now, however, a place of fashionable resort, which is, perhaps, chiefly to be attributed to its distance from the fashionable quarters of the city, which lie to the northward.

A more delicious retreat can scarcely be imagined than the Battery on a fine summer evening In front lies the vast body of the bay, bounded by the amphitheatric sweep of the shores of Long Island, Staten Island, and New Jersey; the whole of which, with Governor's Island, and the other islets in the bay, when seen from the level of the water, and lighted up by the glow of an American sunset, presents a picture which may be more easily conceived than described. When any exciting occasion calls the New Yorkers in multitudes into it, the Battery exhibits a most striking scene. The Sirius was the first vessel that crossed from England to New York by steam. Her arrival was unexpected; the Great Western, which followed her in the course of a few hours, being that which was looked for as the real harbinger of a new era in Transatlantic navigation. As soon as it was rumoured that her smoke was visible in the direction of the Narrows, the whole population, as if animated by one impulse, seemed to pour down to the Battery to welcome her. In an hour afterwards she was abreast of the East River; instead of immediately ascending which to dock, she passed the Battery, turned and dashed past it again, close to shore, when she was welcomed by the hurrahs of upwards of one hundred thousand people, crowded upon the terrace walk that skirted the bay. I was told by a passenger, who had been an eye-witness of the scene from on board, that it was one of the most magnificent spectacles he had ever beheld.

I myself afterwards witnessed the Battery, when it was densely crowded with people. It was on a 4th of July, the great national gala-day of America. The weather was fine, and every ship in harbour was decorated with colours. The North Carolina, a first-class American ship, was lying in the harbour, where she had been doing duty for some time as a guard-ship. At one o'clock she fired a salute in honour of the day, and in commemoration of the Independence of which, a little more than half a century previously, it had been the witness. Lord Ashburton was then in America, engaged in negotiations with Mr. Webster, American Secretary of State, concerning the north-eastern boundary. The Warspite frigate, under the command of Lord John Hay, which had conveyed his Lordship to New York and was waiting to carry him back to England, was also moored in the harbour. I observed that, whilst the guns of the North Carolina were one after another being discharged, speculation was rife amongst the crowd as to what the Warspite would do, which lay at some distance from the shore, with colours flying, but with no signs of life on board. The salute from the North Carolina being finished, a pause of a few minutes ensued, but the Warspite remained silent.

"The Britisher's out of gunpowder!" said, at length, one near me in the crowd.

He had scarcely uttered the words when a flash momentarily gleamed from the side of the frigate, followed by a wreathing cloud of smoke, and in a few seconds afterwards the boom of a seventy gun struck with painful force upon the ear, reverberated through all the avenues of the Battery, and shook the windows in the houses which overlooked it. The contrast between the heavy metal which it indicated, and the guns on board the North Carolina, was too striking not to be noticed by the crowd, who looked at each other with surprise, mingled with some mortification. As the Warspite continued to thunder forth her salutes, she made poppguns of the metal on board the North Carolina, but it may, however, to say that the latter had not then her sailing armament on board; an American ship, in general, when fully equipped, carrying heavier metal than a British one. I could not help observing, however, that many were considerably annoyed by one of their own first-class ships being outdone, on such an occasion, by a second class ship in the British service.

RECEPTION OF THE REMAINS OF THE LATE CHARLES-ALBERT, EX-KING OF SARDINIA, AT GENOA.

On the 4th instant, the people of Genoa assisted at a ceremony, which, in the French journals, is stated to have recalled, otherwise than by designation, the removal of the remains of Napoleon to the Invalides.

At ten o'clock in the morning, the steamers Goito and Mocambano, with a grand Royal Pavilion, appeared at the entrance of the harbour. The colours of the vessels were lowered, and a salute of twenty-one guns fired. The French steam-vessel Tonnere joined in this last homage to "the Martyr to Italian Independence." All the troops of the garrison were out, and lined the jetty and the quays.

The Mocambano, on board which were the Prince of Savoy-Carignan, the aides-de-camp, and faithful attendants of the Royal exile, was ranged near a large buoy with black drapery, in the middle of the deck of which was a raised cenotaph, faced by the Italian colours, and a figure bearing a wreath. At the angles were four statues—Ligaria, Commerce, Justice, and Navigation. In the centre, upon the highest stage of the cenotaph, were two figures personifying Italy; and upon the lower stages, within panels, were inscribed:—

"Vieni o magnanimo et accoglie l'amor de' popoli cui mandasti morendo. Sulle tue spoglie conforteri la patria le sue speranze."

"Pit che la vita amb ibera si Independenta l' Italia; nel estremo infortune serbb intero l' onore. Deporta la corona, andb a piangere lontano il commun danno."

The Mocambano was received by the principal authorities of the city in boats. Upon the quay were the public bodies, military officers, and the Chapter of the Cathedral headed by the Vicar-General, and followed by an immense concourse of people. The body, having been conveyed from the barge by the sailors, was placed upon a magnificent funeral car, and thus conveyed to the metropolitan church of San Lorenzo.

Behind the car were the First Equerry of the ex-King, and the four Aides-de-camp, carrying the crown, the sceptre, and the state sword, upon a cushion of velvet and gold.

Next came his Royal Highness the Prince of Savoy-Carignan, the President and Deputations of the two Chambers, the Minister of the Interior, the Commissary Royal, and other Government authorities.

The church of San Lorenzo had been prepared with great funeral pomp for the ceremony, which was throughout exceedingly impressive.

Next morning was appointed for the removal of the remains to Turin. At ten o'clock, a requiem was chanted. The car was then conveyed through the principal streets of the city: the windows of the houses being crowded with spectators, the majority of whom were in mourning. At length the cortège left on its road to Turin. In a few minutes, the funeral car disappeared, and the remains of Charles Albert were transferred from Italian to the soil of Italy —the country which he strove to set free, but which he left in a more miserable condition than before his glorious exertions.

THE LAST BATTLES AND DEATH OF KING CHARLES ALBERT.

PIEDMONT, Piedmont is filled with sighs,
Charles Albert's last bed
In the church is spread,
And the old and the young bend wistful eyes,
Where silent and conquer'd a brave king lies.

Brief time is past since, the sword by his side,
Aspiring to see
Fair Austria free,
With his troops behind him in martial pride,
We bebeld him to battle gally ride.

And his banners all bright were flung
On high,
The war music was sounding,
The war horses were bounding,
And courage and joy were in every eye,
And none suspected the doom that was nigh.

But they thought of brave times quite past'd away,
Times dead as the clay
Of the king they'll lay
So soon in the chambers that know no ray
The desolate vaults of the cloisters grey.

They th ught of the ancient victorious times
Related in story
To rupiete with glory,
Of deeds once achieved in these very climes,
Still from sire to son sung in nursery rhymes.

Ah! vain were these hopes, though boldly aver'd,
And sudden and strange
Was the destined change,
Which struck all their light into gloom and cloud,
And their King's bright arms to his winding shroud!

It was not the sabre which laid him low
The careering rattle
Of the fire in battle
Still grudged what he sought, a dispatching blow—
The King was reserved for less common woe.

The light of success and hope had departed—
'Twas the blickening gloom
Of his country's doom,
That into his soul like the iron darted,
And pierced him and left him—quite broken-hearted.

MILES GERALD KEON.

DAY OF HUMILIATION.—The Bishop of Manchester, with the concurrence of the Mayor of Manchester and Salford, having appointed Wednesday as a day of humiliation and fasting, on account of the cholera, business, to a great extent, was suspended, and the places of worship were thronged with congregations present to hear the sermons delivered on the occasion.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Oct. 28.—Twenty-first Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 29 Sir Walter Raleigh beheaded, 1618.
TUESDAY, 30 First stone of Blackfriars bridge laid, 1760.
WEDNESDAY, 31.—Allhallow's Eve. Full Moon 4h. 47m. P.M
THURSDAY, Nov. 1.—All Saints' Sun rises 6h. 56m., sets 4h. 32m.
FRIDAY, 2.—All Souls. Michaelmas Term begins.
SATURDAY, 3.—Length of day 9h. 37m.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE, FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 3

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m
11 33	11 59	0 25	0 49	1 6	1 21	1 34

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO THE CITY OF LONDON.

Next week we shall fully Illustrate (by the courtesy of the Civic Authorities)

THE STATE VISIT OF HER MAJESTY

TO THE CITY, TO OPEN

THE NEW COAL EXCHANGE,

ON TUESDAY NEXT.

The Engravings will comprise Pictures of the Royal Progress on the Thames; the Landing at the Custom-House Quay; the Procession to the Ceremony, &c.

Also, highly-finished Engravings of the beautiful New Exchange, its elaborate Decorations, &c.

THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—M. JULLIEN'S CONCERTS.—M. JULLIEN has the honour to announce that his ANNUAL SERIES of CONCERTS will COMMENCE on FRIDAY NEXT, NOV. 2nd, and CONTINUE for ONE MONTH.
Full particulars will be duly announced.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. W. BATTY. Fitzball's successful Spectacle of THE PROPHET Every Evening; with increased attractions in the Scenes of the Arena.—On MONDAY, Oct. 29, and during the Week, the Entertainments will commence, at Seven o'clock, with Fitzball's Grand Spectacle of THE PROPHET, AND THE DUMB DRIVER, in which the SCENES in the CIRCLE. To conclude with, for the Last Six Nights, the favourite and interesting Melodrama of THE DUMB DRIVER.—Box-office open from 11 till 4.—Stage Manager, Mr. W. West.

EXETER HALL. — WEDNESDAY CONCERTS. — The SECOND CONCERT will be held on the Evening of WEDNESDAY NEXT, OCTOBER 31, when Mrs Alexander Newton, Miss Rainforth, Miss Rebecca Isaacs, Miss Hodnett, Miss O'Connor, Miss Kyles, and the Misses Williams, Mr. Lockey, Signor Bartolini, and Herr Formes will appear. The Director will also have the honour of appearing for the first time since their return from America.—Tickets, 1s and 2s; Reserved Seats, 4s; Stalls, 7s; may be had of all musicsellers, of Mr. STAMMERS, 6, Exeter Hall.

LOVE'S POLYPHONIC ENTERTAINMENTS.—On Monday, October 29, Mr. LOVE will appear at the Town Hall, Maidenhead. On Tuesday, 30th, at the Assembly Rooms, Taunton. On Wednesday, 31st, at the Assembly Rooms, Torquay. On Thursday, November 1, at the Assembly Rooms Teignmouth. On Friday, 2, at the Institution, Truro. On Saturday, 3, at the Public Rooms, Redruth. On Monday, 5, at the Institution, Falmouth. On Tuesday, 6, at the Public Hall, Penzance. On Wednesday, 7, at the Institution, Bodmin. On Thursday, 8, at the Central Subscription Rooms, Launceston. On Friday, 9, at the Subscription Rooms, Exeter. On Saturday, 10, at the same place. On Monday, 12, at the Town Hall, Bridport. On Tuesday, 13, at the Assembly Rooms, Dorchester. On Wednesday, 14, at the Royal Assembly Rooms, Southampton. On Thursday, 15, at the Town Hall, Andover. On Friday, 16, at the Town Hall, Odiham.—Begin at Eight

Open Daily, from Eleven till Five; and every Evening, EXCEPT SATURDAY, from Seven, till Half past Ten

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—ROME in ILLUSTRATING Series of DISSOLVING VIEWS, with a description. Daily at Half-past Four, and every Evening at a Quarter to Ten.—LECTURES on the CHEMISTRY of FOOD, by Mr. ASHLEY.—LECTURES, with EXPERIMENTS, on the HYDRO-ELECTRIC MACHINE, by Dr. RADCLIFFE.—EXHIBITION of the OXY-HYDROGEN MICROSCOPE.—DIVER and DIVING-BELL.—The CHROMATROPE.—MODELS and MACHINERY EXPLAINED.—Admission, 1s; Schools, Half-price.

THE MISSISSIPPI and MISSOURI RIVERS, exhibited, by command, to her Majesty the Queen, H. R. H. Prince Albert, and Royal Family, at Windsor Castle,—New Views, showing the Western Banks of the Mississippi River, Towns, Villages, &c., as Now Existing, the largest picture ever executed by man. Exhibiting at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, every morning at half-past two, evening at half-past seven.—Admission, lower seats, 2s; gallery, 1s.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Beta."—For the Common Law Bar a student should pass one year at least with a special pleader. The time necessary to attend at the Inns of Court is about a fortnight in each term. The "Examination for Honours" is about £1 per year. The expense at entrance is about £36, and on the call to the Bar about £100. We are not aware of any such law library.

"An Inhiquarum Subscriber."—We have not space to give the information required. Refer to the "General Armory," or to Lloyds Dlun's "Visitation."

"A Reader."—The arms of Baker, of Sawyhurst, the family of Sir Richard Baker, the chronicler, are "As. on a fesse between three swans' heads erased and ducally gorged or, as many cornets gu."

"A Civilian."—The new regulations do not impose on a captain or lieutenant already in the army the necessity of passing the examination.

"Inquirer."—If your ancestor's arms were duly registered in the archives of the College of Arms, it will only be necessary for the applicant to prove and record his descent from some person entitled to the ensigns in the College Book. Should the arms not be recorded, the meaning of the word "arms registered by grant," at an expense of about 75 guineas. Usage, however long, if unauthorised by the Heralds, counts for nothing

"An Inquirer and Subscriber."—The competition is open to Members of the Universities only.

"A Correspondent," referring to our memoir of the late Bishop of Llandaff, informs us that the old proverb we quoted runs thus:—

When William the Conqueror did come,
Quarme, Cruis, and Crocker were at home.

"Concerto."—Miss Catherine Hayes for the stage, Miss Birch for the concert-room: Miss Louisa Pyne and Miss A. Williams are most in degree.

"A Hereford Subscriber."—Miss Rainforth is in London, and will sing at the Exeter Hall Wednesday Concerts.

"Pen."—Mr. Lockey's Christian name is Charles

"Shibboleth."—Such absurd and invidious rule of exclusion existed at the Ancient Concerts.

"A Numismatician."—Apply, with your Aquitaine halfpenny, to Mr. Webster, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent-garden.

"E. G. A.," Wangford.—The portrait, of which you so much approve, is from a private plate Apply to Mr. Graves, print-seller, Pall Mall.

"Herbert."—Hulme's "Duke" was the last edition of that treasury of a book, the "Doctor," has in the tale-page, "By the late Robert Southey. Edited by his son-in-law, John Wood Warter, B.D."

"C. T. H."—North Ferrott, should buy Mr. Keene's pamphlet on "Forty-day Mazes," published by Longman and Co.

"W. C."—Lumerick, should apply to some house of American agency.

"Phanos," Kensington, repeat the questions.

"Pedro Blanco." The word transit is derived from transd, old French, transyt, Dutch, a vagabond.

"Norfolk" should apply to a respectable dealer, of long standing.

"Harold."—Marshall's "Military Musculasy" is published by Parker and Co., Charing-cross. A popular work on the several regiments is in course of publication by the Government.

"A Subscriber," Dublin, and "M. E. P."—We cannot spare time to search.

"The Czar and the Sultan" will not suit.

"W. A."—Sir Charles Lyell's work on "Geology."

"Dancing Ledgers" should see the advertising columns of the newspapers.

"T. W.," Strand, "Intramural," &c.—Declined.

"Cymro," Aberdeen, can only be taught by a practised master of the art, for which it would be but reasonable to pay in some shape.

"J. P." is thanked for the railway sketch, though we could not engrave it

"W. G. P.," Dundee. All the Numbers of our Journal are kept in print. An entire set may be had of the originally published price. Odd numbers 1s. each, unless of date within the last month.

"Θομας," Manchester.—Apply to a foreign bookseller; at Mr. Nutt, opposite Arundel street, Strand.

"Russar."—Don Carlos is abroad, and has no agent in England. The Conde de Montemolen had an establishment in Harley-street, prended over by M. Mon and the Marquis of Villa Franca, but this has been some months broken up.

"Hussar" has application for information, to Sheridan Talbere Sarsons, of 21, Nottingham-street, Marylebone, the diplomatic agent of the ex-King of Portugal, Don Miguel.

"Mancunian."—The arms of the Williamson family are, "Or a chev. gu. between three trefoils slipped as." The crest, "Out of a mural crown gu. a wyvern's head or."

"A Constant Reader."—The late Earl Waldegrave was in his 39th year when he married the daughter of Mr. Braham. He was born 9th February, 1816, and his marriage took place 28th September, 1840.

"W. D."—Any one who bears arms may use a motto. The right is not confined to any class.

"Enquirer."—No one is, strictly speaking, entitled to use arms without due authority, but no penalty attaches to the incorrect or illegal adoption of arms. The tinctures and co ours of the arms send not being indicated, it would be difficult to ascertain to whom it appertains.

"An Inquiring Subscriber."—We do not know of any families of Clarke or Smith, of the counties named. The arms of Beaman are, "As. a dove arg. beaked and legged gu. between three gun rings or, in chief a mullet charged with a mullet."

"L. R." On his second marriage, the husband, according to the strict rules of heraldry, encountances the use of his first wife's escutcheon of pretence, and impales the as ms of his second wife.

"J. W. P."—The husband of an heiress does not "quarter her arms," but bears them on an escutcheon of pretence. He is not entitled to use the crest of the lady's family. The escutcheon of pretence is a small shield borne in the centre of the husband's coat of arms

"Il His. Angra."—The war interpolated in crenia Borgia," by this contralto, is by Lauro Rossi, and not by Rucs, as ously printed in our paper in a previous Number

"Wimborne."—Look at a London Directory the address supply London would never reach the publishers. Buy Spohr's "Violin School," or Dabourg's work

"Egmont."—Any London musical publisher, on being written to, would forward the cantata required.

BOOKS, &c. RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Chronicles of the Stock Exchange, by J. Francis.——Revelations of an Orderly.——Captain Hay's Arabic Grammar.——The Fly-Sheets.——Sketches of Cantaba.——Instructions in Oil Painting.
Music.—The Circassian Captive.

ON THE 1ST NOVEMBER WILL BE PUBLISHED, PRICE 1s.,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK FOR 1850;

Being the Sixth Annual Issue of this most beautifully embellished and useful Almanack. Illustrated by DUNCAN and other Eminent Artists. The Notes of the Month, by MRS. LOUDON; besid s a variety of new and useful Tables, &c. &c. The Astronomical Department by JAMES GLAISHER, Esq., F.R.A.S., and of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.
Published by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, London.
 Country orders supplied for Cash only.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1849.

THE starving peasantry, the rabid Young Irelanders, and the drivellers of Conciliation Hall, are not the only parties whose errors and passions are a source of annoyance or difficulty to those who desire to see a termination of the feuds, the rancours, and the miseries of Ireland. For the crimes of the peasantry, there is at least the palliation of the most deplorable misery; for the follies of the Young Irelanders, there is the palliation of inexperience and irresponsibility; and for the revival of the Conciliation Hall delusion, if people can find no other excuse, they can at least console themselves with the reflection that such an agitation, though very foolish, is likely to be very harmless. But none of these offsets exist in the case of the Orange agitators of the North of Ireland. Lord Roden, the Orange magistracy, and the men who kill Roman Catholics at Dolly's Brae, and think a faction fight as glorious an achievement as our ancestors imagined the winning of a battle with a foreign foe, are not demoralised by starvation and despair, like the unhappy peasantry, who shoot landlords and agents; they are not vain, inexperienced, and irresponsible, like the literary coterie of Mr. Gavan Duffy; and they are not powerless for evil like Mr. John O'Connell at Conciliation Hall. On the contrary, the leading Orangemen are men of station and fortune, entrusted with her Majesty's commission, and whose example, for good or for evil, is naturally followed by large classes of the people.

As well-wishers to Ireland, we rejoice to see that Lord Clarendon understands and fulfils his duty; and that, having used the full powers of the law for the punishment of such disturbers as Messrs. Smith O'Brien, Meagher, and Mitchell, he will not allow such breakers of the peace as Lord Roden and the Messrs. Beers to hold her Majesty's commission, and bring the law into contempt. It must be painful to the Irish Executive to disgrace a man like Lord Roden; but, in a country where the slightest connivance with a faction would exalt that faction beyond the bounds of decency and safety, the scales of justice must be held with an unfaltering hand, and punishment must fall upon any offender, however exalted he may be. It is the most unhappy of all the unhappy circumstances of Ireland, that many of the resident upper classes are as factious as the lower. How shall the ignorant and the debased be made to respect the law, if the educated and the exalted are allowed to set it at defiance? How shall Roman Catholics be pacific, if Protestants be permitted, with impunity, to insult, to exasperate, and to slay them? Lord Roden and some other of the Irish magistrates proclaim their ignorance of the fact that armed processions are illegal; but, surely, they must be the merest tyros in the profession of the law, which all magistrates are supposed to know something about, if they imagine for a moment that any assemblage of people with arms in their hands—however plausible, or even laudable, their object—can be other than illegal, if it excite alarm in the public, or is calculated to provoke hostilities. Lord Clarendon has therefore acted with great forbearance, as well as great firmness. Let him continue to do so, and, notwithstanding a temporary outcry from the parties upon whom, in the exercise of his duty, he bears with just severity, he will entitle himself still more than he has done to the gratitude of all well-wishers of Ireland. The social misery is quite enough to tax all the energies of the Government and the people. There needs no faction from men in high station to complicate difficulties, and impede the regeneration of the country.

It must be taken for granted that the agricultural interest of this country is really in a state of distress. There cannot be a difference of opinion on the subject. The difficulty is to decide upon its causes. There is a large class of sensible and conscientious men, who do not suffer from this distress, and a still larger class of men, equally sensible and conscientious, who are engaged in the business of agriculture and suffer severely from its depression, who allege that the Repeal of the Corn-laws is the sole cause of all the mischief. The Marquis of Granby—vice Mr. Disraeli, dismissed as incompetent—is the Parliamentary leader of this party of honest men; and he tells English farmers as plainly as he can speak, that there is no hope for them—that self-reliance will not save them—and that they may put their hands to the wheel or the plough, without receiving from Fortune that aid which is supposed to follow with invariable certainty, in all other pursuits, the exertions of those who help themselves. "Aide-toi, et le ciel t'aidera," is a maxim that does not apply to British agriculture, in the estimation of Lord Granby. Major Beresford is equally emphatic and equally desponding. "People might talk," he said, "of the 'good time coming,' but until they saw the rising of some superior star, to open to them a better horizon, and to show them a plan by which farmers would be enabled to endure the load under which they had to labour, he believed it was impossible to expect better days." The meetings to which this and similarly gloomy speeches were addressed, are reported to have cheered enthusiastically—from which we may suppose that the persons present believed in their own approaching ruin. But when we come to inquire why it is that agriculture is so distressed at present, we are told that wheat does not sell at a remunerative price, and that farmers cannot pay rent and taxes without receiving more money for their produce. If we enquire still further, we find that the average price of wheat at present is somewhere about 41s. the quarter. The inference drawn by farmers is, that the repeal of the Corn-laws has lowered prices to this point; and many people believe the fact to be so. But every one who has studied this subject, and whose memory extends back to the period when no revolutionary Cobden had been so much as heard of, and when the repeal of the Corn-laws was considered by politicians generally as an idle dream of crack-brained enthusiasts, remembers that corn very often sold at prices far lower; and that, in fact, under the system of Protection, in the year 1835, for instance, it was impossible to get so much as 40s. per quarter for the best wheat. It is clear, therefore, that the repeal of the Corn-laws is not entirely, if at all, to blame; and that all the protection in the world cannot keep up prices in years of plenty. What, then, is the cause of agricultural distress? The agriculturists complain of the burden of taxes and of rent. If they pay more taxes than their fair share, let them put their shoulders to the wheel, in spite of the discouragen ent of Lord Granby, and agitate in a temperate and business-l ke manner for redress. If rent be the grievance, the game is in their own hands; and their landlords must ultimately submit to a reduction. If it be poor-rates, let them blame poor-rates, and inquire into the causes of the growth of pauperism, and they may be assured that all classes of the community will unite with them in any proper mode of diminishing the burden. But to be discouraged, is to be self-condemned. Other persons who carry on business in this country pay heavy taxes, heavy poor-rates, and heavy rents, and yet contrive, somehow or other, not only to live and make both ends meet, but to acquire fortunes. If agriculturists cannot do likewise, the more's the pity; but they MOUNTAINEERS BRINGING THE HEADS OF MONTENEGRINS TO THE PACHA.

AFFAIRS AT SCUTARI.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The Pachalic of Scutari, as we have had occasion to observe before, is one of the most turbulent in the Ottoman Empire. The Christian population of the country and the Mussulman population both of the country and the towns, are still armed, refuse to contribute recruits to the Nizam, and keep each other and the agents of the Porte in check. This state of society, rife with violence, recalls the middle ages. On landing at the picturesque port of Dulcigno, it was in a state of revolution, having driven out its Turkish Bey, who had taken refuge with the Pacha of Scutari. On repairing to visit his Excellency, a day or two after, in his citadel, your Correspondent was impeded by an unusual crowd. An armed deputation of the citizens of Dulcigno was marching haughtily into the Castle to explain their grievances to the Pacha and demand the dismissal of the tyrannic Bey.

As this pressing deputation was dismissed, another crowd thronged the lobbies, accompanying some ferocious-looking mountaineers, who insisted on laying before his Excellency the sport of the preceding day's foray, the heads of two Montenegrins, whose native mountains may be discerned through the Pacha's window, rising at the other side of the lake. The Pacha (Osman), a fair gentlemanlike Bosniak, whose appearance and manner convey the impression of natural refinement, is obliged to dissemble his disgust at the spectacle of these ghastly heads produced immediately before his morning meal, and dismisses the grim warriors with the customary compliment to their zeal, though somewhat coldly uttered. Barbarous as this state of things may seem, it does not indicate the anarchic insecurity of life and property which at first sight might appear; and the writer could not but be struck with the substantial advantages which these wild mountaineers enjoy over the subjects of Austria and Russia. The Albanians are not liable to be dragged away by a remorseless conscription into military bondage, or to perish by tens of thousands through commissariat frauds: they can obtain redress, however rudely, against tyrannic governors; and, lastly, whilst in the environs of the first commercial city of Austria, last passed by the writer, the peasantry live on cabbage and rye bread and rarely ever boast a wretched hide-bound cow, every Albanian here owns his half-score head of cattle, his geese, fowls, turkeys, fields of maize, and fruit.

The Bey of Pristina, and his contingent Bosnia, is still in a state of insurrection, attributed to the intrigues of Russia and Austria. Six thousand of the Nizam, or regulars, and several thousand irregular corps of volunteer Albanians have not yet succeeded in relieving Sahir Pacha, and, indeed, the other day are said to have lost four cannon and several hundred men. Fresh reinforcements are being poured in by the Porte; and, in the accompanying woodcut, the Bey of Pristina is represented marching out to join the Pacha with his irregular contingent.

The Bey, an officer of the modern school, with his plain fez, unadorned cloth coat, and spectacles on nose, presents a remarkable contrast to his wild followers, who rush whooping along in two files, and leap like a herd of goats over the broad gutter. At their head is the Ban Bacha, a military adventurer—just such another as Mehemet Ali of Egypt in his younger days—with cleanly shaven head, beard neatly trimmed and darkly dyed, and arrayed in new skyblue and scarlet cloth, bright with gold embroidery.

It should be explained that, in both Illustrations, the mountaineers' mode of carrying their pistols is correctly represented, though it is the reverse of the usual method in other countries.

THE BEY OF PRISTINA MARCHING TO JOIN THE PACHA.

FINE ARTS.

CINDERELLA.

The above Engraving is from the design of Krigar, a German artist. In Germany, the tale of "Cinderella," or "Aschenputtel," is a great favourite, and the two doves play a much larger part in the story than they play in the versions which are current in other countries. A writer in the Dublin University Magazine gives an explanation of the term "Glass Slipper," which is interesting, and probably correct. He says that, "Two centuries ago, furs were so rare, and therefore so highly valued that the wearing of them was restricted, by several sumptuary laws, to Kings and Princes. Sable—in those laws called vair—was the subject of countless regulations; the exact quantity permitted to be worn by persons of different grades, and the articles of dress to which it might be applied, were strictly defined. Perrault's tale of 'Cinderella' originally marked the dignity conferred on her by the fairy, by her wearing a slipper of vair, a privilege then confined to the highest rank of princesses. An error of the press, now become inveterate, changed vair into verre and the slipper of sable was suddenly converted into a glass slipper."

A writer in Hone's "Every Day Book" (vol. 3, page 710) traces the origin of the story back to the times of the Egyptians. He says, in the thirteenth book of the "Various History" of Ælian, is the genuine narrative from which "Cinderella" is derived. Of all the Egyptians, says the historian, Rhodope was reckoned the most beautiful. To her, when she was bathing, Fortune ever fond of sudden and unexpected catastrophes, did a kindness more merited by her beauty than her prudence. She left her shoes on the bank of the stream, and an eagle mistaking it for a sheep or a little child, pounced down upon one of them and flew off with it. Flying with it directly over Memphis, where King Psammenitus was dispensing justice, the eagle dropped the shoe into the King's lap. Of course the King was struck with it; and admiring the beauty of the shoe and the skill and proportion of the fabric, and admiring the beauty of the shoe and the skill and proportion of the fabrication, he sent through all the kingdom in search of the foot that would fit it; and having found it attached to the person of Rhodope he immediately married her."

"CINDERELLA."—FROM A PICTURE BY KRIGAR.

THERE was a time when boys and girls
Loved fairy legends more than grammar,
And took more joy in fairy wands
Than in the scientific hammer.
When round the blazing hearth they sat,
With sparkling eyes and keen attention,
To hear a mother's lips relate
The charming tales of old invention.

When they believed—O pleasant days!—
The great exploits of "Puss" booted
When of the deeds of brave Tom Thumb
The smallest doubt was never mooted.
When "Beauty and the Beast" awoke
A sympathy most true and tender;
And Jack the Giant Killer's sword
Was injured Virtue's best defender.

When that more wondrous Jack who climb
The Bean-stalk up to Heaven's own portals,
Was by their partial judgment drawn
The bravest and the best of mortals.
When "Riding Hood," untimely slain
By cruel monster of the wild-wood,
Was oft bemoan'd with guileless tears—
Bright jewels on the cheeks of childhood.

When [illegible] name
Was first of [illegible] and navigators,
Compared with whom our Cook, and Ross,
And Franklin are but second-caters.
When coats of darkness, wishing-caps,
And seven-league boots were doubted never
And brisk Aladdin's lamp appear'd
A beauty and a joy for ever.

When boy or girl, who heard the tale
Of good and patient Cinderella,
Admired and pitied, wept and smiled,
And thought her Prince a gallant fellow.
When Mermaids frolick'd in the sea
And Puck made sport with maids in dairies
When Oberon was Monarch still,
And elves were elves, and fairies fairies.

But now the brats are getting dull,
They yield no more a faith implicit;
And sages in their pinafores,
Presume to start their doubts illicit—
Presume to reason with their sires
And with nubbly-like persistence,
Demand some actual proof to show
[illegible]elves and fairies the existence.

Such child shall ne'er be pet of mine,
Nor from my pocket coax the shilling,
Nor top, nor doll shall it extort
From my exchequer most unwilling.
Give me a little child with faith,
With purity and sweet reliance,
And I'll applaud its ignorance
Of all the "elogies" of science.

Let Reason guide us in our teens,
And never fail to light us after;
But, oh let children keep their faith,
Their tears, their wonder, and their laughter
So shall their hearts be duly trained
In opening life's appropriate season;
Nor Fancy, Sympathy, and Love
Be stunted with the food of Reason.—† † C.

MUSIC.

LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.

The most remarkable feature of the first entertainment this season, at Exeter Hall, of the above series of concerts, was the amelioration of the band. It consists of about forty players, with Willy (first violin), Patey, Goffre, Mori, Watkins (principal second violin), H. Hill, Willy, jun., Jay, H. and C. Griesbach, Hill (principal tenor), Trust Glanville, W. L. Phillips (first violoncello), W. Loder, Rowland (first double bass), Pratten, Mount, Ribas, De Folly, Nicholson, Horton, Maycock, Baumann, Jarrett, C. and T. Harper, Irwin, the Reis ays and Smithes, Prospere, Chipp, &c. amongst the executants. The effect of this improvement was manifested in the performance of Mozart's "Il Flauto Magico" overture, and the Scherzo and Wedding March from Mendelssohn's music to "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The march was unanimously encored; but the scherzo equally deserved the compliment, so delicate and finished was the execution. Mr. Anschutz (who was the director of the Drury-lane German company last season) now wields the bâton at the a Wednesday Concerts. An orchestral "pot-pourri" of his own composition, based on subjects from Spohr's "Jessonda," although coming late in the programme, and being also too lengthy, afforded a favourable opinion of his abilities as a musician; and with such executants as Ribas, Jarrett, Baumann, T. Harper, Maycock, and Nicholson, the solo bits could not fail to ge gratifyin.

The vocal gleanings opened with a selection from Mozart's "Magic Flute," in which Mr. Lockey's singing of the air "O cara imagine," was delightful; and Mrs. A. Newton proved how much she has gained by her having had Manuel Garcia as a master, by her clever vocalisation in the most difficult air of the Queen of Night, "Gli angui d'inferno." The almost unvocal bravura passages in the upper octave, which the composer has written, were conquered by Mrs. Newton with surprising volubility. She was encored, an exaction certainly too cruel, for she suffered from the exertion, and was certainly not in voice in the second part of the concert. In fact, the disposition to encore every piece was so strongly manifested that the scheme became very fatiguing to listen to during the latter portion. There were nine or ten encores, thus making the concert one-third longer. As in last season, there were too many indications of a taste to encourage the resuscitation of hackneyed songs. Besides the singers we have named, there were the Misses A. and M. Williams, singing their duos so charmingly, and Miss Poole, one of our best ballad singers. The foreign stars were Ronconi and Formes. The former arrived expressly from Milan, to fulfil his engagement, and the fatigue of a rapid journey was shown in his singing, for he was husky and did not develope half his ordinary power. His drolling in the Barber's song, "Largo," secured, nevertheless, its encoring, and in the impassioned air from Bellini's "Straniera," his exquisitely finished style told. He was heartily received, and made a great impression. Formes's first air, the "Qu'ségno," from the "Magic Flute," which, by the way, he sang in German, created a powerful sensation, and it was rapturously encored. His rich and sonorous deep tones were superbly sustained. He was wrong to introduce afterwards the songs which Pischek has so often given in public, "The Standard Bearer" and "My Heart's on the Rhine," and rather weakened the first impression he had made. His tendency to drag the time is the greatest fault in his otherwise picturesque and dramatic style. The pianoforte solo was not up to the mark—the music was downright rubbish, and the lady's execution was more amateurish than artistical.

The National Anthem was sung after the first part, Miss Rebecca Isaacs making an extraordinary flourish in her verse of the theme, that ought to be grave-y sung. How absurd is the reading "God save-a-a-a-a-a-ve the Queen," as if a prolonged shake were an attribute of devotional loyalty.

HOLBORN VOCAL CONCERTS.

Any amateur desirous of hearing glees, choruses, and madrigals particularly well sung, and of listening to a judiciously compiled selection of vocal music, will be amply gratified by a visit to the National Hall, 242, Holborn. The choir is composed of about 25 singers, all evidently good musicians, who, in concerted pieces, take up their parts with the greatest precision, and who sing with a dramatic effect beyond all praise. Weber's chorus, "Bright sword of liberty," ought to be a standing item in the programme, so spirited is its execution. The concerted pieces are relieved by various solo singers; amongst whom Mrs. Temple (an accomplished soprano), Miss C. Felton (who has a fine-toned contralto), and Miss M. A. Atkinson, who warbles a ballad so feelingly, are to be especially mentioned. The schemes of these concerts exhibit a musician-like purpose; and if it were only a locality at which the madrigals of ancient and modern masters can be exclusively heard in public, the undertaking would be entitled to the support of the musical public. The prices of admission are indeed almost too moderate, for the quality of the entertainment is not surpassed by concerts of infinitely greater pretensions and higher tariff.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—Macfarren's new opera of "King Charles the Second," announced for last Thursday, is postponed until this (Saturday) evening. It is so long since a lyric work by an English composer has been produced, that considerable interest has been excited in the musical circles; and there is great curiosity to hear the new prima donna, Miss Louisa Pyne, in an original character.——The Distin family (Sax-horns) have been playing this week at Brighton and Chichester, and will make their first appearance in London, since their return from America, next Wednesday, at Exeter Hall.——On Friday next will be the first performance this season of the London Sacred Harmonic Society, at Exeter Hall, when Handel's "Messiah" will be given, conducted by Mr. Surman.——On the same evening, M. Jullien's Promenade Concerts begin, at Drury-lane Theatre.—— On Saturday, will be the first gathering of the Western Madrigal Society.——Mr. Herbert Rodwell has been appointed musical director of the Theatre Royal Drury-lane, under Mr. Anderson's approaching management. Mdme. Viardot will sing next season at the Royal Italian Opera, and will arrive in London at a much earlier period than last year.——It is not impossible that Meyerbeer may fulfil his long-expressed desire to visit London next season. He will be most cordially received; for the star of the composer of "Robert le Diable," the "Huguenots," and the "Prophète," is now in the ascendant in this country.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS.—Ronconi has succeeded in his mission to Italy, and has engaged the famed Signora Barbieri Nini for the prima donna. The Italian Theatre will be opened the first Thursday or Saturday in November, with "Romeo and Juliet" or Bellini and Vaccai, Romeo by Madame Angri, and Juliet by Madame Persiani. Mdlle. Vera has also been engaged by Bonfanti. A new tenor, Licensi, from Italy, is to make his début. Mdlle. Piavio will be the alto-tenor, and Morlani will also sing for a few nights. The Titian or basses, and Morelli, with Ronconi, will return to their posts.——Mdlle. Varlot was to have returned last Wednesday to the Grand Opéra, in Fides, in the "Prophète." The fascinating Mdlle. Dorcier has reappeared, after many months of absence, at the Opéra Comique, in Halévy's "Val d'Andore." His Folie aux Roses" continues a brilliant career; and Perrot's "Filleule des Fées" has been the attraction at the Grand Opera house.——An Italian version of Weber's "Der Freyschütz" with the recitatives of Berlioz (the original dialogue was spoken), is in preparation at the Italian Theatre in Berlin. Liszt has been creating a sensation in Hamburg and Weimar, by two of his new compositions, based on themes from Meyerbeer's "Prophète."—— Mr. Mitchell has been to Brussels and Paris to organise his series of French operas and plays.

THE THEATRES.

SURREY.

"Trevanion; or, the False Position," is the name of the three act drama, by Mr. Marston and Mr. Bernard, produced on Monday. Its production is like yto be of great benefit to this class of drama. Both elegant and touching in story, it is full of sweet poetry and delicate sentiment. The plot is exceedingly simple and natural; but the skill of dramatic masters is shown in the development. A dependent on a lady of fortune is beloved by a gent eman, but [illegible] parent, whom, in the perplexity of her situation, she desires to withdraw, in order to escape the observation of her husband. His entering at the moment, is thus made first acquainted with the deception. A man of noble impulses, Trevanion pities the father's grief at the supposed insult which he has just received, and at once decides that he cannot trust the woman as a wife, who has been ungrateful as a daughter. But he misunderstands her character; accident only had prevented the disclosure at the fatal moment; and, when himself [illegible] husband with great felicity; Madame Ponisi was delightful, and it must conduce much to the improvement of the taste of the Surrey audience. We cannot be too grateful to men of genius, when they condescend to imitate like this

HAYMARKET

On Wednesday Mr. Macready performed Lear, perhaps the most highly-finished and most note-worthy of his characters. It is a part which the tragedian has most highly elaborated, and to which he has imparted a marvellous individuality. Many points which are the actor's defects, tell effectively in his Lear. His personal irritability and testiness are in their place in the character of the offended King made wayward by age, and suffering from filial ingratitude. But the frettiness is in keeping the whole of the character. There is a sort of Jovian paternity in it, which Mr. Macready has not reached. The sublimity of the Father's Love is everywhere his aim, nowhere his attainment. The performer thro-ughout wrestles with himself, the struggle is gladiatorial, and to it is owing the extraordinary interest which invests Mr. Macready's performances. We share in his effort; and, measuring the labour sustained, deem the crown well merited, if not won.

The public estimation in which Mr. Macready's impersonation of Lear is held, was evidenced by the over-crowded state of the house; and the eagerness manifested by all to get a glimpse of the actor on the scene within "ear-shot" of his voice. The opening scene was, as usual, effective; the old Monarch's tender affection for Cordelia (Miss Reynolds) being the first point which the actor had most elaborated, and his curse the climax of the act. The Fool is introduced, and sustained by Miss P. Horton with her accustomed skill. Both she and Mr. Macready betrayed an immense amount of study in the situations between them, marking the degrees of interest and the transitions of feeling in the most unmistakeable manner. The scene on the heath leads us naturally to the mention of Edgar, which was admirably performed by Mr. Wallack. Here were simulated and real madness brought into living contrast. This is, in the whole range of the mad drama, the most delicate and subtle theme of situations. Mr. Macready bestows upon it the utmost resources of his art, and frequently approximates the sublime. In the recognition and death scenes with Cordelia, it must be confessed that the pathetic lay springs of pity—the heart is melted with compassion, the eyes swim in tears. The actor's triumph was so far achieved. It is wonderful in art how near the goal may be approached, without being reached. And, with one of Shakespeare's idealities, who ever expects—or, strange as it may seem, would desire—a perfect realization?

In addition to the perform s already named, we have to bestow commendation on Mr. Stuart for the manner in which he sustained the part of Kent; and on Mr. Howe for his Edmund, which was a rough and vicorous impersonation. Mrs. Warner was the Goneril, and made the most of an unthankful rôle.

The plaudits of the audience were vehement and frequent; and the principal performers were called before the curtain, after Mr Macready and Mrs. Warner.

On Thursday, a new f rce by Mr. Shirley Brooks, entitled "The Guardian Angel," was produced. We were at first inclined to believe that this was a French piece with a similar title, but are glad to welcome it as an original and successful drama. It is in one act. The base of the action consists in a supersti ious belief in divination on the part of a servant-maid, whose peculiar delusions are drawn from cards; by which she learns that she is doomed to marry a lawyer's clerk, and whom therefore she follows in all the changes of mode and phases of rank to which he gradually attains, becoming his domestic, and, by the suppression and management of his correspondence, involving him in difficulties with the ladies of his acquaintance, and his friends in general, out of which he is delivered only by her advice. In gratitude, he marries her. Mr. and Mrs. Keeley were the representatives of these eccentrics. One act was scarcely sufficient to evolve adequately such a plot, and the incidents are, accordingly, "perplexed in the extreme;" but the smartness of the dialogue secured its success.

LYCEUM.

On Saturday, a new farce, from the pen of Mr Bayle Bernard, under the title of "A Practical Man," was produced. Probable, it is all the piece pretends to be, it has great merit. The title itself is ironical: the so-called practical man being, in fact, a speculator—of so much energy, however, as to override the legal profession itself with attempts to make it subservient to operation. The name assumed is Cloudesley, and he is embodied by Mr. Charles Mathews, who bustles through the part with his usual animation and cleverness. It is as a client without means that Cloudesley becomes acquainted with an old lawyer, and he transfers himself over to another. Mr. Rockstone (Mr. Granby), who, unfortunately for himself, undertakes, for a bribe of five hundred pounds, to get "the universal genius" a situation. Mr. Rockstone soon finds out Cloudesley, who presents himself in upon him at his busiest time, regardless of all other appointments which the solicitor may have, and asserting his own claims on attention with the greatest volubility and nonchalance. Having assured him of his own qualifications, Cloudesley upsets everything in the office in search of pens and paper; and being left alone, sends his solicitor's clients on fantastic errands. Nothing in the end remains for the poor lawyer to do but to purchase the absence of his visitor by a present of twenty pounds. A part so well adapted for Mr. Mathews's vivacity could not fail of being successful; and the whole affair was one of the liveliest and smartest pieces of extravagance that has yet emanated from its author's fertile conception.

ADELPHI.

"The Sons of Mars," a drama in three acts, is translated from a piece in which M. Benoît played the part of the principal character—a juvenile militaire, devoted to Parisian gravettes, and a friend; the latter fortunate in his profession, having arrived at the dignity of a lieutenant, while the hero himself, a heedless youth, is apt to fortune's chances. Trim is the name of this scapegrace, who is persecuted by Madame Sans-Gêne, and turns out in the end to be the brother of a noble lady—his mother, the first wife of a Colonel Dorville, being dead.

The piece is of the most free and easy character, both in structure and dialogue. The whole dramatis personæ are involved in a medley of learnedness and circumstances, perfectly irreconcileable, but, giving occasion for broad contrasts, and Paul-Bedford levitian gumbollings, which to an Adelphi audience are the all-in-all of a new farce, made the present perfectly successful.

Madame Sontag.—The ruling prima donna, Madame Sontag, with Tamberg, the two Lablaches, Belletti, and Calzolari, have made perhaps the most fruitful tournée ever undertaken. The choice, which here and there resisted the first enterprises, no longer militating against them, every week their success has increased. At Edinburgh, Glasgow, Bath, Bristol, Plymouth, Worcester, Exeter—all places where they have sung within the last twenty days—their success has been entire. Madame Sontag has astonished her provincial audiences by her extraordinary execution. She has, however, still more completely won their hearts by the pathos and chaste simplicity with which she has sung English ballads, such as "Sweet home." The party is at present at Norwich, where their prospects appear highly auspicious.

IRELAND.

The Queen's College, Cork.—The president and council have purchased for the museum of the College the great botanical and pharmaceutical collection which had been formed by the late Anthony Todd Thompson, Professor of the London University. They are also in treaty for some other collections in the physiological and pathological departments, to complete the medical faculty.

The Encumbered Estates Commission.—On Wednesday, at twelve o'clock, the Commission for the Sale and Transfer of Encumbered Estates, was opened in the Court of Exchequer, Dublin, by Baron Richard and Messrs Mountford Longfield, LL.D., and Charles J. Hargrave, Esq., the Commissioners appointed by her Majesty. The Court was very much crowded by barristers and solicitors.

Resignations of Orange Magistrates.—Lord Roden has dissuaded several magistrates, who wished to show their sympathy for him by retiring from the bench, from carrying the commissions, and will not countenance expressions of personal sympathy carried to such length.

Great Western Fishery Company of Ireland.—A company of London merchants, under the above title, was formed and incorporated, according to Act of Parliament, in June last, having for its object the working of the fisheries of Ireland—which, when properly managed, and with sufficient capital, would not only afford a mine of wealth to the company itself, but would be the means of giving profitable employment to thousands of able bodied and hardy men who are at this moment, with their families, in a state of destitution. Some eminent members of the company have gone to Ireland during the last few days, in order to make the necessary preliminary arrangements; and, from the importance of the question, and the utility of the undertaking, the project must be hailed by all with universal satisfaction.

Emigration.—The horrors of a winter voyage do not deter the multitude, who have the means, from emigrating. In some instances, boards of guardians are availing themselves of the emigrating classes of the last Poor Law Amendment Act, to send off able-bodied paupers. A committee of the Lurgan sk board have recommended the expediency of equipping and sending out to Canada three hundred able-bodied paupers from the workhouse of that union. However, the great bulk of the emigration from Ireland is still directed to the United States. A little colony of female pauper emigrants, from the workhouses of Listowel, Ennis, Dingle, and [illegible] unions, left the North Wall, Dublin, on Sunday, for Plymouth, where they are to embark for Australia, in a Government transport. All these poor girls, upwards of one hundred, were comfortably attired and well equipped for the voyage.

The Clearances.—The county of Clare the clearance system is still in vigorous operation, notwithstanding the vast numbers evicted during the last three years. The Limerick and Clare Examiner of Saturday [illegible] of Clondegad." That journal adds—"Their dwellings have been left, with few exceptions, in the words of our correspondent 'hideous heaps of ruins. There were no notices of eviction served in due course by the [illegible] officer. There is no room for the crowd in the Ennis union workhouse. They are denied outdoor relief, on some pretext or other. Women, with infants in their arms, slept out under the freezing cold of the past week; and the floor of the chapel is now the only home of the exterminated people. Their last sanctuary on earth [illegible]."

The Government and the Orangemen.—The charges has been repeated that the Government last year encouraged the Orange processions, and distributed arms amongst the Orangemen. The Evening Post gives an authorized and most unqualified contradiction to those allegations, challenging the parties making them to address a particle of proof in sustain them. That journal says: "No arms, no ammunition, nay, no money to purchase arms or ammunition, was ever distributed by the Government to anybody, Orange or Green, at any time."

Repeal Association.—The usual weekly meeting, conducted by Mr. John O'Connell, was held on Monday. The rent was £30 9s. 0

The Late Conflict at Kilcoghy.— [illegible] at Kilcoghy [illegible] Mr. Gregg, [illegible] Mr. Gregg [illegible] accordingly, went to the [illegible] and, was still [illegible] and [illegible] of the [illegible] Mr. Gregg [illegible] to the King's County Infirmary, Tullamore, on the [illegible]. We further say that John and Joseph Keyes then and there were feloniously, wilfully, and shooting, while the said James Gregg was being killed and murdered." Constable Balfour is not expected to recover.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Grand Exposition of Works of Art and Industry of all Nations.—On Tuesday a meeting was held in the Guildhall, Norwich, at which a deputation of the Society of Arts, consisting of Mr. Scharf, Mr. Grüner, and Mrs. Ibbotson—attended, having been commissioned by his Royal Highness Prince Albert to explain his views respecting the contemplated exhibition of works of art and industry of all nations, and furnished the requisite information accordingly. The council-chamber was quite filled by the more influential inhabitants of the city, including the Mayor (S. Bignold, Esq.), the Sheriff (R. Chamberlin, Esq.), the Marquis of Downe, M.P., Major-General Sir E. J. Harvey, K.C.B., Sir J. P. Boileau, Bart., Edmond Wodehouse, Esq., M.P., the Hon. and Very Rev the Dean, the Rev. A. Bath Power, Rev. J. Crompton, and a large number of other gentlemen. Resolutions to the following effect were agreed to—1st. That the meeting viewed with great satisfaction the interest which his Royal Highness Prince Albert evinced in favour of the arts and manufactures, not only of this country, but of all nations, and desired to express its opinion unanimously in favour of the great Exhibition. 2ndly. That the meeting was satisfied that a Royal Commission was the tribunal the most competent to give general satisfaction in distributing the prizes which such an Exhibition offered. A local committee was then formed, for the purpose of corresponding with the Society of Arts in London, and giving effective co-operation in a great and comprehensive design, proposed to take place in 1851.

The Proposed Chamber of Commerce at Liverpool.—It is stated that the requisition to the Mayor, desiring his worship to call a town's meeting for the purpose of considering the propriety of establishing a Local Chamber of Commerce in Liverpool, is very numerously signed, and that it will be presented in the course of a few days. The proposal is warmly supported by merchants engaged in every trade, and by all political parties without distinction; and, under such auspices, it can hardly fail to arrive at a successful issue.

Parliamentary and Financial Reform.—Meetings of the branch associations continue to be held in the various districts in the country, and in and near the metropolis. On Monday evening these took place at Greenwich, of the usual character. On Tuesday evening a numerous meeting of the inhabitants of Southampton was held at the Victoria Assembly Rooms, when a deputation from the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association, which consisted of Sir Joshua Walmsley, M.P. (President of the Association), B M Willcox, Esq. (one of the members for the borough), and George Thompson, Esq., M.P., gave full explanations of the character, objects, and prospects of the movement, all of which have been already frequently published. They were accompanied by a large number of the most active reformers of the town, amongst whom were the members of the borough (Mr. Richard Andrews, who presided), the Revs. A M'Laren and Thomas Morris, Mr. Murray, Mr. Councillors Clark, Tucker, Aldridge, Ellyett, Payne, Buchan, Morse, and Copeland, T. L. Harman, Esq. Resolutions in accordance with the object of the meeting having been agreed to, a commission was appointed for the formation of a local auxiliary association.

Saffron Walden Agricultural Society.—The annual meeting of this society was held on Saturday, when the ceremony of the distribution of stock, and a number of prizes and rewards were distributed to the poor of the counties of Essex, Herts, and Cambridge. A party of upwards of 120 afterwards dined at the Crown Hotel, Lord Braybrooke in the chair presiding, supported by Earl Nelson, Lord C. Hervey, Dr. Buckland, Dean of Westminster, and many of the local gentry and clergy.

West Surrey Agricultural Association.—On Tuesday the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the West Surrey Agricultural Association took place, at Guildford. The proceedings commenced at nine o'clock in the morning, with a ploughing-match on two fields belonging to Col. Delap and Mr. W Taylor, adjoining the Ripley turnpike-road, which were to be ploughed five inches deep and no more. At eleven o'clock there was lunch on the ground. At one o'clock prizes were given to old and meritorious servants. The judges then gave their awards in the ploughing-match, and the competitors were regaled with a plentiful repast. The prizes varied from £3 down to 10s. The champion stakes were the highest, given by Mr. Currie, M.P.; and, singularly enough, they were won by a gentleman in that gentleman's employ. The members of the Association subsequently dined together at the White Hart Hotel. About 100 gentlemen sat down to dinner. The chair was filled by Mr. Lascoy Arthur Constable, and among the gentlemen present were Lord Egmont, Mr. H. Drummond, M.P.; Mr. J. W. Evelyn, M.P.; Mr. R. D. Mangles, M.P.; Mr. H. Currie, M.P., &c. The speeches were of the ordinary Protectionist character.

The Stock Vale Archives.—(From a Correspondent.)—This newly-established but flourishing club wound up their first season with a grand field-day on Tuesday last, the 23d of October, when prizes were awarded to the following ladies and gentlemen—Miss L. Woodward (first lady), Miss Fisher, Miss Cole, Mr. G. Woodward (Captain), Mr. Creasy (Lieutenant), Mr. Pemberton Talbot, and Mr. G Bird. The day was pleasantly terminated by a ball at the Assembly Rooms, Kidderminster, gallantly given by the Stock Vale Club. The company numbered upwards of 120, and the dancing was kept up until a late hour. Although this club has been but so recently formed, it already can number nearly 100 members; among whom are Lord Ward, Lord Lyttleton, and most of the aristocracy, clergy, and gentry of Kidderminster and its neighborhood. At the last field-day of the club, on the 30th of August, Lord Ward distributed the badges to the most successful shots. The badges are worked in silver, and mounted on crimson and green velvet. In the centre is the motto, "Non sine labore." The initials of the club, with the forester's bugle, the Kidderminster arms, and a fortlated border. They were made by Manning, of Worcester, from a design by Mr. Edward Bradley, of Kidderminster.

Frightful Explosion.—At one o'clock on Saturday morning last a befer explosion of the most fearful description took place at the brewery of Messrs. Hasall, Segar, and Co., Bevirton-bush, Bermondsey. There were on the premises at the time of the accident, Mr. George Segar, a partner in the brewery; Thomas Worthington, and Mr. Langton. The boiler was on the basement-story, and as Mr. Segar was trying the liquor, and the two men filling a sack of malt, the explosion took place. The interior of the building is destroyed; timber, vats, cisterns, &c., thrown about in all directions. The whole of the building which was immediately over the boiler is laid in ruins, and a large cistern, which stood on the upper story, is capsized. The whole of the roof and joisting have all been unroofed, and fourteen cottages which immediately adjoined the brewery have been much damaged. At the time of the accident the inhabitants of these places were in bed, and, aroused from their slumbers, they ran about the streets in a state of nudity, until they found shelter in the houses of their neighbours. One poor fellow, who, with his wife and seven children slept in an attic, was completely buried in the ruins, but fortunately had been blown off. He was injured, but not seriously, and on of his children wounded its leg in descending the staircase. Mr. Segar and the two men were completely buried in the ruins of the building. When the shells began to explore the ruins, they heard Worthington calling out. He was with difficulty dragged from beneath a load of bricks, beams, and utensils. Strange to say, he was very little hurt; but Langton, who was lying close by him, had his shoulder dislocated and his nose cut off. Searching a little farther, one of the officers called out, "Here is a dead man!" "I am not dead," said a faint voice. The officers soon discovered that it was from him the voice proceeded. He had a large portion of his scalp being injured, and various bruises on other parts of his body. He was at once removed, and, with the other men, placed under medical treatment. The scalp on Mr. Segar's head was turned up to the size of a man's hand. The very nine from the building got between the scalp and the skull, but, having been cleaned, he is now progressing favourably.

The Game Laws.—At the Suffolk Quarter Sessions, at Bury, on Tuesday last, a goal report was presented, by which it appeared that the number of persons committed to prison in that locality for offences under the Game-laws, in 1848, was 97, whilst in 1849 the number had increased to 107. Their support in confinement must form a heavy item in the county rates.

SUNDAY LABOUR IN THE POST-OFFICE.

The opposition with which the proposed new regulations in the Post-office have been met in the metropolis, continues still to manifest itself more or less in public meetings.

On Wednesday there was a meeting of the inhabitants of the parish of St. George's, Hanover-square, held on the subject, at the School-rooms, South-street, at which the chair was taken by the Rev. H. Howarth, rector of the [illegible] parish. [illegible] resolution having been passed, a memorial to the Lords of the Treasury on the subject was agreed to—"That this meeting views with the utmost sorrow and disapprobation the recent order for performing ordinary week-day work on Sunday at the General Post-office, without any plea of justifiable necessity, thereby giving countenance, by public authority, to the profanation of the Lord's day."

On the same day a special general meeting of the members of the Friendly Society of Bankers and Merchants was held at the Neva Exchange, Fleet-street, to adopt a memorial to the Lords of the Treasury against the new [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE NAVAL BEHVEY.—THE PROMOTIONS IN HONOUR OF HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO IRELAND.—So far as it affects the navy, the brevet is an insignificant affair. One captain, three commanders, two lieutenants, a master, a surgeon, and a paymaster and purser have been made—most of whom were entitled to their promotion by service long before the present time. It was fully expected that the first lieutenants of the Hogue and Dragon would have obtained their rank.

THE RETIRED LIST.—Several captains on the retired list of 1846 have been recently promoted. They obtain their rank in accordance with the terms proposed in the London Gazette of September 1, 1846, without increase of pay. They are of equal seniority, as captains, with those on the active list; but their commanders' commissions being senior, they succeed to their promotion as retired flag officers before those. By the promotion of retired Rear Admiral Harper, C.B., Capt. James Couch succeeds to the retired pay of twenty shillings per diem.

Major-General W. Jervois, K.H., whose succession to the Good Service Pension of £100 per annum has been lately announced, has obtained the unattached pay of 20s. per diem from the 27th inst.

THE MEDITERRANEAN FLEET.—All sorts of incorrect reports are in circulation in the French, German, and English papers as to the whereabouts and destination of the squadron under the immediate personal command in chief of Vice-Admiral Sir W. Parker, Bart., C.B. One authority places it at Malta; another at Corfu, and a third announces the arrival of a squadron of observation in the Bosphorus and details the number of guns fired as a salute. We may state for the information of our readers, that the squadron consisting of the Caledonia, 120; Hone, 120; Queen, 110; Prince Regent, 90; Powerful, 84; Vengeance, 84; Thetis, 36; Dragon, 6, steam-frigate; Rosamond, 6, steam-sloop. were at Corfu on the 4th inst., and were about to sail for Athens that day. The Odin, 12, steam-frigate, was the only man-of-war sent to Constantinople, and she arrived there with despatches on the 3rd. The Bellerophon, 78, Captain Baynes, C.B., of Leghorn, has been ordered to join Sir W. Parker's squadron at Athens. The gallant Admiral will then have seven sail of the line with him, mounting 692 guns, with nearly 6000 men.—Morning Herald.

THE SITUATION OF TOWN-MAJOR OF DUBLIN.—There are no less than between forty and fifty candidates for the situation of Town-Major of Dublin

REGIMENTAL COLOURS.—It is thought, in consequence of the religious scruples of certain clerical dignitaries in some parts of England, that the worn-out colours of regiments will, as they always be deposited in the chapel of Chelsea Hospital, which is already the receptacle of so many relics of relics.

By a recent order from the Horse Guards, the forage-caps of the sergeants of regiments were declared to be too expensive; and it is ordered that the forage caps for both non-commissioned officers and men shall, in future, be "set up" and prepared for wear by the clothiers and outfitters in exact conformity with a pattern lodged at the Office of Military Boards.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE Houghton Meeting may be said to have brought the legitimate racing season to a close; flat racing, however, is not quite at an end, as we are promised two days at Richmond in the course of the week, and one at Worcester—the latter to be followed by a day's steeple-chasing; nothing else

CURIOSITIES OF BROCKLEY HALL.

A sale by auction of somewhat lengthy character is now in progress at Brockley Hall, late the residence of John Hugh Smyth Figott, Esq.; and as some of the items are of ancient date, and some of historic, or presumed historic interest it is our duty to chronicle the event, and to illustrate a few of the leading Curiosities.

One of our Engravings represents the frame of a pier-glass, magnificently carved, gilt, and evidently the work of a first-rate artist, both as to design and execution. This frame, which formed lot 26 of the sale, once graced the walls of old Buckingham House; but the regal insigma at the top would show it was one of the decorations introduced into the house after it became Royal property. The class was purchased by Mr. Walesby, of Old Bond-street, for £12 12s. Within the frame we have given a view of Brockley Hall, showing its principal front. It has no architectural pretensions, and, in fact, is a tasteless specimen of architecture.

Amongst the rarities are a bed and chair, once the property of the Emperor Napoleon. They are of the peculiar form of such pieces of household furniture introduced at the early part of the present century, and known as the style of the Empire, in which the affectation of classic taste is eminently conspicuous, as is also the squareness of outline in the chairs especially, so distinguishable from the ornate and flowing outline of the styles which prevailed before the Revolution. These meubles were from Malmaison.

The identical chair of the poet Gay is a pleasing relic, and very curious specimen of ingenious adaptation of means to an end, forming not merely a seat, but also a desk for writing on, a cabinet to hold papers, and a complete receptacle for the holding of pens, ink, &c., and at the same time having sconces for candles. The accompanying Illustration shows the originality of these several appliances to produce the above combination. Under the arms of the chair are drawers, with the necessary implements for writing; each drawer turns on a pivot, and has attached to it a brass candlestick. A leaf, or flap of wood, may be raised at pleasure. Under the seat is a drawer for books or paper, and behind it is a secret drawer, in which were found some MSS., and amongst the papers said to have been found in the drawer was a commission appointing a relative of Gay's to a post in the army. The drawer is ingeniously fastened by a small bolt, not perceivable till the larger drawer is removed. The chair is made of very fine-grained dark-coloured mahogany; the seat, back, and arms stuffed, and covered with brown leather, ornamented with brass nails. The chair, considering its antiquity, is in pretty good repair. Some years since, this curious relic was sold among some of the effects of a lady named Williams, niece of the Rev. Joseph Baller, and who, by a previous marriage had been the wife of the Rev. Hugh Fortescue, of Filleigh, near Barnstaple. The families of Fortescue and Baller were, by marriage, related to Gay; his sisters, Catharine Baller and Johanna Fortescue, inheriting his property at his decease. After Mrs. Williams's death, this chair came into possession of Mr. Clarke, of High-street, Barnstaple, and, at his demise, again passed under the auctioneer's hammer.

In another of our Illustrations, a group of furniture, is represented a beautiful chair of ebony, most exquisitely carved, said to have come from Cardinal Wolsey's palace of Esher, in Surrey. This tradition, however, is of very doubtful authenticity. A pair of chairs similar to that engraved realised twenty-four pounds. A settee and high-backed chair, covered in damask, in the same Illustration, are said to have come from Nassby Abbey, and to have belonged to King Charles I. The first portion of their history may be quite correct; the latter, most assuredly, is not so, as the articles bear the stamp of the period of William III. There were several of these chairs in the sale. A carved high-backed chair in the same Engraving represents one of a set of four which tradition says formerly belonged to the celebrated philosopher, Locke; and, in this instance, the popular history is very likely to be correct, as there was not the same temptation to romance respecting the furniture of a philosopher that there would be respecting the furniture and fittings of a mansion once, perhaps, tenanted by the unfortunate Charles I.

A small sepulchural head-rest of ancient Egyptian workmanship is introduced in the foreground of the Illustration; but we must observe, that the head-rest for the sake of more conveniently displaying it, is made considerably larger, in proportion to the chairs than it could to have been.

Amongst other items of the sale, were four state chairs, gilded, of peculiar form; two lions serving, instead of legs, to support the seats; and a double-headed eagle, with outspread wings, forming the back. The quaintness of form of these pieces of furniture, and their unique appearance, made them striking objects in the sale. On the body of the eagle, in the backs of the chairs, is a shield, mantled and helmeted, and bearing a crest; and these armorial insignia were attributed to one Strongbow, Earl of Clare: but, on inquiry, we find that Richard de Clare, surnamed Strongbow, who was Earl of Pembroke, instead of Clare, bore a very different device on his shield, and our suspicion has, therefore, been strengthened, that the chairs belonged to some foreign potentate, probably German. In our opinion, all the chairs are not of the same date of workmanship, though all are equally bold, perhaps coarse, in the style of carving, as two of them were clamped and fastened by iron plates underneath. The gilding, we were given to understand, was a recent piece of ornamentation. Two of these chairs fetched £8 15s.

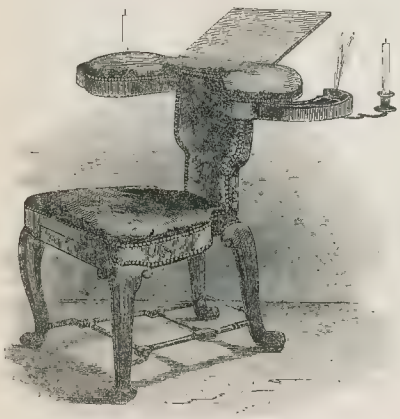
Another Illustration represents the bronze head of Diana, found in Bath many years ago, on a spot where a temple is supposed to have stood: it was formerly in the possession of Mr. Thomas Barker, an artist, at Bath, many of whose pictures are in the collection at Brockley; and before Mr. Barker had it, Mr. Prince Hoare was its possessor. There is a peculiar expression in the features, something of wildness in the eye, the mouth open a little, and showing the teeth above and below; the head is slightly raised; the hair is kept back under a band, except two large locks in the front, which fall back and over the top of the head somewhat like horns. There is a want of finish and rotundity about it which carries some proof of its antiquity, which one is almost inclined to doubt from its wonderful preservation. The piece immediately under the neck is alone—the lower base of white marble.

An antique oval cup with handle and foliage in relief, sculptured from one mass of chalcedony, is also given in our Engraving, in front of the head of Diana. This was once in the collection of Mr. Beckford.

There were many other nic-knacks of different kinds in Mr. Figott's sale, but many were of doubtful importance or character: a curious and antique bronze lot (7), a Minotaur, was purchased by Mr Walesby for £11.

Very few of the pictures were of any great value as works of art; a great number are by an artist of some note in his day, the late Thomas Barker, of Bath.

VIEW OF BROCKLEY HALL.



CHAIR OF THE POET GAY.

ANTIQUE BRONZE HEAD OF DIANA.

ANCIENT CHAIR.

GROUP OF FURNITURE.

John Hunter.—A new Portrait of this celebrated anatomist, and father of modern British Surgery, John Hunter, the munificent founder of the well-known Hunterian Museum, has just appeared, under the auspices of the Royal College of Surgeons. It is a Lithograph executed in Maguire's best style from a drawing by the late Sir Nathaniel Holland, made for Sir Everard Home, and lately presented to the College by his son, Captain Sir E. Home, Bart. Appended to the Portrait is a fac simile of Hunter's autograph, from a letter in the possession of Mr. Stone, the librarian of the College. Persons who are yet able to give an opinion, pronounce the likeness to be excellent. It is published at a low price, to place it within the reach of every member of the medical profession, and every admirer of so great a man as John Hunter.

The Arctic Regions.—Mr. Wyld, of Charing-Cross East, has just opportunely issued a Chart of the North Circumpolar Regions, engraved from the Admiralty surveys. The discoveries of Ross, Parry, Franklins, and Richardson, Beechey, Back, Dean and Simpson, and Rae, are denoted by various colours; and the supposed position of the missing Expeditions is marked. The sketch is appropriately dedicated to Lady Franklin.

The Duke of Bedford is building a set of model cottages, for his labourers, near the entrance of Tavistock. They are constructed on the plan communicated by his Grace to the Royal Agricultural Society some time ago, and will be a credit to the landlord and the estate.

CHETTLE CHURCH, DORSET.

The parish and manor of Chettle lies on the high-road from London, between Salisbury and Dorchester, six miles from Blandford, and forms part of the celebrated Cranbourne Chase. The whole of the parish and manor of Chettle was, for several generations the property of the Chaffin family, but has lately become the property of Edward Castleman, Esq., of Allandale House, Winborne Minster, who has signalized his taking possession by a tasteful act of munificent spirit.

The parish church, which consisted of chancel, nave, tower, and south porch, had, with the exception of the tower, become dilapidated past repair. The chancel was of the oldest date, being of good late Decorated character of the early part of the reign of King Edward III.; the nave appears to have been of the same date, but was so incongruously repaired about the time of the early Stuarts, as to leave little of its original style remaining; the porch being the principal feature spared, although that had lost its gable-cross. The interior, however, had something artistical, in a very finely-carved pulpit of James I.'s time; and the pewing was designed by Sir John Vanbrugh, about the same time that he built the Manor-house of Chettle. This church furniture is good per se, but was out of place in a church of the Decorated period.

The old edifice has been taken down, with the exception of the tower, which was erected just prior to the Reformation, and is very substantial. It will, therefore, be restored, and, with the addition of the high-pointed roof, will tolerably harmonize with the Church (as shown in the Engraving), which is now in course of erection, from the designs and under the superintendence of Messrs. Morris and Hebron, at the sole cost of Mr. Castleman, the owner of the property, and patron of the living.

The new Church will, in plan, comprise a chancel and nave and transepts, of late Decorated, of the same date as the chancel, the best feature of the old church. It will also be built of similar materials, viz. stone and flint, and will be covered with tiles. The inside roof will be open, and of fir stained. The floor of the chancel will be laid with encaustic tiles; several of the windows will be filled with stained glass; and the other interior fittings, as pulpit, font, open sittings, &c., will be in corresponding taste.

CHETTLE CHURCH, DORSET.

The carcase of the building is already in course of erection, by Mr. Barrett stone-mason, of Farnham, near Chettle, and Mr. Bugler, carpenter, of Winborne Minster; Mr. Blake, surveyor, of the latter place, acting as superintendent of the works, under the control of the architects.

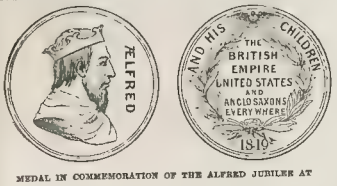
The substance of these details is quoted from a communication to the Architect.

THE ALFRED MEDAL.

The Anglo-Saxon Jubilee, which we announced to be in contemplation, in our Journal of September 8, took place at Wantage, on Thursday, the anniversary of the birth of King Alfred the Great, the present being the thousandth year since that interesting event. The promoters of this historic festival are good men and true in the cause, and were not to be diverted from their joyous purpose. The celebration was very properly to commence with divine service in the parish church, to be followed by addresses and music in the Town Hall; a club procession to King Alfred's Well; distribution of food to the poor of Wantage; a public dinner at the Alfred's Head Inn; and a ball in the evening. The giant of our time, Steam, was to be pressed into the day's service—an ox being roasted whole by aid of the steam-engine; and the Great Western Railway authorities allowed all their trains (save one) to stop at the Faringdon-road station, a short distance from Wantage, the birthplace of the Anglo-Saxon King of a thousand years since.

With each dinner-ticket was given a Medal, struck by Mr. W. J. Taylor, of 33, Little Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn-fields. It is a very creditable specimen of art, and is believed to be the only medal ever struck in honour of our Great King, Alfred.

The portrait on the obverse has been collected from a comparison and a combination of the best authorities, including the rude and widely-varying effigies on coins, the bust at Oxford, and the engraving of Vertue. It exhibits the Royal, philosophic, and philanthropic countenance, deeply imbued with Christian virtue, and bearing the marks of premature age and personal suffering so appropriate to one who is recorded by his biographers to have never lived an hour without pain. An internal cancer is supposed to have been "the thorn in his flesh," which the piety of Asser declares to have been God's messenger of humility to Alfred's greatness. The diadem on the bust is copied from a manuscript illumination of the period, in the British Museum; and the lettering of the name is a fac-simile of that on the Ashmolean jewel.



MEDAL IN COMMEMORATION OF THE ALFRED JUBILEE AT WANTAGE.

The reverse, bearing a continued legend, "and his children" (according both with many ancient instances and our own modern money), shows how, after exactly a thousand years, "The British Empire, United States, and Anglo-Saxons everywhere," within the olive-wreath of peace, and under the hallowing influence of religion, can now all glory in the memory of Alfred, and feel a common brotherhood in commemorating their Father. A second reverse to the Medal, especially designed to promote international amity with our Transatlantic kindred, is in preparation.

The Commemoration will not pass away with the day; for its promoters have pledged themselves to add in a plan for the erection of a Testimonial, at Wantage to the memory of Alfred; and his wisdom is to be reflected in the spirit of our own times—the formation of a Mechanics' Institute.

Among other celebrations was the singing of "The Alfred Jubilee Song," o which the following is a verse:—

Anglo-Saxons! in love are we met,
To honour a name we can never forget.
Father and founder and King of a race
That rules and reforms in every place;
Most of a tree that o'ershadows the earth,
First of a family blest from his birth,
Blest in this stem of their strength and their state,
Alfred the Wise, and the Good, and the Great!

CHORUS.

Hail to his Jubilee Day,
The day of a thousand years!

Discovery of the Remains of an Old Pier in Dover Harbour.—During the past week the workmen in the employ of the harbour authorities have been engaged in removing the remains of an ancient pier, which have been discovered in the interior of the harbour, near what is termed the Hardway, where vessels at low tide undergo repair. By the position of the wooden piles and stonework—the upper extremities of which have been unexpectedly exposed to view by the action of the recent easterly gales, having stripped the vicinity of the Hardway of a large portion of the shingle accumulated there—the pier must have been buried for several centuries under the quay which for many years was the site of the old Dover Castle Hotel and the Government storehouses, and which were removed four or five years ago to make way for the recent enlargement of the harbour.

SCENE FROM "ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA," AT SADLER'S WELLS THEATRE.

SADLER'S WELLS THEATRE.

On Monday the tragedy of "Antony and Cleopatra" was revived. This magnificent play is a masterpiece of dramatic construction with the most difficult of subjects. Our admiration of it will increase if we compare it with Dryden's "All for Love," confessedly written in emulation (and a noble emulation it was) of the divine Shakspeare's. Dryden found it necessary to make Antony a weak man, so weak that, as Mr. Campbell has rightly observed, "any wanton might have seduced him." Shakspeare's Roman required the Egyptian Queen. The Cleopatra of Dryden, also, is even such a woman as his hero needed—no more; but the heroine of Shakspeare is a splendid creature, such as history has suggested to the imagination, such as was suitable to the lofty spirit, whose sense of beauty and taste for luxury had been cultivated into heroism. The persons of this wonderful drama are ideas—of voluptuous sublimity and gorgeous pleasure—gifted with almost divine capacities for enjoyment, having, as it were, the patent of heaven itself for the privilege; clothed gloriously in "barbaric pearl and gold;" and revelling in their own proper Elysium, like spirits delivered from legal restraints, and free to indulge the bent of their genius and the disposition of their natures, without hindrance either from gods or men. To maintain the action at this elevation, and yet to enable it to touch our human sympathies at innumerable points, required the Poet whose myriad-mindedness has been the wonder of philosophers and critics in exact proportion to the competency of their judgment for the due appreciation of the highest creative efforts. We are not surprised that such a work should have proved caviare to the general, public, and that there was a period when, as Campbell records, Dryden's play was infinitely preferred, having been "acted ten times oftener than Shakspeare's," though so decidedly inferior.

The management of this theatre have certainly endeavoured to put this "wonderful tragedy" of "Antony and Cleopatra" on the stage in the spirit in which it was composed. They have done their best to realise the past, and to bring the historic into actual presence. The Egyptian scenes are exceedingly ensemblable; that on board of Pompey's galley, with the banqueting sovereigns of the world as drunk as cobblers, is exceedingly life-like. As it is managed, too, on the boards, it is rendered one of the most picturesque and exciting incidents in the representation. Mr. Phelps, in particular, aded the pictorial, by his well-studied bacchanalian attitudes, some of which were exceedingly fine. We may here mention that Mr. Phelps' make-up of the character of Antony was capital. The illusion was almost perfect; the actor could scarcely be recognised through the disguise. He played the character also with great spirit; neither was it lacking in the higher qualifications of histrionic art. Antony's passion—his infatuation—his absorption of being for and in that of Cleopatra was interpreted "excellent well." It was, indeed, a remarkable triumph over difficulties, and will go far to raise his reputation as an actor, which must increase just in proportion as he succeeds in delivering himself from mere individualities. Such characters as these break up a performer's mannerisms, and do him accordingly infinite good.

A similar effect was produced on Miss Glyn. In this almost impossible character of Cleopatra she put forth new energies, and exhibited a versatility of power which surprised those most acquainted with her style and the scope of her genius. She dared at once at that "infinite variety" of Cleopatra's character which "custom could not stale;" and realised the conception to an almost miraculous extent. She combined grace and dignity—all the fascination of a Vestris with the majesty of a Pasta; she was, as it were, the impersonation at once of the sublime and the beautiful. Critics who before doubted her capacity, were now astonished at the extent of her resources, and the grandeur of the results. Gorgeous in person, in costume, and in her style of action, she moved, the Egyptian Venus, Minerva, Juno—now pleased, now angry—now eloquent, now silent—capricious, and resolved, according to the situation and sentiment to be rendered. Withal she was classical, and her poses severely statuesque. Her death was sublime. With a magnificent smile of triumph, she is, as it were, translated to the shades, there to meet her imperial lover. Altogether, Miss Glyn's performance of Cleopatra is the most superb thing ever witnessed on the modern stage. At the end of the play she was called before the curtain; and, led on by Mr. Phelps, received the well-merited ovation of an over-crowded house.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON, PAST AND PRESENT.

BY THOMAS MILLER.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE SOUTH DISTRICTS OF LONDON DURING THE EPIDEMIC.

We, who have sojourned during the whole of the past summer in the very heart of that district which suffered most severely during the late calamitous visitation, have almost unconsciously gathered materials for one of those gloomy pictures which so few living witnesses survive to paint, and which we hope may never again darken our canvas. We seem like those who, having escaped some perilous shipwreck, sit shuddering on the rock on which they have been thrown their faces buried in their hands, yet unable to shut out the appalling spectacle they beheld, even after it passed away. Fancy still calls up the phantoms amid the white foam, and the tumbling waves as they float by, with pale faces uplifted and beseeching hands; youth and beauty with her long hair unbound, and crisped with the boiling spray, while manly vigour buffets in vain with the billows, until darkness and destruction sweep over all; and we, like the mournful messenger in Job, "only escaped alone to tell thee."

The Land of Death in which we dwelt was Newington, hemmed in by Lambeth, Southwark, Bermondsey, and other gloomy parishes through which the pestilence stalked like a Destroying Angel in the deep shadows of the night, and the open noon of day, infant and every street

> There was nought but man [illegible] cells,
> And sorrow and dismay;
> Where'er we met with burial still,
> And jostled by the way. HOOD

The "Registrar-General" but gives an account of those who died—but marshals up the forces which have joined the ranks of Death—how and where they fell, are briefly touched upon; but a description of the battle ground, with all those little accessories of moving light and shadow which enrich the picture, he leaves to other hands, for they come not within the compass of his grave duties. Though the task is far removed from a pleasant one, it is necessary that we should preserve some record of this eventful season in the pages of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, so that in after-years, when our columns are referred to, a faithful photograph, taken at the true moment of time, may therein be found.

All day long was that sullen bell tolling—from morning to night it scarcely ceased a moment; for as soon as it had rung the knell of another departed spirit, there was a fresh funeral at the churchyard-gate, and again that "ding-dong" pealed mournfully through the sad and sultry atmosphere. Those who were left behind, too ill to join the funeral procession, heard not always the returning footsteps of the muffled mourners, for sometimes Death again entered the house while they were absent; and when they reached home they found another victim ready to be borne to the grave: then they sat down and wept in very despair. Death came no longer as of old, knocking painfully at the door of life, but strode noiselessly in, and, before one was well aware, smote his victim—no one could tell how, for the strong man, who appeared hale and well one hour, was weak and helpless the next, and fell without knowing whence the blow came.

Little children were clothed suddenly in black, almost before they could reconcile themselves to the belief that they had lost their parents Before they could well understand why their father slept so long, or was placed in a dark box, and carried out at the door in such haste, the mother had also ceased to live; and then they began to comprehend their loss, and would fain go to find themselves fatherless, motherless, and destitute. Some of these were so little, that they could but just rep- at their prayers. Never more would they kneel at the feet of that dear, fond mother, as they had done but a night or two before; never more would those eyes beam on them again, or that sweet voice patiently in street them, and, with a smile, repeat the words over and over again, until they knew them all by rote. Alas! they were the other night borne to a strange bed; a strange face bent over them—and, when they rose to kiss it, it turned away. Then the little orphans pressed each other more closely, and wept louder for the loss of their mother. At last, their sobbing subsided, though not until long after they had fallen asleep, pernance on the hard workhouse bed—even those who were before nursed so delicately that the cold wind had never visited their tender cheeks. Many such sudden changes as these have we met with; homes (in which one day happiness and comfort reigned changed on the morrow to the abodes of sorrow, anguish, and naked destitution; or, by the end of the week, empty and closed!

> Life and thought have gone away side by side,
> Leaving door and windows wide;
> Careless tenants they!
> All within is dark as night: in the windows is no light,
> And no murmur at the door, so frequent on its hinge before.
>
> Close the door—the shutters close,
> Or through the windows we shall see
> The nakedness and vacancy
> Of the deserted house TENNYSON.

In some houses, all died; and, after the dilapidated building had been closed a few days, new tenants came in possession, and, in two or three of these changes, the new tenants also perished—the unfortunate landlords never breathing a word about what had befallen the others. The putrid cess-pool and stagnant sewer still yawned and bubbled and steamed in the sunshine, and poisoned all who inhaled the deadly gases; and when but few human beings were left, an investigation took place, and the evil was removed. But several dwellings underfoot just reps the whole of the inhabitants were driven out, and fresh shelter found for them until their wretched dwellings were purified.

So few at first escaped after they were attacked by the malignant and mysterious disease, that you looked upon them as persons who had trodden the confines of another world, and returned from it only to tell the tale, and destined to accomplish some great mission. You gazed on them in awe and wonder. Those in the prime of life, and ruddy with apparent health, fell around you like summer flowers beneath the scythe of the mower. Then medical men of long standing began to drop off: you missed one here, and another there, and, with them, hope at last fled. "They cannot save themselves," exclaimed the terror-stricken populace; "then how can we hope to escape if the disease overtakes us?" Old nurses, who had grown grey in the service of Death, shrank back and shuddered as they heard themselves summoned to attend the sick. Thousands who had the means fled into the country and hastened to the sea-side, where they thought themselves secure; but the wings of the Angel of Death threw a melancholy shadow over the whole land.

Stout-hearted men who had families starved suddenly from their sleep in the dead of night, if they only heard one of their children moaning in its slumber: as matters are at present, they who were dead, have had the thrust into the heart, for they feared that the Destroyer had come—and they knew that he seldom retired without carrying off his victim. In old tavern-parlours, where the same company had assembled for years, the sounds of merriment were no longer heard. Men spoke to one another "with bated breath;" inquiring who was dead, who lay dying; and if some old acquaintance was but a few minutes behind his usual time, they sat gazing on his vacant chair in silence, or perchance one ventured to inquire in a whisper if he had been seen that night. Many shook hands at the tavern-doors, went home, and never met again. Four in the morning was a dreadful hour, many a watcher at doors, and delivering them with no more ceremony or feeling than the postman delivers his letters. The solemn hearse and the dark mourning-coach now moved slowly along, and the dead were borne away to green and peaceful cemeteries, far removed from the dwellings of the living. Nuisances were removed—sewers were cleansed—the abodes of the poor purified, and at last rendered habitable; and then "the plague was stayed."

It seemed as if the winds of Heaven, which had been driven away for want of breathing room, came back again, and flapped their "healing wings" above the homes of mankind; as if they were weary of wandering over the houseless sea, and gladly returned to sweep through the lofty streets and open squares, from which they had been driven by the poison-traps which were set everywhere to destroy them. The sun again gladdened the day, and the round moon walked up the starry steep of Heaven; while the sky bared its blue bosom, and showed that the silvery clouds still slumbered there as tranquilly as if the Destroying Angel had never thrown his shadow betwixt earth and heaven.

Alas! the sun rose upon a shore strown with wrecks, and blackened with the bodies of the dead. If the eye alighted upon the living, it everywhere settled upon a group of mourners. Death had gone like a gleaner through the land, and taken an ear from every field. Where before had stood a bed of flowers, one resting upon and supporting an other, a bare and open patch was left. Death was often, the tallest, around which the rest clung, had withered, and fallen, and died. The place they had once known "would know them no more for ever." The young bride, before the honeymoon had waned, came forth in her widowed weeds. The first-born child came too late into the world to look on the face of his father. Sometimes the husband fell ill, and the other infant had seen the light: the opening rose and the unfolded bud [illegible] the. Respectable families fell from a state of comfort to absolute destitution in a single night, leaving no mark on the steps of the ladder of time, by which men rise or fall, but plunging headlong to the foot of it in a moment. Some had passed many years in faithful servitude, and at last attained the long-coveted promotion. The larger house, so often talked of, was taken; they entered, and so did Death: the father fell, and with him all their hopes for ever perished. Since that day the garden-roller has never been moved, and where the spade was thrust into the ground, when the improvements first commenced, there it rests: perchance the robin may alight upon the handle, and there chant his mournful anthem; but one branch is sawn from the overhanging tree that darkened the drawing-room window, all the rest remain untouched, for the workmen have departed. The merry Christmas so often talked about, will be a melancholy one within these walls. What at another period would have formed a little history of trial, patient endurance, slow change, and long coming misfortune, was now accomplished almost as soon as one could say "It lightens"

None knew whence the Destroyer came, nor in what hidden corner he lurked. The Registrar for the district on Lambeth furnished his return for Walworth, for the week ending Sept. 8, in the following words:—"It (the disease) has spread over the whole district—into almost every street—and taken persons of all classes, from the most respectable to the poorest." Men hunted for it in the unhealthy drain, and endeavoured to destroy the unwholesome vapour: they searched after it in what they drank, and hoped to get rid of it by boiling the water: they impregnated the air with lime, and in every court and alley you passed you inhaled the powerful chloride. Then a change was produced, and the returns of deaths gradually lessened every day, and those who for days and weeks dare not look at a newspaper, for the fear of encountering these dark tables of death, were now eager to see the returns, and congratulate their neighbours on the daily decrease. "From the painless nature of the attack," says the same Registrar, "persons seemed to be unconscious how highly necessary it is that immediate attention should be paid to it." Thousands fell through this neglect, who, if the disease had first made its appearance attended by severe pain, would not have lost a single hour without seeking medical aid. Like a flood that slowly undermines a bank, and which the proprietor regards not when he sees so tiny a current dribbling and oozing through, and scarcely bowing the grass between which it trickles, so came the Destroyer—stole on and undermined the health, undermining the current of life, and eating out the foundations, until there needed but one mighty rush, and all was over beyond recovery, and the work of destruction was completed. A little precaution would have saved thousands of lives in London alone.

Let us, then, agitate for the supply of pure water, and break through the monopolies of water and sewer companies, as we would break down the door of a house to rescue some fellow-creature from the flames that raged within. It rests with ourselves to get rid of these evils; and in every one in a hundred will be foolhardy enough to oppose the sanitary measures which are already in action. To aid these proposed improvements, we deemed it our duty to add to the "Picturesque Sketches of London" a brief but faithful description of the dreadful disease, which has caused almost every street in the metropolis to be hung in mourning.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The extreme fluctuations in Consols during the week have not exceeded one quarter per cent. Consols on Monday opened at 92¼ to ¾, touched 92⅞ (the highest quotation), and have since ranged from 92 to 92⅝ to ¾. Absence of business is the reason assigned for this inactivity; but an indisposition to enter into any extensive speculation until the probability of the Turkish question are better understood is nearer the real cause. Exchequer Bills continue firm, as well as India Bonds, showing a tendency on the part of the public to adopt temporary investments in preference to the more fluctuating class of stocks. Stock have not materially varied, the last prices being, for Bank Stock, 198; Reduced, 90⅞; Consols, 92⅞; New 3½ per Cent. Annuities, 92⅞; Long Annuities to expire Jan. 1860, 9 years, Oct. 10, 1860, 8⅞; 1870, 19 years, Jan. 5, 1860, 8⅝; India Stock, 2[illegible]; India Bonds, £1000, 79 p; Ditto, under £1000, 82 p; Consols for Account, 92⅞; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 42 p

For several years past the different temporary loans of America, slowly aroused to a sense of honesty, have been successively making arrangements for the resumption of their dividends, and gradual repayment of past liabilities. The effect produced on the minds of capitalists has been to restore, in a great measure, the credit of the American name. A rude check has, however, been given to this growing confidence, by the last American mail bringing advices that the State of Alabama had refused to find funds for the payment of the next dividend. The history of the debt is soon told. A few years since, about two millions sterling was borrowed by the state of Alabama (principally in the European market), for the establishment of banks and other purposes, supposed to be beneficial to the state. The banks fall victims to an over-issue of paper; and to the assets arising from the winding-up of their affairs the bondholders have for some years been indebted for their dividends. This source having failed with the last dividend, the attention of the legislature has been directed to the before-cited repudiation is the result. To the uninitiated holders this news will be anything but agreeable, but among the informed upon such affairs the announcement has been looked for since the last dividend. But holders of the bonds will do well to await patiently, and not be induced to sell either now or at a future period, without an offer is made involving no great sacrifice. A class of persons are at present busily employed buying up at an immense discount the bonds of a long since repudiative state. It is strongly suspected some arrangement is about to be made by that state in relation to its debt; but, previously, as much as can be guaranteed of it is being quietly bought up. Let holders of Alabama Bonds then be on the alert. After the lapse of a year or two something of necessity must be done; and those who have not been deluded into selling their bonds for next to nothing will be ultimately rewarded for their patient delay.

Although there was some animation in the Foreign Stocks on Monday, no striking variation in prices is to be remarked. Brazilian is a point higher than last week, but the other securities are generally a fraction lower. The closing list is—Austrian, 5 per Cent., 90¼; Brazilian Bonds, Small, 83½; Equador Bonds, 3, ; Grenada Bonds, 1 per Cent., 16; Ditto, Deferred, 3; Mexican, 5 per Cent., 18⅝, ex Jan. 1850; Ditto, Account, 20⅝; Peruvian Bonds, 4 per Cent., 83; Portuguese 5 per Cents, 83; Russian Bonds, 107; Spanish, 5 per Cent., 1840, 16; Ditto, 3 per Cent., 34; Venezuela Bonds, 2½ per Cent., 24; Ditto, Deferred, 7; Dutch, 2½ per Cent., 53; Ditto, 4 per Cent., 89

There has been great animation in the Share Market during the past week, the jobbers generally changing from bears to bulls. The public, however, have not been inclined to purchase to any extent, nor does it appear probable that, until an effective mode of auditing by a responsible officer is adopted, confidence can be restored. Prices at the close of the week were, for Aberdeen, Preference, ; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 31½; Great Northern, 7⅞, Great Western, 55; Ditto Half Shares, 27; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 10½; Ditto, Fifths, 10½; Ditto, New [illegible]; Ditto, Half Shares, 42; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 21; Lancashire and Yorkshire, Fifths, ½; Ditto, New, Guaranteed 6 per Cent. 12, London, Brighton, and South Coast, 70; Ditto, New, £5, Guaranteed 6 per [illegible]; Ditto, Guaranteed 5 per Cent. 95; London and North-Western, 124; Quarters, 12½; London and South-Western, 29½; Ditto, New, £50, New Scrip, 1848, Pref., 7 per Cent., 6⅝; Midland, 46½; Ditto, Consolidated Preference, 8½; Ditto, Scrip, 3; Ditto, Canada Shares, 8½; Ditto, Birmingham, 6 per Cent., 120; North British, Halves, 4½; Ditto, Thirds, ; North Staffordshire, 8; Reading, Guilford, and Reigate, 15½; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, ; Ditto, Class B, 3½; Ditto, Quarter Shares, Guaranteed, 10; South-Eastern, 18; Ditto, Scrip, No. 4, 6½; South Wales, 15½; Wear Tyne, Six per Cent., Guaranteed, 2½; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 17½; Ditto, [illegible] Ditto, 6, S.E. Preference, 9½; York and North Midland, Quarters, 12½; London and South-Western, 29½; Ditto, New, £50, Anglo Italian, late Italian and A strazly, 4; Bolognese and Ancona, 5½; East India., 3½; Northern of I ..., 3½ dis.; Orleans and Bordeaux, 4½; Paris and Rouen, 20; Paris and Strasbourg .. 1½; Rouen and Havre, 9½; Sambre and Meuse, 1½

SATURDAY MORNING.—The English Market was buoyant yesterday, a report being credited that Russia had withdrawn its demands upon Turkey. Consols opened at 92¼ to ¾, and worked up to 92⅝ to ¾, the current quotations for money and time. The Foreign and Share Markets were also more active, but the alteral on in prices was not material.

STRANGE VISITOR AT A BALL.—In the middle of the dancing at the long-wood hunt ball, at Perth, a rat, charmed by the music, came down the chimney, and took his stand in the centre of the room: ladies screamed in pas dismay, and gentlemen looked queer as the intruder, apparently unconcerned, gazed at the frightened beauties who had preceded from the parlour. "Fetch a terrier, close the door," said Sir George Musgrave, "and let us have a hunt." A terrier was brought in, and a fine-rate chase followed; but, unfortunately, the chimney was left open, and the game escaped.—Carlisle Patriot.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—A decided increase has taken place in the arrivals of English wheat up to our market this week, coastwise, as well as by land carriage. The show of samples here to-day, however, was not large, but fully equal to the demand, as the attendance of both town and country buyers was limited. Selected parcels of both red and white were in moderate request, at about Monday's quotations. In the middling and inferior kinds very few transactions have occurred, and we have no actual rise to notice in value. From abroad we have received 3683 quarters of wheat, chiefly from Dantzig. For most descriptions the demand was in a sluggish state, at barely stationary prices. In floating cargoes no sales. Malting barley hung on hand. The rate may be attributed to the low prices at which oats may be selling. Grinding qualities supported late prices. The supply of malt was not large. All kinds of beans are still nearly stationary. From Ireland 6030 quarters of oats have come in this week. The supply from other parts is small. Selected samples were steady, at full prices. In other qualities were rather easier. Peas, grey, Indian corn, and flour as on Monday.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 3180; barley, 4310; malt, 3490; oats, 1360; flour, 9040; Irish: oats, 6030. Foreign: wheat, 3680; barley, 3030; malt, —; oats, 1460 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 40s to 44s; ditto, white, 44s to 50s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 40s to 42s; ditto, white, 44s to 48s; rye, 30s to 32s; barley, 22s to 24s; distilling ditto, 26s to 27s; malting ditto, —s to —s; Chevalier, 46s to 48s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire ditto, 46s to 50s; grey peas, 24s to 25s; Tavistal and Cork, Mess, 34s to 37s; ditto, white, 34s to 36s; Waterford, 34s to 36s; ditto, old, 36s to 38s; grey pease, 24s to 28s; pigeon ditto, 30s to 36s; white, 37s to 40s; tick beans, 28s to 32s; ditto, old, 30s to 34s; grey pease, 24s to 28s; pigeon ditto, 30s to 36s; white, 37s to 40s; tick beans, 28s to 32s; ditto, old, 30s to 34s; grey peas

NEW BOOKS, &c.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "JANE EYRE."
Now ready, in 3 vols., post 8vo., price £1 11s 6d. cloth,
SHIRLEY. By CURRER BELL.
Author of "Jane Eyre."
THOMAS TEGG, 73, Cheapside, and Co. Clapham Rise.

In a handsome 1 vol 8vo. Rev. price 9s cloth.
GOETHE'S HERMAN and DOROTHEA:
A Tale of the French Revolution. Translated into English Hexameters, by CHARLES BOYLAN.
"In Goethe's portraitures may shine out more conspicuously in some of his other favorite; but in none can they so collected into a focus."—W. Von Humboldt.
London: W. H. SMITH and SON, 136, Strand; and all Booksellers.

With the November Magazine, 1s. 6d. plain, 2s. 6d. coloured (6d extra, postage free),
GUY FAUX; a Squib, seven feet long, manufactured by HORACE MAYHEW and PERCY CRUIKSHANK Grandson of Cruikshank, with Twenty Pictures from private views of English History, taken more than 200 years ago.
"This Little Squib should be in the hands of every member of the rising generation."—Evening paper.
Published by [illegible]

THE NEW HISTORICAL ROMANCE.
Now ready, in 3 vols. (Post 8vo.),
THE MAID of ORLEANS:
A Romantic Chronicle.
By the Author of "Whiteboy," "Queen Tudor," &c.
Also just published, in 3 vols.,
THE OLD WORLD and the NEW. By Mrs. TROLLOPE
"A very clever novel, presenting, in marked contrast, the Old World and the New, each in its best and worst aspect of which we can conceive."—Morning Post
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

This day is published, price One Shilling,
INSTRUCTIONS in the ART of LANDSCAPE PAINTING in OIL COLOURS, containing clear and practicable Instructions for the Young Artist and Amateur.
WINSOR and NEWTON, 38, Rathbone-place.

SEA WEEDS.—Instructions to Find, Preserve, and Classify them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

WAXEN FLOWERS.—Instructions how to Model them, by a Practical Botanist, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.—London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

CHILBLAINS.—Their PREVENTION and CURE, the truthful and Local Treatment; with all the approved MEDICAL and HOUSEHOLD REMEDIES, will appear in No. 61, of the FAMILY FRIEND, for NOVEMBER, price 2d.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN; and all Booksellers.

WASHING WITHOUT RUBBING the CLOTHES.—Mr. Twelvetree's Expeditious Method of Washing Without Hard Labour, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

MRS. WARREN'S SUPERB DESIGNS in FANCY WORK, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

CHESS.—MATCHES PLAYED BY HERR HARRWITZ v. MEMBERS OF PROVINCIAL CHESS CLUBS, with [illegible] PARIS CHESS CLUB, [illegible] DEPARTMENT OF THE CHESS CLUB, [illegible]
London [illegible]

THE FIRST TEN NUMBERS of the FAMILY FRIEND, constituting THREE ALTERED and TWENTY PAGES, Beautifully Printed and Wrappered, price 2d each, or 1s for the whole.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN and all Booksellers.

ELIZA COOK'S JOURNAL.—VOLUME [illegible] PRICE [illegible]
Dr. Warren, One Shilling each.
The First Volume of the Journal is now completed, and the Proprietor takes this opportunity to express her sense of the honourable and coveted position in which a generous public has placed it.
The Work [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
stamped for first sitting at a post.
Published in Weekly Numbers, price 1d., and in Monthly Parts, by J. O. CLARKE, 3, Raquet-court, Fleet-street.

Super-royal 32mo, purple cloth, gilt edges, price 2s.,
LONGFELLOW'S POEMS: a PILGRIMAGE beyond the Sea: forming Vol. 1 of CLARKE'S CABINET LIBRARY of CHOICE READING. [illegible]
Post 8vo. [illegible]
2. THE LEGENDS AND LYRICS OF LAMARTINE: 3. THE BALL-ROOM MANUAL; 4. ENGLISH SONGS.
London: H. G. CLARKE and Co., 4, Exeter Change.

SLATER'S SHILLING SERIES AND HOME LIBRARY.
THE AMBER WITCH, by Meinhold, author of the Persecutes on Now 1, in "Slater's Shilling Series," also, Lenore Low's Relfry of Bruges, and other Poems, Emerson's Orations, Longfellow's Kavanagh, Lamartine's Raphael, Longfellow's Evangeline, Longfellow's Hyperion, Beckford's Vathek, Anderson's Twelve Essays, 1 Vol., seven cloth, gilt, is each. Also, uniform, a complete edition of Bremer's Novels, in Shilling Volumes, now ready.—Now ready, vol. 1, The President's Daughters, The Twins, The Home, 2 vols., price 2s. Also, Family Secrets, by Mrs. Gore, and Sketches, by T. S. Arthur, and Pauline, by Dumas, 1 vol., fancy covers, 6d each.
GEORGE SLATER, 324, Strand.

THE LEGIONS of PUBLICATIONS daily issuing from the press have caused it almost to [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[

GREAT FIRE IN LOWER THAMES-STREET, ON TUESDAY EVENING.

(Continued from page 280.)

three sons and their wives, and 1000 soldiers. There are, of course, variations in the different accounts; the strongest antiquarian telescope is deficient in defining powers, when directed towards objects much less remote than this; but whether we believe that Partholanus discovered Ireland an uninhabited land, or that he had to fight a battle with some previous occupants, or have doubts upon many other points, we cannot fail, on examination, to recognise a wonderful unanimity with regard to his taking up his abode on the "small island near the mouth of the Erne."

The island took the name of Innis-Saimar, and the river that of Saimar, which it anciently bore, from a favourite dog of Partholanus, as we are told by the traditions. Landing on it hastily one evening in a transport of furious jealousy, his dog came bounding down the rocks and fawned upon him, when, in his passion, he struck the animal dead. Probably he wished to reach his tent in secrecy, and feared that the noise of the dog would betray him. We may trust that he discovered his suspicions to have been false, since he recovered sufficient gentleness to feel remorse for the death of his four-footed friend, and, burying his body in the island, called it Innis-Saimar, in memory of him—perhaps when he was quitting it for Howth, as he did after a residence of, it is believed, some years.

It has been an agreeable piece of musing to the present individual, on the green banks of this harbour, when twilight seemed to bring ancient times back upon the scene like a grey shadow, to fancy Partholan, and his sons and daughters and followers, in their Greek ships, rowing along the strange shore, with the lonely sun looking his last at them, over the level rim of the Atlantic. Calm is the weather, and calm the Bar (or, then, the ever-shifting sand may have stood ranged on each side of a smooth deep channel). They enter the landlocked harbour; great woods cover the sloping hills to the water's edge; above them hangs a mountain outline, faint purple in the yellow evening light; the monotonous roar of falling water sounds through the solitude; and now and again a springing fish leaves circles in the stream, dimpling the rosy reflex of the clouds. Now they moor their ships, and pitch the tent of their King of Men (but Homer will not be born for centuries to come) upon the grassy level that crowns a small island in the stream. His family and his guards are with him, the rest encamp upon the shore of the river, with fires lighted, and watches set against the wild beasts and other dangers of the unknown land:—

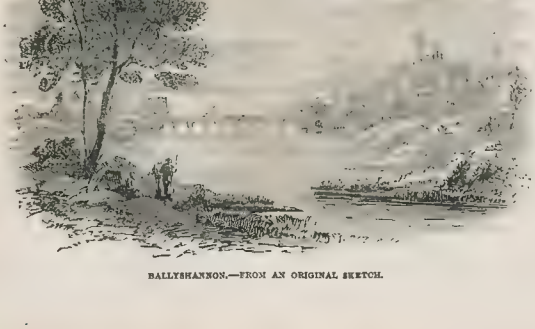
> The lights begin to twinkle from the rocks;
> The long day wanes: the slow moon climbs; the deep
> Moans round with many voices

For the Atlantic is apt to get up at nightfall, and a westerly breeze, too, sufficient, probably, to send the poetic muser home very fast, with the consciousness of being late for tea.

Much else is there in this neighbourhood both for lovers of the picturesque and for friends of the historical, about which at present no more can be said. It is trusted, however, that enough has been hinted at to prove Ballyshannon a place worthy of notice and of illustration.

W. A.

In the Sketch, the Fish-house upon Innis-Saimar may be seen peeping up behind the bridge, towards the centre.



BALLYSHANNON.—FROM AN ORIGINAL SKETCH.

GREAT FIRE IN THE CITY.

On Tuesday evening last, between five and six o'clock, a fire, attended with great destruction of property, occurred in the City.

The premises in which the disaster commenced were in the occupation of Messrs. Bains, Brothers, and Co., wholesale druggists. The buildings had a large frontage in King's Head-court, Fish-street-hill, and extended backwards into Lower Thames-street, immediately facing St. Magnus' Church. Owing, however, to the very combustible nature of the stock in trade on the premises, the flames travelled with unusual rapidity, so that in the space of a very few minutes the fire had gained possession of the whole range of buildings, and flames rushed out of the various windows in King's Head-court, as well as through the different apertures in the premises in Thames-street. The flames at that period extended almost as far as St. Magnus' Church in one direction, whilst, in the other, house after house in King's Head-court became ignited, either at the backs, fronts, or roofs, so that the reflection of the flames could be seen from miles distant. This caused the engines of the parish, of Messrs. Calvert, the brewers, the London Brigade, and West of England Office, to start to the scene of conflagration; upon reaching which, not only were the premises in which the calamity occurred found to be completely enveloped in flames, but sundry smart explosions were continually occurring, to the alarm of all present.

The damage done by this disastrous event must, of course be very considerable; for, besides the great consumption of property at Messrs. Bains's premises, about thirteen other houses are severely injured. Amongst the number are those of Mr. Vlaw, plumber, of No. 9, King's-head-court; Mr. Connette butcher, 35, Fish-street-hill; Mr. Rouse and Mr. Mills, fish salesmen in King's-head-court; Mr. Baker, greengrocer; Mr. Barber, basket-maker, in King's-head-court; the back of the offices belonging to the Margate and Ramsgate Steam Packet Company; Francia's Coffee-rooms, in Thames-street; Messrs. Scully, the wholesale cheesemonger; and Mr. Jones's beer-shop, 193, Thames-street. The fire was not completely extinguished until after one o'clock. At the time of the misfortune there were upwards of 250 gallons of spirits of wine and tinctures in the place, besides an immense quantity of naphtha, and other equally inflammable articles, which will in some measure account for the rapid progress of the flames. The premises of Messrs. Bains and Co., independently of extending from Thames-street into King's-head-court, were nearly fifty feet high, and comprised six floors, each of which was stored with oils, spirits, and drugs. The moment the flames reached the carboys filled with spirits of nitre and naphtha, they exploded with a fearful noise; and then the fire extended both upwards and downwards with the greatest impetuosity.

The fire originated in a clerk pouring some spirits of nitre from one jar into another, the fumes or splashing of the nitre being ignited by a lamp which was near

Our Engraving was sketched when the conflagration was at its most destructive height; and when the vast body of flames threw their glare upon the tower of St. Magnus Church with such vivid and brilliant effect as to show the minutest details of the architecture.

CHOPIN.

One of the greatest celebrities of this musical epoch has just expired in Paris Chopin is no more. At a matinée de salon in the Batignolles, on the 17th inst., this famed pianist and composer died in the arms of one of his devoted pupils, surrounded by his intimate friends, and in the presence of a sister, who had arrived expressly from Poland to be present at his last moments, and to offer the consolation which sisterly affection prompted to the dying exiled musician. Chopin was only 39 years of age, having been born at Zelazowavala, near Warsaw, in 1810. The rudiments of the piano were first taught Frederick Francis Chopin by an old Bohemian professor; but the precocious genius of the boy-pianist soon distanced the master's tuition Elsner, of the Warsaw Conservatoire, instructing him in counterpoint and composition.

Chopin, whilst a mere youth, was in the habit of travelling to the principal capitals in Germany, to listen to the most celebrated players; and it was from the examination of the opposite schools of pianoforte composition—such as those of Clementi, Dussek, Mozart, Beethoven, Hummel, Czerny, &c.—that Chopin conceived his peculiarly original style, which was subsequently imitated and carried out by Thalberg, Liszt, Döhler, Dreyschock, Wolff, Hensell, Heller, Rosenheim, and other disciples of the modern romantic school, of which Chopin was the head and creator. In the writings, however, of Chopin, there exists a poetical and intellectual power and inspiration, far surpassing his followers and competitors. There is a mystic beauty, a delicate pathos, a playful fancy, a flow of melody, and a rich variety of harmony in Chopin's compositions, which stamp them with peculiarly his own characteristics. Replete with depth of thought and subtlety, there is, however, no doubt that ordinarily instructed amateurs are dismayed at the difficulties in his works. It requires long-fingered pianists to conquer the difficult extensions of twelfths; and nothing but first-rate mechanism can manage Chopin's flashy and brilliant arpeggi. The purists will also shake their heads at his peculiar system of harmony, and the crudeness of certain modulations will be particularly specified by adverse critics.

The decided originality and marked individuality of Chopin's genius were manifested particularly in his season in 1831 at Munich and Vienna, having been driven from his native land by her political misfortunes. It was at the close of 1831 that Chopin was first heard in Paris, where he created an extraordinary sensation. His first grand concerto in E minor, dedicated to Kalkbrenner, Op. 11, and his second in F minor, dedicated to Mrs. Anderson, Op. 21, a grand sonata in B flat minor, and a sonata for piano and violoncello, are about the only works which Chopin has left of the conventional classical school; and even in these are the original types of his style in the combination of novel and curious passages in three and four distinct parts. It has been a great misfortune for art, that Chopin had no artistic ambition. He was described by De Balzac as being less a musician than a susceptible soul, to be in contact with which was irresistibly sympathetic. Chopin shunned public performances. His delight was to have around him a circle of musicians and pupils, who would listen to his ravishing strains, as he sat extemporising and inspired at the piano—his fragile form, and attenuated but expressive face, individualising, as it were, the physiognomy of his talent, and looking more like a spirit of another sphere than an earthly pianist. We have seen thus collected around him the greatest musicians of the age, listening enraptured at his marvellous ideas, executed with a manual dexterity which has never been approached. His nocturnes, masurkas, ballades, scherzos, waltzes, polonaises, preludes, studies, rondos, tarantelles, barcarolles, &c., are the remarkable works which he has left. He never composed to order—that is, by treaty with a publisher—in his life. He was one of the most modest and retiring of men, and it was with the utmost persuasion he could be induced to give, once during a season, a matinée musicale; but when he did, it was an event; the prices were always high and even then were at a premium. The warm welcome and kind instructions he gave to the rising student, will be gratefully recollected by the young aspirants for fame. His had for years wretched health: the consumptive hue was on his pallid visage He visited London last season, but he was only heard at private concerts, at the houses of the Earl of Falmouth and Mrs. Sartoris (Miss Adelaide Kemble). His second concerto in F minor was performed at the Philharmonic Society, in April, 1843, by Mdme. Dulcken, but the 40-hand dexterous power required for the effective execution of his works seems to have dismayed pianists from attempting them Liszt, indeed, was of opinion that only Chopin himself could play many of his pieces, not merely from their elaborate intricacies, but from the absolute necessity imposed on the executant of having an unparalleled legato quality to render intelligible Chopin's subtle thoughts. Be this as it may, those amateurs who have heard Chopin perform his own compositions will never forget his wonderful skill and truly poetic touch. He has been styled the Ariel of the piano; but he was also its Prospero—a mighty magician, inventing imagery, flowing like an impetuous torrent, whilst his hands were a tornado aggregating the subjects and investing them with piquant and picturesque colouring, alternately pathetic and gay, as his fancy dictated.

CHOPIN.

London: Printed and published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand aforesaid.—Saturday, October 27, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 397.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

THE BLESSINGS OF COAL.

WHEN a Londoner visits Paris for the first time, he is not only delighted with the change of manners, and the novelty o. surrounding circumstances, but his eye is charmed with the purity of the atmosphere, the whiteness of the exterior of all public buildings, the sharpness of outline even in distant objects, and the distinct beauty of the whole landscape. He inquires the reason, and is nformed that Paris burns wood. When a Parisian visits London, very different is the spectacle that presents itself. A dense cloud—a perpetual canopy of gloom—hangs over the city. He stands upon Waterloo-bridge, and sees the distant churches looming through the murky air—rather hinting at than exposing their own forms and semblances: he sees, or half sees, the noble dome of St. Paul's, and probably the glittering cross that surmounts it; but the church itself—that foundation upon which the dome must rest, if it be not, like a balloon, supported in mid-air by a buoyant gas—is invisible to his sight. If he approach the noble church itself, and place himself in tangible proximity with it, in order to admire its magnificence, he beholds it blackened and encrusted with a hard mixture or cement of smoke, cobwebs, and rain. The houses in most of the streets are of the same dingy hue: remote edifices are all but invisible; and objects of close proximity have lost that sharp, clear, and well-defined outline to which his eye has been accustomed in his own more brilliant and more beautiful capital. A French poet, struck with the perpetual gloom of London, and feeling upon him a slight touch of the fabulous melancholy of the place, exclaimed that it was an immense mass of dark confusion, from the midst of which, tall chimneys—

> Clochers de l'industrie,
> Ouvrent toujours la gueule et de leurs ventres chauds
> Exhalent dans les airs la fumée à grands flots.
> Puis un ciel tourmenté, nuage sur nuage;
> Le soleil comme un mort, le drap sur le visage,
> On parfois dans les flots d'un air empoisonné
> Montrant comme un mineur son front tout charbonné.

The Parisian, surprised, and possibly disgusted, asks the reason of the gloom of our renowned city, and is informed that its two millions of inhabitants burn coal.

Yet the Londoner, although he may sometimes joke at the atmosphere of London, and be very glad to get out of it, at all convenient opportunities, to inhale a purer and more invigorating air, would not like to change circumstances with the Parisian. Happy is it for us in London that we have coal to burn, and that, like the Parisians, we are not reduced to the sad extremity of burning wood. Though we are obliged to pay an exorbitant price for our coal, the price paid by the Parisians for their scanty supplies of wood is fearful to reflect upon by a Londoner of moderate means, to whom the sight of a comfortable blaze is in itself a great luxury, but to whom, in our climate, a good fire is one of the chief necessaries of existence. Nor is the domestic the only evil consequent upon the absence of coal, and the scarcity of less valuable fuel. Paris, that now only ministers by its small trade to the luxuries of the rich, might, if, like London or Glasgow, it had been well supplied with coal, have become a metropolis with a thousand branches of trade and commerce, supplying the necessities of the world. To understand the full value of coal, we have but to fancy what our condition would be if we were deprived of it. Good fires would be the expensive luxuries of the wealthy. The beautiful gas with which our thoroughfares are so brilliantly illuminated would be too expensive for common use; and the miserable oil-lamps of our fathers and grandfathers, or the still more miserable cressets of our remoter ancestors, borne about the streets at the end of poles, would supersede it. Manufactured articles would become dear; trade and commerce would decline; steam-boats would cease to ply; railway-trains would cease to dart through the length and over the breadth of the land; we should relapse into our old habits, and become a slow, a poor, an unenterprising, and an ignorant people. It is, indeed, a happy thing for Great Britain that her coal-fields are all but inexhaustible; and, whatever the condition of humanity may be in the year of grace 2850, there is coal enough in the bowels of England and Scotland to last us comfortably until that time.

There is one great drawback to the use of coal—it smokes. But that is not the fault of the coal; it is attributable entirely to our ignorance, and daily tells us, as plainly as any natural evil can speak to the mind of man, that we should exercise our ingenuity, and devise some means by which we may consume it, and turn the daily waste of material into a daily profit. An over-zealous advocate of temperance, who objects both to the use and the abuse of fermented liquors, has made a calculation that every year in England there is consumed a quantity of intoxicating liquors sufficient to make a river 3 feet deep, 30 feet wide, and 168 miles long. We wish some statist, fond of figures, would calculate for us the weight and value of the coal, that, in the shape of smoke, we annually pour out to contaminate the atmosphere. We believe the money value would be startling. There can be little doubt, however, that, sooner or later, science will accomplish this most valuable task; and that London will be crowned of the smoky crown which at present proclaims her, by the most disagreeable of evidences, to be the Queen of Trade, Commerce, and Manufactures—the most industrious though the most dingy of cities.

ROYAL VISIT TO THE CITY.—THE EMBARKATION AT WHITEHALL STAIRS.—(SEE PAGE 292.)

But, while we are upon the subject of coal, we cannot pass over in silence the injustice of the monopoly which the small district known as the City of London enjoys, to the detriment of the large districts which form the metropolis. The tax levied upon all coal entering the port of London for purposes exclusively those of the Corporation is a wrong perpetrated upon Westminster, Marylebone, the Tower Hamlets, Southwark, Lambeth, Finsbury, and all the metropolitan boroughs, many of them larger and more populous than the City itself. Mr. M'Culloch, in his "Commercial Dictionary," gives the following account of the origin of the civic iniquity:—

> It might have been supposed—considering that coal is, in this country, a prime necessary of life, and by far the most important of all the instruments of manufacturing industry—that it would have been exempted from every species of tax; and that every possible facility would have been given for its conveyance from the mines to the districts in the south of England, and other places in want of it. But such has not been the case. The coal trade of Great Britain was, for more than a century and a half, subject to the most oppressive regulations. From a very early period, the Corporation had undertaken the task of weighing and measuring the coal brought to London, and had been accustomed to charge 8d. a ton for their trouble. In 1613, the power to make this charge was confirmed to the City by Royal charter, it being at the same time ordered that no coal should be unladen from any vessel till the Mayor and Officers have. The right to charge this sum according to the chaldron of coal has since been confirmed to the City by Act of Parliament; and, as the labouring meters, notwithstanding they have been very well paid, have received only 2d. out of the 8d., the balance of 3d. per chaldron, which produces about £300,000 a year, went to the City treasury.
>
> But, besides the above, duties for civic purposes have been laid on the coal imported into London from the reign of Charles II. downwards. They were originally imposed in 1667, after the Great Fire, to assist in the rebuilding of churches and other public edifices; and have ever since been continued, to enable the Corporation to execute improvements in the City; though it is probable most of our readers will be inclined to think that few improvements could be so great, as a reduction in the price of so very important an article as coal.

It is somewhat too hard upon the people of all that immense district which forms the metropolis of Great Britain, but which is not included within the limits of the ancient city, that they should pay a tax upon coals, enhancing the price of this prime necessary of life fifteen, twenty, or even thirty per cent., in order that once in two or three centuries the old city may build a church, or a bridge, or widen a thoroughfare. The new Coal Exchange, looked upon in this light, becomes a palace of monopoly. It is high time that we should have free trade in fuel as well as in bread; and that the Corporation of London, which has so much money to spend in feasting, should pay for its own improvements, and cease to levy this shameful tax upon the firesides of the poor and the struggling.

But we must not wander farther from the Royal Visit to the City. The opening of the New Coal Exchange was a ceremony to which a people like the English did well to invite the Sovereign and her family, and which the Sovereign did well to honour. It was a matter of regret—the only one connected with the circumstance—that the indisposition of her Majesty prevented her from taking part with the citizens of London upon the occasion; but her illustrious consort, accompanied by the heir of England and the Princess Royal, resulted in the most interesting manner, by their presence, that the Royalty of Great Britain sympathizes with the industrial pursuits of the people, and fully recognizes those homely, but great virtues of the national character, which make this small island an example to the world. The address of the Corporation of London to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, which was read by the Recorder, did no more than justice to the importance of the occasion which had brought the splendid pageant from Whitehall to the dingy purlieus of the ancient London. "When with the purposes of this Exchange," said the document, "are associated the creation and increase of commerce and manufactures, and the naval superiority of this kingdom—when the essential article of coal ministers by appliances innumerable to the wants and prosperity of millions—illuminates our houses, streets, and manufactories—when every metal at the forge is obedient to the fire it feeds—whilst it commands as its agent and its instrument the mighty power of steam—it became the wisdom and accorded with the enlightened beneficence of her Majesty the Queen to regard this edifice with the favour and consideration ever graciously extended by her Majesty to objects of national importance."

The Prince, in his reply, touched but slightly upon the importance of the coal trade; but the allusion to the Prince of Wales, the expression of the hope that he might be regarded with those feelings of popular affection which have at all times been the best security of the Throne, and the introduction of the young Prince to the trading and civic magnates of London upon an occasion which was purely commercial, sufficiently testified the sympathies of her Majesty and Prince Albert in the industrial energy and enterprise of the people. The whole pageant was a tribute to the arts of peace—the best and indeed only source of the prosperity of nations; a tribute not the less significant from the presence of the most illustrious soldier and greatest peace-maker in the world—the Duke of Wellington.

Though not very intimately connected with the subject, we can scarcely avoid referring to the Peace Congress Meeting, at Exeter Hall, on the same evening. The whole tendencies of the British mind at the present time are more pacific than ever they were at any previous period in our history. Whether we consider the encouragement given, both by word and deed, by the most illustrious persons in the realm, to the useful arts and sciences, which require peace in order to flourish—or whether we look at the temper of the people, as expressed by the doings of the men who cement peace by their trade and industry, or only hear of it as expressed by the speeches of those who have joined the new peace crusade, which is to convert our swords into pruning-hooks, it is impossible not to see that peace with the whole world, and trade with whomsoever we can procure it, is the occult or avowed necessity and chief desire of the British people.

USE OF COLOURED GLASS TO ASSIST THE VIEW IN FOGS.—The following curious observation was made by M. Luvini, of Turin, in a letter to the editor of L'Institut, [illegible]. If it be verified, it may prove to be of importance to geodetical operations, as well as in observations at sea:—"When there is a fog between two corresponding stations, so that the one station can with difficulty be seen from the other if the observer passes a coloured glass between his eye and the eyepiece of his telescope, the effect of the fog is very sensibly diminished—so that frequently the signals from the other station can be very plainly perceived, when, without the coloured glass, the station itself could not be seen. The different colours do not all produce this effect in the same degree. The red seems the most proper for the experiment. Those who have good sight prefer the dark red: those who are short-sighted like light red better. The explanation of this effect seems to depend upon the fact that the white colour of the fog strikes too powerfully upon the organ of sight—especially if the glass have a somewhat large field. On the contrary, by placing a coloured glass between [illegible] the observer only the red rays of the light [illegible] are transmitted by the coloured glass, which suffers less. It, consequently, distinguishes better the outlines of the object observed.—Mechanics' Magazine.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Roman question has produced a change of Ministry at Paris. The policy recommended by adoption by France with respect to the affairs of the Papal kingdom—as sketched in the celebrated and famous letter of General Oudinot to M. Ney, and as indicated in M. Thiers' report—presented features so essentially different, that, when M. Odillon Barrot and his colleagues, in the late debate on the subject, acquiesced in (rather than formally assented to) M. Thiers' views, the throwing over, though in the most offensive way possible, the ex-[illegible] President it was only natural to expect that Louis Napoleon would effect a modification of the Ministry, which should render the Cabinet more in accord with his own views; and, accordingly, on the first two days of the week, rumours were rife in Paris of an approaching change of Ministry.

The resignation of M. de Fallous—though in no way connected with the matter, as it arose solely from the extremely perilous state of its health—helped to fan the various rumours, which, however, were shown to be not without foundation on Wednesday; for, on that afternoon, the President of the Republic communicated to M. Dupin (the President of the Legislative Assembly) the fact of his having dismissed the Ministry. The communication was accompanied with the following message, which fully sets forth his reasons for that step. M. Dupin read it to the Assembly:—

> Monsieur le President,—Under the grave circumstances in which we are placed, the accord which ought to reign amongst the different bodies of the State cannot be maintained unless by the existence of a mutual confidence, and unless they explain themselves sincerely to each other.
>
> In order to give an example of that sincerity, I come forward now to state the reasons which have determined me to change the Ministry, and to separate myself from men whose eminent services I am well pleased to proclaim, and to whom I owe friendship and gratitude.
>
> In order to strengthen Republic, undermined by slowly from so many sides; to ensure order more efficiently than has been done up to the present time; to maintain abroad the name of France at the elevation of her renown, men are needed who, animated by a pure devotedness, comprehend the necessity of the single direction of a firm character, and of a clearly defined policy, which does not compromise power by any hesitation, or, in a word, whose minds are so much filled with the conviction of my peculiar responsibility as of their own, and of the necessity of action as well as words. (Sensation.)
>
> For nearly a year I have given many proofs of self-denial, in order that there might be no misunderstanding with regard to my real sentiments. Without rancour against any individual or against any party, I have sought to rally men of honest intentions to the service of power, but without obtaining the happy result which I expected from that arrangement. In place of effacing a fusion of different shades of opinion, I only arrived at a neutralization of force.
>
> The unity of views and intentions was interfered with, and the spirit of conciliation taken for weakness. Scarcely had the dangers of the street been got over, when the ancient parties were seen again to raise their heads, to [illegible] rivalries, and alarm the country by arousing despotisme.
>
> In the midst of the confusion, France, uneasy because she cannot see any guiding hand, seeks the head as well of the elected of December the 10th. But that will cannot be felt unless there be entire unanimity of ideas, of views, and of convictions between the President and his Ministry, and unless the Assembly [illegible] him in the thought of the means as expressed in the election of the Executive Power.
>
> A whole system resulted on the 10th of December, for the name of Napoleon is a complete programme in itself. It means at home, order, authority, religion, and the welfare of the people; abroad, national dignity. It is this system that I wish to cause to triumph, by the aid of the National Assembly and the people. I wish to be worthy of the confidence [illegible] people, by making the Constitution which I have sworn to observe. I wish to bring back my country, by my fair straightforward dealing, perseverance, and firmness, to a [illegible] that business will revive.
>
> The letter of the Constitution has certainly a great influence on the destiny [illegible], but the manner in which it is executed has perhaps even more. The eager [illegible] duration of power is powerful to the stability of things; but it is only by disseminating ideas and principles that a government can succeed in persuading society to reassume confidence.
>
> Let us, therefore, again raise up authority without interfering with real liberty. Let us calm the apprehensions that are felt by vanquishing bad passions, and by giving to all the [illegible] a feeling of security. Let us strengthen religious feeling, without abandoning the [illegible] Let us [illegible] and we [illegible] of the [illegible]. Let us [illegible] by [illegible] and [illegible] by [illegible] and [illegible] by [illegible] and

THE PEACE MOVEMENT.

A meeting of the advocates of the Peace Movement was held on Tuesday evening, in Exeter Hall, to receive the report of the deputation which had attended the congress at Paris in August last, and to devise measures for future

The hall was densely crowded. Mr. Ewart, M.P., was in the chair; and among those on the platform were Mr Cobden, M.P., Mr. J. B. Smith, M.P., Mr Ellis, M.P., Mr Joseph Gurney, Mr. Joseph Sturge, and other leading members of the Society of Friends; also, Mr. Scobell, Mr. Robert Owen, the Rev. Mr Brock, the Rev. Mr. Richards, &c. The following attendants at the meeting from the peacemakers of France :—MM. Horace Say, Councillor of State; Frederic Bastiat, representative of the people; Joseph Garnier, secretary of the Paris Peace Committee; Guillaumin, editor of the Journal des Economistes; Leon Say, Pochette, and H Dupuit, Councillor of State. Letters of apology for absence were read from MM. Emile de Girardin, Victor Hugo, de Lamartine, the Archbishop of Paris, &c.

Mr. Ewart, in opening the proceedings, announced the intention of the association to hold a peace congress in the next year in Frankfort, and a series of meetings like the present in Birmingham and other important towns in England, with the view of inviting the people to co-operate with the association in their exertions for the establishment of those principles for which they were contending.

The first resolution carried was as follows :—

That the meeting desire to express its gratitude to the Great Ruler of the nations for the signal success which has attended the labours of the committee during the year, especially in connexion with the Peace Congress, held in the city of Paris in August last; and it would regard that success as an incentive to increased exertion in the future for the accomplishment of the undertaking so auspiciously commenced.

Mr. Samuel Gurney spoke to the resolution, addressing himself to the Christianity of the question

Mr. Cobden, M.P., proposed the next resolution :—

That this meeting receives with the highest satisfaction the assurances of sympathy in this great movement, as conveyed in the letters which have been read from the Archbishop of Paris, from MM. Lamartine, Victor Hugo, Emile de Girardin, and other distinguished personages; and it hails with joy the presence of the deputation which have honoured this assembly with their attendance on the present occasion, and trusts that their visits to the country will prove a source of personal gratification, and that it will powerfully tend to advance the period when national animosities shall be for ever forgotten, and peace and goodwill prevail throughout the world.

He said it was exactly two years since this island had been frightened from its propriety by a threatened invasion from France. They had been [illegible] the alarm on that occasion. He had board a great deal of the [illegible] the French army marching into London at one end, and the Horse Guards marching out of it at the other end. (Laughter.) They might recollect that the highest military authority in the country had revelled in the alarm, and that orders had been given to prepare additional coast defences, and to increase the general armaments of the country for the purpose of repelling the attacks of hostile France. What, however, did the men of peace do? They met in Paris on the 22nd of August last, and the whole country that was then raised that had brought him into the ranks of the peace party. The peace party stated that they believed the French had no intention of making a warlike attack upon this country. They did more than they proposed to go and seek this fierce and warlike people. They now came to tell them that they had put that visit, and that the hand which they had tendered to the French people had been most cordially grasped by them. He (Mr Cobden) had had the pleasure of seeing a deputation there from France; and, in the name of the association, he begged to tender them his hearty welcome. The same organs of the press that had tried to persuade the English people that the French had a policy to make war upon this country, now told them that they only feared that the French people had become so pacific that they would not take an interest in foreign politics. But they think that they would ever learn moderation from the exposure? He would, however, wait until to-morrow morning before he would venture an opinion upon this subject. (Laughter.) Now, he always liked to take up his position upon what their enemies called their weakest point. It was said in this country that the most important kind of state craft was diplomacy. How would you suppose that the advocates of the peace principles were the best diplomatists? They had lately peace and war in the balance in the East. Great apprehensions had been entertained in respect to the Northern powers. The peace of this country, however, was preserved in that quarter by the understanding which existed between France and England. (Cheers.) But who was it that had occasioned this good understanding? Was it the men who, for years past, had called for more steam ducks and more military armaments? No, it was the men who went over in confidence and a ally to France and placed faith in the French people, and who believed they possessed justice and magnanimity. Were the men that had caused this good understanding (Cheers.) It was also that rendered war between Russia and Turkey impossible. What was the other essential of state craft? Why, finance. Now, what was there this principle just now? There was a great movement in the country now for financial reform. (Great cheering.) There could be no financial reform but by diminishing the armaments, and taking other precautions for the safety of the country, and thus get rid of those enormous burdens, besides the purposes of war, and war preparations? Last year the expenditure of the country was £54,000,000. Out of that more than £17,000,000 were expended upon the interest of the debt for past wars, and for other purposes of a warlike character. £7 000,000 out of the £54,000,000 was sufficient to pay the whole expenses of the civil Government, the civil list, the Queen's establishment, the administration of justice, the whole law-list, the offices, the Home and Foreign Secretaries' offices—in fact, this sum was sufficient to defray the expenditure for conducting the whole machinery of the Government. He would show them, then, who were the real practical financial reformers. He proposed to adopt the same principle between nations as was adopted between private individuals namely, arbitration. (Cheers.) They were told that this principle might be very good in theory, but it was impracticable Now he wanted it to be put in the experiment, for he had not sufficient confidence in their judgments to take their word for anything. (Laughter.) In the next session he intended to propose that they should use whatever they could not induce foreign nations to join with them in diminishing the enormous amount of their standing forces. (Hear.) He had put this point privately before statesmen of both countries, and he had never heard them say anything else but that that was the very thing they wished to see done. He would now put the case of these should begin by making a rational proposal to the other, they seemed to be perfectly at a loss to know how they were to set about the matter. Now, until they had made up their minds to disarm (because that the only way), but also were of reliance. The fleets and navy of this country had been kept up solely in reference to the navy of France. Now, if the governments of both countries continued much longer to persist in their present system of armaments, they would soon be obliged to get themselves into the Gazette, and then they would not deserve their certificates from the hands of their country. They were now told that these armaments were not kept up for the purpose of war, but that they were kept up for reliance upon the great evil of the day. If the to the reason assigned for keeping up so large a force, then he would say that this system had been tried long enough to prove that it does not answer. (Cheers.) When he had been invited two years ago to attend the Brussels conference, he mentioned that there were 2,000,000 of men in the pay of the different governments of Europe. They found that in the midst of these 2,000,000 of men there was scarcely one throughout Europe that was not tottering to its base. Where three soldiers were then employed there were four now placed under pay. In order to account for such proceedings he was induced to think that the governments were anxious to reduce their people to such a condition of inextricable confusion that no other men could undertake their offices. In the same way as school-boys act when they do not want to part with their apples—they rub them in the dirt, and thus prevent others from asking for them. (Laughter.) He had been often surprised that they did not advertise for somebody with a little common sense to conduct their affairs. If, however, they were satisfied to pay for the support of an idle soldiery for the purpose of oppressing them, why, let them do so—he should not interfere to prevent them. (Hear, hear.) He would do everything that he could to prevent persons lending money to the governments of the Continent. He knew persons lending money to the governments of the Continent. He knew persons lending money to the governments of the Continent. He would not go so far as to say that their demonstration here had prevented Austria getting one shilling of the money; but the fact was this—that she had never been able to get any money since. (Cheers.) He [illegible] state of the right of that Government to ask for such a loan, [illegible] northern power in the markets for a loan of money. He only read it in the papers of yesterday. It appears that Russia has purchased [illegible] credit of £3,000,000 or £4,000,000. It was proposed that there should be an issue of Treasury bonds. He found it stated that the loan was intended to cover the expenses incurred in the war in Hungary. What now became of the boasted credit of the Austrian Government? (Hear.) They were told that Russia had taken £9,000,000 of the Austrian loan—that she had lent £500,000 to the Pope; and £200,000 to the Grand Duke of Tuscany. Now, he declared that he had read upon the very next week after the 22nd of July in the papers. From the bottom of his heart he thought that heaven had ordained in his Divine Providence that when there was a warlike spirit and huge standing armaments, there also should exist exactly the feeling of the people of the country, by the mouth of the Foreign Secretary himself, that the Government of Austria had the right, by the law of nations, to call upon a neighbouring power to put down their own people. This was a most monstrous law of nations, but a question of the responsibility of the Governors to the governed. If the Emperor of Austria could call upon the Cossacks to cut down the liberties of his own subjects, why there would be an end of all responsibility, and an end of the power by which the people should have the slightest chance of getting good government. (L

The last resolution agreed to was :

That, considering the greatness of the work yet to be done in carrying out the objects of the Congress to their full and amplitudinal, this meeting pledges itself to use its zeal and efforts in sustaining the plans of action already formed, in originating any others that may circumstances may demand, and particularly in supplying the funds which an enterprise so extensive and unique will call for, so to regard it and to induce its friends in the Provinces to follow for that enlarged co-operation which such an undertaking merits at the hands of all who desire the period when "nations shall learn war no more."

The meeting was addressed by M. Frederick Bastiat, M. Horace Say, and other foreigners; and the proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

PROPOSED NEW PARLIAMENTARY BOROUGH.—On Wednesday night a public meeting of the inhabitants of Chelsea, Fulham, Kensington, and Hammersmith, was held at the Commercial Hotel, Chelsea, for the purpose of considering the best means to be adopted for erecting those districts into a parliamentary borough. The meeting was convened by the West London Reform Association. A report setting forth the following objects aimed at by the association was agreed to: viz. extension of the suffrage to every householder, vote by ballot, triennial parliaments, equal districts based upon population and property, a repeal of the window and a reform of the income-tax, an efficient measure of sanitary reform, a reform of the existing laws relating to the relief of the poor, a proper application of the funds known to exist in this country for charitable purposes, and the obtaining representatives in Parliament for the parishes of Chelsea, Kensington, Hammersmith, and Fulham. The meeting was addressed by Mr. Johnson, of Nottingham, Mr. Hollins, of Nottingham, Mr. M'Adam, barrister-at-law, &c.

SECOND GREAT TEMPERANCE MEETING AT EXETER HALL.—The second great temperance meeting was held at Exeter Hall on Monday night, the subject proposed for discussion being, "The influence of the temperance reformation on the extension of religion at home and abroad, and the moral obligation of professing Christians to promote it." The great hall was crowded, and several speeches by clergymen and others were made in support of the advantages, temporal and eternal, of the observance of the temperance principle.

INTRAMURAL INTERMENTS IN ST. LUKE'S.—At a vestry meeting of the inhabitants of St. Luke, Old-street, held on Tuesday, for the purpose of considering the order issued by the Board of Health, on the 18th ult. for regulating the interments in the parish burial-ground, the subject, after much discussion, was referred to a committee.

THE LORD MAYOR AND THE EX-KING OF THE FRENCH.—A silver cup has just been manufactured for Louis Philippe, which is intended to be presented to the Lord Mayor (sir J. Duke, M.P.), as a souvenir in commemoration of his visit to the Mansion House. The cup is in high[illegible] embossed silver scrolls and flowers, having two handles in the style of Queen Anne, with a shield in the centre of the body, on which is engraved the crown and "L. P." It is mounted on a pedestal, on the four sides of which are engraved the inscription, the arms and crown of the late King, the arms of the city of London, and the private arms of the Lord Mayor.

THE QUEEN'S BENCH.—SPECIAL PAPER.—The lectures on "The Law of Real Property" will be resumed in the Hall of this Society on Monday, the 5th inst., when an introductory lecture will be delivered on "The Polity and Spirit of the English Laws, and their connexion with the progress of civilization." On Tuesday the following lectures will be upon "The rights and obligations incident to the ownership of land in England." The lectures will, as usual, be delivered every Monday and Thursday evening, at half-past seven o'clock.

THE COURTS OF LAW AND THE COUNTY OF MIDDLESEX.—The usual accounts of the receipts and expenditure of the county of Middlesex, made up from July to October, have just been published. It appears that the total receipts under the ordinary county rates (including £342 6s. 10d. the balance in hand last year), amounted to £35,764 1s. 1d., and the total expenditure in respect thereof to £33,374 14s. 10d., leaving a balance of £2409 6s. 3d. Of this expenditure £7360 was in respect of the Middlesex Lunatic Asylum, Coldbath-fields (including 500 lunatics, &c.); £5735 10s. 7d. in respect of the Total-fields House of Correction (including payment of interest and portions of principal of mortgages); and £2001 6s. 1d. (including 40*l* which was in respect of the new House of Detention at Clerkenwell. The coroner's fees were £2302 5s. 2d.; expenses of removing Scotch and Irish paupers, £2521 4s. 8d.; prosecutions at the Central Criminal Court and Middlesex Sessions, £2126 1s. 1d. The sum received under the 5th and 6th Vic. c. 129 for the Lunatic Asylum at Hanwell was £6974 6s. 10d.; expenditure, £3260 11s. 10d.; balance, £3693 15s. Received under the act for building an additional lunatic asylum at Colney Hatch, £58,434 1s. 10d.; expenditure, £51,774 9s. 6d.; balance, £751 3s. 4d.

POST-OFFICE CHANGES.—Special instructions were issued from the General Post-office last week to the deputy post-masters, that no alteration was to be made in the circulation of the mails, and no new days of correspondence to and from the north and south-west, and the south and south-west, should be sent by way of Exeter as heretofore. The only correspondence that was to be sent through London was that going to and from the north and south-west, and south-west. These instructions did not reach the distant offices in time, and consequently a great portion of the correspondence that ought to have been sent through Exeter was sent through London. In Exeter it added to the great forwarding office on Black days, and the correspondence forwarded in the London bag on those days is to be limited to letters for London through, and which are prepaid by stamps the full letter rates, on Sunday duties in London can never require anything like the duties fall upon the Exeter office, and generally known that previous to the recent regulations it was only persons living in the eastern parts of England that were totally prohibited from correspondence with those living in the west and south-west on the same day; but living in the Isle of Wight, for instance, could send a letter to Liverpool on Saturday in time as any other day, and it would reach the latter place on Monday morning by way of Exeter.

FIRES IN LONDON.—The records kept by the fire brigade of the out-breaks in the metropolis and its suburbs, during the present year, commencing from Jan. 1, detail upwards of 700. The probable amount of property destroyed is stated to be about £150,000.

MELANCHOLY SUICIDE OF A SURGEON.—Mr. Wakley, M.P., held an inquest on Tuesday on the body of Mr. Thomas Morton, of Woburn-place, Russell-square, and of Chertsey, Surrey, a gentleman who had also been surgeon to the Queen's Bench Prison. The evidence, which was very lengthy, went to show that deceased had been in rather a despondingstate of mind since the death of his father-in-law, Mr. Cooper, and that he had been unable to attend to his professional duties, and generally left town on Saturday, to join his wife and only daughter, a child aged four years, at the country residence of his father-in-law. He returned to town on Monday last, and after visiting his patients went to the hospital, where he had some conversation with one of his colleagues on the subject of resigning the post he held in that institution. He appeared in his manner for doing so that he had embarrassed circumstances, and did not wish to go on leaving all his life. His colleague tried to dissuade him from resigning, but he said he had written the letter, and if he did not send it this week, he should in three months. To some night on unhappy man went home at eleven o'clock, and, after a short time, rushed to rest. The next morning he got up at an early hour, and came down stairs, but returned to his room again, and at nine o'clock, when his page went up-stairs to call him, he was found lying in bed quite dead, with an open Bible apparently just fallen out of his hand. Medical assistance was instantly called in, but, of course, without avail, and a post mortem examination proved that he had swallowed a large quantity of prussic acid. The following are copies of the letters he left on the bed-table on Tuesday morning. The first was addressed to his wife, at Shepperton, and ran thus :—

7, Woburn-place, December 30, 1849.

My dearest Mary-Ann,—Employ no lawyer to execute my will. You and Ann can do it if you will take all. I am sure Mr. Finney will do it for you. My will is in my drawer, in the volume of Bell's surgery, p. 478. Also, nearly £250 at Hoare's bank. Pay my debts. Forgive me, my love, for all the misery I have caused you by quitting Carlisle and Manson. May God bless you and Missie, and preserve you ever from harm at present and for ever. Your most affectionate husband, THOMAS MORTON.

To Mrs. Morton.

It would have been fortunate had I never been connected of late with the College.

The second was addressed to Charles C. Atkinson, Esq., University College, London, and contained his resignation of the office he held at the same hospital attached to that institution. The letter to Mr. Atkinson was as follows :—

7, Woburn-place, Russell-square, Oct. 28, 1849.

My dear Sir,—May I request you to [illegible] the favour to [illegible] my resignation of the office I hold in the hospital. My best thanks are due to you and all my colleagues for much kindness, which I shall ever remember. I have long purposed I have in the course of being connected with the institution. With every good wish for the health of yourself and family, I remain, my dear sir, yours very sincerely, THOMAS MORTON.

To Charles C. Atkinson, Esq., &c.

The resignation was countersigned in the following terms.—

7, Woburn-place, Russell-square, Oct. 31, 1849.

My Lords and Gentlemen,—I beg to resign the office of surgeon which I held in University College Hospital, and, at the same time, to return you my most grateful thanks for the honour you conferred upon me on assuming me to it. I desire to take the opportunity of expressing my most good wishes for the continued prosperity of the College, and all connected with it, and remain, with the greatest respect, my Lords and gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

THOMAS MORTON.

To the President and Council of University College, London.

From a variety of papers and written documents found in the deceased's study, Mr. Lewis ascertained that deceased occasionally had great nervous debility, induced, as he supposed, by drinking, though the evidence did not show that he indulged to any excess in this vice. One of the papers in question ran thus :—

Let me not forget my dreadful feelings (delirium trements) after taking two or three pints of ale. Let me not forget my pain on the head, my pain at one glass. What a fiend it is by its [illegible] and want of firmness, also by an opinion that I can drink a good deal of beer. The loathing, temper, and disorder of a beer-produced drunkenness. Oh! that I never exceed a pint of beer a day. I am better on water. I never was so happy as on water. Take care, for once in the open air, and prepare not

I have only to remember my dreadful sufferings the morning after taking so much beer or wine. Low sunsided for days, dejection and gloomy thoughts, pulse 100 to 120, head dizzy, limbs tremulous, pains about heart, flatulence and constipation, incapacity for duty or study, temper irritable and overcoming, impaired habits, loss of time, forgetfulness of engagements, everything in disorder, and all for what? Because I choose to take two pints of ale or half a bott e of wine

Never take beer or wine in it

Rule.—Let me never exceed my quantities under any circumstances. Let me pass the decanters and not touch them. Let me not take wine and beer together. Two glasses of wine are quite enough. Not to exceed a pint of beer a day. Like any from table. Avoid champagne and Moselle. Never go into taverns for beer

My quietly and unobtrusively. Do [illegible] steadily slowly [illegible] beer hours rest [illegible] ing.

[illegible] and moral duties. Also by succeeding [illegible] Fife, Dr Hamilton, and Vaspen

[illegible] a very careful charge on the Coroner in the course of which Mr. Wakley described the deceased as a very fine man of great promise, whose death would be universally regretted in the profession the jury, without retiring, returned a verdict of "Temporary insanity." The deceased was only 36 years of age, and has left a widow, and one daughter four years old.

FREEMEN OCCUPIERS IN THE CITY OF LONDON.—On Thursday last there was exhibited for public inspection, without payment of any fee, a list of all freemen occupiers at each ward to the City entitled to vote in the forthcoming elections of aldermen, common-councilmen, or other ward officers. The list will be exhibited for a fortnight. Before the 1st of August last only householders could vote, but now joint occupiers to £10 are privileged, by virtue of the new act 12 and 13 Vic., cap. 94, local.

FALL OF A LARGE WAREHOUSE.—On Saturday night, between 11 and 12 o'clock, a large warehouse belonging to Messrs. Williams, leathersellers, and in the occupation of Mr. John Turner, corn and coal merchant, at No. 31, Maiden-lane, Wood-street, Cheapside, fell down with a tremendous noise, smashing everything that it came in contact with. Several men were much damaged, especially that of Mr. J. Townsend, who, with Mrs. Townsend and family, was living in the back-room immediately opposite to the building. The accident was owing to the entire decay of the fabric. Had the circumstance occurred a few minutes before, the lives of several individuals must inevitably have been sacrificed.

ACCIDENTS DURING THE ROYAL VISIT TO THE COAL EXCHANGE.—On Tuesday sevens' severe accidents occurred near London-bridge and Southwark-bridge, at the time the Royal procession was passing down the river to the new Coal Exchange. About a quarter to one o'clock, a large number of persons had collected on Southwark-bridge, and there was scarcely any room for any vehicles to pass. After the procession had passed, a rush was made by several hundreds of persons, to leave the bridge on the Middlesex side. On reaching the toll-gate, both gates were thrown open, for the purpose of affording a better egress from the bridge. A horse and cart, which was being driven at a slow pace in front of its crowd, was suddenly stopped, while passing between the gate, in consequence of the rush being so great from behind, and from persons attempting to pass on both sides of the cart, which was completely fixed, so that it could not move one way or the other. Several persons were also jammed against the bars, and were unable to extricate themselves. A respectably dressed person, named James Hollis, who had by some means got his right leg between the bars, and being unable to extricate himself, was forced to the ground. His cries for assistance were heard by some persons in front of the crowd, and after considerable difficulty he was dragged into the road and placed in the left-hand, where it was found that he was much injured. A surgeon was obtained, and the unfortunate young man was conveyed to St. Bartholomew's Hospital. He was found to have received a compound fracture of the right leg. A lady, named Burton, residing in Hamilton-terrace, Borough, was also knocked down by the crowd while attempting to leave the bridge, and before she could be raised was trampled upon, and received several severe injuries about the body. Numerous other persons received slight injuries, more or less, during the struggle to leave the bridge; and after the crowd had somewhat spread about, ladies were seen minus their shawls, and their bonnets and dresses being much disfigured. About the same time, a man, named William Butler, residing in Redcross-street, Borough, met with a severe accident, from which he is now lying dangerously ill at Guy's Hospital. Shortly after the disembarkation of the Royal visitors, Butler, who had been standing upon the pavement in London-bridge, close to Pemberton's Wharf, and not being aware of his proximity to the kerb-stone, was suddenly pushed by the crowd, who were about leaving the bridge, with considerable force into the road. He fell, and an immense load of wood, passed over him. Some persons rescued him, and shared the same fate, but were not so severely injured as Butler. After several hundred individuals had passed, a circle was made by male forces, and the unfortunate man was dragged in the steps of the bridge, where he was perfectly insensible, and was bleeding profusely from the nose. He was at once removed to Guy's Hospital, where he was quickly attended to by the house surgeon. He was stripped, and his body was found to be covered with bruises and contusions. His left leg was also fractured. Several minor accidents occurred on the same bridge, but were of no public importance

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—On Saturday evening last, about half-past seven o'clock, as Mr. John Parsons, of Clarendon-square, Somers-town, was walking along Duncan-terrace, Islington, a respectable-looking man accosted him by inquiring what the time was, and making a snatch at his watch, seized it, the guard giving way; at the same time, the villain struck him a violent blow, forcing him against the iron railings of one of the houses, which caused him a purse containing £9 in gold, as well as his watch. Mr. Perowne fell to the ground from the effects of the blow and fright. A woman, supposed to be acting in concert with the thief, had only an instant before addressed the gentleman who has been robbed.

PLATE ROBBERIES.—On Wednesday, some daring thieves effected an entrance into the residence of Mr. Robert Pash, Esq., 2, South-buildings, Chatham-common, and carried off silver plate valued at £200. The premises, No. 15, Upper Berkeley-street, were also broken into, and a large quantity of silver plate of the most costly description, estimated at upwards of £300, all marked with a cross—is also supposed to have been carried off by the thieves.

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.—On Wednesday, Manning communicated to his solicitor, Mr. Binns, information relative to some shares which belonged to O'Connor, and which were deposited by the latter with Manning after the murder was committed. The shares were of considerable value. Mrs. Manning burnt them in the back kitchen with several old papers and some rags. Manning told Mr. Binns that he wished O'Connor's executors to know the fact, as property might be reclaimed by them.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27.—The total number of deaths registered in London, in the week ending last Saturday, was 972, the weekly average of five autumns 1842; the present return, therefore, shows a decrease of 269 deaths on the estimated mortality of the season. The numbers in the last three weeks, during which the cholera was continued to fall below the average, have been successively 1078, 1024, and 972. In the last week only a decrease of 269 deaths on cholera were registered; the numbers returned in the first three weeks of October were respectively 288, 110, and 41. Of the twenty-five deaths of the week, one occurred in the Custom-house, one in the Court of Lord Mayor, one in the Queen's Prison, one in the workhouse at Lower Homerton, one (after puerperal peritonitis) in Cockcourt, Bishopsgate, three in the district of Shoreditch, three in Bethnal-green, two in Hackney, four in St. George-in-the-East, one in Stepney, two in Poplar, and one in each of the following districts: Bermondsey, St. George (Southwark), Lambeth, and Camberwell. The deaths from diarrhœa and dysentery in the last week were 61; the average in 27; the continuous decline is shown by the numbers returned in the first three weeks of October, which were 146, 105, and 63. Typhus was fatal in 32 cases; the weekly average is 56. From smallpox there were 7 deaths (about the third of the average); scarlet fever from measles, scarlatina, and hooping-cough were respectively 20, 24, and 16, the three epidemics exhibiting at present only a half of the usual mortality. The mortality from phthisis is also much less than the usual amount. Besides a case of cholera, already referred to, the deaths of thirteen women, after childbirth, were registered in the week. The births registered during the week were 1345.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The reading of the barometer was 30in. on Wednesday; the mean reading of the week was 29 87. The mean temperature has been throughout the week higher than the average of the same week of seven years; on the last five days it was from 1 to 2 degrees higher than the average of corresponding days. The mean of the week was 56 degrees.

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

M. ALEXANDRE DUMAS AND THE MANNINGS.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

In one of those cheap weekly publications, in which are published translations at romances of the horrible school, now so popular in France, I have, on some singular passages in a tale entitled "The Woman-and-One Phantoms, to be found between Craven o'Clock and Midnight," by M. Alexandre Dumas. These passages, it seems to me, must have been read either in the original language by Mrs. Manning, or perhaps by her or Manning in the English translation, which appeared June 2nd of this year. The story to which I refer is that of the quarryman who is confessing to the Commissary of Police at Fontenay-aux-Roses a murder which he has committed in a cellar. The victim is the quarryman's wife. The assassin sharpens a sword on the heart-stone, and descends into the cellar, concealing himself behind some barrels, until his wife descends to draw the wine. He thus describes the scene :—

"Meanwhile she came on. Upon my soul, one would have said she suspected some ill was brewing for her. She was alarmed; she looked about her on every side, and seemed uneasy concealed.—I never stirred. Then she took small notice of the barrel, put the bottle to the spout, and turned the cock on. Then I got up. Remember, she was on her knees. The noise the wine made as it fell into the bottle deafened her from hearing me; besides, I made no noise. She was kneeling like a culprit—like one convicted. I raised the sword aloft, and ha! I don't even know if she shrieked; her head dropped and rolled along the ground. As for myself, I never meant to die. I intended to escape. I meant to dig a hole in the cellar and bury her. I ran after the head, which was rolling one way, whilst the body was rolling another. I had a sack of lime ready to hide the blood, so I took hold of the head."

At this point of the paper there is a discussion as to the statement made by the murderer, that the head of his wife had spoken after the decapitation. The public think on Courlotte Corday's face after her execution, is quoted by a M. Ledru as a fact that there is still vitality in the decapitated head. This theory is disputed by a doctor; and then a discussion ensues on the subject of capital punishment, whether by the rope, the axe, or by poison; and M. Ledru maintains that hanging is an easier death than the guillotine—consciousness existing after the severing of the vertebral column, the neck containing the nerves in set fought with sensation; whilst hanging, states M. Ledru, "was that of sudden apoplexy; that is to say, a deep sleep, without a particular pain without [illegible] anguish; a sort of flame gushing from the eyes, assuming [illegible] again resolving into utter darkness, as the state of [illegible]

The terrible and disgusting anecdotes in this tale of M. Dumas I will not further refer to at this moment; nor is it requisite to dwell on the pernicious influence occasioned by publications in which the mode of committing every degree of crime so as to avoid the legal consequences is so distinctly pointed out.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your very obedient servant,

G. L.

THE PROCESSION SEEN WESTWARD FROM WATERLOO-BRIDGE.

ROYAL VISIT TO THE CITY.

OPENING OF THE NEW COAL EXCHANGE.

On Tuesday the superb new Coal Exchange in Lower Thames-street was inaugurated with great splendour, the event being signalised by the honour of a Royal visit to the city. There has been no such splendid civic ceremony since the opening of the New Royal Exchange by her Majesty, just five years and two days since (Oct. 26, 1844); and there has been no such pageant by water since the opening of the new London-bridge, by their Majesties King William IV. and Queen Adelaide, August 1, 1831.

It was originally announced that Queen Victoria would honour the city with her presence on Tuesday last; and we regret that her Majesty has been prevented by illness from fulfilling her gracious intention. It was, however, as publicly announced that such indisposition was not of a serious nature, and this circumstance, besides the promised presence of his Royal Highness Prince Albert (as the representative of her Majesty) accompanied by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the future Sovereign of those realms, together with his eldest sister, the Princess Royal, to be introduced to the City and its functionaries, neutralised any feelings of disappointment that might otherwise have existed. Next to the presence of the Queen herself, there could not have been a more interesting grace added to the civic ceremonial than by the above introduction.

We shall now proceed to detail the ceremony, commencing with

THE ARRANGEMENTS OF THE COURT.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, with their Royal Highnesses the Prince o Wales and Princess Royal left Windsor Castle on Tuesday morning, for town, at THE PROCESSION SEEN EASTWARD FROM SOUTHWARK-BRIDGE.

THE ROYAL BARGE PASSING LONDON-BRIDGE.

ten minutes before ten o'clock, travelling by a special train on the Great Western Railway. Colonel the Hon. C. B. Phipps, General Wemyss, and Colonel Seymour were in attendance on Prince Albert. The Prince of Wales and Princess Royal were attended by the Dowager Lady Lyttelton and Mr. Birch. At twenty minutes before ten o'clock the special train arrived at the Paddington station. The Prince, the Prince of Wales, and the Princess Royal, who were all dressed very plainly, upon alighting from the Royal carriage, were received by the directors and several officers of the company, who handed them to the carriages that were waiting for them; and the Royal party immediately drove off to Buckingham Palace, where they arrived at a quarter before eleven o'clock.

At a quarter past twelve o'clock, Prince Albert left the Palace for the New Coal Exchange. The Royal party occupied three carriages. In the first carriage were his Royal Highness Prince Albert, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, her Royal Highness the Princess Royal, and the Duke of Norfolk, K.G., Master of the Horse. In the second carriage were the Dowager Lady Lyttelton; the Marquis of Ormonde, K.P., Lord in Waiting to the Queen; Lord George Lennox, Lord of the Bedchamber to the Prince, and Mr. Birch. In the third carriage were the Groom in Waiting to the Queen; Sir Frederic Stovin, the Groom of the Bedchamber to his Royal Highness; Col. Wylde, Equerry in Waiting to the Queen; Gen. Wemyss, and the Equerry in Waiting to his Royal Highness, Lieut.-Colonel Francis Hugh Seymour. His Royal Highness Prince Albert wore the uniform of Captain General of the Hon. Artillery Company, with the ensigns of the orders of the Garter and the Golden Fleece. On the Prince entering his carriage the guard of honour of the Scots Fusilier Guards on duty on the Palace area, with the band of the regiment, received his Royal Highness with the usual honours. The guard was under the command of Colonel Walker.

Part of the Royal suite had preceded Prince Albert from St. James's Palace.

About half-past eleven a detachment of the Life Guards appeared in front of the Palace, as also a body of the C division of police, under the orders of Mr. Superintendent Beresford, who also did duty in the Park, to preserve the line in the progress of the Royal cortège to Whitehall. By this time, a large concourse of persons awaited the approach of the Royal family, and the extreme fineness of the day added much to the holiday gaiety of the scene. The appearance of the Prince, with the Royal children, gave rise to a burst of loyalty from the crowd, which was graciously acknowledged. At the time, the churches of St. John's, St. Margaret's, and St. Martin's-in-the-Fields rang joyous peals; and on the flag-staff of the latter was displayed the Royal standard.

The point selected for embarkation was named after the old palace, but appearing somewhat more eastward than in the print of Whitehall, before the fire of 1691, caused by the negligence of a maid-servant, who, to save the labour of cutting a candle from a pound, burnt it off and carelessly threw the rest aside before the flame was out.

WHITEHALL STAIRS,

It was high tide, though not quite so high as when it flooded the kitchen, in Pepys's time, and the chine of beef could not be roasted for the Countess of Castlemaine, when King Charles II. was to sup with her, soon after the birth of her son, the Duke of Grafton. Nor was the tide so high as when Charles II. reminded the House of Commons to amend their ways; the Queen having been much inconvenienced by finding Whitehall surrounded with water.

At Whitehall Stairs there was a gay gathering of boats and craft of various periods and styles of decoration—from that age of gold-carving, the time of Queen Anne, to the certainly not over-wrought steam-vessel exteriors of our own times. Among the "golden gilstars" was the state barge of the Lord Mayor, who, at 11 o'clock, accompanied by Alderman Humphery and other members of the Court of Aldermen, and by a deputation from the Navigation Committee, took water at London-bridge, and, with the flood-tide still running, proceeded hither in his Lordship's barge. There, too, lay the little Eden, the last built Royal steamer, surrounded by a flotilla of boats, some belonging to men-of-war, and painted black—others painted blue, with gilt mouldings, which denoted them to be attached to the Royal yacht. The wherries of the Thames Police, the Harbour Master, and the Water Bailiff were also darting about with official promptitude. Close in-shore was the Royal barge, which had been newly gilt for the occasion, and, with its pavilioned poop, had a right regal appearance. It was built for Frederick, Prince of Wales, her Majesty's great-grandfather, and is rowed by 22 men. There, too, were the Queen's gally gilt shallop, and the Admiralty barges—all drawn up, waiting the arrival of the Prince Consort. The Admiralty barge, by the way, was presented to the Council of the Admiralty by Prince George of Denmark, when Lord High Admiral. This barge was the one employed to convey the body of Lord Nelson from Greenwich to St. Paul's. The gilding of the older barges, more especially the silken civic banners that rustled in the fresh breeze blowing from the west, carried the mind's eye back to the ancient pageantry of the Thames—an association aided by the train of watermen in scarlet liveries; but we missed the water-gate, and the battlemented parapets and gables of Old Whitehall, to accord with these gay personations of olden pageantry. A steam-boat is so exclusively of our own age, as to prevent the thoughts wandering to any other.

Upon the arrival of the Lord Mayor's barge, Commodore Eden proceeded in his gig alongside to pay his respects to his Lordship. The Trinity barge had also arrived at the stairs, when the Deputy Master of the Trinity House, Sir John Pelly, Bart., landed and proceeded to Whitehall-gardens to pay his respects to Sir Robert Peel, Bart., one of the elder brethren. The United Service Museum seemed to be the rendezvous

Shortly after this, the Lords of the Admiralty embarked, and the other officers and gentlemen also proceeded to their boats or to their respective stations.

At length the Royal carriages passed through the Horse Guards gates, amidst great applause; and crossed the road to the narrow way leading to Whitehall Stairs, at the head of which the Prince was met by Captain Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, who conducted their Royal Highnesses to the place of embarkation, the whole of the pathway being laid with red cloth, and covered by a handsome awning. Here the Prince was received by Lord John Russell and Sir George Grey (who had arrived a few minutes previously), and Commodore Eden, and by means of a very convenient stage and platform, constructed by Mr. Lang, master shipwright of Woolwich Dockyard, who was present and superintended its use, the Royal party entered the Queen's state barge, the Royal standard floated at the stern, and amidst enthusiastic cheers from a very large assemblage of persons, from the gardens of Lord Liverpool on one side, and from the Privy-gardens on the other, the men lowered their oars and pulled out into the stream. The noble Premier and the Home Secretary immediately entered their boat, and the Commodore was soon in his advanced position; and now from a mêlée of barges, gigs, police and harbour boats, standards, ensigns, and pendants, with more than military precision, the Royal barge squadron speedily dropped into its regular order, and proceeded—the first sound of the National Anthem bursting across the water from the crowded deck of one of the Citizen steam-boats.

Above Whitehall Stairs there were but few boats; the barges were, however, crowded with spectators; and the ugly parapet of Westminster-bridge was made sightly by its fringe of human faces.

The departure of the pageant had a truly majestic effect. Captain Rowland, the chief harbour-master, having proceeded down the river to see that all was clear, a few rapid strokes placed Commodore Eden's six-oared gig in advance: before the Royal barges had reached Hungerford-bridge, each boat had fallen to its station, and the following was the ORDER OF PROCESSION.

THE DEBARKATION AT THE CUSTOM-HOUSE QUAY.

1st.—Commodore Eden, Superintendent of Woolwich Dockyard, attended by his Flag-Lieutenant, Mr G. E. K. Gore, in a gig rowed by six men, his bine broad pendant flying in the bow, and the ensign in the stern.

2nd.—The six-oared galley of the W[illegible] of the City of London [illegible] Daniel Sandt [illegible] Jay, attending on the Lord Mayor.

3rd. The twelve-oared barge of V[illegible]dmiral the Hon G[illegible] C B., Commander in Chief at the Nore, attended by his Ba[illegible]t[illegible]n[illegible]gor, the white ensign ensign in the bow.

4th. The Lord Mayor's state barge; containing the Lord Mayor, Alderman Humphery, M.P. Mr Deputy Elwin, Chairman of the Navigation Committee; and Mr Deputy Harrison, being a deputation to attend on the Royal party. This ancient barge, profusely decorated with carving and gilding, was rowed by eighteen and steered by two men in scarlet uniform, with massive silver badges, and was in command of the City Bargemaster [illegible] and led in scarlet uniform, with gold spanel cap, and gold-laced cocked [illegible] barge carried two large flags, bearing the City Arms and the arms of the Lord Mayor. The barge pulled heavily but steadily.

5th.—THE QUEEN'S STATE BARGE, containing Prince Albert, the Prince of Wales, &c., and the Princess Royal, the Dowager Lady Lyttelton, &c. The state barge was steered by Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, G.C.H., and was rowed by the men named in the Queen's watermen" by the Lord Chamberlain; Mr. Roberts, of Lambeth, being the Queen's bargemaster. They were attired in scarlet uniforms, with gold badges and black velvet caps. The Queen's state barge looked remarkably splendid, having been newly gilded and decorated. She is specially a river boat, and rowed gaily and swiftly. In fact she took-home is handsome, but comparatively small. The barge is 61 feet in length

The Queen's state barge was escorted by four boats belonging to the Victoria and Albert. The barge has not been used above half-a-dozen times for the last twenty years. She was employed in conveying King William IV. and Queen Adelaide on a state visit to Greenwich, August 1, 1835; and by her Majesty and Prince Albert on their visit to the Thames Tunnel, July 26, 1843.

6th. The QUEEN'S [illegible]

7th [illegible] containing the Lords Commissioners of [illegible] M.P., First Lord, Rear-Admiral [illegible] Dundas, C.B., M.P. [illegible]

[illegible] John Barrow, G.C.B., M.P.; Captain Maurice [illegible] M.P., First Secretary; and Captain Chas. Eden, private secretary to the First Lord, all in full uniform. This capacious barge, rowed by 24 men, was built by Mr. Lang [illegible] Deptford Dockyard. The Admiralty barge was escorted on the starboard side by the barge of Captain Sir John Hill, superintendent of Deptford Dockyard, and on the port side by the barge of Captain Pelham, of the Ocean flag-ship at Sheerness.

8th.—Admiralty Barge, with the Admiralty flag, containing Lord John Russell, M.P., Sir George Grey, Bart., M.P.; Captain W. A. B. Hamilton, second secretary to the Admiralty and Sir G. Cornewall Lewis. This barge was rowed by eight men

9th.—Second Admiralty barge, rowed by ten men, containing the principal officers of the department of the Navy at Somerset House—Captain Sir Baldwin W. Walker, K.C.B., Surveyor of the Navy; Lieut.-Col. Irvine, C.B., Director-General of Works, &c.

10th.—Admiralty Barge, rowed by twelve men, containing the Deputy Master of the Trinity House, Sir John Pelly, Bart.; Sir Robert Peel, Bart., and other elder brethren of the corporation, attired in the Trinity uniform, wearing cocked hats and swords, and the heavy rich silk flag of the Trinity House covering the bow of the boat.

[illegible] were the boats [illegible] procession, but other men-of-war boats [illegible] the rear [illegible] upon the Admiral's steamer and one of H.[illegible] Majesty's barges.

Advancing, then, in the foregoing order, the barge squadron being flanked by the gigs of the Thames police and harbour-masters, the sight was one of rare magnificence, as seen from the shore, the intermediate stationary river craft; whilst the view of the banks of the river, and the buildings on each side, was very striking.

The procession was saluted with cheers as it advanced; and there was an accumulation of applause at Hungerford-bridge, which was crowded to excess. All undue strain upon the bridge was prevented by barriers; to compensate for which additional standing room had been raised in some parts. The wharves on the river banks were crowded; all elevations were taken advantage of; the roof of Godmg's Brewery, for example, was gally decked with streamers, and had a goodly company of spectators; and the lofty Shot Tower was bristling with heads.

WATERLOO-BRIDGE

was peopled from a comparatively early hour, and the toll was doubled; so that the day's receipts will, we trust, notably augment the contributions to this, the noblest bridge in the world, though its builders have been worst paid for it

The view from the balustrades was a glorious scene: never was a greater display of bunting on the river's face, and never did a river's craft look so fluttering in the breeze! The noble Adelphi Terrace was filled with spectators; and the little Terrace below, with Inigo Jones's water-gate, had its privileged company.

Our Artists have selected a view of the passage from Waterloo-bridge for one of their illustrations. Under the third arch on the Middlesex side the procession disappeared, to emerge upon a scene of increased excitement. The river façade of Somerset House was crowded with spectators. The grand terrace, the windows, and the very roof, had their occupants. The cheering here was more sustained and enthusiastic; the ladies waved their white handkerchiefs, and the display of bunting increased. On the Thames Police vessels opposite Somerset House seemed to be assembled all the flag demonstrations of the world The piers and wharves were more crowded; the owners of the latter generally availed themselves of the opportunity of affording their friends a fine view of the pageant: as Messrs. Cory and Sons's coal-yard opposite Temple Gardens. This large company had this treat backed by handsome hospitality. On this side were mostly stationed barges; while on the City side were steamers, safely moored fore and aft to a number of vessels, secured round the piers of the bridges, and running along the whole line, the various vessels being additionally secured in their stations by their anchors.

THE TEMPLE GARDENS

merit special notice for their loyal display. The terrace and both the gardens, occupied by the Benchers and their families and friends, presented an array of beauty not equalled throughout the river route. By the way, the profusion of chrysanthemums, which stud the borders and parterres at this late season, were much admired. During the river was another floral display of tasteful device, consisting of a crown, flanked on either side with A. and V. in evergreens and garlands. There was also a profusion of appropriate flags, and amongst them most conspicuously that which is the standard of the Templars, with its flying horse upon a pure white ground, and a red cross encircled with "In hoc signo vinces." There was a large corps de vargues in the Temple-yard; and immediately after the pageant had passed, the Benchers and their guests sat down to an elegant déjeûner in the Inner Temple Hall—two ladies accompanying each Member. Several of the visitors took the opportunity of inspecting the celebrated Round Church, and the noble Hall of the Middle Temple.

Any, now, amidst loud applause, and bands of musicians whose strains were anything but uni-sonorous, the pageant swept on to between which and the Temple the line was formed by a fleet of Watermen, Citizen, and Sons of the Thames steamers: these, as well as the barges opposite, were covered into paiforms, which were covered by spectators; and the wharves had their galleries filled with gaily dressed company. The piers were also fully occupied. Blackfriars-bridge was densely crowded; nothing could exceed the beauty of the procession seen from this point, as it assumed the crescent form which the river here describes. And already it was to see the galleries of St. Paul's Cathedral some curious visitors, enjoying the enchantment when distance lent to the view—taking their notion, perhaps, from the splendid effect in the great Colosseum panorama of the metropol-.

BLACKFRIARS-BRIDGE,

From Blackfriars-bridge, on the north, the Woolwich and Citizen Companies' steamers, gaily dressed with flags, mostly kept the line; and opposite, Bankside presented a line of coal-waggons filled with spectators, while "the Bank" itself had much of the liveliness of a fair. This was continued beyond which was crowded with spectators of the "paying class." Here the cheering of the most distant groups reached across the water, its clamor sounds alternating not unpleasantly with the huzzas given more at hand. The masses of human beings seemed to swell every moment in magnitude; and when London-bridge drew near, it was very clear that the City had in truth come down to the water's edge to give the Royal visitors a right hearty welcome. The Royal barge was stopped for a few minutes, while the inmates of it listened to the cheers of the children of Queen Elizabeth's free Grammar School, certainly the loudest and most telling of any that were given on the river; and besides this merit they had also invited the attention of his Royal Highness by presenting to his Royal Highness, through Alderman Humphery, whose new wharf they occupied as a stand, a dutiful address.

SOUTHWARK-BRIDGE,

Our Artists have depicted the gay scene, viewed from Southwark-bridge. The proprietors of the wharves hereabout entertained large companies of their friends: at Messrs. Cubitt and Lee's there were no fewer than 1200 visitors, of whom 500 were regaled with luncheon, and the day was wound up with a ball to 800

As the Royal barge swept beneath

LONDON BRIDGE (See the Illustration),

deafening was the crash of bells ringing, bands playing, and voices cheering, as the barges swept down alongside. It was, indeed, a glorious sight. Pyramids of men, formed upon the chimney-stacks and upon the highest buildings, the men-of-war's men aloft, the gaily-waggoned fleet of steamers, steamers, the larger craft dressed with flags from truck to keel, from stem to stern, the thousands of faces that peeped from the windows of the houses on the banks, and hundreds of heads that protruded through the gally-ornamented vignette of the ships in the stream; the gilded barges and the beautiful purple-and boats of the Royal yacht; the fantastic costly-attired crews of the various City companies, and the brilliant uniforms of the army and navy—never to be witnessed the same, but for ever shifting, made up a scene of kaleidoscopic variety, yet of impressive grandeur and magnificence. A countless myriad of eyes peered over London Bridge, from the top of the Monument, Fishmongers' Hall; the Adelaide Hotel, the battlements of the towers of St. Saviour's and St. Olave's; and even the M[illegible] had been thronged as early as nine o'clock

[illegible] had been crowded as early as nine o'clock

[illegible] THE CUSTOM-HOUSE QUAY,

[illegible] ded at the disposal of the Co[illegible] reserved for royal guests, and most judiciously had they at[illegible] selves of the site. A stupendous circular pavilion, covered [illegible] and of proportionate softness (furnished by Mr [illegible] Bon ngh), had been erected opposite the landing [illegible] of the quay. This tent—which was the same that [illegible] the installation of Prince Albert as Chancellor of the Univer-ity—was of very graceful form, and the interior was elegantly decorated with flags. A number of union jacks and ensigns were tastefully clustered round the central pillar. The terrace was covered in with various-coloured canvass, so as to form a magnificent corridor or passage, extending the whole length of the quay, along the western end of the Custom House, and across Thames-street, to the grand entrance of the Coal-Exchange. The covered avenue thus formed upon the quay was thirty-six feet in width, and the whole length of the passage from the Custom House was 240 feet. Here or on the terrace for spectators. Similar accommodation was also provided on both sides of the remaining portion of the passage. The entire length of this covered way was about six hundred feet, and it afforded setting accommodation for between 3000 and 4000 persons. The floors of the pavilion and the avenue were covered with crimson cloth, and the seats were cushioned.

Our Artists have represented this grand spectacle in the large Engraving, within a bordure of devices selected from the decorations of the New Coal Exchange.

The whole scene was truly gorgeous—the magnificent tent, with its trophied flags and shields, its gilt poles and tasteful draperies; and the splendid group of company, in uniforms of star and garter, and gold, court dresses, and Aldermanic robes, their richness relieved by the scarlet costume of the fair visitors. Each vessel had its band, and on the quay were stationed three or four military bands.

At about eleven o'clock the different actors in the pageant began to assemble, and take their appointed stations. A detachment of the Hon. Artillery Company took up a position on the platform, and were speedily followed by the Gentlemen-at-Arms, whose splendid helmets were objects of general admiration. The distinguished visitors now began to arrive. The Duke of Wellington came early, and was loudly cheered. The Marquis of Anglesey had also a cordial reception, and his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge was welcomed with marked and general demonstrations of respect. "God save the Queen" was struck up by the band on the entrance of his Royal Highness, amid loud and general cheering. A large detachment of the Grenadier Guards were stationed in the pavilion, to act as a guard of honour. They were accompanied by the splendid band of the regiment, which, alternately with the fine band of the 11th Hussars (Prince Albert's Own, which was posted on the quay), delighted the spectators by the performance of numerous popular airs.

The ships in the river were already said, was nearly at the eastern extremity of the Custom House-quay. Two large floating platforms, or "dumb lighters," measuring nearly 100 feet each, had been moored abreast of each other in front of the quay wall, in order that the Royal barges might be able to draw up close alongside. Both these platforms were covered and enclosed at the sides with striped canvass—red and white—and they communicated by a covered way with the pavilion on the quay. Shortly before the hand of the City clock, the deputations of Aldermen and Common-Councillors, attended by the Mace-bearer and the usual officials, proceeded to the floating platform, to await the arrival of the anxiously-expected visitors.

THE DEBARKATION.

At five minutes to one, the guns at the Tower announced the arrival of the Royal barge at London-bridge, under the centre arch of which it glided amid deafening cheers; and, preceded by the City barge, slowly approached the landing-place. The Lord Mayor and Aldermen came first. The Lord Mayor in splendid state mantle of crimson velvet, profusely ornamented; and the latter in their robes of ceremony. Next came the Royal barge, with its precious freight. When the Royal party landed, leading the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal, each by a hand, a cheer of welcome resounded from one end of the gay corridor to the other, which the Prince and the Royal children received graciously and gracefully acknowledged

A procession was then formed, the civic authorities taking the lead. Then came the Royal party, accompanied by Lady Lyttelton; and after them Lord John Russell, the Marquis of Clanricarde, Sir F. T. Baring, Sir G. Grey, Sir R. Peel, and a host of notabilities in brilliant uniforms or court dresses. The Duke of Wellington joined in the pavilion, as did also Sir Robert Peel. The Lord Mayor having addressed a few words to the Prince, the procession from the pavilion to the Coal Exchange commenced; his Royal Highness walking between the two children, and bowing to the spectators as he passed along the covered platform erected upon the quay. This formed, perhaps, the most remarkable feature in the ceremony. The Royal party were loudly cheered as they proceeded along the quay: and the entire body of the spectators rose en masse, and the congratulations received by the Prince and the Royal children were such as must have made a deep and lasting impression upon them. The procession advanced, the trumpeters playing "God save the Queen."

Colonel Beatlock, of the 1st battal on of Coldstream Guards, was the brigade officer in attendance, and directed the movements of the military present. The Guard of Honour to receive the Royal personages on landing was composed of a company of the 2nd battalion of the Scots Fusilier Guards from the Tower. Colonel Conolay Conolay Cuewen, and Lieutenant Gibbs were the officers in attendance with the Guard of Honour.

When the Royal family emerged from the gangway into the Pavilion, they were received with a flourish of trumpets. The children were the first to see the Royal children; and many and warm were the expressions of admiration which were uttered as the young Prince and Princess passed down the corridor hand in hand with their brother and sister. The little Prince was dressed very pale and somewhat timid, wore a white waistcoat and trousers, a black velvet coat with a single row of gilt buttons, a white turndown collar, and black neckerchief. The little Princess wore a black velvet mantle, which was a pink quilted satin bonnet, with a small feather of the same colour at the side, a black velvet mantle drawn in at the waist, a green silk frock with white stripes and three flounces, and white shoes.

The neighbourhood of the Coal Exchange itself was a scene of great bustle from an early hour. About 1200 ladies and gentlemen were to be accommodated within the building, and to these that number were to witness the Royal procession in the long avenue through which it passed from the water-side to the Exchange; and the arrival of so many, and the marshalling them to their proper places in a short period, were duties necessary some careful and skilful arrangements.

The company began to arrive soon after nine o'clock. Lord Campbell, who wore a Court suit of black velvet, came very early; but was soon followed by the Duke of Wellington, who was received with a long loud cheer. His Grace, who looked in extremely good health, was dressed in a Field-Marshal's uniform; he entered into animated conversation with the Marquis of Salisbury, who had a long conference with the Duke of Northumberland. Lord Stanley and the Duke also conversed for some time with the Lady Mayoress; and several other ladies received introductions to his Grace

About half-past twelve o'clock, the Duke of Cambridge arrived, and was very warmly greeted. His Royal Highness soon made his way to the Duke of Wellington who pointed out some of the decorations of the building to the Royal guest with evident admiration. The Duke of Cambridge could not forbear exclaiming loudly, "Beautiful, beautiful! very handsome!" They stood upon the floor of the great hall or rotunda in which the market is to be held—a circular apartment sixty feet in diameter, having round its sides three tiers of galleries, one above another, from which the various counting-houses are to be entered. The hall is surmounted by a noble glass dome, the centre of which is seventy-four feet from the floor.

THE NEW COAL EXCHANGE.

As the superb edifice is described elsewhere, we shall here only detail the fittings for the Royal reception. Opposite the grand entrance from Thames-street was a throne erected for her Majesty, and by the throne were placed three chairs of state. The galleries were covered with a long look crimson cloth, spread with tables, on which was placed an elegant déjeûner, and which glittered with costly plate. The galleries were crowded with ladies and gentlemen in full dress, and the space was filled with the most distinguished personages, all in court suits or in uniform, the Gentlemen at Arms lining the circle.

It was nearly half-past one o'clock when the cheers of the spectators outside announced to the company within the Exchange that the pageant was approaching that building

The procession, which was conducted by Mr. Walton, of the Town Clerk's office, entered in the following order:—Mr. Harper and three other city trumpeters, in their rich costume; Mr. Bunning, the architect; twelve commoners on the committee Mr. T. White, Mr. Rathbone, Mr. Oliver, Mr. Freeman, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Deputy Hale, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Deputy Archer, Mr. Dewer, Mr. Blades, Mr. Shepherd, Mr. Eddins, Mr. J. Wood, chairman of the Court of Governors.

The Sheriff—Lawrence and Nicoll.

A deputation of the Aldermen, and the Recorder.

Among the Aldermen were—the aged and venerable Sir C. Hunter, the Lord Mayor Elect, Alderman Hooper, Sir G. Carroll, Sidney, Salomans, W. Hunter, Moon, Finnis, and Gibbs Carden.

The Lord Mayor, bearing the pearl Sword of State.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, leading the Prince of Wales with his left hand and the Princess Royal with his right.

The Royal suite and officers of state.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburgh Strelitz, the Prussian Minister, the French Ambassador and lady, the Prussian Minister (the Chevalier Bunsen), the American Minister (Mr. A. Lawrence) and his lady and daughter, the Belgian Minister and lady, the Bavarian Minister and lady, the Prussian Minister, the Brazilian Minister and lady, the Danish Minister, the Peruvian Minister, the Sardinian Minister, the Duke of Wellington, the Marquis of Clanricarde, Lord J. Russell and Miss Lister, Lord Anglesey, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Earl of Devon, the Earl of Howden, Sir G. Grey, Sir F. T. Baring, Admiral Berkeley, M.P.; Lord [illegible] Graham Milne, Mr. Goulburn, M.P.; [illegible] Masterman, M.P.; Mr [illegible] and Sir A. Galloway, Chairman of the East India Company, [illegible] Royal train or had previously arrived

The moment the Royal visitors were discern[illegible] all parts of the splendid assemblage in the Exchange; but even the cheering was almost immediately suspended, in the intense curiosity and admiration with which the Royal children were regarded

PRESENTATION OF THE ADDRESS.

As soon as the ceremonies had taken their places, the Lord Mayor advanced with the Recorder towards Prince Albert, who stood in front of the throne, and to the Royal children on his left; and the learned gentleman then proceeded to read the following address. The Prince of Wales seemed struck, and earnest awed, by the emphatic reading of the learned Recorder, and scarcely took his eyes off the learned functionary during this part of the proceedings:—

"TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT.

"May it please your Royal Highness, We, her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the city of London, in Common Council assembled, beg your Royal Highness's presence within the walls with the liveliest sentiments of gratitude and esteem, whilst we sincerely lament the temporary indisposition of her Majesty, which has this day deprived the citizens of London of her Majesty's Royal presence.

"The favour her Majesty has conferred upon her devoted subjects the citizens of London, in deputing your Royal Highness to represent her Majesty on this interesting occasion, is greatly enhanced by the indulgence accorded to their wishes by the presence of their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal; in which we joyfully behold the pledges and promise of a line of illustrious descendants to preserve to the united houses of her Majesty and your Royal Highnesses through future generations the hereditary throne of these realms.

"To meet the demands of a rapid extension in the great element of British commerce—the coasting trade, the nursery of seamen and of our commercial marine—this capacious building, the Coal Exchange, chiefly constructed of iron, at once light and durable, has been erected.

"When we call to mind the various branches of science employed in this important branch of trade, in the commodity of coal, we are more than doubled

"When in a protracted naval warfare, happily remote from our times, this necessary of British subsistence was found unequal to the necessities of the country, with what security may we not venture to repose on the force of the navy now called into existence by the expansion of our commerce and the inexhaustible resources of British industry.

"We congratulate her Majesty on these great and beneficial results, which the records of Parliament abundantly testify.

"May the Most Mighty bless your Royal Highness, with your Royal Highness, the blessing of health; to exhibit to her beloved off-pring and to an admiring nation the bright pattern of domestic duties and of public virtues; to reap the fruits of that ardent and unceasing solicitude ever evinced by her Majesty for their welfare; and to be sanctified in the hearts and the affections of a free, loyal, and religious people.

"Signed by order of the Court,

"H. A. MERRYWETHER."

The Lord Mayor having delivered the address to Prince Albert, the latter handed it to Sir George Grey, the Home Secretary, who placed it in the Prince's hands the following answer, which was very distinctly read by his Royal Highness

"I have received with satisfaction your assurances of attachment to her Majesty, and I thank you for the expressions of concern with which you have noticed the temporary indisposition of the Queen.

"I rejoice that your commerce has so much increased, and of the number of seamen employed has taken place in that branch of the coasting trade which has required the erection of the magnificent building which I now behold.

"Her Majesty commands me to express her desire that free, loyal, and religious people. It is our earnest hope that the Prince of Wales may be regarded with those feelings of affection which have been at all times the best security of the throne."

Our Artists have engraved the above very interesting scene.

The Lord Mayor then presented to Prince Albert Mr. John Wood, the mover of the address and chairman of the Committee of Management; Mr. S.S. Edkins, the secretary of the address and the benefit, and Mr. Bunning, the architect of the New Coal Exchange. The Prince received the latter gentleman with marked attention, and the announcement of his name was received with much cheering. Prince Albert [illegible] Mr. Bunning [illegible] Lord Mayor. He [illegible] Mr. Wood pointed their attention to the young Prince's dress, with its beautiful canopy of feathers: both of them seemed pleased and interested

The Royal party and suite then passed up one of the staircases into the lower gallery, and from it into a gay and brilliant scene. The private apartments prepared for them At the entrance of that for Prince Albert were placed Mr. J. E. Jones's fine bust of her Majesty, which was viewed with marked admiration. The rooms around Prince Albert's apartment were richly and tastefully fitted up; and in one of them was a beautifully executed model of the Coal Exchange. Many of the principal guests followed the Royal party up-stairs, and among them Sir Robert Peel, who, on coming to the gallery open to the hall, was no sooner recognized than he was greeted with loud and long-continued cheering, renewed again and again. He walked on, however, and, without taking the applause to himself, entered one of the apartments adjoining the Royal rooms. On his return, a few minutes afterwards, the cheering was renewed, the ladies in the hall joining in the pæans by waving their handkerchiefs; and the right hon. gentleman then bowed in acknowledgment of the honour

The carpet was now removed from the floor of the merchants' area, that its beautifully inlaid geometrical floor might be seen.

The band of the 2d Life Guards entertained the company at this period with some very effective performances.

After the lapse of a few minutes more, nearly all the principal guests returned to the [illegible]. Lord J. Russell, who had scarcely been recognised before, was cheered as he returned along the gallery.

Shortly before two o'clock the Duke of Wellington left; his Grace was saluted with a noble farewell cheer.

(Continued on page 300.)

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The Yorkshire Union Hunt meeting, which comes off on Monday and Tuesday next, brings the legitimate season to a close. Taking it as a whole—a review of it in half-a-dozen words, we may observe that, on the whole, it has been highly satisfactory—the sport at nearly all the great meetings has been considerably above the average; speculation, without being ruinous, has been brisk, and nearly all the great prizes have been carried off by gentlemen of rank and character, and without whose countenance and support the turf would cease to be looked upon as the most important of our national sports.

The steeple chase gatherings for next week are three in number; viz. Crewe on Tuesday, the Metropolitan on Wednesday, and Woodford on Friday. We anticipate plenty of sport, but nothing very brilliant.

The coursing meetings include Newcastle on Monday and Tuesday, High Leven and Mid Lothian on Tuesday, Cardington (three days), Whitchurch. on Wednesday, the Altcar and Ridgway (two days each), and Chapel on Thursday and Friday.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY. There was a strong gathering at the Corner this afternoon, and numerous changes have occurred in the two last days' racing at Newmarket. Betting was brisk on the next Derby; Bellingham, Delicon, The Indian, Sweetheart, and several others, being backed with a spirit which augurs well for the next year's running, we have before remarked, does not "take" in the ring as it did last year.

10 to 1 agst Bellingbroke	20 to 1 agst The Ballina (t)	33 to 1 agst The Nigger
11 to 1 — Ghillie Callum	20 to 1 — Mildew (t)	33 to 1 — Pinsford (t)
12 to 1 — Knight of Avenel (t)	20 to 1 — Orlando (t)	33 to 1 — Volta
20 to 1 — Climber (t)	25 to 1 — Cyprus	33 to 1 — Hartford
20 to 1 — Sweetheart (t)	30 to 1 — Mavors (t)	33 to 1 — Little Do.

DERBY, 1851.

66 to 1 agst a by Bulwan out of Merope | 8 to 1 agst The Knight of the Garter (t)
66 to 1 — a by Melbourne, out of Dragonda (t) | 66 to 1 — Hengist (t)

WORCESTER STAKES (CLASS).

8 to 1 agst Rhinbone | 8 to 1 agst The Knight of the Garter (t)
10 to 1 agst The Rector | 10 to 1 agst Rat-trap

METROPOLITAN STEEPLE-CHASE.

100 to 10 agst Sarah Sykes | 100 to 12 agst The Commoner

CHESTER CUP.

1000 to 15 on the field.

THURSDAY.—The betting this afternoon was confined to 11 to 1 against Ghillie Callum to £200, 20 to 1 in hundreds against Delicon, and 1000 to 10 against Nutshell. Delicon is sold to Lord Airlie.

ROWING MATCH.—The great rowing match between W. Forest, of Greenwich, and E. Rounds, of Woolwich, for the championship of these places and £100, came off on Tuesday, and was, from first to last, a most spirited and trying contest. The distance rowed was from Erith to Charlton Pier—about 7½ miles. Forest won by about 150 yards.

HARE HUNTING.—Tuesday last was the day on which hare hunting commenced; therefore it may be useful to mention that all authority given by the Ground Game Act to others to kill hares upon such land only continues good and protects from certificate duty until the 1st of February in the year following that within which the same is granted; and, consequently, should (like game) be annually renewed and registered with the clerk to the justices of the division in which such lands are situated, to be a protection against informations for killing game without a certificate; so that persons so authorized last year, and only protected up the 2nd of February last, and, without a renewal of the certificate, will be liable to all the pains and penalties of killing game without a license.

LARGE IMPORTATION OF AUSTRALIAN SEED WHEAT.—An important and novel feature in the trade between the two countries took place at Liverpool last week. The import amount to upwards of 6000 bushels of excellent quality, brought by the Sunnua, from Port Adelaide; and it forms the first large arrival of the kind from the colony in question. It appears to be extremely fine in quality, and likely to prove valuable to the landed and farming interests. By the same vessel, also, 50 tons of flour, the growth and manufacture of the same dependency, and of extraordinarily fine quality, have been received.

Amongst the passengers in the Canada steamer, from New York, lately was Mrs. Patterson, who was married, in 1810, to Jerome Bonaparte, but whom, by a decree of Napoleon, he was compelled to divorce. Jerome is in Paris. Mrs. Patterson is sister-in-law to the Marchioness of Wellesley and the Duchess of Leeds.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, November 4.—Twenty-second Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 5.—Gunpowder Plot.
TUESDAY, 6.—St. Leonard.
WEDNESDAY, 7.—Moon's Last Quarter, 8h. 23m. A.M.
THURSDAY, 8.—Sun rises 7h. 7m., sets 4h. 32m.
FRIDAY, 9.—Lord Mayor's Day. Prince of Wales born, 1841.
SATURDAY, 10.—Martin Luther born, at Eisleben, 1483.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOV. 10, 1849.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.
4. 19 4. 39	5. 5 5. 43	5. 49 6. 19	6. 35 7. 19	7. 45 8. 27	9. 10 9. 50	10. 30 11. 10

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. W. BATTY.—Powerful Attraction.—The celebrated Comedian and Clown, Mr W. BARRY, will have the honour of making his First Appearance these five returned from the Provinces. These renowned Equestrian Artistes, Mr. JOHN BRIDGES and Mme. ADELAIDE, have been receiving the past week with the utmost favour, will appear in their Unique Performances every Evening. On MONDAY NOV. 5, the Entertainments will commence at Seven o'Clock, with Fitzhall's immensely successful New Grand Spectacle of the PROPHET, with the Farce of JACK JUNK. A brilliant and Equestrian Extravaganza on the most popular subject, is in preparation, and will be produced on Monday, November 12. Box-office open from 11 till 4. Stage Manager, Mr W. West.

EXETER HALL WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.—The THIRD CONCERT will be held on the evening of WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7th.—Vocal Performers: Miss Rebecca Isaacs, Miss Rainforth, Miss Eyles, Miss Huddart, Miss O'Connor, and Mrs. Alexander Newton; Mr. Lockey, Signor Bartolini, Mr. Land, Mr. George Tedder, and Herr Formes. Grand Pianoforte, Miss Ellen Day. Solo Violin, M. Sainton (his second and last appearance at these Concerts). Sax-Horns. Distin and Sons (their last appearance previous to their provincial tour). The Programme will commence with a Selection from Barnett's Opera, "The Mountain Sylph," in which Herr Formes will sing, in English, the celebrated Scena—"Non what thou hast cast away," and "Farewell to the Mountain," and in the Trio "The Magic Wove heard." In the course of the evening, Mrs. Alexander Newton will repeat (by desire) Mozart's aria—"O dolce Angel d'amore," from "Il Flauto Magico." Tickets, 5s. and 3s.; Reserved Seats, 4s.; Area, 2s.; may be had of Mr. STAMMERS, 4, Exeter-hall; of Mr. STEDDE, 378, Strand, adjoining Exeter hall (west); and of all Musicsellers.

THE MISSISSIPPI and MISSOURI RIVERS, exhibited, by command, to her Majesty the Queen, H R H Prince Albert, and Royal Family, at Windsor Castle.—Now Views, showing the Western Banks of the Mississippi River, Town, Villages, &c., to New Orleans, being the largest picture ever executed by man. Exhibiting at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, every morning at half-past two, evening at half-past seven. Admission, lower seats, 2s.; gallery, 1s.

Open Daily from Eleven till Five; and every Evening, EXCEPT SATURDAY, from Seven till Half-past Four, and every Evening at a Quarter to Ten. LECTURES on the CHEMISTRY OF WOOD, by Mr ASHLEY. LECTURE, with EXPERIMENTS, on the HYDRO-ELECTRIC MACHINE, by Dr. BACHHOFFNER.—EXHIBITION of the OXY-HYDROGEN MICROSCOPE.—DIVER and DIVING BELL.—THE CHROMATROPE.—MODELS and MACHINERY EXPLAINED. Admission, 1s. Schools, Half-price.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"S." Manchester.—About 4½ per cent

"H. W."—We cannot undertake to inquire at the Post-Office. We think there must have been some error in the address.

"N. W." Croydon.—Thanks.

"A Subscriber."—The address of Mr. Lucas, the portrait-painter, is 6, Newman-street, Oxford-street.

"P. P. U."—We have not room for the "Lament."

"A Subscriber" will find the portrait in our Journal.

"D. L." Anchry-House.—The Ordnance receipt for blue light, in the new edition of "The Boy's Own Book," just published.

"Crona."—We should say the privilege rests with the organist.

"J. H."—John Mitchell was tried at Dublin.

"Clementine."—Water, by exposure to the atmosphere, absorbs much of its oxygen, and in the same degree contributes additionally to the growth of plants.

"Bob" will find a memoir sketch of Alfred Tennyson in Vol. II. of the "New Spirit of the Age," 1844.

"X. Z." Gosh-street.—Received.

"Unity" is thanked, but neither of his suggestions is practicable.

"R. T."—Schneider's "Complete Pocket German and English Dictionary," just out.

"Modesty."—There would be no impropriety.

"F. W.," Sealy-bridge.—We cannot undertake the commission. Apply to a dealer in Genoa fruits

"J. A. K." is thanked; but we cannot avail ourselves of the Sketch, as we have already engraved the subject.

"J. E." Witney.—See the "New Postal Regulations between Great Britain and the United States," in our Journal for October 6, 1849.

"A. M."—We cannot inform you.

"E. D. J. N."—Apply to Williams and Norgate, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden.

"A Constant Reader."—Newspapers may be sent to Australia postage free, if addressed "by Sydney Packet," on the last day of every month.

"Pomona."—Charles Green, ex-King of Bohemia, died July 5th, 1849. Mr. Green had ascended in his great balloon, from Vauxhall Gardens, Friday, Sept. 15, 1848. It was named "Nassau" from its having made a voyage to Germany, and ascended in the Grand Duchy of Nassau, Nov. 8, 1836, after a voyage from England of 18 hours.

"G. C. K." will find the origin of St Valentine's Day described in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK for 1846, under "February."

"P. S."—Grayson's drawing academy is at No. 1, Banner-street, St. Luke's.

"A Correspondent," Bolton.—See the instructions in wood-engraving, in No. 114, of our Journal. To attain such success as you refer to would occupy, at least, seven years.

"F. M." Sandbach.—Next week.

"Française."—Meadow's and Surenne's are good school French dictionaries.

"A Reader." Wolverhampton.—Received.

"Clericus" will find Illustrations of Labourers' Cottages in No. 391 of our Journal.

"G. F. J. C.," North Shields.—Spoonfuls

"E. M." Llangollen Address "Birmingham."

"L. M. N."—Nonce is an old word for purpose, intent, design.

"Lucas," Drogheda, should consult a solicitor.

"Meta"—your question is too indefinite for us to answer.

"M. A. S." will not be liable.

"S. F. H."—We have not room for the letter on "Irish Regeneration."

"C. W. C." Severn Side.—Declined.

"Moreton," Norfolk, had better apply to one of the Archæological Societies.

"A Subscriber," Poulton-le-Sands.—Declined.

"A Subscriber," Belfast.—Some years since, a person at Crowland, Lincolnshire, walked 1000 miles in as many hours.

"Scotus." St. John's Wood, may see the Edinburgh and Glasgow newspapers at Peel's Coffee-house, Fleet-street; or Deacon's, Walbrook.

"Aubrey Hall."—We have already expressed this view.

"E. H.," Somerton, will, perhaps, name the subject.

"Guariolus."—Declined.

"H. G.," Dublin.—Delamotte's work on Anastatic Printing is published by Bogue, 86, Fleet street.

"A Juvenile Correspondent," Poplar.—The Ides, in the Roman Calendar, meant the 15th day of March, except in March, May, July, and October, when the Ides fell on the 15th day. The Ides of March was the day on which Julius Cæsar was assassinated, 44 B.C.

"Isis." The true north may be found sufficiently near for the placing a vane by means of a good compass, allowing, if at London, 22 deg. 35 min. for vast variation. This was the means lately adopted by Mr. Glaisher in fixing the compass-cards at the different railway stations. If the place be not London, apply to Mr. Glaisher, Blackheath, for the western variation, &c.

"B. B. B.," "A Subscriber," "Bangorensis," "E. B. P." "A Juvenile Correspondent," Poplar, "A Constant Reader," "S. C. P.," Bridge of Allan, "Erin," Dublin.—Your is generally supposed to have been, in former times, placed in criminal courts to prevent infection, or the ill effects of the heat from a crowd. It may, however, be a relic of an old defensative against witchcraft, for which purpose rue was worn about the neck, as an amulet, in Arbuthnot's time. "Rue was called the Herb of Grace by the country people, and, probably, for the reason assigned by Mr. Warburton, that it was used on Sundays by the Romans in their exorcisms." (See Grey's "Notes on Shakspeare," Vol. II.)

"F. A.," Buxton.—We do not know of any coat of arms belonging to the name of Fresbney. "Fresnes" bears "Az., a cross arg. between twelve fleurs-de-lis or."

"J. M. B."—We cannot trace any crest to the name.

"Juvenis." Influence with the Admiralty Board. The commission cannot be obtained by purchase.

"Lupulus."—We should not be justified in giving the information required.

"Lancelot," Trinity College, Cambridge.—The office of the Athenæum is in Wellington-street North, Strand.

"J. D." Summer-hall, is thanked.

"J. G.," Sutton Cottage.—We cannot inform you.

"Corpus," Blackfriars-road.—No.

"A Sweet-liver," Cornwall.—Apply to Watkins and Hill, Charing-cross.

"A Native of Bucks."—We have not room for the letter.

"A Pigeon Fancier" may obtain a little book on his favourite art, of Dean and Co., Threadneedle-street

"W. Z.," Sidcot.—The passage is from Milton.

"E. A. G.," Rochefield.—We cannot inform you. A "Chronology of Remarkable Events" is given at the close of each of our half-yearly volumes.

 Answers to several correspondents are unavoidably deferred.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Henry on the Discovery of America.——Punch's Pocket-Book ——The Comic Almanack —— Little Fanette.——The Amber Witch.——Barnard's Studies.——Guides to Art.——Letters to a Lady.

IMPORTANT TO NEWSPAPER PURCHASERS.

Early in the New Year, 1850, will be given a

SPLENDID VIEW OF ROME

To all REGULAR SUBSCRIBERS to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from this date. This View of Rome has been carefully drawn by Artists specially engaged for the City; and the utmost care has been taken to have the Drawings Engraved in the best manner.

November 3, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1849.

THE President of the French Republic has summarily dismissed M. Odillon Barrot and the whole of his ministerial colleagues. After the manner in which the President was betrayed by that ministry, in reference to the policy of the Republic in the Roman States, as sketched in the famous letter to Colonel Ney, the President had no alternative, if he did not intend to be a mere puppet, but to hint to them, as soon as was convenient to himself, that he had no further occasion for their services. We stated last week our impression that the President would not be long in finding or making the opportunity of surrounding himself with a ministry of views in unison with his own. We scarcely thought, however, that he would act with the extreme promptitude which he has displayed. The letter in which he announces to the Legislative Assembly the determination to which he has come, and the motives which have governed his conduct, is a daring document. It says, in most plain and unmistakeable terms, that he is the head and master of France, and that he is resolved to remain so. It is a bold throw for Empire, and we should not be at all surprised if the dice should turn up in his favour. Such a document, in the temper of the leading statesmen of the Assembly, and in the circumstances of France at the present moment, is either the act of consummate wisdom or of the extreme of madness. Success will rank it as the first, and failure as the second. One thing about the document is evident. It is the work of an honest man, disgusted with the want of principle in the people around him. It administers a remarkable reproof to the hollowness and insincerity that characterise the leading men of all parties—from M. Molé and M. Thiers down to M. Odillon Barrot, and to which the sole exceptions are M. de Montalembert and M. de Lamartine. The next few days will in all probability show whether or not the French Constitution can do the work expected of it; and whether a President that cannot be removed without a revolution, can manage to carry on the business of the nation with a Legislative Assembly which holds its powers by the same right that he holds his own, and which he cannot dissolve, however hostile it may be, or remove in any way, except by a coup d'état and a revolution. The situation is an embarrassing one; but the Thierses, the Molés, and the Odillon Barrots have brought themselves and their country into it by their own duplicity, and want of common honesty in the Roman question. We sincerely wish France well out of it.

THE Protectionists of Canada, offended by the Free Trade policy of the Home Government, and the Loyalists, offended by the impartiality with which the Colonial-office has endeavoured to steer its course between the contending parties and races that unfortunately dispute with each other for the possession of power, have combined their strength, and put forth a document in favour of the annexation of Canada to the United States. We must say, for our own part, that the arguments in this declaration, which has already received a large number of signatures, are, as regards the Canadians, of the very greatest weight. We have nothing to say upon the Free Trade part of the question, except that it is the weakest point in the Canadian argument, the more especially since the new President of the United States has given his adhesion to a Free Trade policy, and administered a heavier blow to the Protectionist party in the States than it ever yet received; but, as regards the advantages likely to accrue to Canada herself from an amalgamation with her powerful neighbour, whatever the economical policy of the last-mentioned may be, we think there can be no doubt upon any reasonable and dispassionate mind that they are likely to be many. The subscribers to the declaration allege that the peaceful annexation of Canada to the United States would change the ground of political contest between races and parties, and allay and obliterate those irritations and conflicts of rancour and recrimination which have hitherto disfigured the social fabric. They state that they have now no voice in the affairs of the empire, and that they do not share in its honours or emoluments. England is their parent state, with whom they have no equality, but towards whom they stand in the simple relation of obedience. But, as citizens of the United States, they allege that the public service of the nation would be open to them—a field for high and honourable distinction on which they and their posterity might enter on terms of perfect equality. Nor would the amicable separation of Canada from Great Britain befraught, in their opinion, with advantages to the Canadian alone. The relief to the parent state from the large expenditure now incurred in the military occupation of the country—the removal of the many causes of collision with the United States, which result from the contiguity of mutual territories so extensive—the benefit of the larger market which the increasing prosperity of Canada would create, are considerations which, in their idea render the incorporation of Canada with the United States a desirable consummation. All these arguments are good as regards Canada; and could the statesmen of this country believe that they were the sentiments of the large majority of the Canadian people, there can be little doubt that they would agree to the annexation, which in such a case would sooner or later be accomplished in spite of them. It remains to be seen, however, whether this document be a mere flash in the pan—the idea of a disappointed faction, or the deliberate opinion of the Canadians. In the first case, this country would resist the proposal to the last extremity; in the second, warned by the experience of the past, and knowing the worthlessness of a discontented colony, our Legislature would, in all probability, make a virtue of necessity, and consent to the emancipation of a dependency, that, in such a state of sentiment, would be quite strong enough to pursue its own course notwithstanding our opposition. Sooner or later, the independence of Canada is sure to be accomplished—as surely as the infants born yesterday shall grow into men; unless, indeed, we shall decree all our colonies to be integral parts of the kingdom of Great Britain, and allow them to send members to Parliament, by the same right and for the same reason that we accord the franchise to London or to Manchester, to Middlesex or to Lancashire. It is possible that by such a course of proceeding we might preserve some of our larger colonies for a time; but, even with such a participation in British power, we doubt whether we could retain Canada for two generations, or the great continent of Australia for three. Their independence is a question of time; and it will be well for us at home if we have sufficient wisdom to know when the time has come, and sufficient virtue to reconcile ourselves peaceably to that which is inevitable. When no longer our colonies, they may still be our best friends—still afford homes for our surplus population, and in a far greater degree than at present be the consumers of our manufactures and the encouragers of our trade. To be deprived of Canada by force and the connivance of the United States, would be humiliation indeed; but to yield it up of our own free-will, would be but a small sacrifice. We question, indeed, whether it would not be a gain.

POSTSCRIPT.

GENERAL THANKSGIVING.—We have much pleasure in announcing that a Privy Council will be held at Windsor in the course of next week, at which a day will be appointed for a General Thanksgiving to Almighty God upon the great decrease of cholera.

MICHAELMAS TERM.—Yesterday (Friday) being the first day of Term, the Judges proceeded in state to Westminster Hall to open the Courts. The absence of Lord Denman was generally noticed; and we regret to say, that, from the state of his Lordship's health, there is no probability of his being able to attend to his judicial duties during the current Term. Mr. Justice Talfourd took his seat for the first time on the bench in the Common Pleas.

SWEARING IN OF THE LORD MAYOR ELECT.—Alderman Farncombe, the Lord Mayor Elect, proceeded shortly after ten o'clock, yesterday (Friday) morning, from the Guildhall, to the residence of the Lord Chancellor, to be sworn in before his Lordship. The Lord Mayor Elect was preceded by one of the City Marshals, the City Pleaders, Under-Sheriffs, City Remembrancer, the Town Clerk, and other civic functionaries. The Lord Chancellor signified to the worthy Alderman her Majesty's approbation of the choice of the citizens; and, after being sworn in, the alderman and those who accompanied him withdrew.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—The Judges, yesterday (Friday) morning, appointed the following days for holding the sessions of this Court for the ensuing year:—1849—November 26, December 17. 1850—January 7, February 4, March 4, April 8, May 6, June 10, July 8, August 19, September 16, and October 21.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The decisive step taken by the President, of dismissing his Cabinet as soon as they ceased to be of accord with himself on an important question of Ministerial policy, is said to have fallen like a petard among the Legitimists and Orleanists, who, under the name of the Conservative party, or party of Order, united to support the Odillon Barrot Ministry, solely because they regarded it as the best instrument with which to effect their own particular partisan views and objects—the chief and first of which was the return of the Bourbons to power.

They looked upon the President as a mere nullity in the hands of the Cabinet, and this unexpected vigour on his part has startled and completely posed them for the present.

Amongst the working classes the measure is viewed with approval. Various opinions are entertained respecting the stability of the new Government, the majority of which, perhaps, may be said to be unfavourable to its continuance; but it is only just that every indulgence should be extended to it until its inefficiency be made fully manifest.

WEST INDIES.

Yesterday (Friday) morning the West India Mail brought by the Clyde arrived at Southampton.

The results of the pending contest between the House of Assembly and the Governor of Jamaica on the subject of retrenchment, had begun to manifest themselves in a rather awkward manner. There was no revenue bill nor the ordinary bill for supporting the police power in existence, and the island was, therefore, without any police force; but the mess composing it had, under the difficult circumstances of the case, been sworn in special constables.

At Trinidad a riot had broken out on the 1st of October, arising from the people demanding an abrogation of the law that persons sent to prison for small debts should be treated as criminals. The Attorney-General made his appearance, and declared that the obnoxious clause had been annulled. Notwithstanding this notification, the Governor-General, in passing through the crowd in his carriage, was assailed with stones. The Riot Act was read, but, as the mob refused to disperse, the military were ordered to fire, when several of the people were killed and others wounded. Later accounts state that various estates were set on fire, and property to a considerable amount destroyed. There is nothing from the other islands deserving particular notice.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

The Bodleian Library closed on Thursday last, till the 9th instant.

CAMBRIDGE.

CONGREGATION.—At a Congregation held on Wednesday, graces passed in the senate: 1. To confirm the report of the Syndicate appointed April 25, 1849, to consider whether any and what alterations may be made in the regulations for the classical examination after admission ad respondendum quæstionis. 2. To appoint Mr. A. M. SEARLE, of St. Catharine's College, an examiner at the previous examinations in the Lent and Michaelmas Terms of the year 1850, in the place of Mr. Clark, of Trinity College, who has resigned. 3. To appoint the Vice-Chancellor and several Masters of Colleges, &c., a Syndicate to consider whether any and what regulations may be made with advantage for conducting the examinations of candidates for the degree of LL B; and whether any and what other measures may be devised for bringing the law faculty more closely into connexion with the present university system; and to report to the senate before the division of the Lent Term, 1850.

We are happy to be enabled to state positively that Dr. Ollivant will be the new Bishop of Llandaff.

NEW COLONIAL BISHOPRICS.—Mr. Justice Coleridge, the Venerable Archdeacon Hale, the Right Hon. William Ewart Gladstone, M.P., and J. G. Hubbard, Esq., the treasurers of the Colonial Bishoprics Fund, have submitted a statement to the Archbishops and Bishops of the United Church of England and Ireland, in which they state that the sum contributed for the purposes of the fund was £18,600, which has been employed in the endowment of nine new episcopal sees; and that, notwithstanding the exercise of severe economy in fixing the revenues of the new sees, the fund may now be considered as exhausted, while, at the same time, the rapid increase of emigration demands not only the formation of new dioceses but the subdivision of those already formed, without the possibility of dividing the endowment at the same time. A statement signed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, York, Armagh, and Dublin, and the Bishops of London, Durham, Winchester, and twenty-six other Bishops, has been drawn up, for the purpose of directing the attention of members of the Church of England to the foregoing statement, with the view of effecting a further manifestation of the liberality which has been so largely shown already in the same cause.

PREFERMENTS.—Rev. William Lambert, B.A., to Tibberton R., Gloucester, diocese of Gloucester and Bristol; value, £267; void by death of Rev. William Bosanquet. Rev. Thomas Scott, Rector of Brompton, Middlesex. The Venerable Archdeacon Philpotts, to Kenwyn and St. Kea V., diocese of Exeter; value, with residence, £703; vacant by the death of Rev. G. J. Cornish; patron, the Bishop of Exeter. Rev. F. W. Gifford, to Wroxton V., Lincolnshire, diocese of Lincoln; value, £203; patron, Rev. J. Gifford. Rev. C. Wharton, to Starry V., Kent, diocese of Canterbury, vice Rev. C. R. Handley, resigned; value, £219, with residence; patron, the Archbishop of Canterbury.

HONORARY CANONRIES.—The Venerable Archdeacon Clough, to the Honorary Canonry of David-ap-Howell; the Venerable Archdeacon Clive, to the Honorary Canonry of Richard Harrison, in the Cathedral Church of St. Asaph; the Rev. Charles Henry Morgan, M.A., to the Honorary Canonry of Gloucester Cathedral

BENEFICES AND APPOINTMENTS VACANT.—Rectories.—Bedwas, Monmouthshire, near Caerphilly, Glamorganshire, diocese of Llandaff; patron, the Bishop of Llandaff; value, £500; Right Rev. Edward, Bishop of Llandaff deceased. Sicke Edith, Herefordshire, diocese of Hereford; annual value, £470, with residence; patron, E. T. Foley, Esq.; Archdeacon Onslow, deceased. Westminster, St. Margaret, diocese of London; value, £450, with residence; patron, the Crown; Rev. H. H. Milman, promoted. Vicarages.—Newent, Gloucestershire, diocese of Gloucester and Bristol; annual value, £1076, with residence; patron, Miss Foley; Archdeacon Onslow, deceased. Taunton, St. Mary Magdalene, Somerset, diocese of Bath and Wells; patron, Rev. James Cottle, D.C.L., who has resigned.

THE LATE ATTEMPTED PARRICIDE AT CHISWICK.—Although Mr. Monkhouse, sen., still continues progressing towards convalescence, it is not considered that he will have attained sufficient strength to be able to attend at the court to give his evidence in the case for some weeks. The accused will therefore continue to be weekly remanded, as on Wednesday last, for some time.

Great sensation has been caused, during the last few days, at Berlin, in consequence of 240 pupils of the military school having been taken ill, with all the symptoms of poisoning, immediately after dinner; whereupon an analysis of the food was made, which led to the discovery that a considerable quantity of arsenic had been mixed up with the potatoes.

A son of Prince Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein, Augustenburg Noer, is about to emigrate to Australia in the Alfred barque, of Hamburgh which, it is stated, will call at Plymouth for other members of the family bound for the same destination. The property of the family is understood to have been much reduced by the war carried on in the duchies, the property on the island of Alsen having been ravaged by the Danes, and rendered next to valueless.

On Wednesday, information was received by the police that a letter, addressed to J. W. Gilbart, Esq., Lothbury, posted in the Nottingham Post-office on the afternoon of the 24th ult., containing cash and notes of the Bank of England, and other securities, to the amount of £2000, had been stolen whilst in course of transit to London. £100 reward is offered for the discovery of the guilty parties.

ARRIVAL OF THE ROYAL PRO

AT THE CUSTOM-HOUSE QUAY.

MUSIC.

THE ITALIAN OPERA IN PARIS

We have been requested by Signor Ronconi to publish the following letter:—

"PARIS, October 27, 1849.

"SIR,—Divers ill-natured reports have been circulated in London as to the difficulties which had arisen for the re-opening of the Italian Opera House in Paris. Permit me, through your influential journal, to announce that the French Minister of the Interior (M. Dufaure) has displayed much anxiety to preserve for me the direction of the first-rate lyric stage, and that he has even afforded me a great mark of confidence, by prolonging for three years the license which had been previously granted to me. The theatre will open on Thursday, Nov. 1, without fail, in the beautiful 'Salle Ventadour,' with renowned artistes and a complete company. I shall again make every exertion to merit the encouragement which has been so kindly extended to me both in London and England.

"I accept, Mr. Editor, my very humble compliments. "G. RONCONI"

We exclusively announced in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of last week that M. Ronconi was the lessee. The opening opera was "I Capuletti ed i Montecchi"—Romeo by Mdlle. Alboni, and Tebaldo by Persiani. M. Benoist was appointed conductor, and M. Gauthier chorus-master. The début of the new tenor, Lucchesi, from whom much is expected, was soon to take place. Labiache, Mario, and Moriani had arrived in Paris. Every preparation was made to secure a full house.

We learn that Madame Viardot's return to the Grand Opera in Paris created an extraordinary sensation. Her acting and singing of Alice, in Meyerbeer's "Prophète," are considered to have gained in interest since she played the part at the Royal Italian Opera in London. The receipts on the two nights of the "Prophète" were immense; and during the fifth act (the fourth here), the house rose three times en masse to cheer her cavatina. The German papers contradict the report of the death of Madame Sophie Schroëder, the famed tragedine. She was alive and well at Augsburg, although 83 years of age. These journals announce a German version of the "Prophète," for Hamburg, Dresden, Vienna, Munich, and Berlin, Madame Viardot to be the Fidès, being the third language in which she will have played the part.

MUSICAL EVENING.—On Wednesday night, at Exeter Hall, was the second of the London Wednesday Concerts. The vocalists were Mrs. A. Newton, Misses Rainforth, A. and M. Williams, Eyles, O'Connor, Huddart, R. Isaacs, Mr. Lockey, Harr Fenner, and Stimpson. M. Bilse was the solo performer; Mr. Sainton the solo violinist; and Distin and sons played on the Sax-horns. On the same evening, at the Nations. Hall, was the fifth of the excellent Hoborn Vocal Concerts.—The fifth evening Glee Concert will take place at the Western Literary Institution.—The Whittington Club gave an evening concert on Monday, at which the Misses Williams, Pyne, Messent, Messrs. Land, Herbert, Hodges, and Lefler were the vocalists, and Miss Kate Loder, Messrs. Lazarus, Richardson, and F. B. Jewson were the solo players.—The first meeting of the London Sacred Harmonic Society was held at Exeter Hall on Friday, when the "Messiah" was given, conducted by Costa.—The Western Madrigal Society will meet this evening, for the first time this season.—Miss C. Hayes has been singing in the northern towns this week and next Monday will appear in Dublin.—Mr. John Parry will commence a tour in Wales next week.

THE THEATRES.

PRINCESS'

It was a happy notion of Mr. Macfarren to select such a popular comedy as "King Charles the Second; or, the Merry Monarch," for the subject of an opera. This drama, produced at Covent-Garden Theatre, May 27th, 1824, was written by Howard Payne, the American actor, who was lessee and manager for some time of Sadler's Wells Theatre. He founded his piece on a French vaudeville, from which same source the late Thomas Dibdin derived his "Waggeries of Wapping," brought out at the Surrey Theatre, prior to the Covent Garden piece. The original cast of "King Charles the Second" will not easily be forgotten. The Monarch was Charles Kemble, the witty Rochester by Jones, Copp by Fawcett, the Page by Durnset, Merry by Miss M. Tree, and Lady Clara by Mrs. Faucit. It will also be recollected that, in November, 1846, at Drury-Lane Theatre, under the title of "The Wags of Wapping," a ballet was performed, taken from "Betty," which was produced at the Adelphi Theatre under the direction of the Misses Mdlle. Sophie Croce. The story, therefore, was familiar to the play-going public —a very important advantage in the selection of the libretto for an English opera, considering that so many authors are taken by the indistinct enunciation of so many of our singers, to render words unintelligible. The poet for Mr. Macfarren's opera is Mr Desmond Ryan, and although he has not altogether transferred the refined and sparkling qualities of the original dialogue to his adaptation; and considering, likewise, the harsh nature of our language, and the difficulty of fitting it to the rhythm of music, he has ably acquitted himself in his task. We must, however, protest against the liberty he has made in the comedy. For Lady Castlemaine to substitute "the Queen" of Charles the Second; and, by this innovation, be deprived the composer of the under-plot of Rochester's love for Lady Clara, and of the interest attached to the charade's reformation by a condition in the passage of the Merry Monarch's passion for nocturnal rambling—as this is Rochester's inducement to leave his Royal master in pawn for this reckoning of Copp at Wapping. The "platonic" duo between the Queen and Rochester, although very pretty in itself, is, in a second act, was evidently puzzling for the composer; but if he had had to have written an impassioned love duo between Lady Clara and Rochester, how natural and interesting would have been the situation!

On the poem it is not requisite further to dwell—the amusing incidents every theatre frequenter is well acquainted with. For a comic opera, it affords a composer every variety for musical development, and Mr. Macfarren has skilfully availed himself of many of the situations.

The opera is divided into two acts, the first of which occupies nearly two hours The overture is of the Weberian order, and is clear and refined. The melody of the Page's opening air gliding in beautifully, and the pervading theme being sprightly we had no. The introductory chorus, "Feet and bright the moments fly," in which a solo of the Page is skilfully interwoven, is pretty and effective. The air assigned to the Queen, "Fare ye well, fond hopes adorning," is so inadequately sung that it is difficult to judge of its merits; and the same remark may apply to the aria d'entrata of the King, the elaborate orchestration of which, however, struck us as being piquant and original. A duettino, "Fear no sorrow," between the King and Queen, is very harmless. It is followed by a gem, "She shines before me like a star," the first ballad of the Page, the motif of which is the second subject in the overture. This air is inevitably destined to a lasting popularity: it is full of poetic expression; truly a melodious inspiration in the right vein, of more real merit and attraction than any amount of scientific learning. There is a clever dramatic duo between the King and Rochester, in which a visit to Wapping is projected. The opening cavatina of Fanny, "Hope and fear, alternate viewing," is of the Mozartian mould, and, next to the Page's air, may be deemed the most clever conception in the opera; the cabaletta is particularly elegant. The duettino "Oh! blest are young hearts," sung by the Page and Fanny, is another charm ng piece. Of the Auber school, it is remarkable for its ingenious and picturesque instrumentation. The finale is very effective. The finale is easy on the whole, and has some good points; but the Mozartian forms, and even ideas, are too palpable. In the second act, the air of Copp, "Man of Battersea," is of Dibdin paternity—of a calibre which cannot be advantageously contrasted. A very superb bit of accompanied recitative, "O cruel fortune," by the Page, exacts a Viardot's powers to do justice to. The second air of Fanny, "Canst thou deem my heart is changing," is a charming composition, and it is impossible to be more captivating, and the instrumentation free and unembarrassed. The canon and trio, of the Rossinian style, in which the Page and Fanny manage the King's escape, is the next considerable piece. The Page's song, "There was a time I was a coniferous," sugge-ted probably by Meyerbeer's Pages song in the "Huguenots," would tell amazingly if sung by Miss Poole. The madrigal of ladies and courtiers in the last scene, "Maidens, would ye beaux tantalize," is very pretty, in imitation of the old masters; it is strikingly effective, and will be heard with infinite delight. A ballad, "My heart to thee flies home," appertains to the "tender tenor school," such as excites the admiration of music and ladies' and those of the gentlemen who affect the same. The concerted piece, "See where they come," is pretty evident, but fit is dramatic; and the romance of Fanny of the old ballad style, "Afloor simple maiden am I," through the admirable singing of Miss Louisa Pyne, carried quite a sensation. A rondo finale. "Now with fears no more contending," in which the Page and Fanny have variations, concludes the opera, which was thus cast: Fanny, Miss Louisa Pyne; the Page, Madame Macfarren; King Charles, Mr. Harrison; Rochester, Mr. H. Corri; and Copp, Mr. Weiss. To Miss Louisa Pyne the composer is deeply indebted, and his acknowledgments to her, when he came on the stage in obedience to the call of the audience, were felt by every one to be her due. She perfectly just, and richly earned by the new prima donna. She acted with graceful naturalness, and sang the music charmingly. Her variations in the finale were executed with brilliancy. We fear that the whole of Madame Macfarren has been a mistake. She has sung in America on the stage, but at present we do not perceive any vocal or histrionic indications that can hold out hopes of her taking a prominent position on lyric boards. The success of the opera was undisputed in the attempt; but the attraction of the music, and the triumph of Miss Louisa Pyne, will secure for "King Charles the Second" a run. It is an opera which every amateur ought to hear, and more than once, considering that in its flows, many beauties; and the management is entitled to the thanks of the musical public for having produced it.

LYCEUM.

"Discharge your Tiger" is the name of a new farce produced here on Monday. Bob (Mr Oxberry), the servant of Latimer Lawless (Mr. Parselle), is commissioned by his master to give a bad character of himself to his father, Sir George Lawless (Mr. Granby), in order to break off the match proposed between him and the lady, whose character and features he believes unknown to him. The rascal tiger, of course, exercises his invention and paints his master in the most unfavourable colours. His imagination revels in an invented narrative of debts, gaming, and mistresses. At length, he ventures to go business on his own account, and makes the lady an offer of his own hand, as a certain gallant Captain Screamer, of the Guards, in disguise assumed to secure her rescue from a villain. Happily, young Lawless discovers in time that Emily is identical with a lady whom in the park he has seen and loved. But Bob does not escape so easily. To avoid his master's wrath, he is fain to throw himself out of the window. Subsequently he appears, with his head bandaged, to be forgiven. The bandage then quickly falls off, Bob having no further use for deception. Oxberry was full of bustle, extravagance, and impudence; and rattled through the piece as boldly, that, despite of some opposition, it may be said to have been successful.

SADLER'S WELLS.

On Friday and Saturday the comedy of "Much Ado About Nothing" was performed, Mr. Hoskins as the Marplot, and Miss Fitzpatrick the Miranda. Both enacted their amusing rôles with vivacity and comic effect. "Antony and Cleopatra" was performed the first four nights of this week to overflowing houses. The attraction is so great that we are told hundreds have been turned away nightly.

HAYMARKET.

Mr Macready is repeated this week, Lear, Macbeth, and Hamlet. On Tuesday a new comedy in three acts, adapted from the French of "Le Mari à la Campagne," by Mr. Morris Barnett, was very successfully produced. The variety in the piece is made as so important, that this drama may almost claim rank as an original. The head of the scenes family is a Lady Sneerby Crearnley (Mrs. Wilford), a stately and severe dame, given to matrimonial-brittling and Exeter Hall meetings, who has had her daughter (Miss Reynolds) and her daughter's husband under control From the domestic tyranny thus instituted, Charles Torres (Mr. Webster) occasionally escapes, professedly into the country, on a shooting excursion, but really to the house of his friend, Mrs. Formby Delmaine (Mrs. Fitzwilliam). But from this enchantress he is delivered by his friend, Captain Murphy Maguire, who has pretensions to her himself. At the end of the second act, an amusing embarrassment takes place between all the parties, and the third is occupied with the preliminaries of a ball, which the wife is induced to permit, by way of an over-act of rebellion against the old dowager, whose influence had been nearly fatal to the domestic happiness of herself and her husband. Mr. Buckstone performs a puritan kind of part, a Mr. Amendale Sleek, with peculiar unction, and a richness of effect which highly amused the audience. To Mr. Wallack, Mr. Webster, and Miss Reynolds, the author is also indebted for his extraordinary applause, by which the whole performance was greeted.

MARYLEBONE.

Shakspeare's "Cymbeline" was revived on Monday; but not with those accessories to which the visitors of this theatre have been accustomed. Mr. Mowatt's Imogen was sweetly effective; and Mr. Davenport's Leonatus a really spirited and delightful piece of acting. But the general effect was unsatisfactory. The house was well attended

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE RECENT MILITARY INSUBORDINATION AT NOTTINGHAM.

Courts-martial have been sitting during the week, investigating the late riotous conduct of some soldiers belonging to the 3d Dragoon Guards, quartered at Nottingham, but two cases only have been finished.

On Monday, Earl Cathcart, the colonel of the regiment, arrived at Nottingham, expressly at the command of the Duke of Wellington, for the purpose of reading to the whole regiment a communication from the Commander-in-Chief on the mutinous conduct of a portion of it on the previous Saturday. Every man within the barracks, including prisoners and officers' servants, was instantly summoned for foot parade

They were passed through their ordinary evolutions, under the inspection of Earl Cathcart; after which the noble Earl delivered a very energetic and feeling address. Having complimented the regiment on its appearance, Lord Cathcart said he had been wont to look upon the 3rd Dragoon Guards as patterns for every other regiment in the service, but, unhappily, recent events had in some measure tarnished their fame. On this subject he had had the honour to receive an autograph letter from his Grace the Duke of Wellington, which he would read. The letter was addressed to all in the regiment. In it the noble Duke referred to the cause of the recent insubordination—confinement of the whole regiment to barracks for nearly a week on account of a few individuals having neglected their duty—which he described as an arbitrary act, and contrary to all military law. His Grace said it was wrong in every respect, and well calculated to provoke breaches of military discipline, for the legitimate object of a regiment to act as Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur had done. That there might be no mistake in future on this subject, the noble Commander-in-Chief quoted the regulations of the service relative thereto. But still a decent fine from the regiment on the part of the commanding officer did not justify the men in adopting the line of conduct they had done. They should have taken a different course to remedy their grievances; but having suffered themselves to be led into acts of disgraceful riot and mutiny, they became, unfortunately, amenable to military law, and must be tried and punished for their offence.

After having read this letter and delivered his address, Colonel Lord Cathcart dismissed the regiment, hoping when he saw them again it would be under happier circumstances.

MILITARY ENCAMPMENT EXERCISE AT PORTSMOUTH.—The 14th, the 77th, and the 91st Regiments marched out of Portsmouth garrison on Monday last, with their tents and camp equipage, to the grounds surrounding Cumberland Fort, where they encamped for the night. After cooking their dinners; everything being done in campaigning style. After dinner, for about an hour, the soldiers amused themselves in various ways, games and dancing; after which the bugles were sounded for the troops to retire to their tents. At about four o'clock the tents were struck, and the regiments returned into garrison. Major-General Lord Frederick Fitzclarence superintended the manœuvres of the encampment. Lady Fitzclarence, Lady Caroline Capel, and Miss Fitzclarence, Lady Capel, and a numerous party of both ladies and gentlemen, were present.

THE AFRICAN SQUADRON.—It is intended to relieve the vessels serving on the coast of Africa station at shorter periods than hitherto. They are not, in future, to run more than two years. The Dolphin, 3, brigantine, Lieut. the Hon. R. F. Boyle, just arrived from the coast, has been under two years and two months in commission; and the Pantaloon, 3, brigantine, Commander Forbes, expected home next month, will have been under two years and a half in commission.

THE BORNEO PIRATES.—The Albatross, 12, Commander Farquhar, arrived at Singapore on the 4th September, from a recent expedition led against the pirates of Sakaran and Sarabas by Sir James Brooke, in which more than eighty-seven prahus and about 1200 pirates were destroyed, whilst there were very few casualties in the British force under command. The force employed on this occasion consisted of the boats of the Albatross, Commander Farquhar; the Royalist, 12, Lieutenant Commander Everest, and her boats; the Hon. Cornaby's steamer, the celebrated Nemesis, Commander Wallace, and her boats, and the Ranee, steam-lender, Mr. Baker engineer in charge. Commander Farquhar, as senior officer, had the command of the squadron. In the expedition everything answered to admiration. The pirates' head-quarters were struck by the Nemesis steamer. She came across the pirate fleet about eight miles from the land, and actually ran them down, getting between them and the land. She took them one after the other, the unfortunate men escaping to the jungle on the coasts for support.

The Commander-in-Chief has appointed Brevet-Major George F. Mylins, the senior captain of the 26th Cameronians, to the situation of Town Major of Dublin, vacant by the late lamented Major Darley. Major Mylins served throughout the expedition to China, in 1841, for which he has received a medal.

MILITARY FLOGGING.—On Monday morning, a private belonging to the Royal Sappers and Miners, stationed at Woolwich, received fifty lashes in the grounds of that barracks, in accordance with the sentence of a court-martial, for stealing a silver watch from a comrade. The sentence was carried into effect with the usual ceremonies. Some days previous to the infliction of the punishment the wretch was marched off by an escort to the Royal Ordnance Hospital, to have his wounds dressed.

GUNNERY IN PACKET STEAMERS.—The whole of the crews of the steamers belonging to the Peninsular and West India Steam-packet Companies are about to be instructed in the art of gunnery. Arrangements are now making in Southampton Docks for that purpose. The ordnance necessary is expected at Southampton, from Woolwich, in the course of the next few days for conveyance by Captain Smith, R.N., the Admiralty superintendent at Southampton, and the naval officers under him at that port. The crews of the two companies number between 2000 and 3000 men, and may be considered some of the finest seamen in the world.

LIFE AND LIBERTY IN THE MODEL REPUBLIC.—A Correspondent of the Arkansas Banner (United States) thus writes, on September 4th, 1849:—"On Friday last, three of the Kings were murdered in cold blood. You recollect hearing of a battle that was fought at Yellville some time since, between the Kings and Everetts. Some days afterwards, the Sheriff of Yell (the county) and some of the Everetts, followed one of the Kings, who had moved from Marion to Conway county and settled. When Moony and company arrived at King's, they found him in the act of moving under a wagon for behind the hind him prisoner. King told them they might let him or do as they chose, as he would go with them peaceably; that he did not think their intention was to take him to Yellville, but he believed they intended to murder him on the way. Moony and Everett told him all they wanted was to take him back to Yellville, and give him a trial by the laws of Arkansas. They started with him and his father, brothers, and all that connection, and they (the Sheriff of Yell

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.

This movement steadily progresses in the provinces.

On Monday there was a large meeting held in Brighton, at which a deputation from the parent association in the metropolis explained some of the objects in view, and the proposed means of effecting those objects—both of which have been already repeatedly noticed by us—and resolutions having been passed approving of them, a committee was chosen to form a local association in connexion with the metropolitan one.

On the same day (Monday) there was a similar meeting at Newcastle, at which the deputation who furnished the requisite explanations was composed of Mr. George Thompson, M.P., Sir Joshua Walmsley, M.P., and other leading Reformers; and there, also, a committee was appointed to form a local branch association.

THE HUNTINGDONSHIRE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The annual ploughing match and dinner of this society was held on Wednesday, at the George Inn, Huntingdon. The chair was taken at the latter by the Rev. T. Linton, supported by the Duke of Manchester, the Earl of Sandwich (the president of the society), Lord St. John, the Hon. O. Duncombe, M.P., G. Thornhill, M.P., the Rev. G. Johnston, &c. Several toasts were proposed, and Protectionist speech-s made; the party not appearing within an advanced hour.

BATHS AND WASH-HOUSES FOR THE POOR.—The foundation-stone of the first set of bat s and wash-houses for the poor about to be erected by the corporation of Birmingham, was laid by the Mayor, attended by a numerous body of the Town Council, in Kent street, in that town, on last Monday morning. There will be about 100 baths and 50 wash-houses, the cost of erection being calculated at £10,000. The land was presented to the borough by Sir Thomas Gooch. The foundation-stone being formally laid by his worship, the assemblage was subsequently addressed in appropriate speeches by the Rev. J. C. Miller, the rector of the parish, and Mr. Alderman Cutler. To the latter gentleman the public is mainly indebted for the establishment of this valuable institution. Should it succeed, other baths and wash-houses will be erected in various parts of the borough.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY.—In Birmingham, one day last week, the wife of Mr. H ll, architect, put into her purse Bank of England notes to the amount of £400, for the purpose of taking them to her husband's office, in order that this might be ultimately placed to his credit at the bank. On her way to Newstr-et, however, accompanied by her little boy, she had occasion to go through the Market-hall; and, shortly after quitting the vicinity of the Bull-ring, she found that her purse, with its £400, had vanished. Nothing had occurred to make Mrs. Hill suspect she had been robbed. A reward of £20 has been offered for the recovery of the notes, the numbers of almost all of which are known; and, of course, payment has been stopped as far as is practicable.

CAUTION TO JOB-MASTERS.—At the recent Petty Sessions at Rugby, Mr. William Ward, job-master, of that place, was, on the complaint of the Inland Revenue officers, convicted in fine and costs amounting to £40 3s. 7d., on seven informations, charging him with having omitted to duly enter four horses let by him for hire. The whole did not amount to 6s. duty. It appeared that the accused had in same instances entirely omitted to enter, and in others had returned the jobs in the Excise sheet at less than they really were.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

We announced in our Postscript, last week, the indisposition of her Majesty the Queen, from an attack of chicken-pock. On Sunday the following bulletin was issued:—

"Windsor Castle.

"The Queen has had an attack of chicken-pock. The disease was not attended with any untoward symptom; and, although she suffering from the effects of the eruption, her Majesty may be considered convalescent.

"JAMES CLARK, M.D."

This untoward accident prevented her Majesty from honouring the citizens of London with her presence at the opening of the Coal Exchange on Tuesday; but we are rejoiced to find that the Queen was sufficiently recovered, on Wednesday, to take a drive in Windsor Park.

On Thursday morning, the Queen and the Prince took their usual early walk in the Slopes and Windsor Park. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent dined with the Queen and the Prince in the evening. The youthful Princes and Princesses are quite well, and have taken their accustomed walking and pony exercise during the week.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

The accounts of the health of this illustrious lady have been very alarming during the week. On Wednesday a slight improvement took place in her Majesty's symptoms, and the following bulletin was issued:

"The Priory, Wednesday, Oct. 31.

"The Queen Dowager passed a comfortable night, having had a few hours of refreshing sleep, which has greatly restored her strength, and this morning her Majesty feels herself better. "DAVID DAVIES, M.D.

"RICHARD BRIGHT, M.D."

The bulletin on Thursday was as follows:—

"The Priory, Thursday, November 1, 1849.

"The Queen Dowager was occasionally disturbed by her cough last night, but her Majesty does not feel herself less strong this morning.

"DAVID DAVIES, M.D."

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge visited her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester on Saturday, at Gloucester House. His Royal Highness also attended at the British Museum.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke Alexander of Wurtemburg and his youthful son Prince Philippe have within the last few days closed their visit to the Countess de Neuilly at Claremont, and departed for Ostend, en route for Germany.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—On Tuesday morning were married at St. Peter's Church, Eaton square, by the Rev. Henry John Gunning, Rector of Wigan, the Earl of Bradford to Lady Moncreiffe. There were present at the ceremony the Ladies Lucy, Charlotte, and Mary Bridgeman, and Miss Moncreiffe, Viscount Newport, the Hon. Charles Bridgeman, the Hon. George and John Bridgeman, Sir Thomas Moncreiffe, Bart., Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Wright, Major A. Mackay, &c.

We feel much pleasure in stating that proof impressions of the Engravings of the exterior and interior of the New Coal Exchange (in the present Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS) have been, by special permission of her Majesty, presented to their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal, as mementos of the first visit of the Royal children to the City of London.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

LADY CHARLOTTE LINDSAY.

THIS accomplished and highly gifted lady, whose death was announced a few days since, was the last surviving child of the celebrated statesman, Lord North, and inherited no small share of her father's playful and ready wit. In the best and most intellectual society, Lady Charlotte Lindsay was extensively known for her kind disposition, her amiable manners, and her fascinating conversation. The only literary performance of her pen which has been given to the public is a beautiful letter, descriptive of her father's character, which appears in Lord Brougham's "Lives of the Statesmen." Lady Charlotte was attached to the household of Caroline, Princess of Wales, and, by her testimony at the House of Lords, dissipated some of the calumnies directed against her Royal mistress. The family of North, from which she descended, was founded by Edward North, an eminent lawyer of the reign of Henry VIII., and has been since pre-eminently distinguished for the illustrious men it has produced. Lady Charlotte was born in December, 1776, and married, 26 April, 1800, the Hon. Colonel John Lindsay, son of the fifth Earl of Balcarres, by whom she was left a widow, without issue, in 1826.

THE EARL OF ALDBOROUGH.

LETTERS from abroad announce the death of this nobleman (the fifth Earl of his family). His Lordship was born the 8th July, 1784; and married, 9d August, 1804, Cornelia Jane, eldest daughter of Charles Henry Tandy, Esq., by whom he leaves an only surviving son, Benjamin O'Neale (now Earl of Aldborough), late a Captain in the 1st Dragoons, who was born 10th June, 1808.

The Stratford family, of whom the house of Aldborough is the head, were established in Ireland by Robert Stratford in 1660. He was one of the original burgesses in the charter constituting Baltinglass a borough town, and became afterwards M.P. for the county of Wicklow. His son Edward Stratford, Esq., of Grangebelan, county of Kildare) was a staunch supporter of the Revolution, and entertained on one occasion King William III. at his seat in Ireland. He was father of John, first Earl of Aldborough.

LADY AMELIA LISTER-KAYE.

LADY AMELIA KAYE died on the 29th ult., at her residence, No. 11, Upper Harley-street, aged 70. Lady Amelia, the sixth daughter of George Harry Grey, Earl of Stamford and Warrington, by the Lady Henrietta his wife, daughter of William, second Duke of Portland, derived her descent from Henry Lord Grey of Groby, nephew of the ill-fated Duke of Suffolk, father of Lady Jane Grey. She was born July 7, 1779, and married, October 18, 1800, Sir John Lister-Kaye, Baronet, of Denby Grange, county York, who died 28th of last year, aged 78. Their issue consisted of four sons and five daughters, the eldest of the former being the present Sir John-Lister Lister-Kaye, Baronet.

THOMAS MORTON, ESQ.

THIS estimable gentleman an eminent member of the medical profession died suddenly on the 30th ult., at his residence, Woburn-place, Russell-square, in the 56th year of his age. He was deservedly well known by his numerous and valuable contributions to the advancement of science, and held, at the period of his decease, the appointment of assistant-surgeon to the University College Hospital. He had also succeeded the late Mr Cooper, the able author of the Surgical Dictionary, as surgeon to the Queen's Bench Prison.

Mr. Morton became a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, 24th July, 1818, and was elected by the council an honorary Fellow of the Institution, from their high appreciation of his acquirements. He married the only daughter of Mr. Samuel Cooper.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Clio."—1. The notice on the wrapper of the Chess-Player's Chronicle for this month, November, refers to Mr. Horwitz, who has commenced receiving a limited number of pupils in Chess. 2. Mr. Stanley's Problem, No. 63, is the same magazine, is a suicidal one, and the conditions ought to be "White to play, and force Black to mate in five moves."

"C. W. R." The solution of Enigma No 488 is correct; but, in the author's description of the position, he perhaps omitted a Black P at Black's Q B 3*d.*

"Bellary."—The board is encumbered by unnecessary men—a serious defect in the composition of a Problem. We shall be glad of the promised positions from the Schachzeitung.

"B. E. P." "G. T. N." "King's College."—The new Chess-men can now be got at the office of the Chess-Player's Chronicle; of Leuchars, in Piccadilly; of Lund, Fleet-street; and we dare say of any leading dealer in such articles in London. For the prices we must refer you to the advertisements.

"Clericus."—Get the "Chess-Player's Text-Book," just published, price 3*s.*

"R. V. T." United Services Club.—1. The handsome lettering Chess-board preparing by Leuchars, of Piccadilly, for the new man, will be ready, we are told, in a day or two. 2. We do not know. Apply to the foreign booksellers. 3. The best catalogues of Chess works are the one by Anton Smith, published in Vienna, and that appended to G. Walker's "Art of Chess-Play."

"Mother," Nottingham.—1. We shall probably give engravings of the "Staunton Chess-men" shortly. 2. When the game between London and Amsterdam is finished, we shall give it in extenso with copious notes.

"D. G. L." Oxford.—To prevent fraud both upon the public and the proprietors, every box in which the new men are inclosed has at the bottom a label showing the price of the men, box, and treatise, and bearing the signature "H. Staunton," and any set sold without such label is an imposition.

"Junior."—The "unrivalled" collection of Problems, &c. published in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS can only be obtained by the purchase of the back volumes.

"Mudelzentz."—1. There is no such error as our correspondent suggests in Problem No. 268. 2. The Enigma is too simple.

"H. T. J." Huntingdon.—The fact of your opponent having lost all his pieces does not entitle him to claim stalemate.

"Bellamy."—1 Impracticable, it appears to us, if Black, at his fourth move, take the K B's P en passant. 2. In the position from the Indian manuscript, it appears to us that White can play 1. R to Q R 8*th (ch). If Black* 1. to move, the White Q mates at K R 8*th; and if the correspondent be to take at, only a move later.*

"S. S. J." Hull.—Many thanks for the games, which are highly entertaining.

"Mr. Pips." There has been no transition in Bilguer's Handbuch."

"T. C."—A King can Castle after he has been in check. See the laws of the game in the recently-published "Chess-Player's Text-Book," p. 13.

"E. O. W." Blackheath.—An improvement on your former attempt, but still below our standard.

"Tinney."—We cannot afford to give a column to the laws of Chess. See notice above to "C. T."

"Pawn." "W. H." Quite unsuited to publication.

"H. M."—It is allowable to have two Queens on the board at once. These simple matters should be learned from some rudimentary work on the game.

Solutions by "S. U." "Pat Laile," "Mr. Pips," "J. L. S." "T. D. S." Flushing, "J. R. R." "M. P." "Dorcas," "C. M." and "Brutus" are correct. Those by "J. P." "Maria," "B. B." "D. P. D." "S. U." "Gambit," and "R. E." are wrong.

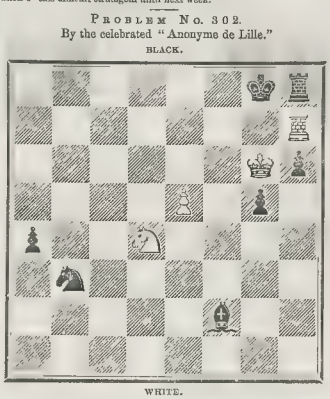
SOLUTION TO PROBLEM NO. 301.

At the solicitation of many correspondents, we are induced to withhold the solution o this difficult stratagem until next week.

PROBLEM NO. 302.

By the celebrated "Anonyme de Lille."

BLACK.



WHITE.

White, playing first, mates in four moves.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE,

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
46. P to K 4th

London to play.

BLINDFOLD CHESS.

The following is one of two games which were played by Mr. Harrwitz simultaneously at the Hull Chess Club, a few days since, against two members at each board consulting together—Mr. H. playing without seeing either chess-board. The games commenced at half-past seven in the evening; the one terminated about one o'clock in the morning; while that below was protracted until half-past three, having lasted eight hours.

(Evans's Gambit.)

WHITE. (Mr. Harrwitz.)	BLACK. (Ayre and Walker.)	WHITE. (Mr. Harrwitz)	BLACK. (Ayre and Walker)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	27. P takes Kt	Q takes Kt P
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	28. R to Q B sq	Q to K 7th (ch)
3. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	29. K to K sq	Q to K R 5th (ch)
4. P to Q Kt 4th	B takes Kt P	30. Q takes Q	R takes Q (ch)
5. P to Q B 3d	K B to Q R 4th	31. K to Q 2d	R takes R
6. Castles	B to Q Kt 3d	32. R takes P	Q to K R 4th (c)
7. P to Q 4th	P takes P	33. B to Q sq	Q R to K R sq
8. P takes P	P to Q 3d	34. Kt to B 5th (ch)	K to Q sq (d)
9. Q B to Kt 2d	K Kt to B 3d	35. Kt to R 4th	K to Q B sq
10. P to Q 5th	Q Kt to K 2d	36. P to Q R 4th	P takes P (e)
11. B takes Kt	P takes B	37. B takes Q R P	K to Kt 2d
12. P to Q 4th	Q Kt to K Kt 3d	38. K to Q 2d	K to Kt 3d
13. P to K B 4th	Q B to K Kt 5th	39. K to Q B 3d	K to Q B 4th
14. Q to her 3d (c)	Q B to K 7th	40. B to Q sq	P to Q R 4th
15. Q to her B 3d	Q B takes R	41. B to Q 2d	P to Q R 5th
16. K takes B	B takes Kt	42. B to Q sq	P to Q R 6th (f)
17. Q takes B	Kt takes K B P	43. K to Kt 3d	R to Q R sq
18. Q to K 3d	Kt to K Kt 3d	44. K to B 2d	R to Q Kt 8th
19. B checks	K to K 2d	45. Kt to B 5th	R to K R sq
20. Kt to Q B 3d	P to Q R 3d	46. Kt to K R 4th	R to K sq
21. B to Q R 4th	P to Q Kt 4th	47. B to B 3d	K to B 5th
22. B to Q Kt 3d	Q to Q 2d	48. Kt to B 5th	P to K R 5th
23. P to K R 3d	Kt to K 4th	49. Kt takes K R P	R to K R sq
24. Kt to K 3d	K R to K sq	50. Kt to B 5th	K to Kt 5th
25. Kt to Q 4th	K R to Kt 4th	51. Kt to Q 4th
26. P to K Kt 4th	Kt takes K Kt P (b)

And the game, having lasted eight hours, was drawn by mutual consent.

(a) This was an inadvertent move, and cost "the exchange." He should have played the Q over 3d.

(b) P to K B 4th would have been much better play.

(c) We should have preferred getting command of the open K, Kt file with the Rook before moving forward with the Pawn.

(d) K to Q 4th appears to be more to the purpose.

(e) K to Q Kt 5th, or R to K sq, we believe to be much more serviceable to Black's game.

(f) P to K B 4th looks a good move.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 493.—From the Berliner Schachzeitung.

White: K at Q 8th, Q at K Kt 8th, Kt at Q 6th, Ps at K B 5th and Q Kt 5th.
Black: K at his 4th, Kt at Q 4th and 8th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 494.—By Mr. A. G. McC.

White. K at Q Kt 2d, R at K B 7th, Bs at Q B 5th and Q Kt 3d, Kt at Q 6th, Ps at K 3d and Q 4th.
Black K at Q R 4th, Q at Q Kt 4th, R at K B 4th, B at Q B 5th Kt at K 3d, Ps at K B 6th and Q B 3d.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

On Sunday morning last, the new regulation respecting Sunday labor in the Post-office came into operation at St. Martin's-le-Grand. The morning labour commences at five and terminates at ten A.M. The day for the Sunday work is to be 6h. each for the morning, and 4h. for the afternoon in the hours of attendance during the latter being from half-past five to eight o'clock.

On Monday morning, at nine o'clock, the John Bull, one of the General Steam Navigation Company's steam-packets, arrived at St. Katherine's Docks, from Hamburgh, bringing with her the following distinguished Hungarians:—General Klapka and servant, M. Fornet, Beraeyi, Camvossy, Ghaze, Bandeszs, and Ahednyanszky.

It was stated on the Liverpool Exchange, on Monday, on the authority of Captain Judkin, of the Canada, just arrived from New York, that the quantity of gold on board among the passengers was little short of £1,000,000. The gold entered by the steamer is £100,000.

Mr. P. B. Duncan, of New College, Oxford, has presented the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, with the first three statues that have been given to it. They are casts of the Apollo Belvidere, the Diana and Faun, and the Townley Venus.

The Rev. Gilmour Robinson, Provincial Grand Chaplain of the Freemasons, has been nominated Right Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master for the Western Division of the county of Lancaster, vice John Drinkwater, Esq., resigned through ill health.

The Chester Courant says of agriculture in Wales: "It is curious that wherever English is spoken the farming is very superior, and has much progressed of late; whereas in the Welsh parts little improvement can be traced."

A marble bust of the lamented Mendelssohn has been placed in front of the orchestra of the Birmingham Music Hall.

The Leggo of Turin, of the 20th ult., states that the Duke of Parma has given the galley-slaves a new costume, and a hat exactly resembling the Calabrian one adopted by the Liberal party.

The Right Hon. James Grattan, brother of the member for Meath, has sold his estates in Ireland, and made arrangements for settling in Old Virginia.

The Shakesperian relics in Coventry have been removed from Henly-street to a more suitable house in Bridge-street, opposite the Red Horse Hotel, Stratford.

The Birmingham Exhibition of Manufactures has been visited by more than 36,000 persons, from all parts of the country and the Continent.

At a meeting of compositors connected with the morning paper press generally, held on Saturday evening last at the White Hart, Castle-street, Strand, for the purpose of considering proposals for the establishment of a Typographical Widows and Orphan Fund, resolutions approving of the principle were carried unanimously, and a provisional committee appointed for the purpose of carrying out the objects of the proposed society.

Recent accounts from Egypt state that the new screw steam-frigate Sharkwah, recently built in this country, after a trial trip, the highest speed attained on which was about nine miles an hour, has been pronounced to be worth less than half her cost, and is ordered to be got ready to proceed to Constantinople, from which it is matter of question if she return again.

Richard Cobden, Esq., M.P., and Charles Gilpin, Esq., attended at the Home-office on Saturday, to present petitions from various parts of the country in favour of a commutation of the sentence of the wretched woman Charlotte Harris, now lying in Taunton Gaol, and daily expecting her confinement. The petitions are signed exclusively by females.

On Sunday morning a sermon in aid of the German Hospital, Dalston, was delivered at the church of St. Margaret's, Fenchurch-street, by the Rev. Charles Day, LL.B., vicar of Mucking, Essex. A collection was made by the vice-presidents at the church doors, to the amount of £40.

Colonel Peel has presented to the Town Council of the borough of Huntingdon a full-length portrait, in his robes, of its late representative, the present Chief Baron of the Exchequer. It is painted by Grant, and is an admirable likeness.

A youth fifteen years of age, belonging to a respectable family near Macon in France, a few days since, shot himself, in consequence of an aversion which he felt at returning to his school.

At a special meeting of the Hull Flax and Cotton Mill Company, held last week, the creation of new shares was confirmed, making the total capital of the concern £337 500.

The Rev. H. I. Gossel, vicar of Northam (Devon), has returned his tenants 25 per cent. on their rents due at Michaelmas. He has also set a great quantity of land in small allotments to poor people who have no gardens.

We are happy to state that the health of the veteran Admiral Sir Edward Codrington, G.C.B., which for some time past has been in a rather precarious condition, has considerably improved within the last few days.

On Tuesday, at the top of the tide, the General Steam Navigation Company launched a fine iron steamer, of 700 tons burthen, from the building-yard of Messrs. Mare, Blackwall. She was christened the Rhone.

A benevolent lady, who signs herself "M. O.," has sent £100 to the Society for Improving the Condition of the Labouring Classes, as a thank offering for preservation of herself and family from the late epidemic.

Messrs. Huntley and Palmer, the manufacturers of the Reading biscuits, have forwarded to the secretary of the Grocers' and Tea Dealers' Benevolent Society a donation of ten guineas, in aid of the funds of that excellent institution.

On Monday night, at the half-yearly meeting of the Metropolitan Benefit Societies' Asylum, the report stated that the receipts for the six months just terminated amounted to £419, the disbursements leaving only a balance of £15.

A fire took place at the Model Baths and Washhouses, Whitechapel, on Monday evening. It broke out in one of the temporary drying-houses, and a vast quantity of linen was destroyed. The premises and machinery escaped without much damage.

The Queen of Madagascar is dead—an event which is likely to settle the differences which have so long existed, at her instigation, between France and the country which she governed.

It is said that a Liverpool firm has made a purchase in New York, within the last month, of 16,000 barrels of extra superfine flour, which will stand, landed in Liverpool, at only 16s. 9d. per barrel.

The elder brethren of the Corporation of the Trinity House, London, have contributed £100 in aid of the funds of the Committee for Promoting the Establishment of Baths and Wash-houses for the labouring classes, towards the completion of the model establishment, Goulston square, Whitechapel.

The unemployed seamen in Liverpool at present number about 350 men in the Sailors' Home, and the number of unemployed is increasing as the timber ships arrive.

On Monday, during very thick weather, the barque Repealer, of Halifax, 400 tons register, Captain Dorman, from Liverpool to Charleston, laden with salt and coals, struck on the Long Bank off Wexford Harbour. The vessel, assisted by some of the fishermen, escaped from the wreck, which afterwards drifted on the south shoals, where the hull has been dismasted.

Mr. William Preston, second-hand maker at Mr. Tobias's, watch-maker, Lothbury, Liverpool, has succeeded in drilling a hole through a stance edgeways. The skilful and ingenuity displayed in this extraordinary task may be conceived, when we state that the diameter of the hole in the coin is the four-thousandth part of an inch in area, and barely sufficient to admit a fine hair. The instrument with which the hole was drilled is as fine as a small bristle, and quite as pliable.

A vessel just arrived in the river from Brussels has brought 75 tons weight in bulk of apples, forming the entire cargo, the production of Belgium.

The large quantity of 119 bales of hops arrived last week from Antwerp, by the steam-vessel Director, the produce of Belgium. This is the largest importation of hops which has ever taken place from a foreign country.

The rivers Don, Trent, and Derwent have been so swollen by recent great rains in the North Midland Hills, that they have overflowed at various places not usually subject to such mishaps. At Derby three persons have been drowned in the stream and floods of the Derwent.

The Royal Sovereign yacht, for so many years at Pembroke, has been condemned at last, and is ordered to be taken to pieces, and her name as a yacht to be removed from the Navy List. Her majestic name, however, is being perpetuated in the navy by a 130-gun ship, building at Pembroke.

Commander C. R. Egerton has presented to the Royal Naval Benevolent Society the munificent donation of £50, and increased his annual subscription of a guinea to £5.

According to a recent statistical account, there are in the Austrian Monarchy, not including Hungary, 61,388 priests and nuns; viz. 30,728 curés or ministers; in 703 monasteries, 14,500 monks and clerks; and in 112 convents, 3660 nuns and novices. The clergy of Hungary is composed of 20,000 individuals.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint George Bott, Esq., Lieutenant in the Royal Navy, to be superintendent of the penal settlement in the colony of British Guiana.

On Sunday evening, a fire, by which two persons were seriously, but not fatally, burned, occurred upon the premises of Mr Alfred Hill, dentist, No. 19, King-street, Holborn. Mr. Hill was not insured.

A noted grower of geraniums, who lives near Portsmouth, is said, by the Hampshire Guardian, to possess a geranium which measures 12 feet round, and which has yielded during the present season 715 bunches of blossoms.

The Master-General of the Ordnance has issued directions to the Deputy Adjutant-General at Woolwich to cause two brass field-pieces and two 6-inch howitzers, captured from the enemy at the Battle of Waterloo, to be forwarded forthwith to the Royal Military Hospital at Chelsea, to be placed in the grounds of that establishment.

The burial-ground of the district church of Christ Church, Westminster, recently closed by order of the General Board of Health, was on Tuesday covered with quick-lime to the depth of three inches, with the view of counteracting any offensive odours arising therefrom.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO THE CITY.

(Continued from page 294.)

THE DEJEUNER.

Soon after two o'clock Prince Albert quitted the Royal retiring-rooms, and, returning into the hall, was conducted to the recess, in which a déjeûner had been prepared for him. His Royal Highness led in the lady of the French Ambassador, and placed her on his right hand. The Duke of Cambridge, the Prince of Mecklenburg Strelitz, the Turkish Ambassador, and the French Ambassador sat on the other side of the table, and the Prince invited the Lady Mayoress to take her place opposite to them. The Lord Mayor remained standing for a few moments by the side of Prince Albert, apparently to receive the commands of his Royal Highness, who was regarded as representing her Majesty, but the Prince desired his Lordship to join the distinguished party, taking his place between the lady of the French Ambassador and the Lady Mayoress.

The following is the bill of fare at the Prince's table:—

Potages.—Potage de tortue à l'Anglaise, potage de venaison à la St. George, potage de tortue clair, purée de faisans à la Reine.

Entrées Chaudes.—Filets de perdreaux à la Volappière, croustades à la Russe, mauviettes à la Nivernoise, côtelettes à la Palestine.

Entrées Froides.—Salade de filets de dorée, mazarins de coq de bruyère aux truffes, filets d'agneau aux concombres, homard à la Cardinal, darne de saumon à la Montpelier, cailles à la Royale, poulets en fricassé à l'Aspic, filets de levrates à la Portugaise.

Grosses Pièces.—Perdreaux à l'Albion, filet de bœuf au chasseur, petits poulets à l'Estragon, jambon de Mayence à l'Impériale, galantine de faisans, pâté de bécassines.

Entremets.—Truffes en serviette, salade à l'Espagnole, coq-huffe à la Varnow, crème à la Nesselrode, ananas à la Régence, savoyen au vin de Malaga, madeleines aux amandes, croûte aux champignons, pommes de terre à la crême, baba à la Polonaise, abricots à la Bellevue, chartreuse de pommes, gélée Mosaïque, pains à la duchesse.

Buffet. Hot roast beef, hot roast chickens, hot roast pheasants, pesfow).

The déjeûner was provided by Messrs. Staples, of the Albion, and was of a very recherché character, as the carte for the Royal table proves. The accompanying sherry was 70 years old, and formed part of the same vintage of which a cask was sent to Lord Nelson a few days previous to the battle of Trafalgar. There was also some exquisitely delicate pale sherry 40 years old. The wine supplied for the Prince of Wales, andof which his Royal Highness partook, was a peculiar Paxarete, obtained from M. Domecq, who, a few weeks since, furnished the table of the younger branches of the Royal Family of Spain with some of that wine on their visit to his establishment to witness the process of making the wines. The hock was the choicest Johannisberg. The other wines were the rarest of their kind. The wine-glasses were made for the occasion; they were of the shape of the delicate bloom of the Abutilon asiaticum. The leaves and flowers of the plant were engraved on the bowl, and formed a wreath round the Royal Crown and City arms. The napkins were of exquisite damask, embroidered with the arms of the city of London, and edged with very costly antique point lace. The doyleys were of Royal purple velvet, with emblematical embroidery, and trimmed with gold lace. The dessert plates were manufactured expressly for the déjeûner: they were painted in compartments, containing the Royal crown, the Prince of Wales' feathers, the City shield, &c.; in the centre of each plate were the Royal arms, exquisitely painted and emblazoned. The bills of fare, of exquisite design, were printed by Messrs. Delarue. The whole of the service at the Royal table was of gold, and the gorgeous display was arranged with the most perfect taste under the direction of Messrs. Staples, to whom the instructions to provide the entertainment were communicated only on Thursday previous, affording them, therefore, but four days to complete their costly and extensive arrangements

The following is the general bill of fare of the déjeûner:—Roast chickens, pâtés of game, Westphalia hams, beef à la George IV., roast partridges, larded cutlets, house lamb, roast pheasants, tongues, galantines de poulardes, côtelettes aux concombres, mayonnaises de homard, salades de volaille, petits pâtés à la Reine, ris de veau à la Romaine, bateaux d'agneau, filets de soles à la Provençale, crevettes, grouse salads, gateaux à la Française, Nougats d'abricot, je lies, meringues à la Chantilly, compôtes de fruits, conserves de pommes, rhubarbe à la Régence, gélées aux fruits, patisserie aux amandes, pineapples, bothouse grapes, pears, dried fruits, ice creams.

Among the articles of interest in the Exchange was the Royal state chair originally made for his Royal Highness the late Duke of Kent, and frequently used by him at charitable dinners, over which he presided at the Albion Tavern. This chair was re-decorated for the present occasion. It is square-framed, the handles terminating with the heads of Egyptian lions; the back is high, enriched with bold scroll-work, and surmounted with a shield, on which are emblazoned the Royal arms; and at the apex is the Imperial crown upon a cushion. The back and seat are of crimson velvet, richly trimmed with gold. The gilding of the frame is very tasteful; and, altogether, this is a very superb piece of state furniture.

When the Prince's party commenced their repast, those visitors who had been admitted to the floor of the Exchange also retired to the other recesses, where tables were prepared, and partook of refreshment. Lord J. Russell and Sir R. Peel found themselves at the same table.

After about a quarter of an hour, the Prince having made a communication to the Lord Mayor, his Lordship advanced to the entrance of his Royal Highness's saloon, so as to be seen and heard by all present, and announced that with his Royal Highness's permission, and in the name of her Majesty, he would give them "The Health of her Majesty the Queen." The toast was received with three times three and much cheering, the band playing the National Anthem The Lord Mayor afterwards gave "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen Dowager," "The Healths of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, "The Health of their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, and the other members of the Royal family," and, lastly, "Prosperity to the City of London," which was drunk with all the honours, to the air of "Rule Britannia."

The parties at the several tables then began to break up. Lord John Russell and Sir R. Peel came together into the open area. They stood next each other for about five minutes, Lord J. Russell occasionally conversing with Mr. Goulburn, and Sir R. Peel with another gentleman. Some of the company were amused at observing that when the Premier and the ex-Premier had stood for a full minute next to each other without speaking either to one another or to any one else, and both looking very grave, or, as it might seem to many, somewhat stern, one of the Gentlemen-at-Arms behind them, finding himself in the way of the company, stepped forward and stood with his halbert between the two illustrious statesmen

By desire of Prince Albert, Mr. Wood brought the Royal children down from the retiring-rooms, and conducted them to the Prince's table. His Royal Highness rose, and led them forward into the body of the hall, where they were received with great cheering. The Royal party then, at nearly three o'clock, left the hall, attended by the Lord Mayor and the city functionaries.

The visitors began to leave as they concluded their repasts, and the hall rapidly thinned. Many of the citizens, however, entertained themselves for some time with a dance in the noble area, and seemed rather unwilling to let the dusk terminate their amusement.

Shortly before three o'clock, Prince Albert, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and Princess Royal, and attended as before by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and civic authorities, returned from the Exchange to the Pavilion, where they were received with the usual honours, the troops presenting arms and the bands playing the National Anthem. The Royal party were accompanied to the place of embarkation by most of the noble and distinguished individuals who had been present at the ceremony, and were loudly cheered in their progress along the gallery, and as they descended the gangway leading to the Fairy yacht.

As Prince Albert stepped on board, he turned round and expressed to the Lord Mayor and Mr. Wood his gratification at the mode in which the proceedings had been conducted: the Prince added, addressing the Royal children, "Remember, you are indebted to the Lord Mayor for one of the happiest days of your lives."

The Royal yacht lost not a moment in returning to Whitehall-stairs with the Prince and the Royal children, and so little time was occupied that the Palace was reached at half-past three; and at ten minutes past four his Royal Highness took his departure for Windsor, by the Great Western Railway. The return by the Fairy took the crowds collected on the banks of the river completely by surprise.

The following letter was despatched by Lord J. Russell to the Lord Mayor in the course of the afternoon.

"Downing-street, Oct. 30.

"My dear Lord Mayor,—The Queen has been pleased to direct that your Lordship should be created a Baronet.

"In congratulating you upon this distinction, I may add that his Royal Highness Prince Albert was highly gratified with the reception which his Royal Highness, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and her Royal Highness the Princess Royal have met with from the immense multitude who greeted their progress this day.

"His Royal Highness was likewise extremely gratified with the arrangements made at the Coal Exchange, and the loyalty evinced by all classes of the Queen's subjects.

"I have the honour to be, my dear Lord Mayor,

"Yours very faithfully,

"The Lord Mayor. "J. RUSSELL."

Our Artists have specially to thank Capt. Rowland, Chief Harbour Master, for his aid in obtaining for them points for their Sketches.

THE NEW COAL EXCHANGE.—THE VESTIBULE.

STATE FITTINGS OF THE NEW COAL EXCHANGE.

The Throne, which was of extensive dimensions, occupied three divisions under the gallery. The exterior drapery consisted of rich crimson velvet, with trimmings of gold lace; a very elegant valence, of the same material, suspended from a cornice, surmounted by the crown and cushion, all richly gilt, formed the canopy. The dais was also of crimson velvet, finished with a gold fringe. The back interior of the centre compartment of the throne was of white fluted satin, with falls of white muslin, bearing in the centre the Royal arms.

The State Chairs, with massive gold frames and crimson velvet backs, were much admired; particularly that of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, for its silvery plume of spun glass feathers, an idea suggested by Mr. Bunning.

The Royal retiring-rooms were hung with alternate flutings of pink and white. The windows ornamented with crimson, green, and gold tapestry curtains and muslin draperies, and superb glasses over the chimneys, piers, &c. The sofas and chairs were of gold, the seats and backs being covered to match the curtains.

The Toilet Table was composed of white satin, embroidered with gold, the initials V. R. appearing in the centre.

The throne, crimson velvet hangings, state chairs, floor-coverings, and drapery of the recesses of the area of the building, and the whole of the elegant fittings and decorative furniture of the Royal retiring-rooms and toilet chamber, were prepared and executed by Mr. Herring, of Fleet-street, upholder to the honourable Corporation, under the direction of Mr. Bunning, the architect.

PRESENTATION OF THE ADDRESS TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT, IN THE GREAT HALL OF THE COAL EXCHANGE.

CURIOSITIES.—VIII.

DRINKING-HORN AT QUEEN'S COLLEGE, OXFORD.

This interesting relic of middle-age art is especially celebrated among antiquaries and may with propriety be ranked amongst the Curiosities of Oxford. It is a very ancient drinking-horn, kept in the buttery of Queen's College, to which foundation it is said to have been presented by Philippa, Queen of Edward III from whom the College is named, and by whose confessor, Robert de Eglesfield the institution was founded.

The Horn holds two quarts; it is richly ornamented with silver gilt; on the lid is a silver eagle, of curious workmanship, and it is supported by eagles claws. Between the ornamental bands is inscribed (several times repeated) the word Waccey! (Wassail—a Saxon phrase for drinking healths).

After the dinner which took place at Wantage, on Wednesday week, at the Alfred Jubilee, a relic of the same class as the annexed was shown to the company its owner, Mr. Philip Pusey, M.P., having kindly permitted it to be used on an occasion so apposite. It was the "Pusey Horn," fashioned into a stoup or drinking-cup, presented by King Canute to the ancestors of Mr. Pusey. It is, in fact, the original tenure of the Pusey property, and is inalienable from it. This precious heir-loom was produced, as Mr. Pusey informed the company, in a law court, as evidence in a suit, and the Court so decided that it was inalienable.

DRINKING HORN AT QUEEN'S COLLEGE, OXFORD.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR NOVEMBER.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR NOVEMBER.

Though the mildness of the autumn still invites the ladies to continue their summer dresses, the winter fashions are not any the more in arrear; and the first cold weather will bring them out. Meanwhile, velvet jackets for the afternoon, and cashmere ones for the morning, are generally worn; and this fashion is so convenient and becoming, that though it is at least two years old, it is far from being given up, and always looks graceful and new. These jackets are made very high, fitting closely to the figure, and the fronts are rounded off over the skirt. Some are worn with capes turned back on the chest, like the collar of a coat; but these are less becoming and less fashionable. Our Engraving gives a very exact idea of them.

Dresses à la Hongroise are very elegant for visiting. Brocaded or figured striped silks are the handsomest: a large velvet tablier to match the darkest shade of the silk ornaments the front of the skirt. The bodice is high, and is covered over with two wide velvet pieces falling upon the shoulders, and terminating in a point at the waist; a row of pearl or steel buttons attaches these capes and the velvet tablier: the sleeves, à jockey, are of velvet, laced with a thick silk cord, and trimmed with velvet; under these sleeves are worn large puffings of tulle, drawn in at the wrist by a piece of velvet, on which steel bracelets are worn. Dresses with the skirts open in front appear still much in vogue, be it for dinner or evening dress. The slips are made of extremely light colours, so as to form a contrast with the over skirt, and are trimmed with lace flounces for grande toilette, or with a deep silk embroidery for more simple dress. The front of the over-skirt, trimmed with lace or embroidered, is rounded off like a court dress, as may be seen in the Engraving. The boddice of the dress is made half high, open in front; a richly embroidered chemisette to accord with the slip, or trimmed like it with little flounces one above the other, ornaments the chest. Long chevalières form the sash. They are usually made of silk, especially for dresses demi habillées, for evening parties; they are nearly always of gold or silver cord. These dresses, composed of such numerous decorations, should be made with the greatest taste, as much for the choice of colours as for the cut; without this they will be somewhat theatrical, and not comme il faut.

The shape of the bonnets is more ballonné than ever; the pokes are lined with white satin, quilted. The trimmings are very simple: a bunch of feathers at the side, or a number of small feathers placed round the shape, is the most récherché ornament. Beaver bonnets will be much worn this winter. The caps under the bonnets are made very small, and consist of a roche à plis creux, of narrow satin ribbon, placed all round the interior of the bonnet. These ruches are very becoming, and suit well either bandeaux gauffrés or long curls.

The style of dress for little girls scarcely varies; the corsages à la vierge with capes are always preferred, with chemisettes plaited à la Suissesse. The fine linen is constantly improving. Small plain collars for the morning are replaced by collars on which are two rolls of fine cambric, trimmed with very fine narrow Valenciennes. The cuffs are made of the same.

OPENING OF A PORTION OF THE LANCASTER

BRANCH OF THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

This line of Railway is not, as many of our southern readers may suppose, one of the many branches or parts of the "London and North-Western," but an independent line from Skipton, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, to a point o junction on the Lancaster and Carlisle north of Kendal, Westmoreland, with a branch from Clapham to the ancient town of Lancaster. From Skipton to Ingleton it is open for traffic; thence to the north the works are for the present suspended. The branch from Clapham to Kennington is in progress, and it is the opening of the portion thence to Lancaster that we have to record.

On Wednesday, the 31st ult., the waving of banners "from every coigne of vantage" on the Lancaster station, and the important bustling of the officials, gave note of preparation. By one o'clock all was in readiness The directors and their friends assembled, the fortunate holders of tickets crowding the platform, and the company's engineer, J. Watson, Esq., for the nonce turned engine-driver, waited but the moment when the numerous party should be safely seated in the cars, to give, by a touch of his hand, motion to a power which would rush on its journey with its living freight swifter than the wind Before, however, we left the station, we had noticed a singular structure, an Engraving of which is presented, and which we think possesses novelty sufficient to render a description of it interesting to our readers.

At the Lancaster end of the portion just opened, and carrying a continuation of the line to Poulton, across the river Lune, is a timber viaduct. Spanning the river diagonally, and (to suit the exigences of the line of which it forms a part) in the form of a segment, it is of a length much greater than the width of the river, being 690 feet over all, and thus combining in itself two features of bridge architecture, which, before the commencement of railway works, were rarely met with, the curve and the skew—the former being in this case one of 590 feet radius and the latter is at an angle of 40 degrees. We believe no other structure has the two features in combination so markedly developed. It has ten openings of sixty feet each, over which the roadway is partly upheld by pile piers and partly suspended from inclinated arches

VIADUCT OVER THE RIVER LUNE AT LANCASTER.—BRANCH OF THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY TO POULTON-LE-SANDS.

The piers consist of clustered piles, presenting the least possible obstruction to the flow of the water, and having an appearance so light in proportion to the mass they have to support, that persons unable to appreciate the strength of a structure acquired by skilful combination and disposition of its parts, are apt to arrive at conclusions as to its stability the reverse of true. This was fully exemplified immediately after the bridge was completed. In consequence of the simultaneous occurrence of a strong, fresh, and high tide, the water in the river attained a height unexampled for many previous years. A great number of people, split on the bridge, collected on the banks, expecting to see the lights looking supports of the bridge borne down, and the whole fabric carried away by the force of the river current and the receding tide. It is needless to add, their expectations were not realised.

On the tops of the piles—their ends resting in cast-iron shoes—spring arches formed of three-inch planks in layers bent to the required form over temporary centres. There are three of these arches or ribs in the width of the bridge—one on each side and one in the centre.

The roadway is a little above the spring of the arches, and, consequently, does not rest upon, but is suspended from, them. Strong iron bolts, or suspenders (each equal to a strain of twenty tons) are the efficient, though—as they pass through upright timbers—invisible instruments used to sustain in suspension over the river the iron road and pedestrian paths.

The peculiarities we have described were the result of necessity, not choice; and we think no plan can be devised on which to build a bridge that would be more perfect in its adaptation than the present structure. As a proof of its great strength and promise of stability, we may mention that under a pressure of 98 tons concentrated upon one arch, when tested under the inspection of Captain Wynne, Government Inspector, and J. Watson, Esq., C.E., the deflection was only five-eighths of an inch.

All being arranged—a whistle—and we were off. A very few minutes revealed to us that the country we were traversing was one of no ordinary character or interest.

For the first mile and a half of our journey, a broad, clear river ran on our left hand; and then through the trees we caught passing glimpses of a village on the opposite bank of the stream. This was Hafod, once the property of Hornby Tower peep out. Behind, again, dimly blue, the hill of Ingleborough raises his broad top, and closes in the view.

Through this splendid valley, each minute losing beauties and discovering new ones, past Clotes (worthy of more lengthened notice) and Claught, we arrived at Fernly, an ancient seat of the Stanleys. The Castle, standing on a finely-wooded eminence, has, by removing a modern front, and making additions and alterations in keeping with the old part of the building, been rendered highly picturesque—the owner, Pudey Dawson, Esq., having escaped the fate of most renovators; he has not spoiled by improving.

At Fernly we left the river Lune, soon crossed the Findburn by a timber viaduct, and thence onwards by the "Wenning Waterside," past Tatham, with its neatly kept graveyard and very white church, and so to Wennington. Here, leaving the train, we walked a short distance to Hornby Hall, an ancient edifice formerly the residence of the Cansfields, once the home of Catherine Parr. It is now utterly neglected.

Returning to the train, we were hurried back to Lancaster, and thence to the shores of Morecambe Bay, where, in the company's hotel, the directors had provided a repast for the whole of their excursionist friends—a pleasant wind-up to a pleasant day

It is understood that an arrangement will speedily be come to by which the misunderstanding existing between the owner of the property and the local authorities on the subject of lighting, &c. the portion of Seton-square called the King's-road will be removed and the road restored to a state more in keeping with the importance and character of the locality.

NEW QUARTER SESSIONS ACT.—On Thursday, the 1st instant, the new Act to amend the procedure in courts of general and quarter sessions of the peace in England and Wales, and for the better advancement of justice in cases within the jurisdiction of those courts, came into force. Its object is to make the law in cases of appeal to quarter sessions more uniform. This Act removes many inutilities, and establishes one practice throughout England and Wales. It also establishes uniformity of time (at least fourteen days) in notices of appeals allowed by the Act. The grounds of appeal must be stated in writing, and the statements can afterwards be amended. Sessions have now a general power to give costs in all cases of appeal; and, to prevent frivolous appeals, costs may also be awarded after notice, although an appeal be not prosecuted. By the statute, power is given, after notice to appeal, to the consent of the parties, and by order of a Judge (without going to the sessions), to state the facts of a case in the form of a special case, for the opinion of a superior court, and the judgment of the same to be entered at the sessions. In the view of the forthcoming Quarter Sessions, it is provided by this Act, that proceedings may be removed into the Queen's Bench, and be enforced as a rule of that court, and all the reasonable costs attendant upon such application shall be recovered as if the same were void of the order. This Act does not extend to all appeals; and further improvements on the same subject are expected in the next session. The Act was framed by Mr. Barnes, the president of the Poor-law Board.

A correspondent says, that, in the course of a walk round Bath, may be seen the following names of boot and shoemakers:—Long, Strong, Short, Broad, Good, Small, Tyte, Large, Pinch, New, Noble, Best, Smart, Prime, Perfect, Gould, Steele, Wood, Quinn, Brown, Greene, White, Black, William Rex, and George King. Bath Chronicle.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The closing buoyancy of the previous week in the English Market was fully maintained at the opening of Consols on Monday, the first price being 92¾ ¾. Entire confirmation of the adjustment of the Turkish and Russian dispute induced a disposition on the part of the jobbers to buy Stock, and a run in Consols succeeded until 93¼ for Money was marked. This was the highest quotation during the month, but has been quite maintained, the last price being 93 to ¾. At this period Consols remained during Tuesday, business yielding to the superior attractions arising from the opening of the new Coal Exchange. Commencing at the same price on Wednesday, a speculative afternoon reduced the quotation to 93 sellers, but the last price was again 93 to ¾. Thursday being the 1st of November, a close holiday at the Bank and Stock Exchange was (as customary) strictly kept. It will be seen, consequently, that the business doing this week has been nearly confined to two days' transactions—a little inclination to realise displaying itself from this partial cessation of business. At the close of the week, Exchequer Bills, during the heavy stocks before mentioned, were steady, the last quotations being—for Bank Stock, 198¾; Reduced, 91½ ¾; Three per Cent. Consols, Annuities, 93¼; New Three-and-a-Quar er per Cent. Annuities, 99⅜; Long Annuities, Jan. 5, 1859, 7-16; India Bonds, 1 pm.; Old Annuities, for Account, 93⅜; Exchequer Bills, £1000, 1½ pm.; 500, 1½ pm.; Ditto, £500, 2½; Ditto, Small, 42.

Business in the Foreign House on Monday did not partake in the animation of the English Market; and, in fact, during the week the fluctuations have been unimportant. A slight advance will be remarked in Spanish, consequent upon the return to power of the Arrazo Ministry; and Portuguese have gained Cents continue to improve. At the close of the week the official quotations were

For Brazilian, Five per Cent., 82¾; Buenos Ayres, Six per Cent., 40¾; Chilian, Six per Cent., 95; Danish, Three per Cent., 73; Ditto, Five per Cent.—; Mexican, Five per Cents., for Account, 20¾; Portuguese, Five per Cent., 33; Ditto, Four per Cent., 33¾; Spanish, Five per Cent., 17¾; Ditto, Account, 17¾; Ditto, Coupons, 6¾; Ditto, Three per Cent., Account, 35¾; Belgian, Four-and-a-Half per Cent., 98; Dutch, Four per Cent. Certificates —.

The Railway Market has suddenly become animated, and prices continue on the rise. But the sudden advance, like the late sudden depression, is no index to public opinion, but is the result of speculative operations. As an example was made on Wednesday of a party who had sold shares without possessing them to deliver—a practice by which the quoted prices are liable, without any means of genuine sale but the case was to be, as it usually is, unable to deliver a certain number of Great Western shares which he had dispo ed of on speculation for the account, the brokers by whom they had been purchased tendered their right of relying them publicly, according to the rules of the Stock Exchange, thus rendering him liable for any difference in price they might be compelled to pay. The dealers, aware of what to take place, purchased the particular shares specifically employed by the committee of the House), generally forborne to accept the biddings, as hence the price which was nominally about 60, was driven up to 74⅜—the transaction was completed in the case with a loss, unable to deliver a certain number of Great Western shares which he had disp

NEW BOOKS &c.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "JANE EYRE."
Just published, in 3 vols., post 8vo., p. s 31 11s 6d, cloth,
SHIRLEY. By CURRER BELL.
Author of "Jane Eyre."
"Shirley is the anatomy of the female heart. It is a like its predecessor, inclines sometimes to fling asi of mind as they were: the women are all divine. ... ish an intellectual banquet."—Daily News.
SMITH, ELDER, and Co. 65, Cornhill.

On November Magazine, is 6d; plain, 2s 6d, coloured (5d extra, postage
QUY FAUX; a Squib, seven feet long, manu- featured by HORACE MAYHEW and PERCY
Plc.ure from private vi.. of our sh
In every member of the hewing paper!
Chare ward
THE ANGLO-SAXON.—P. I. T
Current Number of this Quarterly, published on the 1st ... contains, amongst other arti es, a Life of Alfred the Great, the Ju.. lative Wealth, and an article on the then anticipated Alfred Jubilee at Wantage—the social celebration of which event has very far exceeded the proj.ctors' concerns. In the next Number will be given a full account of that enthusiastic Reade Festival; and ample justice shall be done to the land in the town of Wantage, and the good and Englishmen of Berks, for their zeal on that happy occasion.
LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMAN

Mr. SHOBERL will publish in a few days,
SIR LEE CAVENDISH-COLQUHOUN SMITH'S EXCURSIONS in SOUTHERN AFRICA;
including a History of the Cape Colony, an Account of the Native Tribes, &c. With numerous Illustrations. In 2 vols. small 8vo.
H
MISS PARDOE'S FLIES in AMBER. 3
vols.
WILLIAM SHOBERL, Publisher, 20, Great Marlborough-street.
* * Orders received by all Booksellers.

Post One shilling, or free by post for 13 stamps, with Coloured ... engravings,
THE LADIES' GUIDE to the ART of ... PAPER FLOWERS, so as to obtain the most perfect imitations of Nature. By Mrs. BARTLETT. With an Introduction by JAMES SHI ... [illegible]
POLITENESS for G... [illegible]
LADIES.
FASHIONABLE BRAIDING PATTERNS.
THE LADY'S BRAIDING BOOK, for ... NOVEMBER, will contain a Beautiful Design of the following subjects; viz., Patterns for an elegant Table Cover, Patterns for Front, Crown, and Curtain of a Bonnet; Rechercha Pattern for a large square Table-cover, with the Appropriate Introduction, &c.
... his work is published Monthly, and contains Dress ... ty of Useful and Ornamental Articles.
Price One Shilling
Published by GRANT and GRIFFITH, St. Paul's Churchyard; and sold by all Booksellers, Fancy Stationers, and at all Berlin Wool Repositories.

PAPER MODELS given with the LONDON ... and PARIS MAGAZINE of FASHION for November, price 1s. Models are given of Morning Dress, Mantle, Cap, Bonnet, &c., with an immense Double Plate in addition to the usual Plates, containing the numerous Court, Evening, Walking, and Children's Dresses, Cloaks, Bonnets, Caps, and Patterns; also Model of a greatings of Patterns, Mantles, &c., in detail. A Letter-press edition, London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co. ... books here

WORKS ON THE FINE ARTS JUST PUBLISHED
GUIDE to WATER-COLOUR PAINTING. With an Illustration in Colours, by G. P. Noble.
Price 1s 6d stitched, or 2s bound in cloth.
GUIDE to OIL PAINTING. By J. S. TEMPLETON. Sixth Edition. Price 1s stitched, or 1s 6d bound in cloth
GUIDE to PENCIL DRAWING. By G HARLEY. Price 1s stitched, or 1s 6d bound in cloth
GUIDE to PICTORIAL ART. By H. O'NEILL. Price 1s 6d stitched, or 2s bound in cloth
RUSTIC STUDIES of FIGURE. By GIOVANNI. Six Plates, half-imperial size, 2s each
STUDIES from the PORTFOLIO of GEORGE BARNARD.
Six Lates half-imperial size, 1s 6d. each
SYER'S RUSTIC SCENES. Six Nos., 8vo. Imperial, 9 pp., 1s. each, with text. 1s. 6d. each Proof Impressions on 4to paper, 2s. each
GEORGE ROWNEY and Co., 51, Rathbone-place, London.
In December will be published
THE FINE ARTS ALMANACK. Price 1s.

BY CHARLES KNIGHT, 90, FLEET-STREET.
THE BRITISH ALMANAC for 1850. Price sewed, One Shilling.
The COMPANION to the ALMANAC for 1850. Price, sewed, Half-a-Crown.
The Two united together in neat cl. th, uniform ... preceding years, price Four Shillings
PART I.—On ancient and Modern ... pean and other Powers, 1849
Usage in Reckoning Time. The ... Fluctuations of the Seasons.
Planets of Great Britain and ... PART II. Abstracts of Acts—Ab-
Ireland. Discoveries in Natural ... stracts of Public Documents—
History of the Connexion between ... Chronicle of Occurrences—Private Light and Heat. Meteorology from ... Bills—Public Improvements, with Woodcut
1832 to the present time—Rail- ... Illustrations of New Buildings—ways of Great Britain and Ireland. ... Obituary of Celebrated Persons
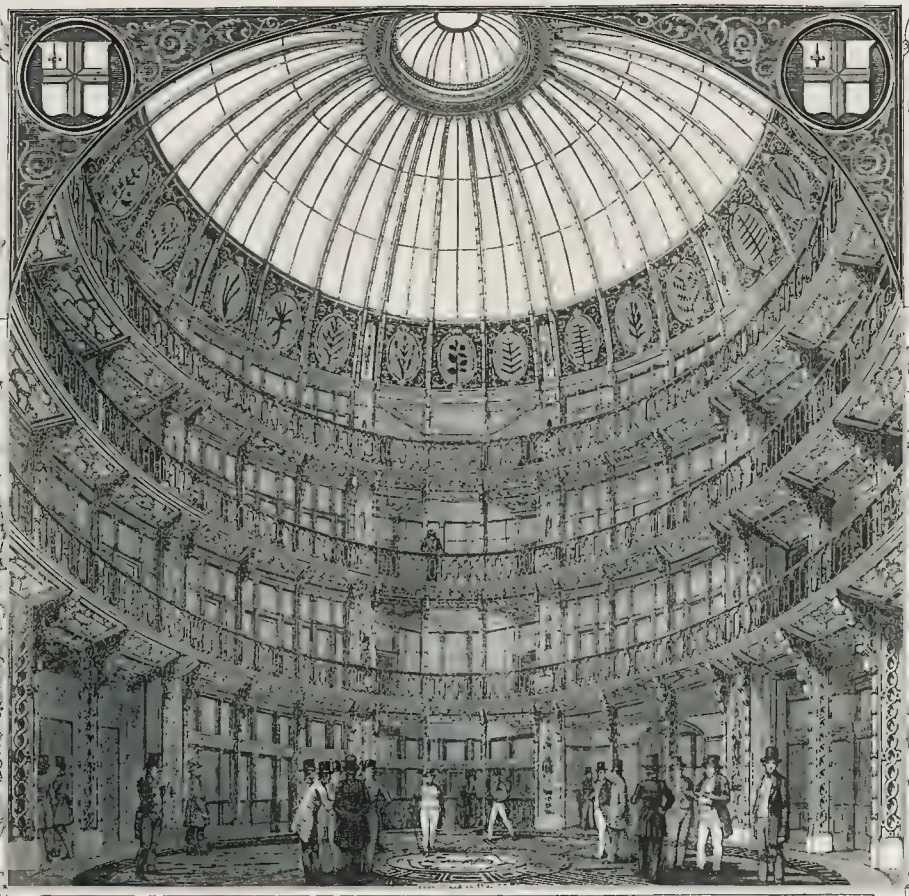
Its Libraries—Ragged Schools— ... Chronicle of Occurrences—
On the Cholera of 1849—Rare ... Bankruptcy Analysis—Meteorological Tables.

THE UNIONS' and PARISH OFFICERS' SHEET ALMANAC for 1850. Price, plain, 1s 6d; Varnished, 2s. 3d In Frames and Varnished, 4s 7d
Also, early in December, price 4s. cloth, or 4s 6d roan tuck,
THE UNIONS' and PARISH OFFICERS' POCKET ALMANAC and GUIDE, for 1850; great ... extended
NEW ... [illegible]
Now ready, Price One shilling; or Post-free, 1s. 6d.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING BOOK
This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of the SPELLING, which smoothes all difficulties or perplexities to the learner, by the PLEASING ORIGINAL STORY and INTRO LESSONS, which entice the learn to advance at his own speed—while the whole is ILLUSTRATED by UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD CUTS of objects ... ...



THE NEW COAL EXCHANGE.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand aforesaid.—Saturday, November 3, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 398.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

THE PROSPECTS OF FRANCE.

THE bold policy of the President of the French Republic has startled the intriguers of all shades of opinion. However daring the letter in which he announced to the Legislative Assembly that he had dismissed a Ministry supported by an overwhelming Parliamentary majority, there is no question that, as far as the act is concerned, he has kept strictly within the limits of the Constitution. Being responsible to the country, he has a clear right to be supported by men in whom he has confidence. Being re-eligible for the office of President, he is not to be compromised by their conduct. If hereafter the State machine should come to a dead lock between a responsible President and a responsible Ministry on the one hand, and on the other an irresponsible Parliament, not to be dissolved before its legal term, however inimical it may be to the policy of its co-equal the President, the fault will be in the Constitution, and not in the man who has been elected to administer it, and who may reasonably aspire, if he give satisfaction, to fill the same office again. Should the Assembly stand upon its right, as Louis Napoleon has done upon his, there remains but a new revolution to rescue France from the difficulty.

Although the Assembly at present plays a moderate part, and seems disinclined to precipitate matters, we believe that the dismissal of M. Odillon Barrot is the first step to revolution. We believe, moreover, that revolution! (if the word can be correctly applied to the amendment of the Constitution) is absolutely necessary for the future welfare of the country. The will of the President, if supported, as is most likely to happen, by the consent of the army, and the approval of the six millions of voters who elected him, will produce a bloodless catastrophe, and amend a constitution that, amid many merits, has the fatal demerit of being unworkable. There needs no great sagacity to discover the amendments required in it. Two will suffice. The responsibility of the President is a farce, unless he can appeal to the country against an assembly that will not co-operate with him; and the election of a President for four years only, is, in the circumstances of France, which needs repose above all things, a source of perpetual disquietude and political agitation.

The President, it cannot be denied, has not willingly sought this difficulty. Having had opinions of his own from the commencement, he has given a fair chance to the Parliamentary majority to aid him in the task of government. But the Parliamentary notabilities —the old statesmen of the Monarchy—the leading ambitions o. the Assembly, have each and all played a false and double part since the revolution of 1848. They have never denied that the Revolution was distasteful to them, and that they deeply regretted it. But they, at the same time, avowed by their words that they treated it as a fait accompli. They promised that they would do their best to support the Republic and the Constitution so unluckily thrust upon them. But their deeds belied their words. Not one of them acted with sincerity; and at the time when they appeared to give the most cordial support to the man who had been elected to the chief office in the State, they were secretly endeavouring to make a tool of him to serve their own purposes. Nothing, in their opinion, so much became the new President as incapacity. His folly was their hope—his errors were their opportunity. The greater his failure, the greater the chance for the Count de Chambord, in the opinion of the Legitimists, and for the Count de Paris, in the estimation of the Orleanists. Nor were the ultra-Republicans less inimical to the President. But, unlike the other two parties, they had the honesty to avow their dislike, and to express openly their dread that the heir of the Bonapartes was no great friend of a Democratic Republic. Hence, the position of the President has been one of extreme difficulty and delicacy. It is not too much to assert of him that he has played that difficult part with extreme modesty, but with great courage, moderation, prudence, and skill. The Molés, the Thierses, the De Broglies, the Montalemberts, the Odillon Barrots, and all the herd of statesmen who abhorred the Revolution, unaccountably forgot or made light of the circumstances of the President's previous career. They all seem to have imagined that the man who had the temerity to make such attempts at revolution as those of Strasburg and Boulogne would be a mere puppet, when a train of extraordinary circumstances had placed him in as high a position as that to which he had aspired. They never seem to have calculated that Louis Napoleon owed it to himself and to France to justify the daring of those deeds, and to show that his temerity was but courage after all; and that, having succeeded at a later time, and by a different method, to the chief power and position in France which had been the objects of his early aspiration, he was bound to show the six millions of Frenchmen who had backed his pretensions, that they had not supported a hot-brained enthusiast or a brainless nobody. He had shown great ambition. It was necessary that he should show some other quality. He has done so. He has penetrated the veil of duplicity with which the notabilities of the reign of Louis Philippe endeavoured to cover their real intentions; and he has shown the Legitimists, that, whatever may be their attempts to restore the old line of the Bourbons, there is an impediment in the way as long as he retains the confidence of Frenchmen.

INSTALLATION OF THE JUDGES IN THE PALAIS DE JUSTICE, AT PARIS—THE OATH.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Believing as we do that the restoration either of the elder Bourbons or the Orleans dynasty would not be permanently submitted to by the French nation, and that the majority of the people is Bonapartist and Republican, we think that Louis Napoleon has acted wisely in breaking with the men of all parties, who were striving to make a tool of him for purposes that, if successful for a time, would have infallibly caused a succession of new and violent revolutions. Restorations and Red Republics are equally distasteful to the bulk of the French. Louis Napoleon has shown that he will not be a party to the establishment of any one of the three. There remains but the present constitution or a revolution, physical or moral which shall amend it in those parts which are unworkable. The quiet satisfaction expressed throughout France at the conduct of the President, and the prudent policy which the Legitimists and Orleanists have manifested an inclination to pursue, lead to the belief that the approaching and inevitable coup d'état will be unattended with any disturbance of the public peace. France, which will tolerate no hereditary Monarchy, and that does not possess the aristocratic elements that could constitute it permanently, and which is not ripe for a Democratic Republic in the American sense, has sufficient of the monarchical feeling to support a Monarchy of personal merit. The whole current of events runs in that direction. A Sovereign elected by universal suffrage, holding office for life or during good behaviour—such seems to be the eventual result of the present jumble of French politics. Such a result would be new in the history of modern civilisation; but the French are an exceptional people, and a Government that does not reflect their own traditions, prejudices, and manners, as well as their more reasonable convictions, cannot subsist amongst them. When Louis Napoleon raised the flag of revolt at Strasbourg, and when he invaded Boulogne with the hope of marching to Paris amid the enthusiastic shouts of the admiring people, he had no idea, should success have crowned his daring, to have accepted a temporary and nominal Sovereignty. He strove at that time for a reality and a permanency. His dismissal of M. Odillon Barrot, and his defiance of the Assembly, show that he will not accept less than the reality now. We may not unreasonably surmise, that, circumstances being favourable, he will also strive for the permanency. At all events, he has made his move, and is playing his game Hitherto, the game has been successful; and we have but little doubt that he will ultimately be the winner.

INSTALLATION OF THE JUDGES IN PARIS.

SATURDAY last was the day appointed for the Installation of the High Judges of the Land, in the ancient Palais de Justice, at Paris. The President of the Republic assisted at the ceremony, this being his first appearance in public since the dismissal of Ministers. It is only necessary to say that he was accompanied with ostentatious splendour, as he proceeded from the Palace of the Elysée to the seat of Justice, in the midst of a crowded thoroughfare in the quarter which was once the residence of the ancient Sovereigns of France—the Cité.

On his arrival in the court of the Palais de Justice, he was received by the whole of the magistracy, the most essential of that is assembled in the Supreme Judges of France all drawn up on the marble platform, to which the ascent is by 70 or 80 steps. Thence he was conducted to the chambre d'audience of the Court of Cassation, where he was again received by the dignitaries and authorities, and ascended with the usual formalities. He again issued, still accompanied by the magistrature, from the Palais, descended the steps, and proceeded across the court to the Prefecture, where a temporary platform had been erected. He ascended this, and was conducted in the Sainte Chapelle, where a grand Te Deum was performed as preliminary to the ceremony of installation.

The sacred edifice is a fine specimen of florid Gothic architecture. The windows are still filled with the beautiful stained glass of the thirteenth century, and escaped, as if by miracle, the devastation of the Revolution. The treasure of the chapel was kept in two immense armoires placed in the sacristy, and which were filled with gold and silver utensils of great value. They all disappeared at the Revolution. Amongst other objects was the gold statue of St. Louis, of the natural size, supported by silver lions, and wearing on his head a crown of gold incrusted with diamonds.

As soon as the religious ceremony was concluded, the cortège returned in the same form to the Salle des Pas Perdus of the Palais de Justice. The President and the other high personages of the Republic took their places in due form.

As soon as the Assembly was seated, M. Rouher, the new Minister of Justice, opened the proceedings. He delivered the most flattering eulogy on the distinguished gentleman who so lately preceded him (Odillon Barrot), both as Minister of Justice and as member of the Paris bar.

After him came M. Portalis, First President of the Court of Cassation, who I spoke at length of the high and responsible duties of judges, and who paid some compliments to the President of the Republic.

M. Dupin, Attorney-General of the Court of Cassation, and President of the National Assembly, then stood up and made a speech, in which he traced the history of the ancient Parliaments of France, and alluded to the Act of the Restoration which first established the inamovabilité of the judges, paid the highest compliments to M. Odillon Barrot, and regretted he was not there to open the proceedings of the day

The President of the Republic rose last, and delivered, in a firm and agreeable manner, an excellent address. He alluded to the importance of the ceremony in which they were all actors. He went over some of the most remarkable events of the great Revolution, and was particularly effective when he alluded to the independence and purity of the magistracy during that terrible period of modern history. He spoke of his oath, which was to maintain the Republic, restoring the magistracy to their dignity, and granting their inamovabilité, consecrated subsequently by the Restoration. He declared that the magistrates were always the safeguard of society, and the guarantee of civilisation and of real national freedom was to be found in uncorrupted judges. He expressed his conviction that the present magistracy of France would reflect honour on the nation; and he felt persuaded that they would co-operate with him in getting rid of the era of revolution to enter upon that of real amelioration—in crushing anarchy, and supporting the Republic which he had sworn to uphold. On the whole, his speech merited the praise bestowed on it as a beau succès de tribune, and far surpassed the expectations entertained of him as a public speaker

M. Rouher again rose, and as soon as the enthusiastic applause which greeted the President's address subsided, and silence was procured, read in a loud and firm voice the following oath

In the presence of God and of man I swear and promise, on my soul and conscience, to fulfil my functions properly as Judge; to apply the laws with impartiality, independence, and firmness; to keep religiously the secret of the deliberations, and to deport myself in every respect like a dignified and conscientious magistrate.

As these words were slowly and emphatically pronounced, the whole of the magistrates assembled rose simultaneously, and each holding forth his arm and looking on the crucifix suspended in front, said, "Je le jure."

This was the conclusion of the ceremony. The President rose, and, accompanied by the whole of the magistrates, proceeded to the porch, descended the magnificent staircase of the palace, still followed by the examined Judges, entered his carriage, and returned to the Elysée by the same route that he had arrived. He received the same respectful salutations from the crowds that still lined the quays in half an hour there was no event visible.

In the Illustration the President is seated upon a sort of dais; with the Vice-President on his right, and on his left the President of the National Assembly. The Grand Chancellor, in his crimson robes, is reading the oath, which the judges are taking in the form already described.

The President wore his uniform of General of the National Guard. Behind him are seven rows of officers, generals, &c.; on his right are the Ambassadors and their suites; then the five rows of judges, in red robes. The court was lit by the windows, the galleries being occupied by ladies.

At the end of the court, behind the platform of the President, is a picture of the "Crucifixion;" and on each side are tables, inscribed with the names of the celebrated names of the magistrature, in two rows.

After the second platform there is a sort of parterre, filled up with standing members of the bar, mixed with officers of the army and National Guards, repre-

[illegible] Rouher and Parker and his [illegible] not touched. At one of the tables [illegible] to be within a distant part of the place. The grand [illegible] is merely expected to touch at Athens, and then to proceed directly to the Dardanelles.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The new Ministry receives but very negative support from the majority in the Legislative Assembly, the general impression being that it is but a transition Cabinet, and cannot last. The ministerial programme, which it is the custom for a new Cabinet to lay before the Legislative Assembly as a sort of key to their future policy, was read to the Chamber by General d'Hautpoul: it is as vague as a State paper need be, and is as follows:—

The programme contained in the Message of the President of the Republic is sufficiently explicit to place beyond a supposition the policy which he has decided to follow.

When he appealed to us for our co-operation he had a ready thought proper to ask for a ministerial initiative. We shall not certainly be prepared from seeking in the soul of the Cabinet that preceded us more than one example of glorious devotedness to the country, and of an exalted appreciation of duty.

In the situation in which we were placed, all individual sympathy ought to give way, or rather to resume its just influence to a signal and solemn testimony of friendship and attachment.

The future was held up to us, and we became convinced of the urgency of providing for its security.

The new Cabinet our greatest opinion sufficiently indicated has not been formed against the majority. On the contrary, it develops with energy its avowed principles. It has not, and cannot have others.

We must maintain the union of all the shades in our party, for it is that party which will save France. We shall arrive at that result by a unity of views, by confidence in the strength of the power elected on the 10th of December, supported by the majority of the Assembly, and finally by the imperious sentiment awakened everywhere in the minds of the functionaries of the state.

Such is the object which the Chief of the Government invited us to pursue with him encouraging according to his right, nobly understood, his responsibility along with ours in that difficult but patriotic effort.

Peace abroad, guaranteed by the dignity becoming to France; energetic maintenance of order at home; an administration more than ever vigilant and economical of the finances of the state: such is the programme dictated to us by the interests of the country, the confidence of this Assembly, and the personal conviction of the Chief of the Government.

In the first rank of our duties we place the protection of labour in all its degrees and forms. We, with the farmer and the labourer, more and more re-assured respecting the future, should find a time for those kindnesses which is beginning to revive.

We also desire that that security should spread to other regions, re-animate the labours of intelligence, and restore to capital and to credit a spring too long relaxed.

The Cabinet, in accepting the burden of affairs which it did not seek, has counted on your sympathy and support: your exalted reason and patriotism have given it that right.

M. Fortfinand Barrot made his first speech on Monday in the French Assembly, as Minister of the Interior, in support of the Bill of M. Dufaure's bill for postponing the re-organisation of the National Guards of Lyons. M. Barrot acquitted himself with marked success, shewing considerable aptitude for public debate. The bill was eventually carried.

M. Barrot, it is said, is not to continue long in his present office, having only undertaken to hold it until a fitting successor shall be appointed, which rumour assigns to Leon Faucher. M. Fould, it is also reported, will give way for another. A considerable modification of the Ministry, indeed, is looked upon as likely.

General Baraguay d'Hilliers has been appointed to the command-in-chief of the expeditionary army of the Mediterranean, in place of General d'Hautpoul, named Minister-at-War. The General is also to be Political Agent to the Pontifical Government.

General Rostolan and M. de Corcelles are to return to France forthwith

Great anxiety is felt respecting the departmental appointments, which are under the consideration of the President of the Republic; for upon the influence of the individuals selected depend the peace and happiness of the people.

On Wednesday a Cabinet Council was held, at which the selection of a Minister of Police was the principal subject discussed. The President of the Republic is said to be in favour of the appointment of M. de Persigny to that office, while the majority of the Cabinet are decidedly opposed to that gentleman, and support the nomination of M. Pranger. It is thought that the President will give way, rather than offer a further resistance to his Ministers.

Capt. Farina, a witness on the part of the prisoners on trial at Versailles, has accused General Changarnier with having used certain expressions on the 12th of June, indicating the intention of changing the Government. General Changarnier, however, has utterly repudiated the charge as a foul calumny.

On Saturday last, the President of the Republic, the new Ministers, a large deputation from the Legislative Assembly, and from all the public offices, went to the Palace of Justice, for the purpose of swearing in and installing all the judges and magistrates of France. The ceremony was conducted with great pomp, and attracted crowds to witness it. The interior of the Palace of the Palace of Justice, but along all the streets and quays through which the President and other personages passed on their way to the ceremony. The President was well received in the streets.

The Debats asserts that all amicable arrangements between France and Morocco are impossible, and that the Government have ordered a squadron to proceed to Tangiers, to demand satisfaction for the late affront offered.

Accounts from Algiers state that the French troops who were recently repulsed in an attack made by them at Zaatcha, a fortified village, which is the capital of an oasis of the desert, situated within sixty leagues of Constantine, were still before the place, and that finding it impregnable without greater force, they had sent to Constantine for heavy artillery.

ITALIAN STATES.

From Rome, under date the 29th ult., we learn that a deputation had gone to Perugia to meet the Pope, and to announce the approach of impending change in the triumvirate of governing Cardinals were prevalent, but nothing certain was known either on that subject or about the Pope's return. On the 28th some Mesdaltations had been created among the Roman nobility, as an offset to ordinary character, whether [illegible] is nautical skill or scientific abilities. Sir James seems to have been formed [illegible] for the service to which fate has so resolutely devoted himself. [illegible] constitution necessary to constitute the man destined to conduct a great and hazardous enterprise.

We have [illegible] when it took a sickness—[illegible] and [illegible] A [illegible] when consolidated [illegible] prior to having [illegible], and, in my opinion, they could [illegible] more [illegible] any minute, however genial.

I am [illegible] of Sir John Franklin's expedition.

I may remark that the steamer, the Investigator, is in company with us: we have never lost sight of each other during the whole voyage.

Her Majesty's ship Enterprise, off Scarborough, Nov. 4

We have not again. We did not get on of the ice in Barrow's Strait until the last week in September, at which time [illegible] the ice, and proceeded knows how many would have lived to return. We found no traces of Sir J. Franklin, although we have been within 100 miles of Melville Island, and within 70 miles of 200 miles on the W. and N. coasts of N. 4th Somerset, but could find no traces of them. We wintered in the ice, in a situation [illegible] long the W. We were without the sun for about 86 days, and had the temperature 80 degrees below freezing, by Fahrenheit. I am in a great hurry, and will give you more news in the next.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

EXPRESS MAILS ON THE LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN.—With the commencement of the month a new and important system of accelerating was established by the London and North-Western Railway Company, for the passengers and correspondence at all the principal termini, such as Liverpool, Manchester, Holyhead, Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and other [illegible] The speed on some portions of the lines is at express pace, and the average increase in the rate of speed is about five miles per hour. The improvement is the result of an arrangement just come to between the Postmaster-General and the railway authorities.

OPENING OF THE NORWICH EXTENSION OF THE EASTERN UNION RAILWAY.—On Wednesday this company's extension into Norwich was opened, with considerable ceremony, by the directors and shareholders resident in the various localities.

RAILWAY AUDIT.—On Thursday a meeting of directors and others, representing the various railway companies, was held at the King's Arms Hotel, Palace-yard, to consider the best means of securing an efficient audit of railway accounts; the Duke of Buccleuch presiding. After some discussion, resolutions were carried deprecating Government interference with the accounts of railway companies, and pledging the directors of the different companies to adopt some definite and uniform plan to be submitted for the consideration of their shareholders.

SUNDAY LABOUR AT THE POST-OFFICE.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

Ley Hall, near Birmingham, Nov. 3, 1849.

SIR,—Upon reading the article in your paper of this morning respecting the meeting held in Birmingham, on Tuesday last, for the purpose of considering the propriety of memorialling the Treasury to suspend the business of the Post-office during Sunday, I am convinced of the intentionally or unintentionally—you have had all the proceedings grossly misrepresented to you.

From your report it would appear that the meeting was in favour of Mr. Yorke's amendment, and that the decision of the Mayor against it had caused the excitement which existed, which is decidedly the reverse of the fact. The meeting was decidedly in favour of the original resolution, and of closing the post-offices entirely on Sundays; at least two-thirds were so voted in favour of both these propositions. The excitement was principally occasioned by the meeting being of opinion that the Mayor acted like a partizan in the chair, in opposition to the original resolution.

I send you a paper per this post which gives a very fair report of the proceedings, and which you will find corroborates my statement.

Yours, respectfully, G. F. MUNTZ

THE EARL OF GUILDFORD AND THE ST. CROSS HOSPITAL.—The Right Honourable and Reverend Earl of Guildford has announced his intention of resigning the living of St. Mary's, Southampton, estimated to be worth between £2000 and £3000 a year. It appears, also, that in prosecuting an investigation into the abuses of St. Cross Hospital at Winchester, of which the Earl of Guildford is master, some informality has been discovered as to the appointment of the Earl to that office, and it is not unprobable that he will have to refund the vast sums which he has received from the revenues of the hospital.—Daily News

WESTMINSTER CANONRY.—The Rev. William Cureton, of the British Museum, has been nominated to the Canonry of Westminster, vacant by the promotion of Mr. Milman to the Deanery of St. Paul's. Mr. Cureton is well known, not only in this country, but on the Continent, as one of the first Oriental scholars of the day, and a the same gentleman of whom we recently announced that he had received from the King of Prussia the Prussian order of Merit, as a token of the high appreciation in which the King held Mr. Cureton for his recent edition of the Ignatian Epistles.

IRELAND.

NO. 2.—THE SOURCE OF THE WRONG.

The exactions that are continually made by the executive and by the legislative powers, and, still more, the demands made on them for improvement, imply that the condition of Ireland is caused by the action of the Government. That it too means well, and has meant well for several years past, is established: nevertheless, it has not been successful, and the condition of Ireland is now, as it has been for many years, the opprobrium of the empire. Is it not singular that the English people—who have compassed the whole earth, and everywhere left monuments of their skill, who have placed a tubular bridge across the Conway, and are about to place another across the Menai Straits, suspending in mid-air an iron tube weighing 10,000 tons, that is to bear not merely its own weight, which seemed an impossibility, but the weight of a huge railway train; who have run railways and carried electric telegraphs from one end of the empire to the other, and speak to one another across the whole length and breadth of the land; who have ascertained the weight of the sun, and measured the distance of the stars—is it not singular that this skilful and wise nation, who have, as it were, subdued nature, cannot govern Ireland successfully, and achieve its prosperity? Some error must vitiate all its proceedings. Ireland was, as is the case with Grattan, Swift, Cromwell, Elizabeth, is a prey to disorder and a hideous mockery of state craft. Such an extraordinary circumstance requires explanation; and as long as one nation in the world is prosperous, the causes of its prosperity must be searched to nature, and must be removed by man. We are constrained to believe that the evil is not irreparable, though the means of repairing it have hitherto failed. We shall offer an explanation of this extraordinary circumstance.

From the right of property having been in many cases very grossly abused, there has grown up in our time a sect, not very numerous, we hope, which denies the utility of the right of property. Different men go into from them, and, at the same time, believing that the abuses of property lie at the bottom of the mischief, we must state strongly that the right of property is the most necessary result of man being created an individual. Every one is separate and totally distinct from every other. The connection of mutual interest and mutual sympathies, even in the closest and tenderest relations, never destroys individuality, or amalgamates human beings into one. Each is the owner of his own limbs, body, and mind. The consequences, too, of his actions are his own. He is naturally the possessor of the bow he makes and the game he catches, as he alone feels the weariness of the exertions required to make the one and catch the other. A right of property in land—to that which a man encloses, clears, and cultivates, or purchases by the produce of his own exertions, after another has inclosed, and cleared, and cultivated it, is a necessary consequence of each individual owning his body, and having a right to the fruits of his own exertions. To give effect to this right, it is essential that a right of property in the soil should be established and secured. We place the right of property in land next in order to, and, next to the right to live, and of equal sanctity. The prohibition not to steal is as emphatic as the prohibition not to kill. The prohibition "Thou shalt not steal," were to be swept clean out of our minds, and were never enforced by our laws.

There is no longer any doubt that the convulsions on the Continent have grown from violations of the right of property. The governments there have encroached the industry and misappropriated the property of their subjects. It is on the want of protection for the property of the industrious masses, than in the want of protection either for their persons or their thoughts. Similar remarks may be extended to Ireland. Except that the Irish have an additional grievance to support, and have a political organisation which denies to the masses, a full and equal share of the representation, they are in the enjoyment of personal security as against the Government, and of civil and religious liberty. They suffer from a want of the fruits of property. Security of property has there been the exception. At successive periods, the Government—as at the commencement of the connexion between the two countries, as under Elizabeth, Cromwell, and William—is capable of confiscation, and of securing their power by violating the right of property. In England, the Government, albeit it commenced, like that of Ireland, in conquest, has become amalgamated with the people, and the power of reckless tyranny is not to be always stood in fear of. In respect for individual rights, has there been a continuous progress, which has now perfectly clear that seems improve in morality as they grow in numbers and wealth. The abhorrence of murder—the abstaining from plunder—are practically the virtues only of civilised man; the contrary vices are the characteristics of barbarism; and, in that respect, the Irish have been kept morally and mentally in a condition of comparative barbarity by the example and the action of the Government.

If the confiscation of the soil we have adverted to had been the act of a native government, that must in a short time have conformed to the necessities of the people, but, being the act of a foreign government, it was enacted for the purposes of hostile aggression. After the latest confiscations a religious motive was added to their necessities. After the property taken away from a Roman Catholic people and conferred on a Protestant priesthood, was maintained in their possession by a code of penal restrictions on Roman Catholics. There was no possibility of getting rid of the habits that system engendered. We only extinguished the last legal remnant of it some short twelve years ago, when the corporations of Ireland were reformed. For many years no Catholic could acquire landed property. He was forbidden to teach a school. "The penal laws," says Mr. Pim, "seem to have been intended, by depriving the rich of their property and preventing education, to reduce the whole mass of Roman Catholics to a state of serfdom, in which they should no longer be dangerous, and yet might be useful to their oppressors as labourers or tenants, from whom exorbitant rents might be obtained." To impede or restrict industry, is to violate the right of property. For ages, then, the Irish have continually violated the right of property, especially of the Catholics. They were living under a great plunderer; and, property being essential to civilization, they were kept in their ancient state of superstition and ignorance, of which their present condition, so painful to us, is the consequence.

In another way the government of England continually violated the right of property in Ireland. At the instigation of jealous and ignorant manufacturers, it forbad the manufacture of woollen in Ireland; it suppressed that manufacture, and with it suppressed the industry of the townspeople of Ireland. It prohibited them from trading with our colonies; and, by suppressing both trade and manufactures, it forced them to rely exclusively on the produce of the soil for their subsistence. It made the sole source of wealth in Ireland, and it forbad the Catholics from acquiring it. In proposing the Union, Mr. Pitt gave the following account of the conduct of our Government towards Irish commerce. "From the Revolution until these very few years the English system had been that of debarring Ireland from the enjoyment and use of her own resources, to make that kingdom completely subservient to the interests and the profits of this country, without suffering her to share in the bounties of nature." Ireland was put under such restraint, that she was shut out from every species of commerce. She was restrained from importing her own sugar, and from all foreign markets, and all correspondence with the colonies of Great Britain was prohibited to her, so that she could not derive their commodities but through the medium of Great Britain. Well might Mr. Grattan call such a system "cruel and abominable." "harsh and unjust," "as impolitic as it was oppressive," nor we know now that it has impeded the prosperity of England, and impoverished while it degraded and corrupted the Irish.

The same system which prohibited the Catholics from acquiring property, and annihilated the commercial and manufacturing industry, conferred the bulk of the land of Ireland on a comparatively few Protestant landlords, and with the forced the whole wealth set apart for purposes of religion on the Protestant clergy. The ruling class, supported by the power of England, having in its hands all the emoluments of the Government—appointing exclusively all the magistracy from the dominant class—lived in reality with the mass of the people. It had no sympathy with them. Most of the great landlords lived in England, and leased their estates, or deputed their power to agents, stewards, and bailiffs. They regarded Ireland as the absentee proprietors regarded Jamaica—as a means of contributing to their wealth by the savery of the people. Wealthy slaves would be equally nuisances in both places; and in both the system adopted went to keep the people in a state of poverty and degradation. The landlords did nothing for them; neither built them farm-houses nor cottages—neither drained the land nor enclosed it. The peasantry were obliged to do all that for themselves; and all that the landlords did, was to exact from them—not by fair competition, but by the force of law (rent and tithes having been continually levied in Ireland by the bayonet)—the whole produce of their labour above the scantiest subsistence for themselves. The peasantry were careful short of the scantiest subsistence for themselves. The peasantry were careful not to show any marks of wealth, for they knew their property would be taken from them. Their tenures were insecure, and the man who had the use of a piece of ground one year, was not sure of having it the next. The law was made altogether for the advantage of the landlord, and enabled him, though he was a man of straw, "to grind into powder," as Lord Clare emphatically said, "the tenant of steel." The law was administered as well as made by the landowners, and for ages the peasantry had no protection whatever but the knife of the assassin, from the oppression and plunder of the ruling class. To these we may say, even forced—to have recourse to some such means—were banded themselves into "Peep-o'-day boys," "Rockites," and so forth, were not respected by the people; but the terrible passions and violence of which they were in turn the victims, were the rebound of their own injustice. The peasantry were taught not to respect the property of their landlords, by their own property being continually violated.

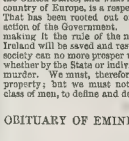
It may be said this system has been for some time abolished, and yet the violence and the reckle-sness of the peasantry continue. But it must be recollected that the habits of nations cannot be changed like written laws; and that the sense of injustice engraved in the Irish by ages of wrong, cannot be wiped away like the damp breathed on a rocking-glass. As we suffer, by our national debt, for the foolish wars of our ancestors, so we suffer, by the present condition of the Irish, for their still more foolish and bigoted tyranny. It is at the same time plain, from the passage quoted from Mr. Pim, that the relaxation of this system was followed by most beneficial effects; and equally plain is it that the treatment now received by the peasantry is breaking up their homesteads, that the system is very far from being abolished "The main tendency," says Mr. G. Lewis Smith, in his "Ireland, Historical and Statistical," "of all the recent acts for the improvement of that country, lies in the old direction. The good sought to be done is chiefly by the landlord, or through his means." Thus, even the Poor-law—which gives a sustenance to the evicted peasant, and takes from him the present of actual starvation for the commission of violence—is passed mainly for the security of the landlord than the protection of the peasant. Eviction is made safer than it was; and, as we have seen, is now most extensively carried into effect. So far as the right of property is concerned, the old system has been revived and exasperated; and, under the combined influence of expected pecuniary advantages and a false theory of the appropriation of the land, it now threatens to ruin Ireland more effectually than the united confiscations and bigotry of an earlier period.

What is wanted in Ireland, what is wanted all over Europe, what prevails in the United States, and what has prevailed more in this than in any other country of Europe, is a respect for the rights of property founded on industry. That has been rooted out of Ireland, except in isolated cases, by the forcible action of the Government. How to go about establishing it by legislation, and making it the rule of the national life, is the real problem, by solving which Ireland will be saved and restored to prosperity. One thing is perfectly clear, namely, that no more property is confirmed in violation of the right of property, whether by the State or individuals, than it can prosper by sanctioning continual murder. We must, therefore, at all hazards, establish and support a right of property; but we must not allow the present race of landlords, or any single class of men, to define and determine that right.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

THE EARL OF ALBEMARLE.

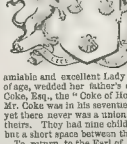
WILLIAM CHARLES KEPPEL, fourth Earl of Albemarle, Viscount Bury, and Baron of Ashford, in the peerage of England, was the son of George, the third Earl. He was born the 14th May, 1772, and succeeded to the peerage, when scarcely six months old, on the demise of his father. The youthful Peer had not quite completed his twentieth year, when, on the 19th June, 1792, he married the Hon. Elizabeth Southwell, then in her sixteenth year, the fourth daughter of Edward, twentieth Lord de Clifford. By this lady, who died on the 14th November, 1817, the Earl had sixteen children. The eighth child of this large family was the amiable and excellent Lady Anne Amelia Keppel, who, when nineteen years of age, wedded her kind friend and companion, Thomas William Coke, Esq., the "Coke of Holkham," who, in 1837, was created Earl of Leicester. Mr. Coke was in his seventieth year when he became the husband of lady Anne, yet there never was a union of more affection, or more domestic happiness, than theirs. They had nine children; and they terminated their earthly career with but a short space between their deaths.



To return to the Earl of Albemarle. His Lordship was one of the stanchest Whigs of the old school, the unswerving friend and adherent of Fox, whose party he supported through all their long years of opposition. In his own county, Norfolk, Lord Albemarle enjoyed unbounded and unceasing popularity. His prominent part there in all public and social meetings, his patronage of agriculture, his overflowing kindness of heart on all occasions of appeals made to him, his wit and brilliant powers of conversation, will not soon be forgotten by his fellow-men of Norfolk, or by the numerous others who knew him to love and revere him. Lord Albemarle, after a happy union of five-and-twenty years, lost his first wife on the 14th November, 1817. He married, secondly, the 17th February, 1822, Charlotta Susannah, daughter of the Hon. Henry Hanbuke, Bart. His Lordship was Master of the Horse during the reign of William IV., and also for some time during the present reign. Age and infirmity latterly prevented him taking any further part in public life. His recent death is the subject of unfeigned regret to all. He is succeeded in his honours by his eldest surviving son, Augustus, now fifth Earl of Albemarle.

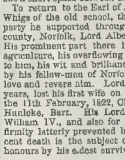
THE LORD TALBOT DE MALAHIDE.

RICHARD-WOGAN, Lord Talbot de Malahide, died a few days since, at his ancient baronial residence, near Dublin. His Lordship, the heir male of the distinguished house of Talbot de Malahide, and heir general of the famous Richard Talbot, Duke of Tyrconnel, succeeded to the Irish Barony at the decease of his mother, in 1834, and was created a Peer of the United Kingdom, as Baron Furnival, in 1839. At the period of his decease he had completed his 82nd year. He was twice married: first, in 1789, to Catherine, daughter and heir of John Malpas, Esq., of Rochestown, co. Dublin; and, secondly, to Margaret, daughter of Andrew Sayers, Esq. By the former he had one son, John Malahide, who died unmarried in 1838: and one daughter, Catherine Frances, who married in 1809 Lieutenant-General Sir William Cornwallis Eustace, C.B., of Sandford Hall, Essex, and died in 1816, leaving issue. Dying thus without male issue, Lord Talbot is succeeded in the Irish Peerage by his brother James, now Lord Talbot de Malahide; the English Barony of Furnival becomes extinct. Prior to his accession to the title, his Lordship sat in Parliament, as Knight of the Shire for Dublin, from 1820 to 1830; and he was formerly a Colonel in the army.



ADMIRAL WHITSHED.

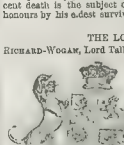
SIR JAMES HAWKINS WHITSHED, G.C.B., Bart., of Killincarrick, county Wicklow, and Jobstown, county Dublin, was the third son of Dr. Hawkins, Bishop of Raphoe, and assumed his maternal grandmother's name of Whitshed in 1791: he entered the navy in 1773, and, after a glorious career, attained the rank of Admiral of the Red in 1810, and became Admiral of the Fleet the 9th January, 1844. The long detail of his deeds of gallantry and feats occupies considerable space in O'Byrne's "Naval Biography," telling, among other things, of his receiving a gold Swedish and 370 thanks of Parliament for his share in the triumphal struggle of St. Vincent.



Sir James Hawkins Whitshed married, December 11, 1791, Sophia Henrietta, daughter of Captain John Albert Bentinck, R.N., (the youngest son of Admiral Count Bentinck, who died February 21, 1813; a sister of Vice-Admiral William Bentinck, who died February 21, 1813; and sister-in-law of the late Admiral Sir George Martin, G.C.B. By that lady, a great-granddaughter of the first Earl of Portland, he has had seven sons and four daughters, the eldest son, James Bentinck Hawkins Whitshed, was killed, when a midshipman of the Berwick, 74, Captain Edward Brace, in a gallant boat affair in the Mediterranean, December 11, 1813. The surviving sons of Sir James are a son and a daughter: 1. Sir Vicary Keene (a successor in the baronetcy), who married, the 1st May, 1832, Elizabeth, sixth daughter of David Montagu, Lord Erskine, and has issue, James, R.N., born 3rd March, 1833; St. Vincent, 12th February, 1837; and Vicary, 4th March, 1844; and Rentsa. 2. Reniss Charlotte, who was married, 10th March, 1825, to Colonel Henry John William Bentinck, of the Coldstream Guards. The gallant Admiral died on the 29th ult., at his residence, Cavendish-square, in the 86th year of his age.

REAR-ADMIRAL SIR SAMUEL JOHN BROOKE-PECHELL, BART., C.B., K.C.H.

THIS worthy Baronet and gallant naval officer died on the 3rd instant, at his residence in Hill-street, Berkeley-square, aged sixty-four. He was the eldest son of the late Major-General Sir Thomas Brooke-Pechell, Bart., M.P., by Charlotte his wife, daughter of General Sir John Clavering, K.B., Commander-in-Chief in India, and grandson of Lieutenant-Colonel Paul Pechell, the descendant of an ancient French family—raised to the degree of Baronet in 1797.

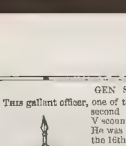


He entered the Royal Navy in July, 1796, and assisted in several captures of enemy's craft. He was made Post-Captain in 1808, and, in the Cleopatra, fought, on the 22nd Jan., 1809, a severe and brilliant action with the French ship La Pomone. In 1846 he obtained flag rank. He was also Naval Aide-de-Camp to the Queen.

Sir John married, in 1833, the Hon. John Maria Petre, daughter of Robert Edward, ninth Lord Petre, and was left a widower in 1844. The Baronetcy devolves on the deceased Admiral's brother, Captain George Richard Pechell, R.N., M.P. for Brighton.

GEN SIR GEORGE ANSON, G.C.B.

THIS gallant officer, one of the most distinguished of the Peninsular heroes, was second son of George Anson, Esq., brother of the first Viscount Anson, and uncle of the present Earl of Lichfield. He was born in 1769, and entered the army as Cornet of the 16th Light Dragoons, in 1786. His subsequent career comprises the most brilliant period of England's victories. Throughout the Peninsular war he gained great reputation, was gallantly distinguished at Talavera, Salamanca, and Victoria (for which he received a medal and two clasps), and was honoured with the thanks of the House of Commons in 1810 and 1816. In 1827 he was appointed Colonel of the 4th Dragoon Guards, and in 1837 attained the rank of General. From 1846 to 1845 he acted as Groom of the Bedchamber to Prince Albert, and at the period of his decease held the important office of Lieut.-Governor of Chelsea Hospital. For many years Sir George sat in Parliament for the city of Lichfield. He married, in 1800, Frances, daughter of the late J. Hamilton, Esq., and has left a numerous family.



GENERAL SIR JOHN ORMSBY VANDELEUR, G.C.B.,

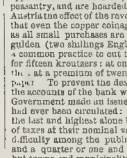
COLONEL OF THE 16TH LANCERS.

This week's Obituary presents a melancholy list of deaths among the gallant veterans of the late war. Vandeleur, Anson, Whitshed, and Pechell have all died within the last ten days. The decease of Sir John Vandeleur took place in Dublin on the 1st instant. The gallant officer was of the late Richard Vandeleur, Esq., of Rutland, in the Queen's County, Captain in the 9th Lancers, who was third son of John Vandeleur, Esq., of Kilrush, county Clare, by Frances his wife, daughter of John Ormsby, Esq., of Cloghans, county Mayo. Sir John was born in 1763. He entered the army, as Ensign, in 1781, but soon changed to a horse regiment, and became eventually one of our most eminent cavalry officers, having served in eleven campaigns under the Duke of York, in Flanders; Lord Lake, in India; and the Duke of Wellington, in Spain and France. As Lieutenant-Colonel of the 8th Light Dragoons, he served with the local rank of Colonel in command of a brigade of cavalry, under the late Lord Lake, in India. At the battle of Laswarree, on the 1st of November, 1803, his brigade turned the enemy's left flank, and took 2000 prisoners, for which he received Lord Lake's thanks. In November, 1804, he again received his Lordship's thanks for the cavalry affair at Futty Ghur, where the Mahratta chief Holkar was surprised and defeated. At the conclusion of the war in India, Sir John Vandeleur returned to Europe, and in 1811 was on the staff of the army in the Peninsula, as Major-General. He commanded a brigade of the light division of infantry, and was wounded while leading a division to the breach of Ciudad Rodrigo, in January, 1812. Major-General Crawford had received a mortal wound. The wound prevented Vandeleur being present at the siege of Badajoz; but he participated with the light division in the battle of Salamanca. A few days before the latter his brigade was so fortunate as to intercept and to cut off a French force, taking 300 prisoners, and driving the remainder to the mountains. He was subsequently appointed to command a brigade of Light Dragoons attached to the column under Lord Lynedoch, and afterwards under Lord Niddry, and shared in all the operations of that column. He served at Waterloo, and afterwards commanded the whole of the British cavalry from the time that the Marquis of Anglesey was wounded till Louis XVIII entered Paris.

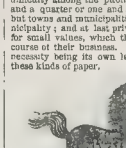
Sir John married, in 1829, Miss Glasse, daughter of the Rev. John Glasse. His grand-nephew, Joan Vandeleur, who also served with distinction at Waterloo, and was severely wounded at the passage of Doure, is now Lieutenant-Colonel, commanding the 16th Royal Hussars.

AUSTRIAN DISTRESS CURRENCY.

The revolution in Vienna in March, 1848, and the insurrections in Hungary and Italy, gave a violent shock to the public credit of the Government. The national bankruptcy of 1811 was by no means forgotten; and the first consequence of the embarrassed state of public affairs was the disappearance of almost all the coin from circulation. All all who possessed any security convertible into cash, converted it, though at an immense loss; and the coin that realised was concealed. This was not the case in Austria only. Throughout Silesia and the eastern provinces of Prussia a dislike to paper currency prevails, in the slightest alarm it falls in value, and is hurriedly buried. Thus the Prussian two thaler pieces—a fine specimen of silver coinage—have nearly disappeared in Prussia itself; they have been bought up by the rich farmers and peasantry, and are hoarded: the people believe in nothing but the solid metal. In Austria the effect of the revolutionary shock was still more: the alarm was so great, that even the copper coinage disappeared, and the inconvenience was extreme, as all small purchases are reckoned in kreutzers, of which there are sixty to a gulden (two shillings English). To supply the want of small change, it became a common practice to cut the gulden notes into quarters, each fourth passing for fifteen kreutzers: at one time Leipzig even debased its currency, which was the result of twenty-five and thirty per cent. compared with this small piece. To prevent the destruction of notes, and obviate the difficulty of keeping the accounts of the bank when these fragments should be called in, and returns for the Government stamp duties on issue of paper money of the smallest value, probably, that had ever been circulated: namely, State notes of six, ten, and twenty kreutzers, the last and highest alone being of real value. They were received in payment of taxes at their nominal value, at all the departments, and passed without much difficulty among the public for a considerable time at a depreciation of but one and a quarter or one and a half per cent. Nor did this supply prove sufficient, but towns and municipalities also issued notes for the relief of their own or municipality; and at last private individuals issued notes of their own, or counter for small values, which they paid and received at their nominal rates in the course of their business. They were illegal, but were permitted to exist from necessity being its own legislator. We have engraved a specimen of each of these kinds of paper.



First is a private note of 20 kreutzers (or 2d.). Issued by the proprietor of the hotel zum Schwarzen Ross (the Black Horse), in Prague. It is simply a piece of cardboard (of the size of the Cut), with the horse printed in black. Any device was chosen, at the caprice of the person or firm issuing these notes; and there were a host of Mercurys, Cupids, eagles, fish, and all the signs of the zodiac, in circulation. They were also scarcely on lead and leather, and impressed in wax on pieces of wood, shaped like draught men; in Austria and Bohemia these private notes and tokens are no longer taken. The specimen from which our Cut is copied is a redeemed one, and is marked on the back "Ungiltig" (no value)



Next to the private note of 6 kreutzers: the German inscription is to the effect [illegible] and after previous notice, a 6-kreutzer piece in metal will be paid by the Royal and Imperial Bank in exchange for the note itself, and that it is receivable in payment of taxes by all the collectors and departments. Considerable as far restored, that the value of coin above paper is not more than four and five per cent; but still metal is scarcely ever seen; everything is paid for in these small notes. A little copper, and a lacquered piece of six kreutzers, are occasionally met with; silver and gold are quite banished. They are known to exist somewhere, and will, when the time serves, be forthcoming; and on that ceases the immense fabric of paper rests.

The Austrian Government has, in consequence of events in Hungary, prolonged to the month of October of the next year the period for the withdrawal of the bank-notes of one and two florins, which were to have been withdrawn at the end of the present year.

EXPLOSION OF FIREWORKS IN FLEET STREET.—On Saturday an explosion of fireworks occurred in the third floor of No. 115, Fleet-street, in the tenure of Mr. David D'Lara, lithographic printer. It appears that during the absence of Mr. D'Lara two of the apprentices were engaged in making fireworks, and whilst one of the lads was sealing up some serpents, a spark fell from the candle he was using upon the fireworks, when the whole exploded, tearing the flesh off the boy's hand and frightfully burning his face, so much so that he was obliged to be taken to the hospital. The engines of the Brigade and West of England were sent for, but fortunately no damage was done to the premises to require their services.

COURT OF INLAND REVENUE.—At the Court of Inland Revenue, held on Wednesday, James Caithorpe, of Thomas-street, Newington, was fined in the penalty of £200, with the condemnation of the seizure, for having in his possession certain illicit articles, with intent to defraud her Majesty the Queen of the duty chargeable thereon.

ASSASSINATION OF THE GOVERNOR OF MACAO.

ASSASSINATION OF THE GOVERNOR OF MACAO.

In our Journal of last week we recorded this tragical scene. We now give some additional details, with a Sketch of the sad event, by a Correspondent.

It is stated that on the 22d of August, whilst his Excellency the Portuguese Governor of Macao, Senhor do Amaral, was taking his customary ride in the evening, accompanied by his Aide-de-Camp, about half a mile from the fort; and 300 yards from the barrier-gate, he was suddenly attacked by eight Chinamen, and dragged from his horse, when the murderers hacked off his head and hand, and disappeared through the gate. The Aide-de-Camp was also thrown from his horse, and severely wounded. It was well known that rewards had been offered at Canton and elsewhere for the Governor's head, and no doubt is entertained that the murder has been instigated or connived at by the Chinese authorities, to whom the late Governor had made himself obnoxious. The Portuguese soldiers, impatient to avenge the death of the Governor, had taken possession of the barrier-gate, and beyond the gate had destroyed a small fort, the fire from which molested them. In effecting this, seven Portuguese soldiers were wounded, and, it is said, 74 Chinese killed.

So soon as the intelligence of the assassination of the Governor reached Hong-Kong, her Majesty's ship Amazon and steamer Medea left for Macao, for the protection of British subjects, and, by their presence, to give countenance and support to the Portuguese authorities. A French and two American vessels of war were at Macao for similar purposes. About sixty British marines were stationed on shore, and a party had charge of the Francisco Fort. Marines from the Americas and French vessels had also landed. It is to be feared, however, that, on their removal, further outrages will be committed by the Chinese, unless conciliatory measures are adopted by the Portuguese.

Senhor Amaral's death had caused universal regret among the foreign community. His vigour, courage, and firmness, in dealing with the Chinese nation, secured him the respect and admiration of all; but his very eminence in this respect marked him out for assassination.

RIOT IN TRINIDAD.

A SUMMARY of the intelligence received by the West India and Pacific mails on Friday last appeared in our late edition of last week.

Among the occurrences, we regret to have to record a serious riot which took place at Trinidad on the 1st of October, which led to loss of life, and subsequent outrage on person and property. It is stated in the Trinidadian and Port of Spain Gazette newspapers, that on the above day a considerable crowd of Trinidadians, comprising people of the lowest order, assembled in front of the Government-house to protest against an obnoxious clause in the gaol regulations recently introduced, which had been passed by the Council; and which, among other things, provided that debtors committed under the petty civil courts ordinances should have their hair cropped close, and wear a prison dress, and assist in gaol work.

The first manifestation of public feeling on the subject was a meeting, at which certain resolutions, condemnatory of the gaol regulations, were passed, and six deputies appointed to present them to the Governor in Council. The deputation proceeded to the Government-house, accompanied by a great concourse of people (nearly 3000), and having been admitted to the presence of the Governor, his Excellency informed the members of the deputation that it was his intention to have these clauses reconsidered and modified.

This determination was well received by the mob outside. Immediately after, a young man was arrested in the Council Chamber by the police, which becoming known to the people outside, they imagined that the Council was not attending to the Gaol Clauses as promised by the Governor, and instantly, a shower of stones came through the windows of the Council-room: the Council broke up, the members and spectators seeking safety where they best could. The military were sent for, and on their arrival some degree of order was restored, and the Council resumed business. The obnoxious clause in the gaol regulations was abrogated, and the deputation hastened and informed the people outside of the fact, advising all to proceed to their homes; when a large number of those, chiefly Trinidadians, who had peaceably assemble in the morning to remonstrate and protest against a partial and degrading law, retired from Government-house. A crowd of mischievous persons, however, remained, and soon began to annoy the police, and pelt them with stones. The Riot Act was read, the order to fire was given, four or five muskets were discharged, and four persons fell wounded, three women and a lad; the latter and one of the former subsequently died. This did not stay the fury of the mob. They continued to assail the soldiers and police with large stones torn up from the causeway, and, we understand, there would have been more firing and more bloodshed but for the intervention of the Governor. The mob then vowed vengeance against the Attorney-General, but he escaped their rage, escorted by soldiers with fixed bayonets.

During the night the houses of the Attorney-General and the stipendiary magistrate were attacked, the inmates forced to fly, and much damage was done. The residence of the keeper of the gaol was likewise attacked. The conduct of Colonel Shirly, and the temper, firmness, and ability he displayed throughout the affair, were much extolled; the officers and men of the 88th Regiment, and of the 2nd West India Regiment, were highly praised, as well as the brave tars of the Scorpion, for their eagerness to be put on active service in dispersing the insurgents. Captain Todd, of the armed Venezuelan steamer Libertador, was warmly thanked for having placed at the disposal of the Government his services, with those of his officers and crew, as well as the arms and ammunition of his vessel.

Next day much damage was done to sugar estates in the neighbourhood. On the night of the 4th the house of the clerk to the warden at Oropouche was attacked and burned, and outrages to property were increasing.

At the time of the departure of the packet the island was in a state of much disquiet, and further troubles were apprehended. Lord Harris had sent a vessel to Barbadoes for more troops. The Government buildings were converted into a temporary barracks, and were occupied by the 88th Regiment, a company of the 2nd West India Regiment, and by the men of her Majesty's sloop Scorpion, who landed with a six-pounder when the disturbances first broke out. Upwards of 300 special constables had been sworn in, and a volunteer horse patrol formed, at least 70 strong.

Several of those most conspicuous had been arrested and committed to prison, and it was hoped that the firm measures of the Government would prove sufficient to repress any further efforts of the disaffected to create an insurrection.

Our Correspondent's Sketch represents the Government buildings during the riot, when the companies of the 88th Regiment were drawn up by the side of the flag-staff, with two guns in their rear; as also two other guns opposite one of the entrances to the buildings, and which is represented on the right of the picture. The soldiers patroling from the main entrance to the buildings down the street are those of the 2nd West India Regiment, the remainder of the company being inside the archway.

RIOT IN TRINADAD.

TERRIBLE CATASTROPHE AT TRICHINOPOLY.

By the last Indian Mail, intelligence was received of a terrible loss of life at Trichinopoly, which was briefly noticed in our Journal of last week. We now give fuller details of the accident, with a view of the locality.

According to annual custom, the "Pagoda," situated on the "Rock of the Fort," and sacred to the memory of some ancient Gentoo Rajas, was visited by thousands, probably twelve thousand natives of Trichinopoly, and of Seringham, on the 21st of August, being the festival of a Hindoo god, "Pilliar Chotee;" to worship whom these infatuated people left their homes, clad in their best raiment, and the richer ones loaded with jewels, taking with them their children, even young infants, all bent on enjoyment, and little dreaming of the awful fate awaiting hundreds of their number.

Throughout the whole of the day of the 21st, an incessant stream of thousands of the Gentoo population, and of other castes also, as spectators, ascended and descended the high and steep Rock.

About dusk so great a crowd of people collected together, some ascending some descending, by the numerous flight of steps, that confusion, alarm, and panic arose. The crush was fearful, and hundreds of human beings of both sexes, and a lages, lost their lives. Corpses where heaped one over another on the steps leading from the Pagoda. Between two and three hundred perished in a few minutes. Women were heard to cal out from the midst of the crowd, unable to extricate themselves; but no help could be rendered, and whole families perished clinging to each other.

The authorities of the station, on hearing of these disasters, afforded all possible aid, by preventing any entrance from below of other visitors to the place, and also, by stopping the descent of the many thousands who still remained at the top of the rock, till they had effected the removal of the dead bodies strewed and heaped on the steps.

By these measures, by the prompt assistance of the officers on duty, and of the main guard of Europeans and natives, and parties employed for the purpose, the further sacrifice of human life was prevented; and friends and relatives went to find their deceased companions among the bodies which had been brought down from above the Choultry, an open space in the descent from the rock.

After this, and when the passage was clear, the people descended from the rock in the greatest order.

Tuis awful and unprecedented catastrophe is ascribed by those who were the first and actual eye-witnesses of it to two causes. One, that extraordinary terror and driving of the people were resorted to by Peons, &c., who were on the spot to keep order. This, in so dangerous a position, caused many to lose their footing, and created a general panic and confusion. The other cause is said to be, the increased number of visitors from Seringham, and adjacent parts, from the convenience afforded by the new bridge over the Cauvery river. Numerous robberies of jewels, &c. took place during the confusion, both from the bodies o the living and the dead.

Trichinopoly is the capital of the province of Southern Carnatic, situated on the south side of the river Cavery. It is one of the principal military stations of the English, and is a large and populous town. The "Rock of the Fort" is 300 feet in height. The fortress is strong, and the British Government generally keeps five or six regiments there, partly on account of the salubrity of the situation and partly as a convenient point of communication with other parts of Southern Hindostan. Trichinopoly is celebrated for a siege which it sustained from 1751 to 1755, when it was successfully defended by the English against the French and their native allies.

Bishop Heber died suddenly at Trichinopoly, in 1826, when taking a cold bath, and was buried in the church.

FORTRESS AND ROCK OF TRICHINOPOLY, THE SCENE OF THE LATE CATASTROPHE.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL, AT WIMBORNE, DORSET.

FESTIVITIES AT NORTH SHIELDS.

The inhabitants of North Shields having lately received a Charter of Incorporation, the first election of the corporation officers took place on Thursday the 1st instant.

It had been suggested that this era of "the town's new existence" should be celebrated by a general holiday. Accordingly, the shops of the town were closed, and the Burgesses were thus allowed every facility for recording their votes.

The morning was welcomed by a discharge of cannon; during the day, bands of music, with flags and banners, perambulated the streets. The commemoration at night was very effective, and the streets were crowded with spectators. Burning tar-barrels blazed in various directions; and a grand display of fireworks took place in the area of Dockwray-square.

As a response to the public invitation, the vessels in the harbour hoisted their colours, and the inhabitants generally kept the day as a festival, "which, in succeeding years, may be looked back to as the dawn of their commercial independence and prosperity."

The accompanying scene was sketched (during the height of the festivities) by one of our own Artists.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL, WIMBORNE.

The Free Grammar School of the foundation of Queen Elizabeth, at Wimborne, Dorset, after fourteen years' litigation, is now in course of rebuilding, in the handsome style shown in the accompanying Illustration.

The corner-stone of the new school-house, with residence for the masters, &c., was laid by the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of the diocese, on Saturday, the 27th ult.

The Right Rev. Prelate arrived from Dorchester on Friday afternoon, being received at the railway station by Edward Castleman, Esq (the Registrar of the Corporation), by whom his Lordship was conducted to Allandale House, the residence of that gentleman, where a select party—comprising the official of the Peculiar, clergymen of the Minster, and several of the clergy and gentry of the neighbourhood—had been invited to meet his Lordship at dinner.

On Saturday morning, at ten o'clock, the Governors, the clergymen of the Minster, a number of clergymen from the neighbourhood, with the masters and pupils of the school, assembled at the present School-house, and proceeded to Allandale-house, where the Governors and Masters were introduced to the Bishop, and formed in procession to attend divine service at the Minster.

After the service, the party walked in the same order of procession to the site of the intended School-house, where excellent arrangements had been made for the accommodation of all engaged in the ceremony and for the public, with a large number of raised seats for ladies, which were occupied by the rank and beauty of the town and neighbourhood. Amongst the gay assemblage we noticed some members of Lord Chichester's family, the Misses Sturt, Sir John and Lady Charlotte Guest and family.

The proceedings commenced by Mr. Castleman, as Registrar, reading an address to the Bishop, in which he traced the origin of the Institution to Margaret Countess of Richmond and Derby, who left property for the maintenance of a Chantry, and support of a chaplain, who should reside within the College of Wimborne, already in existence, and instruct all comers in grammar. On the dissolution of the College and Chantry, in the first year of Edward VI., their revenues came into the possession of the Crown, and the King was pleased to retain a portion of the College for the service of the Minister and the Grammar School. This continued until the reign of Elizabeth, who, by letters-patent, founded the School, and ordained that its affairs should be administered by twelve governors, of the town and parish of Wimborne, with the advice of the Bishop of Bristol for the time being; its privileges being confirmed by James I. and Charles I. The affairs of the Charity being, however, mismanaged, it was certified by the Charities Commission to the Attorney-General; a suit in FESTIVAL AT NORTH SHIELDS, TO CELEBRATE THE CHARTER OF INCORPORATION.

Chancery was commenced, and, after much delay, a scheme was issued for the better regulation of the Charity. In the new arrangements, Dr. W. Fletcher, late Fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford, was selected as Head Master; and the Rev. Charles Scott, of St. John's College, Cambridge, appointed to the second Mastership.

The Bishop recalled to the address, his Lordship dwelling upon the paramount importance of laying a right and true foundation of religious truth on which alone the superstructure of a liberal education can be successfully raised. "Not in vain, sure we shall be (he said), will this your school be placed in intimate connexion with the Church of our living God, under the very shadow of which it will stand. Here it will be indicated, herein will ever be kept before the view of those who will in this place train and mould the plant minds of the young, that the commencement of every good impression must proceed from the Grace of God, and that all our aims and all our efforts should tend to the glory of God as their end."

An extensive prayer was then offered up by the Bishop; immediately after which the choristers of the Minster chanted with great effect a psalm.

The Bishop next, assisted by the architects, proceeded, with the usual ceremony, to lay the corner-stone; having been previously presented by Mr. Lishman, as chairman of the governors, with an elegant silver trowel.

The blessing was then pronounced by the Bishop in a manner truly solemn and affecting.

The procession was again marshalled by Mr. Chislett, the deputy-registrar; and all concerned walked to Allandale House, where the Bishop and a party of clergy and gentry partook of an elegant déjeuner.

The choristers dined at the King's Head Hotel, at the expense of the Governors Nor were the workmen forgotten on this occasion—they were plentifully supplied with old English fare by the respected Head Master of the School, who also gave a sheep, which was roasted whole for the labourers.

The Schools and Masters' Houses are in the Tudor style of architecture, from the designs of Messrs. Mor is and Hebson, of London. The plan contains two large Schools, small Library, Monument-Room, &c.; and, besides houses for the Head and Under Masters.

The materials used in the erection will be bright red brick, diapered with blue; Caen and Purbeck stone dressings; and covered with tiles and slate.

The works, which are proceeding with despatch, are expected to be completed before Christmas, 1850.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, November 11.—Twenty-third Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 12.—Cambridge Term divides.
TUESDAY, 13.—Bridge. Sun rises 7h. 16m., sets 4h. 14m.
WEDNESDAY, 14.—New moon, 9h. 13m. P.M.
THURSDAY, 15.—Michaelmas Sun rises 7h. 20m., sets 4h. 13m.
FRIDAY, 16.—Sabrina b. ro. 1877; died 1849.
SATURDAY, 17.—Hugh, Bishop of Lincoln.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE
FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOV. 17, 1849.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
11 40	0 0	0 10	0 30	0 58	1 15	1 35	1 50	2 10	2 30	2 45	3 0	3 20	3 35	3 55	4 10	4 30	4 45	5 5	5 20

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. W. BATTY.—Immense Attraction.—First Appearance of that highly-popular and well-known public favourite Mr. BRIGGS, in Mazeppa's new Pedestrian and Equestrian Extravaganza, entitled the pleasures of Housekeeping and Housekeeping. These inimitable vagaries, illustrative of the pleasures of Housekeeping and Housekeeping. These inimitable Equestrian Artistes, Mdlle Amelie and Mr John Bridges, continuing to be received with distinguished favour, and Mr Thomas Barry, the celebrated Comedian and Clown, having met with a most enthusiastic reception, will have the honour of appearing every evening.—On MONDAY, NOVEMBER 12, the Equestrian Extravaganza, in seven SCENES, with Herbalt's enormously successful new grand Hippo Dramatic Spectacle of the PROPHET, with a...ts magnificent and astonishing effects. To be preceded by a brilliant and novel routine of Daily SCENES of the ARENA, supported by the most eminent Equestrian Artistes in Europe, and introducing for the first time in either of the new Men en Scène. To conclude with (for the first time) the new Pedestrian and Equestrian Extravaganza (written expressly for this Theatre by ...), entitled ... of the Pleasures of Housekeeping and Housekeeping. ... the whole to conclude with the ... ment, a long train of ... tumblers, gymnasts, tumblers, turnovers, go-carts, and other vehicles too tedious to mention. Wind... Seat—Boxes from 11 s. to 2 s. Pit, 1 s. Gallery, 6d. Commence at 7. Manager, Mr. W. West.

THE DIRECTORS of the LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS have great pleasure in announcing to their Subscribers and the Public that they have concluded an engagement with the celebrated Vocalist, Herr ERNST, who will have the honour of appearing on WEDNESDAY NEXT, NOVEMBER 14th (in conjunction with other Artistes of celebrity), at the Fourth of the "London Wednesday Concerts," upon which occasion the Programme will commence with a selection from Meyerbeer's opera "Les Huguenots," in which Herr Ernst will sing, for the first time in England, "The Pif Paff Hurrahs," which Herr Ernst will also accompany. Tickets, 5s. and 7s.; Reserved Seats, 10s; Stalls, 2s. Full particulars will be duly announced. Tickets to be had at the Royal Music Warehouse of Mr. STANDISH, 4, Exeter-hall; of Mr. STREETER, 378, Strand, adjoining Exeter-hall; of Mr. Samuel Lucas, 244, Regent-street; and of Mr. Wessel, 67, New Bond-street.

MISS DOLBY begs to announce that her FIRST SOIREE MUSICALE will take place at her Residence, 3, HINDE-STREET, MANCHESTER-SQUARE, on TUESDAY, the 13th instant, at Eight o'clock precisely. Vocalists—Miss Birch, Miss Dolby, Mr. Weiss, and Mr. Lockey. Instrumental Performers—Miss Kate Loder; Messrs Palmer, Lindley Sloman, Hill, and Lucas. Pianoforte Thalberg Studies, One Guinea; Single Tickets, Half-a-Guinea, to be obtained only of Miss Dolby, at her Residence.

THE MISSISSIPPI and MISSOURI RIVERS, exhibited, by command, to her Majesty the Queen, H R H Prince Albert, and Royal Family, at Windsor Castle. New Views, showing the Scenery of the Mississippi from Bonny Villages, &c., to New Orleans, being the largest picture ever executed by man. Exhibiting at the Panorama, Leicester-square, every morning at half-past two, evening at half-past seven. Admission, lower seats, 2s; gallery, 1s.

OPEN DAILY FROM EIGHT TO FIVE AND EVERY EVENING, EXCEPT SATURDAY FROM SEVEN TILL HALF-PAST FIVE.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—ROME ILLUSTRATED, in a Series of DISSOLVING VIEWS, with a Description, Daily at Half-past Three, and every Evening at Eight o'clock. Lecture on the CHEMISTRY of Dyeing, Mr. Ashley, Daily at the Quarter-past Three, and in the Evening at Nine o'clock. LECTURE EXPERIMENTS on the HYDRO-ELECTRIC MACHINE, by Dr. Bachhoffner, Daily at Half-past Three, and on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight o'clock. EXHIBITION of the OXY-HYDROGEN MICROSCOPE, DIVER and DIVING BELL. The CHROMATROPE. MODELS and MACHINERY EXPLAINED. Admission, to Schools, Half-price.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"J. V."—"Stable Economy," published by Blackwood and Sons.
"M. A. T.,"—North Wales, had better consult the actuary of the savings-bank. There is no institution of this kind in connexion with the Bank of England.
"J. G. C." informs us that the Devonshire district

Crocker, Crewys and Coplestone,
When the Conqueror came were at home

may be found fully detailed in Prince's "Worthies of Devon," 1701. Quarme is a name unknown in Devon. Another Correspondent from Swansea confirms "J. G. C." statement, and further states that Cornishmen are not disposed to be deprived of a place in Devonshire history. The three names, Crewys, Crocker, and Coplestone, are familiar as "household words" in Devon. "But," asks our Correspondent, "what is Crewys?" "Crocker, and Coplestone traced in each other's neighbourhood, and hence arose the connexion of their patronymics in the couplet

"J. H. A."—On three dexter arms vambr and arg., hands ppr. Crest—A dexter arm vambraced in armour, the hand ppr. Motto—Vi et armis.
"L. T. P." The half-crown of Anne is not scarce: it is worth from 4s. to 6s. in fine preservation.
"Infuse," Leeds, possessing so many coins, had better send them by some friend to Mr. Webster, 17 Great Russell-street, Covent-garden.
"E. F. M."—The ring, in the hand of the bronze (not having seen it), is false. The coin it contains is a cast from a silver coin of Athens.
"H. W."—By Dr. Arnott's Hydrostatic bed, the patient is floating upon the water, on which a loose sheet is lying, namely, on a mattress dry, and every point of his body is supported by the water immediately beneath it, so that no pain arises from local pressure, and as little muscular weariness as possible from constrained posture. The bed is fully described in the fifth edition of Dr. Arnott's "Elements of Physics," vol. i., and the description is quoted in the "Arcana of Science and Art," 1833.
"F. T. M." Guernsey, like the neighbouring island of Jersey, has a political constitution of its own, and does not belong to any county. As laid down by Coke, these islands, "though parcel of the dominion of the Crown of England, are not, nor ever were, parcel of the realm of England."
"J. B." Clifton.—A Fleur si in the engraving of hands.
"A. C." Gravesend, is thanked. We shall be glad to see the Sketch.
"Caniton." Thanks.
"H. J. C." There is no copyright in the translation of a foreign work into English.
"L. L." claim, in neither case, is valid.
"An Old Subscriber."—It is not necessary that a Deputy-Lieutenant should be a justice of the Peace. Address an application to the Lord-Lieutenant of your county.
"T. X."—The wife of the eldest son that survived his father is Mrs. X.
"T. J. J." Carnsforth.—The design sent would not render the wearer liable to the tax on armorial bearings.
"G. J. G."—A son is not entitled to use his mother's crest.
"B. C." Exon.—All the noble families of those names or crests are recorded in the Heralds' office as borne on cups of maintenance are entitled to that distinction. Commoners always supporters by grant from the Crown. The chiefs of the Scottish clans bear them as by prescription, or right. It is very difficult to define the term "Gentleman." An essay on the subject appeared in the Patrician.
"J. B." Scotland. We will endeavour to ascertain the arms desired.
"A Subscriber from the Commencement."—The arms of Charles Phelps, Esq., of Bryngwyn, near Ware, are, "Arg a chev. gu between three roses ppr." He succeeded to the property on the death of his uncle, Thomas Blackmore, Esq., in 1824. His mother, Mary, was that gentleman's sister, being the daughter of Thomas Blackmore, Esq., of Bryginn-park, by Mary his wife, sister of John Old Goodford, Esq. The arms of Blackmore, as granted 16th November, 1651, are—"Or a fesse nt. between three Moors' heads erased ppr. Crest—An arm embowed in armour ppr. garnished or, supporting a standard banner of the last, staff of the first, point arg."
"G. M. H."—The arms of Morris are—"Sa. on a saltire engr. erm. a beazel charged with a cross couped gu. Crest—Within a chain enarched, a lion rampant, charged on the shoulder with a cross couped gu."
"Lion rampant."—Strictly speaking, we do not deem peers' daughters entitled to carry supporters at all. Courtesy and common usage, however, allow them; but the lady's shield is then borne distinct from the husband's.
"Amicus." Guernsey.—The Rajd Hon. John Wilson Croker is the author of the poem entitled "Talavera," a closer imitation of Scott's ballad style, which was published in London by Murray, in 1809, and has gone through three or four editions.
"C. P. R." Colford.—The cost of inspecting a will at Doctors' Commons is 1s. The expense of the copy varies with circumstances.
"A Regular Subscriber." Plymouth Esther.
"Adelaide."—Cartoon is derived from cartone, Ital., large strong paper. The cartoons of Raphael were designs drawn on stout paper, for working in tapestry.
"A Wakefieldman" will find a portrait of Lord Stanley in No. 125 of our Journal.
"X. Y. Z."—Taylor's "Short-hand," improved by Harding.
"X. Y. Z." Leicester.—We cannot interfere.
"T. P." Long Milford, is thanked; though we cannot avail ourselves of his suggestion.
"Trust." Norwich.—The lines are by a living poet.
"Georgiana."—The translation of the "German Popular Tales," by Grimm, are rarely to be had. Our correspondent should apply at the "Publishers' Circular" office, 169, Fleet-street.
"X. Y. Z." Holt.—The charge is seven shillings.
"Rusticus."—Apply to Johnston and Co., Eden Quay, Dublin.
"A. Z." Address your inquiry to the Secretary to the College of Preceptors, 28, Bloomsbury-square.
"J. L. L." Guernsey. We do not know the address.
"H. B." Crediton.—If the coin be fine, send an impression in wax.
"Louisa Mary."—The title of your favourite song is "La Esmeralda."
"T. F." Essely.—The power of one horse, if continued throughout the day of eight hours, amounts to 150 lb. conveyed 20 miles, at a speed of 2½ miles per hour. Mr. Ainsworth's "History of Preston" terminates at 1815.
"Alpha."—Fenn's "Guide to the Funds," or Fortune's work on the "Stock Exchange."
"Tim." Burnley.—Heeren's work on Ancient Geography.
"A. B." Stafford.—Apply to Mr. Pickering, bookseller, Piccadilly.
"A Reader," Theobald's-road.—Fifty per cent.
"Sydney Hall," Swansea.—The address of the Inventor of the Fire Annihilator is 135, Leadenhall-street.
"Haddon Hall" should obtain permission from the patron.
"A London Tradesman."—The bill in question was rejected last session.
"S. B.," Abergele.—Thanks.
"R. C.," Stalford; and "E. B.," Southampton.—Dr. Chavasse's address is, 6, Connaught-place West, Hyde-park.
"Clericus."—The poison key is preserved in the armoury of the Arsenal at Venice. See Count Darn's "History of Venice;" or Venetian Sketches," Family Library."
"Clericus," Hempstead-court.—We believe not.
"O. M."—The marriage will not be legal.
"Rock Villa."—The sun's rays put out a fire by absorbing its oxygen. See the Mutiny of the Bounty, in the "Family Library." The permission has been granted.
"J. B.," Shrewsbury.—Thanks.
"A. F." Brighton.—What are the subjects of the Sketches?
"E. E. B."—Milton was three married. He did not live happily with his first wife, who deserted and insulted him, though he re-admitted her to his affections. See Symmons's life of the poet.
"Quæstor."—Hogg's "Jacobite Relics" and "A Jersey Tea-party." All that we know of the true custom was given in our Journal of last week.
"A Subscriber," Cumberland. The ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK, will be sent by post, at 1s. 6d.
"Beta."—Deckned
"The Lily of Erin."—For "Horse Power," &c., see Gutch's "Literary and Scientific Register and Almanack for 1849."

 Answers to several Correspondents are unavoidably postponed.

BOOKS, &c. RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Sinse on the Human Mind.—Holy Matrimony, Illuminated.—Shirley, by Currer Bell: 3 vols.—Annals of Ulster.—Panthea, the Spirit of Nature.—Parsey's Pocket-Book
MUSIC.—"The Essex Polka"

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1849.

THE proposition of Sir Robert Peel for the "plantation" of Connaught and other distressed districts of Ireland by English agriculturists, possessed both of skill and capital, has found no favour amongst the class to whom it was directed. The Martin estates, including town-lands, coast-lands, many farms under cultivation, and many thousand acres of waste but reclaimable bog and moorland, have been put up to sale in London, without meeting with a purchaser. The Corporation of London, from which so much was expected, has held aloof; and private capitalists, men who would embark in any decently sounding scheme that promised five per cent. for their money, and who would lend their thousands even to the youngest of the Brothers Jonathan on the security of his good faith, have scrupulously avoided an investment in Irish acres. It is considered in Ireland that if the Martin estates had been put up for sale in Dublin the result would have been more favourable. However that may be, it is distressing to think that political and social causes should be at work to prevent the introduction of the superabundant capital of Great Britain into a portion of the Empire so intimately linked with us, abounding in natural resources, and that chiefly requires capital, judiciously expended, to become as happy and prosperous as it is now miserable and degraded. Galway is a particularly peaceful part of Ireland. The people are patient, honest, and hard-working, and very grateful even for small kindness. They only require amongst them the presence of solvent and enterprising men, who know the business of agriculture, to emerge from the apathy and ignorance in which they have wallowed for generations. What was done by Lord George Hill, as Gweedore—a rude district at the north-west of Connaught—shows how much the energetic philanthropy, the good common sense, and the business-habits of one man can do for the regeneration of a people. The efforts made by the late Lord Headley, on his estate at Glenbegh, in the county of Kerry, were equally successful—perhaps more so; for the people of Gweedore were simply ignorant before Lord G. Hill went amongst them, whilst the people of Glenbegh were so rude and ferocious, that they were considered over the whole south of Ireland as a race of untameable savages. Yet Lord Headley succeeded in civilising them. Under his care, their mud hovels were resigned to the cattle, and the peasants themselves lived in stone cottages; their wretched agriculture was improved—their gardens were walled in—fences were made—trees were planted, and the whole aspect of the district was changed from that of the wilderness into that of a thriving and well-cultivated country. In carrying out this great social reform, Lord Headley did not evict—he was not shot at—he was not hated; but, on the contrary, was beloved by his tenantry; and, what to a capitalist is at least equally satisfactory, his rents were duly paid. But the misery of Ireland is that the whole country suffers in character from the misdeeds of a part. Capital is proverbially sensitive. When capitalists read every morning over their breakfast-table the record which tells the fate of landlords and agents assassinated by the peasantry; of rents unpaid; of farms thrown up; of men possessing a nominal rent-roll of £1500 per annum, reduced, by poor-rates and taxes and the non-payment of their rents, to go without animal food for months, and to live with their families upon potatoes and cabbages, washed down with weak tea, the capitalist looks upon the thing geographically, and not topographically, and resolves to have nothing to do with any portion of Ireland. The whole country is to be avoided; for he considers that it is bankruptcy to touch it. So the mischief has gone on from year to year; and so we suppose it will continue to go on, until increasing misery shall transform the whole country into one mass of unproductive and hopeless pauperism. When Irishmen have seen their last shilling swallowed up in poor-rates, and when the whole burden of that impost shall be cast upon the national Treasury, perhaps some means will be devised out of the absolute necessity of the case—if England is not to be ruined as well as Ireland—to make the Irish soil produce food for the Irish people, and a surplus besides.

A LONG, able, and interesting report upon the sanitary condition of London, and the means that should be adopted for the self-defence of its two millions of people against disease and pestilence, has just been presented to the City Commissioners of Sewers by Mr. Simon, their medical officer. The document is far too voluminous to be reproduced in our columns; but the following summary of the remedies proposed for the various causes of complaint which the inhabitants have against the present systems, monopolies, and customs that endanger or impair the public health, will give such of our readers as have not another opportunity of knowing what is proposed, an idea of the comprehensive magnitude of Mr. Simon's plans of reform. The recapitulation is in Mr. Simon's own words:—

To provide an inoffensive outfall for the sewerage of our vast population; to render the river a source of unqualified advantage; to give an indefinite extension and a sounder principle to the system of water-supply; to suppress all trades and occupations which taint the atmosphere with materials of organic decomposition; to abate the nuisance of smoke; to provide facilities for extramural interments, and to procure the prohibition of all further burial amidst our living; to improve the domestic arrangements of the poor, and to ensure their adequate supervision; to hinder the occupation of houses which breed pestilence; to destroy such as are irremediably hostile to health; and to thin the stifled population of courts and alleys; to establish public baths and lavatories, which may offer to the poor the utmost facilities and inducements for the maintenance of personal cleanliness; to erect, in the stead of such courts as we may hope to depopulate and destroy, but in open streets and with perfect ventilation—to erect, and to place at the disposal of the labouring classes, houses and lodgings which not only may offer to their inhabitants every convenience essential to health and decency and comfort, but may likewise serve as models of household economy for the whole district in which they stand.

These things are not to be done in a day. The cleansing of the Augean stable was an easy task compared with what the cleansing of London would be, upon the scale recommended by Mr. Simon. Nevertheless, formidable as the task may be, it must be undertaken if we wish to preserve ourselves next year from the smouldering, but unextinguished fires of the Pestilence that has committed such havoc amongst us in 1849. Two out of the many suggestions of Mr. Simon will tax all the energies of the sanitary reformers to accomplish; and it will be better that, in the meantime, attention should be devoted to them, than that energy should be squandered by being spread over too many subjects. These are, the purification of the Thames by a perfect system of drainage and sewerage, independently of the fresh-water portion of the river; and the prevention for the future of all intramural interments. These reforms would amount to considerably more than 50 per cent. of all that are needed.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

Her Majesty the Queen, we rejoice to learn, has completely recovered from her recent indisposition. Her Majesty, accompanied by the Prince Consort, and frequently by the Royal children, has taken early walking exercise in the Slopes and Home Park, during the past week.

The Bishop of Chester arrived at the Castle on Saturday, and joined the Royal dinner circle. The right rev. prelate preached on Sunday morning in the private chapel.

The Austrian Minister and the Countess Colloredo, and Viscount and Viscountess Fauconberg, arrived at the Castle on Monday, on a visit to her Majesty and the Prince Consort. The Duchess of Kent joined the Royal circle at dinner the same evening.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, their Royal Highnesses the Hereditary Grand Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and her Royal Highness the Princess Mary of Cambridge, arrived at the Castle on Tuesday. The Earl and Countess of Westmorland, and his Excellency the French Ambassador, and Madame Drouyn de Lhuys also arrived on a visit to her Majesty.

On Wednesday morning the Queen and the Prince, with their Royal visitors took early walking exercise. Lord and Lady Palmerston, and M. and Madame Drouyn de Lhuys left the Castle to-day. Captain the Hon. and Mrs. Mortimer Sackville West had the honour of joining the Royal dinner party in the evening.

The Belgian Minister and Madame Van de Weyer arrived at the Castle on Thursday, on a visit to the Queen.

THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

The Queen held a Privy Council at half past two o'clock on Thursday afternoon, at Windsor Castle. It was attended by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor of Lansdowne, Lord President; Lord John Russell, First Lord of the Treasury; Viscount Palmerston, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; Sir Francis Baring, First Lord of the Admiralty; Lord Campbell, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; the Marquis of Clanricarde, Postmaster-General; Earl Fortescue, Lord Steward; and the Duke of Norfolk, Master of the Horse.

At the Council, the 15th of November was appointed as a day of general Thanksgiving.

Parliament was ordered to be further prorogued from Tuesday, the 20th of November, until the 16th of January, 1850.

Mr. Charles Greville was the Clerk of the Council in Waiting.

A déjeuner was served at the Castle to the Ministers and Officers of State present at the Council.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

Her Majesty the Queen Dowager continues, we regret to state, in a very precarious condition.

The daily bulletins have slightly varied, but the most favourable leaves no ground for hope of her Majesty's ultimate recovery. On Friday and Saturday the Queen passed very restless nights, and, having been much harassed by her cough, suffered from consequent exhaustion. On Sunday the prayers of the congregation in the Royal Chapel at St. James's desired for her Majesty.

The following favourable bulletin was issued on Thursday:—

"The Priory, November 8, 1849.

"The Queen Dowager has passed a most comfortable night, and her Majesty is refreshed this morning.

"DAVID DAVIES, M.D.
"RICHARD BRIGHT, M.D."

We understand, her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the youthful members of the Royal family, according to present arrangements, intend to leave Windsor Castle on Wednesday next for Osborne, there to stay about a fortnight

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester has left town for Brighton.

His Serene Highness Prince Hermann of Saxe Weimar has left town for the Continent.

We are sorry to learn that the Duke of Newcastle has lately been suffering from severe indisposition. The latest accounts received in town announce that his Grace is considered out of danger.

The Marquis of Landsowne (Lord President of the Privy Council) left town on Wednesday for Paris.

The Earl of Kintore and suite have left Farrance's Hotel, Belgrave-square, for Rome, via Paris.

Viscount Mandeville is at present making a tour in Turkey. His Lordship lately attended a review of the Turkish troops, near Constantinople, and had the honour of being presented to the Sultan by Sir Stratford Canning.

Lord and Lady Holland, who have been for some months making a continental tour, have arrived at Paris, en route for England.

We understand that Mr. Richard Somerset, son of Gen. Lord Fitzroy Somerset, late secretary to the late General Sir Colin Campbell, Governor of Chelsea, has received the post of Private Secretary to his Majesty the King of Hanover, and is on the eve of leaving for Germany.

Earl Gray arrived in town, on Thursday, from Hickleton Hall, near Doncaster.

We regret to learn that Lord Alvanley lies dangerously ill, at his mansion in Eaton-square. His Lordship's medical attendants, Drs. Watson, Tegvan, and Bright, held a consultation at a late hour on Thursday evening.

MARRIAGE OF MADEMOISELLE RACHEL.—The Paris papers state that Mdlle Rachel, the celebrated Jewish actress, is about to be married to a M. Rodrigues, a merchant of Bordeaux. The nuptials are to be celebrated at Fauxon, where all the necessary preparations are being made. Mdlle. Rachel will, of course, retire from the stage.

The Principality states that the interment of the late Bishop of Llandaff in Cardiff Cathedral was the first interment of a Bishop there for 400 years.

LOSS OF THE SHIP "APOLLO," WITH ALL HANDS.—Accounts have been received from New York reporting the wreck of this vessel. She has been seen bottom upwards off Cape Horn. All hands are supposed to have perished. The ship was from California, and is supposed to have had a large amount of the "diggings" on board.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

The Regius Professor of Hebrew (Dr. Pusey) will not give any lecture s this term, as the Professor has been ordered by his physicians to reside dur ng the winter in a more genial climate.

PRESFERMENTS.—The following have been made from Oxford.—The Rev W Lambert, late of Exeter College, to the rectory of Tibberton, Gloucestershire; value £267 per annum; patron, trustees of Mr. Thomas Hall.—The Rev. H. Mainwaring, B.A., of Oriel College, to the rectory of Whitmore, Staffordshire; value £470 per annum; patron, Captain Mainwaring. The Rev. A. C. O. Manson, D.C.L., late of Magdalen College, to the vicarage of Glossop, Derbyshire; value £114 per annum; patron, Duke of Norfolk. The Rev. C. N. Mangin, M.A., of Wadham College, to the vicarage of Horsley, Gloucestershire; value £130 per annum; patron, Bishop of Gloucester. The Rev R. S. Grigson, to the vicarage of Sandhutton Long, Lincolnshire; value, with residence, £363; patron, the Duchy of Lancaster. The Rev. S. Pask, to the vicarage of Wesconupon-Trent, Staffordshire; value, with residence, £105; patron, Rev. C. Inge. T. e Rev. P. Fisher, to the rectory of South Lufferham, Rutlandshire; value £423; patron, Rev. I. Bush. The Rev. T. W. Dowding, curate of Dawnton, Wilts, to the vicarage of Preshute, Wilts; value, with residence, £.86; patron, Bishop of Salisbury. The Rev. J. Bradshaw, to the perpetual curacy of Trinity Church, West Bromwich, Staffordshire; value £606; patron, Earl of Dartmouth. Rev. R. W. Barnes, to St Probus V., Cornwall; value £300, with re .; pat., the Bishop of Exeter; Rev. Rob. Lean, &c. Rev. John Maughan, to Michaelstow St. Cornwall; value £270, with res., pat., his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales: Rev. E. Spettigue dec.

ORDINATION.—The Lord Bishop of Oxford has given notice that he purposes to hold his next ordination on Sunday, the 23rd day of December next.

VACANCIES.—Llanfoist rectory, Monmouthshire, diocese Llandaff; value £174, with residence; patron, Earl of Abergavenny; vacant by decease of Rev. J. Jenkins, Llanvrechtva rectory, Merionethshire, diocese Bangor; value, with residence, £115; patron, Bishop of Bangor; vacant by decease of Rev. T. Marsden. Trevdraeth rectory, with Llangevan curacy, Anglesey, diocese Bangor; value, with residence, £465; patron, Bishop of Bangor; vacant by death of Rev. R. Williams, D.D. Coseley perpetual curacy, Staffordshire, diocese Lichfield; value £138; patron, Lord Ward; vacant by promotion of Rev. J. Bradshaw.

CAMBRIDGE.

A Statutable Congregation was held on Saturday last, to receive the resignation of the late Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Cookson; and a meeting of the Heads of Houses, held on Monday, the Rev. James Cartmell, Master of Christ's College, was elected his successor

THE NEW BISHOP OF LLANDAFF.—By the nomination of Dr. Ollivant to the Bishopric of Llandaff, the following appointments become vacant: The Regius Professorship of Divinity at Cambridge, value about £800 yearly, in the gift of the Crown. And to which Dr. Ollivant was appointed in 1843; a canonry in the cathedral church of St. David's, to which he was appointed in 1826, value £60 per annum; a prebendal stall in the collegiate church of Brecon, to which he was appointed in 1830, value £100 per annum; and the rectory of Somersham, Huntingdonshire, to which he was appointed in 1843; this benefice, which is worth £1770 per annum, is annexed to the Regius Professorship of Divinity at the University of Cambridge. The new Bishop was for seven years Vice-Principal of St. David's College, Lampeter, and is a good Welsh scholar, although an Englishman by birth.

THE BISHOPRICK OF VICTORIA, HONG KONG.—On Tuesday, the Bishop of Victoria and his wife, with a party of seven clergy and candidates for holy orders, embarked at Portsmouth in one of Messrs Phillips, Shaw, and Lowther's vessels, the Sir George Pollock, Captain Withers, for the distant field of their evangelical labours in China. They were accompanied on board by a large concourse of friends and other friends, who paid them this farewell token of respect and interest in their mission. The Bishop's engagements in visiting the various friends and supporters of the mission since the period of his consecration, have not been without success. In addition to £3000 given among nously by a "Brother and Sister," some months ago, and £3000 granted in July and October by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge (both which sums are for building the College), the Bishop has himself collected nearly £3000 towards the various objects of his mission. Considering the number of the party under his charge, the Bishop has determined to proceed with them by the longer route, viâ the Cape, in preference to taking himself the more expeditious journey overland, and leaving them to proceed by themselves.

THE REGISTRAR-GENERAL'S QUARTERLY RETURNS.

This extremely interesting and valuable document, which presents so much useful information on the vitally-important social questions of Public Health, Marriages, Births, and Deaths, was published during the week. We give its chief features :—

The return comprises the births and deaths which were registered in all the districts of England in the 3rd quarter of the present year, ending on the 30th of September, 1849; and the marriages in above 12,000 chapels and churches, 2869 registered places of worship unconnected with the Established Church, and 643 superintendent-registrars', which the Registrar-General has visited.

The return of marriages is incomplete; but the numbers wanting are inconsiderable, and have been supplied from the previous years. Returns of the births and deaths have been received from every registrar; and though they appear to be less than, under the calamity that has befallen the kingdom, no deaths have escaped registration or been assigned by the medical attendants to any but what they considered the true causes. The return, unlike other returns of births and deaths, includes every parish and place, whether healthy or suffering from an epidemic, and deaths from every cause; so that the tables and the registrar's remarks exhibit the results of a rapid but general sanitary survey of the country.

The result summarily is, that the marriages are a little above the average, the births slightly below the average, the deaths in greater number than have ever before been registered. The deaths in the three months were 120,364, or 47,602 more than were registered in the summer quarter of 1848. They exceeded the births (.35,200) by 164; and as the emigrants in the quarter from London, Liverpool, and Plymouth alone amounted, according to the Emigration Commissioners, to 46,588,* the population of England has suffered, died, and decreased during the quarter to a degree of which there is no example in the pre-sent century.

MARRIAGES.—The marriages (34,702) in the quarter ending June 30, 1848, were fewer than the marriages in the corresponding quarters of 1845 47. In the June quarter of 1849, the numbers in London, Bedfordshire, Gloucestershire, Shropshire, Warwickshire, Nottinghamshire, Cheshire, Lancashire, and the West Riding of Yorkshire. In the other counties the aggregate returns differ little from those of 1848. The marriages were about 35,908 in the three months.

BIRTHS.—135,200 births were registered in the quarter ending September 30, 1849; the births were 133,716 in the previous quarter, and 140,34 1 in the corresponding quarter of 1848. The births were greater than in the September quarter of 1847; and lower, with this exception, than in any September quarter since 1840. In London the births were 17,294, which is nearer the average number; in the other divisions the births were fewer than in the September quarter of 1848, when they were, however, considerably above the average.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS—DECREASE OF POPULATION.—The deaths exceed the births registered by 164; but all the births were not registered, and a certain number of Scotch and Irish people enter England every quarter, so that, were it not for emigration, it is probable that, notwithstanding the mortality, the population would have slightly increased. Emigration has, however, gone on steadily, and England has now less inhabitants by several thousands than were within its shores at Midsummer.

STATE OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—In the five summer quarters ending Sept. 30, 1845-49, the deaths were 74,872, 101,663, 93,435, 87,762, and 135,346. The deaths in the last summer quarter exceeded the deaths in the summer of 1845 by 60 492 : the annual rates of mortality in the two summers were 1767 and 2 630 respectively: and the latter rate exceeded the former by 71 per cent. The average rate per annum is generally lower in the summer than in either of the other three quarters: during the eleven summer quarters 1838-48, the annual mortality of the summer quarter 1849 exceeded the quarterly average by 53 per cent. The excess has been caused almost entirely by the cholera. The mortality was very unequally distributed over the country, having generally been greatest in the most town populations. This is evident on comparing the deaths in the 17 districts of the old quarterly return comprising London, some agricultural districts, and the principal towns and cities—with the rest of England. The average annual rate of mortality in the town districts is 26, in the country districts 18, in 1000; during the last quarter these numbers became 41 and 23 respectively. While the mortality has been excessive in nine divisions, it has been moderate or little above average in the remaining eight. The Midland and the South Midland or in the counties of Buckingham, Oxford, Northampton, Huntingdon, Bedford, Cambridge, Hereford, Worcester, Leicester, Rutland, Lincoln, Nottingham, Derby, and in the North Riding of Yorkshire, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and North Wales. The difference is more apparent upon examining the several districts; in some the people have died by hundreds, or by thousands: in others, not far distant, few have died, the inhabitants have been unusually healthy; the "medical men (says a registrar) say that they have had nothing to do."

The deaths in London were 27,109, and exceeded the births (.7,294) by 988 : The deaths by diseases of the zymotic class were 17,764, by other diseases, 9387: the causes of 99 deaths were unspecified; only 75 deaths from small-pox and 274 from measles, were registered; 438 from hooping-cough; 353 from scarlatina. The epidemic of scarlatina, of which 1060 persons died in the summer quarter of 1845, thus suddenly subsided. Of typhus 719 persons died. The deaths from influenza were 9. Although influenza and cholera often succeed each other alternately, their co-existence as epidemics appears never to have been witnessed.

* The emigration from the principal ports of the United Kingdom in the quarter ended September 30th, 1849, was 39,156, viz. from Scotch ports, 3236, Irish ports, 9122, English ports, 46,558; according to a return with which the Registrar-General has been favoured by the Knight Inn Commissioners.

METROPOLITAN News.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—The first ordinary meeting of the Society of Arts for the season was held in the great room of the society's house, John-street, Adelphi, on Wednesday evening, at eight o'clock, Mr. Tooke, F.R.S., in the chair. Several beautiful specimens of recent French bronzes, the property of Mr. W. C. Wass, were exhibited on the table, with some specimens of chinaware, &c. Four gentlemen, the members of the evening, were declared members of the society, as the result of a former evening's ballot. Earl Grey and eleven other gentlemen, proposed as members on previous occasions, were balloted for, and the names of no fewer than sixty gentlemen were proposed as new members to be balloted for at the next meeting. The report of the council stated that their ordinary revenue has increased in seven years from £900 to £1800, the whole of which is directly connected in the promotion of arts, manufactures, and commerce; and that the society now expends no more money upon its establishment of officers and servants than it did in 1844, when its condition was the reverse of prosperous. The council have, during the session, issued a prize-list for 1849, in its various departments of agriculture, arts, mechanics, and manufactures, in which upwards of £500 worth of premiums and medals are offered for competition. At the head of the list stand the two gold medals of his Royal Highness the President. With respect to the great exhibition of 1851, it was the intention of the council to summon a special general meeting, for the purpose of laying before the society the past history and present position of that great undertaking. Mr. Digby Wyatt read a report on the great French Exposition of last summer. It gave a sketch of the progress of industrial and art expositions in France, from the first limited attempt in 1797, up to the magnificent (but still very far from perfect) display of last year.—A display the imperfection of which was mainly attributable to that short-sightedness which excluded foreign productions; an omission which the great exposition in London, of 1851, is designed, among other commendable objects, to remedy.

ROYAL INSTITUTE OF BRITISH ARCHITECTS.—The first ordinary general meeting of the session 1849-50 was held on Monday evening, at the institute, 16, Grosvenor-street, the Earl de Grey, President, in the chair. The following additional names were elected as honorary and corresponding members :—The Signor Antolini, professor at the Academy of Fine Arts at Bologna.—the Abbate Antonio Magrini; the Signor Vantini, architect, of Brescia, Mr. Abel J. B. Wesnick, architect director of the Academy at the Hague. The noble Chairman, in adverting to the proceedings and progress of the Institute, observed that her Majesty's medal had been duly transmitted to Signor Carnivali, and its receipt acknowledged by that gentleman. At the same time, it was desired that the council of the Institute should ascertain whether, in the certificates that were contemplated to be granted by the London University, certificates of architectural proficiency should be included. The result of this will be certain that the University certificates would at present be limited to chemistry navigation, and hydrography. He had much pleasure in referring to papers which had been read at their previous meetings, and in suggesting that every member, however humble, should endeavour to contribute his quota on future occasions. There was another subject to which he wished to call their attention namely, that of interior decoration. Although no strictly rules of art connected with architecture, the reputation of the architect was in no slight degree influenced by a correct taste in the art of interior decoration. The noble lord concluded by congratulating the members upon the circumstance that the Institute was now becoming known and appreciated throughout Europe, and said that it would at all times afford him the highest gratification to contribute all that lay in his power to its advancement. Professor Donaldson, in a few appropriate observations, and the unanimous thanks of the meeting were, on his suggestion, voted to their donors. A paper was afterwards read by the Rev. W. Weswell, D.D., master of Trinity College, Cambridge, honorary member of the Institute, on the "Interior and later Gothic architecture in Germany." A vote of thanks to the reverend author of the paper was carried unanimously, and a discussion took place on the interesting and instructive subject, in which several members took part. The meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to the noble chairman for his courteous and efficient conduct in the chair.

SANITARY CONDITION OF THE CITY OF LONDON.—On Tuesday, at the Guildhall, City Coroner, Wakley, M.P., held an inquest, Mr. Simon, the medical officer of health, read his report for the year. The document is of great extent, entering most copiously into the various branches of the subject, under the following heads :—1. Defective house drainage. 2. Imperfect and insufficient water supply ; 3. Offensive or injurious trades and occupations ; 4. Intramural burials ; 5. Houses inscrupulite of ventilation, and absolutely unfit for habitation ; 6. The personal habits of the lowest classes, and the influence of destitution in increasing their mortality. In treating of those topics, Mr. Simon submitted only such general considerations as might show the largeness of the subject, its various ramifications, and its pressing importance, in the hope that those considerations might suffice to convince the Court of the necessity which exists for some effective and permanent sanitary organization in the City of London.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.—On Wednesday, a general meeting of the committee of the National Society was held at the Central Schools, Broad Sanctuary, for the purpose of taking into consideration what measures should be adopted with reference to the last letter from the Committee of Council on Education. There was a very large attendance of clergymen, laymen, noblemen, and gentlemen, amongst whom were—The Bishop of London, the Bishop of Oxford, the Bishop of Salisbury, the Bishop of St. Asaph, the Bishop of Bangor, the Bishop of Hereford, the Bishop of Chichester, the Bishop of Peterborough, the Very Reverend the Dean of St. Paul's, the Right Hon. the Earl of Harrowby, the Hon. J. C Talbot, Q.C.; the Right Hon. H. Goulburn, M.P.; the Venerable Archdeacon Sinclaire, Viscount Emlyn, M.P.; C. B. Adderley, Esq., M.P.; the Rev. R. B. Norris, W. Short, C. Cochrane, Esq., &c. &c. In the absence of the two Archbishops, the Right Hon. the Earl of Harrowby presided. The secretary read a letter from the Committee of Privy Council, after which a discussion took place, in which the Bishops of London, Oxford, Salisbury, the Earl of Harrowby, the Venerable Archdeacon Sinclaire, J. C. Talbot, Esq., M.P., and J. C. Colquhoun and others took part; but, as the meeting was of a private nature, we are not at liberty to communicate the nature of the observations then. It was, however, ultimately agreed that a letter should be written to the Committee of Council on Education, and a committee was appointed for that purpose. The proceedings then closed. The numerous meeting was a full one.

INFANT ORPHAN ASYLUM, WANSTEAD.—On Monday afternoon, the half-yearly general meeting of the governors of the charity, for the purpose of reporting specially in reference to the number of orphans created by the ravages of the recent epidemic in the city of London, the increased number of forty orphan children into the establishment, was held at the London Tavern—Mr. B B Cabbell M.P., presiding. The report dwelt briefly upon the fact that many of the 400 children then pressing for admission into the institution had been deprived of both parents within a few hours by cholera, or else left dependent upon the mother, who was herself suddenly thrown upon her own resources. Under these circumstances, the committee had endeavoured to meet a special emergency by special means, namely, by an increase in the already large number of children admitted; and they had, therefore, come to the conclusion that a special election should be held in February next, at which forty children should be admitted. The committee had also determined to increase the number received at each half-yearly election, so that the Infant Orphan Asylum would receive 120 children yearly, a greater number than had ever been received by any of the national charities within a similar space of time. There were yesterday 63 candidates for admission. At the conclusion of a very busy poll, which lasted several hours, the names of the forty successful candidates were announced. The 320 children now in the asylum, without the addition to the number made on Monday.

WESTMINSTER FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETY.—A public meeting, for the purpose of explaining the principles and objects of this society, was held on Tuesday night at the Gun Tavern, Dean's-yard, Mr. James Wyld in the chair, who stated that the objects of the society were two-fold: first, to give every member a freehold residence; and, secondly, to ex ecd the suffrage in the counties. The effect of these results would be the encouragement of habits of economy themselves, and the accomplishment of desirable reforms in Parliament. The societies of this kind instituted throughout the country amounted now to 29, with about 10,000 members and £100,000 in their funds. The first object was to purchase land in Westminster, and to allow the small interest which the people of the United Kingdom had in the soil as compared with those in other countries. He adduced statements of the number of landed proprietors in the different countries of Europe and America. The meeting was afterwards addressed by several workingmen and resolutions were adopted approving of the principles and objects of the society.

BATHS AND WASH-HOUSES.—On Wednesday afternoon the Commissioners of Baths and Wash-houses for the district of St. Margaret, in the city of Westminster, met in the vestry-room of the parish church of St. Margaret, to receive tenders for the erection of baths and wash-houses for the united parishes. The building to be situated on a piece of ground about 120 feet square, in Tothill-street, with a front abutting on Great Smith-street. There are to be sixty baths, either warm or cold, and sixty washing and ironing compartments. There will also be two plunging baths (which are not attached to any of these establishments in other parishes), nearly forty feet in length, twenty-five feet wide in which, and the depth will incline from three feet six inches to five feet six inches. There were above thirty tenders for the building, varying from £9,748, the lowest tender, up to £9,700. The lowest was accepted, and the tender for the engineering portion amounted to £1875. The site has been bought for £3000. It is intended to complete the building with the utmost despatch.

IMPROVEMENT AND CULTIVATION OF BOGS AND PEAT SOILS.—An interesting discussion, in the course of which considerable practical information was elicited, took place at the London Farmers' Club on Monday evening, "Upon the Improvement and Cultivation of Bogs and Peaty Soils." The subject was introduced by Mr. S. Webster, of Houndsdown, who pointed out the advantages of such soils to consist principally in their being obtainable at a low rental, whilst by proper management they would produce the finest root crops of every descr ption, free from the disease to which crops grown upon other kinds of soil were liable. Clover and artificial grasses also would grow most luxuriantly upon them. Their reclamation and improvement were to be secured chiefly by the application of drainage ; and where bogs were fed by ground springs, such springs should be cut off, so as thoroughly to prevent the oozing of the water into the bogs. The most effectual system of drainage for this purpose now operation was to be found in Essex, upon the lands of Mr. Fisher Hobbs, Mr. Mulley, Mr. Dixon, of Witham, and Mr. Mechi. With regard to the manure to be used upon these soils, all dung should be well rotted before being applied to them ; and guano, the ashes of peat itself, peat saturated with liquid manure, and all artificial manures, would be found to act most efficiently. The peat was valuable for fuel ; for burning bricks and tiles; for intermixture with liquid manure, as charcoal, for smelting purposes ; and also as a disinfector and deodoriser, as well as fertiliser—as had been conclusively shown by the recent experiments of Mr. Jasper Rogers. Mr. Fisher Hobbs, Mr. Mechi, the Hon. Mr. Wilson, Mr. R. Baker, Mr. Bennett, Mr. Owen, Mr. Ramsey, Mr. Smith, and other gentlemen, bore their testimony—the result of practical experience—to the superior powers of bogs after draining ; and instances were cited of some the fee simple of which had been sold for £3 10s. or £4 10s. an acre, and which had never been worth anything except as snipe-grounds, having, by a comparatively insignificant outlay, been made to yield enormous crops alike of wheat and roots, and to realise a rent of three guineas an acre. In one case the produce was nine quarters of wheat the acre ; and there was no necessity for denying upon the old-established system of rotation of crops. It was laid down, however, that attention should be especially directed to the geological formation of the substrata, and that much of the bog lands in Scotland and the north of England were at so great an altitude, that they were in no respect susceptible of improvement. But this remark was not applied so generally to the bog lands of Ireland, which are mostly admitted to be very favourably situated. On the motion of Mr. Shaw, seconded by Mr. Owen, the club resolved : "That the improvement and cultivation of bogs and peaty soils may in many cases, where the climate is congenial, be beneficially adopted."

ST. DUNSTAN'S-IN-THE-WEST PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.—The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, on Wednesday last, laid the foundation-stone of this new Parochial Schools for the parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West. The schools are about to be erected on ground purchased from the Corporation of the city of London, near the Fleet-street end of Fetter-lane—a spot long in that vicinity, and on which Lord Mayor Harpath some time since contemplated the erection of a new Record Office. The design is Italian, with a red brick frontage, and Portland stone cornices. The infant-school will be upon the ground-floor, the boys' on the principal floor, and the residence of the master and mistress, with other appurtenances, on the attic story of the building. The foundation-stone bore the following inscription :—"Laid by Sir James Duke, Bart., M.P. for the city of London, and Alderman for this ward, in the year of his Mayoralty, November 2, 1849."

FESTIVITIES AT THE MANSION-HOUSE.—The Lord Mayor and the Sheriffs were entertained, on Wednesday evening, at dinner, the chairman, the architect, and the committee of the Corporation (with their ladies) who were entrusted with the erection of the building and the management of opening the New Coal Exchange; as also the twelve gentlemen (and their ladies) who were selected by the Court of Common Council to be associated with them on the occasion of the Royal Visit. Covers were laid for 80.—On Thursday, the usual farewell banquet was given by the Lord Mayor and the Lord Mayor elect.

The Lord Mayor's Address.—On Friday last the Lord Mayor elect (Alderman Farncomb) by Messrs Bushe and Co., is considered to be the richest in design and most elegant in decoration that has been turned out of hands for many years. The heraldic designs and warm colouring, with gold fringe and curtains, give the carriage a gorgeous appearance. The standard to the hind part represent dragons, the emblems of the supporters of the City coat of arms.

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION, BROMPTON.—The new chapel in connexion with this institution is rapidly progressing, and the roofing in has already commenced. It may be remembered that this sacred edifice is the sole gift of the Rev. Sir Henry Foulis, Bart ; and the talented architect selected, E. B. Lamb, Esq., of Charlotte-street, Portland-place, appears to have fully realised the wishes of the benevolent donor. It is built of Kentish crag stone, with Caen stone facings, and is calculated to afford accommodation to upwards of 200 indoor patients, exclusive of the resident officers of the establishment. Several meetings of the committee of management have recently been held, and it has been decided that the completion of the eastern wing of the hospital, with approaches, &c., shall be proceeded with as speedily as possible.

EXAMINATION OF ARTICLED CLERKS.—The examiners have appointed Tuesday, the 13th instant, at half-past nine, for the examination of persons applying to be admitted attorneys, at the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society of London. Where the articles of clerkship and assignment have not expired, but will expire during the term, the candidate may be examined conditionally ; but the articles must be left within the first seven days of term, and answers given to that time.

THE CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT.—A new arrangement for the conduct of the public business in the Secretary's Department of the Customs has been approved and ordered to be put into operation. The classification of the business in the Secretary's office in the Customs Department is to comprise—1. The Secretary's Branch. 2. The Assistant-Secretary's Branch. 3. Long Room Branch (including all the Long Room and warehousing business). 4. Accountant Branch (comprising all seizures and penalties, and miscellaneous matters; this branch includes all papers relating to seizures, prosecutions, penalties, informations relating to smuggling, returns of smuggling, and expenses on account of seizures and prosecutions, and all papers respecting the Coasting and Merchant Seamen and Passenger Acts). 5. Payments and Estimates Branch. 6. Plantation Department (comprising all colonial papers and quarantine matters, except those relating to the quarantine establishment, and the supply and shipping of stores ; and including questions relating to the Navigation Law). 7. All demands for stationery, books, and official forms, which are to be forwarded direct to the proper department.

FRAUDS ON THE STOCK-EXCHANGE.—In consequence of numerous frauds and impositions having been practised on the public, by persons falsely representing themselves to be members of the Stock-Exchange, the committee of that body, as a protection to the public, have caused a list to be made out of the names and addresses of the whole of the 364 gentlemen, members of the Stock-Exchange, and copies thereof are now posted in the Rotunda, Bank of England, the Royal Exchange, and Guildhall, for the inspection of those who may desire information on the subject

THE CONNEMARA ESTATES.—The sale (if so it may be called) of Mr. Martin's estates in the west of Ireland was closed on Monday, at the auction mart. There was scarcely any acceptable bidding, as the following analysis of the result of the first day's proceedings shows :—

Number of acres in the Martin estates	200,000
Ditto sold	3,000
Average price per acre of the land sold	£3 2s.
Average price offered but not accepted	3 0s.
Sum total realised by the five days sale	£17,000

LOCAL MATTERS.—At the Middlesex sessions, on Wednesday, an application was made by Mr. Ellis, on behalf of Mr. Thomas Hodges, of Hammersmith, to the magistrates, for the renewal of a licence for the house, the Queen's Head, Hammersmith-terrace, Chiswick, which was refused at the last sessions. Mr. Ellis, on behalf of Mr. Hodges, produced a memorial signed by Messrs Davies, solicitors, of Warwick-street, Regent street, against whom an order for the payment of £1900, the amount of bail into which they had entered for the appearance of the Countess of Lansdelde, on a charge of bigamy, had been made at Marlborough-street Police Office some time back. The ex-cent of the police was to the next quarter sessions, and the object was to allow the parties further time to proceed to appeal against the Magistrate's decision.

THE FIFTH OF NOVEMBER.—The annual absurdity of commemorating what is commonly termed "Guy Fawkes day" has been utte ded, on the present occasion, with some injury to property and person, fires having been caused by boys discharging fire-works. One fire happened on the premis s of Mr. John Ross, a cabinet-maker, carrying on business in Cumberland-street, Curtain-road, Shoreditch. Mr. Ross was married in the 5th inst., and the following day, and in an instant it exploded, and the stock connected with it was forced into his chest and left eye. He was carried to the hospita... George Ward, a coachman, living in Bridge-street, Lambeth, was struck in the face by a rocket while passing along the Commercial-road, and was so much injured that it is feared he will lose his eye-sight. The stables belonging to Mr. Grove, the great clothier and outfitter, of 59 and 60, Lower March, Lambeth, were set on fire from the same cause ; and other accidents of minor note occurred in various parts of the metropolis.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Births registered in the week ending Nov. 3—males, 712; females, 704: total, 1416. Deaths registered during the same period—males, 404 ; females, 433 : total, 837. This return includes the whole of the metropolitan districts, and shows that the mortality of London, which fell below the weekly average of the autumnal months, has again risen. Cholera has steadily continued to decline during the three subsequent weeks: the present return exhibiting only 837 deaths in the week, while the average is 1162 (allowance being made for increase of population in the twelve years); a decrease which is therefore 325. A comparison of returns made for the same week in the last ten years shows that in any of the nine weeks the mortality has not been so low as in the present term ; in the corresponding week of 1848 it was 1618, and in that of 1846, they were 1115, after cholera had given warning of its presence. Only 11 deaths from cholera were registered in last week ; in the three preceding weeks they were successively 110, 41, and 25, declining by nearly a geometrical progression. Of the 11, one occurred in Lower North-street, Cosines ; 2 in the workhouse of St. Martin-in-the-Fields (1) having been that of a boy who came from a house in Bedfordbury, in the central district, which is minutely described by the registrar) ; 1 in Claremont-place, Gray's Inn-lane ; 1 in George-yard, Saffron Hill ; 2 at No. 12, Seven-step-alley, Gravel-lane ; 1 in the Lunatic Asylum, Hanwell House ; 1 in Maidstone-place, "a very low and ill-drained spot" in Haggerstone East; 1 at No. 4, Peter-court-row, Spitalfields, where the mother of the deceased died five days afterwards, of diarrhœa ; and 1 in Wycombe-place, Kent-road. In the last week, 40 deaths were registered from diarrhœa and dysentery (the average is 97); in the three previous weeks, they were 165, 63, and 51. Two of these, in the present return, occurred at Jennings's-buildings, Kensington—a locality which has frequently obtained unfavourable notice in the records of the late epidemic. Typhus was fatal to 37 persons ; the average is 56. Other epidemics are still under the average. The mortality from smallpox and measles continues unusually low. A woman of fifty-seven years die. of "inflammation, from a post-stone adging, thirty-three days before death, in the colon, and producing thickening and complete obstruction." Post mortem. In two cases, intemperance is stated to have been the cause of death.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean reading of the barometer at Greenwich was upwards o 30 inches on the first three days of the week. The mean of the week was 29.307. The mean temperature of the week was 53·4 degrees, which is four degrees above the average of the same week in seven years.

SKETCHES FROM BORNEO.

NIGHT ENGAGEMENT OF THE ENGLISH WITH THE PIRATES OFF BANTING MARROH.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

SEND you the following account of an Expedition against the pirates of the north-western coast of Borneo, with Illustrations, which I trust may prove not unacceptable to your readers. I am indebted for the admirable Illustrations to Dr. Livesay, of H.M.S. Albatros, who, in the boats, accompanied the Expedition throughout.

Arrangements were made that H.M.S. Meeanda, 4 guns, Albatros, 12 guns and Royalist, 10 guns, together with the H.E.I.C.'s war-steamers Nemesis and Semiramis, should rendezvous at Sarawak, and furnish boats and an European force of 300 men.

The Meeander and Semiramis, however, did not arrive, and the effective force of the Royalist and Nemesis was so reduced from illness, that we could only muster seven boats, manned by 108 men, including officers.

All arrangements being completed, it was considered better to proceed, even with this reduced force, than (by waiting longer) to run the risk of being overtaken by the rainy season. Accordingly we started, on the 24th of July, to attack the strongholds of the pirates on the river Rejang, who had been very daring of late. I may here mention, that, shortly before we left Sarawak, the pirates of the river Serebus sent an insulting message to the Rajah (Sir James Brooke), asking "If he were an old woman, and afraid, that he did not attack them as he had threatened." It will be seen in the sequel that this message is not likely to be repeated. The Nemesis towed the Royalist up the Batang Lupar (a noble stream), and moored her at the mouth of the Linga, which falls into the Batang Lupar, to protect a friendly tribe resident there, during the absence of the warriors, who accompanied us on the expedition.

We left Batang Lupar on the 26th, and towed the European boats to Banting Marroh, a low sandy point separating the rivers Serebus and Kaluka, and which had been appointed by the Rajah as the place of rendezvous for the entire force European and native, previous to starting for the river Rejang.

On the 27th, an old Malay chieftain brought us intelligence that a piratical fleet of 107 prahus, with at least 3500 men, had left the Serebus the day before our arrival, passing round Tanjong Siri, to attack and plunder such villages on the Rejang as were not powerful enough to resist them. The piratical tribes reside for the most part very far inland, near the sources of the numerous rivers of this coast, in which situations the streams are very contracted and rapid, and the banks elevated and heavily timbered. They take advantage of these circumstances, and render the advance of an enemy almost impossible, by felling huge trees across the river, and by cutting others and keeping them suspended by rattans, so that they can be launched in a moment on a passing boat, crushing her to atoms. On any alarm at sea, they immediately retreat to some of these strongholds, and sink or otherwise conceal their prahus in some of the innumerable creeks with which the rivers abound. All attempts, therefore, at intercepting a piratical fleet have hitherto failed. Their practice is to make a raid, and pouncing on some unsuspecting village (as the Malays poetically express it) like the rush of the alligator, to burn it, killing all the men and boys, and cutting their heads off (which they value beyond all price as trophies), and carrying off the women as slaves. They then, whether successful or unsuccessful, return as speedily and quietly as they issued forth, having plundered every native trading prahu they fall in with, and murdered the crews. Advantage was, therefore, taken of the unusually favourable opportunity now offered, and a plan was immediately laid by Capt. Farquhar, of H.M.S Albatros, who commanded the expedition, and the Rajah (Sir James Brooke), for surprising and cutting them off on their return. The Serebus and Kaluka, the only avenues to the country of the pirates, flow into a deep bay, round the north-east point of which, called Tanjong Siri, the piratical flotilla must return. The following disposition, therefore, was made of the force under Captain Farquhar's orders. Very fast spy or scout boats were stationed at Tanjong Siri, with instructions to return on the first appearance of the enemy and announce their approach.

YOUNGEST DAUGHTER OF THE CHIEF OF KENOWIT.

The Rajah, with a native force of about 40 well-armed prahus, including the Banga Rayah, pulling 80 oars, commanded by Sir James Brooke in person, and the Rajah Wallo, pulling 60 oars, commanded by the Rajah's nephew and acknowledged successor, Captain Brooke, of the 68th Regiment (Connaught Rangers), as well as the cutters of the Albatros and Royalist, commanded by Lieutenants Wilmshurst and Everest, were stationed in ambush at the mouth of the Kaluka. A large native force of about 40 prahus was stationed at the entrance of the Serebus, supported by the three remaining boats of the Albatros, commanded respectively by Captain Farquhar, Lieutenant Brickwell, and Mr. Williams, and the two boats of the Nemesis, under Messrs Goodwin and Baker; as well as by the Kanes, a very inefficient river steamer, commanded by Mr Wright.

Trying as it was to the patience of a parties, we remained in position until the 31st, during which interval every precaution human foresight could suggest was adopted to ensure success. About 7½ P.M. we were engaged in a rubber of whist on board the Nemesis, and had almost abandoned all hope of surprising the enemy, when a spy boat returned at best speed, with the long and anxiously-looked-for intelligence that the piratical fleet had rounded Tanjong Siri, and was rapidly approaching our position. As yet it was, of course, uncertain for which river they would make. This question was, however, soon set at rest, and a brisk fire of rockets from the cutters, and of great and small guns from the remainder of the Rajah's force stationed at the entrance of the Kaluka, announced that the enemy had attempted to force that river, and had met with a warmer reception than they had anticipated. A rocket was now fired by the Rajah, and, on this preconcerted signal, Captain Farquhar moved round Banting Marroh with the European force under his immediate command, to support the Rajah, if necessary, and also with a view to enclosing the enemy between two fires, leaving, however, a strong native force at the mouth of the Serebus, to intercept the pirates, in case of their passing the European boats, and making for this, their native river. Finding themselves foiled at the Kaluka, the enemy, gallantly followed by the two cutters and the Rajah's light skirmishing boats (which kept up a constant fire), put to sea, with the intention of running for the Batang Lupar; here, however, no doubt much to their surprise, they encountered Captain Farquhar's boats, and being saluted with round shot and rockets, they divided their force. They yet, however, preserved admirable order. Some returning to the Kaluka (still most judiciously guarded by the Rajah), renewed their attempt to enter, but with the like bad success; others passing in shoal water inside Captain Farquhar, made for the Serebus, and the remainder, having greater speed than his heavily laden boats, succeeded for the present in escaping to sea.

The Nemesis had hitherto remained at the mouth of the Serebus in position, but ready to move at a moment's notice to any point where her services might be required. She now acted her part, and that right nobly. Perceiving by the fire from Captain Farquhar's boats that the enemy had attempted to put to sea, Commander Wallace gave chase, and fell in with seventeen prahus which had succeeded in escaping Captain Farquhar, and were making in beautiful line for the Batang Lupar. When abeam we saluted them with grape and canister from our 32-pounders, raking the entire line, which we then broke, driving many of them on shore badly crippled; where they fell an easy prey to the Dyak boats, which, headed by Mr. Steel, of Sarawak, in the Snake, followed the Nemesis, but never interfered with her fire. We then pursued five others, and destroyed them in detail, passing round each and pouring in a constant fire of grape and canister, musketry and rifles, until they drifted past us helpless logs, without a living being on board.

That discharge of grape was a fearful sight, as at point-blank range it crashed over the sea, and through the devoted prahus, marking its track with the floating bodies of the dying, shattered prahus, planks, shields, and fragments of all sorts. I should have pitied them; but they were pirates, and the thought steeled my heart. At this period the scene was exciting in the extreme: fighting was going on in all directions; wherever the eye was turned it met the brilliant double flash of the great gun, the bright quick flame of musketry, the lightning streak of the rocket, or the dazzling blaze of the blue light; whilst the ear was saluted with the boom of cannon, the roar of musketry, the wild tone of the tom-tom, the clear startling note of the gong, or the still more fearful warwhoop of the Dyak, telling a sad tale of destruction and death. The pirates now, finding themselves surrounded, lost all presence of mind—order was no longer preserved—the flotilla scattered and fled in every direction, the crews jumping overboard and swimming for the shore, or running the prahus aground, and taking refuge in the jungle.

About twelve o'clock at night the fight might be considered as over, although isolated firing continued until midnight. The entire force under Captain Farquhar's command may be estimated at 3000 men. From information subsequently obtained, that of the enemy cannot be taken lower than 120 prahus and 4000 men. The loss of the enemy in the action was 90 prahus, and not less than 400 men; whilst we lost but two men killed and six wounded. In addition, however, to the loss in action, the enemy suffered most severely, being followed in the jungle by the Dyaks, who, like bloodhounds, tracked and hunted them down, cutting their heads off, and bringing them in as a proof of victory; and even of those who escaped a violent death, at least one-third must have perished before they reached their homes, being altogether destitute of food. The total loss of the enemy may, therefore, be estimated at 1600 men; they have also lost an immense quantity of brass guns, muskets, gongs, and arms of all sorts, with which they were well provided, but which they either threw overboard to lighten their prahus, and increase their speed, and prevent them from sinking or abandoned on taking to the jungle. More than a mile of the beach of Banting Marron was strewed with wrecks and abandoned prahus, which were either burnt or carried off as prizes. Taking into consideration all the circumstances, that the surprise did not form any part of the original plan, the smallness of the European force, the necessary division of that force, the annihilation of a powerful enemy without loss on our side (which is the perfection of generalship), and that all this was done under the great and manifold disadvantages of a night attack, it may with truth be said that the highest credit is due to those who originated, as well as those who so ably executed, the plan.

TAMAH, NATIVE OF KENOWIT, IN KAYAN WAR-DRESS.

TATTOOED DYAK OF KENOWIT, WITH PENDULOUS EAR-LOBES.

S K E T C H E S F R O M B O R N E O.

As an instance of the atrocity of these bloodthirsty fellows, I may mention that on the expedition having surprised the village of Matou, as well as a trading prahu, they took some heads and one female prisoner. On being compelled to take to the jungle, they found they could not carry her with them; they therefore cut her head off, and mangled the body in a most frightful manner, in which state it was found after the action lying on the beach of Banting Marron, a ghastly object—the legs and arms being nearly severed from the body, which was literally chopped in pieces!

DYAK AND KAYAN WEAPONS.

A considerable native force was left at the scene of action to follow the pirates in the jungle, and complete the work of destruction; and the remainder moved up the Serebus about forty miles, where the Nemesis and the large prahus anchored, whilst the light boats proceeded up the river Paboe, to destroy the fortified villages on its banks before the warriors could return to their defence. The advance was opposed by nine large booms lately thrown across the river. These were with difficulty removed; but at length a monster tree, so hard that the axes scarcely made an impression on it, seemed an almost impassable barrier to further progress. After in vain using every effort to overcome the difficulty, the force was disembarked, with the intention of clearing a road through the jungle and marching overland; but they had scarcely landed and commenced operations, when a skirmish took place, in which four natives of our party were killed, and amongst them "Bunnee" and "Tojong," two sons of the Chief of Lundu. We all felt the deepest regret for these youths, as (unlike their countrymen) they knew not what fear was, and fell victims to the rashest valour, having, contrary to orders, moved in advance of their party, almost unarmed: one brother was carried in headless, and the other with his face cut off, and otherwise fearfully mangled. This untoward event threw such a damp over the spirits of the natives, that it was not deemed advisable to advance until confidence was somewhat restored and, in the meantime, the unusually low water enabled the boats to pass under the tree and proceed up the river, where they destroyed Paboe, and several other villages, and took some prisoners, as well as a great quantity of plunder amongst which were some ancient jars, which the Dyaks hand down from father to son as heirlooms and prize very highly, some of them being valued as high as £200. It was, indeed, fortunate the fleet had been destroyed, as otherwise it would have been impossible to perform the service without immense loss of life on our side; for a very small party, armed with rifles, and stationed in the jungle opposite each boom, could have picked off every European whilst removing the trees, and without the loss of a man on their side.

DYAK MODE OF DRYING HEADS.

FLEET NEAR BALLA.—SING.A RAJAH AND RAJAH WALLI IN THE FOREGROUND.—THE RANEE AND ENGLISH BOATS IN ADVANCE

During the absence of the boats, numbers of the pirates who had escaped in the action, but were not aware of our still occupying the river, were cut off by the Dyak boats in attempting to ascend the Serebus, and I then had an opportunity of witnessing the operation of preserving the heads. The Dyaks, having killed their enemy, immediately cut his head off, with a fiendish yell; they then scoop out the brains, and suspend the head from a rod of bamboo, as represented in the Sketch. They then light a slow fire underneath, and the smoke ascends through the neck, and penetrates the head, thoroughly drying the interior. It is then placed in a basket of very open work, and carried suspended from the belt of the captor—more highly prized than ornaments of gold or precious stones. On one occasion I saw five heads on a platform, undergoing the operation; and within two feet of it the Dyaks were cool y cooking some wild boar chops for their dinner, and inhaling the mingled perfume of baked human and hog's flesh!

TOWN OF KENOWIT, RIVER REJANG.

We now proceeded to the river Rejang, the finest and most interesting of the rivers of the northern coast of Borneo. One glance at the town speaks volumes as to the cause of this warfare, and proclaims the lawless character of one party, and the insecurity of the other. The houses, inhabited by the Milanos, a race distinct from the Malay and Dyak, are of immense length, some of them containing three hundred people. They are erected on pillars of wood, about thirty-five feet in height, and are only approachable by ladders, which can be drawn up on the appearance of an enemy; each thus forms in itself a perfect fortress. An immense gallery, protected by a basket-proof trestle-work, runs the entire length of the building, this is used as the common sitting-room, and here are coil ected offensive and defensive weapons of all sorts—brass guns, rifles, spears, shields, parangs, sumpitans, stones, &c.; and they also pour boiling water and oil on the heads of assailants. I was informed that, on the erection of one of these houses, a deep hole was sunk for the corner pillar, and in this (as we place a bottle containing a coin and engraved inscription) they (terrace reforce) lowered an unfortunate girl, decked out in all her finery, and then dropped the enormous post on her head, crushing her to atoms; and yet they are now a fine intelligent race, and cordially unite with the Rajah for the suppression of piracy.

Having obtained a sufficient supply of firewood, we proceeded up the river Rejang to the Kenowit, up which river the boats advanced about 40 miles, and succeeding the enemy, plundered and burned the villages, and took several prisoners. The boats having returned, we pressed on to the town of Kenowit, on the inhabitants of which the Rajah imposed a heavy fine, with a threat of visiting them with his heartiest displeasure if not evaded by

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEAL

The point reserved in the case of Maria Manning, convicted jointly with her husband of the murder of Patrick O'Connor, was argued on Wednesday morning, in the Exchequer Chamber, before Chief Justice Wilde, Mr. Baron Parke, Mr. Baron Platt, Mr. Justice Cresswell, Mr. Justice Coleridge, and Mr. Baron Parke.

Mr. Ballantine, on behalf of the appellant, contended, at great length, that, as Mrs. Manning was an alien born, she had not lost the privileges and rights attaching to alienage by her marriage with her husband; and that as she had, at the time of her trial, pleaded her right to be tried by a jury de medietate linguæ, she could be been wrongfully convicted by a jury composed entirely of British subjects, and therefore entitled to a new trial by a jury composed of half Englishmen and half foreigners.

The Attorney-General said, that although his learned friend had argued the question most adroitly on behalf of his client, he yet had failed in shaking the clear words of the Act of Parliament,—that of 7 and 8 Victoria, cap. 66, which was passed on the 6th of August, 1844, the 16th section of which enacted, in words that could not possibly be misconstrued, "that any woman married to a natural born subject, or person naturalised, shall be deemed and taken to be herself naturalised, and have all the rights and privileges of a natural-born subject." Although, therefore, he admitted that Mrs. Manning had been born in a foreign country, and therefore an alien, yet, by her marriage to a British-born or natural subject, she lost all her rights and privileges of alienage, instead of which she became entitled to the same rights and privileges as those claimed by her husband. He, therefore, most confidently appealed to their Lordships to refuse the application for a new trial, on the ground that the prisoners had been convicted by a jury wrongfully constituted.

Mr. Ballantine having shortly replied to the arguments of the Attorney-General, the Judges withdrew in order to consider their judgment, and were absent rather more than half an hour. Upon their return,

Chief Justice Wilde delivered the decision of the Court. He said that the Judges had, in the case, withdrawn for a short time, in order to deliberate upon the arguments which had been adduced by the learned counsel on both sides—not because they entertained any doubts upon the matter, but because they wished to give so much importance as the present all the calm deliberation which it might seem to the public to demand. Mr. Ballantine had argued the entire case in the most able and proper manner, and had not omitted a single argument which either learning or ingenuity could suggest. Notwithstanding which, however, the Judges were severally and collectively unanimous in their opinion that no doubt whatever could be entertained as to the decision at which they ought to arrive in the case. The question simply was whether at the time of the trial the female Queen was or was not one of his Queen's subject, and whether or not she had been tried by a jury lawfully constituted. That Mrs. Manning had been born in a foreign country was admitted, but it had also been admitted that she was at the time of her trial, a married woman, and married to a British-born subject. It being admitted, therefore, that she was married to a British-born subject, disposed of the whole question. Although she was previously an alien, yet at the moment when such marriage took place she became entitled, under the Act to Amend the Laws relating to Aliens, to all the rights and privileges of a British-born or naturalised subject: in fact, she became by her marriage ipso facto, a British subject. As she could not, therefore, possibly be, at one and the same time, an alien and a British subject, the judges were unanimously of opinion that she had been rightly tried, and was not entitled to the privilege of a new trial.

The Court was densely crowded during the whole of the morning, the space allotted to counsel being filled in every corner, the learned gentlemen giving the closest attention to the arguments addressed on both sides.

The result of the appeal was communicated the same evening to Mrs. Manning, who was previously unaware that any steps had been taken in the matter. The convict exhibited no emotion whatever at the intelligence, merely observing that "everybody was against her; and that justice had not been done her."

Mr. Keane, the Governor of Horsemonger-lane Gaol, received, in the course of Wednesday, the warrant of the Sheriff of the County, fixing Tuesday next, the 13th inst., for the execution of both the culprits, between the hours of eight in the morning and two in the afternoon.

POLICE.

THE RECENT ATTEMPTED PARRICIDE AT CHISWICK.

On Tuesday, Henry Bathurst Monkhouse (who has been so frequently remanded at the Hammersmith Police court on the charge of having feloniously discharged a loaded pistol at his father, Mr. John Farmer Monkhouse) was again brought up in the prison-van from the House of Detention, for further examination.

The court was filled with the idle and the curious in matters criminal.

The evidence was the same in effect as the statements which have already been published on this sad affair.

The wretched prisoner's father was sufficiently recovered from the effects of his wound to appear in court against him. The prisoner did not move a muscle on hearing his father called, nor did he indulge even in the slightest or most furtive glance in the direction of the spot at which Mr. Monkhouse, sen., stood. On the contrary, he retained immovably the position he had assumed on being first placed at the bar. Mr. Monkhouse did not venture to look at his unhappy son (though this was the first occasion of their meeting since the sad event), but kept his eyes directed to the bench. His evidence corroborated that of the other witnesses as to his son discharging a pistol at him

At the close of the proceedings, the prisoner (when called on by the magistrate) did not say anything, observing the same dogged silence he had done throughout. He was committed to Newgate for trial, on the charge of feloniously shooting at and wounding the prosecutor, with intent to kill and murder him.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The wind-up of the racing campaign at York, on Monday and Tuesday last, was not by any means so brilliant as the number of the entries led us to expect; in fact, the racing barely came up to the average of the Union Hunt gatherings. The Metropolitan Steeple-chase season commenced on Wednesday, in the Subscription riding-grounds at Harlesdon. The "line" was a "repeat" of the old affairs in the same quarter; the sport satisfactory, and the attendance averagely good, but the weather unpropitious. The "little go" at Woodford came off on Friday, but excited scarcely any interest. The appointments for next week include Aberystwith, on Monday; and Aylesbury, on Wednesday. The Liverpool Meeting, for flat and steeple-chase racing, takes place in the following week, and promises to be worthy of the neighbourhood.

The Coming fixtures are—Monday, Workington; Tuesday, Letcomb Bowers (Wantage), and Barton-upon-Humber; Wednesday, Baldock; Thursday, Trentham, Glossop, and Maltesy; and Saturday, Spalding, in the Home Park, Hampton Court.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The business transacted this afternoon touched upon all the Derby favourites, some of which were backed with considerable spirit, Hollingbroke having by far the most powerful party. A few horses were introduced for the Chester Cup, affords not by any means favourable to round betting.

METROPOLITAN STEEPLE CHASE

2 to 1 agst The Commodore	1 agst British Yeoman
6 to 1 —— Lanquidoe	8 to 1 —— Sarah Sykes

CHESTER C.P.

100 to 1 agst The Baroness (t)	100 to 1 agst Kensington (t)	100 to 1 agst Cossack (t)
100 to 1 —— Lisnabago (t)	100 to 1 —— Essendaria (t)	100 to 1 —— Genevieve (t)
100 to 1 —— Melody (t)	100 to 1 —— Ruby (t)

DERBY

10 to 1 agst Hollingbroke (t)	22 to 1 agst Sweetheart	33 to 1 agst The Nigger (t)
14 to 1 —— Ghilderic Saltburn (t)	22 to 1 —— Belcona	33 to 1 —— Pintoft (t)
18 to 1 —— Knight of Avenel (t)	25 to 1 —— Cyprus	40 to 1 —— Hardinge (t)
20 to 1 —— Mildew	25 to 1 —— Wadworth (t)
21 to 1 —— Chicchor	25 to 1 —— Vestigium	66 to 1 —— Little Bob (t)
21 to 1 —— The Italian (t)	25 to 1 —— John O'Groat (t)	66 to 1 —— The Swede (t)

HURDLEBAY.—The betting this afternoon was on too small a scale to require any thing than an enumeration of the prices.

CHESTER CUP.

1000 to 15 agst White colt	1000 to 10 agst The Cocktail	1000 to 10 agst Legerdemain
1000 to 15 —— Pump o'Day	1000 to 10 —— Essedaria	1000 to 10 —— Flatcatcher
Boy	1000 to 10 —— Ruby	1000 to 10 —— Dissent
1000 to 10 —— Cancrou	1000 to 10 —— Hals	1000 to 10 —— Dough
1000 to 10 —— Surplice	1000 to 10 —— Berenice	1000 to 10 —— Lady Evelyn

All the above bets were taken.

DERBY

34 to 1 agst Deacon	25 to 1 agst Cyprus (t)	33 to 1 agst The Nigger
	33 to 1 agst Melton

THE METROPOLITAN STEEPLE-CHASE.—WEDNESDAY.

HANDICAP of 20 sovs each.—Mr. Elmore's British Yeoman (Mason), 1. Mr. Cawley's Lanquilnet (Reeves), 2.

THE AMATEUR STEEPLE-CHASE STAKES of 5 sovs each, and a whip added.—Mr. Hendley's Ammon (Mr. Edwards), 1. Mr. Steward's Gazette (Owner), 2.

THE KNAPLEY-HILL STAKES of 5 sovs each, and 30 added. Mr. Frank's Sampson (Goodlie), 1. Mr. Scott's Alpheus (Read), 2.

CAEWE GRAND ANNUAL STEEPLE-CHASE.

SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each, with 80 added.—Capt. Thompson's Abd-el-Kader (Canavan), 1. Mr. Henderson's Little Fanny (Fowler), 2.

YORKSHIRE UNION HUNT CLUB MEETING.—TUESDAY.

The RUBBISH HANDICAP of 7 sovs each.—Mr Whiting's Joe Anderson (F. Marsden), 1. Mr. Colingwood's Administrator (Mr. Smith), 2.

The SELLING STAKES of 5 sovs each.—Mr. Meiklam's Poionaise (Col. Richardson), 1. Mr. Ewbank's Fyrland (Capt. Broadley), 2.

The FALLI-NO STAKES of 5 sovs each.—Captain E. Haworth's Woe Mickey (Capt. Broadley), 1. Mr. Meiklam's Cockatil (Col. Richardson), 2.

The SCURRY HANDICAP of 5 sovs each.—Sir R. W. Bulkeley's bl f by Pioca roon (Osborne), 1. Mr. Shepherd's Troublesome Johnny (Dickinson), 2.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A. L. M." Worcester.—As "a general rule," good players consume much more time in playing a game than inferior ones. In the "Chess-Player's Companion" you will find the time of each game, and of most of the moves, in the great match between England and France recorded. The last game occupied fourteen hours.

"Westmonasteriensis."—You have described the position inaccurately. Send a correct diagram, and it shall be duly examined.

"Pippos," Oxford.—Your diagram, which is hardly intelligible (the Chess-board being reversed, and the men ill drawn), is an easy mate in three moves. You will find the opening moves of the "Scotch Gambit" at p. 106 of the little "Chess-player's Text-Book," just published.

"A. Johnson," Oxford. The new Chess-men can be obtained of Speers and Son, in the High street.

"W. S.," York.—Hardly equal to some of your previous efforts

"R. M.," Belgrave-square.—The Chess-player's "Handbook," and the other treatises by the same author, may be easily got in your neighbourhood. Apply at Weston's capital library, in Knightsbridge.

"Spondee." The annual subscription to the St. George's Club is only three guineas for town, and one guinea for country, members; and for this trifling subscription you have the use of a library, reading-room, and free admission to the inestimable attractions of the far-famed Polytechnic Institution, besides the advantage of Chess practice with many of the finest players in Europe.

"A. J. A." Walton Crescent. The King's Bishop's Pawn is more than an equivalent for the odds of the first move; but, to profit by the advantage, you should decline the gambit. See the article on the interchange of odds in the "Chess-Players Companion," p. 63.

"Ruphy Tyro."—We have not space to compare the "Staunton Chess-men" with those called "The Edinburgh," which, we believe, were designed by Lord John Hay; but you will find a very copious notice of the former in the Morning Herald of Nov. 6.

"Sancho."—Of all living players, the palm for pre-eminence in blindfold Chess-playing must be fairly awarded to M. Kieseritzky, who has not only repeatedly conducted two games in this manner at the same time, but has even resisted what to many are considered the fabulous exploits of Philidor, by playing three games at once without seeing any Chess-board.

"Alderman."—1. Mr. Horwitz's terms for Chess tuition may be learnt by addressing a note to him at the George and Vulture Hotel, Lombard-street. We know they are very reasonable. 2. Apply to Williams and Norgate, the foreign booksellers.

"Mr. Pips."—Not later than Wednesday morning.

"E. C.," Liverpool.—Neither Problem 301 nor Problem 302 can be solved in less than the prescribed number of moves.

"Bellary."—Very much superior to the former ones.

"G. S.," Douglas.—A player giving the odds of his Queen, is not prohibited from assuming a second Queen should one of his Pawns reach its final square.

"A Constant Reader," Glasgow, and "Trochilus."—It shall be given next week.

"X. Y. Z."—College, Cambridge.—1. In the diagram sent, White has an equal force to his antagonist's, and little, if any, inferiority of position. Why then should he resign? 2. In the "capped Pawn" game, stalemate, and perpetual check, cause a drawn battle. The Pawn usually elected for the cap is the K Pawn. 3. The Enigmas "won't do."

"Pawn."—Declined

"Episcopus" and others.—In reply to a host of enquirers in the country, we are requested to mention that the illustrated Chess-men are obtainable of Hansburg, Liverpool; of Parnes and of Agnese, Manchester; Mather, Newcastle; Steele and Bax, Norwich; Manning, Worcester, Alder, Cheltenham; and Nightingale, Shrewsbury.

"F. W. A." and "Amateur R." have both failed in their attempts to solve the fine Problem No. 301.

"Lucius."—In the case disputed, B. must retract his moves; and his King being then stalemated, the game is drawn.

"Agricola."—The "Edinburgh" pattern.

"Orus."—You were quite justified in playing your Pawn forward in the case mentioned, despite of anything Hoyle, who is no authority upon Chess, may say to the contrary.

Solutions by "J. L. S.," "J. R. R.," "P. G. R." "Otho," "G. M.," "Mr. Pope," "Carlo Follero," "S. U.," "Brutus," "Zeno," "Alice," "J. B. D.," "One of the D. Dan," "Tolaech," "H. B." "An Amateur," Manchester, "J. T. L.," "W. B." "M. E. R.," "Julius Cæsar," "The Rev. R. M.," "G. M. G.," "Otho," "D. D.," Oxford, "B. A.," Oxford, "Rev. M. S.," "Rex — D.," "Rugby Bonus," "G. A. B.," Leeds, "J. N. L.," "W. C." "A. E.," "J. D. S.," Hushing, are correct. Those by "H. H. G.," "Melicius," "Omicron," "Guwanus," "B. S. M.," "Pawn," "B. W. F.," "Ramsgate," "R. S. C.," "Inverlik," "R. V." "Junius," "Geo," "E. S. M.," are wrong.

 Want of space again obliges us to defer the answers to numerous Correspondents.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 301.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Kt 3d (ch)	K to his 8th (best)	3. Q to K 7th	Anything
2. Q to K 8th	P to Q K 4th	Kt or Q mates

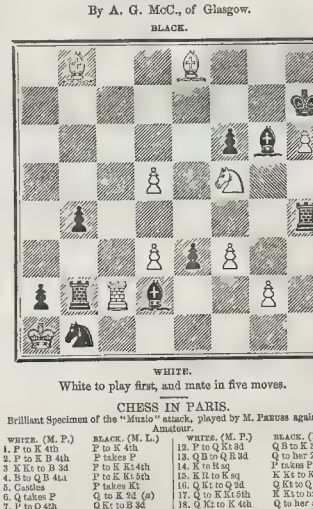
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 302.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to Q 7th	K to K B sq (best)	3. Kt to Q B 6th (ch)	K to his 3d
2. R to Q 8th (ch)	K to his 3d	4. R to Q 6th—Mate

PROBLEM No. 303.

By A. G. McC., of Glasgow.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play first, and mate in five moves.

CHESS IN PARIS.

Brilliant Specimen of the "Muzio" attack, played by M. PERUSS against an Amateur.

WHITE. (M. P.)	BLACK. (M. L.)	WHITE. (M. P.)	BLACK. (M. L.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	12. P to Q Kt 3d	Q R to K 3d
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P	13. Q B to Q R 3d	Q to her 2d
3. K Kt to B 3d	P to K Kt 4th	14. K to Kt sq	P takes P (b)
4. B to Q B 4th	P to K Kt 5th	15. K R to K sq	K Kt to K 2d
5. Castles	P takes Kt	16. Q Kt to Q 2d	Q Kt to Q B 3d
6. Q takes P	Q to K 2d (a)	17. Q to K Kt 5th	K Kt to his 3d
7. P to Q 4th	Q Kt to B 3d	18. Q Kt to K 6th	Q to her sq
8. Q takes P	Q Kt to Q sq	19. Q to K B 5th (c)	Q Kt to K 2d
9. Q takes Q B P	P to Q 3d	20. Kt to K B 6th (ch)	K to B sq
10. Q to her R 8th	K B to K Kt 2d	21. R takes B	Q R to Q B sq
11. P to K 5th	P takes P

And White gave mate in four moves.

(a) This feeble line of defence is much inferior to the recognised one, arising from Q to K B 3d.
(b) K takes K R, with the view to Castle presently, seems better play.
(c) Insidious. If Black take the Q, he is mated next move.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 494.—By CARLO FOLIERO.

White: K at his sq, Bs at K Kt 3d and 6th; Ps at K Kt 6th, K B 3d, and K 2d.
Black: K at his 6th; Ps at K Kt 2nd, K B 4th, and K 3d.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 495. By L'ANONYME DE LILLE.

White: K at his B 4th, B at Q Kt 5th, Kts at K 6th and Q 5th, P at Q B 6th.
Black: K at his sq, P at Q 3d.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

No. 496.—By A. B. SKIPWORTH.

White: K at his R 4th, B at K Kt sq, Kt at K B sq; Ps at K 2d and 4th, and Q B 5th.
Black: K at his B 5th; Ps at K 4th, K B 4th, and Q B 2d.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

At the Privy Council on Tuesday last, Thursday next, the 15th inst., was appointed as a general day of thanksgiving on account of the cessation of the cholera throughout the United Kingdom.

The floors of the Bankruptcy Court, which were covered with the patent kamptulicon about five years since, in order to deaden the sound, are undergoing partial repair. The wear of this extraordinary mechanical production appears to have given great satisfaction.

The annual soirée of the Leeds Mechanics Institution was held on Friday evening week, at the Stock Exchange Hall in that town. Speeches were delivered by Mr. M. Milne, M.P., Mr. Rochuck, M.P., Lord Mahon, M.P. (who occupied the chair), and resolutions in support of the objects of the institution were adopted.

The weavers at Gorton-mill, Ashton, have turned out, having been offered a reduction of a halfpenny a cut. The reduction has some connexion with patent looms, which are considered to confer certain advantages upon the weaver.

The treasurer of King's College Hospital, on Saturday, received the handsome donation of £100 from Mrs. E. M. Chandler, towar s the liquidation of the expenses incurred by the reception and treatment of cholera patients during the prevalence of the epidemic. This is the fifth contribution of a similar kind made by the same lady towards the laudable objects of King's College Hospital.

William Hulme died suddenly on the 27th ult. at the White Chimneys, near Leek, aged 38. The deceased was the captor of Smith O'Brien, for which he received the Government reward of £500.

A large shoal of herrings has set in at Scalpa, between Syke and the mainland; each boat engaged has averaged forty barrels per night for some nights. The price is only 2s. per cran.

A few days ago, Messrs. Harvey, of Regent-street, jewellers, received a letter bearing the Newcastle post-mark, containing a pearl brooch and a part of a pair of pearl earrings, the tops having remained and large pearls removed, with the following laconic remark "Stolen from you nearly twenty years ago."

The Marquis of Cholmondeley, at his half-yearly audit, last week, made a return of 10 per cent, on the rents of his Cheshire tenantry, owing to the reduced price obtainable for all agricultural produce.

There is at present to be seen in the village of Coniston, Westmoreland, the rare sight of a woman nursing her great-great-grandchild. The name of the great-great-grandmother is Mary Tyson, and she looks fresh enough to warrant the expectation that she may live to see yet another generation.

The colliers of the Ashton district continue to hold meetings to organise their duty. They assert that their wages are at starvation point.

Ambrose Tomlinson, of Leeds, who was convicted at the Yorkshire Ass ses held in August, 1848, of uttering a seditious speech at Bradford, and sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment, has been set at liberty, along with some of the other Chartists convicted at the same assizes.

The Bishop of Norwich, Dr. Hinds, has given £50 for one year to the support of Miss Stanley's clothing club.

Goulburn new church was opened by the Lord Bishop of Chester last week. A church has long been wanted in this neighbourhood, and the present erection is regarded as a great boon by the inhabitants.

Last week, at a meeting held in the vestry of All Saints' Church, Derby, for the purpose of considering the necessity of augmenting that living by the erection of a parsonage-house, and to find money for an additional curate, the sum of £650 was collected in the vestry in a few minutes for that laudable purpose.

The rolls of the unclaimed shares of the 16th Lancers and 18th Light Infantry of the prize money granted for the capture of Ghuznee have been received at the East India House from Bengal, the total amount remaining unpaid to the officers and men of these regiments is £1800 11s. 1d.

The United East India Service Club has, it is understood, taken the mansion in St. James's-square formerly occupied by the Free Trade Club, paying £3900 for the lease and fixtures. The Marquis of Dalhousie and General Sir Charles Nayer are to become presidents of the club.

Gold dust and dollars from California continue to find their way to this country. Her Majesty's ship Constance left Valparaiso, August 28th, for Portsmouth, with 1,750,000 dollars in freight, and is expected to reach Spithead in 75 days. Her Majesty's ship Pandora left Valparaiso, August 9th, with 50,000 dollars worth of gold dust, consigned to Mr. Robertson, of Shaw and Maxwell's, Salisbury-street, Strand.

The Admiralty have ordered that, in future, the issue of life-buoys to her Majesty's ships shall be two to first, second, third, and fourth rates, and one only to all other vessels

The Board of the Admiralty have given permission to Mr. Hay, the Admiralty chemist, to take out a patent for his valuable and successful composition for preserving the bottoms of iron ships from accumulations and corrosion.

Measures are at present in progress for the repair of the martello tower erected to the east of Leith harbour, with the view of mounting a battery of guns upon it, and having it garrisoned by a small body of troops. We believe the guns will be mounted on swivels, so as to command the whole range of the Firth.

We are sorry to learn that the Duke of Newcastle has been suffering from severe indisposition, but from the latest account received we trust his Grace may be considered out of danger.

On Tuesday, at eleven o'clock, a messenger from the Home Office arrived at Horsemonger-lane Gaol, bearing a respite, during her Majesty's pleasure, for the convict Alfred Stanley Cardus, aged 20, a youth who was lately capitally convicted of attempting to murder a female in Dulwich-wood.

At the late calamitous fire at Combury House (Lord Churchill's), a box containing valuable records relating to the illustrious hero, the ancestor of the noble Lord, perished in the conflagration, though strenuous efforts were made for its preservation.

Four ships recently started from Liverpool together, and arrived off New York together, having never lost sight of one another during the passage.

The Hungarian Vocalists are touring in Scotland, where their singing is greatly admired. Four of the twelve who formed the choir last season in London are returned to their native country since the cessation of hostilities, but the original party of students, eight in number, are still united, and will shortly return to London, and subsequently visit Spain.

On Tuesday, at Windsor, it was ordered, by her Majesty in Council, that the Parliament, which stands prorogued to Tuesday, the 20th instant, be further prorogued to Wednesday, the 16th day of January next.

On Monday, the 5th inst., a general assembly of the academicians was held at the Royal Academy of Arts in Trafalgar-square, when Mr. John Henry Foley was elected an associate of that institution.

His excellency Sir Henry Lytton Bulwer, the newly-appointed British Minister to the United States, accompanied by the Hon. Lady Bulwer, and his nephew, Mr. T. Bulwer Lytton, left town on Wednesday for Portsmouth, there to embark on board her Majesty's ship Hecate, for New York.

Mr. Richard Somerset, son of General Lord Fitzroy Somerset, late secretary to the General Sir Colin Campbell, Governor of Ceylon, has accepted the post of Private Secretary to his Majesty the King of Hanover, and is on the eve of leaving for Germany

Mr. Dyce Sombre, it is understood, is still dissatisfied with the restrictions on his person and property imposed by the Commissioners of Lunacy, and it is said that he is preparing a petition to the Lord Chancellor for another medical and judicial investigation.

Mr. Wingfield, one of the Masters in Chancery, and the father-in-law of the Lord Chancellor, has resigned his office. This makes the second vacancy; however, it is generally believed that there is an understanding that the Masters will be limited to their now existing number.

A great military parade was held at Washington (United States), on the 19th ult., to commemorate the anniversary of General Cornwallis's surrender

Viscount Brackley is daily regaining his strength, and progressing very satisfactorily towards convalescence.

The Robert Burns Masonic Ball was held at the Freemasons' Hall on Monday evening last, the 5th instant, and was very numerously and fashionably attended.

The Carlisle Journal says that a sportsman who was lately seeking game in the neighbourhood of Williamstone started a rabbit, which was instantly chased by a large hawk that darted from a neighbouring thicket; but at the moment when the bird was pouncing on its prey the sportsman fired, and killed both the hawk and rabbit with the charge of one barrel of his gun.

Her Majesty's steam-vessel Stromboli has been ordered to proceed from Devonport, for the home-and-home trade.

The chief officer of one of the public departments at Portsmouth, feeling annoyed one morning recently that the convict labourers had not come to work at the proper hour, sent a boat to enquire the reason, when he was informed the gang was engaged at the algebra class, and could not be sent on shore.

A monument is about to be erected by the press of New York to the memory of Dr. J. A. Houston, late short-hand writer to Congress. Dr. Houston was from the north of Ireland, and was but a few years in the States

The Bishop of Rupert's Land, and family, who sailed from the Thames in the Hudson's Bay Company's ship Prince Rupert, on the 7th of June and from Stromness, Orkneys, on the 28th, arrived safely, and in good health, at York Fort, Hudson's Bay, on the 16th of August. The Bishop was about leaving York fort for the Red River Settlement on the 29th of August, where he expected to arrive about the 25th of September.

"A few days ago," says a Vienna letter of the 31st ult., "as the Emperor was leaving the Opera with his mother, the Archduchess Sophia, a man suddenly presented himself before her, and asked, "Where is the Emperor?" The Archduchess, frightened, answered, "at Schönbrunn." The same evening, the man went to the palace and demanded an audience, but he was told to return the next day. It turned out, on inquiry, that he was an escaped lunatic, named Darras. He was secured.

LIEUT. NELSON VOLUNTEERING TO BOARD A PRIZE IN A VIOLENT GALE, NOV. 20, 1777.—PAINTED BY B. WEST, P.R.A.

CURIOSITIES.—IX.

BED AND CHAIR OF NAPOLEON.

These "curiosities" were sold at the recent dispersion c. articles of interest and vertu at Brockley Hall, an Illustrated notice of which appeared in our Journal for the 27th ult.

The Bed and Chair were once the property of the Emperor Napoleon, and were brought from Malmaison. They are treasurable on this account; their style (that of the Empire) being as little worthy of commendation as that of any period in modern or ancient art.

NAPOLEON'S BEDSTEAD AND CHAIR, FROM BROCKLEY HALL.

NAVAL GALLERY, GREENWICH HOSPITAL.

A very interesting addition has lately been made to this gallery of the memorials of the eminent services of the Royal Navy, in eight pictures, which have been purchased by subscription, and presented to the Hospital, Mr. Jasper de St. Croix being the principal subscriber.

The several pictures, which are placed in a room to the left of the Upper Hall, are as follow:—

1. Horatio Nelson, Midshipman, 1773; adventure with a bear. By R. Westall, R.A.
2. Horatio Nelson, Lieutenant, volunteering to board a Prize in a violent gale, November 20, 1777. By B. West, P.R.A.
3. The San Nicholas and San Josef carried by boarding, February 14, 1797. By R. Westall, R.A.
4. Rear-Admiral Nelson's conflict with a Spanish launch, July 3, 1796. By R. Westall, R.A.
5. Sir Horatio Nelson, wounded at Teneriffe, July 24, 1797.
6. Portrait of Admiral Lord Viscount Nelson, K.B., aged 43, 1798. By F. L. Abbot.—Unfinished.
7. Lord Nelson in the Victory's cockpit, mortally wounded, Oct. 21, 1805. By B. West, P.R.A.
8. Apotheosis of Nelson. By B. West, P.R.A.

We have engraved the second picture.

The incident took place soon after Nelson had received his commission as Second Lieutenant of the Lowestoffe frigate, Captain William Locker, then fitting out for Jamaica. The scene is thus described in Southey's Life of the hero:—

"American, and French privateers under American colours, were at that time harassing our trade in the West Indies: even a frigate was not sufficiently active for Nelson, and he repeatedly got appointed to the command of one of the Lowestoffe's tenders. During one of their cruises the Lowestoffe captured an American letter-of-marque: it was blowing a gale, and a heavy sea running. The First Lieutenant being ordered to board the prize, went below to put on his hanger. It happened to be mislaid, and, while he was seeking it, Captain Locker came on deck. Perceiving the boat still alongside, and in danger every moment of being swamped, and being extremely anxious that the privateer should be instantly taken in charge, because he feared that it would otherwise founder, he exclaimed, 'Have I no officer in the ship who can board the prize?' Nelson did not offer himself immediately, waiting, with his usual sense of propriety, for the first lieutenant's return; but, hearing the master volunteer, he jumped into the boat, saying, 'It is my turn now; and if I come back, it is yours.' The American, who had carried a heavy press of sail, in hope of escaping, was so completely water-logged, that the Lowestoffe's boat went in on deck, and out again with the sea."

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Admiral Sir Byam Martin, G.C.B., succeeds Sir J. Hawkins Whitshed as Admiral of the Fleet. Sir Byam Martin received, as half-pay of Admiral of the Red, and as Vice-Admiral of the United Kingdom, £1200 11s. 9d. per annum; as Admiral of the Fleet, he receives only £1149 5s. per annum; thereby losing £51 6s. 9d. by the advancement.

Naval Aide-de-Camp to the Queen.—By the promotion of Capt. Berkeley to the rank of Rear-Admiral, an appointment of aide-de-camp to the Queen becomes vacant, Capt. A. L. Corry having succeeded to the paid division. Capt. the Hon. Henry John Rous has been appointed to the honorary distinction

The Right Hon. the Earl of Hardwicke has resigned the command of her Majesty's ship Vengeance, 84, in Sir William Parker's fleet in the Mediterranean, and will be succeeded by Captain Sir H. M. Blackwood, Bart. The noble Earl, we understand, joins the Countess and his family at Naples, and returns to England.

Iron Ships.—The effect of musketry and shot upon iron vessels has been an object of test during the past few days on board her Majesty's ship Excellent, in Portsmouth harbour. Some sheets of iron, of the same thickness as those used in the building of iron vessels, have been placed at certain distances from the ship, and musketry, and grape and canister fired at them. At forty yards' distance the musket ball, with the common charge of powder in the weapon, has penetrated completely the iron, leaving a perfectly round hole; case shot, at 200 yards, completely penetrated the iron of half and three-quarter inch thickness, showing that even at the most ordinary distances the balls of the most commonplace weapons will completely penetrate the iron side of a ship, leaving her in a slavelike state, and all on board at the mercy of such an anti-protective habitation. Admiral Prescott and numerous other officers inspected the results of these important experiments in the dockyard to-day.

Vacant Colonelcies.—By the deaths of Sir George Anson and Sir John Ormsley Vandeleur, the colonelcies of two distinguished regiments fall to the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief; viz. the 4th Royal Irish Dragoon Guards and the 16th Lancers

New Practice Battery at Fort Cumberland.—The Admiralty have decided on proceeding with the new Marine Artillery practice battery at Fort Cumberland, near Portsmouth. Mr. Bramble's tender for the construction of it has been accepted by their Lordships, and it will be commenced immediately.

Superintendentship of Devonport Dockyard.—Lord John Hay, C.B., M.P. for Windsor, is appointed to Devonport Dockyard, to succeed Vice-Admiral Sir John Louis. This appointment creates a vacancy in the representation of the borough of Windsor.

New Dock at Portsmouth.—On Saturday afternoon a new large building or repairing dock, in connexion with the new basin, was added to the other stupendous works completed in Portsmouth arsenal. The cost of its completion is furnished by the engineer officer in charge of the Government works (Captain James, R.N.) as about £70,000. The following items of dimensions and quantities of material used in building this dock (furnished by the same office) will prove interesting:—Length, 305 feet; breadth, 80; depth from the coping, 32; water in area at lowest spring tides, 21. Materials used: Purbeck stone, 30,800 cubic feet; beech timber, 52,800; Portland stone, 10,300; granite, 119,960. Shingle, 16,660 tons. Bricks, 2,954,900. Iron used in pile shoes, &c., 1018 cwt. Two other docks at the extremity of the basin opposite the above are in progress of construction, and will be opened for use the latter end of next year.

The Vernon Gallery.—Every one must heartily sympathise with Mr. Hart, at finding one of his best pictures, if not his very best, injured, however slightly, by the carelessness of the draughtsman—for draughtsman he must have been, not engraver. But though this accident is one of sincere regret to all lovers of art, we should have left the injurer to his deserved fate, in being dismissed, were it not that it affords another point of higher consideration, that it is an additional proof of the perfect unfitness of this black hole for the reception of works of art. It is well known that a certain resinous substance, called asphalrum or bitumen, is one of the pigments most in use by the colourists of the English school. It is also well known that heat has the tendency of mollifying this substance; and probably from this cause the draughtsman, who may hitherto have applied his squaring lines with impunity, in this instance placed them in contact with the softened surface of the picture. The atmosphere that pervades the Vernon Gallery is often close, not to use a more offensive expression, from the immense concourse of people, first; secondly, from the smallness of the rooms and the lights being exposed to the sun all day. Unfortunately, this is not the first instance of mischief from this cause. The case d'oeuvre of Hilton has suffered in the same way. One fine day long black streaks of bitumen quietly slid over the female figure: the picture was taken away and put upside down, and has never been seen since. It is high time that something be done to secure the pictures from danger resulting from accident or carelessness. The atmosphere is first to be looked to, and we should strongly recommend the putting up of a thermometer, as well as some more efficient means to protect pictures from the pokes and scrapes of the rushing public. The surface of Mr. Webster's beautiful picture of the "Dame School" is, in our opinion, scratched far worse than Mr Hart's; as in the latter the regular stripes are over a piece of carpet and rabbit's gown, whereas in Mr. Webster's the scratch is over one of the boy's faces. It will always be the case, as long as the pictures remain in this den.—Daily News.

A Pirated Copy of Byron's Works, with Notes.—A naval officer had recently taken from his baggage, by the authorities of the revenue, a copy of the whole of the works of Byron in one volume, which had been printed and published in Paris, and being a foreign reprint of a work which was the copyright of an eminent English publisher, was a pirated edition, and therefore prohibited to be imported into this country under the provisions of the Act for the protection of English copyright at present in force. This pirated copy of the works of the noble poet was of more than common interest and value, as it contained an actual manuscript letter of some length from Byron to the editor of a celebrated Parisian print, from Venice, dated in the year 1818, disclaiming, in a very witty and humorous manner, the authorship of a work which had been ascribed to his pen by the journal in question, and commented upon as such in a critical notice. In another part of this copy was interleaved some of the manuscript writing of his "Childe Harold," with the corrections of the noble author in their original state. How these interesting mementoes of this gifted writer became incorporated with this foreign copy of his work it is difficult to conjecture, but, as may be supposed, it added greatly to its intrinsic value, and the owner of the copyright kindly gave his necessary permission for the book to be restored to the owner by the authorities, under the circumstance of its having been in his possession for some time, and in order to prevent so valuable a book being destroyed.

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto the Right Hon. Sir James Duke, Knight, Lord Mayor of the city of London, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

On Monday night, Mr. Serjeant, a portrait painter, residing in Seymour-street, Somers Town, in the north of the metropolis, was crossing the fields from Highgate to Kentish Town, when he was suddenly attacked by three foot-pads, who knocked him down, and took from his person a purse, containing a £5 note, three sovereigns, 15s. in silver, and a gold watch and chain. They made off, pursued by Mr. Serjeant, whose cries brought others to his assistance, but the fellows escaped.

SCENE FROM THE NEW OPERA "KING CHARLES THE SECOND," BY MR. MACFARREN, AT THE PRINCESS' THEATRE.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY, LEVERSTOCK GREEN, NEAR ST. ALBAN'S, HERTS.

This Church was consecrated on the 30th October, by the Lord Bishop of Rochester. Its erection originated in the munificence of the Earl of Verulam, who presented the site, and a large sum towards the cost of the building.

The edifice is constructed in a substantial manner, and consists of a well-designed chancel, with vestry on the north side; a nave, north and south aisles, and south porch. The bells are hung in a double bell cot, at the west end. The style of the architecture is of the early part of the fourteenth century. The body of the church affords accommodation for four hundred persons in open benches, but at least six hundred were present on the day of consecration. After this impressive ceremony, the service of the day was performed by the Rev. Mr. Hutchinson; and an excellent sermon was delivered by the Hon. and Rev. Edward H. Grimston. The design of the Church, which has given universal satisfaction, was prepared, more than three years since, by Messrs. Hamand and J. Arthur Brandon, and has been carried out by the elder after the lamented decease of his brother.

Adjoining the Church is the Rectory-house, also built from the design, and under the superintendence of the same architect: it is a commodious and appropriate structure.

NEW CHURCH AT LEVERSTOCK GREEN.

Dreadful Steam-boat Explosion in Belgium.—A deplorable and fatal accident took place last week at Bois-le-duc, in Belgium, by which many lives were sacrificed. The boiler of the steam-boat Jan van Arkel blew up just as it was leaving the pier; the shock was so great that it was felt all over the town, and the inhabitants rushed from their houses fearing that an earthquake had taken place. The steamer was literally demolished. Eight corpses have been found, and nine persons are mortally wounded: it is feared more lives are lost, as several persons are still missing. The boiler blew up with such force that a portion of it, weighing upwards of a ton, was thrown over the houses on the quay; another portion was thrown to a distance of 200 paces. Three persons were blown into the air and fell in different directions, horribly mutilated. It is not known how the accident originated.

The African Slave-trade.—On Monday last, an address was presented to Mr. W. Hutt, M.P., in the Guildhall, Newcastle-on-Tyne, by the Mayor of Gateshead, on behalf of the admirers of the hon. gentleman's parliamentary exertions to abolish the slave blockade on the coast of Africa. The address, which strongly insisted on the inutility, impolicy, and extravagance of the coast squadron, as far as any substantial mitigation of the horrors of slavery was concerned, having been read, Mr. Hutt, in the course of a long reply, repeated those views which he had so often enforced in his place in Parliament; and, having deplored the ill success of his recent efforts to impress them on Government, and the tendency which was so plainly visible to maintain and augment the squadron, promised the meeting that he would, at an early period next session, when the expiration of the French slave treaty, must bring the whole question before Parliament, submit a motion to elicit their deliberate opinion upon it.

The suspension-bridge across the river Ohio at Wheeling, Virginia, (United States), has been just completed by the contractor, Mr. Ellett, who was himself the first to cross in a carriage. There were great rejoicings on the occasion.

PRINCESS' THEATRE.

Our Engraving represents the Banqueting Hall at Whitehall, brilliantly illuminated. It is the last scene of the opera. The Queen (Mrs. Weiss) and King Charles (Mr. Harrison) are seated, with Rochester (Mr H. Corri) near them, at a table, playing chess—the King anxious to avoid being seen by Fanny (Miss Louisa Pyne) and Captain Coop (Mr. Weiss), who are presented to his Majesty by Julian, the Queen's page (Mdme. Macfarren), in order to restore the watch left by the King the previous night at Wapping to pay the reckoning. The ladies and courtiers are in the background. The situation has been treated by the composer in the form of a sestet and chorus, and is one of the finest concerted pieces in the opera; the intercalated romance, so charmingly sung by Miss Pyne, "A poor simple maiden am I," always receiving a double encore Mr. Macfarren's opera has proved a decided success.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON, PAST AND PRESENT.

BY THOMAS MILLER.

CHAPTER XVII.

BILLINGSGATE, AND THE OLD NEIGHBOURHOOD OF THAMES-STREET.

It is on record that the old ports or quays of Billingsgate and Queenhithe were the cause of as many squabbles in ancient days as were ever witnessed in our own times by any two rival companies struggling for pre-eminence; for when the customs derived from the latter furnished the Queen of Henry III. with pin-money, a sharp look-out was kept on the river, and fines frequently inflicted on masters of vessels who landed their fish at Billingsgate instead of the Royal quay. But great London soon burst through all these restraints—the old merchants were proof even against Royal mandates—they objected to passing through the dangerous arches of the crazy old bridge—so at last obtained the privilege of landing goods at whichever quay they pleased.

Those ancient fishmongers must have been able to muster together a goodly company; for, on hearing of the victory Edward I. had obtained over the Scots, they paraded the City with above a thousand horsemen; trumpets sounding, and banners streaming, on which were emblazoned their quaint old arms, and followed by all the pride of their honourable guild.

What a stir there must have been about Fish-street, and Fish-street-hill, and all along the line of what now forms Thames-street, when that famous fishmonger, Walworth, Lord Mayor of London, slew Wat Tyler in Smithfield, and thus at one blow cut off the "head and front" of the great rebellion. What a running to and fro, and shaking of hands, there must have been! What talking along the dusky quays about privileges which would be extended to their own company, and which none other would be allowed to share! And what disappointment must have been depicted on their countenances when they found that all the reward the City was to receive was an addition to its arms! If true, it was like giving the chaff to him that separated it from the wheat.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON.—THE FISH-MARKET, BILLINGSGATE.

Those who were purveyors to the Court had, in former times, the first pickings of the market; not a single fish was allowed to be sold until they had been served. We can picture the swagger with which the officers of the Royal household entered the fish-market in those days, when a banquet was about to be given in the Tower. What pushing and cramming would there be to obtain a nod of recognition, now recommending the quality of some fish, then inquiring when the next execution would take place; their conversation shifting from the salmon to the scaffold—from oysters, which in those primitive times sold for twopence a bushel, to the means of obtaining the best place when the next nobleman was beheaded.

There was a struggle for free trade in those high narrow streets five hundred years ago; from Billingsgate to Queenhithe all was a scene of commotion, for the great fishmongers were aiming at monopoly, but the poor hawkers who picked up their living, as they do in our day, by carrying fish in the streets, rose in a body, and so far carried the day that they were allowed to hawk fish, but not to keep a stall, nor stay in any of the streets a moment longer than while supplying their chance customers, for there was a strict police ever on the look out after the poor hawkers, and the command of "Now then, move on there," is nothing new. Nor were the fishmongers themselves free from "most biting laws;" for they were only allowed, at one period, to take a penny profit in every shilling, not to offer the same fish for sale (as fresh) a second day, nor to water their fish more than twice a-day. If they did, and were found out, there stood the stocks ever in readiness, and up went the beam, and in went their legs; and there they were compelled to sit for the given time, no doubt to the great merriment of many of the bystanders. Their stalls in these primitive times were only boards placed beside the pavement. From these they got to erecting little sheds, then shops and high houses But the fronts of these were ordered to be left open, and the like: except they could not allow sales to take place in dark and obscure spots; all must be done in the open noon of day, or heavy penalties be paid for offending against the laws.

In remote times, long before the Norman invasion, frequent mention is made of the English Fisheries. To three plough-lands in Kent, a fishery on the Thames is added. Ethelbert gave a piece of land for the use of taking fish, and 40 acres were given with fishing, on the condition of every year receiving 50 salmon. The rent of land was frequently paid in eels; and in Elphit's dialogues, written for the instruction of the Saxon youths, we find that the implements used were nets, rods, lines, and baited hooks, which varied but little from those of the present time.

Those who have once reached the Monument, may "smell" their way to Billingsgate; for there is an old monastic odour about the shops, recalling Lent and stock fish, and telling you that you are hemmed in with smoked haddock and salted herrings—which, when nothing else could be had, it must have been a heavy penance to have lived upon, and caused the poor sinner to have made many a wry face while devouring such dry and thirsty food. Once in Thames-street, and you are in a busier locality. You come in contact with big men, bending beneath bulky hoops; rags hogsheads swing high above you, and make you tremble as you look up, while treading the slippery pavement; and you know that if the crane-chain were to slip, or the hooks to which the ponderous packages are affixed give way, you must be crushed like an egg which an elephant tramples upon; for danger ever dangles in the air about Billingsgate. The pavement is often blocked up by barrels of oranges and herrings, and hampers of dried sprats, the latter crammed together as close as white-bait in the stomach of an Alderman when he has just dined at Lovegrove's. Sometimes the atmosphere is so impregnated with the smell of shrimps, that you almost fancy it has been raining shrimp sauce. You are now, as it were, in the very manufactory, where fish are brought and emptied out to be sold, where there is no attempt at show; but, rough and shining as when they flapped about on the ocean sand or were thrown from the first hand ashore, so do you see them here in the early morning—rough and fresh as potatoes just dug out of the mould. There is none of that clean blue twilight-look which gleams and plays about the shops of the West-end fishmongers, and is sometimes enlivened by the sunny flash of the gold-fishes that float about the silver-looking globes, which give such a picturesque appearance to the shops in that more refined neighbourhood. Here all is of "the dark."

To this "rough and ready" market, those who wish to see how matters are managed must come early; for a minute or two before five o'clock the wholesale dealers are seated in their stalls, or recesses; while at the end of the market, nearest the river, the porters are drawn up in a row, each ready with his fleet of fish—each crate numbered within like-coloured line, like hounds eager to spring from the leash. The clock strikes, and off they rush, helter-skelter, every man Jack putting his best leg foremost, each eager to be the first to reach the stall of his employer. Slap goes the skate out of the baskets—they shoot out cod like coke, pitching the plaice wherever they can find room, and in a few minutes another load, at the same rapid pace, nor cease until the salesman has received the whole of his stock.

Then the sale commences, the seller fixing his price, and the buyer offering what he considers to be the value; sometimes they "meet each other half way," as it is called, lowering and the price advancing. The fish are generally sold in lots, without being weighed, and it requires good judgment on both sides to reach the right mark. Although there are so many salesmen, and generally such ample choice, the prices vary much, as fish brought from one part of the coast are often superior to what come from another.

But the fun of the market commences with the hawkers, when they come in to see what has been left by the large retail dealers: then you may hear a little of what is called "Billingsgate;" though, instead of the old renowned blackguardism, it is generally most good-natured "chaff."

"Fresh does you call these?" says one, who finds the price too high for him. "Look how they rolls up the whites of their eyes, as if they vanted a little rain. I should say they has'nt had a blessed smell of water for this week past.

"Think I've been robbing somebody," says another. "Vy, bless you, all the whole bilin' of my customers hasn't got so much amongst them as would buy the lot—no, not if they sold their toothpicks."

Billingsgate is more like a wholesale warehouse than a fish-market, although you may purchase a single mackerel in it. The hundreds of carts which are drawn up in Thames-street, proclaim how far and wide the produce of river and ocean is dispersed. From the next street to the most remote suburb are the loads of fish borne, to be washed and laid out temptingly in the thousands of shops which abound in London and the surrounding suburbs. Nor is the supply limited to this circle: the rapid trains carry off tons of fish to the distant towns, where they arrive in time enough for dinner; thus sending into the country that the turbot and salmon as fresh as we receive it in the metropolis; for what are a hundred miles on the great railways?

Old Billingsgate will soon be pulled down; the muddy dock, where so many fishing-smacks have been harboured, will be filled up; and instead of the old-fashioned, dirty, and inconvenient buildings, a pile will be erected more befitting the greatest city in the world—more like the noble edifice which graced our columns last week, when the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal partook of our "City fare."

Eels cannot be brought to Billingsgate in such perfection as they formerly were. We have now before us a Parliamentary Report, given in about twenty-one years ago, complaining of the poisonous state of the Thames. The following evidence of Mr. Butcher, a fish-salesman, and agent for Dutch vessels, will be interesting at this moment:—

"Eight Dutch vessels arrived at Gravesend with full cargoes of healthy eels, in July, 1827, and the following is the state in which they reached the London market:—

First ..	16,000 lb.	..	Reached market alive ..	4000 lb.
Second ..	14,000 „	..	„ ..	4000 „
Third ..	12,000 „	..	„ ..	3000 „
Fourth ..	14,000 „	..	„ about ..	4000 „

And so on, in proportion—but little more than a fourth of the cargo being marketed alive."

Mr. Butcher stated to the commissioners, that, in 1815 (or twelve years before), "one of these vessels seldom lost more than thirty pounds weight of eels in a night in coming up the river; but that the water had become so bad, that, as it flowed through the wells in the bottom of the vessels, it poisoned the eels, and the quantity which died was more than three times the quantity marketed."

Another witness (James Newland, master of a vessel, and sixteen years in the trade) says:—"Eels have not lived in Thames water as they did formerly. First observed the difference five or six years ago (before 1827), and finds it get worse every summer. Other fish are also affected by bad water, and will endeavour to get out of it on to pieces of floating wood."

Another witness says, "An hour after high water, eels will die in so short a time that I have had 3000 lb. weight dead in half an hour."

"I have seen flounders," says Thomas Heathcote, "put up their heads above the water, and if there was a bundle of weeds in the river they would get on it out of the water."

Mr. John Goldham, the yeoman of Billingsgate, deposed, that, "A clerk of the market, it was his business to ascertain the quality of fish, and seize and condemn that which was bad; that, twenty-five years ago (1802), above and below London-bridge, between Deptford and Richmond, 400 fishermen, each having a boy and boat, gained their livelihood by fishing in the river; that he had known them take 3000 smelt and ten salmon at one haul: the Thames salmon were then the best, and frequently sold for 3s. or 4s. a pound; now, the fishery is gone."

The further evidence of Mr. John Goldham is at this time so important, that we have given it in a note below,* only adding that Sir Francis Burdett presided at the meeting held in Westminster, which was the cause of the Commission being appointed.

As early as 1807, the Earl of Lincoln complained before Parliament that the river of Wells (Walbrook, Clement's Well, Skinner's Well, Clerk's Well, Holy Well, &c.), running into the Thames, was obstructed by "filth of the worst description, and such others." On this complaint being made, the river was ordered to be cleansed.

Honest old Stowe says of the Thames in his day, "What should I speak of the fat and sweet salmons daily taken in this stream, and that in such plenty (after the time of smelt is past) as no river in Europe is able to exceed it? But what store also of barbels, trouts, chevens, perches, smelts, breams, roaches, daces, gudgeons, flounders, shrimps, eels, &c., are commonly to be had therein! I refer me to them that know by experience better than I, by reason of their daily trade of fishing in the same. And albeit it seemeth from time to time to be as it were defrauded in sundry wise of these her large commodities, by the insatiable avarice of fishers, yet this famous river complaineth commonly of no want, but the more it loseth at one time it gaineth at another."

The immense traffic carried on in the winding Thames will never allow of its being stored with "fat sweet" fish as in Stowe's time, but still we hope the great changes which are in progress will, at least, turn this mighty common sewer into something more like the ancient "silver Thames" which our old poets sang about, and prevent so many dead and dying eels being baked up into pies, and devoured by the poor purchasers of these dangerous dainties, as there now are.

Mr. Simon's annual report to the City Commissioners of Sewers will, if we mistake not, place the wards surrounding the inhabitants of London to agitate for pure air and sweet water, than any other remonstrance has hitherto done. It is clearly, ably, and powerfully drawn up; and done in such terse and simple language, that a child can understand it.

* "What do you attribute as the cause of the loss of this fishery?"

"First, the Docks. Near the West India Docks there was an inlet of ten or twelve feet water, where the vessels used to resort; but the gates of the dock being occasionally opened, the water was let out, which was very impure, the bilge-water and the effect of the copper-bottomed vessels, and this I consider as the cause why all the smelts have left this spot. This water is so impure, that if a man falls into it, it generally proves fatal. Another reason is, that all the common sewers run into the Thames."

"Was it not always so?"

"No. There are now a much greater number of drains, which run into the common sewers, as well as privies and water-closets. Formerly the scavengers used to carry away the soil at night, but that practice has of late years been much diminished. The filth that they used to carry away is passed by the drains into the sewers. In the river, at Billingsgate, we have many Dutch boats full of eels; I have been on board and seen 4000 alive in the wells and coffs, and the next morning three-fourths have been dead; and the same proportion of loss has been sustained by all the Dutch vessels."

"What is the cause of the death of the eels?"

"When there is but little water in the river they do not die so much, as the water is less disturbed; but on heavy rains, after a dry season, the filth which had been accumulating in the drains and sewers is washed into the river and disturbs the general sediment; the water is thus rendered very impure, and contributes in producing the above effect."

"Is it a matter of fact that fish suffer more after rains than in dry weather?"

"Yes. Other causes of the increased impurity of the river, or its being worse than it formerly was, arise from the accumulation of filth brought down by rains after dry weather, the great fall at London-bridge, and the steam-boats stirring up the filth of the Thames, and keeping it in a state of almost continual agitation. Another nuisance is the gas: I have noticed at seven o'clock at night the gas lighter let out the refuse in the middle of the river is often covered with it, having the appearance of an oily substance, in patches of three or four feet square. The tide ebbs seven hours, and goes about three miles an hour, and this will carry it on that time, and it is then spread; and as the tide flows it returns, and the substance returns with the tide. As a proof of the impurity of the water of the Thames, the flounders, which are brought up from Sea Reach, Medway, &c., when they are to Woolwich, try to get to the walls of the boats, through which the water flows, and they turn up and die."

"Do you think that the increase of manufactories within the last ten years have tended to injure the water?"

"Yes; and it can be proved that many fishermen have been ruined by the change in the water."

THE TEA PLANT.—The cultivation of the tea plant, which was undertaken by Mr. J. Smith, near Greenfield, South Carolina, in 1848, has so far proved highly successful. In the fall of 1848 about 600 plants were received from China, via London, and in December they were planted in his garden. A considerable quantity of tea seed was planted at the same time. Notwithstanding the severe winter and spring, the plants, which were left to take care of themselves, were unharmed, and are now in a flourishing condition. Several specimens of the genus and the tea plant are in bud. The tea plant buds one year, but does not fruit till the next. Next year Mr. Smith expects to pick tea, although his great object for some time to come will be to increase the quantity of his plants. The soil of the United States is admirably adapted for the plant to anything. Mr. Smith estimates the annual consumption of tea in the United States to be 11 millions of pounds; in Europe, 50: total, 61 millions. China produces over 900 millions of pounds, and Japan nearly as much; export only about 70 millions. An acre of land will produce 547 pounds; consequently, the cultivation of 20,109 acres of land in the fourteen tea-growing states will supply the present consumption of the United States. To supply Europe would require 91,411 acres of land. He supposes that there are fourteen of our States that would grow tea, and that 111,520 acres of land cultivated as tea plantat ons, averaging 1965 for each of the fourteen States, will supply the consumption of the article both for Europe and the United States. The experiment Mr. Smith is engaged in is a high y interesting one, and will be attended with vast benefit to the country if completely successful. American Paper.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

THE past week has been one of extraordinary dulness in all departments of the Stock Exchange. Consols on Monday opened at an advance of about ¼ per cent. upon the closing prices on Saturday, realising 90¾ for Money, and 90¾ for Account. With the single exception of a temporary decline of ¼ per cent. on Tuesday, resulting from a lower quotation of the French Funds, this price has remained unaltered, business generally having been on a most confined scale, with scarcely any speculation. The heavy stocks have been equally steady, Exchequer Bills and India Bonds retaining their former value. The closing quotations are, for Bank Stock, 196½; Reduced, 90¾; New 3 per Cent. Annuities, 92¾; Long Annuities, to expire Jan. 1860, 8¾; Ditto, 30 years, Oct. 10, 1859, 8 3-16; Ditto, 30 years, Jan. 5, 1860, 8⅛; India Bonds, under £1000, 91 pm.; South Sea Stock, Old Annuities, 99¾; Ditto for Account, 99¾; Exchequer Bills £1000, June, 45 pm; Ditto, £500, June, 48 pm.; Ditto, Small, June, 48 pm.

Although business in the Foreign Market has been rather more active than hitherto, the transactions continue unimportant, and the variations merely fractional. Mexican, Portuguese, Spanish, and Brazilian have been the favourite stocks, but the closing prices show little change from the opening figures of Monday. Price's last recorded are—Brazilian Bonds, Account, 83¾; Ditto, New, 1829 and 1839, 82; Chilian Bonds, Six per Cents., 99; Ditto, Three per Cent., 63¾; Danish Bonds, 1825, Three per Cent., 79; Equador Bonds, 3¾; Granada Bonds, One per Cent., 16¾; Mexican, Five per Cent., 1846, Account, 99¾; Ditto, Small, 99¾; Peruvian Bonds, Four per Cents., 92; Ditto, Deferred, 58½; Russian Bonds, 108; spani-h, Five per Cent., 1840, Account, 16¾; Dutch, Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 53¾; Ditto, Four per Cent., 82¾.

Notwithstanding the dulness in the Share Market there has been no active an on the preceding week, prices continued to be fairly maintained. The heavy Bear-ing operations are gradually being lessened, and the real prices of the securities consequently quoted. Great Western, Brighton, and North Staffordshire shares are better, but Caledonians are worse, and North-Western heavy. In Midlands and South-Eastern no great change has occurred. The prices last quoted are—For Aberdeen, 16; Caledonian, 11¾; Ditto, New, £10, Preference, 8¾; East Anglian, £2 ½ L. and E. and L. and D., 1¾; Ditto, £3 10s. Preference, ¾; Eastern Counties, 6¾; Great Northern, 7¾; Ditto, Five per Cent. Preference, 7¾; Great Southern and Western, Ireland, 19¾; Great Western, Bristol and Exeter, 62¾; Great Western, 62; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 11¾; Ditto, Fifths, 11¾; Ditto, New, £17, 7¾; Lancaster and Carlisle, 56; Ditto, Thirds, 8¾; London and Blackwall, 3¾; Lond., Brighton, and S. Coast, 74; Do., Pref., 8 per cent., 55; Lond and N. West., 114; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, New £10 Pref., 10; Midland, 47¾; Ditto, Consolidated Pref., £50 Shares, 84; Ditto, Consolidated Bristol and Birmingham, Six per Cent., 120; Norfolk, 23¾; Ditto, New £20, 4; Ditto, Guaranteed Five-and-a-Half per Cent., 4¼; North Staffordshire, 8¾; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 11; Royston and Hitch n, 4; South Staffordshire, 7¾; South-Eastern, 19¾; South Wales, 17; South Yorkshire, Doncaster, and Goole, 7; Vale of Neath, Six per Cent. Preference, 58½; Ditto, Newcastle, and Berwick, Newcastle Extension, 11¾; York and North Midland, 19¾; Bonlogne and Amiens, 5¾; Namur and Liege, 6½, Orleans and Bordeaux, 24; Paris and Rouen, 30; Sambre and Meuse, 2.

Owing to the rise in the French funds on the Continent, the Consol Market was firm on Friday, at an advance in the quotations of ¼ per cent. The Three per Cents were marked at 90¾ to 13; and the Three per Cents Reduced, 90¾. Unfunded Debt ruled steady. India Bonds, six to 84s; and Exchequer Bills, 44s to 48s pm. In foreign bonds very few transactions took place. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 53¾; Russian, 108; and Spanish Three per Cents, 31. Railway Shares were flat.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—The present week's arrival of English wh. at constwise barley from Ireland, 2050 quarters; oats, 3000 quarters; beans, none to-day, a very little [illegible] time past, the demand for wheat has been rather more active, and prices, at which the market closed last week, have been realised. Barley and malt have ruled heavy, and prices have given way 1s per quarter. Oats and beans have undergone little or no alteration, but we have not the slightest change to notice in the quotations for peas. Flour has been in very limited request, and prices have ruled dull. The following are the imports into London during the week ending this day:—Wheat, 4870 quarters; barley, 3600; oats, 2400; beans, 1670; peas, 1600; flour, 7620. Foreign: English, 3200; foreign [illegible] quarters; malt, — quarters.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 36250 quarters; barley, 2400; oats, 1070. Scotch: wheat, — barley, — oats, — beans, — peas, — flour, — sacks. Irish: wheat, — barley, — oats, — beans, — peas, — flour, — sacks. Foreign: wheat, 3670 quarters; barley, 1550; oats, 7620; beans, 2200; peas, 1700; flour, 7620. Foreign: English, 3200; foreign [illegible] quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 40s to 45s; ditto, white, 44s to 50s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 40s to 42s; ditto, white, 42s to 46s; rye, 32s to 34s; grinding barley, 22s to 24s; distilling ditto, 26s to 28s; malting ditto, 28s to 32s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, [illegible] brown ditto, 65s to 68s; Kingston and Ware, 57s to 59s; Chevalier, 60s to 64s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 18s to 18s; potato ditto, 18s to 20s; Youghal and Cork, blacks, 15s to 16s; ditto, white, 16s to 18s; tick beans, 32s to 33s; ditto, old, 31s to 33s; grey peas, [illegible] maple 32s to 33s; white ditto, [illegible] boilers, 34s to 36s; Egyptian beans, [illegible] Dantzic, 34s per barrel; Pollard, [illegible] per sack; Norfolk and Suffolk, [illegible] per barrel; Stockton and Yorkshire, [illegible] per barrel; Baltimore, [illegible] per barrel; Indian meal, [illegible] per barrel; American, [illegible] per barrel; Flour, American, [illegible] per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Very little has been has been transacted to-day this week, and prices are nominally the same as last quoted.

Linseed, English, sowing, 56s to 58s; Baltic, crushing, 38s to 44s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 42s to 46s; Bengal, 52s to 56s per quarter; Coriander, 16s to 20s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 6s to 10s, white ditto, 6s to 9s; tares, 4s 6d to 4s 9d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, £25 to £26 per last of nine quarters; linseed cakes, £6 to £7 10s; ditto, Hodge, £6 0s to £6 5s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, £4 5s to £4 10s per ton; canary, 52s to 56s per quarter; English clover seed, red, [illegible] to —s, extra, —s to —s; white, —s to —s, extra, up to —s; Belgian, [illegible] per cwt.; extra, [illegible] to —s; white, —s to —s, extra, up to —s; trefoil, —s to —s; ditto, white, 6s to 14s; tick beans, 32s to 33s; ditto, old, 31s to 33s; grey peas, [illegible] maple 32s to 33s; white ditto, [illegible] boilers, 34s to 36s; Egyptian beans, [illegible] Dantzic, 34s per barrel; Pollard, [illegible] per sack; Norfolk and Suffolk, [illegible] per barrel; Stockton and Yorkshire, [illegible] per barrel; Baltimore, [illegible] per barrel; Indian meal, [illegible] per barrel; American, [illegible] per barrel; Flour, American, [illegible] per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Very little has been has been transacted to-day this week, and prices are nominally the same as last quoted.

Linseed, English, sowing, 56s to 58s; Baltic, crushing, 38s to 44s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 42s to 46s; Bengal, 52s to 56s per quarter; Coriander, 16s to 20s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 6s to 10s, white ditto, 6s to 9s; tares, 4s 6d to 4s 9d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, £25 to £26 per last of nine quarters; linseed cakes, £6 to £7 10s; ditto, Hodge, £6 0s to £6 5s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, £4 5s to £4 10s per ton; canary, 52s to 56s per quarter; English clover seed, red, [illegible] to —s, extra, —s

NEW BOOKS. &c,

THE NEW HISTORICAL ROMANCE
Now ready at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.,
THE MAID OF ORLEANS.
By the Author of
"WHITEFRIARS," "THE LONDON," &c.
Also, just ready, in 3 vols.,
PASSAGES in the LIFE of Mrs. MARGARET MAITLAND,
OF SUNNY-SIDE. WRITTEN BY HERSELF
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

NOW READY PRICE ONE SHILLING.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK for 1850.
In the Sixth Annual Issue of this most carefully embellished and useful Almanack, Illustrated by DUNCAN and other Eminent Artists The Notes of the Month, by MISS LOUDON, besides a variety of new and useful Tables &c &c. The Astronomical Department by JAMES GLAISHER, F.R.S., F.R.A.S., of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.
Published by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198 Strand, London.
* * Country orders supplied for Cash only.

Just published, in 1 vol. 12s 6d.,
HOMŒOPATHY in ACUTE DISEASES.
By STEPHEN PEARL HAM, M.R.C.S. "A book for the people."—Lancet, Nov. 3. "The best that has appeared on the subject of Homœopathy."—Medical Gazette. "Homœopathy only learnt from this book."—Morning Herald. "Wonderfully clear."—Weekly Chronicle. "Explains the principles of Homœopathy in a manner that renders it easily intelligible."—*Sunday Times TURKISH SOLDIERS OF THE LINE ON DRILL.—FROM A SKETCH BY ALBERT SMITH.

CONSTANTINOPLE.

By the latest accounts from Constantinople, the Sultan and his Ministers continue to prepare calmly for every emergency. The Sultan has himself examined into the state of the army, the navy, and the commissariat. The Turkish men-of-war are complete in all their appointments. The maritime resources of the Ottoman Empire are immense. The merchant navy is very extensive, and there is a hardy and numerous race of excellent seamen along the coast of the Black Sea, from Battan to the Bosphorus. These bear some resemblance to the sailors of the north of England and of Scotland, natives of a wild coast, and navigating a boisterous sea. In the Turkish Archipelago, and along the coast of Asia Minor and Syria, are some of the finest harbours in the world, and a population essentially maritime.

A grand review of troops took place a short time since, to which both the English and French Ambassadors went in company, attended by their respective suites, and presented their respects at the same time to the Sultan.

At Therapia, the residences of the English and French Ambassadors are close together, and on the day of the review a man-of-war steamer lay off each place, with yards manned, waiting to convey the representatives of France and England to San Stefano, where the Turkish troops were encamped. When the ambassadors landed they found handsome carriages and gaily caparisoned horses waiting to convey them and their suites to the ground where the review was to take place. About two miles in front of the camp a line of tents was pitched. On the right of the line was one of crimson satin for the Sultan, and in the centre was one lined with rich brocade for the reception of the diplomatic body. Here the Minister of Foreign Affairs received the Ambassadors.

The troops, of which there were 50,000 present, were supposed to be in front of an enemy, and went through the usual evolutions of a review. All the cavalry carried lances; and though they charged repeatedly, and at times in considerable masses, not a single accident occurred. The artillery is considered not inferior to any in Europe, whether in point of discipline, horses, or accoutrements. With the diplomatic body were several military men, English and others, who all expressed their admiration at the good condition of the Turkish troops, and the admirable manner in which they went through their evolutions.

The first of the accompanying Illustrations, representing an inspection of infantry, is from one of the Sketches recently received from Mr. Albert Smith, at Constantinople.

In the second scene we have pictured the magnificent state barge of the Sultan, in which his Majesty enjoys occasional excursions in the neighbourhood of the city. It is of elegant design; and, with its sumptuously-fitted canopy, possesses a good deal of regal state and splendour.

THE SULTAN'S STATE BARGE.

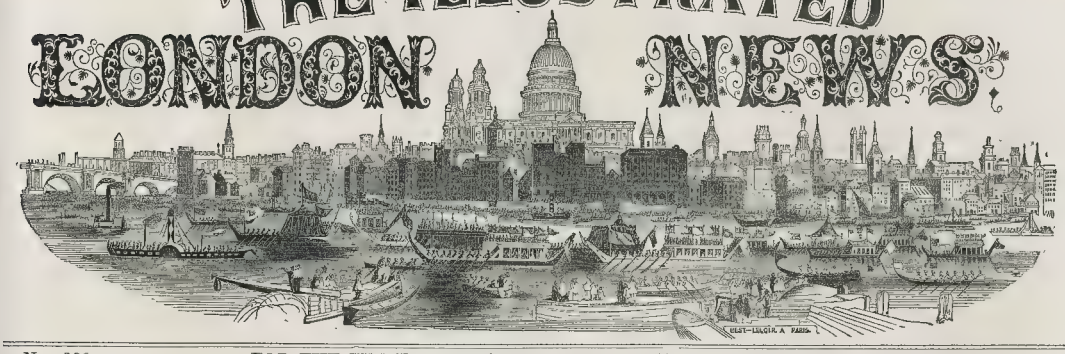
The Late Executions in Hungary.—The Paris National publishes the following details connected with the late military executions in Hungary:—"Kiss and his three companions were shot so early as four o'clock in the morning; the death of the former was horrible—three volleys had to be fired at him, and his sufferings endured for more than ten minutes. At six o'clock in the same morning, the nine Hungarian generals condemned to be hung were brought to the place of execution, and the melancholy scene was not completed until ten o'clock. Count Vecsey, whom it was wished to punish as severely as possible, in consequence of the damage which his cannon had done to the walls of Temesvar, was reserved for the last, in order that for four hours he might witness the sufferings of his companions in arms. There were nine gibbets erected in a line, but there was only one executioner, with two men to assist him. About eight o'clock, Count Charles Leiningen, who was to be the third in order, became impatient at the intentional delay, and said, in a tone of gaiety, 'I think at least they ought to give us some breakfast.' 'General, will you drink?' said a soldier, tendering him his gourd. 'Thank you, my friend,' replied the Count, 'I do not require wine to give me courage: give me a glass of water.' He then wrote with a pencil a few lines to his brother-in-law, protesting against the calumnies which had been published against him, of having fired on the prisoners, declaring on the contrary that he had used every effort to protect the Austrian prisoners. He recommended to his brother his wife and his two children, and declared that he died for a cause which he considered just and holy. He concluded his note by saying, that if, hereafter, his friends might seek to avenge his death, they should remember that humanity was the best policy. In a few minutes after writing this note he had ceased to live. Some time before his execution every arrangement had been made for his escape, but he refused, as his brother-in-law could not fly with him. General Leiningen was a man of athletic stature. In battle he was careless of his personal safety, but always anxious to spare the lives of his men, and for that reason much beloved by them. He was a German by birth, but had acquired the affection of the Magyar peasantry. His wife is a Hungarian. All these generals perished without one showing even the slightest indication of fear at the awful scene. Baron Jessenak, who was executed at Perth, evinced a courage almost superhuman. Neither the rolling of the drums nor the threatening injunctions which were given him, could prevent him crying out, with a stentorian voice, 'I die a martyr for liberty; may every drop of my blood fall on the heads of my executioners!'"

The Prince of Schleswig-Holstein and the German Emigrants.—On board the ship Alfred, the property of Messrs. Godeffroy, of Hamburg, in Plymouth Roads, on last Saturday morning, the young Prince, with Captain Stanley Carr, embarked for Australia. They were escorted to the beach by many of the gentlemen of the town and garrison, and were taken on board by Mr. Fox, in his yacht the Turk. Captain Carr is well known as the great Anglo-German agricultural reformer, and author of many useful works on that subject. He recently sold his large estates in North Germany, and is about to devote two or three years to the settlement of selected German emigrants in the South Australian and Port Phillip districts, under the auspices of the British Government.

Cure for Drunkenness in Sweden.—The Swedish Government has just enacted certain laws against drunkenness, which show the degree to which that disgusting vice has attained. For the first offence a fine of 16 rix-dollars is imposed; for the second, 30 rix-dollars; for the third or fourth, the elective franchise and the privilege of being elected a member of Parliament are forfeited; and the offender is moreover exposed in the pillory on the following Sunday in front of the parish church. For the fifth offence the culprit is immured in a house of correction for one year. A person convicted of having induced another to drink to excess pays 16 rix-dollars, and 30 if the victim be a minor.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, November 10, 1849

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.



No. 399.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

DAY OF GENERAL THANKSGIVING.

SERMON preached at St. Paul's Cathedral, by the Right Rev. Dr. BLOMFIELD, D.D., Lord Bishop of London, on Thursday last, the day appointed to be observed in all Churches throughout the United Kingdom as one of General Thanksgiving to Almighty God, on the cessation of the Cholera Pestilence:—

The Service having been read by the Rev. Mr. Bennett, and the Lessons by the Rev. Mr. Coward,

The Lord Bishop of LONDON ascended the pulpit, taking his text from the 107th Psalm, 8th verse:—"Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."—Nothing is more remarkable in these divine songs, from one of which these words are taken, than the Royal Psalmist's frequent and emphatic acknowledgment of the Providence of God, in searching and controlling the affairs of men, and shaping their counsels for the fulfilment of his own wise and beneficent purposes. In prosperity and adversity, crowned with victory or crushed and oppressed by enemies—in the heyday of his youth and strength, or in the fading twilight of declining age, his constant theme is the overruling power of God, and his goodness to man. But it is more especially when he prays for deliverance from evil, that he gives vent to his feelings of devout gratitude and thankfulness; unlike the generality of mankind, who are driven to ask his mercy, and implore his protection, in the hour of sickness and sorrow, but who see not God in the brightness of happy days—who recognise the hand that smites, but not that which heals and calms. This peculiarity of the Psalms is the highest proof of their Divine origin, and distinguishes them from all the false religion and all the hollow philosophy of the heathen world, which, if it holds out a few uncertain joys, for the most part refers to chance all the events of this life, and makes its deities wayward masters of man's destinies, or dwelling in serene repose undisturbed by any thought or consideration of human weal or woe. A sense of one supreme good was the great truth embodied in the religion which God gave to his chosen people, and is the characteristic of all the faithful servants of his Word. However imperfect the character of David was in some important features, he was in heart a religious man; his good actions were done in the eye of God, and in the hope of pleasing Him. His sins were deeply and bitterly lamented, as involuntary offences against Him to whom he had devoted his life. To Him he referred all the good of his strangely checquered life; and whether in the depths of woe or the pinnacle of happiness, his language was the praise of God. But in this respect David was far from being the type of the people he had been called upon to govern. Of the two sins of ingratitude and disobedience, for which they were proverbial, the most conspicuous was ingratitude, and it is still the prevailing sin among those who call themselves the Lord's people. Too many, who perhaps are clear from the guilt of gross disobedience, are scarcely less culpable of the sin of unthankfulness—not that breaking out into open rebellion which marks the hardened sinner, but that careless, thankless state of heart, which, in the midst of abundance and comforts of every kind, utterly forgets the source from whence all good proceeds. This state of mind is highly offensive to God, and highly dangerous. Let us take into consideration what sort of persons they are, who, if the Psalms are true, will be turned into hell: not the wicked only—not the open, daring, notorious sinner, but all those that forget their God. And how can forgetfulness of God be more unreasonably or more inexcusably shown, than by forgetting to acknowledge the goodness of Him who is the Father of good and of "every perfect gift?" It is wonderful to what an extent this duty is neglected by men, without their seeming to think that they are irreligious; as if ingratitude to God was not an evidence of the absence of all sense of religion. Throughout the course of human affairs, men are too much disposed to look no higher than the agents employed to bring them to pass. They see these agents as employed by man, and they look no farther—forgetting the unseen hand that moves and regulates and adjusts the whole machine. Again, the very abundance of God's mercies is another cause of unthankfulness. The rightly-disposed mind will find a subject of thankfulness in every good gift of God's providence; but this is not the case with all. Numberless and varied are God's mercies, in their power and their goodness; and, surrounded as we are by them on all sides, it requires some unusual event to direct attention to them. The same supreme and all-powerful Being that guides the earthquake, sways the storm and divides the solid rock—brings round the seasons in unvarying order, makes the sun to shine, and the moon to give light. These are the occurrences of every day and year, and as such are habitually overlooked; and it is only the convulsions of the elements that really rouse us from our indifference, and force us to acknowledge the power and the majesty of Him who "maketh the clouds his chariot, and rideth upon the wings of the wind." So true it is, also, in the Church's history, that, while it is regularly ordered, we scarcely know the true value of the privileges we enjoy as members of Christ's Holy Catholic Church. We are not as thankful as we should be that we are Christians at all—that we belong to the Reformed Church, where the pure and undefiled word is set forth as the foundation of our faith—where the Scriptures are read to all, and the offices of our common worship understood by the people. And yet surely every one of us will say, "I might have been born in a heathen land; God be praised I am a Christian! I might have lived where the clear light of the Gospel is darkened by error, and its purity corrupted by superstition. God be thanked I have been born and educated in a knowledge of the pure Reformed religion!" But for the most part it is only when persecution raises its head, that we become sensible of our privileges, and of God's mercy in permitting us to enjoy them without molestation. So it is in the ordinary occurrences and events of this life. Although the watchfulness and care of our heavenly Father directs and guides the daily incidents of our lives, although He accomplisheth our rising up and our lying down and every action, it is only in the presence of sickness and sorrow that we have a clear satisfactory view of Providence as the dispenser of good and evil, and that we are brought to its practical acknowledgment in prayer. So it is with regard to the judgments of God, whether they regard man individually, or those more extended series of events that affect the well-being of nations. During the silent peaceable march of civilization, we are apt to refer all to the sagacity and prudence of human calculations; but when suddenly revolution bursts upon the institutions of society and shakes them to their base, or when nations are desolated by the scourge of war, or famine, or wide-wasting pestilence, then, at least, so many as believe that there is a God betake themselves to that mighty Ruler who commands the winds and waves, who holds the fortunes of mankind in the balance, and who makes the mildew or the plague the instruments of his mercy or his anger. I do not mean to say that persons who have any religion at all deny the providence of God, because that would be in terms to deny his existence, but that they are living in practical forgetfulness of his mercies until some signal interruption of the ordinary course of events forces it upon their attention. Every prayer we offer, and every act of good we do, is an acknowledgment of his providence. But men are not generally under the influence of this abiding truth. When our mercies is wrung out of the hand by suffering, our natural impulse is to acknowledge God's providence. Of the gifts showered upon us in endless profusion, we take no notice; but when a common calamity besets us—when we are involved in one general disaster, we are ready to acknowledge God's power, and to exclaim, "When He slew them then they acknowledged Him." We have lately had many striking illustrations of these truths. It has pleased Almighty God to visit us a second time with a fearful disease, which has traversed nearly the entire circle of the habitable globe—inscrutable in its origin, indefinable in its objects, and frequently so rapid in its progress, that the only symptom of its approach is death—baffling human science and deriding human skill—sweeping away entire families, desolating whole neighbourhoods, and forcing even the thoughtless and the presumptuous to recognise the hand of God. And we did recognise it, not, indeed, as a nation, so solemnly as we should have done, but yet as a Christian people; and as members of the true Church, we did patiently and devoutly acknowledge that the chastisement was not more than we deserved, and humbly implored of Him to withdraw the scourge, and restore the voice of joy and health to our dwellings. And He has been pleased to restore it; and, as in the case of the people of Nineveh, having repented of the evil that He said He would do them, He did not do it. But was it because he saw our works, that he turned from us his wrath—was it because we had turned from our evil ways? Let every one look to himself, and ask his own conscience for the answer. That the voice of God was heard—that it did awaken in the people of this country not merely the sudden emotions of fear and the awful apprehensions of God's anger, but a reliance upon his goodness and mercy, I trust there is no doubt. The unusual solemnity with which the day of humiliation and intercession was observed—the voluntary abandonment of all worldly business—the crowds of worshippers that thronged our churches, and the general alms given—all these indicated, if not a general admission of sinfulness, yet a general knowledge of God's goodness and providence to the world. Whether it is likely to produce permanent improvement, is known only to Him who guideth the hearts and the understandings of men. Let us hope and pray that it may be deep and lasting. It is a question individually presented to every one among us for ever, and we should take notice of it at our peril. Let us not forget that it is our own thoughts, our own feelings, and our own actions, that constitute drop by drop the mass of virtue or wickedness, of vice or goodness, that stamps the character of a God-fearing or a godless people. And was there of these before me—was there a single person whose heart was so careless or so hardened that when he heard the stroke of the Destroying Angel at a distance, or was awakened by the midnight cry in his own dwelling, who was not ready to exclaim, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh!" and who did not in his heart prepare to go out and meet him? Was there any misgiving of the fitness of the man at once to enter into the presence of his Judge? And were there not many (we hope there were very many) who followed out those thoughts into holy resolves, or, at least, into wishes of amendment, and a desire that their death, when it arrived, should be as the death of the righteous? And where are those thoughts and those resolutions now? Are you seeking to embody them in the realities o a Christian life? Have they melted away in the shadow of some dark, mysterious dream, to be replaced by the dreams of ambition or the temptations and delusions of this world? Have your thoughts been fixed upon the things of eternity, since God spoke to you in an impressive language—have your Sabbaths been more devoutly observed, your secret oratories visited, your place in the church filled, and your acknowledgments rendered at the table of the Lord, and do the blessings of the poor bear testimony to the vows you made when under the apprehension of impending calamity? If we were constrained only a few brief months ago to consider our ways and to turn back to the Lord, under the impression that we were helpless perishing sinners, what renewed ground of hope have we now? Has the Almighty no other means of wrath, no other instrument of chastisement than fell disease? The sword which was imagined to be sheathed may still be suspended in the air over our heads, ready to fall when the fulness of the appointed timeshall come. That we have hitherto been spared when others were smitten, is solely owing to the forbearance and mercy of God, and not to any merits of ours. Therefore, the more reason is there for increased vigilance and care: the mysterious messenger of divine displeasure is more arrogant and more hungry: the pestilence that walks at noonday, the mildew that withers up the produce of the earth, are not the only instruments of God's wrath upon rebellious and gainsaying nations. The madness of the people or of their rulers may be at once the cause and the instrument of God's wrath. If the mercies of the Lord do not soften our hearts to repentance, and thankfulness, and peace, we may expect to be harrassed by his wrath; and rather than live so undefended and unsupported by his care, it were well for us to be subjected to the sharpest discipline He imposes, to force us back to our allegiance and to teach us to bear his yoke. But let it be ours to seek for higher and holier motives—let us cherish the principle of love, which in perfectness "casteth out fear," not merely by considering our signal deliverance from present danger, but that infinitely more glorious deliverance wrought by his blessed Son, and those privileges and promises of heavenly citizenship which afford us the means of joy and the hope of glory. This is at all times our duty; but at the present moment it is peculiarly fitting that we should employ our thoughts in the consideration of His special mercies, and that we should acknowledge the goodness and the mercy of God. I say special mercies; for it is not for one instance only of Divine goodness towards us a nation that our prayers should ascend, but for many and signal mercies vouchsafed to us. Our deliverance from a fatal malady, by which many thousands of souls have been cut off in this city, is the prominent cause of thankfulness; but, as a nation, we have still deeper and wider ground of thanksgiving in that to God we owe two years of unbroken peace. In a season of universal tumult and alarm, we have been permitted to enjoy comparative security and peace. Over the whole continent of Europe the distress of the nations was sore, and there was much perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing with fear and looking upon those things which were coming upon the earth: ancient thrones hurled to the ground, and tottering: churches fading into a sceptical faith, and broken into incoherent fragments: the lessons of practical wisdom and the maxims of philosophy alike disregarded by the abettors of anarchy and misrule; and we "sowing the wind and reaping the whirlwind." While all these things were passing, we were permitted to enjoy the quiet of our habitations; our time-honoured institutions were upheld and strengthened, the truth of God was maintained, and the atmosphere scarcely darkened by a passing cloud, while the storm of hailstone and fire burst over other nations. And can we now say, my brethren, with presumptuous self-commendation, but in the language of thankfulness and acknowledgment, "The Lord of Hosts is with us—the God of Jacob is our refuge." And seriously does it become us to be strenuous in our exertions to diffuse among the people throughout the land a larger knowledge of those principles which have been our chief preservative from the calamities that have desolated other nations. I trust that will be the surest antidote to the poison of infidelity, disloyalty, and anarchy, and to that which is the most fallacious in appearance—the theory which, while it repents the name of Socialism, goes to destroy everything that is dear to us. For our exemption from these evils let us endeavour to show our thankfulness, by supplying the people with increased means of education and public worship. Another topic of thankfulness is the plentiful return with which it has pleased God to bless the labours of the husbandman. Surely, we have too recently seen, in the sister kingdom, the horrors of famine and the miseries attendant upon a failure of corn and a scarcity of bread, not to appreciate the goodness of God in giving us an abundant harvest. Hear the Psalmist:—"O Lord, thou visitest the earth, and waterest it thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water: thou preparest them corn when thou hast so provided for it. Thou waterest the ridges of it abundantly: thou settlest all the furrows thereof: thou makest it soft with showers: thou blessest the springing thereof. Thou crownest the year with thy goodness; and thy paths drop fatness." The most suitable, and, I believe, the most acceptable mode of acknowledging the goodness of God in withdrawing the scourge of pestilence, and preserving to us the kindly fruits of the earth, will be by a larger measure of charitable consideration for the physical evils that affect our poorer brethren—by an endeavour to remove or diminish them; for until this has been done, we can effect but little for their religious or moral improvement. We are bound to do this, not only from a Christian regard for our poorer brethren, but as desirous of promoting the well-being of the country. No time should be lost in doing away with a state of things which is spreading the seeds of disease, not only weakens, but aggravates the approach and malignity of disease; which wastes the social virtues, destroys self-respect, and all motive for self-improvement. Want of decent, cleanly habitations is one of the chief evils that affect the poor. Steps should long ago have been taken to remedy this state of things. At present, neatness, order, and comfort are unknown in their miserable, over-crowded dwellings; modesty is impracticable, delicacy of feeling destroyed, and coarseness of language and manners prevails, and prepare the mind for vicious intercourse in future years. None of the comforts of home can there—none of its softening, purifying influences; and can we wonder if from such sinks of immorality, if spared by disease, the scandals and pests of society, the mendicant, the drunkard, and the thief are produced? It is not less our duty than our care, that we should place within their reach the means of living cleanly, quiet, and observant of domestic decency, having each their own home for their own family, and enjoying, if not much of the comforts of life, at least that which none should be denied—pure air and water, so necessary to the continuance of their health and strength. These persons who have a competence of this world's means, and who have been exempt, by the goodness of God, from the scourge of sickness, have surely an especial motive for charitable exertion in removing the mighty evils that render the poor most liable to attacks of epidemic sickness; every one may do something in his own parish or neighbourhood, and much may be done by the united efforts of associated Christians. I need hardly urge upon you the happy results that have attended the many exertions that has been made to better the condition of the working classes, namely, the knitting together the different orders of society, now too widely separated, in the bonds of Christian brotherhood. This will be the most substantial way of shewing our thankfulness for the great mercy vouchsafed to us, and will be the best sacrifice which we can offer to Almighty God, by saving souls and bodies—the doing good to others for the sake of Him who has done all for us. Yes, my brethren, let us no longer despise the miseries and long-suffering of our poorer brethren. God in his goodness gives us time and calls us to repentance. Let us, then, in all holy conversation and godliness, look to his coming; being diligent in our calling, that in the end we may be found without spot or stain—by carefulness, and self-denial, and active charity, and in a manner which may enable us to fulfil as we ought the solemn duties of religion. Let us seek in all things his glory and the good of our brethren, and be an example and a blessing to the community in which we live, promoting the stability of our institutions, and laying up in store for ourselves a good foundation for the time to come, through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: to whom, with the Father and the Holy Ghost, three persons in one God, be ascribed, as is most due, all might and majesty and dominion, and thanksgiving, now and for ever, Amen."

RETURN OF CAPT. SIR JAMES ROSS'S ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—THE "ENTERPRISE" AND "INVESTIGATOR."—(SEE PAGE 323.)

The Right Rev. Prelate's discourse was delivered with much feeling and emphasis, and was listened to with profound attention by a very crowded and highly respectable congregation. The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and Mr. Sheriff Nicol and several of the city functionaries were present in their state robes, as well as several members of their families. A collection was made after the service.

In the evening, Archdeacon HALE preached from the following text: —3 Proverbs, 11, 12. My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction: For whom the Lord loveth he correcteth, even as a father the son in whom he delighteth.

In Westminster Abbey the sermon was delivered by Dr. Buckland. His text was 2 Kings, chap. 5, v. 13. And his servants came near and spake unto him, and said: My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou have done it? How much rather then when he saith to thee, Wash and be clean.

At St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, the Rev. H. Mackenzie, M.A., the vicar, preached from the following text:—St. John, chap. v. verse 25. Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live. For, as the Father hath Life in himself, so hath he given the Son to have life in himself.

THE QUEEN'S LETTER ON BEHALF OF THE NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE EDUCATION OF THE POOR.

HER Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to issue the following Royal letter, on learning that the funds of the above society (including the special fund for the ensuing and manufacturing districts) are now, and have been for some months, entirely exhausted

"VICTORIA R.—Most Rev rend Father in God, our right trusty and right entirely beloved councillor, we greet you well. Whereas the president and governors of the Incorporated Society for the Enlargement of the Means of the Poor in the Principles of the Established Church in England and Wales, have, by their petition, humbly represented unto us that the president and governors of the society are now, during a period of thirty-eight years, assiduously and perseveringly laboured to carry into effect the great work for which the society was incorporated, and that they have now expended the whole of the funds which, either through the munificence of the Sovereign or the liberality of the public, have been placed at their disposal for the purpose of extending and improving education among the poorer classes; that the produce of the collections made under the authority of the Royal letters, which for some time past have been triennially granted on their petition, has been mainly expended in building schoolrooms and teachers' residences, permanently secured for the education of the children of the poor, and in the organisation and improvement of those already erected; that the general principles upon which the society has conducted its operations have received the sanction of the legislature, as well as the approbation of the country at large; that the plan which the society has pursued, since its foundation in 1811, of encouraging local voluntary efforts, by granting moderate sums of money to aid in the erection of schools and teachers' houses, has been adopted by our Government in distributing its grants which are away by Parliament, in furtherance of national education; and that, with respect to the approval and co-operation of the people in general, it will be sufficient to observe that the number of children attending schools in connexion with and corresponding with the society was, in the year 1812, to 40,484, in 1833 to 400,830, in the year 1837 to 897,911, and in the year 1847, when the last return was made, to 816,874, and has since proportionately increased; while the whole number of children in attendance at schools is estimated at above half a million and a half; that the training institutions maintained by the society have, during the last five years, sent out 1042 trained teachers (93 schoolmasters and 949 schoolmistresses) into various parts of the country: that during the last five years the society have expended in aid of building, enlarging, or otherwise improving school-rooms and teachers' residences, £136,197 18s. in 1240 cases of application; thereby affording accommodation for 265,542 children at a total outlay of £1 0s. 9d.; that the great progress which has been made in extending education among the poor has created a more general desire for the adoption of effective measures for its improvement, and that for this purpose the society will continue to maintain its central schools for boys, girls, and infants, and will afford support to its various establishments for instructing and training young persons of either sex, as well as adults, to be teachers, and will give aid towards the expense of inspecting, organising, and remodelling schools, so that the most improved methods of teaching may be generally introduced throughout the country: that, as well from the rapid increase of the population of this kingdom, as from the numerous applications continually made to the society, both for aid toward erecting school-rooms, and for the service of duly-qualified teachers, it is evident that there are contributions to the society will be required, in order to meet the demands for assistance constantly made upon its resources, the increase of which demand is one of the many proofs of the general feeling which exists throughout the country, strongly called forth in other quarters, that it is only by providing a sound religious education for the growing masses of the population that the social and religious institutions of these kingdoms can be preserved: We, taking the premises into our Royal consideration, are being always ready to give the best encouragement and countenance to undertakings which tend so much to the promotion of piety and our holy religion, direct that those our letters be directed to the several suffragan bishops within your dioceses, &c., so that the minister in each parish do effectually excite their parishioners to a liberal contribution, &c., the results to be paid over to the treasurer for the time being of the said society, &c. "Given at our Court, &c.

"To the most Rev. Father in God, &c., the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of all England and Metropolitan."

COLLECTIONS ON THE THANKSGIVING DAY.—The Bishop of London has issued a circular to the clergy of the metropolis, in which his Lordship recommends that the alms collected on Thursday in the various churches of the metropolis should be applied to the promotion of some well-considered plan for improving the dwellings of the labouring classes. "I would not be understood," says the Lordship, "to prescribe the channel through which the collections should be so applied; but I would suggest that where the funds so raised are not sufficient for carrying out a local scheme for that purpose, they may be safely entrusted to 'The Society for Improving the Condition of the Labouring Classes,' without fear of misapplication or waste."

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The President of the Republic has made a bold bid for popularity. He has, of his own accord, granted an amnesty to the June insurgents confined at Belle Isle. There were in all 1200 prisons; but 800 of these have not had the amnesty extended to them, because, as explained by M. F. Barrot, when communicating the fact to the Assembly, on Monday, their previous bad character did not justify their pardon, or render it safe to throw them once more upon society, as they had either been convicted on former occasions of other crimes, or had greatly misconducted themselves since their incarceration. The announcement was heard by the Right with calmness and indifference, while the Left, and the whole Montagne party, manifested evident signs of discontent at the pardon not being unconditional.

The ceremony of the distribution of the decorations and medals to those who have been pronounced by the Central Jury as the most deserving of the national manufacturers, took place on Sunday morning in the salle of the Palais de Justice. The distribution was made by the President of the Republic in person, who previously attended in state at mass, in the chapel of Sainte Chapelle. On this occasion fifty-two of the exhibitors were decorated with the Legion of Honour, and 1618 medals were distributed, of which 182 were in gold, 540 in silver, and 896 in bronze.

On Tuesday the State trials at Versailles were brought to a close. Of the accused, seventeen persons were sentenced to transportation, three to five years' imprisonment, and the remaining eleven acquitted. The names of those sentenced to transportation are—Boichot, Avrial, Dufelt, Napoleon Lebon, Langlois, Faya; Commissaire, Sergeant, and Representative of the People; Maigne, Representative; Pilhes, Representative; Fargin Fayolle, Representative; Daniel Lamazière, Representative; Antoine Alexander Deville, Representative; Gambon, Representative; Guinard, Colonel, National Guard; Schmit. The names of those sentenced to five years' imprisonment, under extenuating circumstances, are—Nadaud, Representative; Mauriet; Frambourliet de Chaladuisac.

Mr. William C. Rives has been received by the President of the Republic, to whom he presented letters from his Government, accrediting him as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States at Paris

M. de Falloux has left Angers, with his family, for Nice, where he proposes passing the greater part of the winter.

A duel has actually took place in Switzerland between M. Felix Dupin, editor of the Independant, a Red Republican journal, and M. Marcel, editor of the Echo du Midi. The former was wounded in the breast, but not mortally, and the affair terminated.

The differences between France and Morocco are said to have been amicably arranged.

BELGIUM

The Belgium Chambers were opened on the 13th instant by the King in person, with a speech from the throne, in which he Majesty stated that the country presented a very favourable aspect: that its tranquility was a proof of its excellent spirit and of the sentiments of good institutions; that it possessed the confidence and sympathy of foreign nations; and that the harvest this year was a very abundant one, rendering provisions cheap, and at the same time increasing the exports of agricultural produce. The King then proceeded to declare that public attention was greatly directed to the progress of agriculture; that the efforts of his Government, public bodies, and private individuals, in that respect cannot fail to produce beneficial results; that the progress of manufactures, on the whole, satisfactory, the exports to distant states gradually increasing; that the sufferings of the population of Flanders were mitigated; that the late exhibition of manufactures at Ghent was a proof of the skill and energy of the industrial of those provinces; that the new postal system had hitherto worked well, and that other postal conventions were on the point of being concluded. His Majesty then announced bills for the improvement of the system of public education at the expense of the State; for the amendment of the penal code; for the abolition of the punishment of branding on the body; for the total abrogation, after the 1st of January next, of the contract between the Government and the Royal banking establishment, the Société Générale; for the further organisation of savings-banks and country banks of credit (without mortgage); for the revision of the mortgage system; and for the creation of establishments for providing funds for aged operatives. The King next spoke in high terms of the army, the civic guard, as well as of the cordial reception he lately met with in the provinces, and concluded by proclaiming the existence of an intimate union between the country and the Government, and of perfect harmony between all the powers of the State. He requested, on the part of his Government, the loyal aid of the Chambers.

A strike for wages has taken place amongst the factory operatives at Ghent for higher wages and a diminution in the hours of labour, is spreading no slight alarm in that large city.

ITALIAN STATES.

There is not a particle of interest in the accounts from the Peninsula. From Rome we learn that on the 4th the three deputations which had gone to the Pope at Portici, to beg his Holiness to return to the "Eternal City," had come back and reported that they had been most graciously received by Pio Nono, who gave a promise of his return without fixing any precise period.

The constitution of the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom is shortly to be published. The provinces of Lombardy and Venice are each to have a separate Consulta; but a central Government is to be established for the whole Kingdom, which would, moreover, send deputies to the general Parliament of the empire.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

Ruthless revenge still marks the triumph of the Austrians over the Magyars. From Vienna, under date of the 5th, letters state that no less than fifteen of the Hungarian prisoners, at Arad, have been sentenced to death, and that the executions were to take place on the following day. General Haynau had likewise informed the Jews of Peath that unless a contribution of 200,000 florins (about £18,000) were paid within twenty-four hours, he would adopt violent measures to insure obedience to his command. The chief reason why the Jews of Pesth have not yet paid the contribution, is because they are utterly impoverished, and unable to raise so large a sum.

TURKEY.

Accounts from Constantinople, of the 31st ult., state that Russia has consented to settle the affair of the Hungarian refugees, agreeably to the pleasure of the Porte, on condition that Turkey resigns its claims to the Danubian principalities in favour of Russia. This requires confirmation.

UNITED STATES.

Advices from New York to the 31st ult. were received on Tuesday, but they contain no news of interest.

There were rumours afloat respecting probable changes in the Cabinet, but nothing of the kind is likely to occur until after the meeting of Congress. The Nicaragua question will probably be a prominent topic of discussion early in the session. There were various statements in the public papers on the subject, but they were of a conjectural character.

The hostile Indians of Florida had given up three of their tribe who were guilty of murdering whites, and thus put an end to any chance of another Seminole war.

The foundation-stone of a new cotton manufactory was laid at Mobile on the 16th ult., amid great rejoicings. The southern manufactures increase rapidly.

A melancholy event occurred among the White Mountains, in New Hampshire, involving the death of Frederick, son of Sir Thomas Strickland, Bart. A boat's crew gives the following account of it: "Though strongly urged to the contrary, Mr. Strickland left the Notch House to attend Mount Washington, in company with a friend and the guide Upon reaching Mount Pleasant and finding snow, the other gentleman and the guide returned, taking Strickland's horse, who, in spite of their entreaties, resolved to pursue the journey on foot. Upon reaching the bridle path and coming at Fabyan's Mount Washington House, whither his baggage had been sent. The next morning Crawford went over to Fabyan's, and finding the stranger had not been there they started in pursuit of him. They returned to Fabyan's and followed till night, but only picked up a portion of his clothes. The next day he was found dead. It seems he had lost the track, and probably became insane in his wanderings, as his pantaloons and drawers were found on a log by Ammonoosuck Brook, and his legs and body were badly bruised. The deceased was about thirty years old, heir to large estates, and had been travelling several months in this country, with a younger brother, who returned to England from Boston a fortnight ago. He had letters to Bostonians, and before going to the White Hills had been stopping at the Tremont House, in this city. Mr. Horace Fabyan had the corpse buried in such a manner as to be disinterred if his friends shall request it."

CANADA.

We have accounts from Montreal and Quebec to the 30th October. The state of things described in the last arrival was unchanged, viz. agitation, dissatisfaction, and party brawls throughout the country.

Some disturbances had taken place at Quebec, arising out of the annexation movement, but no blood had been shed.

MEXICO.

The intelligence from this quarter informs us that there have been several dreadful fights between the United States and Americans, and the Apache and other Indians. In one battle, near Durango, fifty of the latter were killed, and the savages were defeated at all points. The Mexican Congress has declared the elections in the province of Yucatan void, and the insurgents in the Sierra Gorda have been defeated. The Government had sent 16,000 dollars to Yucatan, as a relief fund for that state. The siege of Bacalar had been raised by the Indians, but that of Tihosuco was closely pressed.

WEST INDIES.

News from Jamaica to the 20th ult. state that the Import Duties Bill, which had been three weeks in abeyance in the Assembly, was read a third time and passed on the 18th ult. On the following day it received the Governor's assent. It contains a retrospective clause by which all goods would be taxed from the 5th ult. The tariff had undergone considerable alterations, the duties generally being fixed at higher rates. This tariff, however, had not passed beyond a second reading, though it was expected it would eventually become a law. The Assembly had also carried a bill, through the House for the re-establishment of the police force. Rain had fallen upon the island, which was likely to prove very advantageous to the crops.

From Cuba we learn that all American residents in the island were very narrowly watched, and that the secret organisation for revolutionising the island was stronger than ever. The police of most of the citizens of Matanzas to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of the Queen of Spain had excited much comment and suspicion.

SIR JAMES ROSS'S ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

IN our Journal of last week we announced the return of Sir James Ross from the Arctic Regions, which he had been despatched in search of the Expedition of Sir John Franklin.

We have been fortunate enough to succeed in obtaining some Sketches of the scenes of peril to which Sir James Ross has been exposed, together with a Chart showing the route of the Expedition. To these Illustrations we append a very interesting official report of the proceedings of her Majesty's ships Enterprise and Investigator, transmitted by command of Captain Sir James Ross; between the date of this last despatch to the Secretary of the Admiralty, from Upernavik, in July, 1848, and the arrival of the Expedition off Scarborough, on the 3rd of this present November:

In accordance with the intentions expressed to the Secretary of the Admiralty, in my letter of the 13th of July, 1848, her Majesty's ships Enterprise and Investigator sailed on that day from the Danish settlement of Upernavik.

By running through an intricate archipelago of islands, which lies off the mainland, and seems to keep off the pressure of the main pack, we succeeded in passing the position in which the whale ships had been so long detained, and made every day some advance to the northward, until the 20th, when we made fast to a berg aground off Cape Shackleton.

Here we were joined by the Lord Gambier, of Hull, Mr. R. Hill, master, who informed us that, having run to the southward, with all the rest of the whaling ships, and having carefully examined the pack edge for any opening that might lead them to the westward, he had come to the conclusion there was not the smallest chance, from the close, compact, and heavy nature of the ice, for any ship crossing to the west coast of Baffin's Bay this season. He had, therefore, returned to the north, and expected that all the other ships would soon follow him, and endeavour to round the north end of the pack: he spoke very confidently of being able to accomplish this by the first week in August, and promised, at any rate, to rejoin in company with us until the 3rd of August. We cast off from the berg early the next morning, towing the ships through loose streams of ice towards some lanes of water, which had opened out during the calm which prevailed all night.

Our progress was, however, very slow during this and the next few days, and our situation often difficult and embarrassing.

On the morning of the 26th, when off the Three Islands of Baffin, in lat. 74 deg. 25 N., we were surprised, on the fog clearing off, to see the Lord Gambier, about eight miles distant, standing under all sail to the southward; thus disappointing us of the only remaining means of forwarding information of our proceedings to the whale-ships—and this was the more annoying, as we had only the evening before passed within a quarter of a mile of her, when, upon any signal of her intention of going to the southward, we should have placed on board of her letters and despatches. Her enterprising commander deserves the highest praise for persevering alone so far beyond all his fellows; and, had it depended on him, I believe he would not have left us until we had got through the great difficulty at Melville Bay.

We pursued our course to the northward under varying circumstances of perplexity, anxiety, and success; for, although I could not but feel assured of our being safe through the Melville Bay barrier, yet the constant and light sheets

MIDSUMMER NIGHT IN THE ARCTIC REGIONS.

The Investigator reached an open space of water on the evening of the 24th, but it was not until noon of the 26th September that the Enterprise could clear the pack. It is impossible to convey any idea of the sensation we experienced when we found ourselves once more at liberty, whilst many a grateful heart poured forth its praises and thanksgiving to Almighty God for this unlooked-for deliverance.

The advance of winter had now closed all the harbours against us; and as it was impossible to penetrate to the westward, through the pack from which we had just been liberated, I made the signal to the Investigator of my intention to return to England.

Standing to the S.E., we came in with the middle ice of Baffin's Bay, within a few miles of the land, and were obliged, in order to make our retreat the more sure, to run along its western edge to the N.E., until we reached the latitude 74½° N., where we rounded its north end, on the 4th October, in sight of the coast of Greenland.

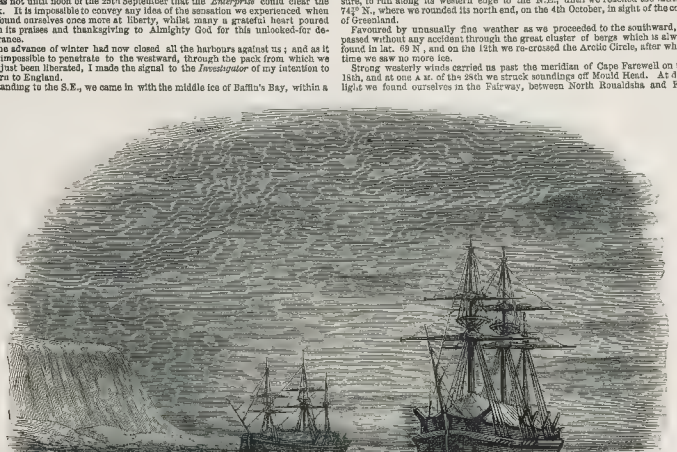
Favoured by unusually fine weather as we proceeded to the southward, we passed without any accident through the great cluster of bergs which is always found in lat. 69 N, and on the 12th we re-crossed the Arctic Circle, after which time we saw no more ice.

Strong westerly winds carried us past the meridian of Cape Farewell on the 18th, and at one A.M. of the 28th we struck soundings off Mould Head. At daylight we found ourselves in the Fairway, between North Ronaldsha and Fair Island, [illegible] southerly wind so impeded our farther progress, that it was late on Saturday night before we could anchor off Scarborough.

I arrived at the Admiralty early on Monday the 5th November.

I cannot conclude this report without expressing my deep obligations to Captain Bird for his cordial co-operation and zealous support throughout this most arduous service, and my admiration of the conduct of the officers and crews of both ships, whose meritorious exertions fully entitle them to the most favourable consideration of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

JAMES C. ROSS, Captain, R.N.



THE EXPEDITION HOUSED IN FOR THE WINTER.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

In the first Engraving is represented Midsummer Night in the Arctic Regions, showing the sun above the horizon at midnight.

The second Engraving shows the ships housed in for the winter; the scene giving an idea of the darkness at noon, Dec. 21, 1848.

The third Engraving shows the Expedition "beset in the pack" in Barrow's Straits, September, 1849. In this helpless condition the ships remained for a month, and drifted in an easterly direction upwards of 250 miles. They were finally liberated by the ice breaking up in Baffin's Bay, September 26, 1849.

THE "ENTERPRISE" AND "INVESTIGATOR" "BESET IN A PACK" OF ICE, IN BARROW'S STRAITS.

THE ISLAND OF CUBA.

By some late arrivals from the United States, we were informe that an expedition of not less than 2000 men had been prepared ther to invade the Spanish island of Cuba, and had been prohibited and dis persed by the Government. The temporary interest thus excited wil make a brief notice of the island acceptable to our readers.

More than two-thirds the size of England, and about six times the size of Jamaica, Cuba is by far the largest of all the West India islands if not larger than all the rest put together. It is 600 miles long, of an average breadth of 60, and an extreme breadth towards its western end of 117 miles. Its form is that of a slightly curved arm, with the shoulder and flap attached, and the hand stretched out towards the east. Lying in the thrust of the Gulf of Mexico, so as to domineer ove the sea on either side, between it and the near continent; and having at its northern extremity, in the Havannah, one of the noblest harbour in the world; it naturally blockades all the shores of the Gulf, from Yucatan to Florida. In the hands of an enemy it could command th whole trade of that great inlet of the ocean, and hamper alike New Orleans and Vera Cruz, Louisiana and the republic of Mexico. The climate is delightful, the greater part of the land extremely fertile: i abounds, too, in minerals; and from its valuable qualities, as well as it commanding position, the island is by far the most desirable possessio in the West Indies.

Discovered by Columbus, and colonised by Spain so early as 1511, bu carefully closed against the rest of the world, Cuba, notwithstanding it immense natural advantages, and continued large importations of slaves was only slowly progressive till towards the close of the last century, when being thrown open, it advanced rapidly, and has since become one of th most thriving places in the world. The population, which in 1775 wa 170,370, amounted, in 1827, to 704,487, and is now estimated at mor than 1,000,000. It has increased sixfold in little more than seventy years, and not by the importation of slaves. The population therefore, must have been doubled every twelve years—a rat of increase unexampled, we believe, in the world, except i some of the new states of the Union; and nearly twice as grea as the average increase in the whole United States. The culti vation and revenue have increased in proportion. The quantity o sugar (its staple production) exported in 1827 was 136,158,924 lb. and in 1847 it was not less than 540,000,000 lb. The whole annua average value of its export and import trade between 1772 and 177 was 3,483,830 dollars; between 1843 and 1847, the annual average ha increased to 50,149,797 dollars. This does not include smuggling, whic is said to be equal to one-third of the regular trade. In 1788 th revenue was 885,358 dollars; in 1847, it amounted to 12,800,000. I the interim the rate of taxation had been rather lowered than raise so that the fourteen-fold increase was the result of the increased wealt of the people. Till the close of the last century Cuba was a burden o Spain; it now pays all the expenses of its government, civil an military, even to clothing and equipping troops sent destitute fro Spain; and, besides yielding large sums to persons about the Court o Madrid, sends from £1,200,000 to £1,500,000 to Spain for the publi service.

From the sugar of Cuba coming into competition with the sugar o our colonies, which have by no means thriven like Cuba, their partisan have ascribed its prosperity and their decline to its having con inue slavery and the slave-trade, while they have been compelled to give u the slave-trade and emancipate their slaves. Without denying tha the continued importation of slaves may have contributed to the pro duction of sugar in Cuba, there are other causes more gratifying to ou feelings of humanity, and love of justice and freedom, than the con tinuance of slavery and the slave-trade, for the prosperity of Cuba The population is far more of European than Negro origin, in compa rison with that of our islands. In Jamaica, at the time of emancipation the slaves were ten times more numerous than the free population and the whites, it is asserted, did not form a thirtieth part of the population In Cuba the slaves have never amounted to one-half the population. I 1827, when the last census was taken, the number of slaves wa 286,942; and the number of free persons—of whom 311,051 were whites—was 417,545. Subsequent estimates of the population do no much vary these proportions; and more than half, at present, are whites, and nearly two-thirds are free. Consistently with this, we fin the bulk of our West India proprietors absentees, while the Cuban pro prietors live in the island. The Cubans were never, therefore, so de pendent for their personal safety on the garrisons of the mother country as our planters; and, as they increased in number and power, they could dictate conditions to such a weak Government as that of Sp n In 1818, after the close monopoly of Spain had been repeatedly in e on, the Cubans "extorted"—the word used by Mr. Madden, in his re cent work on Cuba—"the privilege from the Spanish Sovereign of ex porting their products to whatever country seemed most advantageou for its commerce, and of opening its ports to strangers." The grea comparative prosperity of Cuba, therefore, is due to its greater amoun of free population—to men looking after their own business instead o relying on others; and to a free trade with their neighbours.

It was, probably, from feelings of hostility towards England that th Spanish Government favoured by its laws the merchants of the Unite States, and invited settlers from that country. A more durable bon of union, however, was the mutual interest of the people. The Americans supply the Cubans with breadstuffs and lumber, which are indispensable to their prosperity. From being favoured by the Government and from having intimate commercial relations with the Cubans, the Americans have, of late years, settled in Cuba in great numbers American capitalists have flocked thither. What proportion they may bear to the Spaniards, we are not informed; but they have acquire property in almost every part of the island. They have brought a vas number of new estates into cultivation; and the northern shores of the island, in the vicinity especially of Cardenas and Matanzas, have mor the character of American than Spanish settlements. To America enterprise Cuba is indebted for nine or ten lines of railways, and or regular communication by steam between its various ports. The Americans have substituted new and improved machinery for old me thods of manufacturing sugar; and promise, notwithstanding the con tinuance of the slave-trade, rather to dispense with slaves, than strengthen the motives for importing them. With the United State more than half the trade of Cuba is carried on. To the States the Cubans send their children to be educated. In the States they have established newspapers to advocate their interests, and, in imitation o the Americans, they have five or six daily papers at the Havannah It is natural that the Cubans should follow the example of their pros perous friends. Their own progress in prosperity has been coeval with the coming of the Americans, and has grown with their increase—al the inhabitants are, consequently, gradually becoming, in their modes o thought and action, their activity and enterprise, more American than Spanish.

As they have grown in prosperity and freedom of thought, like their neighbours, their government has become all too narrow for them. Fo years the Cubans have been discontented with Spain, and latterly their discontent has much increased. In 1812 they were treated as a part o Spain, and had representatives in the Cortes; in 1837 their representatives were excluded from the Cortes, and their political condition was made dependent on special laws, in the making of which they were denied a voice. From that hour it was avowed that they were to be governed more for the advantage of Spain than their own. They are subjected to very onerous police regulations; forced to take out licences for every occupation—when they go a short distance from their home remove their residence, or receive, even for one night, a stranger or a friend into their dwellings. They have been prohibited from sending their children to the United States for education. They are indignant at the large amount of their property remitted to Spain, and the uses to which it is applied; and they complain, with justice, of the onerous taxation by which it is taken from them. With that discontent the Americans sympathize. They encourage and exasperate it; and the great body of the Cubans, particularly the Creoles who were at one time disposed to court the support of England—have now turned to the United States for assistance. The expedition was set on foot by their means to assist them. A country so large as Cuba—so fit (like our own island), from its position to be the seat of empire—increasing so fast in population, wealth, and power—cannot long remain dependent on such a decaying, feeble state, as Spain. A separation must take place at no distant day; and, if Cuba be not peacefully and federatively joined to the United States, with which it is commercially and geographically connected, almost as closely as Ireland is connected with England, war probably will soon ensue, neve finally to cease till the island be annexed by conquest. Cuba, though a slave colony, is by commercial interest closely united with the free as well as the slave states of the Union; it may act as an additional bond between them; and it is, perhaps, for the interests of humanity—for the more speedy abolition of slavery itself—that the separation of Cuba from Spain, and its federative union with the States, should be peaceful, prosperous, and permanent.

ST. JAGO DE CUBA, SKETCHED FROM THE HARBOUR.

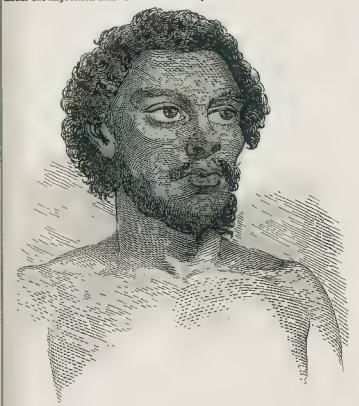
Saint Jago de Cuba, the sketch of which accompanies our article, was formerly the capital of the island. It is in the eastern intendicia, while Havannah, the present capital, is in the western. It has a good harbour, and contains about 30,000 inhabitants.

JACKEY JACKEY.

We have been favoured by a Correspondent with the accompanying Sketch of the intelligent aboriginal of New South Wales, "Jackey Jackey," who accompanied Sir Thomas Mitchell in several of his expeditions, and latterly in the one unfortunately undertaken by the late enterprising Mr. Kennedy. Out of fourteen persons who started on the expedition only three survived, and Jackey was one of them; the rest having died of exhaustion, and from the spears of the blacks. Mr. Kennedy was speared in several places; and after his death the faithful Jackey carried him, until, worn out by hunger and fatigue, he had to bury the corpse, before he could reach the coast.

Previous to leaving Sydney, the Government chartered a small vessel expressly to send Jackey for Mr. Kennedy's papers, and had granted him an annual pension. The inhabitants also subscribed a fund to mark their sense of his faithful services.

Our Correspondent states in a postscript:—We had no authentic intelligence in May last of the second expedition undertaken by Dr. Leichart, but many were under the impression that he was murdered by the blacks.



JACKEY JACKEY, AN ABORIGINAL OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

An interesting account of the Australian exploring expedition, in which poor Kennedy lost his life, was given in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for August 25.

LETTER FROM A GOLD-SEEKER IN UPPER CALIFORNIA.

We have been favoured by a Correspondent with the following extract from a letter just received from his son, who is at the "Gold Diggings."—

We had to make machines for our work, commonly called cradles. They are like a trough, with a sieve at one end, in which the earth is put in by one man, while another pours water on it and keeps rocking it all the time; when all the dirt and sand is washed through the sieve, he throws out the pebbles, &c., and is then ready to have the sieve filled up again. Two men can keep each other steadily at work, the one digging and carrying the earth in a bucket, and the other washing and rocking the cradle. These cradles are placed as close to the water's edge as possible, and I have tired myself many a day thoroughly. Our party made two machines by felling an oak tree, splitting it, and hollowing it out.

July 1st. Our work for the week done by four men amounts to 312 dollars (of 4s. 6d.), being 53 to each man; our expenses, including tools, cradles, and provisions, 104 dollars, or 26 each man. Our tools and cradles will last us for a long time.

Gold is worth here (that is, at the Diggings) 16 dollars an ounce; but at San Francisco 17 dollars an ounce is paid for it.

This work of ours is thought very bad here, as 16 dollars a day is called the average; and I have seen men working within a few feet of us make two or three ounces apiece a day. Some of our company have made six ounces a day for a few days, and then the place gives out. I believe that all the reports as to the quantity of the precious metal in these mines, that have been sent to the United States and to England, fall short of the truth.

In working for gold, we dig in the bank of the river, and throw off the loose rocks and sand, and then wash in the cradles all the dirt, clay, and pebbles we find. We continue to dig until we come to the granite, which forms the bottom of the river; and when the granite is soft, or "rotten," as we miners call it, we dig into the granite as far as we can.

BAY OF SAN FRANCISCO, UPPER CALIFORNIA.

Tne wea her is extremely hot here, so that we only work eight hours in the day. We cook our breakfast and eat it, and commence work at half-past five, work till eleven, then leave off, and lay by in the shade and cook dinner, and rest until three, at which time we again commence and work till sunset. Then we cook supper, pass an hour or two in talking and singing, and go to bed. Our camp is composed of six tents, each of which cook their own food. Our food consists of bread, rice, beans, and dried apples; sugar and spice we add to suit our taste. We bought some fresh beef one day, and on our return to the camp cooked part of it for supper, and hung the remainder up in a tree, but in the morning it was gone; it had been stolen during the night by the klotas, animals of a breed between a wolf and a dog; we frequently hear their cries in the night.

GOLD-WASHING AT THE DIGGINGS.

You will see, from the sample of gold sent enclosed, that it has been melted, most certainly in some volcano, as marks of volcanic eruptions are visible on every side; and in digging a hole, we come to successive layers of burnt pebbles, and the gold found in them is stained brownish.

In the Alta Cal fornia, of July 12th, is the following extract from the New York Journal of Commerce, which, if it has not yet been published in England, will be read with interest:—

"DISCOVERY OF MUMMIES AT DURANGO, MEXICO.—The Texas Star states that several thousands of mummies have been discovered in the environs of Durango, in Mexico. They are in a sitting posture, but have the same wrappings, bands, and ornaments as the Egyptians. Among them was found a sculptured bust, with a polcmard of flint, chaplets, necklaces, &c., of alternated coloured beads; fragments of bone, polished like ivory; fine worked elastic tissues (probably our modern india-rubber cloth); measures worked like those of our Indians of to-day; bones of viper, &c. It remains to continue these interesting researches, and America will become another Egypt to antiquaries; and her ruins will go back to the oldest period of the world, thereby realising that the ancestors of the Montezumas lived on the Nile."

Yours, &c., GEORGE NAPIER.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Nov. 18.—Twenty-fourth Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 19.—Length of day 8h. 37m.
TUESDAY, 20.—Princess Royal born, 1840.
WEDNESDAY, 21.—St. Cecilia.
THURSDAY, 22.—St. Clement. Old Martinmas Day.
FRIDAY, 23.—Moon's First Quarter, 2h. 34m. A.M.
SATURDAY, 24.—Sun rises 7h. 35m., sets 4h. 0m.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 24.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
3 50	4 7	4 20	4 40	4 55	5 15	5 35	6 13	6 40	7 5	7 40	8 15	8 52	9 30

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. W. BATTY.—Glorious success of Monsieur's new extravaganza of MR. BRIGGS, or the PLEASURES of HOUSE-KEEPING and HORSE-KEEPING, which, having been nightly received with deafening shouts of laughter, and the most enthusiastic approbation, will be repeated every evening with Mr. FRANCIS and Mr. CONWAY as the Hippodramas of THE PROPHET; between and novel SCENES of the ARENA, forming the most varied and attractive Entertainments in the metropolis. On MONDAY, Nov. 19, the performances will commence at a Quarter to Seven with, FRANCIS'S successful pantomime of THE TWO BILLY GOATS, with Batty's peerless SCENES—the ARENA, in which four mettlesome quadrupeds will be ridden by Mr. Batty and Mr. J. Rickards alternately, concluding in the unrivalled act of Pas de Deux. To conclude with a Grand Equestrian Drama, in two acts and a tableau, entitled the ENTRANCE of MR BRIGGS, or the PLEASURES of HOUSE-KEEPING and HORSE-KEEPING, introducing the whole Company as well as a large troop of real horses, real donkeys, real pigs, real roaches go-carts, and other vehicles, &c, &c. Box-office open from Eleven till Four.—Stage-Manager, Mr. W. West.

ERNST at EXETER HALL, WEDNESDAY NEXT.—The FIFTH of the LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS will be held on WEDNESDAY EVENING NEXT, the 21st inst., when the celebrated Violinist, Herr Ernst, will perform for the second time at these Concerts, in conjunction with other artistes of eminence.—Tickets 7s. and 5s., Reserved Seats, 4s. Stalls, 2s.; may be had of Mr. AYRES, 378, Strand, at the Hall Exeter Hall (west); of Mr STAMMERS, 4, Exeter Hall, and of all Musicsellers.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—ROME ILLUSTRATED in a Series of DISSOLVING VIEWS, with a Description, Daily at Half-past Four, and every Evening at a Quarter to Ten. LECTURES on the CHEMISTRY of FOOD, by Mr. Ashley, Daily at Half-past Three, and at the Evening at Nine o'Clock. LECTURE, with EXPERIMENTS, on the HYDRO ELECTRIC MACHINE by Dr. Bachhoffner, Daily at Two, and on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight o'Clock. EXHIBITION of the OXY-HYDROGEN MICROSCOPE, LIVER and LIVING BELL. The DIORAMA TROPE, MODELS and MACHINERY EXPLAINED. Admission, 1s.; Schools, Half-price.

EXPOSITION des PRODUITS de l'INDUSTRIE FRANÇAISE, 13, George-street, Hanover-square.—The EXPOSITION will positively be OPEN to the PUBLIC on MONDAY, the 19th, under the direction of Chs. Séb. Jerome de Lamorna, ancien Député and Membre du Conseil General des Manufactures de France.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Exchange".—Norris Castle, Isle of Wight, was the residence of the Duchess of Kent and the Princess Victoria (her present Majesty) in the summer of 1831.

"A Constant Reader."—We sent a cover last week as to newspapers sent to Australia: they must be pre-paid 1*d. each, and letters* 8*d. The reason of this is, that the packet' system, which has been for the last few years in operation, is now discontinued.* "M. N." is thanked for the correction.

"A Graduate."—Surenne's "Pronouncing French Dictionary," and Hamel's "Grammar."

"T. T."—We doubt.

"Aden."—We regret that we cannot serve you.

"G. W." Canterbury.—Thanks

"C. W. C.," Severn Stoke.—We cannot determine without a specimen.

"A. O."—One of the Almanacks (we think the "Parsely") published by the Stationers' Company contains a list of grammar-schools

"J. G.," Glasgow.—A portrait of Lord Dudley Coutts Stuart appeared in No. 359, of our Journal.

"Wyvern."—Apply at 86, Fleet-street.

"Trouxache Church."—We have not received the Sketch.

"J. B.," Upton.—We shall be glad to receive the descriptive details.

"An Agriculturist." The office of the Royal Agricultural Improvement Society of Ireland is at 41, Upper Sackville-street, Dublin. That of the Scottish Society at Edinburgh, per Blackwood and Sons.

"T. L. K."—All the volumes of our Journal are kept in print.

"Helen."—The least full passage in question is addressed by Portia to Bassanio, in the "Merchant of Venice," act 3, scene 2 (the casket scene.

"B. B." Wall's End is one of the most valuable collieries of the Northumberland and Durham Coal-fields

"A Subscriber from the first," Northampton.—Drury Lane and Covent Garden Theatres will each contain about 3000 persons. The receipts depend upon the performances and prices. There is no such Pronouncing Dictionary as you name.

"Lantyglos" The weight of the Great Britain steam-ship, from figure-head to taffrail, is about 1

"J. G. T.," Bristol.—A cheap filter. "Use a large pan or tub as the tank, and a cer the water (by ascension) through a sponge stuffed into the hole in the bottom of flower-pots, using two pots—the lower one being half filled with charcoal, and loosely covered with thin flannel, the upper one placed in it so as to sink the flannel with it, and then covered by a string."—From the Builder.

"Giovanni."—William Scrope, Esq., the author of the "Art of Deer-Stalking," &c., is still alive, and resides at Cockerington Hall, Louth, county of Lincoln. He is the representative of the great House of Scrope, of Castle Combe, Wilts. His only child, Joanna, is not a Scrope Foulet Scrope, Esq., M.P., for Stroud.

"T. T." The mere possession of the seals would not be sufficient to entitle the holder to the arms. A legal right to armorial bearings must be founded on an entry in the Heralds' Visitations, or in some other of the Heralds' official records. Otherwise, the right must be acquired by grant.

"Scarborough."—Apply at the Admiralty, Charing-cross.

"Scaliger." The arms of Cooke are "Arg. a lion and bordure engr. sa."

"Eqonet." The arms required are "Arg. on a cross vert, five martlets of the field. Crest: A stag's head cabossed ppr."

"F. A. B."—No crest appears to belong to our entry of the arms of Fresnes.

"Heraldicus" gives us the following excellent rule to govern precedence:—"All precedence ceases from the second degree; that is, children of persons of actual rank have a rank of courtesy derived from their parents, but this does not extend to the grandchildren of such persons of actual rank." At the formation of the household of Charlotte, Queen of George III., it was decided on this principle, that Miss Wrastesley, daughter of Sir John Wrottesley, Bart., should take precedence of Miss Beauclerk, daughter of Lord Robert Beauclerk, son of the Duke of St. Albans

"Farmer, Croydon."—We will endeavour to give the arms in question next week.

"Armydefardel."—The distinguishing feature that characterises a crest to be worn a badge is the wreath, cap of maintenance, or ducal coronet on which it is placed.

"A Subscriber at Dittenhall." The Prince of Wales is Duke of Cornwall and Rothsay, Earl of Chester, Carrick, and Dundonald, Baron Renfrew, and Lord of the Isles; Duke of Saxony, Prince of Coburg and Gotha, and a Knight of the Garter. A peer may be Earl of two different places.

"A Constant Subscriber."—An address by Sir J. Weir Hogg, Bart., at 16, Grosvenor-square

"Courtenay."—Pronounced "Shotteshe."

"A Gresham."—Kent's Co., Cheapside.

"H. W."—Cramer, Beale, and Co., Regent-street; and T. Chappell, Bond-street.

"X. Y. Z." Write to Alfred Novello, music-warehouse, Cheapside.

"T. H. C."—The Christian name of Lord Bexley is Stanford.

"B. D. L."—Amateurs in the country can always procure music by foreign composers, by application to Ewer and Co., Newgate-street; or, Wessell and Co., Strand-street.

"B. B." Courtesy and custom combine to concede to retired officers the privilege of placing cockades in their servants' hats

"G. a Sa" Apply to Mr. Hogg's "London Guide."

"J. R. M.," Hampstead.—We have not seen the work.

"Delta." We cannot undertake to enquire.

"A. L."—Yes.

"A Subscriber." The Rue custom was noticed in our Journal of Oct. 31.

"R. L." Cork.—Certainly not.

"Francesca." —There is no "Handbook of Sculpture" published. See the Royal Academy Lectures

"A Member of the Lower House."—Stealing newspapers is a felony. The notice you propose will be of service.

"W. F." Brighton.—For the latter 10, read 11.

"E. T."—The back Numbers, till within a month, are double price.

"Chemistry."—Apply to Mr. Thomas, advertising agent, Catherine-street, Strand.

"Freshwater" should wait for one of the musical annuals.

"X. Y. Z."—The name, Hunt. A full report of the trial, by the late Pierce Egan, was published in 1824, condensed in "Celebrated Trials," 6 vols.

"A Washer," Cheltenham.—*No situation in life precludes the obtaining a military commission. The cost of an ensign's outfit is about £*90. Any bookseller will ascertain the price of the work on Fortification.

"P. M." Southsea.—Liveries are governed by the metal and colour of the arms. There is no question are "black and white."

"J. N.," Grasmere.—The Staff Officer of Pensioners in your district will tell you if you be entitled to a Naval Medal; and, if you are, direct you how to obtain it.

"Philo."—The usage of a crest in the way suggested would render the party liable to the tax on armorial bearings.

"S. M." Received.

"Πραξιτερος."—We have not room for the abstract.

"Goujas."—Apply to Dulau and Co., Soho-square.

"Blob." A lady is not entitled, under any circumstances, to bear a crest.

"R. J. G."—The arms are: "Gyronny of six pieces, sa. between three anchors ppr., three bezants, impaling Quarterly gu. and or, in the first quarter a mullet arg. Crest: Out of a ducal coronet a lion's head, transfixed by an arrow." To obtain the situation of Queen's Messenger requires great interest.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1849.

DURING the prevalence of the Cholera, the prayers of the nation were solemnly offered up to the Almighty Ruler of the Universe, that He would be pleased in his mercy to remove the scourge of Pestilence with which, in his infinite wisdom, He had seen fit to afflict this, as well as other portions of the globe. The nation prayed in the extremity of its distress, and humbled itself before Heaven, that the chastening hand might be withdrawn. The same feeling that prompted the prayer, the penitence, and the humiliation of that period, prompted the Thanksgiving for the removal of the Plague which the rulers of the land recommended by the Queen's proclamation, and which the people of all classes and degrees obeyed with a religious feeling on Thursday. The people had, doubtless, in many a humble home, and in the sanctity of many a private dwelling, offered a more acceptable tribute of their gratitude to Heaven than any temporal authority could command; but the recommendation of a simultaneous thanksgiving was none the less the duty of the rulers to give, and of the ruled to follow. It was a national recognition of the Providence of God in the government of the world, which we as well as other nations are but too apt to forget in the sordid pursuits of our trade or our industry, our money getting and our money spending, and in our too keen competition with one another.

But having prayed while the hand of affliction was heavy upon us, and having returned thanks in all humility and fervency of gratitude when its touch was lightened or removed, are we and our temporal rulers to forget altogether the past affliction of the people? Is the plague of Cholera to be consigned to oblivion until it shall again make its appearance amongst us? and are we to adopt no other means for its mitigation when present, or its prevention when absent, than prayer and praise? "Cleanliness is next to godliness;" and although for our ungodliness we may have been afflicted with this mysterious disease, may not our uncleanliness have been the greatest of the sins which brought it upon us? Have we not habitually, as a nation and as an assemblage of communities, disobeyed those physical laws of God, which are no less imperative than the laws of his morality? Having rendered the praises and thanksgiving of our tongues, is it not our duty to render the praise of our actions, and the thanksgiving of our purer life, to Him whose physical ordonnances are as just and as inflexible as his moral government of the universe? Society has sinned, and it has been punished: but if society, we are no less divinely punished. If neither ignorance nor greediness of gain, but our simple indifference to the condition of our humbler fellowcreatures cause us to neglect the means of assuring the public health, we suffer equally for our indifference, which, in this case, becomes a moral as well as a physical contravention of the laws of God. We cannot escape the penalty by prayer, if the ignorance, the cupidity, or the indifference still remain; neither can we insure ourselves against the recurrence of punishment by giving thanks with our lips alone. We give something more earnest, and more truly pious than our words, our prayer is but a meaningless superstition, and our praise but a mockery of the Divinity.

There was a time in the history of European nations when pestilence was more frequent, and when ignorance of the laws of physical well-being prevailed amongst all classes of society. The general progress of intelligence, if it have not yet pervaded and permeated the great masses of the people, has been such as to dissipate this ignorance in a great degree, even in the "age of great cities" we are tolerably well aware of the causes that generate and perpetuate epidemic diseases. The consequence is that plague is neither so frequent nor so dreadful a visitor as it was in days when the laws of nature were not thoroughly and carefully studied. It is not so much our ignorance, as the indifference of the powerful and the cupidity of those who profit by the abuses of old systems, that prevent our great cities from becoming models of cleanliness and comfort for the poor, as well as of luxury for the rich. The upper and middle classes of society, engrossed with their own pleasures or their own business, and enjoying all the advantages of our expanding science and our wondrous civilisation, have not duly considered the claims of the poor. Water, air, and light, those primal necessities, have become, partly in consequence of this indifference, and partly in consequence of the more culpable cupidity of the classes in comfortable worldly circumstances, the almost unattainable luxuries of the humbler and poorer in an English people. An artificial barbarism has grown up amongst us, and ulcer-spots of filth, vice, crime, poverty, and deprivation of the commonest and cheapest material blessings of the world have been planted, till the infection has spread beyond the original sore, into parts of the body politic that thought themselves pure and far beyond the reach of the evil. Society has allowed multitudes to dwell in filthy alleys amidst moral as well as physical pollution. Society has not enforced upon the proprietors of poor men's hovels the construction of the proper conveniences for the removal of the abominations that cause or aggravate disease. Society has buried hundreds of thousands of dead among the living, and continues the practice in defiance of decency as well as safety; and Society, by granting, encouraging, and upholding pernicious monopolies, has rendered a proper supply of water a thing too expensive to come within the reach of the struggling and the poor. For these sins and offences —the greater because they are not the result of ignorance, but of selfishness—the people of large cities have paid the penalty of Plague. Let us hope that the day of thanksgiving commanded by our rulers will open our eyes to the duty which we have hitherto neglected, of caring for the destitute and degraded condition of the most helpless as well as the most numerous class of the people; and that the wealthy will co-operate in those measures of prevention which the common safety requires, and which the dictates of benevolence ought to be alone sufficient to recommend. There are certain tasks that individual zeal and benevolence cannot master, and which need the combined force of the whole people, acting under the name and authority of the state, to accompl .. The sanitary reform of great cities is one of them. The educated and wealthy classes have been warned of the danger; they have suffered, in common with the ignorant and the poor; and they will suffer again, if they do not use those advantages of intelligence and position which they enjoy, to urge the Legislature to remedy the growing evils of large towns and cities. London, with a population of two millions and a quarter, buries its dead in its bosom—pollutes its tidal river, till it is unfit to drink—deprives the larger portion of its population of air, light, and water—and suffers accumulations of nameless filth to poison the atmosphere for miles around. Should London continue in all these evil courses, when its population shall number three or four millions, it may expect a pestilence to which that of 1849 will appear but as "a wart to Ossa." Let us, therefore, endeavour to distil out the soul of goodness from the evil thing of Cholera, and, having rendered to the Almighty the tribute of our grateful words, serve Him by our grateful deeds—in elevating the standard of life and living among the poor. That would be indeed a thanksgiving worthy of a great nation.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

Her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, with the youthful members of the Royal family, continue in the enjoyment of excellent health.

On Saturday last, the Queen and the Prince, attended by the Countess of Mount-Edgecumbe, Col. the Hon. Charles Grey, and Col. the Hon. A. Gordon, paid a visit to the Count and Countess de Neuilly at Claremont.

On Sunday, the Queen and the Prince attended divine service in the Private Chapel. The Duchess of Kent also attended the service.

On Monday the Prince's Council, attended by the Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Charles Grey and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. A. Gordon, left Windsor Castle for Birmingham, at twenty minutes before eight o'clock A.M., to inspect the Exhibition of Manufactures and Art in that town. The Prince travelled by the North-Western Railway, and returned to the Castle the same afternoon.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince de Joinville and the Duke d'Aumale arrived at the Castle on Monday, and on Tuesday enjoyed the sport of shooting, the company with the Prince Consort.

The Duchess of Kent dined with the Royal party on Wednesday. Sir Charles Wood had also the honour of joining the Royal circle

The Queen and Prince Albert, and the ladies and gentlemen of the Royal household, attended divine service in St George's Chapel, on Thursday morning. The prayers were read by the Hon. and Rev. H. Cust and the Rev. Mr. Neville. The sermon was preached by the Hon. and Rev. Edward Moore, canon in residence.

Divine service was performed at the private chapel in Windsor Castle in the morning and afternoon by the Hon. and Rev. G. Wellesley.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

We are happy to announce that her Majesty the Queen Dowager has not retrograded in her state of health during the last few days. The bulletin issued on Thursday runs as follows:—

"THE PRIORY, Thursday, 15th of November, 1849.

"The Queen Dowager has passed a comfortable night, and her Majesty is considerably refreshed this morning. "DAVID DAVIES, M.D.
"RICHARD BRIGHT, M.D."

Lord Dufferin has relieved the Marquis of Ormonde in his duty as Lord in Waiting to the Queen; and Captain the Hon Joseph Denman has relieved Sir Frederick Pelham in Waiting to her Majesty.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent attended divine service at the parish church, Windsor, on Thursday morning.

The Duke and Duchess of Beaufort and Lady Henrietta Somerset have arrived at Beaufort House, from a visiting tour in Scotland, en route to Badminton

The Earl and Countess of Brownlow and the Ladies Cust have arrived in Belgrave-square from Belton House, near Grantham, and are about to repair to Brighton.

The Earl and Countess of Eglintop are entertaining company at Eglinton Castle, N B.

Lady Charlotta Egerton was safely delivered of a son on Tuesday last, at Mere Hall, Cheshire.

IRELAND.

THE CORK ELECTION.—The nomination of candidates for the vacant seat in the city of Cork took place on Saturday John Colter, Esq., proposed Colonel Gubbins, as the friend of domestic industry in preference to those of foreigners. The proposition was seconded by Captain Westropp. Mr. Alexander M'Carthy, the Liberal candidate, was proposed by Dr. Lyons, and seconded by R. Dowden. Mr. J. F. Maguire, the proprietor of the Cork Examiner, was proposed and seconded, but withdrew from the contest after a speech in favour of Mr. M'Carthy. The poling commenced on Tuesday, at 10 o'clock A.M., and closed at half-past 4 o'clock P.M., with the return of the Conservative candidate, the numbers being:—

Chatterton	..	..	..	..	..	880
M'Carthy	..	..	..	..	..	587
				Majority		293

There was little or no excitement displayed by the people throughout the whole affair.

MR. BRIGHT'S SPEECH ON IRELAND.—Mr. John O'Connell has addressed, through the Freeman's Journal, a long letter to Mr. Bright, announcing a vote of thanks from the Repeal Association for his speech at Manchester, on the condition of this country. In a postscript Mr. O'Connell states that the Repeal Association intend to print and circulate the speech in England, and, "as soon as possible, to forward the project of a mission from this country to corroborate and enforce its truths on the minds of your fellow-countrymen."

NATIONAL THANKSGIVING.—Thursday was observed as a holiday in Dublin, the courts and public offices being closed.

REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—At the meeting on Monday the rent for the week was announced as £19

HORRIBLE SHIPWRECK.—The ship Helen Thompson, of AYR, arrived at Troon, November 12, from St. John's, reports that on the 5th November, lat. 54 N., long. 20 28 W., came up with the brig South Stockton, of Newcastle, late Wicker, waterlogged, and in a very sinking state as follows:—The brig left Quebec on the 8th of September, for Newcastle. On October 11 she was running in a heavy gale of wind from the westward under close-reefed maintopsail; next morning, at four A.M., they tried the pumps, but could not get her to work; all hands were immediately called, but still she gained upon them. They then sounded her, and found eight feet water in her hold. In this dilemma they considered it was the best thing they could begin to prepare for the worst. They put a considerable quantity of provisions, water, and other articles in a large house which the vessel had on deck, which, just having succeeded in doing, the vessel suddenly careened over on her beam-ends, and washed the master and a boy overboard. She then have the deck cargo off, carrying away the topmasts and rudder, and sweeping the decks of everything, house and all, and afterwards she gradually began to right. The men now took to the tops, and made a cover of canvass around them, to save them as much as possible from the severity of the weather. In this state they remained eleven days without any assistance, except a very small quantity of water, when one of them died; and they were under the necessity of eating a small portion of their companion. They continued drooping one by one till they were all dead but Robert Hogg, one of the seamen, who, with much difficulty, got

POSTSCRIPT.

REFORMATION OF JUVENILE OFFENDERS.—The committee of the Philanthropic Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Male Offenders have made their report, which states that the late William Denison, Esq., M.P., has bequeathed the society £500 free of duty, W. Holcombe, Esq., £100, and E. B. Vigurs, Esq., £50. The committee have also received a beautiful communion (small organ) for the chapel, from a friend who has long been a liberal contributor to the society. A handsome stained window, for the east end of the new chapel, has been also presented by W. Gladstone, Esq., in memory of the late medical farm school at Red Hill, on the Brighton road, is now nearly completed, and already contains 93 boys, whose ages vary from 13 to 18 years When wholly finished, which will be shortly, the boys who are now in the institution in St. George's-fields, Southwark, will be removed, and the London establishment broken up.

We understand that Mr. Serjeant Dowling, of the Home Circuit, has been appointed to the office of Judge of the County Court for Yorkshire, rendered vacant by the death of Mr. R. Wharton.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERIES ON THE DAY OF THANKSGIVING.—The attendance of most persons at some place of worship on Thursday was taken advantage of by the London thieves, who appear to have been unusually active on a very large amount. In the course of the day information was received at the police stations that No 20, Avenue-terrace, Chelsea, had been plundered of upwards of £100 worth of silver plate; also that No. 10, Prescot-street, Whitechapel, had been plundered of £300 worth of jewellery, and between £80 and £90 in gold, and a £5 note; also that Mr. Weeks, 385, Rotherhithe wall, had been plundered of silver plate, value £70, and £20 in gold and silver; from 3 Gravenor-park, Camberwell, silver plate, (crest a lion rampant) value £90; from — Briggs, Esq., 17, Pond-street, Hampstead, silver plate, value £200; from Mr. Wood, 170, Bishopsgate-street Without, fourteen £10 Bank of England notes, a large amount in cash, and a quantity of miscellaneous property.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

On Wednesday M. Fould brought forward the financial state of the country, representing the whole deficit for 1849 to be 534,148,900f. He purposed withdrawing the Income-Tax Bill, it being inquisitorial, vexatious, and intolerable. The impost on potable liquors he wished to be continued; but he should endeavour to devise some means by which the inconvenience of its collection might be avoided. He should also propose an increase of five centimes on timber. By an augmentation of receipts and a reduction of expenditure, he hoped to equalise the budget. He concluded by proposing that his statement be referred to the Committee on the Budget. This was strongly opposed; and an amendment was moved, that a special commission be appointed to take the subject into consideration. Upon a division, there appeared For the amendment, 236; against it, 392: giving a majority for Ministers of 156.

The financial statement was well received out of doors.

In the same sitting, the Minister of War presented a bill for 38,000,000f., to meet expenses unprovided for by the Budget. The bill was carried by a large majority.

The settlement of the dispute between Morocco and France is confirmed from several sources.

The Journal des Debats says that, in consequence of the differences between Russia and Turkey having been adjusted, the French fleet, which had quitted Malta for Smyrna, had received instructions to return to Toulon.

M. de Rayneval has refused the portfolio for Foreign Affairs. Among the persons named as likely to accept it are the French Minister at London, M. Drouyn de l'Huys, who is at present in Paris; and M. Thuriel de la Rosière. The portfolio was offered to General de Flahault, but declined.

COUNTRY NEWS.

FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETIES.

Two meetings—one in the morning and the other in the afternoon—were held at Birmingham, on Tuesday, on the subject of a movement which was commenced some time ago, chiefly among the working classes of Birmingham, for the formation of societies to purchase freehold property, to be afterwards a lotted among them, so that the members should obtain the franchise after forty-shilling freehold. The movement has been successful: nearly 2000 persons have joined in Birmingham alone, while similar societies have sprung up in almost every large town in the neighbourhood in the midland counties. Several estates, mostly in small parcels, have already been bought in the neighbourhood of the town, and allotments have been made. In the course of working these societies various difficulties have arisen, principally out of the different tenures of property which land is held in different towns, and with a view to obviate these difficulties the present conference was determined to be held. The morning meeting was held for the purpose of fixing the resolutions to be proposed in the evening, and conferring generally upon the subject. Mr. Schoefield, M.P., presided, and there were present Mr. Cobden, M.P.; Mr. Bright, M.P.; Mr George Thompson, M.P., Mr. Sturge (of Birmingham); Mr. Latimore, farmer, Wraxhall-stead; Rev. Mr. Rutland, Bonnie Scotland; Rev. Mr. Kane, and Mr. Courtold, of Braintree, Essex; and about one hundred other gentlemen representing land associations in various parts of the country.

At the public meeting in the evening, Mr. Scholefield, M.P., took the chair; and in addition to the gentlemen present in the morning, Mr. G. Thompson, M.P., Sir J. Walmesley, M P., Mr. Loshington, M.P., &c., attended, the following resolutions were moved and carried:—

1 That this Conference is of opinion that the freehold land movement is deserving the hearty support of all who desire to extend the parliamentary representation of the country, and to elevate the social and political condition of industrious and honest working classes.

2 That, in order to promote the extension of freehold land societies it is desirable that a general league be formed of the freehold movement for the purpose of carrying out with the duty of taking such steps as may appear necessary to spread information on the subject, and to encourage the formation of societies on a simple principle

3 That this Conference requests that the committee of the Birmingham Freehold Land Society will continue to be the executive council of the Birmingham Freehold Land Society, with the power to add to their number, and it recommends to the council, to issue a publication, to be devoted exclusively to the subject of freehold land societies and the extension of the forty-shilling freehold franchise, for the exposition of the advantages which such societies offer, and calculated to confer upon the new unenfranchised classes, and upon the country at large

The conference sat again on Wednesday to settle some details of a practical nature in reference to the movement, when it agreed on the nomination of the Birmingham Society as committee of council for conducting and promoting the progress of the movement, and upon the establishment of a journal for the dissemination of information bearing on the subject.

AGRICULTURAL PROTECTION.—On Saturday a meeting of the West Surrey United Association (Mr. Thomas Lyon Tharlee, the president, in the chair) was held at the White Hart Hotel, Guildford. Among the gentlemen present were Mr. Drummond, M.P., Mr. Evelyn, M.P., Mr. Rowland Goldsmith, esq., Mr. Rowland Goldsmith, jun., Mr. Bradshaw, Mr Bonser, &c. The chairman having explained the objects of the meeting, after a desultory discussion, it was agreed that the committee should draw up a petition, insisting upon the necessity of a return to Protection.

PROPOSED EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE IN MANCHESTER.—The commencement of movements in different parts of the kingdom for a system of national unsectarian education is announced in the Manchester papers. The executive committee of the Lancashire Public School Association have issued cards on inviting, from all parts of the kingdom, the chief friends of national unsectarian education to a conference in Manchester, on Wednesday, the 12th of December next. Scotland, the midland counties, Lancashire, Liverpool, and London will each send its quota. The gentlemen assembled will meet and consult through the day in some central building; and will adjourn, in the evening, to a meeting in the Free-Trade Hall, at which Messrs. Alexander Henry, M.P., William Brown, M.P., Thomas Milner Gibson, M.P., Joseph Hume, M.P., W. J. Fox, M.P., and J. A. Roebuck, M.P., are expected to attend.

VISIT OF PRINCE ALBERT TO BIRMINGHAM.—His Royal Highness Prince Albert arrived at Birmingham on Monday morning, at half-past eleven o'clock. The Prince (who was accompanied by the Hon. Colonel Grey and the Hon. Colonel Gordon) left London by special train at nine o'clock, thus making the transit of 113 miles in the shortest time ever taken in the run from London to this town. His Royal Highness was received at the station by the Mayor (W. Lucy, Esq.); Mr. Alderman Thornton, the ex-Mayor; and by the Hon. Colonel Arbuthnot, the commanding officer of the district. Carriages were in attendance immediately, and the Prince at once proceeded to the exhibition of manufactures, where he was received by Mr. Westley Richards, the Chairman of the Exhibition Committee, and by Mr. Alderman Geach. The Prince at once commenced a minute inspection of the various stalls, and the choice specimens they afforded. His Royal Highness expressed his surprise at the magnitude and splendour of the exhibition, which appeared very far to exceed his expectations. His Royal Highness manifested a great anxiety to inspect the exhibition in detail; but, after some two hours had been spent in the rooms, the Prince found that time would not allow of his taking more than a rapid glance at the different stalls. At half past two o'clock the Prince left the Exhibition, having repeatedly expressed the high gratification he had experienced, and his regret that he had not allotted almost sufficient time to inspect the whole of the specimens of art it contained. The national anthem was played as his Royal Highness quitted the hall, and the Prince bowed repeatedly to the hundred and fifty ladies and gentlemen who had been admitted at the same time to all the Royal Highness was viewing the Exhibition. The Prince was repeatedly and enthusiastically cheered by the people as the carriage passed through the streets on its way to the railway station; and, having partaken of lunch at the Queen's Hotel, his Royal Highness, at three o'clock, took his departure for town.

LANCASHIRE AND CHESHIRE UNION OF MECHANICS' INSTITUTIONS.—Mr. Hoyle, the secretary to the Lancashire and Cheshire Union of Mechanics' Institutions in the union, has received from his Lordship the following reply

Worsley, Nov. 3, 1849.

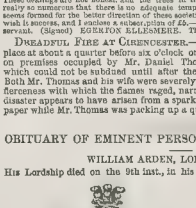
SIR,—I have to acknowledge your letter of the 2nd, and its enclosures on the subject of the Lancashire and Cheshire Union of Mechanics Institutions. It seems to me that, so far as the principles professed by its founders can be disseminated and acted upon, they can produce nothing but advantage; and that, in several particulars, they are essential towards the production of useful results, and mainly so for the prevention of positive mischief. It is not very easy to draw and observe the line between rational occupation and mere amusement. I do not think the latter, though perfect y legitimate in its proper time and place, a legitimate subject of mechanics' institutions, and a paramount plea of this kind, if once accepted, is very apt to flourish, to the prejudice of all other growths. I confess that, in another point of view, I find it very difficult to give my support to the institutions in question. I see evidence of a constant tendency to a departure from the rule usually professed at their foundation, which excludes the discussion of religion and politics. I am not in condition to interfere with or control the use of such support as in any shape I have once given, and I am not inclined in these matters to give my active assistance to the dissemination of any opinions but my own. I did give some trifling assistance to one in this county, and I was informed the other day by a gentleman that he had seen the walls placarded with the announcement of a lecture on popular emancipation. Now, if I had known that of which I well know the contrary, that this lecture was likely to be an eulogy on the House of Lords, I should have be stirred myself to show in some shape my utter disapproval of the introduction of such subjects These dealings are not honest, and the trees in the garden of which an I may eat are really so numerous that there is no adequate temptation to transgression. As your union seems formed for the better direction of these societies in these and other matters, I can only wish it success, and I enclose a subscription of £5.—I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant. (Signed) EGERTON ELLESMERE. Thomas Hogg, Esq., Manchester.

DREADFUL FIRE AT CIRENCESTER.—An alarming conflagration took place at about a quarter before six o'clock on Tuesday morning, at Cirencester, on premises occupied by Mr. Daniel Thomas, hatter, Cricklade-street, and which could not be subdued until after the entire stock had been destroyed. Both Mr. Thomas and his wife were severely burnt, and, in consequence of the fierceness with which the flames raged, narrowly escaped with their lives. The disaster appears to have arisen from a spark falling from a candle upon some paper while Mr. Thomas was packing up a quantity of goods for Fairford Fair.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED

WILLIAM ARDEN, LORD ALVANLEY.

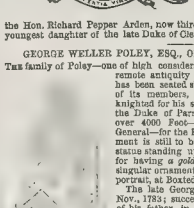
HIS Lordship died on the 9th inst., in his 81st year. He was the elder son of Richard Pepper Arden, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, who was elevated to the Peerage in 1801, and grandson of John Arden, Esq., of Longton, in Cheshire, by Mary his wife, sister and heiress of Preston Pepper, Esq., of Pepper Hall, county York. Through his mother, Anne Dorothea, sister of Lord Skelmersdale, he descended from the old families of Weldon and Bootle.



Lord Alvanley was formerly in the Army, and attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel previously to his retirement from the service. Having died unmarried, he is succeeded in the title by his grandson, the Hon. Richard Pepper Arden, now third Baron, who is married to Arabella, youngest daughter of the late Duke of Cleveland.

GEORGE WELLER POLEY, ESQ., OF BOXTED HALL, SUFFOLK.

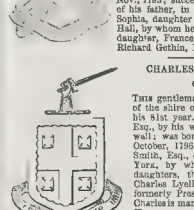
THE family of Poley—one of high consideration and large landed estate—is of remote antiquity in the county of Suffolk, where it has been seated since the time of Edward III. One of its members, Sir John Poley, of Wrongey, was knighted for his services against the Spaniards under the Duke of Parma, and was made Colonel-General over 4000 Foot—Peregrine Lord Willoughby being General—for the King of Denmark. Sir John's monument is still to be seen in Boxford Church, with his status standing upright in armour. It is remarkable for having a gold frog suspended from the left ear, a singular ornament, also depicted in Sir John Poley's portrait, at Boxted Hall.



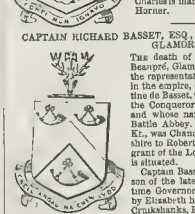
This late George Weller Poley, Esq., was born 1st Nov., 1793; succeeded to the estates, upon the demise of his father, in 1799; and married, in 1808, Helen Sophia, daughter of James Fisher, Esq., of Browston Hall, by whom he leaves a large family—the youngest daughter, Frances, being the wife of the present Sir Richard Gethin, Bart.

CHARLES LYELL, ESQ., OF KINNORDY, COUNTY OF FORFAR.

THIS gentleman, a magistrate, and Vice-Lieutenant of the shire of Forfar, died on the 16th instant, in his 81st year. He was only son of Charles Lyell, Esq., by his wife, Mary Bosk, of West Looe, Cornwall, at which place he was born 9th March, 1767, and married 11th October, 1796, Frances, only daughter of Thomas Smith, Esq., of Maker Hall, Sheffield, county of York, by whom he has had seven sons and seven daughters, the eldest of the former being Sir Charles Lyell, the distinguished scientific writer, Country President of the Geological Society. Sir Charles is married to the eldest daughter of Leonard Horner.



CAPTAIN RICHARD BASSET, ESQ., ROY. ART., OF BEAUPRE, CO. GLAMORGAN.



THE death of Captain Basset occurred at his seat, Beaupré, Glamorganshire, on the 8th inst. He was the representative of one of the most eminent families in the empire, descended in a direct line from Thurstine de Basset, the Norman, who accompanied William the Conqueror, as his Grand Sewer, into England, and whose name is inscribed on the famous Roll of Battle Abbey. The Norman's son, Sir John Basset, Kt., was Chancellor and Vice-Comes in Glamorganshire to Robert Fitzhamon, from whom he received a grant of the Lordship of St. Hilary, wherein Beaupré is situated.

Captain Basset, whose decease we record, was elder son of the late Lieut.-Colonel Thomas Basset, sometime Governor of the Military School of Windsor, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of the late Alexander Cruikshanks, Esq. He was born 6th December, 1797, and entered the Royal Artillery as Second Lieut., 11th Dec., 1815. During the contest in Spain between the Queen and Don Carlos, in 1836 and 1837, Captain Basset was employed in raising the siege of Bilbca; took part in the field actions of the 10th, 12th, 14th, 15th, and 16th March; assisted at the assault of the town of Hernani, and was present at the capitulation of Estaraba.

CHARLES HORN.

THE American papers announce the death of Charles Edward Horn, the composer, at Boston, on the 24th ult. He was the son of Charles Frederick Horn, a German musician, who came to London in 1782, and was teacher of the pianoforte to the daughters of George III His son was born in 1785, in the parish of St. Martin's, and received lessons first from his father, and afterwards at Bath, from Rauzzini. Horn made his début at the Lyceum, in the operetta of "Up Al. Night;" and Mr. Arnold, perceiving his talent for composition, gave him the place of "The Recluse," to compose music for. This success induced him to abandon his career for a time as a vocalist, but he returned to the stage in 1814, appearing as the Seraskier in the "Siege of Belgrade," having studied under J. T. Webb.

Amongst the operas, of which Mr. Horn composed the whole or the greater portion of the music, were "Persian Hunters," "The Magic Bride," "Tricks upon Travellers," "Boarding House," "The Woodman's Hut," "Love," "Windsor Castle," "The Devil's Bridge" with Braham, "Nourjahad," "M.P.," "Lalla Rookh," "The Wizard," "Philandering," "Rich and Poor," "The Death Fetch," "Peveril of the Peak," &c. As a ballad composer Mr. Horn was one of the most popular writers of the day. We have only to mention "Cherry Ripe," "I've been roaming," "The deep, deep Sea," "The Mermaid's Cave," the duet "I know a bank," "Through the wood" Composed for Malibran), to recal many charming specimens of his talent. Mr. Horn had a very original flow of melody, and was thoroughly English in his style. The "Cherry ripe" melody was claimed on behalf of Mr. Attwood on the ground that it was a Turkish air, a single instance, which might have been accidental, Mr. Horn's melodious ideas and forms were his own. In the Drury-lane version of Weber's "Der Freyschütz" Mr. Horn obtained much fame by his fine acting of Caspar, although his voice was unequal to the music. He produced latterly an entertainment called "Lays and Legends of Normandy," and an oratorio at the Music Hall, Store-street; but these last works were not successful.

DEATH OF MR. EITY, R.A.—We regret to announce the death of Mr. William Etty, R.A. He died on Tuesday evening, at his residence in York. Times. (A characteristic Portrait of Mr. Etty, with a Memoir of his Life and Works, appeared in No. 167 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

SERMONS NOT COPYRIGHT.—The case of Macnaughtan v. Wilson was decided by the Sheriff-Substitute of Renfrewshire, who found that sermons were not copyright, and consequently declared in favour of the defender. It was appealed by the Rev. Mr. Macnaughtan to Hercules J. Robertson, Esq., Sheriff-Principal of Renfrewshire; and on Tuesday, the 6th instant, an interlocutor was pronounced, adhering to the judgment of the Sheriff-Substitute. The Sheriff-Principal added the following note:—"Copyright, or the right of property in literary compositions, has been finally determined to rest not on common law, but on the statute alone. It is possible that the publication of writings may be subject to interdict at common law, as constituting a breach of confidence, or of special obligation, or as calculated to inflict an injury on private character. But, if the ground of the interdict asked be merely copyright, the petitioner must lay his case on statute. The only statute founded on in the petition is the 8th of Anne. This statute has been repealed by 5th and 6th of Victoria, cap. 45, sec. 1, upon which the law relative to this subject now rests. The petitioner has not attempted to bring his case within the provisions of this act. The statute 5th and 6th William 4, cap. 65, which extends the copyright to lectures in certain cases, but does not embrace sermons preached in public, affords a strong argument against the petitioner. The Sheriff is of opinion that the petitioner has no case either by common law or by statute."

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE VACANT COLONELCIES.—It is understood that Major-General Sir Joseph Thackwell, G.C B, commanding the Cavalry in India, is to succeed to the Colonelcy of the 16th Lancers, the regiment which so much distinguished itself in the battle of Allwal, early in 1846.

CHELSEA HOSPITAL.—It is said that the Lieutenant Governor, General Sir Colin Halkett, G.C.B., is to succeed to the Governorship of the Hospital; but the new Lieutenant-Governor is not yet known, nor has the new Colonel of the 4th Dragoon Guards yet been named. It is stated that Mr Moorhead, formerly attached to the staff in this institution, but now employed at the War-office, will be appointed Secretary to Chelsea Hospital, an arrangement by which the whole of Mr Moorhead's present salary will be saved to the public.

Rear-Admiral Dundas, Captain Lord J. Hay, Captain Milne, Captain Sir B. Walker, Captain C. Eden, and John Parker, Esq. (secretary), proceded on Tuesday from London to Portsmouth, to visit her Majesty's frigate Leander, 50, at Spithead, and on other business.

The "Assenger Relief Committee" paid another monthly instalment to the widows, orphans, and relatives of her late seamen and marines, on Saturday last, at the Royal Naval College. The claimants who are not residing in the vicinity of Portsmouth have all been awarded their full amount from the relief fund; but to the persons residing at or near Portsmouth it will continue to be paid by monthly instalments, until March next, when the relief will be finally closed.

Sir John, and Lieutenant Sir Edward N. Harland, and resumed his duties of chief physician of the Royal Naval Hospital.

The Investigator Arctic discovery ship, Capt. J. Bird, has been brought up to Woolwich; as also the Enterprise, Captain Sir J. C. Ross. The ships looked sound and perfect after their long sojourn in the midst of thick-ribbed ice, and the crew appear healthy. They are to be taken to Chatham when all their stores are taken on shore, and the crews paid off.

MEASUREMENT OF FOREIGN DEALS.—The Revenue authorities having had under their consideration an application from the Superintendent of the Grand Surrey Canal Docks, requesting that the admeasurement singly of each deal exceeding twenty-one feet in length, required under the Customs general regulation of October, 1849, may be dispensed with, and that ten per cent. only of each deal in the parcel of such deals may in future be measured singly, and that the remainder of the importation may be delivered and the quantity calculated according to the average ascertained from the deals actually measured, the Customs authorities have sanctioned the adoption of the proposed arrangements with respect to all deals and battens exceeding twenty-one feet in length (not being deck deals), in those cases in which the parties interested in the disposal of the goods may not object thereto, and orders have been issued for the measure to be carried into effect accordingly. This privilege, which was granted at the request of the Dock Company with respect to the measurement of foreign deals imported into the port of London, has, upon a request to that effect from one of the principal outports, been extended to all the ports throughout the United Kingdom, where the new mode of measurement for the duties will be permitted, if desired, from the present time.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, CORK.—THE INAUGURATION.

(From our own Correspondent.)

THE interesting ceremony took place on Wednesday, the 7th inst.

For several days past all were on the qui vive to witness the inauguration of the President, Vice-President, and Professors of this great establishment, as well as to hear Sir Robert Kane deliver his opening address; and so great was this desire, that, upon the arrival of the officials on the day, they were greeted by above 900 visitors, to whom tickets were issued for seats in the body of the Hall, and amongst whom were a considerable number of ladies.

Upon the day's were ranged the Corporation, with their several officer of state, the Provost and Professors of the College in their rich costume; and when viewed from the end of the Hall, presented a truly gorgeous picture of the richest colour. Besides the Corporation and officers of the College, the day also found the commissioners for the erection and maintenance of a committee appointed so far back as 1829, to commence agitation for the establishment of a Provincial College in Cork; and to whose untiring industry and perseverance the country is at this moment mainly indebted for the establishment of Provincial Colleges in Ireland.

Upon silence being obtained, the Mayor, Sir W. Lyons, rose, and announced that he was then ready to receive the declaration of the President. Upon which Sir Robert Kane descended from his elevated chair, and proceeded to the front of the dais, where he, in a most solemn manner, read his declaration, and made the first entry in the registering book of the college; to which his worship, as chief magistrate, put his signature, as well as the Vice-President and a number of the professors, who repeated the declaration. Upon the termination of which, Major N. L. Beamish came forward, as chairman of the "Cork College Committee," to present to Sir Robert Kane the address of the committee, and give a detailed account of their proceedings, spread over a period of now nearly thirty years. The President was pleased to make a suitable answer, and to confess the pleasure it gave him to have to carry out those labours for which they so long and so ably contended.

Mr. Fagan, M.P., next came forward to move the names of a committee to aid and assist the Government in carrying out their wishes to establish a Botanical Garden and Model Farm in connexion with the College; and stated, that, so convinced was he of the practical good likely to arise from the course of education pursued in the College, that he had the pleasure of having one of his sons that day seated amongst them as one of the successful scholars of the Queen's College; and that he had two more, who, when the proper time arrived, should be amongst them. This evoked a declaration, coming from a friend of Mr. Fagan's own practical Catholicity in the south of Ireland, cannot fail in adding to break down the opposition still made to those Colleges.

Mr. T. R. Sarsfield, High Sheriff, having seconded Mr. Fagan's resolution, and borne testimony to the good likely to arise from the course to be pursued in the College,

Sir R. Kane came forward, and read his address, which occupied nearly two hours, and was listened to with great respect, and elicited loud approbation when he came to speak of the marked attention that it was his fixed resolve should be paid to the moral conduct and education of the students sent into that College for educational purposes. And after paying a high compliment to the R. C. Dean of Residences, the Rev. W. O'Connor, P.P. of Coursey's Country, asked if a stronger proof of the Government's desire to have the moral and religious conduct of the students carefully watched, could be given, than by the appointment of one so many years resident amongst them, and well known for his practical piety. He next referred to the course of education, and announced that, throwing into the modern languages the necessary attention, to the advancement of classic lore, that, as a commencement, an able and gifted professor of the French—now the language of diplomacy, of educated society, and the greater portion of Europe—had been appointed; and that education in the other modern languages would also be attended to. This declaration drew down great applause. (We regret that our limits will not allow us to give even a short analysis of this eloquent address.) The learned President sat down amidst continuous applause, which was continued for several minutes. When silence was at length restored, he again rose, and said:—"I now declare the College open for public instruction, and that the Deans of the several faculties will, on to-morrow, open the several departments."

The Mayor then rose and expressed the high honour he felt as chief magistrate in taking part in the proceedings, and listening to the able and instructive address of the President. He congratulated the citizens on the establishment of that institution, at which their children might obtain a sound and useful education at their own doors, under the care and superintendence of their parents. He concluded by stating that Sir Robert had conferred a benefit on the institution, on the score of morality and religion, would prove groundless.

This terminated the interesting proceedings of the day, and the vast assembly separated highly pleased with what had occurred.

At the conclusion of the meeting the company were shown through the interior of the beautiful building, each portion of which was so ably explained by Sir Thomas Deane, Woodward, and Deane, as well as by the contractor for the building, Mr. J. Butler. The work is executed in a masterly manner; but we must ask if it was part of the original design to leave the beautiful span-worked ends of the Examination Hall and Library in their present unfinished state.

We add a few details of the architecture of the new College:

The style chosen by Sir Thomas Deane, the architect, is that of the Collegiate or Decorated architecture of the 14th century. One idea is striking and obvious in the building: whether viewed in the whole or in detail, its adaptation to a given purpose, its appropriateness and fitness, are evident.

Passing through the entrance-porch, under the tower, you find a stone staircase and corridor to the top of the tower designed for sacrosanctal purposes, next to the staircase is the porter's lodge, at the commencement of the cloisters, whose united length amounts to 852 feet; and further on we come to the lecture-rooms of chemistry and natural philosophy, with the other requisite accommodation for both students and professors. These various lecture-rooms, of which there are six, besides laboratory, are built to accommodate 1200 students.

Crossing over the archway of the entrance tower, we arrive at the Museum—two fine rooms, with lofty open timber roofs, and admirably lighted for their purpose. Descending from these rooms, we again reach the ground-floor, and on the vestibule leading to the Library and Examination-hall The Library is a noble room, but inferior to the Examination-hall. The height of the latter is 90 feet, width, 36 feet; and height in the centre of the roof, 56 feet. The roof resembling that of Westminster-hall, is what is term d in architecture an open one, with its trusses resting on stone corbels, and has all its details elaborately worked. The Hall is lighted by six richly traceried windows at each side, with one large window at the eastend, over the gable of which, on the outside, stands the statue of her Majesty (presented to the building by its architect—an account of which, with a Sketch of the Inauguration, we gave in our Double Number on the occasion of her Majesty's recent visit to Cork).

Leaving the Examination-hall by the students' entrance, we come to the quadrangle—or, as it may be styled, the inner exterior of the College—the building extending on three sides, leaving the fourth open (we presume, for the Examination). The quadrangle is laid with grass and walks, and extends 375 feet The sides are thus occupied—West, by the lecture department; east by residences of the President and Vice-President; and north, by the Museum and entrance tower; the south being open.

THE GIGANTIC WATER-LILY (VICTORIA REGIA), IN FLOWER AT CHATSWORTH.

THE GIGANTIC WATER-LILY (VICTORIA REGIA),

AT CHATSWORTH.

THE earliest public notice of the discovery of this extraordinary South American Water-lily was given by Dr. Pöppig in 1832, who, in his travels through Chili and Peru, records it as growing in the Agaripes, which are large branches of the river Amazon. Before this period, however, other botanical travellers had discovered it—as Haenk (a Spaniard), Bonpland (the companion and fellow-traveler of M. Humboldt), and D'Orbigny (a French botanist). This last gentleman furnished dried specimens of the leaves and flowers to the Museum of Natural History at Paris, in 1828.

In 1837, Sir Robert Schomburgk detected it growing in the river Berbice, in British Guiana, where he was travelling (under the patronage of her Majesty's Government) on account of the Geographical Society of London. He had specimens collected, and drawings made on the spot, which were afterwards brought to this country, and from which the first full description and figure of this wonderful plant were published, the same year.

In 1846 the first seeds were introduced by Mr. Bridges to the Royal Gardens at Kew, from which plants were raised: and from these growing plants, and Sir Robert Schomburgk's drawings, a series of fine plates were prepared by Sir William Hooker, and published in the Botanical Magazine for 1847.

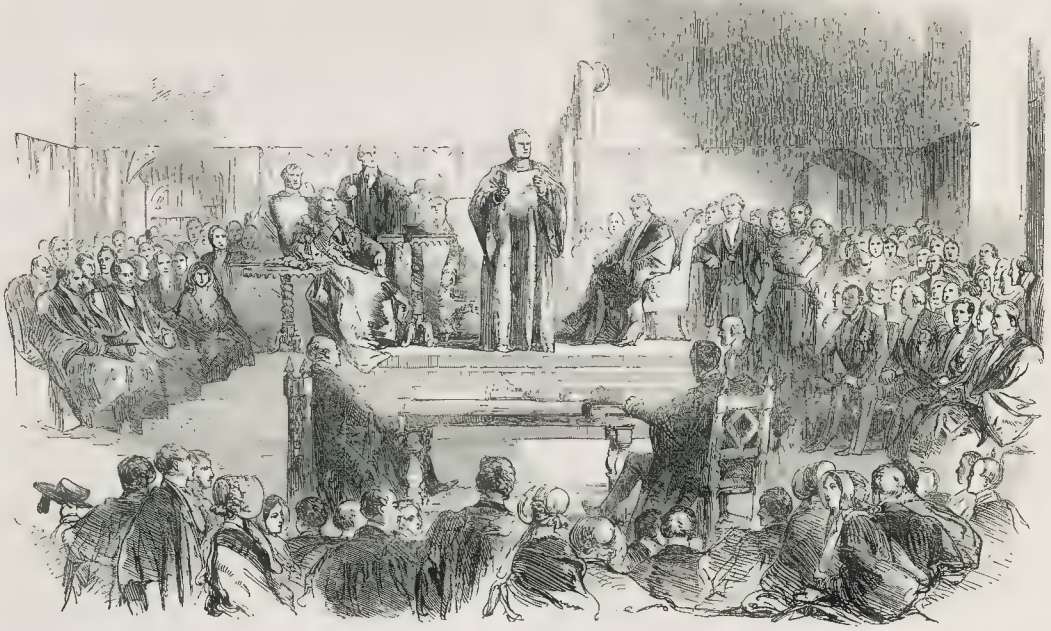
The plant now growing at Chatsworth was received from Kew on Friday, August 3rd. It had then only four expanded leaves, and a fifth opened in the course of two days afterwards. The largest of these leaves was 5½ inches across, and about 16½ inches in circumference. The box in which the plant was enclosed when it came is 18½ inches square and 8 inches deep, and was, in every respect, large enough for the purpose.

A tank (12 feet square, and 3 feet 4 inches deep) was prepared in one of the large stoves. About five cartloads of soil were placed in the centre of this; and, when the whole was filled up with water, and had become sufficiently warm, the plant was placed in the centre of the soil—this was on August the 15th. By the end of September 19 leaves had been formed, the largest of which measured 3 feet six inches in diameter, and nearly 11 feet in circumference—at which time it became necessary to enlarge the tank to double its former size, and even now the plant is much cramped, as the largest leaves measure 4 feet 11 inches in diameter, and nearly 14 feet in circumference. The construction of the leaves is also very peculiar, and the weight they are able to sustain is astonishing. An actual experiment (as represented in the Engraving) was tried at Chatsworth, by placing a young lady upon one of them, who was borne up for some time with perfect safety. The leaves are also (when separated) very heavy; and Mr. Bridges relates, that, on his discovery of the plant in Bolivia, he was very desirous to collect both leaves, flowers and seed-vessels: these he had suspended to poles, with small cord tied to their stalks. Two Indians—each taking on his shoulder an end of the pole—carried them into the town.

The first flower-bud made its appearance at Chatsworth on Thursday, November 1st, and expanded on Thursday, the 8th. The buds rise about six inches above the surface of the water, beginning to open in the evening; the flowers are then of the purest white, and measure about ten inches across; the following day, towards evening, they begin to exhibit a rich pink in the centre, and during the night they are fully expanded; the numerous outside petals being reflexed and spreading upon the surface of the water, whilst the fine pink centre is elevated nearly erect, altogether forming a most singular and beautiful object. After this expansion the whole of the petals assume a pinkish tint, and the flower gradually becomes flaccid, falls on one side upon the water, and, by the third evening, fades away. During their expansion, they emit a peculiar and pleasant fragrance, not unlike that of some kind of ripe fruit; but after the full expansion, on the second night, this is no longer discernible.

The seed-vessel is prickly, and, according to its original discoverers, grows to nearly the size of a child's head: the farinaceous seeds, of which it is full are roasted by the natives of Guiana, and eaten as food; hence the plant has been called water maize, but more generally it is known in its native habitats by the name of Irupé or Yrupé, literally water-platter, because the leaves resemble the broad dishes used in that country.

We have the gratification to add, that on Wednesday Mr. Paxton had the honour of presenting a leaf and flower of the above plant to her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert at Windsor Castle.



INAUGURATION OF QUEEN'S COLLEGE, CORK.—THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

FINE ARTS.

LEAVING CHURCH.

THE above Engraving is from the design of Doegn, a German artist, an represents a mother and child leaving a Roman Catholic Church. The mother is dipping her fingers in the vessel of "Holy Water," as is customary both on entering and leaving church in Roman Catholic countries. The subjoined lines show not the sectarian action, but the more universal spirit, of the composition.

PIETY.

How charming is divine philosophy,
Not harsh and crabbed as dull fools suppose,
But musical as is Apollo's lute.—Comus.

How sweet a thing is heavenly Piety,
Not cold and rigid as fanatics deem,
But warm as Love, and beautiful as Hope.

Prop of the weak—the crown of humble ness,
The clue of doubt—the eye-sight of the blind,
The heavenly robe and garniture of clay.

He that is crown'd with that supernal crown,
Is Lord and Sovereign of himself and Fate;
And Angels are his friends and ministers.

Clad in that raiment ever white and pure,
The way-side mire is harmless to defile,
And rudest storms sweep impotently by.

The pilgrim wandering amid crags and pits,
Supported by that staff shall never fall,
He smiles at peril, and defies the storm.

Shown by that clue, the doubtful path is clear
The intricate snares and mazes of the world,
Are all unlabyrinth'd and bright as day.

Sweet Piety! divinest Piety!
She has a soul capacious as the spheres—
A heart as large as all humanity.

Who to his dwelling takes that visitont
Has a perpetual solace in all pain—
A friend and comforter in every grief.

The noblest domes, the haughtiest palaces,
That know not her, have ever open gates
Where misery may enter at her will.

But at the threshold of the poorest hut
Where she sits smiling, sorrow passes by,
And owns the spell that robs her of her sting.

† † † C.

MUSIC.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY.

The opening of the season on Monday night, at Exeter Hall, of the above famed body of amateurs was a musical event of importance. This society has every claim to be considered as a national institution. It has now been in existence upwards of fifteen years, and much has been achieved to improve the national taste in this country by the talent, zeal, and industry of the working committees of the society. Last year, in obedience to the general expression of public opinion, it was felt that the time had arrived when a step was to be taken in advance to improve the execution of the works by the great writers of the sacred school; and in nominating Mr. Costa to the post of sole director of the performances, and by abandoning the previously existing confusion arising from the now obsolete system of a divided authority between conductor, leader, and organist, the Sacred Harmonic Society effected a complete revolution, the result of which has been to ensure a succession of the most finished interpretations of oratorios. Where formerly there existed wavering and uncertainty, there is confidence and precision; reciprocation is no longer the substitute for vigour, and refined expression is allied with spirit and animation The potent sway exercised by Costa ensures the most brilliant and delicate orchestration, and exacts from the vast body of choralists smoothness and uniform care in finish. The El Dorado of musical cravings—a perfect piano—is now heard, and the subtle thoughts and inner workings of a composer's score are thus adequately developed. With the imaginings of the master minds thus reverentially respected, how many treasures of the bright and beautiful in art have been discovered; what magnificent points, heretofore lost in the confusion of a scramble, are indicated, where a real sensitiveness of expression is made apparent, and the nicest gradations of time and tone are conscientiously and skilfully marked. Such choral singing as that last Monday in the oratorio of "Solomon" was a treat of the highest order. The chorus ending the first part, "May no rash intruder," was an instance of extreme delicacy; and the double chorus, "From the censer," beginning the second part, was an example of astounding power. In the soothing chorus first named, the balance preserved between the picturesque instrumentation and subdued voices was exquisitely managed by Costa. The play of the flutes, and soft imitations of the nightingale's chirpings by the stringed instruments, and luscious plaints of the trebles, presented a musical colouring as vivid as a stage picture: no printed regulation was capable of stopping the involuntary outbreak of the immense auditory for the encore of this choral gem. The colossal conception, gigantic grandeur, and magnificent proportions of the chorus, "From the censer," created overwhelming sensations of mingled awe and admiration; and difficult was it to refrain from the repetition. There are other choruses of intense interest, such as "From the east unto the west." "Swell the full chorus," "Music, spread thy voice around." "Shake the dome." "Draw the tear," "Thus rolling surges rise," "Praise the Lord," and "The name of the wicked." Indeed, in no oratorio has the giant Handel been more grand and imposing in the exhibition of choral power and imagination; and it is always a matter of regret that his genius was trammelled, in the composition of "Solomon," by one of the dullest and weake-t poems ever indited. The scenes in the first part, intended to depict conjugal happiness, are alternately absurd and tiresome and the judgment scene, exhibiting Solomon's wisdom in the dispute between the two mothers, is so drearily treated by the poet, that the failure of the musician in the airs was inevitable. The visit of the Queen of Sheba, in the third part, Handel has chiefly treated chorally, thus escaping the poverty of invention in the book.

Miss M. Williams was allotted the whole of the music of "Solomon," which has been sometimes divided between a bass and a contralto. She sang the air, "What though I trace"—one of the redeeming melodies of the oratorio—charmingly; but in the declamatory recitatives, a vocalist of greater dramatic force might produce infinitely more effect; and we should have preferred Miss Birch in the soprano portions, although Miss A. Williams sang some bits with considerable skill. The feebleness of the airs and recitatives can only be relieved by the aid of first-rate vocal talent, and Miss Birch, with the Misses A. and M. Williams, and Phillips or Machin, would have improved the solos. Mr. Lockey's singing of the tenor solos of Zadock is beyond all praise. He rendered his ungrateful task pleasing, by his mellifluous voice, and by his clever execution of old-fashioned divisions and monotonous phrases. We would suggest to him to omit the da capo in the "See the tall palm"—once is quite enough of that air.

Mr. Costa was enthusiastically greeted on his entrance to take the bâton. The overture, and symphony preceding the third part, were both finely played: the fugue in the former was as clear as crystal; and Barret and Nicholson, in the latter, gained great glory for their oboe obbigato parts. Handel's "Messiah" is announced for the 30th instant.

LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.

The playing of Ernst on Wednesday night, at Exeter Hall, was transcendently great. Warmed by the rapturous reception of the auditory, on his return from the Continent to fulfil an engagement for six of the London Wednesday Concerts, Ernst's displays were in his happiest vein; and when his nervous temperament is not affected, he is the greatest violinist of the age. Perhaps, in the poetry and passion of his style, Ernst has never been approached. He played twice: in the first part he executed his own fantasia on themes from Rossini's "Otello;" and in the second act, he performed his popular work, "The Carnival of Venice." Paganini, at his earliest advent, never created a greater sensation than Ernst on this occasion. The hall rang with reiterated plaudits, and exclamations of delight were irresistable in the middle of some exquisite trait of execution. Marvellous as were his fantastic and fanciful bravura passages in the "Carnival," the sentiment of his style was equally as penetrating in his adagios. The lament of Desdemona, particularly, and the lovely slow movement preceding the "Carnival" were most deliciously interpreted; it was often as if the human voice in sweetest accents was singing, so graceful and perfect is Ernst's cantabile. His tours de force quite electrified the players in the band as well as the amateurs. In the "Carnival" it was a series of mechanical prodigies—octaves, double and triple stops, staccato passages, arpeggi, leaps, compassing of tenths, and every imaginable and unimaginable intricacy being conquered with delightful crispness and justness of intonation. The ovations following his finished performance were deafening.

The scheme opened with a selection from Meyerbeer's "Huguenots," Miss Dolby singing the two cavatinas of the Page charmingly, and Formes eliciting a decided encore in "Piff paff." The great German basso, who has now firm hold of the public, also was called upon twice to sing Shield's time-honoured song of "The Wolf"—the apogeum of every amateur bass voice—in which the distinct enunciation of Formes was an example to many native artists. Two débutantes—the Misses Cole—sang a duo by Klicken, "The Swallows;" and, as pupils of the Royal Academy of Music, deserve encouragement.

MISS CATHERINE HAYES IN IRELAND.—Last Saturday night, Miss Hayes terminated her engagement at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, appearing for the fourth time in Norma. The house was one of the fullest ever known; the stage and orchestra being occupied by the overflow from the audience portion, and crowds being turned away from the doors. "We question," states the Evening Packet, "if similar crowds would be attract d by Grisi, Adelaide Kemble, or even Jenny Lind, during so many repetitions of a single character, and we are quite convinced that the undiminished enthusiasm and unmitigated delight, so unequivocally expressed, could not have been awakened by any other vocalist but Catharine Hayes." The Dublin Freeman is equally as strong in favour of the surpassing genius and glorious triumph of this all but peerless Queen of Song. Miss Poole was the Adalgisa, Herr D incke, Pollio; and Burdini, Oroveso; and Benedict conducted. After "Norma," Miss Hayes sang Irish ballads with startling effect. This week, she will visit Cork and Limerick

MUSIC IN PARIS.—Three representations of "Lucia" have taken place at the Italian Theatre with great success, the cast comprising Mme. Persiani, Signori Mariani, Moreli, and Ronconi. Mdlle. Angri has appeared since Romeo in Isabella, in Rossini's "Italiana in Algieri," supported by Flavio, Morelli, and Ronconi.—Halévy's "Fée aux Roses," with Mdme. Ugalde's execution, continues to draw crowded houses to the Salle Favart, where a concert come opera, "Le Moulin des Ficheux," the poem by MM. Mallian and Cormon, and the music by M. Maillart, the composer of "Gastibelza," had a flagrant actor to shew his most excellent qualities in a part so difficult and ideal. Mr. Creswick's performance was, indeed, one of exceeding beauty and delicacy. It was, besides, no easy, but a most thoughtful and perfectly original performance. More than one point was new; and those nicer shades of feeling which distinguish the character were frequently indicated with unmistakeable individuality. Mr. Mead, in the Ghost, Shepherd's part, and Mr. Shepherd's Lazarus were somewhat too elaborate. In Ophelia, Mdme. Poniet acted with her usual grace and pathos

After the tragedy an American spectacular drama, in three acts, was produced. It is entitled "Wacousta;" the hero being supported by Mr. Mead The scene lies in and nigh the Fort Detroit, on the borders of the Canadas; and the action takes place between the soldiers of the garrison and the Indian tribes. The commander of the fort had married the betrothed of one Reginald Morton, who, under the name of Wacousta, prosecuted his revenge by uniting himself with the redskins, and acting as their leader. But his machinations are defeated by Oucanasta (Madame Poniet), the daughter of the chief of the Ottawas; and he pays, at last, the penalty of his treachery with his death. The piece is splendidly put upon the stage, and was much applauded. It is, however, not exactly of the kind which ought, under the new régime, to be presented at this theatre.

NEW STRAND.

"The Clandestine Marriage" was performed on Monday, for the purpose of Mrs. Glover assuming the part of Mrs. Heidelberg, during a temporary engagement which she has entered into at this house. Her reception was extremely enthusiastic: she played with her wonted spirit and ability; and Mr. Farren, who performed Lord Ogleby excellently, at the close of the piece was called before the audience on the occasion

A new farce, by Mr. Oxenford, called "A Family Party" (adapted from the Vaudeville of "Le Pot aux Roses"), succeeded the comedy; but the incident of the chapeau Canois displeased the audience, and the curtain fell to great disapprobation.

ASTLEY'S.

The veteran dramatist, Mr. Moncrieff, has availed himself of the facetiæ of Punch, in a new piece produced on Monday at this theatre, under the title of "Mr. Briggs, or the Pleasures of Housekeeping and Horsekeeping." The various sketches and tableaux of our witty contemporary are pretty closely followed, and most of the incidents are adopted—from the "loose tile" on the house, through all the progress of the repairs, until the delivery of the bill. The last event throws the worthy man into such discomfort that his physician advises "a little gentle horse exercise," by way of remedy. This suggestion inaugurates the equestrian scenes in the circle. Mr. Briggs is then exhibited on three different horses, "the dancing-master's horse," "the performer's horse," and "the thing that will go, and no mistake." Escaping from this triple peril, Mr. Briggs at last finds refuge in Oriental Lodge, Earl's Court, in time to be present at his daughter's wedding

The scenery, dresses, and decorations are good; and the success of the piece unequivocal.

MARYLEBONE.—Mr. Planché's extravaganza of "The White Cat" has been revived at this theatre with great magnificence.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Although no public announcement was made, several alterations in the arrangements for Thursday last were rendered unavoidable by the General Thanksgiving being appointed for that day; the postponement of the Spelthorne Hunt meeting, at Hampton Court, to a day and place yet to be decided, arose from the scarcity of hares in the Home Park, which, it is said, will not be opened for public coursing until next season The fixtures for next week stand as follows: Tuesday, Newcastle; Wednesday, Swaffham; Thursday, Biggar, Raynham, and Broughton.

The flat, hurdle, and steeplechase meeting at Liverpool comes off on Tuesday and Wednesday; and, if there be any truth in appearances, the list cannot fail to furnish large fields and good sport. This is the only meeting of the week.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—Bolingbroke, the three Goodwood favourites, The Italian, and Cyprus, were all the rage this afternoon: the outlay on the first-mentioned animal and Gruilio Calium could not have been less than £300 each. The general betting was as :—

AYLESBURY STEEPLE-CHASE

3 to 1 agst British Yeoman (t)	3 to 1 agst Vale Hope

CHESTER CUP.

50 to 1 agst White colt (t)	66 to 1 agst Lady Evelyn (t)	80 to 1 agst Kennington (t)
50 to 1 —— Prop-o'-Day Boy (t)	66 to 1 —— Mischief (t)	80 to 1 —— Le Roy (t)
(t)	66 to 1 —— Melody (t)

DERBY

5 to 1 agst Kent a lot (t)	30 to 1 agst Cyprus	30 to 1 agst William the Conqueror (t)
9 to 1 —— Bolingbroke (t)	25 to 1 —— Gliocher
14 to 1 —— Oh Lie Callum (t)	25 to 1 —— Dervish	40 to 1 —— Gruilio
18 to 1 —— Knight of Avenel	30 to 1 —— Voltigeur	40 to 1 —— Cocopans
18 to 1 —— The Italian	30 to 1 —— The Nigger (t)	66 to 1 —— Little Bob (t)

On THURSDAY the room was almost deserted.

BALLOONING IN SEARCH OF SIR JOHN FRANKLIN.—Lieut. Gale having made a proposition with reference to the use of a balloon for traversing the impassable wastes which separate Sir John Franklin from his friends, has received the following letter from Sir John Franklin's wife, Castle-street, Edinburgh, Nov. 5, 1849. Sir, I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22nd ult., proposing the use of your balloon in the discovery of the missing expedition in the Arctic regions. I will give my opinion with pleasure if your plans be examined, are approved by men of science capable of estimating them; and you cannot doubt that I should greatly rejoice in the adoption of any means which promise to aid the object I have so much at heart. If they are recommended to me by the disinterested and noble motives you have kindly expressed.

I am, sir, your obedient servant, JANE FRANKLIN

THE MALTA UNIVERSITY COLLEGE.—On the 1st of the month which has just expired, the pupils of the St. Julian College recommenced their studies. Many unfavourable reports with re-pect to the continuance of the establishment were some days ago in circulation, and we remember seeing in Galignani's Messenger that it was on the point of being abandoned. From the increased number of pupils, both in the higher and lower departments of the College, we are glad to find that there is no probability of so distressing a result. We would advise any one who is desirous of witnessing youthful happiness, to pay a visit to the playground during the time of recreation. Those who wish for instruction combined with study, would do well to inspect the general arrangements of the establishment, and they will almost regret that they are not young enough to avail themselves of them. Perfect liberty of worship is allowed, and no pupil is permitted to taunt or insult another of a different persuasion from himself. In fact we never saw an educational establishment (and we have visited several) in which the inmates so much resembled a well-ordered family. —Malta Times

The examination of 125 applicants for admission to practise as attorneys and solicitors in the superior courts of Westminster, was held on Tuesday in the hall of the Law Institution It was conducted by Mr. Walker, the Master of the Court of Exchequer; Mr. Tooke, Mr. Holme, Mr Amory, and Mr Kinderley.

The Earl of Mountcashel has signified his intention, through his agent, Alfred William Cleverly, Esq., to pay the rate in aid for the tenants on his county Antrim estates.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

DAY OF THANKSGIVING.

Thursday, according to the proclamation issued by her Majesty, was strictly observed as a day of humiliation and prayer, and business was entirely suspended. Every shop was closed, and the streets appeared similar to the Sabbath. Sermons were preached in all the parish churches and chapels, after which the congregations responded cheerfully by giving alms in aid of the various necessitous objects.

In the Jewish Synagogues a form of thanksgiving was used, which had been prescribed by the Rev. Dr. Adler, chief rabbi of Great Britain and Ireland. The Thanksgiving was preceded by psalms, and by the ordinary prayers for the Queen and the Royal Family.

The river presented an unusually quiet appearance, in consequence of very little work being done upon it, and very few craft were to be seen. In fact, less work was performed on the Thames on the Great Western, the transit for the former, and fifteen on the latter, up and down—ran as usual. No intimation of a departure from the ordinary course proceeded from the other companies.

NOMINATION OF SHERIFFS.—Monday being the morrow of St. Martin, the Lords of her Majesty's Privy Council assembled in the Court of Exchequer, at Westminster, to nominate the Sheriffs in England (Cornwall, Lancashire, and Westmoreland excepted) and Wales. The Lords of the Council present on the occasion were—Lord Campbell, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Earl Grey, the Marquis of Clanricarde, Lord Chief Justice Sir Thomas Wilde, Lord Chief Baron Sir Frederick Pollock, Mr. James Parker, Mr. Justice Coltridge, Mr. Justice Maule, Mr. Baron Rolfe, Mr. Justice Crosswell, Mr. Baron Platt, and Mr. Justice Williams Mr. Greville attended as clerk to the council. The Queen's Remembrancer having read the usual proclamation, and seven the Lords of the council present, the nomination was proceeded with, three gentlemen from each county being named.

BATHS AND WASH-HOUSES, ST. PANCRAS.—On Monday evening, pursuant to public announcement, a meeting of the ratepayers of St. Pancras, convened by the vestry, took place at the new Vestry-Rooms, for the purpose of considering the propriety of adopting the Baths and Wash-houses Act, 9th and 10th Victoria, cap. 74, commonly called the Public Baths and Washing Act. Churchwarden Healey moved, "That the Act of the 9th and 10th Victoria, for the encouragement of baths and wash-houses, be adopted," which was seconded by Mr. Edmund Watson Fraser. Mr. Chittenden moved an amendment, to the effect, "that, in the present state of the parish finances, it is not expedient to mortgage the rates for the purpose of establishing baths and wash-houses, till the parish have paid off a portion of the debt now due." This was seconded by many other parishes. That, in the opinion of the meeting, the most effectual relief to the people of England, in a moral, social, and sanitary point of view, would be a remission of the soap and window duties—taxes essentially war taxes, and which have been continued during the longest peace on record, to the great injury of the health and morality of the people." (Loud cheers.) Mr. Ive seconded the amendment. The Rev. Chairman refused to put the latter part of the amendment, and Mr Brettingham withdrew it. The Rev. Mr. Hamilton, Mr Dyke, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Darlington, and the Rev. D. Laing having spoken, the question was put, and the amendment was declared to be carried A division took place, when there appeared, for the amendment, 89; for the proposal, 70: majority for rejecting the proposal, 18.

MURDER IN THE MILLBANK PRISON.—In our late edition, last week, we noticed a desperate attack which was made on Wednesday week, upon Thomas Hall, one of the warders of the Penitentiary, at Millbank, by John Francis, a convict inmate of that prison. From the effects of the attack, which was made with a heavy earthenware utensil, the injured man died on Thursday. An inquest was held on the body on Saturday, by Mr. Bedford, the coroner for Westminster, at which the savage nature of the assault was described by the officers who witnessed it from their cells. Mr. John Day Bendell, resident surgeon of the prison, described the wounds inflicted on deceased. He had an extensive lacerated wound on the right side of the head. The skull was laid bare, and the membranes of the brain were exposed. There was a great deal of hæmorrhage from the wound. He had the deceased removed from the infirmary, and did all that was possible for him, remaining with him almost constantly. He never became sensible, but on the following night from a compound comminuted fracture of the skull. He had since made a post mortem examination, and found extensive fractures of the skull, and the bone was broken into as many as nine pieces. One fracture extended to the base, running completely across. It also extended to the vertex of the head, and from the centre of the parietals into the base, meeting the fracture on the other side. The coroner having summed up, the jury immediately returned a verdict of Wilful Murder. The prisoner was present during the whole of the inquiry. Mr. Mowbray, the governor of the prison, was made upon one of the warders by a prisoner, named M'Langdon, who was fortunately prevented from inflicting any serious injury.

SOCIETY FOR THE STUDY OF THE LAW.—A general meeting of this society was held on Monday, in Regent-street, being the first since the Long Vacation Mr. Spence, Q.C., presided, and a paper was read by Mr. James Smart, containing a project for the establishment of a law school. The paper contained a narrative of the recent attempts to establish a law school in the branches of the law in the several inns of court, and of their alleged failure, which was attributed to the original view not having been carried out with respect to examinations and to the step taken open to any one from the bar, especially for a scientific society, to provide for the teaching of the law, by means of oral instruction, to all who are willing to be taught; and he submitted that it would be an appropriate thing for this society to undertake. He therefore invited the society to use its influence and authority to found a law school for the purpose of teaching the law in all its departments—a school entirely of a practical character, that would not confine it merely to students, but would open it to all who chose to attend. To give the plan a fair chance of success, he suggested that the society should out of its own funds give two prizes of £50 each to the two students most worthy of them, and such other suggestions as might be thought advisable. He concluded by moving that the paper be referred to a committee. The motion was seconded by Mr. Pulling; and in the course of a long discussion that followed, Mr. Abbott stated that the lectures for the branch of the profession to which he belonged, in the Law Institution, were eminently successful. A letter was read from Lord Brougham, in which the noble and learned lord expressed his cordial approbation of Mr. Spence's suggestion; also offering a subscription of £25 towards the prizes, and intimating that he might not be unwilling to deliver a course himself upon constitutional law. The motion being unanimously carried, the learned chairman, in a lengthened speech, stated that he had been appointed the lecturer in Lincoln's Inn, and that the lectures were about to be given up; but he was sure they had not failed as regarded those who attended them, for, in that respect, they had been successful. The proceedings then terminated.

SCHOOL FOR THE INDIGENT BLIND.—A meeting of the subscribers and friends of this philanthropic institution (the laudable objects of which are to impart a sound moral and religious education to the indigent blind, and to instruct them in a trade by which they may provide, wholly or in part, for their future subsistence was held at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate street, on Tuesday, to elect ten committee-men in the room of four going out by rotation in the society's asylum, in St. George's-fields, Southwark. The number of candidates for the ten vacancies amounted to no less than 58. The poll opened at 11 o'clock, and continued till 3. The scrutineers on the occasion having announced as the successful candidates: Boys William Sampson, votes, 4963; Thomas Hill Tickner, 2393; Edward Ambrose Squarey, 1795; William Prendergast, 1674; Edwin Bartlett, 1665; Thomas Dawson, 1660; Ursula Kate Bentley, votes, 2706; Mary Tomlin, 2330; Harriett Newman, 2247; and Mary Ann Stewart, 892. The number of pupils has been gradually increased from 15 males to 75 males and 76 females; and a manufactory has been established, where articles made entirely by them were sold last year for £1291 11s. 1d.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—The second meeting of the Society of Arts for the present session was held on Wednesday night in the great room of the institution. A splendid collection of Mr. Fuge's forthcoming work on Cyprian Ornament was presented to the Society by Mr. Bohn, the publisher, who received the cordial thanks of the meeting for his donation. A very interesting paper by Mr. H. Bessel, was read, upon an improved construction of suspension bridges, with a view to check or prevent oscillation and undulation. The paper was illustrated by a model upon a large scale, and by numerous drawings. A discussion of considerable length followed, in the course of which general approbation was expressed of the principles of the invention, for which a vote of thanks was unanimously accorded. At the next meeting of the society, a paper is to be read upon the History of the Society under the Presidency of his Royal Highness Prince Albert.

IMPROVED METROPOLITAN WATER SUPPLY.—A preliminary meeting of parochial officers and other representatives of metropolitan parishes took place on Wednesday evening, at the vestry-room of St. George-the-Martyr, Southwark, for the purpose of adopting measures for co-operation relating to the water-supply of the metropolis. Edward Cullinson, Esq., chairman of the board of guardians, took the chair. A circular had been addressed to every parochial authority by the vestry-clerk to the church-wardens of the different metropolitan parishes, and consisted of officers from the par shes of St. Pancras, Kensington, St. Luke, St. Clement Danes, Holborn, Strand, Lambeth, Poplar, St. Mary-le-Bone, and several other parishes. The business was then entered upon, and a very lengthened and interesting discussion took p ace on the importance of co-operation in order to secure the important objects in view and a series of resolutions were unanimously passed, setting forth the defective state of the present supply of water to the whole of the metropolis, and inviting the authorities in each parish to co-operate in forming an independent association of representatives from their bodies, to be called "The Parochial Water Supply Association," in order to counteract the powerful opposition of parties having vested interests in the existing water companies, and with a view to obtain, as speedily as possible, an abundant supply of pure water to the whole of the metropolis. It was proposed that the association should consist of one representative from each of the principal metropolitan parishes or districts, each representative being a parochial officer or other competent persons to be elected in vestry by the rate-payers. The association will undertake to examine and invite explanation of, and objections to, all schemes that may be brought before Parliament for improving the existing defect; and it was determined that the Parochial Water Supply Association should avoid being identified with any other [illegible]

[illegible]

THE PRESIDENT OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC AND THE ARMY AND NAVY CLUB.—The members of the Army and Navy Club received on Thursday (last week) a superb piece of Gobelins tapestry, a present from the President of the French Republic, with the accompanying letter from the French Ambassador:—Hertford House, Nov. 8.—Monsieur le Secrétaire du Comité du Club de l'Armée et de la Marine.—Monsieur, Le Prince Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, Président de la République Française, m'a chargé de vous informer de son intention d'offrir au Nouveau Club de l'Armée et de la Marine un tapis de Gobelins. Le Président de la République aime à espérer que Messieurs les membres du Club voudront bien l'accepter comme un témoignage des excellens sentimens qu'il a conservés de son séjour en Angleterre et de precieuses relations qu'il a eu le plaisir d'y entretenir avec plusieurs officiers de l'Armée et de la Flotte de la Grande Bretagne. Vous pourrez, Monsieur, faire prendre ce tapis chez MM Hadley et Sons, 164, Oxford-street. Recevez, Monsieur, l'assurance de ma considération distinguée. E. DROUYN DE L'HUYS.

IMPERIAL BRAZILIAN MINING COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of this company was held on Wednesday at the London Tavern. The report of the directors stated that the receipts for the past half-year consisted of dividends upon £22,000 reserved stock, £394 8s. 1d.; receipts from gold, £9148 8s. 5d.; arrears of calls, £.05; proceeds of 223 shares, £999 6s. 3d.; making a total of £10,447 2s. 9d. On the debit side of the account there appeared balance from the 31st December last, £5777 4s. 10d; salaries and expenses, £7407 9s. 1d.; balance of call on 20 shares, £12 .0s.; in the total, £13,196 4s. 6d. The profit and loss account on the year stood at £3249 14s. 6d.

IMPORTATION OF FOREIGN CATTLE.—The General Steam Navigation Company have obtained permission from the revenue authorities, and have made arrangements for the landing of foreign cattle from their steam-ships, entirely at their own premises, at Greenwich, near Deptford Bridge, and, at their premises at Poplar, known as Brown's Wharf, which will be exclusively devoted to the purpose.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10.—The deaths registered in the metropolitan districts were 859; a number which shows an excess of 56 on the return of the previous week, but a reduction of 269 on the corrected average of five autumns. If the present return be compared with that made in the same week of each of the years 1840-8, it will be found that, with but one exception (in 1841, when the deaths were 841), the mortality ranged formerly from 910 to 1168, and therefore was considerably higher than in the present week, although the population in those years was less. The increase of 56, now observed on the week ending November 3, partly arises from pneumonia and bronchitis, the deaths from which become more numerous as the winter progresses, having been 164 in the week ending the 3rd, and 127 in the last. The total number of deaths from cholera in the week was only 6 (3 less than in the previous week); in the same week of 1848 there were 62. The accompanying deaths of diarrhœa, by diseases of the bowels, the numbers of the last five weeks, which were respectively 105, 63, 51, 40, and 29. A boy died of diarrhœa in Peterborough-row, Fulham, whose father had been carried off by cholera in September; a boy of the same disease at Brunswick-place, New North-road, from an unwholesome condition of the house; and a girl at Maidstone-place, in a house in which a death from cholera, reported to the farm r week, occurred, and in a locality soon described as "low and ill-drained." Of the six deaths from cholera, one occurred at Water-lane, Bloomsbury; one at Weatherhead gardens, dackney-road, a place low, undrained, and connected by gullies with a stagnant ditch; one at Churchyard, St. Saviour's; one at Drummond-road, St. James's, Bermondsey; one in Walworth; and one in Lambeth. A death from apoplexy, on which an inquest was held, occurred in Huntingdon-street, Hoxton. The deceased was a female of sixty-five, who for the last four years had lived in an underground cellar, which is only eleven feet in length, eight feet six inches in width, five feet nine inches in height, and sunk five feet seven inches below the surface of the street. A small window scarce gives light or ventilation, and "the walls (says the coroner's register) are so damp that you might run the water from them." The births registered in the week were males, females, 715: total, 1414

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean daily reading of the barometer was above 30 inches on the last three days of the week [illegible] of the week was 29 732. The temperature on the last three days was considerably higher than the average of the corresponding days in seven years. The mean of the week was 50 2 deg., which is higher than the average by 4 1 deg.

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

The wretched criminals, Manning and his wife, expiated the murder of O'Connor on Tuesday morning, at nine o'clock, in front of Horsemonger-lane Gaol. The scaffold was erected in the centre of the plain black, similar to that in which he appeared at the trial. Mrs. Manning was clothed in a dress of black satin gown. The crowd that assembled to witness the sad spectacle was immense, numbering, according to some accounts, not less than 10,000 persons of all ages and sexes, every point of view commanding the place of execution being occupied, while places in the houses opposite were let at sums varying from a guinea to half-a-crown.

Previous to being led out to execution, Mrs. Manning became reconciled with her husband, towards whom she had, since their apprehension, expressed herself in very hostile terms. She made no confession of her guilt, but sought to make it appear that she was innocent.

Manning, however, made a statement to Mr. Roe, the chaplain of the gaol, in which he admitted his participation in the murder. He said: "My wife asked me downstairs. I went down stairs.

I heard him go down stairs, being at the time in my bed-room washing. I heard the report of a pistol about a minute after they descended the stairs. She then came up and said, 'Thank God, I have made him all right at last; it never will be found out; as we are in such ordinary good terms, no one will have the least suspicion of my murdering him.' To which I replied, 'I am not certain you will be hanged for this act;' and she said, 'It won't be you that will have to suffer, it will be me.' After speaking to him, she said, 'I think no more of what I have done than if I shot the cat that is on the wall.' Upon her coming to me up-stairs she assisted on my going down stairs immediately; and upon reaching the kitchen I found the victim upon the grave; he moaned; I never liked him well, and I battered his head with a ripping chisel." He then stated that they buried their victim in the grave already prepared for him, throwing some over the body, &c., as has already come under the notice of the reader as described. Manning also declared that his wife had for some time previously contemplated the murder, and that he had endeavoured to dissuade her from the commission of the crime, but to no purpose.

After hanging an hour, the bodies were taken down, and, casts having been taken of the heads, the remains of both were interred during the afternoon in the corridor leading to the chapel.

At the conclusion of the execution, as the crowd began to separate, the effects of its pressure began to be manifested. At the corner of Swan-street numbers of powerful men were seen lying on the pavement in a state bordering on insensibility and quite helpless from the crushing to which they had been subjected. As the ground became cleared in various places, hats, bonnets, shawls, snuce, and pocket-handkerchiefs were thickly strewed on the ground, which had the appearance of having been the field of some frightful struggle.

Even before the appearance of the culprits on the scaffold persons of both sexes were dragged out from the compact multitude by the police by means of ropes, so severely injured that they were obliged to be taken to the hospital, where many of them still remain. One person, hoping to relieve his chest from the pressure of the crowd against some iron railings, placed one leg between them, when the crowd swayed to one side, and his thigh was fractured. After having been dragged out, he was conveyed to the hospital on a stretcher.

Whilst the crowd was pushing between two of the barricades nearest Newington-causeway, several parties fell down, and attempt to get up. Amongst the number was a young woman named Catherine Reed, who fell down insensible, and was trodden upon by the mob. She was found to be so dreadfully injured that she could not speak. She was conveyed to Guy's Hospital, where she has since died. Near the same place a young man, named Thomas Overall, was forced down amongst the crowd, and was likewise injured to such an extent as to render it necessary for him to be taken to Guy's Hospital, where he still remains in a state dangerous condition.

[illegible] taken by the authorities in placing huge barriers in different parts of the neighbourhood of the scaffold, to prevent the pressure of the crowd, was an excellent one. Many lives were saved by it and the exertions of the police, particularly at the moment when the culprits appeared on the drop, the rush of the mob being then absolutely terrific.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT RESEMBLING THE MANNING TRAGEDY.—Probably the only instance on record in the English calendar of a man and his wife being executed together for murder, is that of Michael Van Berghen, a foreigner, and Catherine his wife, who were both hanged, with their servant, in East Smithfield, in 1700, for an affair of a similar character to that of the Mannings, and committed not far from the same locality. Van Berghen and his wife kept a public-house, and the crowd swayed to one side, and his thigh was fractured. After having been dragged out, he was conveyed to the hospital on a stretcher. having been dragged out, he was conveyed to the hospital on a stretcher.

Whilst the crowd was pushing between two of the barricades nearest Newington-causeway several parties fell down, and attempt to get up. Amongst the number was a young woman named Catherine Reed, who fell down insensible, and was trodden upon by the mob. She was found to be so dreadfully injured that she could not speak. She was conveyed to Guy's Hospital, where she has since died. Near the same place a young man, named Thomas Overall, was forced down amongst the crowd, and was likewise injured to such an extent as to render it necessary for him to be taken to Guy's Hospital, where he still remains in a state of dangerous condition.

[illegible] taken by the authorities in placing huge barriers in different parts of the neighbourhood of the scaffold, to prevent the pressure of the crowd, was an excellent one. Many lives were saved by it and the exertions of the police, particularly at the moment when the culprits appeared on the drop, the rush of the mob being then absolutely terrific.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT RESEMBLING THE MANNING TRAGEDY.—Probably the only instance on record in the English calendar of a man and his wife being executed together for murder, is that of Michael Van Berghen, a foreigner, and Catherine his wife, who were both hanged, with their servant, in East Smithfield, in 1700, for an affair of a similar character to that of the Mannings, and committed not far from the same locality. Van Berghen and his wife kept a public-house, and the crowd swayed to one side, and his thigh was fractured. After

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

On Saturday the Bank authorities stopped several forged £10 and £5 notes purporting to be of the Bank of England. The £5 notes are numbered between 53,934 and 54,384, U.D., dated Newcastle-on-Tyne, August 28th, 1847; signed J. Hawkes: the £10, No. V. K. 64,505, dated London, October 4th, 1848; signed J. Cann. They are well executed, but may at once be detected by wetting, when if a forgery the water-mark will instantly disappear. This test is recommended by the Bank.

The President of the French Republic having received a report of the meritorious services rendered by musical men during the prevalence of the late fearful epidemic, has conferred the rank of officer of the legion of honour on Drs. Meher and Rostan, and the cross of that order on Dr. Smart Cooper and twelve other physicians, in addition to honorary medals on a great number of members of all ranks, professions, and countries

The 150 Hungarian hussars who fled to England, and were thence sent to Turkey, have not been permitted to land at Constantinople. Being in uniform, and without military passes, they were considered as deserters.

Letters from Schemnitz (Hungary) state that one of the officers of the garrison of Komorn has lately been executed in the city of Schemnitz, in direct violation of the terms at General Klapka's capitulation.

Since January, no less than 1619 sentences have been pronounced by the courts-martial sitting at Vienna.

At a recent meeting of the Winchester Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association, it was resolved to raise subscriptions to defray the expenses of a public meeting, to which Sir Joshua Walmsley, Mr. Thompson, and other able friends of the cause should be invited.

On Sunday last, a sermon was preached by the Rev. Henry Melvill, B.D., President of Haileybury College, at the church of St. Lawrence, Jewry, Gresham-street, before the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, and a numerous congregation, in aid of the funds of the schools which have been recently established for the purpose of maintaining and educating the orphans and necessitous children of commercial travellers. The appeal produced for the charity the sum of £58 10s.

The city of Hamburg will possess a public picture gallery in future; a wealthy gentleman (deceased), Mr. Hartwig Hesse, having bequeathed most part of his collection for that purpose, and other individuals having signified their intention of doing the same.

We are glad to report that a number of locomotives have just been ordered of the Messrs. Stephenson, of this town, for a railway in Peru, which will afford additional employment at those extensive works.—Newcastle Guardian.

The Assemblée Nationale announces that the grand apartments of the Palace of the Tuileries are being fitted out, at the request of the President of the Republic, who intends to give in them several balls during the winter.

The new journal, the Times, of Vienna, after having published a few numbers, has been suppressed by the military government for having deprecated the punishment of the bastinado being exercised towards private individuals.

It is understood that Mr. Baptist Noel has proceeded to Rome, with the view of operating with greater effect for the release of Dr. Achilli.

Several strawberries were gathered on Friday week in the open garden of a gentleman at Walton-on-Thames

Twenty pounds have been received by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, to be paid into the Exchequer. The Right Hon gentleman has also received, from A. B. C., the first halves of Bank of England notes for £100, "to be placed to the credit of her Majesty's Exchequer."

Major-General Stavely, commanding her Majesty's forces at Hong-Kong, is appointed a member of the Executive Council of that island

Latham Blacker, Esq., of Dublin, and for many years Solicitor of her Majesty's Customs for Ireland, has been appointed to the Solicitorship of Customs in London.

At the annual meeting of the Town-Council of York, on Friday week, Mr. Alderman Materson moved "that the portrait of Mr. George Hudson be removed from the Mansion-house." After some discussion, the motion was lost by 13 to 11.

In removing some old panelling at the south end of the grammar school at Norwich, a fine piscina has been discovered, which has been for years hidden, with the exception of a small portion of the finials, by its wooden enclosure. The style is early English, and the workmanship is very beautiful. It is very much obscured by the plaster and whitewash of former years, which are now in course of removal; and, when thoroughly cleansed from the a relics of barbarism, it will be a most interesting object. The work of beautification in the school has also disclosed several beautiful heads and foliage, &c., in the capitals of the arches.

At his rent-day, at Morpeth, on Wednesday last, William Lawson, Esq., of Longhirst, returned 10 per cent. to his tenantry.

The Earl of Eldon made a return of 10 per cent. to his numerous tenantry in the county of Durham assembled at Darlington on his Lordship's rent days, Tuesday and Wednesday last.

In addition to the usual holidays, the Post-office who have been released from labour during a portion of Sunday, the clerks and porters at Messrs. Bretherton's coach-office, Birmingham, have also been allowed the same indulgence. A notice, was pasted on the doors on Saturday, that the office would remain closed from ten until five o'clock.

The Master of the Rolls has appointed Tuesday, the 20th inst., at the Rolls Court, Chancery-lane, at three o'clock in the afternoon, for swearing solicitors to whom he proposes to give certificates on this above day, under his common law admission or his certificate of practice for the current year at the secretary's office, Rolls-yard, Chancery-lane, on or before Monday, Nov 19.

The new Emperor of Hayti, Faustin I., has resolved to support his throne by creating an aristocracy. He has accordingly created six princes, and 60 dukes, marquises, and barons. The creation of a new duke with the title of Trou-Bonbon, has excited much hilarity in the island.

The climate of California is doing its fatal work. Among the gold-seekers. The New York papers mention that one of the largest cargoes just sent out to that country from that city is composed solely of coffins! Mr. John Mace, the undertaker, being the shipper.

The Court of Assistants of the Grocers' Company have contributed an additional sum of £100 (making £200) in aid of the funds of the Committee for Promoting the Establishment of Baths and Washhouses for the Labouring Classes, towards the completion of the model establishment, Gunlston-square, Whitechapel.

An extensive ship-yard has been destroyed by fire at Somerset, Massachusetts: loss, 40,000 dollars.

A letter has been presented to the United States consul at Kingston (Jamaica), soliciting him to urge upon his Government the establishment of a regular mail between that port and the United States. It was numerously signed by Jamaica merchants.

The Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands (Sir H. Ward) has granted an amnesty to all persons concerned in the late insurrection, three alone excepted, on account of the prominent part they took in the attempt to overturn the Government.

The Tribune des Peuples, one of the most violent of the Democratic Socialist Paris journals, has announced its intention of discontinuing its publication for the present.

The cholera is still gradually declining at Marseilles. On the 8th there were only five deaths.

Captain George R. Peshell, M.P. for Brighton, succeeds to the family baronetcy by the death of his brother, the late Rear-Admiral.

Mr. Squier, United States chargé d'affaires to Central America, has discovered the ruins of another ancient city, buried, or nearly so, beneath a forest, about 150 miles from Leon. He describes the ruins as far surpassing in architectural grandeur those of Palenque.

There were 109 deaths the last week in October at New Orleans by yellow fever.

The steam-propeller Globe lately went down in Lake Erie, near Buffalo, with a cargo on board worth 110,000 dollars; no lives lost.

6,000 dollars have been subscribed in New Orleans towards making a survey for a railroad at Tehuantepec, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

A serious fire occurred recently at Cincinnati (United States), which destroyed an entire block of buildings, known as the Museum-buildings. Loss, about 60,000 dollars.

At the meeting of the Committee of the Orphan Working School, on Wednesday, it was unanimously resolved to recommend the general body of governors of that institution, at their half-yearly meeting on the 28th instant, to have an extra election in January next for the admission of 20 additional children. They will receive 40 more during the year 1850 at the usual periods.

The weather in the Lake (Cumberland) district for several days past has been unusually stormy—rain, hail, and sleet almost incessantly; and for the greater part of the past week all the mountains in view from Keswick have been completely covered with snow

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has received from "Y. Z." £300, and will pay the amount into the Exchequer.

A morbid curiosity concerning a brother and sister assassins, who were executed lately at Madrid, having shown itself among the lower orders, a French engraver thought to make a good speculation by exposing their portraits for sale, but the political chief ordered these portraits to be seized and burnt.

It is proposed to raise a fund for the erection of a church, as a thank-offering, in the parish of Ashton-in-Makerfield. The district of the parish for which the church is designed has a population of 22,000, with church accommodation for less than 3000.

The Marquis of Anglesey has instructed the agent of his Irish estates, A. W. Rutherford, Esq., to allow all his tenants 20 per cent. this year upon their rent, and to expend £300 annually henceforth in improvements on his Lordship's Carlingford property, which is under £6000 per annum.

The Earl of Onslow has given 100 guineas to the City of London Hospital for Diseases of the Chest; and Sir Charles Forbes has contributed the sum of £50 towards the funds of the Leicester-square Soup Kitchen.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Florence."—The very beautiful and appropriate box of Carton Pierre, in which the new Chess-men are enclosed, is by Mr. Joseph L. Williams, the well-known decorative artist.

"Schachgesell."—In the case submitted, A. must undoubtedly take the Pawn with his Queen. See the laws of Chess, p. 13 of the "Chess-player's Text-Book."

"Amateur," Liverpool.—The Problem No 302 cannot be solved as you propose; if it could, there would certainly be nothing very "difficult" or very "advantageous" in its composition.

"Brutus," Chard. Your opponent was bound to take the Pawn with his Kt.

"Bellary."—The last is somewhat too obvious, and the diagram needlessly encumbered with men.

"Philo-Chess," Manchester. We regret to say the report is true; the able and respected Secretary of the Liverpool Chess-club, Mr. Spreckley, is on the point of quitting England, to take up his abode, for some years at least, among the Pagodas and Pigtails of the "Celestial" Empire. To the amateurs of Liverpool, his loss is irreparable.

Solutions by "A Member of the Lurgan Chess-club," "Derecon," "Egomet," "Ashbury," "P. G. R.," "Otho," "Carlo Folero," "Brutus," "Pawcunck," "John Jones," "Bellary," "Abendon," "Mr. Pips," "W. E. R.," "Carlisle C. C.," "Carwen," "H. W.," "G. P.," "F. R. S.," "Elsea," are correct. Those by "W. G. W.," "M. P.," "D. D.," "M. V.," "G. E. S.," "J. L. S.," "V. T. M.," "G. S.," "L. C. L.," are wrong.

 A host of communications remain unanswered, from want of room, until next week.

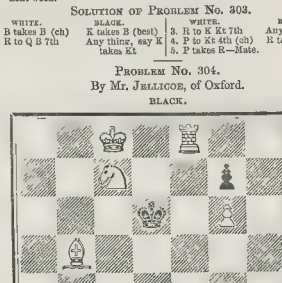
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 302.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B takes B (ch)	K takes B (best)	3. R to K 7th	Anything
2. R to Q 7th	Any thing, say K taken Kt	4. P to Kt 4th (ch)	K takes P
		5. P takes R—Mate.

PROBLEM No. 304.

By Mr. JELLICOE, of Oxford.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

CHESS IN THE METROPOLIS.

Mr. STAUNTON gives the Pawn and two moves to Mr. G. W. MEDLEY.

(Remove Black's K B Pawn from the board.)

WHITE (Mr. G. M.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)	WHITE (Mr G. M.)	BLACK (Mr. S.
1. P to K 4th		15 K B takes Q P	Q B takes K B P
2 P to Q 4th	Q Kt to B 3d	16. P takes B (b)	Q takes B (ch)
3. Q Kt to B 3d	P to K 4th	17. Q takes Q	Kt takes Q
4. P takes P	Q Kt taken P	18. B takes Q Kt P	Q R to Q Kt sq
5. P to K B 4th	Q Kt to K B 3d	19. K R to Q Kt sq (c)	Kt takes Q B P
6. K B to Q B 4th	K Kt to K R 4d	20. B to Q 8th	Kt takes Q R
7. Q B to K 3d	B to Q Kt 5th	21. Kt takes Kt (d)	Kt to K R 3d (e)
8. K Kt to B 3d	Castles	22. R to K sq	K R takes P
9. P to K B 5th	K to R sq	23. B to K 6th	K R to K B 3d
10. Castles	B takes Q Kt	24. B to Q 5th	K R to Q Kt 3d
11. P takes B	Q to K 2d	25. R to K 7th	K R to Q Kt 8th (ch)
12. Q to her 3d	K Kt to his 5th		And White surrendered.
13. Q B to Q 4th (a)	P to Q B 4th	26. K to B 2d (f)	Q R to Kt 7th (ch)
14. Q B to K 3d	P to Q 4th

(a) Q B to K 8 th looks promising; but, by replying with P to Q Kt 4th, Black in that case gets a fine attacking position.

(b) If he had taken the Kt with his K B, Black must have won at least a Pawn.

(c) The son of a Rook for a Kt was inevitable.

(d) It would perhaps have been better for him to take R with K R, and then the other Kt with his Bishop, as Black must have lost time in first-ing the Kt back into play again.

(e) This wins a valuable Pawn. (f) Evidently played without consideration.

Slight skirmish, in which Mr. Staunton gives his Q's Rook to an Amateur of the St. George's Club.

(Remove Black's Q Rook from the board.)

(Q Kt P Gambit.)

BLACK. (Mr. S.)	WHITE. (Amateur.)	BLACK. (Mr. S.)	WHITE. (Amateur.
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	11. P to K 5th (c)	K to his sq
2. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	12. Castles	K Kt to K 3d (d)
3. P to Q Kt 4th	B takes Kt P	13. Q B to K Kt 5th	P to Q 3d
4. P to B 3d	B to Q R 4th	14. P to K 6th	P to Q B 3d
5. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	15. Q to K B 3d	K R to B sq
6. P to Q 4th	Q Kt takes P	16. Q to Q Kt 3d (ch)	P to K Kt 3d
7. Kt takes P (a)	Q Kt to K 2d	17. Q takes K R P	Q to her B 2d
8. Kt takes K B P	K takes Kt	18. Q to K B 7th (ch)	R takes Q
9. B takes Kt (ch)	K to B sq (b)	19. P takes R (ch)	K to Q 2d (e)
10. Q to her 5th (ch)	K to his 2d	20. P Queens, and wins.

(a) Black would have got a fine game also by taking Kt with Kt, and then playing Q to K R 4th.

(b) If he had moved the King to any other square, Black must have gained a piece; and if he had taken the B, Black's attack would have been still more embarrassing, for suppose—

BLACK	WHITE.
9	K takes B
10. Q to her 5th (ch)	K to his 2d
11. P to K 6th (ch)	K Kt to B 3d

12. P to K 5th
13. Castles
14. R to K sq, with a winning game

(c) Threatening a terrible check with the Q at K 2 8d.

(d) Poor White has no good move.

(e) If to B sq, the 3 of course mates.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
	46. B to Q R 3d.
47. P to K Kt 3d.

London to play.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 497.—By C. E. RAPKEN, of Oxford.

White: K at his R 5th, R at Q 8th, B at K 4th, Kt at K 6th, Ps at K Kt 5th and K B 3d.

Black: K at his B 3d. Ps at K B 5th and K 4th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No 498. By the Same.

White: K at his B 2d, Beat Q B 3d and 4th, Kt at K Kt 3d.

Black: K at his K 5th, P at Q B 4th.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

LIVERPOOL CHESS CLUB.—At the usual Friday meeting of this Club, a communication from Mr. G. S. Spreckley, honorary secretary, was read, announcing his early departure for China, and relinquishing, in consequence, his honourable position in the society. At the suggestion of several members, it was agreed to present Mr. Spreckley with a set of large ivory chessmen (of the pattern designed by Mr. Staunton), as a mark of the general esteem and appreciation of his successful endeavours, during a number of years, to raise the Club to the high position which it now occupies. A subscription was then entered into by the gentlemen present, the amount from each being limited, in order to allow the whole of the members to participate in the testimonial.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY.—An improved system of communication, in conjunction with the Midland Railway, has, by order of the directors, come into operation upon this company's line, as regards transit east and west during the present month. Reduced charges have been made for season tickets between London, Ilford, Tottenham, and intermediate stations; and an alteration in the general rates and charges, which has for some time engaged the consideration of the new direction, is to come into operation with the beginning of December.

EAST AND WEST INDIA DOCKS AND NORTH-WESTERN JUNCTION.—There were no fewer than 44 tenders sent in for the formation of this company's line lying between the London canal and Blackwall, and the difference between the highest and the lowest tender was no less than £14,000.

THE BRITANNIA BRIDGE.—On Saturday the first of the great tubes of the Britannia bridge was finally lowered down again by a 3-ft. fall to its permanent bed of plates and rollers, the operation for effecting a junction with the tube on land having occupied about three weeks. The hydraulic presses and lifting apparatus are now being removed from the Anglesea to the Carnarvonshire shore, in order to raise the next tube as soon as it is floated to the piers; an operation which, weather and tide permitting, will take place on the 3d or next month. The processes connected with this magnificent work have now been carried on for several months both by day and night, under the superintendence of Mr. E. Clark, the acting engineer, Mr. L. Clark, the resident engineer, and Messrs. Forster and Wild; and, from the strenuous exertions made, there appears to be little doubt but that the first line of tubes will be opened for traffic on the 1st of March next.

CALEDONIAN AND EDINBURGH AND GLASGOW.—Various conferences have been held between a deputation of the Edinburgh and Glasgow directors and the Committee of Investigation lately appointed by the shareholders of the Caledonian Railway, with a view to the amalgamation of these companies. The result is that the above parties have agreed that amalgamation, in fair terms, would be mutually beneficial. In the meantime, and to keep matters open, it has been agreed to give the necessary parliamentary notices for a bill to sanction the amalgamation. When the terms of the amalgamation are further matured, the shareholders of both companies will be respectively convened to give their opinion on the expediency of this amalgamation.

RAILWAY GUARDS.—The Railway Guards' Protection Society now consists of upwards of 400 members, and branches of it are established at the principal termini.

YORK, NEWCASTLE, AND BERWICK.—We understand that George Leeman, Esq., has been appointed chairman of the York, Newcastle, and Berwick Railway Company.

MUNIFICENT DONATION.—The Right Hon. the Earl of Onslow has forwarded the handsome donation of one hundred guineas to the treasurer of the City of London Hospital for Diseases of the Chest, in aid of the funds of that useful institution.

POLICE CHANGES.—It is rumoured that Mr. Daniel Whittle Harvey, Commissioner of the City Police, is to succeed Sir Charles Rowan as Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, Sir Charles being about to retire, from the delicate state of his health.

OPENING OF THE NORWICH AND IPSWICH RAILWAY

IT is a curious fact in the history of Railways, that, one or two years before the application to Parliament for the construction of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway, a prospectus was printed in the Norwich Mercury for the formation of a Norfolk and Suffolk Railway Company; though the project had no reference to the application of steam, but simply to the laying down of tram-ways, and the use of horse power. The proposal was, however, met by the denial of the utility of railways, and an assertion of the sufficiency of land and sea carriage. "What," says the editor of the Norwich Mercury, "would our correspondent have said had he lived to know, not that a railroad with horse power had given way before a far mightier force, but that even now the tradesmen of Norwich, although they and their goods are transferred from home to the metropolis at the rate of at least thirty miles an hour—yet that rate is not equal to their desires, although any one can start at half-past ten, and reach London, by Cambridge, by three o'clock. Yet such was the opinion of that day; and that it was held to be a sound one, was seen in the death of the project at that time."

Projects for Railways in the Eastern District slept for nine years, when, in 1834, was started a proposal which ultimately led to the formation of the Eastern Counties line from London to Colchester, where the Eastern Union Company was formed to connect Ipswich with Colchester and with Bury. This has subsequently been extended to Norwich; and a few weeks (Dec. 1), it is stated, will enable those who either prefer or require to travel by this line, to avail themselves of the route by Ipswich.

Wednesday, the 7th instant, was the day fixed for the opening of the portion of the line from Norwich to Ipswich. There was evidently a strong local feeling in the event: it was felt to be "a Norwich line" Old St. Peter pealed forth his bells as soon as the train of empty carriages arrived from Ipswich—which was greeted by salvos of cheers—shortly before nine o'clock. The weather was anything but genial: still there was a very large assemblage of invited company The Station was decorated, the Norwich arms being placed over the principal entrance, and an ensign hung with a number of gay flags.

At 13 minutes past 11 the train of 15 carriages, with 550 persons, left the Station, drawn by the engine "Goliah," amidst loud cheers and the playing of the National Anthem. The train proceeded steadily through the cutting which runs through the Redfields, thence across the five-arch viaduct over Trowse Newton lane and the river Yar, into the deep Marshall cutting. Caistor village and church and Roman encampment were next passed; and thence the line to Dunstonebridge was run through a richly-wooded country, and over the low valley of Shotesham, with, on the left, and in the eastern distance, the woods of Poringland and Bixley filling the horizon. At Flordon, a triumphal arch of evergreens and flowers was erected. Hapton church soon appeared in the distance, Tasburgh cutting was passed, and the train rolled on through Thurston work and bridge. Forncett next appeared; again, by cutting, bridge, and embankment, Forncett bridge was reached, and Hivesball, the property of the Earl of Orford, where there was a festal welcome. In a few minutes Burston was arrived at, and next the Diss Station, which stands on high ground, nearly a mile from the town. Here terminates the Eastern Union Railway in Norfolk; Diss touching upon the borders of Suffolk.

The line from Diss, for a considerable distance, takes a straight direction, and the train was steamed rapidly over Frandsun Bog, which proved an obstinate "engineering difficulty" in the formation of the railway, though it is now firm and hard. It is, however, dull, sombre, unenlivening, and stands in sad contradistinction to the lively and cheerful prospects which present themselves in other portions of the line, as it progresses onward towards Stowmarket.

The Mellis Station, built to afford a communication with the neighbouring town of Eye, two or three miles to the left, was next reached. At Mellis is one of the finest village greens in England.

From Mellis to Finningham the same flat country prevails on either side, with Thornham Hall on the left, embosomed in noble woods of elm and oak. The village of Thornham lies upon the right. Shortly beyond, the train takes a slight incline, followed by Finningham embankment, leading to Finningham Station, nine miles from Diss. The village of Bacton is distant only a few miles, as also Cotton.

To Finningham succeeds Newton cutting, one of the deepest excavations upon the line, thirty-two feet in height. After passing through a further portion of the same cutting, Newton, Haughley was reached: a junction here with lines from Ipswich, Bury, and Norwich meeting here. Immediately on quitting Haughley, the undeviating character of the line disappears, and a series of curves commences, which do not cease until Stowmarket Station is reached.

The prospect, especially on the left of the line, is here very pleasing. The river Gipping, navigable by the Stowmarket navigation from hence to Ipswich, may be seen. The town of Stowmarket, in the background, with the tall chimneys of the Stowmarket brewery, from which manufactory issues a beautiful "pale ale," now running a tilt in the East India markets with the beverages of Bass and Hodgson, and the numerous lofty cowls and gables of malt-houses, give liveliness to the prospect.

The Stowmarket station is of brick, in the Elizabethan style, from the designs of Mr. Barnes, architect to the company. The distance from Stowmarket to Ipswich is about 12 miles, and Bury St. Edmunds 14.

At Stowmarket terminated the opening trip on Wednesday. The town is situated at the confluence of two branches of the river Gipping, on the road from Ipswich to Bury St. Edmunds.

At Needham Market, about three miles distant, is the next station, which we have engraved: it is an Elizabethan building, substantially constructed of red and white Suffolk bricks, the string-courses and quoinings being of Caen stone, and the roofs covered with fancy tiles in patterns, and ornamental ridge crest. The centre portion contains the booking-office, which communicates on either side with a passengers' waiting-room, forming the ground story of the wings, the upper story being appropriated as a residence for the station master and head-porter, and approached by a staircase in each tower. The gateways at the ends are for the egress of passengers from the up and down trains. The platforms, which are roofed in the usual length, are connected by a passage-way below the line, thereby avoiding the danger of crossing on the level. Mr. Frederick Barnes, of Ipswich, is the architect of this very pleasing structure, as well as of the other stations on the line.

At Stowmarket, the Norwich train was met by that from Ipswich, bringing 600 visitors and several directors to meet the Mayor, and return with him to Norwich. The two trains being joined, the four-horses mail-coach set time faces eastward, impelled by the "City of Norwich" and the "Ipswich" engines; and they reached Norwich at a quarter past four o'clock, the journey from Stowmarket having occupied exactly two hours, travelling often at the rate of above thirty miles an hour.

The train to Norwich consisted of thirty carriages, and brought upwards of 1,000 persons, and extended from the station nearly to the entrance bridge. The weather throughout continued to be cold and wet, and lasted badly on its arrival the lady travellers departed for their residences. The larger number of the gentlemen immediately proceeded to

THE DINNER AT ST. ANDREW'S HALL.

The preparations here recalled the olden festivities. The dais was occupied by a cross table, in the centre of which sat the president (the Mayor of Norwich), supported on the left by the Marquis of Douro, M.P., and the Earl of Orford; and on the right by J. G. Colbourn, Esq., the Chairman on the line), and the Sheriff of Norwich, the rest of the seats being occupied by several of the trading gentlemen in the compa[illegible]. Four tables occupied the centre arch, and one on each other side. On the pillars on one side were suspended the City arms, and two banners, one inscribed "Bignold," and the other "Cobbold," in silver on a blue ground. The Corporation flags were tastefully placed at the back of the orchestra, while across the back in the front was a large inscription, "Speed, safety [illegible]." Flags of all nations hung suspended from each pillar. The orchestra was occupied by a wind instrument band, and in the front were the principal singers. The Hall had a very brilliant appearance.

OPENING OF THE NORWICH AND IPSWICH RAILWAY.

THE NEEDHAM-MARKET STATION.

At about half past five, the crier, by the sound of his bell, proclaimed the dinner to be ready, and the Mayor took his presidential seat. The dinner, served by Mr. John Durrant, was excellent and liberal; all the sweets being made by Mrs. [illegible] of Norwich.

At the [illegible] "Non nobis Domine" was sung, and on the removal of the cloth, the health of the Queen was drunk with enthusiasm, and was followed by the customary loyal and patriotic toasts; "The Duke of Wellington and the British Army" being responded to by the Marquis of Douro; his Lordship observing, "Gentlemen, I think that those words which I see before me are [illegible] to and in accordance with those principles on which the Duke of W[illegible] anded the army in the service of his country; for I believe he was [illegible] to the danger of running off the rails—he felt that if he once got off [illegible] progress would no longer be impeded, but he would lose the confidence [illegible] country, which he always enjoyed." (Loud cheers.)

The Rev. Canon Woodehouse, in replying to the toast of "The Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese," remarked that he recollected, in the year 1814, he took his first journey on a locomotive engine, made by a person named Flintoff, who obtained a patent for his invention. He travelled upon this locomotive on the day of the first experiment; and he believed he was the second person who had ever travelled upon a locomotive in this country.

The Mayor then prefaced by an address, detailing the origin of the railway, "The Health of Mr. Cobbold, and success to the Eastern Union Railway," which was drunk with three times three cheers.

Mr. Cobbold, who was received with enthusiastic cheering, responded to the toast in an address, glancing at the difficulties the company had encountered in completing this railway; the course not only of the old turnpike road, but the line laid down before turnpike roads were invented, or acts of Parliament thought of—the line laid down by the Romans from the ancient capital of Essex, the Roman station of Colchester to the city of Norwich, through the country of the Iceni. Another point in Mr. Cobbold's address was a felicitous allusion to the Duke of Wellington as "Director-in-Chief of the lines of Torres Vedras," which was received with enthusiastic cheering. The worthy speaker concluded by proposing the health of Mr. Bignold, the Mayor, which was drunk with loud cheers; and that gentleman having thanked the company, proposed "The members for the City of Norwich" (drunk with loud cheers), to which the Marquis of Douro replied, and concluded by proposing the health of the Sheriff of Norwich. The Sheriff having returned thanks, the Mayor next gave "The health of the Earl of Orford and the owners of the land through which the line passes." Lord Orford thanked the company, and proposed "The Directors of the Eastern Union Railway." Mr. Greyston returned thanks, and proposed "The health of Mr. Hardcastle, M.P. for Colchester;" followed by "Mr. Bruff, and the executive officers of the Company," and "Mr. Hardy," for which these gentlemen severally returned thanks.

The Mayor then stated that although there were five or six toasts upon the lists, he was compelled to omit them all except one—"The Ladies"—which he then proposed, and immediately after left the room, followed by the principal portion of the company.

The dinner was by subscription and by ticket, and was given in compliment to the liberal manner in which the Mayor had made advances to the company to complete the line, of which he is a director

The Ball was one of the most brilliant which had graced the Assembly-rooms for very many years. The visitors began to arrive about nine o'clock, and were received by the Mayor, the lady of the Rev. Samuel Bignold, the Sheriff, and Mrs. Chamberlin. There was an orchestra provided in each room, and dancing was kept up until morning.

On this evening may be said to have terminated the civic hospitalities of the year—a year as replete with events of local interest, as exciting, important, and impressive, greater perhaps than any which have occurred (with one exception, the 10th of March, last year) for many a day.

The report whence we have condensed these descriptive details fills seven large columns of the Norwich Mercury of Saturday last.

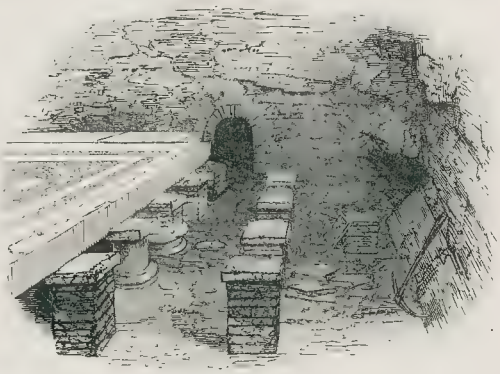
THE DINNER IN ST. ANDREW'S HALL, NORWICH.

BIRMINGHAM AND SHREWSBURY RAILWAY.—VIADUCT ACROSS THE SEVERN AT SHREWSBURY.

OPENING OF THE SHREWSBURY AND BIRMINGHAM RAILWAY.

On Monday last, this new line of railway was opened with a train of upwards of fifty carriages, accompanied by a fine band of music, and decorated with a profusion of flags and banners.

The train left Shrewsbury at about half-past eight o'clock. It was joined by a considerable number of passengers both at Upton Magna and Walcot, and a large posse of Wellingtonians f ll in at that populous town, where the train was received with a volley of cheers, the station and public buildings streaming with flags. Accumulated hundreds joined the train at Oakengates, where a considerable stoppage was required; after which the long body of carriages entered the tunnel, at a slow rate, and was about five minutes in its transitory eclipse. The excavations on both sides of the tunnel, through rock and shale, show the immensity of labour in this part of the line, independent of the construction of the tunnel itself. The rate of the train, from its great weight and length, where there was a slight ascent in the incline, was necessarily slow—with the two powerful and splendid engines, Salopian and Wrekin (and another, we believe, added a portion of the way), but we approached Shiffnal at a better rate: and here, as we advanced, the view of the town on the flanks of the elevated archway, with the flower-gardens of the houses coming up to and abutting on the masonry of the viaduct, presented a singularly beautiful and pleasant scene of active life, excited by the novelty of the occasion. The Shiffnal Station is an extremely neat and tasteful edifice, light and commodious, and was resplendent with flags; and from this town was derived another considerable addition to the passenger-train, in a number of gentlemen and ladies, as well as other humbler and well-dressed classes. The sub-stations of Albrighton and Codsall are pretty edifices; the former being the centre of several other villages, and a considerable population



ROMAN PAVEMENT.—THE EXCAVATION.

At Wolverhampton the crowds of people to receive the train were immense; and it had to thread its way up to the temporary platform amid the cheers of the people, the pealing bells, and rolling drums, &c. of the band—a most glorious and animated scene. It is the first instance of a railway coming up into the large, flourishing, and populous town of Wolverhampton—the rising Birmingham of Staffordshire, and was an object of interest and éclat in proportion.

The train having poured out its living load the engines "Salopian" and "Wrekin" were sent to take in water for the return steam, and then speed off with a similar load of the inhabitants of Wolverhampton, including several of the chief corporators of that town, to Shrewsbury, and bring the same back again before the Salopians returned.

Meanwhile, the Shrewsbury corporation proceeded, as they best could, to Birmingham, where Prince Albert had arrived: the spirit of the town was of course astir; but the Exhibition of Arts had been closed for the day. It being made known, however, that the Mayor and Corporation of Shrewsbury had come to Birmingham by the new line, the Exhibition was politely re-opened for their especial convenience. After viewing the display of arts, the Mayor and his associates returned to Wolverhampton, where refreshments had been provided for them at the Swan Inn.

The station house of the Shrewsbury and Birmingham line, at Wolverhampton, is an elegant structure, from what may be seen of it in its present unfinished state, and occupies one of the most prominent situations of the town, being an opposite corner at the bottom of Queen-street, and the streets leading to Walsall. The Assembly Room, Public News Room, and Town Library occupy the centre of one side of the street, with the Mechanics' Institute and handsome fronted dwelling-houses on the right, with one of the Dissenting chapels, and similar commodious houses, on the left. This railway, with a branch line to the North Western, thus connecting the main line to Birmingham, and the opposite line on the west and north-west, will give Wolverhampton its proper status in the intercourse of public business and extensive mutual communication.

ROMAN TESSELLATED PAVEMENT FOUND AT CIRENCESTER.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The return train from Shrewsbury, with the Wolverhampton excursionists, did not arrive till nine o'clock in the evening, instead of being able to set up its prime occupants at six, for their return home. Owing to some delay, the train did not start on its return till nearly ten o'clock: it reached the Shrewsbury Station about half-past eleven o'clock, and was received with cheers at that late hour by a considerable company on the platform.

Mr. Stephenson has in pretty the tunnel at Oakengates, respecting the security of which some doubts were entertained, and reports that it is perfectly safe. We have condensed these details from the Shrewsbury Journal report of the day's proceedings.

The town of Shrewsbury, as it is entered on the Shrewsbury and Birmingham Railway, presents a picturesque and imposing appearance; two of its venerable ecclesiastical structures, as well as several other of the public buildings, are conspicuously seen [illegible]

[illegible] is an illustration from a sketch by Mr. J. Jay [illegible] the station is constructed. [illegible] tion. 410 feet in length, and 70 in span, the height being in proportion to the width. Looking down upon the station, westward [illegible] shands the Castle.

ROMAN PAVEMENT AT CIRENCESTER.

In the annexed Engravings, illustrative of a Roman pavement found recently at Cirencester, the larger represents the pavement itself, and the smaller one the expensum under which displayed the substance of the suspensura referred to in the following description. We should premise, that since our Sketch was made, portions of two other circles have been disclosed.

In the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of September 8 we gave a representation of the position and manner of raising a Roman tesselated pavement, found at Cirencester in August last. We also mentioned that indications existed of other pavements near the same spot. Since then, the excavations have been pursued further, and the result has been the discovery of four other rooms, the largest and most interesting of which is shown in the annexed Engraving.

The room the pavement of which is illustrated measures twenty-five feet square, although, from the position of the neighbouring houses, the whole of that extent was not exposed to view. The pavement, when complete, consisted of nine circles of four feet each inches diameter; but four only, when found, were perfect. Independently, however, of the beauty of the design, and the superior character of the workmanship, this pavement presents many features of interest to the archæologist, which the process of removal has fortunately brought to light.

The suspensura, or raised floor, was supported upon a number of pilæ, consisting of tiles in some instances (ten tiles forming a pillar), and of stone pillars in others, as is shown in the accompanying Sketch. But the most remarkable feature is, that the suspensura extended, only half the length of the room, the other half being solid, rendering that part very difficult of removal. This operation was, however, conducted with great care, under the superintendence of Mr. Newmarch, and every possible precaution was taken; and the work has proceeded very successfully.

The concrete foundation on which the pavement was laid was [illegible] inches in thickness, and spread upon large square tiles, resting upon the pilæ. This, together with the four others recently discovered, and one found many years ago in the cellar of an adjoining house, makes six pavements found upon this spot alone. In addition to these there are several other pavements in the town, including a magnificent specimen on the property of Earl Bathurst.

We understand that Earl Bathurst has, in a most liberal and praiseworthy manner, announced his intention of building a Museum, in which to preserve these beautiful and interesting remains, which form so important a feature in the vestiges of ancient Corinium, and now give Cirencester unquestionably the honour of being richer in Roman remains than any other town in the kingdom.

Two gentlemen at Cirencester, Dr. Buckman, Esq., and C. E. Newmarch, Esq., have exerted themselves most laudably in preserving this and the other relics of [illegible] in grandeur lately disclosed; and we understand that they have announced for publication a volume descriptive of them, and which will be of extreme interest.

The subjects within the four circles, in the portion engraved, are, Silenus on an ass; a head of Ceres; next to Acteon attacked by dogs; and fourth-ly, a head of Pomona.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

The Margaret Professor of Divinity (Dr. Faussett) will begin a course of lectures on Tuesday, Nov. 21, at 1 o'clock. The lectures are intended for those who have passed their examination for the degree of B.A.; and persons desirous of attending are requested to call on Dr. Faussett on Monday, the 26th, between the hours of 11 and 1.

The Regius Professor of Modern History (H. H. Vaughan, Esq., M.A.) will give a public lecture on the Anglo-Saxon period of English history, every Wednesday during Term, at two o'clock, in the Taylor Institution.

There will be an election at Exeter College to a scholarship of Bible Clerk, on Friday, Nov. 30. Persons who are desirous of offering themselves as candidates for it are requested to make their applications in person, or by letter, addressed to the rector, as soon as possible, and accompanied with testimonials. No application will be received after Friday, the 23d.

The Rev. H. de Sausmarez, Fellow and Tutor of Pembroke College, has been presented by the Master and Fellows of that society to the rectory of St. Aldate's, Oxford, value £131; population, 2791.

The Ashmolean Society held their second meeting for the present term on Monday evening, in the Museum: it was numerously attended. Dr. Daubeny took the chair, in the absence of the president. The secretary announced the receipt of several presents to the society, and having read the minutes of the last meeting, a paper was read by Mr Allen on the subject of the cholera. A discussion then arose respecting the disease, as to its contagious nature, in which several members took a part. It seemed to be the general opinion, that, although it might not be so contagious as to deter persons from attending the sick, it was prudent to use every precaution in the performance of this duty. The society then adjourned to the 26th inst.

The Margaret Professor of Divinity will begin a course of lectures on Tuesday, November 27, at twelve o'clock. These lectures are intended for those who have passed their examination for the degree of B.A., and persons desirous of attending them are requested to call on Dr. Faussett, on Monday, the 26th, between the hours of [illegible]

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, BIRMINGHAM.

—At a meeting of the department of [illegible] ture of the college, held on Tuesday last, at which the following [illegible] ers were present, namely, the Principal, the High Bailiff of Birmingham, the Rev. S. Ward, and the Rev. Dr. Kennedy, and Henry Kennedy, Esq., barrister-at-law, son of the Rev. R. Kennedy, was unanimously elected Professor of Law.

TESTIMONIAL.—It having been understood that the health of the Rev. Thomas MacGill, Curate of Clapham, required that he should abstain from his clerical duties, and have the advantage of a warmer climate during the ensuing winter, some members of the congregation of the parish church have presented to him, through Mr. Thornton, a purse containing several sovereigns, and a gold watch, bearing a suitable inscription.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL, WIMBORNE.—The ceremony of laying the corner stone of these new buildings was performed on Saturday last, by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Salisbury.

THE COMMISSION IN CATHEDRALS.—The subjoined is, we believe, a correct list of the cathedrals in which the holy communion is administered every week: Canterbury, York, St. Paul's, Chichester, Durham, Winchester, [illegible] Salisbury, Lichfield, Worcester, Manchester, and the Royal Abbey of Westminster.

PREFERMENTS.—The Rev. William Cureton, of the British Museum, to the canonry of Westminster. Rev. G. T. Whitley, Vice-Master of University College, Durham, to an honorary canonry in that Cathedral. Rev. Edward Pickard, to the vicarage of Warmouth with Eppleton, annexed to Hetton. The Rev. John Kingdon, to the rectory of Michaelstow, Cornwall. Rev. Hugh Owen Wilson, to the rectory of Church Stretton, Salop. Rev. Richard Wm. Barnes, to the vicarage of Rotherham, Yorkshire. Rev. Gustavus Robertson, perpetual curate of Todmorden, Lancashire, Provincial Grand Chaplain, to be Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master of Freemasonry for the western division of the county of Lancashire. Rev. — Birch, rector of Ashwicke, near Bisch[illegible], to be Provincial Grand Chaplain of Lancashire, over the Rev. Gilmour Robinson. Rev. R. B. Blunt, vicar of Halesowen, to be Archdeacon of Worcester: patron, Bishop of Worcester.

VACANCY.—Luston R., Suffolk, dio. Ely, with Takenham Parva R. and Barsham R annexed; value, £545, with residence; patron, Duke of Grafton. Perpetual curacy, Thorpe, county and archdio. York; value £49, with residence; patron, trustees: Rev. R. S. Cark, proprietor. Mastership of Royal Naval School, New-cross, Deptford. Grammar and Second Classical Mas[illegible] Lincolnshire, Oxford.

SUGGESTION OF THE WIND THE CAUSE OF CHOLERA.—If epidemics be [illegible] causes, and [illegible] local circumstances, it is to the successful cultivation of medical meteorology that we can hope to contend with them with success. Those causes of sickness which depend upon temperature, humidity, pressure or movement of the air admit of mean terms. The daily mean of temperature of the air in July was 129 miles; from August 1st to 11th, was 59 miles; from August 12th to 16th, was 170 miles; and from August 17th to the end of the quarter, was about 80 miles. The average daily horizontal movement of the air during the quarter is about 120 miles. Therefore, during the months of August and September, the movement of the air was about one-half the usual amount. —Gutcher's Remarks on the Weather.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS FOR THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The past week would have exceeded the preceding one in dulness and absence of business, but for the trifling animation attendant on the settlement of the Account. Consols, on Monday, maintained the rise of the previous Saturday, quoting 93¾; the French Fives quoting better from Paris. On Tuesday, however, as the Account progressed, less firmness succeeded, and a decline of ¼ was registered; rallying, however, to the former quotation just previously to the close of business. Wednesday was a dull day; although the rise in price has been 1⅛ per cent. during the Account there appeared to be little disposition in its settlement. From the advance through the day it appears to have been rather stock, Consols opening 93¾ to ⅞ for Money, and 93¾ to ⅞ for the Account, her setting. Thursday being the day appointed for a General Thanksgiving, the Stock Exchange and all the public offices were closed. When the last prices were negotiated, they were for Bank stock, 210 ex dividend, 92¼ Consols, 93¼ to ⅜, and 93⅜ buyers for Account; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 99⅜ Long Annuities, 8⅞; India Bonds, 80- to 83s pm.; Exchequer Bills, 17s.

The Foreign Market has been tranquil during the week; the Mexican Five has been generally firmer, and of small amount. On Tuesday bargains in only three descriptions of stock were registered. The closing quotations it will be observed, show little variation from the prices of last week, being—Chilian, 99; Mexican, 5 per Cents, 30¾; Portuguese, 33½; Russian, 105⅜; 108; Spanish Five per Cents, 16¾; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 53¾.

The Share Market has been rather flatter during the past week, although the alteration in prices has not been material. The closing quotations are, for Bristol and Exeter, 54, Ditto, Thirds, 1⅝; Caledonian, 11¼; Ditto, £10 Pref. Reg., 7⅞; East Anglian (£25, L. and E. and L. and D.), 1⅞; Eastern Counties, 5⅛; Ditto, Extension, 2⅝; Ditto, Purchase, 2⅝; pm.; Great Northern, 6½; Ditto ditto, Half, A, Deferred, 2½; Great North of England, 21½; Great Western, 58½ Ditto, Quarter Shares, 1⅛; Ditto, New, £17, 6s.; Lancashire & Yorkshire, New, Guaranteed Six per Cents, 11½; Ditto, Rolling Stock, 10½; London and Brad[illegible], 97½; London and Blackwall, 3½; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 74½; Ditto, Guaranteed Five per Cent., late Croydon Thirds, 10½; London and North-Western, 118; Ditto, New Quarter Shares, 1⅜; London and South-Western, 39½; Midland, 47¼; Ditto, £50 Shares, 8; Ditto Consolidated Bristol and Birmingham, 5 per Cent., 120; Midland Great Western (Ireland), 22½; Norfolk, Guaranteed 5 per Cent., 114; North Staffordshire, 11; Ditto, Preferential, 11; North Staffordshire, 8½; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 11; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, Class B., 2½; South-Eastern, 13½; Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth, 2⅝; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 17½; York and North Midland, 19½; Ditto, Preference, 6; Boulogne and Amiens, 5½; East Indian, 3½; Namur and Liege, 6; Northern of France, 2½ dis; Paris and Orleans, 29; Paris and Strasbourg, 6½; Rouen and Havre, 9½; Sambre and Meuse, 1⅛.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON.—The Foreign Markets were very buoyant yesterday. Consols opening at 93⅜ ⅞, and firmly maintaining the rise, closing at 93⅝ for money and time. In the Foreign house Mexican and Portuguese quoted a fractional improvement, while all generally being firm. Shares were rather firmer, but at no material advance.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—The quantity of English wheat received up to our market this week somewhat has amounted to only 1850 quarters, a large portion of which is now disposed of in the hands of the dealers. Any samples of fine dry qualities are in good request, and so limited was the amount of business transacted that Monday's prices were nominally sustained. Only 2260 quarters of foreign wheat have come to hand since Saturday. The transactions in this article have been unusually limited, and the few sales effected by importers were firm, and full currencies were obtained in every instance. We were very moderately supplied with both English and foreign barley. Grinding sorts sold freely, all other kinds sparingly, at last week's quotations. The sale for malt was in a very inactive state and, in many instances, we were obliged to submit to lower rates. The large supply of oats still arrived from purchasing. Good round oats sold steadily, at fully late rates. Damp parcels were a dull inquiry. Beans, peas, and flour commanded very little attention. The best from was firm and prices were well supported.

ARRIVALS.—English—Wheat, 1850; barley, 31-0; malt, 1170; oats, 2070; flour, 2770 sacks. Foreign—Wheat, 2260; barley, 2360; oats, 6750 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 41s to 45s; ditto, white, 42s to 5-s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 41s to 45s; ditto, white, 42s to 47s; rye, 32s to 34s; grinding barley, 23s to 25s; distilling ditto, 26s to 28s; malting ditto, 28s to 32s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 57s to 58s; brown ditto, 46s to 50s; Scotch malt, 47s to 50s; feeding oats, 16s to 18s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 18s to 18s; potato ditto, 18s to 20s; Youghal and Cork, black, 15s to 17s; ditto, white, 17s to 18s; Dublin and Belfast, 17s to 19s; ditto, old, 21s to 23s; grey peas, 28s to 29s; maple, 29s to 30s; white, 28s to 30s; boilers, 30s to 33s per quarter. Town-made flour, 35s to 40s; Suffolk and Norfolk, 30s to 33s, per 280 lbs.

Foreign.—Dantzig red wheat, —4 to —5; white, —3 to —3; barley, 5 to —5; oats, —0 to —0; beans, —0 to —0; peas, —0 to —0, per quarter. Flour, Amer-an, 21s to 24s per barrel; Baltic, —0 to 25s per barrel.

The Seed Market [illegible] has been steadily, at a slight advance in the quotations. In all other articles exceedingly little doing.

Linseed, English, sowing, 54s to 56s; Baltic, crushing, 38s to 44s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 42s to 46s; persian, 46s to 48s per quarter. Rapeseed, 19s to 20s per last. Canary, brown, 38s to 39s; white ditto, 40s to 42s 6d; tares, 4s 6d to 4s 9d per bushel. English, [illegible] £33 to £35 per ton. Hempseed, 34s to 36s per quarter. Linseed cakes, English, £6 0s to £6 5s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, £4 5s to £4 10s per ton; canary, —0 to —0 per quarter. English cakes, —0 to —0; Foreign, —0 to —0; white, —0 to —0; extra, up to —0. Foreign, red, —0 to —0; extra, —0 to —0; white, —0 to —0; extra, —0. Spanish.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 6½d to 7d; of household ditto, 5d to 6d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 40s 7d; barley, 28s 6d; oats, 16s 11d; rye, 32s 6d; beans, 34s 3d; peas, 34s 3d.

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 41s 5d; barley, 28s 3d; oats, 17s 2d; rye, 33s 10d; beans, 34s 3d; peas, 34s 3d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 1s 6d; barley, 1s 0d; oats, 1s 0d; rye, 1s 0d; beans, 1s 0d; peas, 1s 0d.

TEA.—1306 packages of Assam will be offered at public sale on Tuesday next. Green teas are in moderate request. Black qualities are dull, and rather lower to purchase.

SUGAR.—The West India market has continued in a very inactive state, and previous rates without a fluctuation supported. Bengal, Mauritius, and foreign sorts are dull, and rather lower to purchase. Refined goods dull. Brown lumps, 47s, and fair, 47s 6d to 48s per cwt.

COFFEE.—In the early part of the week there was more inquiry for ordinary sorts, at 48s to 47s per cwt; but the demand has since slackened. Most other kinds of coffee are 1s to 2s lower.

RICE.—An unusually small amount of business has been transacted in rice this week. Good bold white Bengal is quoted 11s per cwt.

Spirits.—Our market is firm, at full rates of currency

Provisions.—The last advices per foreign barter are in steady demand, at full prices but all other kinds move off slowly, at drooping currencies. Fine Friesland, 88s to 92s; fine Kinsale, and Hollland, 86s to 90s, and other sorts, 44s to 86s per cwt. Upwards of 40,000 casks of Irish butter have come to hand since our previous report, and the demand for best sorts, as it is pretty generally understood that many of the makers have shipped rather too much. Carlow, 98s; Sligo, 94s to 94s; Limerick, 92s to 94s; Cork, 90s to 92s; Waterford, 88s to 92s per cwt. Some parcels have changed hands for shipment. So little business is doing in English butter that prices are almost nominal. Fine weekly firkins, 90s to 96s; dale and middling, 60s to 70s, fine Devon, 84s to 84s per cwt; fresh 8s to 12s per dozen lbs. Irish bacon is very dull, and prices are 4s to 6s lower. Fine mild Wiltshire, 60s to 64s; middling, 50s to 52s; and heavy, 48s to 50s per cwt. In other kinds of provisions very little is doing. Tallow—P C on the spot is tolerably firm, at 37s to 37s 3d; and for forward delivery, 36s. per cwt. Town-melted, 37s per cwt; soft, rough fat, 2s 1d per 8lb.

Oils.—Linseed oil has declined £1 per ton. In the value of other oils, we have no change to report.

Hay and Straw.—Meadow hay, £2 8s to £3 10s; clover ditto, £3 0s to £4 10s; and straw, £1 5s to £1 19s per load.

Spirits.—The market for rum is tolerably firm, at fully last week's prices. Old Brandy is dull, and drooping. Geneva and fine gin are in good request, at full prices. Other sorts dull.

Coals (Friday).—Caw's Hartley, 14s 6d; West Hartley, 14s 6d; Wylam, 15s 6d; Hotspur, 15s 3d; Wharncliffe, 15s; and Bell, 15s 6d to 17s per ton

Hops (Friday).—Our markets is very scantily supplied with all good and fine new hops, hence the demand for them is steady, at full prices. The sale for yearlings is dull at previous rates in a very sluggish state, at least at which quotations.

Kent and East Sussex.—Pockets, £5 10s to £7 7s. New Weald of Kent ditto, £6 5s to £8 8s. New Sussex ditto, —— to —— Farnhams, £12 0s to £3 3s, Yearling Kents, £2 2s to £3 3s. Yearling Sussex, £1 11s to £2 10s. Old ditto, £2 2s to £3 3s.

Smithfield (Friday).—The supply surveyed yesterday to London by the various railway companies, the arrivals into the market have been to-day was chiefly composed of [illegible] which [illegible] was very inferior. The few prime breeds offering comprised [illegible] all prices, were from 3s 6d to 4s 0d per 8 lbs. The value of all other [illegible] supported, with a good consumptive demand. With a scarcely [illegible] scanty supplied. The inquiry for that description of stock was somewhat brisk, owing to the favourable change in the weather, at full quotations, as supported in every instance. Very few calves were on show. The veal trade was firm, at an advance in the quotations of 2d per 8 lbs. There was a fair supply of pigs, at fully previous currencies. Milch cows were dull, at from £14 15s to £18 5s each, including their small calf

Prices this day per 8 lbs to sink the offal—Inferior beef, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; second quality ditto, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; prime large ones, 3s 0d to 3s 2d; prime [illegible] 3s 4d to 3s 6d; coarse and inferior sheep, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; second quality ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; prime ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; large lambs, 4s 0d to 4s 4d; [illegible] 3s 10d to 4s 0d; coarse and inferior calves, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; second quality ditto, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; prime ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; small pigs, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; large ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 6d.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—These markets were fairly supplied with each kind of meat, yet the demand was rather slow, at very full prices.

Per 8lb by the carcase:—Inferior beef, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; middling ditto, 2s 8d to 2s 10d; prime large ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 2d; small ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; large pork, 3s 0d to 3s 2d; inferior mutton, 2s 8d to 2s 10d; middling ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 2d; prime ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 10d; veal, 3s 4d to 3s 10d; small pork, 3s 10d to 4s 4d

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, NOV. 13.

DOWNING-STREET, NOV. 13.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Henry John Glanville, Esq., to be Chief Justice for the Island of St Christopher

Her Majesty has also been pleased to appoint Henry Jules Woodcock, Esq., to be Chief Justice for the Island of Montserrat.

Her Majesty has been further pleased to appoint Archibald Paull Burt, Esq., to be Her Majesty's Attorney-General for the Island of St. Kitts.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 12.

The following promotions have been made since dated 8th inst, consequent on the death of Admiral of the Fleet Sir James Hawkins Whitshed, G.C.B.

Admiral of the Red, Sir Thomas Byam Martin, G.C.B., to be Admiral of the Fleet

Admiral of the White, Sir Philip Durham, K.C.B., to be Admiral of the Red Admiral of the Blue, Hon. Sir Thomas Harbin Capel, K.C.B. to be Admiral of the White.

Vice-Admiral of the Red, Sir Edward Codrington, G.C.B., to be Admiral of the Blue.

Vice-Admiral of the White, Sir Charles John William Paget, to be Vice-Admiral of the Red.

Vice-Admiral of the Blue, Hon. Sir George Cockburn, G.C.B., to be Vice-Admiral of the White.

Rear-Admiral of the Red, Sir Thomas Fellowes, K.C.B., to be Vice-Admiral of the Blue.

Rear-Admiral of the White, Sir Edward Thomas Troubridge, Bart, C.B., to be Rear-Admiral of the Red.

Rear-Admiral Hon. Sir Edward Harvey, to be Rear-Admiral of the White

The undermentioned Officers have been also promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral, on the terms proposed in the London Gazette of the 1st September, 1846, without increase to his half-pay, viz.—

Retired Captain Patrick Campbell Campbell, C.B.

Captain Thomas Cochrane, C.B.

Captain Thomas Graham Cochrane.

Captain Thomas Graham Cochrane.

Captain Thomas Graham Cochrane

NEW BOOKS, &c,

THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE
In 18mo., at 1/20 Engravings, 3s 6d cloth,
A DICTIONARY of the HOLY BIBLE, for the Use of Young Persons containing an Account of Eastern Customs, &c.
By Rev. JOSEPH ANDLE, LL.D
JOHN J. GRIFFIN and Co., London; and R. GRIFFIN and Co., Glasgow.

GREAT EXHIBITION OF INDUSTRY OF ALL NATIONS.
A REPORT on the ELEVENTH FRENCH EXHIBITION of the PRODUCTS of INDUSTRY. By MATTHEW DIGBY WYATT, Architect. Prepared by order of the Commissioners for the Exhibition, and Council of the Society of Arts.
London: 4, Old Bond-street; Chapman and Hall, 186, Strand; Bogue, 86, Fleet-street.

THE HERALDIC REGISTER, edited by J. BERNARD BURKE, Esq., author of "The Peerage," and appended to each month in the ST. JAMES'S MAGAZINE, price 2s 6d, contains a perfect Record of Arms, in continuation of Guillim, Edmondson, Nisbet, &c., never before published. Communications, &c., may be addressed to the Editor, at the office of the Magazine, 13, Great Marlborough-street, where all communications for insertion are requested.

TWENTIETH EDITION of CLARKE'S CATECHISM of the RUDIMENTS of MUSIC, the favourite place with the author; 107 pages, 18mo., price only 1s, postage-free, 1s 8d. London: D. CLARKE and CO., New Bond-street, Publishers to the Queen; and of all Music-sellers and Booksellers.

CHARLES the SECOND. -Mr. MACFARREN'S New Opera at the Princess' Theatre. The favourite places are the Ballad, "Oh, that we young hearts" sung by Miss Fyne in act 2, and the ballad, "My heart is thus home," sung by Mr. Harrison. CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 67, Cornhill-street.

MENDELSSOHN'S "Midsummer Night's Dream," Overture, Scherzo, Nocturne, and Wedding March, the whole arranged for the PIANOFORTE, 4s. 1d. By CHARLES CZERNY. Also, new Editions of Bonnaudani, Lucia, Les Huguenots, La Figlia, Norma, and 30 others, price 2s. Post-free for 30 stamps, or three for 78 stamps.—Pianists Offices, 18A, Argyll-street, Regent-street (one door from Oxford-street), and 244, Tottenham-court-road.

LAUGH WHILE YOU CAN.—New Song, by HENRY FARE. 2s 6d. "Better than champagne for raising the spirits of a melancholy party."—Sunday Times. "A fine, manly philosophy of his songs is undeniable, and his music excellent." See criticism in the Musical World, page 766, Nov. 10. 1849. "Charm and State Gazette," October 26th. LIBRARY, 1, Edwardes-terrace, Kensington. Post-free for 30 stamps.

Second Thousand, small 8vo, cloth gilt (an elegant Present), with engraved Frontispiece and Title-page, price 4s 6d, ELLEN SEYMOUR; or, the Child and the FLOWER. By Mrs. SAVILE SHEPHERD.
"An exceedingly interesting and well-written tale."—Evangelical Christendom. "Need be no recommendation to ensure for it a cordial welcome." Protestant World.—"A well-written tale."—Christian Lady's Magazine.—"Ellen Seymour, or the Child and the Flower," will, doubtless, find numerous readers, nor need one among them lay down the volume without a sigh."—Christian Lover and Conservator. "Another excellent work of the kind."—Dublin Evangelical Witness and Church Advocate.—"Short Hints and Comments. London: Nisbet and Co. Dublin: J. Robertson. Edinburgh: J. Johnstone.

INTERESTING NEW BIOGRAPHICAL WORK.
Just ready, 2 vols. post 8vo., 21s cloth,
LIVES of the PRINCESSES of ENGLAND, From the NORMAN CONQUEST.
By MARY ANNE EVERETT GREEN,
Editress of "Letters of Royal and Illustrious Ladies." "As in preparation, a FREATISE on a New and Successful METHOD of PERMANENTLY CURING for the DEAF and DUMB.
Dr. CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

WIMBORNE, DORSET.
A LADY, having a larger house than she requires for her own use, is desirous of RECEIVING a WIDOW LADY with two or three more. The situation holds out great opportunities for the education of children, and literary occupation, there is an excellent old-fashioned school, which has lately been remodelled and placed under the superintendence of a lady of high attainments, beauty is pleasant, and the neighbourhood picturesque and healthy. Terms and references may be known (applying by letter, pre-paid), to A. B. C., Box's Library, Wimborne, Dorset.

REMITTANCES to INDIA.—The undersigned London Agent of the Agra and United Service Bank is prepared to grant Bills on the Head Office and branches of the Bank at Agra, Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay.—E. B. HENDERSON, Otterburn Hall, Old Jewry, City, London.—* * * Bills and drafts on Bombay approved drafts drawn against funds or upon parties in India.

BEARD'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS, Are taken daily at Mr. RICHARD BEARD'S ESTABLISHMENTS, 85, KING'S-ROAD, BRIGHTON; 011, 34, PARLIAMENT STREET; and the ROYAL ADELAIDE GALLERY, REGENT-STREET.
A visit to the Royal Adelaide Gallery, at 1 Regent-street, will amply repay the curiosity of the visitor.

THE SUN STOVE is now ready, and may be seen at 1, JOHN'S-PLACE, PENTONVILLE, and BRANCH Opening to the Monument, 48, King William-street, London-bridge.

PALE INDIA ALE and STOUT, 4s. per dozen. Messrs. ALLSOPP and SONS' pale and STOUT are ordered, by a contrast with an extensive Brewery, to supply fine ale and stout, at the above prices (or grocers' allowance). Delivered free within three miles of any of the Country Stations. Terms—Cash; or if a country correspondent is arranged to address one or to, Cornwall-terrace, City.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS, 30s. the Half-dozen.—"The Shirts are of beautiful make and material, and may establish a reputation."—Morning Post. "The most perfect fit we have ever worn."—Morning Chronicle, October 7th, 1849. Patterns, with Directions for Self Measurement, sent free for a stamp. Five of the new Coloured Shirtings forwarded to select from, for 6 stamps of the Post Office Stamps.—RICHARD FORD 185, Strand (corner of Bedford-street).

SIX VERY SUPERIOR SHIRTS for 26s., from the best and largest stock in London.—A choice of 200 patterns to select from, of fine Linen, Cambric, Oxford, made to measure, 29s. Satisfaction (as usual) guaranteed, or the money returned. Sent to any part of the kingdom, carriage free, on receipt of post free.—HODGES and Co., Shirt-makers and inventors of the Self-measure, 10, St. Martin's-le-Grand (corner of New-street). Established 60 years.

THE CORAZZA SHIRT.—CAPPER and WATERS having given great attention to perfecting this shirt, can recommend it as a most perfect combination of comfort, elegance, and durability, and they have no hesitation in stating that they are prepared to make it to any measure, and to any description of pattern or fabric, at the following prices for each, to meet the present urgent demand for economy. Two dozen sent on receipt of Post-office order.

A NOVELTY for the approaching Season is in preparation, to which a distinguishing name has not yet been fixed, but will be Invented. Messrs. NICOLL have commenced the manufacture of the most useful, warm, comfortable, and graceful articles of Gentlemanly Attire every produced. Specimens can be seen at 114, 116, and 120, REGENT-STREET, and 22, Cornhill; also the TREBLE DEPARTMENT, 74, Fleet-street.

THE NICOLL PALETOT (Registered), 6 and 7 Victoria, c. 65) WARROOMS, 114, 116, 120, REGENT-STREET, and 22, CORNHILL.—Also for Nicoll's Morning Coat, in cut-all universe, request, for the Country, Riding or Walking Dress, for shooting Jackets, adapted for the season. Many have announced me as out of the world PALETOT, and 35 sets. NICOLL are the sole patentees of the newspaper tax material.

MESSRS. NICOLL'S Wholesale and Country Manufacturing Departments for the London Houses are in the Shipping and Woollen Trades are in CHANGE-ALLEY, CORNHILL, and 20, REGENT-STREET.

243, REGENT-STREET.
Ladies residing in the Country are most respectfully informed that KING and COMPANY will forward PATTERNS of all the new Silks, Satins, Velvets, French Merinoes, Irish Linens, Shetlings, and every article connected with the general Drapery Trade, to any part of the United Kingdom or the Colonies, Postage Free, on application by letter addressed to
KING and COMPANY,
243, Regent-street,
London.
N.B. All Parcels exceeding the value of £5 will be forwarded carriage free.
Cash Payments can be made by Post-office Orders payable to WILLIAM KING.
KING and CO believe that the one undeviating Principle of selling only the best Materials, at the lowest possible Prices, will obtain for them the unlimited confidence of all their Patrons.

KING and COMPANY beg to announce that they are now selling
FINE FRENCH MERINOES, at 3s 6d the full dress.
The Finest Qualities at 4s 11d the full dress.
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

THE NEW BROCHE TWEEDS, at 1s 6d the full dress.
The New Glace Ballons a, at 1/s 6d the full dress.
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

GLACE, STRIPED, and CHECKED SILKS, at 18s 6d the full dress.
The Rich Glace Silks, at 25s the full dress.
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

THE NEW GLACE, GROS D'ECOSSE, Glace Armures, and Grenadine Silks, at £1 15s the full dress, are now sold at £4.
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

BLACK GLACE SILKS, at 18s 6d the full Dress
The Richest Qualities at £1 7s 6d.
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

BLACK WATERED SILKS, at 25s the full Dress.
The Richest Qualities, at 42s.
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO 243, Regent street

BLACK FRENCH SATINS, at 25s the full Dress.
The Riches Qualities, at 3 Guineas.
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and Co., 243, Regent-street.

BLACK GROS D'ECOSSE, Gros Royals, and Watered Silks, at 25s the full Dress.
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO, 243, Regent-street.

BALL and EVENING DRESSES, White and Coloured Swiss Muslins at 6d per yard; Embroidered Muslins, at 9d per yard;
Embroidered Net skirts, at 9s 6d each.
Address, KING and COMPANY, 243, Regent-street.

WHITE, PINK, and SKY SATINS, at 25s the full dress.
Patterns sent for inspection Postage free.
Address, KING and COMPANY, 243, Regent-street.

WHITE WATERED SILKS, at 25s the full Dress.
The Richest White, Pink, and Watered Silks, at 42s the full dress.
Patterns sent Postage free. Address, KING and Co., 243, Regent-street.

WHITE, PINK, and SKY GLACE SILKS, 2 wide, at 25s the full Dress.
Patterns sent Postage free to any part of the Kingdom.
Address, KING and COMPANY, 243, Regent street.

EXTRAORDINARY CHEAP VALENCIENNES and BLACK LACE.
Edgings, from ... to ... 6d per yard.
Wide Laces, from ... to ... 1s 6d per yard.
Patterns sent Postage free to any part of the Kingdom.
Address, KING and COMPANY, 243, Regent-street.

BONNETS.—PARISIAN MILLINERY.—To Cash Purchasers, wishing to avoid the charges of Private Modistes.—Comprising the following Elegant Articles, Ready for Sale: Fountain all colours, Cap, &c., complete, One Guinea each. Rich French Silk Bonnets, Ribbon Trimmed, 10s 6d each. Mourning Caps of Long-pointed Fashion, 10s 6d; 12s 6d; 15s 6d; 18s 6d; Lappet Caps, Double Crape Borders, 10s 6d each. Full Dress Caps, Plaited Frills, 10s 6d each. Dustable Whole Straws, 2s 6d each. Ladies' Riding Hats, 10s 6d each. Gentlemen becoming Bonnets cannot be procured at any price, as the largest Stock in London to select from. Country orders, with pattern Bonnets, forwarded by return of post, at CRANBOURN HOUSE No 39, Cranbourn street, Leicester-square. Proprietors, R. WOOKEY and CO

EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS in real BRILLIANT JEWELLERY, at BECH and BERRALL'S, 63 and 64, Royal Exchange.
Set of Ear-drops and all colours, at 2s 6d per pair.
£50 Gifts, very fine, at 5s 6d.
Set of Ear-drops and all colours, at 2s 6d per pair.
£50 Gifts, very fine, at 5s 6d.
Set of Ear-drops and all colours, at 2s 6d per pair. Postage Free
Address, BECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Royal Exchange.

ELEGANT and USEFUL SILKS, at One-Eighth less than usual prices.
BECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, bagswars-road, are now selling the newest striped Checked, Reversible and Glace Silks at 1s 6d, 2s, 2s 6d, 3s, 3s 6d, 4s, 4s 6d, 5s, 5s 6d, 6s, 6s 6d, 7s, 7s 6d, 8s, 8s 6d, 9s, 9s 6d, 10s, 10s 6d, 11s, 11s 6d, 12s, 12s 6d, 13s, 13s 6d, 14s,

MRS. FRANCES ELIZABETH BENTINCK LAYING THE FOUNDATION-STONE OF THE CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY, AT WESTMINSTER.

(Continued from page 334.)

Bishop of London read the prayers and psalms; the Rev. A. Borradaile, the Holy Scriptures; and the children from the school in Old Pye-street sang the Old Hundredth.

After the ceremony, the procession re-formed; and, headed by the Bishop, directed its course towards Besborough-gardens, to the site of the second new church, which is as nearly as possible opposite Vauxhall-bridge. This church will be erected at the sole expense of Archdeacon Bentinck, and the foundation-stone was laid, in the presence of a vast body of spectators, by Mrs. Bentinck, assisted by Lord R. Grosvenor.

The ceremony and prayers were very nearly those which had been adopted in the former instance; and as Mrs. Bentinck was announced to lay the first stone, the Lord Bishop of London addressed the assembly, observing that he believed this to be a single instance in which, in a parish, on the same day, the foundation-stones of two Houses of God were laid. This was a single instance, he must say again, in which in one parish there were two houses dedicated to God, either built or building by the munificence of individuals. His Lordship then alluded to the rapid increase of the population of the district, and to its spiritual destitution, and in meeting this deficiency, to the exertions of the venerable body of the ministers of the Most High, and the efforts of the Westminster Spiritual Aid Fund Society, as well as to the gentlemen who had given the site.

The Rev. Mr. Borradaile read the inscription on the stone, in Latin, of which the following is a translation: -

> The first stone of this Church, intended to be erected at the sole expense of the Rev W H E. Bentinck, M.A., Archdeacon and Prebendary of Westminster, was laid on the 8th November, 1849 by Mrs. Frances Elizabeth Bentinck; C. J. Blomfield, D.D., being at the time Bishop of the diocese; the Rev. John Jennings, M.A., Rector of St. John's, and the Rev. A. Borradaile, M.A., Perpetual Curate of the district; Mr. John L. Pearson being architect, and Messrs. Grover Smith and Jacob Appleford the builders, and to be dedicated to the Holy and Undivided Trinity.

Mrs. Bentinck then advanced and proceeded to lay the stone, &c., in the usual form, at the same time repeating the words prescribed by the formula for the day:—

> In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, we lay this foundation-stone of this church, now building to the honour and glory of the Holy and Undivided Trinity, to be known as the Church of the Holy Trinity, Westminster, for ever. Amen.

The children and persons assembled then sang the Hundredth Psalm.

The elegant trowel with which Mrs. Bentinck laid the mortar on the stone was then presented to her; and, on the suggestion of Lord Robert Grosvenor, five hearty cheers were given for the lady.

In the course of the afternoon, a plentiful dinner was given to the children of the parochial schools, in the Horseferry-road Free School.

THE NEW DEAN OF ST. PAUL'S.

THE appointment of Mr. Milman, the distinguished poet, to the Deanery of St. Paul's, vacant by the death of the Bishop of Llandaff, has given great satisfaction to others than the usual admirers of the bestowal of patronage by the present administration. It is altogether a well-earned recognition of literary talent, and is understood to have been conferred principally at the instance of the Marquis of Lansdowne. Mr. Milman's career, as a poet and historical writer, extends over upwards of thirty years; and the leading incidents of this period will, doubtless, be interesting to our readers.

The Very Reverend Henry Hart Milman is a native of London, and was born February 10, 1791. He is the youngest son of Sir Francis Milman, who, having attained high eminence in the medical profession, was appointed physician to King George III., and was created a Baronet in 1800. Sir Francis was a Fellow of the Royal Society, and President of the College of Physicians in 1780. He married Frances, the only child of William Hart, Esq., of Stapleton, in Gloucestershire, by whom he has left three sons, Sir William George Milman, the present Baronet, of Levaton; Major-General F. Miles Milman; and, thirdly, the subject of the present memoir.

Mr. Milman received his early education at the well-known academy of Dr. Charles Burney, at Greenwich; thence he removed to Eton, where he remained about nine years. In the year 1810 he went to Oxford, and entered at Brazenose College. At the University he obtained the greatest number of prizes ever remembered to have fallen to the lot of one individual. One of these was for English verse, one for Latin verse, and a third and fourth for English and Latin essays; while he was distinguished for the first honours in the examinations.

In 1815 Mr. Milman became a Fellow of Brazennose College. His scholastic pre-eminence did not remain long unrecognised. In 1817 Mr. Milman entered into holy orders; and in the same year was conferred upon him the vicarage of St. Mary's, Reading, in the patronage of St. John's College, Oxford. In 1821 he was elected Professor of Poetry in the University—an office held for five years, but the Professor is customarily re-elected for the same term. In 1824 Mr. Milman married Mary Anne, the youngest daughter of Lieutenant-General Cockall, and has issue four sons.

Mr Milman first appeared as an author in 1817, when was published his play of "Fazio"—written, we believe, before the author entered into orders. It is founded on a story quoted in the Annual Register for 1795, from the "Varieties of Literature," and is an attempt at reviving our old national drama, with greater simplicity of plot. The poetry is of high order, and abounds in passages of chastened beauty; yet, though written with some view to the stage, it lacked dramatic spirit to ensure it great popularity as an acting play. It was represented at Bath and in London, but entirely without the author's concurrence. At Covent-garden Theatre it was received with considerable favour, though principally by means of the beautiful pathos of Miss O'Neill, in the heroine. Nevertheless, the interest of the plot induces managers occasionally to revive the representation of "Fazio" at more than one of our metropolitan minor theatres, of late years remarkable for their able performance of the regular drama.

In the spring of 1818 appeared Mr. Milman's next work, "Samor, Lord of the Bright City," an heroic poem, in twelve books; celebrating the defeat and expulsion of the Saxon invaders from this country, with the re-establishment of the British monarchy—results which, unfortunately, run counter to the truth of history. The hero is a Briton chief, the Lord of Gloucester, or the Bright City: the story of Vortigern and Rowena is one of the leading incidents; and Hengist and Horsa, and Caswallon, the mountain chief, and his lovely daughter, are prominent characters. Of the poem an able analysis appeared in the Quarterly Review, in which, after much censure, the writer allows "There is scarcely a page of the book (of 374 pages) which does not testify that the author is a poet of no ordinary powers; every one exhibits some beautiful expression, some pathetic turn, some original thought, or some striking image."

The introduction of the hero of the poem is nobly wrought. "Nothing," says the Reviewer, "can be more happy in conception and execution—the language and metre have a solemn and placid dignity, without effort, involution, or glitter—the ideas are correspondent, and the precise effect is produced which was intended, of impressing us from the first moment with a lofty idea of Samor:"—

> As 'mid the fabled Libyan bridal stood
> Perseus in stern tranquillity of wrath,
> Half-storm, he fix'd on his ample plumes,
> Outwatching, while the bright face on his shield
> Look'd into stone the raging fray: so rose,
> But with no magic arms, wearing alone
> The appalling and control of his firm look,
> The solemn indignation of his brow,
> The Briton Samor; at his rising awe
> Went forth, and all the riotous hall was mute;
> But like unruffled summer waters flow'd
> His speech, and courtly reverence smoothed its tone.

In 1820 appeared Mr. Milman's "Fall of Jerusalem," a dramatic poem, taking Josephus for the groundwork, though the events of a considerable time are compressed into a period of about thirty-six hours. Its great feature is a happy

THE VERY REVEREND HENRY HART MILMAN, DEAN OF ST. PAUL'S.

substitution of the fulfilment of prophecy for the ancient government of destiny. The characters are nobly and powerfully conceived; and to show how ably the poet has availed himself of his rich materials, we may quote his description of the Temple, which is almost literally in the words of the Jewish historian:—

> It stands before us
> A mount of snow, fretted with golden pinnacles.
> The very sun, as though he worshipp'd there,
> Lingers upon the gilded cedar roofs,
> And draws the long and branching portticoes,
> On every flowery sculptured capital
> Glitters the homage of his parting beams.

This work was followed by the author's dramatic poems of "Anne Boleyn," the "Martyr of Antioch," and "Belshazzar," published at comparatively short intervals: in each of which the events of history are adhered to as far as compatible, and the remainder filled up by the poet's art, always subservient to the interests of religion and piety. A remarkable coincidence in the several circumstances of the "Martyr of Antioch" with Mr. Lockhart's Roman story of "Valerius," led to a charge of plagiarism, to which Mr. Milman replied by the assurance that the poem was written, and had been seen by friends, before the publication of the prose work.

To the above works of elevated poetry are to be added Mr. Milman's prize poems, and other minor pieces, including "Hymns for Church Service." One of the most popular of these pieces is "The Slave Ship," founded upon the case of the Zoster, mentioned by Lord Lansdowne, in which the slaves and crew were, with one exception, afflicted with a dreadful ophthalmia.

Mr. Milman's poems and dramas have been collected, and republished in three volumes. His prose works are "A History of Christian ty, from the Birth of Christ to the Abolition of Paganism in the Roman Empire," 3 vols.; and a "History of the Jews," 3 vols., written for Mr. Murray's "Family Library," and published in 1830. To these must be added the author's laboriously annotated edition of Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," in which are embodied the remarks of M. Guizot, with those of Wenck, a German commentator, and numerous original illustrations and corrections, published in twelve volumes, in 1838. In this labour Mr. Milman has not spared rebuke of the "solemn sneer" of Gibbon, and his defective account of the progress of the Christian faith. "Christianity alone," says the reverend editor, "receives no embellishment from the magic of Gibbon's language; his imagination is dead to its moral dignity; it is kept down by a general tone of jealous disparagement, or neutralised by a painfully elaborated exposition of its darker and degenerate periods. * * * The glories of Christianity, in short, touch on no chord in the heart of the writer; his imagination remains unkindled; his words, though they maintain their stately and measured march, have become cool, argumentative, and inanimate."

Mr. Milman, besides producing the above works, has been a frequent contributor to the Quarterly Review, the journal which, some thirty years ago, spared no pains to lay bare the defects of his early poems. These belong to a school of highly-wrought poetry, which still has its admirers, in spite of the utilitarian chill of much versification of the present day.

Our mention of Mr. Milman's clerical position left him in possession of the Vicarage of St. Mary's, Reading, whence he removed to that of St. Margaret's, Westminster, and subsequently received a prebendal stall in Westminster Abbey. Thence he has just been appointed to the Deanery of St. Paul's, the revenues of which are £2000 per annum; it having been lately arranged that the Deanery should not in future, as hitherto, be held by the Bishop of Llandaff. Mr. Milman's promotion has given rise to another appointment interesting to the lovers of literature—that of Mr. Careton, of the British Museum, the recent editor of the "Ignatian Epistles," to the vacant canonry of Westminster.

The reverend gentleman preached an eloquent sermon at St. Margaret's, Westminster, on the morning of Thanksgiving day.

FIRE AT ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH, CAMBRIDGE.—(SEE PAGE 334.)

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 400.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

WHAT ARE WE TO DO WITH OUR CONVICTS?

THE disaffection or rebellion of the Cape of Good Hope—we hardly know the more appropriate term by which to designate the conduct of the Colonists—ought to force the whole question of our Convict system upon the immediate and serious attention of the people of England. The question is one of the highest possible importance, not only as regards our possession of colonies at all—which is one of the least of the many considerations involved—but as regards our character as a civilised people, and our welfare as a nation.

With reference to the disaffection of the Cape of Good Hope, the question lies in a nutshell. The colonists deny the right of the Home Government to make their territory the dépôt of our superabundant or our unmanageable crime. They assert—and they seem prepared, if need be, to back the assertion by force of arms—that we shall not transport our convicts to their shores; that our plans for the punishment or the reformation of our criminals are matters for our consideration, not for theirs; and that, in no case, and under no pretext, will they undertake any trouble, accept any responsibility, or even submit to the pollution of having our convicts amongst them. The Neptune convict ship arrived in Simon's Bay, with two hundred and eighty-two convicts on board, on the 19th of September, sent thither by Lord Grey, apparently, because there were no means at his command for keeping them at home, and because he knew of no other place than the Cape of Good Hope to which he could transport them. The Colonists no sooner caught sight of what they considered to be a moral plague-ship, than they met in large numbers and with ominous unanimity, and despatched a missive to the Governor, in which they stated, in no courteous terms, that "the people had determined that the convicts must not, could not, and should not be landed or kept in any of the ports of the colony." The Governor, placed in a position of considerable delicacy and peril, and neither daring to goad the Colonists into rebellion, nor to side with them against the Home Government, took a middle course, and replied, that the convicts should not be landed until he had received special instructions from England, and that, in the meantime, the Neptune should ride at anchor in Simon's Bay, and receive supplies like any other ship. But the Governor's policy has only postponed the evil day. The position assumed by the Colonists is so decided, and the opposition is so strong and unanimous, that the Colonial Office has but two disagreeable alternatives before it: either it must yield the point to the people of the Cape, and send the convicts elsewhere; or it must use force to compel the rebellious colony to submission. Neither alternative is pleasant, and neither is in any way creditable to the British nation. To yield, is the better policy of the two; and that is the course upon which the Government seems to have determined before the news of the last occurrences reached England. To have made war upon the colony, to compel its unwilling obedience, would have been to enter upon a contest which, notwithstanding all the power and all the resources at our command, would never have ended until the colony threw off our yoke, to become independent, or the appanage of another state.

But it is high time that this great and grave question should be considered upon higher grounds than these. The question, in reality, is not whither we shall send, or how we shall dispose of, our convicts, but whether we shall have such a multitude of convicts at all—whether, in fact, we have not begun at the wrong end, by punishing crime, instead of striving to prevent it. "The gaols throughout the country," says a daily contemporary, "are choked with convicts. Bermuda is full to overflowing, and the cry is still 'they come!' The convict establishment at Portland is already spreading dismay throughout the neighbourhood, in consequence of the insubordinate character of its inmates; and wherever the convicts present themselves to a colony, the colony rejects them with affright." It is evident that the task the nation has to accomplish is to diminish the appalling amount of crime which at present paralyzes the exertions of men in authority, and drives them to their wits' end. The transportation of criminals, to say the best of it, even if our colonists would consent to be the uncomplaining and perpetual recipients of our moral filth, is a very unsatisfactory and expensive process. It cuts off the foul weeds by the head and exports them at a loss, but leaves the roots growing in their native soil to produce new crops. It demoralises the remotest regions of the earth, without in the slightest degree purifying the moral atmosphere at home.

So complex and imperfect is our civilization, that pauperism increases in the midst of plenty, and crime in the midst of a moral and religious people. The one evil feeds the other, and the virus of both runs through the veins of society, until the whole body politic becomes diseased. The recent painful disclosures made by the correspondents of the Morning Chronicle show that many hundreds and thousands of honest and industrious persons of both sexes in London, in the manufacturing and in the rural districts, can scarcely gain a bare subsistence or the rudest necessaries of life, even although they labour seven days in the week, as many of them unhappily do, and fourteen hours in the day. Both young and old men of the working classes, gaining at some trades no more than six shillings a week, have, if honest, no other prospect than pauperism when they are unable to labour. Not only hundreds and thousands, but hundreds of thousands of men in Ireland, unconvicted of crime, drag out a miserable existence upon public alms; and often, when they are not reduced to this sad extremity, they support themselves upon a wretched pittance of less than threepence a day. This daily misery is the perpetual fountain of crime, and crime again, by shutting out from the criminal the chance of honourable employment, is the constant source of pauperism. And so the two act and react upon each other, with this unhappy consequence according to present arrangements, that the criminal is often better fed than the labourer in full employ, and always better fed than the pauper. This state of things offers a direct premium to lazy poverty, and to its imagination presents the prison, with bread and milk every day, and meat on the Sunday, to the enjoyment of which advantages crime is the qualification and condition, as better than the free hovel, where potatoes are the only diet, and where meat may not be tasted oftener than once in a twelvemonth. This great evil cannot be thoroughly cured by any systems of prison discipline, by transportation or non-transportation, or by all the wisdom of all the wise men who ever wrote, or spoke, or meditated upon the reformation of offenders. It needs altogether a different treatment. To such philosophers the paupers and criminals, whom we already po sess in such overwhelming numbers, may be yielded up for experiment. If they can devise any plan by which the one class shall not be purveyor to the other, and by which society may be relieved o any portion of the great and heavy burden consequent upon old crime and young pauperism, society will be largely their debtor. But a greater task will remain. We must prevent any increase of the present numbers of paupers and criminals. We must nip in the bud the growth of these diseases in our social system. As the object of a wise physician is to prevent disease, and of a careful mother to rear a healthy offspring, the object of a wise State should be, not to punish crime, nor to pamper pauperism, but to prevent both by encouraging the growth of a moral and religious, as well as an industrious and self-supporting community. There must be something, indeed, rotten in England, when a statesman in the p sition, with the knowledge, and with the sympathies of Earl Grey is reduced to such an extremity as that in which the latest news from the Cape of Good Hope depicts him. We have so many convicts on hand that we can neither keep them at home nor send them abroad with safety; and we risk the possession of a colony for the sake of a ship-load of the vilest of our population. The cause of that rottenness is patent. We have neglected the most sacred of our duties. We have made no adequate provision for the education of the people. We have allowed the children of the poor, generation after generation, to grow up in physical and moral filth —in destitution, ignorance, and vice. We have almost ignored their existence except when they became paupers or criminals. In the one case, we recognised their right to live, and we fed them, to our own loss, and with no gain to them. In the other case, as we had not recognised their right to be taught, which might have prevented them from becoming criminals, we had no alternative but to wield the terrors of the law, and to punish them. We forgot altogether that the law has a book as well as a sword; and we did not care to remember the ancient but most valuable apophthegm, that "prevention is better than cure." We have reaped the natural consequences; and besides the trouble, annoyance, degradation, and wrong, we yearly pay a revenue for the support of prisons and police, and all the etcetera that maintain the sword in the hand of the law, which, divided by 2 or 3, would have paid handsomely for the education of the whole people, and the consequent diminution of crime. We do not speak of the entire prevention of crime—for education will not utterly eradicate the evil passions of the human heart; but we believe in the possibility of its great diminution, because all investigation shows that the large majority of crimes are crimes against property, and that crimes against property arise, for the most part, from want and ignorance. Our civilisation has hitherto been at fault. It must grapple with these evils at the very root. We must cease to look upon our colonies as receptacles for our criminals, and we must cease to consider criminals as a necessity of our social state. We must endeavour to find out by what means we can deprive crime of its fecundity, and ultimately reduce it to its minimum. That is our task; and the longer we neglect it, the more difficult it will be.

FAUSTIN THE FIRST, EMPEROR OF HAYTI, IN COUNCIL.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

THE EMPEROR OF HAYTI.

THE nomination of the President (Faustin Soulouque) to the title and dignity of Emperor, was announced to the people of Hayti by the roar of cannon on Sunday, the 26th of August.

On Thursday, August 23, it was rumoured that Soulouque was to receive the title of Emperor, and the next day circulars were carried round for signature, petitioning the Senate and Chambers, then convened, to bestow that title. The circulars were not numerously signed, and it mattered little whether the Legislature acceded to the petition or not, as the crown and the crown jewels were purchased on Saturday evening, at half-past eleven o'clock, and the Senate had not agreed until seven o'clock on Sunday morning, at which time a deputation waited on the Senate upon the subject, to inform him of the decision.

The troops, as is usual on Sunday morning, were under arms for review, and it was supposed that the new-made Emperor would appear on the parade ground, and there receive our title from them; but he did not make his appearance. At 10 o'clock A.M., the guns at different forts were got ready and commenced firing, and during the firing the Emperor was crowned. In a few minutes after, the senators came on the piazza of the palace and gave two cheers for the Emperor, which were not responded to by the troops. Some delay now occurred at the whole proceedings. The troops numbering 2o0 rank and file, with two pieces of artillery, marched to the Catholic Church, where the Emperor was to repair to be con-secrated by the Archbishop of Hayti. In the mean time, the Empress having been previously crowned by the newly-created Bishop for the occasion a decent priest of a very equivocal character.

Over the coat in which the Emperor was a small crown suspended, but the one in which he was crowned was carried before him to the church by one of his Ministers. It was a matter of surprise that the Minister of State did not carry the crown. Immediately during the said service, the crown was handed to him, which he placed before himself during the ceremony, the Empress and her child kneeling. He was dressed in his usual blue dress, but he wore a very large star for the first time. The Empress was dressed, as also her daughter, in a blue silk dress, beautifully embroidered. She was covered with jewels, and her head-dress was a wreath of green. The Royal Family are very black, with good features.

Such was the state with which Faustin was inducted to his imperial office.

The Senate, on adopting the decree, prepared an address, stating that the act was done in obedience to the wish of the nation, and telling Soulouque that his profound love for the public weal and high sense of duty had entitled him to the dignity, its ser-ad to which would assure the future prosperity of the nation.

The Empe-'s first proclamation is dated from the Imperial Palace, Port-au-Prince, August 26, and concludes th us

"Haytians! Let the new era which opens before us be marked by the most complete oblivion of hearts; let it cause all passions to be silent, if any still exist among us, and let us all join the hands of reconciliation on the altar of the country.

"Vivent Liberty and Equality!

"Vivent Union and Concord!

"Vive Independence!

"Vive la [illegible] and [illegible]!"

[illegible] was signed by the Emperor, [illegible] Senate, [illegible] and [illegible] Ministers of State, [illegible] and [illegible] Deputies, [illegible] and [illegible] Secretaries, [illegible] and [illegible] Aides-de-camp.

The Emperor has already created an aristocracy, consisting of six Princes, and sixty Dukes, Marquises, and Barons. Among the titles is the Duc de Soulouque.

The Emperor has also resolved to provide his court with becoming state. Sumptuous furniture to the amount of 1,500,000 francs are in preparation at Paris, for the Imperial Palace, at Saint-Marc, and must be ready for exportation by the end of next month. "As his Majesty's credit is not yet well established, the manufacturers have treated for ready money, and Faustin has placed the payments in Paris to pay for everything in hard cash."

In the Illustration on the front page, Faustin, the Emperor, is seated at the table, wearing the same costume. The tall standing figure beside him is Le Prince Soulouque; on the opposite side of the table to the Emperor is seated Salomon, Duc de Léogane: at the table, also, sits Le Prince Pierrot; and the standing figure [illegible] is Franclique, Duc de Gondives.

COLLECTION OF THE HOP DUTY.

The Lords of the Treasury have decided not to call upon parties for arrears for the payment of the second moiety of the hop duty for the year 1848. The following circular has been issued by the Inland Board of Revenue to their collectors:—"Sir,—I am which the first moiety of the hop duty for 1848 shall have been paid, bond without security may be taken for the second moiety; observing that, although the condition of such bond will be for the immediate payment of the same, yet the Board will grant indulgence, and not enforce such payment before the 15th October, 1850, except in the event of circumstances occurring which may in any [illegible] them to apprehend that the debt will be endangered by delay. In all other respects the regulations already fixed are to be observed. I am to add, that the several supervisors in your collection have been made acquainted with this [illegible], and directed to make it known to their respective [illegible]. I am, sir, &c., W. STANTON.—P.S. The requisite bonds will be forwarded to you in due course by the storekeeper at this office."

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

If our neighbours do not possess all the liberty of a Republic, they have, at least, all the turbulence, as the reported proceedings of the Legislative Assembly very prominently set forth.

On Tuesday evening, M. Raspail's proposition to prevent any banker filling the office of minister, was discussed. The chief argument relied on by the speaker was, that such an individual had the power of making use of information that came to him in his official capacity upon the Stock Exchange which was palpably unjust. He intimated that such had been done before, when a minister had saved 1,500,000f. out of his salary of 600,000f. This assertion gave occasion for the commencement of the disorder, which raged for some time with terrific fury. It was denounced as a gross calumny cast upon twenty or thirty ministers of France of unstained honour. M. Raspail was repeatedly called upon to name the per-on he had alluded to, but the hon. member replied by saying, that he had only spoken of a vague reminiscence. This explanation did not at all satisfy the members, who still continued the tumult, by assailing the orator with epithets of the most unconscious and unquestionably character. M. Raspail at length declared that his allusion was made to a minister, but not to a Minister of Finance, upon which M. de Larochejacquelin said that though he had no doubt M Raspail had used the language imputed to him, yet, a- the hon. member had withdrawn the objectionable part of the charge, he was willing to accept it in its altered form. M. de Larochejacquelin added, that the committee had been unanimous in calling on the Assembly to reject the proposition.

The President then put M. Raspail's motion to the vote, which was lost by a great majority.

On Wednesday another uproar, not less violent, occurred, upon M Crémieux asking Ministers whether they intended to make a provision for the widows and orphans of those who fell in February.

M. Ferdinand Barrot int mated that he intended in a few days to introduce two projects of law upon the subject

M. Sagar d'Agressean hoped, that, as the only combatants of February entitled to sympathy were the Municipal Guards, they would be included in the relief fund.

This was the signal for a tremendous outburst of feeling, which seemed for a time to have no bounds. The Mountain insisted that the speaker should be called to order, for he had insulted the Republic. The President refused to obey the summons. The shouting and confusion became intolerable. The President pulled his bell, but all to no effect. Then Red appealed to set his authority at defiance; and M. Beaune, turning towards the President, vehemently cried out, "You are the Attorney-General of the majority, and not the President of the Assembly!" The President, after a long struggle, obtained order of the day by the vote, which was carried by a vast majority, the Left exclaiming at the same time, "Down with the conspirators!"

The President of the Assembly performed an act towards a member of his own family, the impartial justice of which has excited both surprise and admiration. He has caused to be published in the Moniteur a decree with his own signature attached, dismissing Pierre Bonaparte, who was Lieutenant-Colonel in the African Foreign Legion, from the service, for having returned to France, when on a mission, without the orders or permission of his superior.

General de la Hitte, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Republic to the King of Prussia, has been appointed Minister for Foreign Affairs in place of M. de Rayneval. M. de la Hitte is little known to the public, and does not even belong to the National Assembly. He is said to be a Legitimist, from his former connexion with the Duc d'Angoulême, on whose staff he served as aide-de-camp, during the Spanish campaign of 1823. He also commanded the Engineers, to which arm of the military service he belongs, at the conquest of Algiers. The great difficulty encountered in completing the Ministry would seem to be the general conviction that Louis Napoleon will have no one for Minister who will not consent to be subordinate to his will. It is generally said that he is gradually concentrating a great portion of the business of the several departments of the Government in his own Bureau at the Elysée, and that in the department of Foreign Affairs especially he does so much, that he may be considered in a great measure his own Minister. All papers, notes, and despatches are laid before him, and no important resolution is adopted without being subjected to his decision. It is further stated on this subject that even a great part of the diplomatic correspondence, and of the instructions sent to the representatives of foreign Courts, are now drawn up by the President, and that on this account the situation of Minister of Foreign Affairs, hitherto considered in France the most important of all the departments in the Cabinet, is now considerably less so, inasmuch as the new Foreign Minister will have little to do beyond the mere routine business of the office, and the execution of the directions given by the President himself.

Not less than twenty Prefects of Departments, who were supposed to be disaffected to the Government, have been dismissed from their important offices, and been replaced by more suitable persons.

Reports were again in circulation during the week, that a modification of the Ministry would shortly take place, M. Fould and the President of the Republic not at all agreeing in their financial views.

On Sunday evening the Princess Lieven gave the first of her weekly receptions since her return to Paris. Among the political persons es present, the Hon of the evening was M. Guizot, who recently arrived from London. Thiers was also present, and it was observed that they shook hands, and conversed with each other for a considerable time, with much apparent cordiality. This was the first time for many years that the ex-Minister and ex-Envoy and General Changarnier were also present, but M Thiers absented himself.

The news from Africa is deplorable—pestilence and insurrection. From Cal e we learn that the sanitary condition of the town is frightful. Attacks has encouraged several tribes of Arabs to commit acts of hostility against the French settlers. M. Riffaut, the director of a society for cutting wood, has been assassinated, and the news of the murder of Ourambeo has been driven from their employment, and their inspector put to death. From Oran, also, the deplorable accounts of the ravages of the cholera in that place. 700 soldiers and 2000 civilians had died in that city, besides Maltese, Jews, Moors, and Arabs. All the shops were closed, and business suspended. Fires were lighted in the streets, and cannon fired, in the hope of purifying the atmosphere. Thirty corpses were continually in burying the dead, and carts were constantly passing through the streets collecting the dead bodies. A battalion of 400 Rochefort lost 200 men, and the 2nd Chasseurs d'Afrique 80 men. Gen. Carbuccia, 31, and his aide-de-camp dead. One family of ten persons died in the course of a night. Accounts of the 9th say that the pestilence had slightly declined, but that its ravages were still terrible. The three chief physicians of the hospital had fallen victims.

ITALIAN STATES.

All is still tranquil in the Romanas. The Pope has not yet returned to Rome, from which city accounts to the 9th state that the Holiness had concluded a loan of 4,800,000 of scudi (221 millions of francs) at 84 per cent., but with whom it is not mentioned. The Austrian Cardinal Antonelli had resigned, and that late new Secretary of State would be Cardinal della Genga.

General Gortzkowsky, the Military Commander of Venice, has been recalled by the Austrian Government. No cause has been assigned for the General's disgrace.

At Naples the King has ordered a levy of 18,000 men for 1850.

AUSTRIA.

Our accounts from Vienna state that capital punishment for political offences has been prohibited, and, in proof of this much-doubted assertion, mention the commutation of the punishment of death pronounced against John Ambros, Michael Jakab, and John Fbidy (who, during the rebellion, were members of a self-constituted court of justice at Grosswardein), into fifteen years' forteas arrest.

Kolosy, who struck the late Count Lamberg the first blow on the bridge of boats at Pesth, in September, 1848, has been arrested, and is to be tried by a court-martial

The Vienna journals announce the death of the celebrated Prince Hohenlohe. The commission appointed by the Austrian Government to revise the tariff has completed its labours, and the new tariff, which has been prepared in six tons, relates in general, china, and earthenware goods, glass, chemical productions, and raw material for manufactures.

PRUSSIA

Advices from Berlin, dated the 18th inst, state that, in the sitting of the Council of Administration of the previous day, the elections for the German Parliament were decreed to take place on the 31st January

Erfurt has been definitively designated as the seat of the Parliament.

TURKEY.

All accounts concur in representing the difficulty respecting the extradition of the Hungarian refugees as at an end. From Widdin, where the, were encamped, it appears they have been removed to Shumla, a place farther from the frontier. The first Kossuth contingent of 400 left Widdin on the 20th of October under the leadership of the ex-General Bem, now Amurat Pasha, and accompanied by Messrs Meszlenyi and Count Vay. On the 31st of October another transport of 10z Italians to As the road to Shumla. 165 renegades, commanded by General Stein now Fahrad Pasha, and Kmetti, now Kiamil Pasha, followed on the 1st of November, and on the 3rd the Magyars left their place of refuge and cap lity and Kossuth, who had determined to the strength of 240 men, and were led by M Kossuth in person, and by M. Balogh, the alleged author of the assassination of Count Lamberg. The Count Kassuth Batthyany, the Ban Perussez, and M. Pazmandy, and M. Vukovics, accompanied M. Kossuth's party. The Countess Batthyany and the ex-Count Lor Heymann followed in Count Batthyany's carriage.

THE IONIAN ISLANDS.

Sir H. Ward has published a general amnesty, dated October 24, in favour of the insurgent Cephalonians, in which he says: "There has been enough punishment."

"Every individual who is in prison shall at once from to-day be set at liberty. Time, their future conduct, and the opinion of their fellow-citizens will decide upon their innocence or gu lt."

"The general amnesty will have but one exception. Judgment on G. Pierato Cutwey and on Nicholas Metaxas, son of Demetr Metaxas, will be pronounced tomorrow, by the Court at Liborn, the former being p. ved too hardened a criminal to be set at liberty, and the latter, happily, having acted in most heroically towards a respectable a d well-born individual for which several other persons have been punished. Immediately after this judgment the court-martial will be dissolved."

Count Gerasimos Sdrin, who had been convicted of having appeared fully armed in the midst of the insurgents at the village of Marcopoulos, and had been condemned to twenty-seven years' imprisonment, has had his punishment commuted to two years' detention

UNITED STATES.

Accounts from New York to the 6th instant have been brought during the week by the Europa, but they bring no political news.

Never, since the commencement of the California fever, has it raged so wildly as at the present time. Up to Saturday, the 3rd instant, 373 vessels in all had left the Sandy Hook for the Gold Region, while there were no less than 106 vessels more getting ready for the El Dorado at the different Atlantic ports. The accounts received from month to month of disappointment, sickness, starvation, or death by fever on the Isthmus, do not at all discourage the seekers after Mammon. Departures took place daily.

The new cotton manufactures of the south are progressing rapidly, and the southerners hitherto produced have been content to say, that the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia had, at the late exhibition of arts and manufactures there, awarded them several prizes. Nearly all the workpeople are whites, and inhabitants of the "pine barrens" of South Carolina. The industrial movement of the south is just now exciting much attention, especially as one object is, while using up large quantities of the staple commodity of the slave states, to become the manufacturers as possible of the northern workshops With regard to the employment of people of colour in manufacturing and mechanical trades, popular feeling in the southern states appears to be adverse to it, on the ground of an apprehended interference with the institution of slavery. A large cotton manufactory is being built at Camesville, Indiana, capita. 100,000 do.lars. Another at New Orleans, capital 300,000 dollars.

The total deaths in New York during the cholera visitation were 15,319. Of the above there were 8086 from cholera and bowel complaints.

The Governor of Pensylvania had appointed Thursday, November 29, as a day of general thanksgiving to Almighty God for the blessings of peace, an abundant harvest, and the removal of the late fatal pestilence. Only, New York, New Hampshire, Maine, Florida, Maryland, North Carolina, Massachusets, and Rhode Island had followed this example.

A dreadful murder has been committed at St. Louis. Two young Frenchmen, travelling under the names of the Comtes Montesqui, had put up at Barnum's Hotel, and one of them tapped at Mr. Barnum's chamber door, and on his opening it the Frenchman shot him through the body, and he now lies in a dangerous condition. Two other persons were wounded by the same discharge; and Mr. Jones, a coachmaker, who ran from his room to the spot, was instantly shot dead by the assassin, who at the same time wounded Messrs. Hubble and Henderson The murderer was then pursued to his room, and both brothers were arrested and lodged in gaol. An immense crowd soon assembled, and threatened to tear down the prison, calling for the foreign murderers to be brought out, that they might suffer by Lynch law." 1600 dollars in gold, and much other property, were found in the trunk of the murderer. No motive can be detected for this horrible crime. On the following day and night the crowd again assembled, and the Mayor and Council used the utmost difficulty in saving the lives of the prisoners. At length a military force was called out, and the brothers were removed to Jeffer-on Barracks, several miles from St. Louis -and a special grand jury was to meet immediately for the purpose of investigating the matter.

CANADA

The annexation movement seems to languish. The Toronto Globe had published a declaration, signed by 2000 persons, expressive of a warm attachment to England, and a determination to defend it to the utmost. Lord John Jonnstone has a letter from Mr. Papineau, arguing in favour of annexation with the United States

The Government had directed all colonels of militia to report to the adjutant-general the names of the officers who had signed the annexation address. The meeting of the British American League at Toronto is said to have been a failure, there not being above 80 members present. It was resolved to petition the Queen for a return of protection.

The removal of the Government from Montreal to Toronto had greatly increased the value of house property in the latter place.

In New Brunswick, it is said, the feeling in favour of annexation is stronger than it is in Quebec.

CENTRAL AMERICA

From the Mexican papers it appears that the company to whom the Mexican Government had granted the right of constructing a railroad across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec were proceeding as rapidly as possible with the preliminary arrangements. In about five years, the probability is there will be three connexions between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, viz. the Panama railroad, the Tehuantepec railroad, and the Ship Canal on the Nicaragua route.

We have news from Yucatan to the 9th ult., containing intelligence that "Jacinto Pat," the celebrated Indian chief, and eight other leaders, had been killed —assassinated by some of their tribes in a revolt. It may be inferred, therefore, that the war in Yucatan will soon be at an end.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

According to advices from the Cape, which are down to the 31st of September, the anti-convict movement is in full vigour. The Neptune had arrived at Simon's Bay, with 282 convicts on board; and the following account of the landing of the convicts and the feeling out of her arrival is extracted from the Cape of Good Hope Shipping and Mercantile Gazette:—

The Neptune (which left Bermuda on April the 23rd, and Portsmouth on August 11th) arrived in Simon's Bay about six P.M. on Wednesday last, with 282 convicts on board, seven having died at sea. At nine, her arrival was known in Cape Town; and at half-past twelve on Thursday, a number of the Anti-Convict Committee of Vigilance proceeded to Simon's Bay, to take such immediate measures as the case might require. Early the same morning the alarm was given by the sounding of the gong at the Town-Hall, and the tolling of bells in the churches. Though the meeting was called at the general feeling was then by no means of relief and satisfaction No difference of opinion appeared to exist as to the landing of the convicts, but universal desire seemed to be to put an end to the suspense and anxiety which have now prevailed for nearly three months, and have been—as was justly observed by a member of the Association—destructive of everything, government, society, and business of every kind."

A special messenger with a letter was sent to his Excellency from the Municipal Board of Cape Town, stating, in plain terms, that, as "the people have determined that the convicts shall not be landed, or be kept in any of the ports of the colony," the Board trusted his Excellency, in accordance with the general desire to promote the well being of the colonists, would order the Neptune, after victualling to leave our shores, and proceed to Van Diemen's Land. The messenger would receive any communication that might come from his colonial to accede to this request.

Sir H. Pottinger returned, informing the Board that his Excellency would adhere to the determination which he had previously announced, not to relieve the Neptune from quarantine. The ship would, therefore, after all, remain in Simon's Bay until advices were received from the Home Government, which would probably be within a month or six weeks. Having made this communication, and having left the tone of the Board's letter, which the prevailing excitement might excuse, but could not justify,

The wording of the letter was not loved by grooms and other expressions of disapprobation, No farther communications were issued until the Board considered advisable to vent the indignation of the committee at Simon's Bay. The excitement throughout the town cast most [illegible] gloom. Many mercantile establishments were closed, and business was generally suspended.

It is expected that a meeting will take place to-day, after the receipt of intelligence from Simon's Bay, when final resolutions will be adopted, and rigidly carried into effect. The perfect union and fixed determination of the people leave no doubt that the peaceful and legal measures which will be adopted will be crowned with complete success.

INDIA

Accounts anticipatory of the Overland Mail from Calcutta of the 9th, and Bombay of the 17th of October, have come to hand. The principal political facts thus conveyed are the apprehension and imprisonment at Lahore of the Sirdars Chuttur, Sing, Lena, and several other chiefs who were suspected to be concerned in a conspiracy against the British authorities. His Excellency the Governor-General the Marquis of Dalhousie was very ill, and it was feared that he would not survive his return home. Amongst the deaths, that of Brigadier Douglas, of the 76th Highlanders, is mentioned. Much illness prevailed at Moultan among the army.

CHINA.

The accounts from China state that the affair of the assassination of the Portuguese Governor at Macao remained without any further result of consequence. The authorities at Macao had entered into correspondence on the subject with Senhor Amoral, who replied in a cool and insolent manner, which, joined with other circumstances, shows pretty plainly that the murder of Senhor Amoral is to be attributed to an intrigue of the Chinese authorities. The head and hand of the unfortunate gentleman, which were carried off by the assassins, are acknowledged to be in the possession of the Chinese Commissioner at Canton, who refuses to deliver them up until the Macao Government shall have surrendered three Chinese who were captured at the Barrier-gate on the evening of the murder, and detained as witnesses of it!

M. PIERRE BONAPARTE.

The Paris Correspondent of the Morning Chronicle supplies the following details respecting a "distinguished" member of the "Imperial family:—

"The President of the Republic is certainly unfortunate in his relations, who appear determined to give him all the annoyance they can. This is the second of them whom they have caused him bitterly to deplore of the highest trusts confided to them. The first was the disunesa. of Napoleon Bonaparte from the post of Ambassador at Madrid; and if, on that occasion, there were many who blamed (and apparently not without good grounds) the conduct both of the President and his Ministers there can be no doubt that, in the present instance, the severity exercised towards M. Pierre Bonaparte is considered on all hands as being fully justified.

"It will be remembered that M. Pierre Bonaparte, soon after the President's election, was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Foreign Legion in Africa, which appointment (though any of the inferior steps The measure was perhaps a little irregular, but it was [illegible] of accomplishing it, M. Pierre Bonaparte's mem ry, and in favour of the Emperor's [illegible] was consequently not subjected to invidious remarks. Since that time M Pierre Bonaparte has never been known to have performed any of his Parliamentary duties from joining his regiment, but about three months ago he sailed from Marseilles, and proceeded to Africa, where he joined. It so happened that the first duty he was called upon to perform was to march from Constantine, where the assault of the French army was repulsed. Immediately after wards M. Pierre Bonaparte, [illegible] General Herbillon, the commander-in-chief, on a mission to the Governor-General at Algiers; but instead of accomplishing it, M. P. Bonaparte took shipping at Philippeville direct for France, without going near Algiers at all. Since his return to Paris there have been several attacks upon him for his having disobeyed orders, that he has [illegible] it necessary to answer the charges brought against him. According ly, in the Paris p. [illegible] of the day before yesterday a letter appeared, in which M. Pierre Bonaparte justified himself from the charge of not having fulfilled his mission by saying that he had [illegible] to hasten the arrival of a convoy of reinforcements, [illegible] that he had met the convoy on the way, the mission was at an end. With respect to his sudden return to France, he did not deny the fact, but he justified it on the ground that, as representative of the people, he was the only judge as to the proper time to return to perform his duties in the Assembly. This letter, together with his otherwise not very regular conduct, seems to have determined the Government to make an example of him. As a representative of the people he certainly could not, in terms of the constitution, have been called upon to serve, but having volunteered to join his regiment, he had no right to abandon his post without the orders of his superiors.

"This is not the first time that M. Pierre Bonaparte has gained for himself a bad celebrity. Some years ago, when resident in the Roman States, he was found to be conspiring against the Pope (Gregory XVI.) An officer in the Pope's army was sent to arrest him, and he at once declared that he would not resist. He then invited the officer to take a glass of wine while he was getting ready, and no sooner had the unsuspecting officer turned his back, than M. Pierre Bonaparte shot him dead on the spot with a pistol. For this deliberate murder he was, in consideration for his family, let off with simple banishment from the States of the Church. It will be remembered that, about three months ago, M. Pierre Bonaparte, while sitting in his place in the Assembly, struck one of his brother members (an aged and inoffensive man, who, it was proved, had never spoken to him) in the face. For this assault he was tried before the Correctional Pollice, and escaped with a fine of only 200 francs. His next exploit was knocking down one of the door-keepers at the Orleans Railway station, who, according to orders, had refused to admit him till his had paid for his ticket. For this he got off without any punishment. He is now dismissed the service for disobedience to orders; and it is to be hoped that the lesson he has got will teach him that his imperial manners do not suit a republic.

"There is a division of opinion as to the cause of M. Pierre Bonaparte's sudden return. According to some, he started as soon as he heard of the President's message and the change of Ministry, in the expectation of some fighting; according to others, the ravages of the cholera at Oran had something to do with his sudden resolution."

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

OXFORD ARCHITECTURAL SOCIETY.—At the recent annual election of a president and other officers of this important society, the Rev. W. Sewell, B.D., Fellow of Exeter College, was again unanimously elected president; the Rev. John Lary, Fellow of Exeter College, and the Rev. John Barrow, Fellow of Queen's College, were elected auditors. The following gentlemen were appointed the committee:—The Rev. Dr. Bloxam, Fellow of Magdalen College; Mr. E. A. Lechmere, St. Mary Hall; Mr. E. Paget, St. John's College; and Mr. T. Combe, of the Clarendon Press.

PROPOSED NEW COLLEGE FOR POOR SCHOLARS.—Intimation has been given by Mr. Justice Coleridge, Archdeacon Manning, and Archdeacon Wilberforce, that a sum of money has been placed in their hands to form the commencement of a fund for the foundation of a college in the University of Oxford, the object of which will be to increase the number of well-educated clergy of the Church at home, and to render the advantage of Oxford more easily accessible to many men of small means who are preparing for other liberal professions. The sum already offered by responsible persons somewhat exceeds £2000, but it is computed that as much as £30,000 will be requisite for the site, building, and endowment for fifty students; and should £50,000 be subscribed, the number of students might be proportionately increased. There will be no difficulty, it is said, in obtaining an eligible site for the college.

The outline of the plan respecting responsions and the public examinations in this University, has been issued by the authorities; but, as only certain portions have been adopted by Convocation, we defer printing the alterations on the present system until they are finally settled.

CAMBRIDGE.

COMPARATIVE NUMBER OF RESIDENTS IN THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE, 1848-1843.

College.	1848			1843
	In College.	In Lodgings.	Total Resident.	In College	In Lodgings	Total Resident.
Trinity..	229	327	556	228	316	544
St. John's	236	133	369	238	145	383
Caius	87	73	160	67	73	140
Christ's	73	39	111	75	42	117
Emmanuel	63	40	103	64	50	114
Queen's	45	52	97	45	47	92
Catharine Hall ..	37	34	71	37	36	73
Corpus Christi ..	75	8	83	64	7	71
Jesus	56	8	64	58	12	70
St. Peter's	58	18	76	57	11	68
Clare Hall	55	9	64	56	8	64
Magdalene	47	12	59	50	10	60
Trinity Hall	34	1	35	39	1	40
Pembroke	35	3	38	36	3	39
Sidney	40	2	42	33	—	33
King's	69	3	72	69	2	71
Downing	12	2	14	8	2	10
	1,251	761	1942	1173	791	1964

MATRICULATIONS

Michaelmas, 1848 .. 408 Michaelmas, 1849 .. 419

CROSSE SCHOLARSHIP.—There will be an examination for this scholarship on Tuesday, the 27th inst., and following days. Candidates must be "Bachelors of Arts the first year from their degree."

THE LE BAS PRIZE.—A sum amounting to about £1920 Three per Cent Consols having been accepted by the University for the purpose of having an annual prize, consisting of the interest of the above-mentioned fund, to be called the "Le Bas Prize," for the best English essay on a subject of general literature, such subject to be occasionally chosen with reference to the history, institutions, and probable destinies and prospects of the Anglo-Indian empire, the examiners give notice that the subject for the present year is "The political causes which conduced to the introduction and establishment of British sovereignty in India between the dethronement of Saraj-u-Dowlah and the second treaty of peace with Tippoo Saltaun."

CONSECRATION.—On Saturday, the 17th instant, the Lord Bishop of Manchester consecrated in his diocese the new church of All Saints, Haberghain, by which a new parish is constituted under the act 6 and 7 Vic., c. 37. The Rev. Hook preached the sermon. The church is an elegant structure, capable of containing about 700 persons, and has been erected entirely by the munificence of Kay Shuttleworth, Bart., and his lady (who gave the site, together with £1000 towards it), and the Messrs. Dugdale, the eminent manufacturers, who were donors to the amount of £2000.

TESTIMONIALS.—The following clergymen have recently received testimonials of affection and esteem:—The Rev. Charles Bridges, late Vicar of Old Newton, Suffolk, from the inhabitants of that parish; the Rev. William Fox, late Curate of Bengeworth, Worcestershire, from the inhabitants; the Rev. Thomas Peckston, late Curate of St. Bartholomew, Bethna-green, London, from his late parishioners; the Rev. J. Morgan, from the parishioners of Sibertswold, Kent, on his resigning the curacy, after faithfully ministering there for more than thirty years; the Rev. G. Hadow, Curate of Ryeleigh, on the occasion of his resigning the charge of that parish; the Rev. Salmon Pierrepoint, Perpetual Curate of Burnley, Lancashire, from his parishioners; and the Rev. J. Berdsley, on his leaving the curacy of the parochial chapelry of Burnley, by the members of his congregation.

DIVISION OF THE PARISH OF MANCHESTER INTO SEPARATE PARISHES.—Application is to be made to Parliament in the ensuing session for an act for the division of the parish and rectory of Manchester into distinct and separate rectories, parishes, and districts for ecclesiastical purposes; for their endowment, for building churches therein, for the right of patronage, and providing parsonage-houses for their incumbents, and residences for the dean and canons of the Collegiate Church, and for selling or letting the houses intended for residences of the dean and canons.

PREFERMENTS.—Rev. H. O. Wilson, to Stretton Church Ri., Salop, dio. Heref.; value £342, with residence; pat., C. Pemberton, Esq. Rev. Thomas Calvert, B.A., Rector Queen of St. Paul's, to C. Anthelm with St. John the Baptist R., Watling-street, value £222 per annum; pats. (this turn), Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; Rev. W. Goode, prom. Rev. — Armstrong, to Aston-Flamville w. Burbage R., Leicestershire, dio. Peter, value £378; pat., Earl de Grey. Rev. R. H. Brown, to Kenwyn V., with St. Kea V., Cornwall, dio. Exet.; Grey. Rev. R. H. Brown, to Kenwyn V., with St. Kea V., Cornwall, dio. Exet.; value £703, with res.; and to a Canonry in the Cathedral Church of Exeter; pat., Bishop of Exeter. The Rev. James Scholefield, Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge, to the Canonry in the Cathedral Church of Ely vacant by the death of the Rev. Wm. French, D.D., Master of Jesus College: the canonry is now annexed to the Regius Professorship of Greek, and its value is £200. The Rev. F. H. Browne to a Canonry in the Cathedral Church of Exeter. Rev. E. Furmstone, to be Head Master of Lady Lumley's Grammar School, Thornton, Yorkshire. Rev. R. L. Freer, D.D., Rector of Bishopstone, Herefordshire, to the Incumbency of Wembley, dio. Heref. Rev. F. Hawlett, to Penn C., Bucks, dio. Oxford; value £247, with res.; pat., Earl Howe. Rev. E. W. Gathercole, to St. Switchin C., Worcester, dio. Worcester, with Powick C., Worcestershire, dio. Worcester. Rev. J. K. Glazebrook, M.A., to Melling, P.C., dio. Manch.; value £120, with res.; pat., Rector of Halsall. Rev. W. Glowes to Ash Rocking V., Suffolk, dio. Cant.; value £233, with res.; pat., the Lord Chancellor. Rev. Chilcott, to Darre V., Cumberland, dio. Carl.; value £120; pat., the Lord Chancellor. Rev. G. C. Smith, M.A., to Carlton w. Lindrick R., Nottinghamshire, dio. Lincoln; value £576 per annum, with residence; patron, the Archbishop of York; Rev. C. W. Eyre, acted. Rev. William Wilson King, B.A., to Milwich V., near Stone; Rev. John Owen, deceased.

VACANCIES.—Lampeter, St. David's College, Vice-Principalship, with the Professorship of Hebrew, and Junior Professorship of Divinity; Rev. E. H. Browne, prom. Blackley-Valfrey R. (sinecure), Pembrokeshire, dio. St. David's; value £200; pat., St. David's College, Lampeter; Rev. E. H. Browne, prom. Darwen, Lower, P. C., Lancashire, dio. Manchester; value £130, with res.; pat., the Vicar of Blackburn; Rev. J. K. Glazebrook, prom. Broom-ash R., Norfolk, dio Nor; value £246; pat., Mrs. E. Burney. Rockingham-Inferior R., w. Rickingham-Superior R., Suffolk; dio Nor., value £856, with residence; pat., G. St. Vincent Wilson, Esq. Old Buckenham R., F. C., Norfolk; dio. Nor.; value £102; pats., the inhabitants. Redborne—Cheney V., Wills, dio. G. and B.; value £96; patron, Rev. A. Evans; vacant by the death of the Rev. Henry T. Streeton.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

SIR CHARLES FORBES, BART., OF EDINGLASSIE, COUNTY OF ABERDEEN.

THIS respected gentleman died on the 20th instant, at his residence in Fitzroy-square, aged 76. He was the son of the Rev. John Forbes, of Lochell, by Katharine his wife, only daughter of Gordon Stewart, Esq., of Irmerony, and derived his descent from a younger branch of the old Scottish house of Forbes, of Pitsligo.

Sir Charles (who sat for twenty years in the House of Commons) was long connected with commercial pursuits. At one time he was an influential merchant at Bombay, and, after his return from India, held the important position of head of the great firm of Forbes and Co. He was created a Baronet in 1823. He married, 28th February, 1809, Elizabeth, daughter of Major John Cosgrave, R.E.I.C., and had four sons and one daughter. The eldest of the former (John Forbes, Esq.) died in his father's lifetime, leaving, with other issue, a son, now Sir Charles Forbes, second Baronet, born in 1841.

JAMES STUART, ESQ.

THIS gentleman, of well-known political fame, was the eldest son of the late Rev. Dr. Charles Stuart, of Newby, and was nearly connected with the noble family of Moray. He was bred to the profession of the law, and became a Writer to the Signet in 1798. He had excellent talents for business, and had he given it due attention, he would most probably have attained high distinction in his profession; but, having inherited a considerable property in the county of Fife, he became attached to agricultural pursuits, and these, with his duties as county gentleman and magistrate, and the political engagements into which he soon plunged with the utmost warmth, speedily engrossed by far the greater portion of his time and attention. He was a zealous and an uncompromising Whig. No party ever existed more completely devoted to his party, or more disposed to make every possible exertion and sacrifice to promote its objects. Hence, he inherited a large amount of hostility to the opposite party; and hence, in consequence of some attack made upon him, his fatal duel with Sir Alexander Boswell, in which Sir Alexander explained what he wrote in his death. The trial which followed was creditable to Mr. Stuart, who, it was admitted on all hands, could not well have acted otherwise.

His business necessarily suffered by these continuous distractions; and his means were crippled, partly and principally, by the expenses in which they involved him, and partly by his too generous hospitality. Being of an extremely sanguine disposition, he attempted to repair his fortunes by speculating in land; but the crash of 1825 proved fatal to his schemes, and involved him in embarrassments by which he was overwhelmed. As he had done nothing dishonourable, he might easily have settled with his creditors, but he believing would not allow him to face them, and he took the rash and unfortunate resolution of retreating to America. On his return he obtained his discharge, but he lost the situations he had held in Edinburgh, which he might have retained had he not left Scotland.

After his return Mr. Stuart became the editor of the Courier, and gave in this capacity every support in his power to the Whig party. He was appointed by Lord Melbourne to the situation of Factory Inspector, which he held till his death; and it redounds much to his credit that in this difficult position he conducted himself so as to acquire the esteem not merely of the manufacturers, but of the great majority of the workmen.

Mr. Stuart was robust, active, and singularly capable of bearing fatigue. He died in his seventy-fourth year, of a disease of the heart, most probably induced by the excitement in which he passed the greater part of his life.

CHARLES GORING, ESQ., M.P., OF WISTON PARK, SUSSEX

A VACANCY has been created in the representation of the borough of Shoreham by the death of this gentleman, which unfortunately event, the result of typhus fever, occurred on the 18th inst., at Wiston Park. He had been suffering for some considerable time from the attack, but of late appeared to be recovering. A relapse, however, came on suddenly, and terminated fatally.

The hon. gentleman, who was born in 1817, and had, consequently, only reached his thirty-second year, was cousin of the present Sir Harry Dent Goring, Bart., being descended from the second marriage of Sir Charles Mathews Goring, the four times Member for Sussex, and eventually, heiress, of Sir Robert Fagg, Bart., of Wiston. He succeeded the present Sir Harry Goring as M.P. for Shoreham, here defeating Lord Alfred Paget, and, while in the House of Commons, acted and voted with the Protectionist party.

HENRY WILLOUGHBY, ESQ., OF BIRDSALL HOUSE, CO. YORK.

THE death of this gentleman, the heir presumptive of the present Lord Middleton, occurred on the 18th inst., in his 70th year. He was son and heir of the late Rev. James Willoughby, Rector of Guiting, &c., and grandson of Henry, 7th son of Thomas Willoughby (second son of the first Lord Middleton), by Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heiress of Thomas Southby, Esq., of Birdsall. He married, 20th June, 1815, Charlotte, eldest daughter of the late Venerable Archdeacon John Eyre, and had by her, who died 20th Sept., 1845, four sons and three daughters.

WILLIAM ETTY, ESQ., R.A.

THIS great modern painter was born at York, on the 10th of March, 1787. Like Rembrandt and Constable, he was a miller's son, and made his first sketches with chalk upon the mill floor. He served an apprenticeship of seven years to Mr. Peck, a printer, at Hull, when, from first being employed to engrave plates for a picture of "Cleopatra," which induced him to still further cultivate his genius; and he consequently travelled and studied in Rome, Florence, Naples, and France. He returned to England in 1824, the finished and exquisitely graceful painter he has since been. To enumerate his works is needless, as the greater portion are of such recent exhibition in London; and who, indeed, is not familiar with those splendid specimens of the human figure, those charming delineations of female beauty, which, however startling to the more modestly sensitive, never failed to attract and delight?

The life of Etty was one course of devotion to his admirable art; and we are happy to hear from himself that it also was to him a source of almost unalloyed happiness.

Mr. Etty died on the 14th inst., in his native town of York, leaving a names of lasting renown among the painters of England. In his recent autobiography, Etty thus eloquently sums up and defends his own case:—

"Like many other men, my character has been much misunderstood by some. I have preferred nature to art, and the unsophisticated human form divine, male and female, in preference to the production of the loom; or, in plainer terms, preferred painting from the glorious works of God, to draperies, dishes, and dwarfs of men. I have been censured for being a shocking immoral man! I have even heard my bodily infirmities—brought on, in a great measure, by my ardent devotion to my art, and studying in hot rooms in life academies—turned against me; and, unacquainted with my temperate habits, been accused of drinking. I confess my sin: I am fond of drinking; but only a harmless beverage—tea. And I certainly venerate the memory of the man, be he who he may, who invented tea; and any who calumniates me for forgive, and only ask them to examine my life. That I have had errors and failings too many, I know, and trust to the goodness of God to forgive; but over station I found myself there, whether printer's devil or royal academician, my honest endeavour has been to do my duty in it to the best of my power, a principle I can with confidence recommend to all who may come after me, and one which they will never regret if they look back upon."

WILLIAM BURGE, ESQ., Q.C.

THIS gentleman was called to the English bar by the honourable society of the Inner Temple, in Easter Term, 1808, and was at one period in the enjoyment of a very extensive practice, more particularly as an advocate before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Colonial Matters. He was also the author of some successful legal works; his principal production was his "Commentaries on Colonial and Foreign Laws, in their conflict with each other, and with the law of England," a very able book. About three years ago Mr. Burge received the appointment of a Commissioner of Bankruptcy in the Leeds district. He was, unfortunately, obliged to retire from this office, owing to pecuniary embarrassments; but nothing affecting his personal honour was ever alleged. Mr. Burge was made a queen's counsel, and was also a bencher of the Inner Temple, and as such he took an active part in effecting the present magnificent restoration of the Temple Church. He died after a long illness, on the 15th instant, at his residence, York-street, Gloucester-place. He was, at the time, in the sixty-fourth year of his age.

MAJOR ROCHE MEAD, K.H.

THIS distinguished officer, who was for many years Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General at the Horse Guards, entered the Army in 1805, and received the rank of Major in 1837. Major Mead was a member of an old Limerick family, which has given many gallant soldiers to our Army. The Major served, with fame, through the Peninsular war, and also in Hanover and Holland. Major Mead died at Bromp on, on the 16th instant.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL DOUGLAS

GENERAL DOUGLAS, of the 75th Highlanders, entered the Army as an Ensign in 1805, and became a Lieutenant-Colonel in 1837: latterly he occupied the post of Brigadier-General. This gallant soldier's principal services lay in Java, from 1812 to 1814. While there, he took by storm the fortifications of Djocjocarta, and obtained by conquest the island of Bawiah. General Douglas died recently at Hyderabad, in Scinde.

D. C. MOYLAN, ESQ.

THIS gentleman was called to the bar by the Hon. Society of Lincoln's Inn, the 24th November, 1820, and practised for some years on the Midland Circuit. After filling the appointment of a Revising Barrister, he was, on the passing of the Insolvent Debtors Act, named Judge of the Court for the Westminster district. Mr. Moylan died on the 16th inst.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

On Tuesday, the day to which Parliament had been prorogued, a great number of well-dressed ladies and gentlemen attended below the bar to witness the ceremony of further proroguing it till the 16th of January next, in conformity with the decision come to at the Privy Council held at Windsor Castle last week.

The House presented a novel appearance. The reporters' gallery has been taken away, with the view of bringing it several feet forward. The fresco paintings have been nearly completed, and give a brilliant appearance to the house.

The Lords Commissioners were the Lord Chancellor, the Marquis of Clanricarde, and Lord Campbell; and upon taking their seats upon the woolsack, in front of the throne, Mr. Pulman, the Yeoman Usher of the Black Rod, proceeded to command the attendance of the House of Commons.

The Members of the Commons House, represented by Mr. Henry Lee, the Deputy Clerk, Sir Robert Inglis, Mr. Raphael, members, and several of the officers of the House, appeared at the bar, when by direction of the Lord Chancellor her Majesty's Commission was read; after which

The LORD CHANCELLOR said, that, in obedience to her Majesty's command, and by virtue of the powers thereby conferred, Parliament stood prorogued till Wednesday, the 16th of January next.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

Sir J. Richardson, who had command of the Arctic Searching Expedition, and has just returned from America, gives the following opinion as to further measures in search of Sir John Franklin, in the official account of the proceedings of his own overland expedition:

"With respect to the recommendation of additional measures in furtherance of the humane views of their Lordships, it is necessary to take into account the time for which the discovery ships were provisioned. Deer migrate over the ice in the spring from the main shore to Victoria and Wollaston lands in large herds, and return in the autumn. These lands are also the breeding-places of vast flocks of snow geese; so that with ordinary skill in hunting, a large supply of food might be procured on their shores in the months of June, July, and August. Seals are also numerous in those seas, and are easily shot, their curiosity rendering them a ready prey to a boat party. In these ways, and by fishing, the stock of provisions might be greatly augmented. And we have the recent example of Mr. Rae, who passed a severe winter on the very barren shores of Repulse Bay, with no other fuel than the withered tufts of a herbaceous andromeda, and maintained a numerous party on the spoils of the chase alone for a whole year. Such instances forbid us to lose hope. Should Sir John Franklin's provisions become so far reduced as to be inadequate to a winter's consumption, it is not likely that he would remain longer by his ships, but rather that in one body, or in several, the officers and crews, with boats cut down so as to be light enough to drag over the ice, or built expressly for that purpose, would endeavour to make their way eastward to Lancaster Sound, or southwards to the mainland, according to the longitude in which the ships were arrested. I would here beg leave to suggest that the Hudson's Bay Company be authorised and requested to promise liberal rewards to Indians and Esquimaux who may relieve white men entering their lands. Some parties of Esquimaux frequenting the coast to the westward of the Mackenzie are in the habit of passing the winter in the vicinity of the Hudson's Bay Company's post on the Rat River (a tributary of the Peel), and might be interested in the cause by judicious promises. The Russian Fur Company have a post on the Yucon or Colville, which falls into the Arctic Sea about midway between the Mackenzie and Behring's Straits, and through their officers similar offers might be made to the western Esquimaux. We know from the narrative of Sir John Franklin's discovery of that coast, and also from the subsequent voyage of Messrs. Dease and Simpson, that the Esquimaux, who frequent the estuary of the Mackenzie most from that Point Barrow, at an intermediate point, for the purposes of barter; and in this way intelligence of any interesting occurrence is conveyed along the coast. The Russian post on the Colville receives its supplies from a post in the Norton Sound, where it would be easy for any vessel bound to Behring's Straits to land a communication. Mr. Rae, having been appointed to the charge of the Mackenzie River district, will give a proper direction to the efforts of Indian hunters in that quarter.

"As it is thought by some, whose opinion I highly value, that the discovery ships may be penetrated to the westward in so high a latitude as to be soon within sight of the mainland, I may further suggest the desirableness of the examination of the western coast of Banks' and Parry's islands, but as this would require a ship's navigation by way of Behring's Straits, I must leave the decision of the practicability of such a scheme to the able executive officers who have navigated the northern seas."

THE COMBINED BRITISH AND FRENCH FLEETS IN THE LEVANT.—We learn from Malta, under date of the 13th inst., that on the 4th the 11 sail of the line, under the command of Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, entered the Dardanelles, and on the 6th were lying at anchor there. Some of the ships had suffered damage from having been in collision with each other; the Dragon steam-frigate having at one time been in some danger. She had subsequently repaired to Constantinople, where the Odin steam-frigate and the Furious steam-ship were lying at the disposal of Sir Stratford Canning. The ships at anchor within the Dardanelles are the Queen, 116; flag-ship Caledonia, 120; Howe, 120; Prince Regent, 72; Powerful, 84; Vengeance, 84; Ballerophon, 84; Rodney, 72; Hannibal, 72; Rosamond, and Ardent steam-sloops. Sir William Parker contemplated paying a visit to Constantinople, and on his return the fleet was to leave for Salamis, and thence to Malta for winter quarters. The French fleet, consisting of the Friedland, 120, bearing the flag of Vice-Admiral Parseval Déchênes; the Jemappes, 100, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Vaillant; Hercule, 100; Jena, 84; Jupiter, [illegible] Austerlitz, 84; Wagram, 84; Montebello, 84; Ville de Paris, 90; Valmy, 90; Arcole, 90; Marengo, 90; Lodi, 90; Alger, 90; Mogador, 90; Isly, 90; Asmodée, 90; Triton, 90; Descartes, 90; Ulm, 90; Austerlitz, 90; Iéna, 90; Wagram, 90; Montebello, 90

CLIEFDEN, NEAR MAIDENHEAD; THE MANSION DESTROYED BY FIRE ON THE 15TH INST.

DESTRUCTION OF CLIEFDEN HOUSE.

This celebrated mansion, which was purchased a few months ago by the Duke of Sutherland, from the executors of the late Sir George Warrender, has been reduced almost to a mere shell, this being the second time it has fallen a prey to the flames within the last sixty years. The family of the Duke of Sutherland were at the time, in Scotland, and the only persons in charge of the mansion when the unfortunate outbreak occurred were two female servants. The accident seems to have originated in the library, where some workmen had been employed until nearly ten o'clock on Thursday morning week. The flames were first observed through the front windows of the mansion about one o'clock P.M. on that day, by some persons near the spot, who hastened to the house and gave an alarm. Messengers were instantly despatched to Maidenhead, and in a very short period two engines arrived, but the fire had by this time attained so great a mastery that although an ample supply of water was at hand very little effect was produced upon the conflagration. The flames having communicated with the grand staircase, the whole of the upper floor of the main building was speedily on fire, and all hope of saving any portion of it being at an end, the endeavours of those engaged were directed to the salvage of the wings, which were connected with the central portion by two colonnades. These colonnades were speedily pulled down, and several other engines having by this time arrived, from Windsor and elsewhere, the firemen poured large quantities of water over the ruins, and the flames were at length subdued, after having consumed the whole of the central portion of the mansion, with a large portion of its valuable and interesting contents. Several of the more choice paintings, of which Cliefden contained an immense number, were saved by the exertions of the persons present, among whom the Hon. Colonel Irby, Colonel Vansittart, and Mr. Raikes Currie, all of whom reside in the neighbourhood, were most conspicuous. The original mansion of Cliefden was erected by George Villars, second Duke of Buckingham, in the reign of Charles II. From the Duke of Buckingham the mansion passed into the possession of Frederick Prince of Wales, who resided there many years, and greatly improved the place. On the 20th of May, 1795, the house was destroyed by fire, the flames spreading with great rapidity, and leaving no portion of the building standing, except the wings. The house occupied a position on the brow of a lofty eminence, looking towards Windsor Castle, which constitutes a prominent object in the view. The declivity towards the Thames is hung with natural woods, and the meanderings of that river through the adjoining pastures constitute one of the richest and most beautiful prospects that can be imagined. The mansion now destroyed was built on the ruins of that which was burnt in 1795, about twenty-five years ago by the late Sir George Warrender, who made it the receptacle of his most remarkable collection of works of art and vertu. Many of these treasures were purchased with the mansion by the Duke of Sutherland, and we fear that a very large portion of them is destroyed. The mansion, it is understood, is fully insured.

By the way, in the accounts of this catastrophe, Pope's oft-quoted lines descriptive of the death of the Duke of Buckingham, at Kirkby Moorside, have been repeated. It may be as well, therefore, to mention that "the worst inn's worst room" is a poetic fiction; the house at Kirkby Moorside being built in good style for a farm-house, and having not the least indication of ever having been an inn. Neither are the walls "of dung," nor the "floors of plaster," as the "Dunciad" makes them; the one having substantially stood for upwards of two centuries, and (a positive negation to the affirmed material of the other) the impress of a seal, bearing the Duke's arms, having been found in a crevice of the boarded floor of one of the rooms.

Meetings have been held at Kidderminster, Stoke-upon-Trent, Walsall, &c., during the past week, attended by deputations from the Society of Arts, and by all the leading persons of the localities, when the usual resolutions were unanimously adopted for carrying out the views of the society, and of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, its principal.

HEVER CASTLE, KENT.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

HEVER CASTLE.

ARD on the western border of the county of Kent, about four miles north-west of Penshurst, stand the remains of Hever Castle, the ancient seat of a family of that name, but more endeared to memory as the residence of the ill-fated Anne Boleyn.

This Castle was erected by William de Hever, a Norman baron, who, under Edward III., obtained the King's license to "embattle his manor-house," as well as to have the liberty of free warren within this demesne. His two daughters and co-heiresses conveyed it in marriage to the families of Cobham and Brooke; the former, who had acquired the whole by purchase, afterwards sold the entire estate to Sir Geoffrey Boleyn, a wealthy mercer of London, Lord Mayor of that city in the thirty-seventh of Henry VI., and great-grandfather to Anne Boleyn, the unfortunate Queen of Henry VIII., and mother of Queen Elizabeth. On the death of Sir Thomas Boleyn, K.G., Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond, and father of Anne, Henry seized this estate in right of his late wife; and afterwards enlarged it by purchases from others of her family; or as Miss Benger, the accomplished biographer of Anne Boleyn, states, "Henry, with matchless rapidity, claimed it in right of a wife, from whom, previous to her being beheaded, he had been divorced." The next possessor was the Lady Anne of Cleves; who, after her divorce, had settled on her this and other adjoining manors for life, or so long as she should remain in the kingdom, at the yearly rent of £93 13s. 4d. She made Hever Castle her general place of residence; and died here in the fourth or fifth year of the reign of Philip and Mary, at which time these estates were sold, by commissioners authorised by the Crown, to Sir Edward Waldegrave, Lord Chamberlain to the Queen's household, who, on the accession of Elizabeth, was divested of all his employments, and committed to the Tower, where he died in 1561. From his family the manors passed to the Humphreys, and finally to the family of the Medleys, in Sussex.

The Castle next became the property of Miss Waldo; and for this lady, Mr Robinson, architect, of London, some years since, refitted some of the apartments for residence.

Hever Castle is a very interesting specimen of the domestic fortress between the castle and mansion. It is a large massive building, with buttresses, square towers, embrasures, square windows, and a watered moat supplied by the Eden. The entrance gateway is flanked by two towers; it is embattled, strongly machicolated, and defended by a portcullis. The great staircase communicates with various oaken chambers; and the long gallery has a curiously-wrought ceiling in stucco. In the staircase windows is some old glass, charged with the arms and alliances of the Boleyns, &c. At the upper end of the gallery, part of the floor lifts up, and discovers a narrow gloomy descent, leading as far as the moat, and called the dungeon.

To Hever Anne Boleyn retired after Wolsey's malicious interference to annul her engagement with Lord Percy, son of the Earl of Northumberland. The crafty Cardinal having first prevailed on the Earl to forbid his son's marriage with Anne, next succeeded in persuading Sir Thomas Boleyn to withdraw her from Court. Anne was little aware of the real source of the disappointment, which was, in truth, the unholy passion of Henry: she, on the other hand, attributed it exclusively to Wolsey's malice.

While Anne Boleyn was repining in exile, Henry contrived the marriage of her lover, Lord Percy, to the daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury. There is no reason to believe that Anne divined the true source of her disappointment; even her father's sagacity appears not to have penetrated the mystery. According to tradition, however, the mist vanished from his eyes, when he suddenly saw the King arrive by stealth at Hever, on some frivolous pretext, which ill disguised his real errand, that he came but to steal a glimpse of the lovely Anne Boleyn. Alarmed by this delicate attention, Sir Thomas is said to have sedulously withdrawn his daughter from the King's view, and during his visit, on the plea of indisposition, to have kept her confined to her chamber. Whatever credit be attached to this tale, it is certain that a considerable time intervened before Anne resumed her place at court; and that, during her absence, her father, created Lord Viscount Rochford, was advanced to the office of treasurer of the Royal household. The sequel of Anne's career must be in the recollection of the reader, since few events in history have been more minutely illustrated; even the love-letters of the contracting parties are treasured to this day in our national archives. The fall of the Boleyns must have been signally sudden; for Lambarde does not refer to them in his "Perambulations in Kent," published towards the middle of the seventeenth century.

Among the memorials at Hever is a pair of andirons, bearing the Royal initials, "H. A.:" one of these relics we have engraved in the prefixed letter. A small recess, or apartment, opening from the gallery at Hever, is said to have been occasionally used by Henry as a council-chamber.

Col. C. J. T. Tynte has presented to Mr. Williams, harper of Caerphilly, and bard of Cefn Mably (Wales), a beautiful gold miniature harp, as a mark of appreciation of the young minstrel's talents, to be worn by him as the badge of the harper of Cefn Mably.

BISHOPS' ROCK LIGHTHOUSE,

THE WESTERNMOST ROCK OF THE SCILLY ISLANDS.

THIS Lighthouse now in progress of erection by Mr. Douglas, for the honourable corporation of Trinity House, under the superintendance of Messrs. Walker and Burges, the eminent engineers, is formed of cast-iron columns, braced and stayed with wrought-iron rods. The columns are sunk into the rock, and the ingress to the light is by the interior of the centre column to the hopper, over which, and under the gallery, are the living-room, store, &c. It is upwards of 120 feet high, and 20 feet higher than the far-famed Eddystone, and is peculiarly adapted (notwithstanding its apparent lightness) to withstand the heavy seas which fall in at that point, as from its construction the sea passes through without taking any hold, in comparison as it does when meeting the solid body; it is

BISHOPS' ROCK LIGHTHOUSE, SCILLY ISLANDS.

likewise well placed, inasmuch as the light can be seen about thirty miles, thereby giving the homeward-bound vessels a good offing, so as to enable them to run up the English or British channels, as circumstances may require; thus affording a great advantage over the Scilly light, which, being so much nearer the mainland, renders the approach in bad weather much more dangerous

The centre column is about three feet six inches diameter, and the entrance-door is about eight feet above the levelled part of the rock. The present view is taken at low water, and at high water the rock is covered to within two feet of the foot of the centre column.

This lighthouse was constructed by Messrs. Robinson, of Pimlico, and the lantern is in progress by Mr. Wilkins, of Long-acre.

The rock is situated about eight or ten miles westward of the Land's End, and the Lighthouse is completed as far as the gallery.

THE IGUANA,

IN THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, REGENT'S-PARK.

THE "Reptile-House" in the menagerie of the Zoological Society has, as we anticipated in our first notice, created a most extraordinary interest among the visitors to that instructive establishment; and it gives us great pleasure to perceive, from the last monthly report of the Society, that the exertions of the Council to meet the progressive spirit of the age have been so extensively appreciated as to secure an increase of 75,000 persons in the number admitted to view their collection in the present year, as compared with 1847. We learn from the same source, that the number of animals now exhibited exceeds 1400 specimens; and the number of species may be inferred from the interesting fact, that nearly fifty have been acquired for the first time during the present season.

The novel attraction presented by a structure in which the spectator has an opportunity of studying, at his ease and in safety, the mysterious habits of the most formidable class in the animal kingdom, is not likely to wane as long as the Council are as successful in obtaining additions to the number of species contained in it, as they have been since our last record of their progress. We have been induced to select the Iguana, presented by Dr. Andrew Smith (Cyclura colei), as the subject of an Illustration, not only on account of the singularity of its aspect, but because it may be regarded as the type of a large and important group in the Saurian family, which formed so conspicuous a feature in the ancient fauna of this country.

The Iguana attains a large size in Jamaica, whence the present species was obtained, not unfrequently approaching four feet in length. In colour it is a greenish grey. It is entirely herbivorous, as are all its congeners. Its principal haunt in Jamaica is the low limestone chain of hills, along the shore from Kingston Harbour and Goat Island, on to its continuation in Vere.

The Iguanas which are occasionally taken in the savannahs adjacent to this district are considered by Mr. Hill (an energetic correspondent of the Zoological Society who resides in Spanish Town, and who has paid great attention to the natural history of the island) to be only stray visitants which have wandered from the hills. The allied species of Cyclura, which are found on the American continent, occur in situations of a very different character, for they affect forests on the banks of rivers, and woods around springs, where they pass their time in trees and in the water, living on fruits and leaves. This habit is preserved by the Society's specimen, which we have seen lying lazily along an elevated branch, and we learn that its favourite food since it has been in this country is ripe pears. Its serrated tail is a formidable weapon of defence, with which, when alarmed or attacked, it deals rapid blows from side to side. When unmolested it is harmless and inoffensive; and appears to live in perfect harmony with the smaller species of lizards which inhabit the same division of the house.

Among the other recent additions to the collection we observed two fine examples of the Cobra Capello from India—a species which we illustrated last year; an example of the Anaconda, the largest serpent of South America; an example of the Fer de Lance, from St. Lucia, presented by Lieut. Tyler, R.E; and a beautiful specimen of the boa called Tête de Chien, from the same Island, presented by Lieut. Cave

The Reptile-House, and the other buildings which have been recently erected, afford a Winter Exhibition of very considerable extent, which the visitor may now enjoy without exposure to either wet or cold, and supply what we have always hitherto felt to have been a great desideratum in the Establishment.

THE IGUANA, IN THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, REGENT'S-PARK.

NEW PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, BIRMINGHAM.

THE first stone of this structure, erected in Broad-street, in connexion with the Synod of the Presbyterian Church in England, was laid, July 24, 1848, by Mr. Cowan, M.P. for the city of Edinburgh.

NEW PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, BIRMINGHAM.

The design of the new edifice (by Mr. Botham, of Birmingham) is in the Italian style. The plan is a parallelogram; its external dimension, ninety-nine feet long, and forty-seven wide. The end next Broad-street, which is the principal front, is occupied by a tower, vestibules, and staircases; and the opposite end, by a deep arched recess for the minister's platform, with a vestry on one side of it, and a vestibule to the entrance in the flank of the building, next Oozell's-street, on the other side. The Church will accommodate 900 persons. It is lighted entirely from the roof. The ceiling, which is connected with the walls by a cove, is divided into thirty-five panelled open compartments, each filled with obscured glass, through which the light passes from the skylights in the roof to the body of the Church.

The interior is finished in a plain, but not inelegant style. It is fitted with benches, having enclosed backs and ornamental ends, instead of pews. The exterior of the church, which, as will be gathered from the foregoing particulars, will have two elevations, is faced with glazed grey bricks and stone dressings, and rusticated quoins at the angles. The tower is 110 feet high, and is composed of four stages, or stories, one of which will have a clock. The roof to the tower is of a bell dome form, with deeply projecting eaves, supported by cast-pillars, covered with lead, relieved by rolls and mouldings, and crowned by a copper-gilt ornament. The flank elevation of the church is composed of two stories, divided by a double string-course, and has a bold dentil cornice, with a coped parapet, which is also continued along the principal front. The walls are relieved by recessed niches.

The church was opened on the 19th of September last. The Rev. Dr. Cooke, of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland; Drs. Beaumont and Dixon, of the Wesleyan denomination; Rev. J. A. James, Birmingham, and Rev. A. Gordon, Walsall, Independent ministers; Rev. R. Macdonald, of the Free Church of Scotland; and the Rev. J. R. Hamilton, of London, aided the Rev. J. R. Mackenzie pastor of the church, in the opening services.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON, PAST AND PRESENT.

BY THOMAS MILLER.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OLD MODEL LONDON LODGING-HOUSES.

AN author, during his early career, is compelled to become acquainted with the "ins and outs," and "ways and means" of London Lodging-Houses; and, as his occupation keeps him more within doors than those who hold situations, or are otherwise engaged, he is, to use a more expressive than elegant phrase, "Up to their moves and down to their dodges." We have in our day known more than one gentleman who kept his own gridiron, and brought home his rump-steak—taught by experience that half-a-pound of his own cooking was equal to a pound after it had been entrusted to the Cinderella or the Cerberus of the kitchen. We have known whiskey in such places (which overnight was above proof) become so weak in a single day during our absence, as never to require water; and have seen a shoulder of lamb, which, after our frugal dinner, was carried away with a gap in it scarcely wide enough to admit of our two fingers, return at supper-time with a hole in the middle big enough to shake hands through, without touching anything on either side except the knuckle, or the edge of the bare blade-bone. It was wonderful how often the cat got to our meat, and what trouble our landlady had been at, according to her account, to cut off the portions puss had mangled, before it was again fit to appear on the table. Cruel woman! she was always beating the cat whenever we had a cold joint. As for our tea-caddy we tried half-a-dozen various kinds of locks, but they were picked as easy as a gaping green countryman's pocket at a Lord Mayor's Show, until we got Chubb's Patent; then the caddy and tea went altogether, and Cinderella said her mistress had had a strange sweep, and that sweeps were always sure to carry something or another away in the soot. The next day we found a sixpenny tin tea-caddy in our cupboard, so took the hint, and never sent out for more than two ounces at a time; and the landlady seemed to settle down satisfied with little more than half of it, so we had it "fresh and fresh" every day. We found that a twopenny French roll went as far as a half-quartern loaf, as we were never allowed to look a second time upon the remains of either. They charged us for cream, and gave us milk-and-water—but perhaps this was done out of a tender regard for our health. How broth was made in these old Model Lodging-Houses, we never could clearly comprehend; but the landlady had an herbalist book, and we believe made out her bill from the index—beginning at agrimony, and ending at yarrow-root. A bottle of wine, when decanted in the kitchen, cost about eighteen-pence a glass; walnuts, a penny each: filberts came up so ripe, that we found one in a cluster where four or five had originally nestled together; lobsters always lost their claws down-stairs, and very often came up with one side of the shell empty. Bottled stout was always going off in the cellar, and they showed us the corks which had been blown out—indeed, in these matters they were rather particular. They were dreadfully troubled with blue-bottles in summer, and the largest joint would not keep beyond a day.

The game you brought home yourself was never sweet; what the landlady purchased for you was always good. Many cheap game-hawkers came to the door; and sometimes the landlady was dining off a fine pheasant, while your own was thrown into the dust-bin.

The whole household were troubled with bad memories, and were always making mistakes. If you laid out a pair of trousers or a coat to be repaired, you found sixpence or ninepence on the mantel-piece a morning or two after, which was all the old-clothesman would give for them. Then they were so very sorry, but that stupid girl was always making some mistake or another, and the landlady would call on the tailor herself another time. There were no Queen's heads in those days; and when we sent the money to pre-pay a letter, they invariably forgot to stamp "paid" on it at the Post-Office, though the girl knew to an inch where she had put down the money at the time, and could remember everything that was on the counter; and sometimes she said she had put the money in the scale, and was sure it could not have rolled off and fallen on the floor. Butter in these houses was very solid: it was wonderful what a thin slice you had for half a pound, though the Cinderella of the establishment swore that she saw it bump the scale down. Your linen wore out very fast, and, after the buttons began to come off, was never fit to be sent to the laundress again. Your stockings stood darning twice; pocket-handkerchiefs and light gloves the landlady was kind enough to purchase for you every week. Your brushes, hairbrushes, combs, &c. were, of course, common property. They sent you up the newspaper about five minutes before the boy called for it, providing everybody below had done with it.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON.—THE LODGING-HOUSE.

In some of these houses everything about you is cold, hard, bright, and uncomfortably clean, as if always ready to be let—"got up," as it were, to strike every new-comer. If you drop a crumb on the carpet it is picked up before your face, by way of a gentle hint; a stain of ink on the table-cover you would never hear the last of. Some mysterious kind of white cabbage-net work covers the back of the easy chair, and lies grinning at you, full of holes, all over the sofa: you see nothing but knots, and would as soon think of finding ease were you to lie down on a stone floor strewn with bullets as on that hard white bolster. Your bed is covered with a counterpane of honeycomb quilting, nothing for comfort. The mantelpiece is covered with articles which are neither ornamental nor useful: shells, four a shilling; a couple of white delf candlesticks; two old hand-screens, picked up dirt-cheap at an auction; in the centre three ugly-shaped earthenware articles, red, blue, and gilt-garnished, looking about a dozen spills each, which are never used—you are sick of seeing them reflected in the long mirror which was bought a bargain. If you have a handful of fire in the cold glittering grate on a bitter winter night, it makes you cold to look at it: the poker looks so bright and chilling, you are afraid to touch it; and if a piece of coal falls out they come in to see if you called, for they are always listening. Sometimes you shove your boot too into the fire in utter desperation, or walk up and down the room, and storm heartily for exercise. You feel as if you would like to kick the couple of cursed carpet-covered hassocks about to warm you, and put by knocking down the fire-irons, to break the homeless silence. Never, in such places, on any account, begin to sharpen your razors near midnight, for the Evil One seems ever to be lurking in the gloomy corners of such cheerless houses, and there is no knowing what thoughts he might put into your head.

These are the class of houses in which you see neat bills in the windows, announcing "Respectable Apartments for Single Gentlemen." They never admit children into these old, keen, money-making Lodging-Houses: the echoes of those houses are never broken by childish laughter, nor those creaking floors soaken by merry romps; they like your shy, silent, bashful man, who submits quietly to every imposition, for they care not what he thinks, so long as he complains not openly.

In some streets you find Lodging-Houses inhabited by three distinct classes, who are as much separated from each other as if they lived fifty miles apart. The poor inhabitant in the attic may be dying while the first-floor lodger is entertaining a party of friends; and, although they have both dwelt under the same roof for years, it is likely enough that not a single word was ever exchanged between them.

The lodger who occupies the first floor seldom condescends to speak to the "common people" who live in the garrets, for there is almost as much difference in their habits as there is between the aristocracy and the quiet plodding citizen. He who occupies the attic is very probably a honest hard-handed mechanic, who comes home to his dinner regularly at two-five o'clock, gives one loud single knock at the door, and is admitted by his poor, but clean looking wife; he wipes his feet carefully before going up stairs—first and second-floor doors never by any possible chance open in the meantime. The second floor is a man with a bold double-knock, something between a bum bailiff's, a postman's, and a tax-gatherer's: he dines at one or two, and is on nodding terms with first-floor; he persevered for months with trying on a "Fine morning, sir," and at last was made happy by a most surly "Very, sir." He prepares to step farther one day by saying something unpleasant about the "common people up-stairs." First-floor dines at three or four, if he is a clerk or holds some slight situation under Government, obtained, perhaps, through his father selling his vote at a country election: he gives a regular "ran-tan-tan tirra-lirra-tir-tir-tir," for he keeps a little draggle-tailed, dirty, poor parlour-maid, and answers to the general cognomen that is "our servant." The ground-floor people—that is, generally, the landlord and his family (if they do not live in the kitchen)—bow and smile at first-floor from the parlour window: he is such a respectable "gent," and pays so regular; has a gallon of spirits sent in at a time, and never disgraces the house by such beggarly things as half a-hundred of coals and two bundles of wood.

But the picture is not complete without the children. First-floor have their hair plaited behind (if they are girls), and the ends of these long tails are tied with either blue or pink ribbon; they also wear little trousers, frilled about the ankles like the lambing cocks, and strut about before the door like the above-named bird. Second-floor children are very tidy, as most of the washing is put out, and the mother can spare time to look after them; they are taught to "toady" to first-floor as soon as they have learned to talk; to call them "miss" or "master," and their father and mother "pa" and "ma."

Ground-floor children are the most interesting of the whole, while they look on the canting little creatures, whose every motion is watched by the eyes of the parents. Second-floor's children are always to blame if anything goes wrong, and the lick-spittle parents chide their children for the faults of the others, to keep in with first-floor. You have in those dear children a true picture of the humbug and hollow-heartedness of the insincere portion of mankind.

Meantime, third-floor are sitting on the top landing, eating dry bread, their hands and faces very dirty through playing with the coal-scuttle, while their poor, pale, industrious mother is busy washing. But they will be taken out for a walk somewhere on Sunday, and for one day in the week be the happiest party under that roof. We are sorry that this savage-looking picture is true to nature; but, on scanning it narrowly, there is not a single feature that we ought to soften down.

Happy are they who can find Lodging-Houses in London in which they can feel "at home." That there are thousands of these comfortable places, we entertain no doubt of; the worst of it is, young men are too fond of shifting about, and have not patience to wait until they become accustomed to the ways of these really respectable people. "Slow" has become a bad word of late; and they are generally empty-headed, think-much-of-themselves, "fast," frothy fellows, who use it. "Slow and sure" was an old saying, often quoted by our wise forefathers.

Considering how cheerless and comfortless many of these Lodging-Houses are, we cease to wonder at the number of taverns and coffee-houses we.ch abound in London, for we here see at least one cause why they are so much frequented. How lonely seems a place (except to a man whose studious habits require solitude), on a long winter night, where a young man has to sit five or six hours without having a living soul to speak to. He lights his lucifer-match, and, as the faint blue light slowly bursts into a flame, he looks round upon the voiceless solitude, and sighs. He sets a light to the sticks and coal which the charwoman or the dirty Cinderella placed in the grate, after they had arranged his bed-room in the morning, and for a time the crackling of the fire seems like pleasant companionship. Then the church clock tolls slowly and sadly, and he yawns while he thinks of the weary hours that have yet to pass away before bedtime. He makes his own tea—or, perchance, the little dirty servant, who has sixpence a week and her "wittels," brings it up: when he has finished, he rings the bell, the things are cleared away, and then he may hang himself if he pleases, quite certain that the deed would never be discovered until the morrow. Were he taken ill, and to ring the bell, the little servant would be sent to fetch a doctor, if the lodger had the wherewithal to pay; if not, they would advise him to go to one of the hospitals. If he required attendance, some old woman (fond of gin), who had perhaps been discharged from the hospitals for drunkenness, would be hired to nurse him, grumbling every time she entered the room, and declaring that she could not find a single thing she wanted in the house. Perhaps on the first day of his illness he would receive notice to quit the apartments at the end of the week: we have witnessed such conduct in a keen money-making London Lodging-house, in our day, and had much ado to prevent ourselves from throwing the mercenary wretch down-stairs who had given the helpless lodger warning to leave. In such houses as these there are always apartments to let, for very few stay a day longer than they are compelled.

We have here described the worst class of London Lodging-houses, such as are kept by unprincipled persons who have no other means of living except what they make by their apartments and by robbing their lodgers. A stranger cannot wholly avoid these man-traps; but, if he take our advice, he will stay at some decent coffee-house or tavern until he gets settled, and not venture into apartments, unless those who have them to let can be recommended by such acquaintance as he is pretty sure to meet with when he has once found employment. Poor people do not rob each other in this manner; it is that hungry class which "apes gentility"—who smile, and rob while they do smile."

There are thousands of places to be found in London where it is their study to make a lodger feel "at home;" where a man may sit and sun himself in the smiles of a warm domestic hearth, and, though a stranger, never know what it is to feel lonely. But these are not houses in which people live alone by letting lodgings, neither will you find more than one or two lodgers under such a roof. Changes, such as they foresaw not, compel them to add a few shillings a week to their income—for they have lived so many years in the same house that it would cost them miserable to leave it. A son is in a situation, or a daughter has got married, and they have no longer any use for the rooms these occupied; or the landlord cannot do so much work as he formerly did. These, and an hundred other causes, open the door to the most comfortable of all London lodgings, and fortunate is the stranger who finds a home in such a roof. Not that people would scorn to take away the value of a pin that was not their own; and the only discomfort you feel is in the fear that they do not charge enough to remunerate them for their kindness and attention.

Young men and "fast men!" if you are fortunate enough to dwell in such a home, where their circumstances will not allow of them to keep a servant, but where a modest daughter does the work for her attendance, respect her as you would a sister. Remember, also, that it is poverty which compels the servant to wait upon you, and that it is your duty to respect her for those services. Remember that

He prayeth best who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all.

COLERIDGE'S Ancient Mariner.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, November 25.—Twenty-fifth Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 26.—Michaelmas Term ends.
TUESDAY, 27.—Princess Mary Adelaide born, 1833.
WEDNESDAY, 28.—Day breaks 5h. 34m. Sun rises 7h. 40m., sets 3h. 55m.
THURSDAY, 29.—Length of day 8h. 10m. Sun rises 7h. 42m., sets 3h. 54m.
FRIDAY, 30. St. Andrew. Full Moon 2h. 35m. A.M.
SATURDAY, December 1.—Length of day 8h. 7m. Sun rises 7h. 46m., sets 3h. 52m.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 1, 1849.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
0 10	0 35	11 10	11 43	Title	Title	0 50	1 20	1 30	1 55	2 12	2 35	2 52	3 13

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. W. BATTY.—Immense Attraction. Double Equestrian and Gymnastic Company. Mr. BRIGGS being temporarily indisposed, will not appear every Evening. First Night of the National and highly popular Spectacle of the BATTLE of WATERLOO, revived in compliance with numerous requests at the Box-office, and to give due effect to which, an engagement has been entered into with Mr Edward Genereal, who will personate his original character of Napoleon Buonaparte. The Battle of Waterloo, and the Abdication of the Emperor: has been universally pronounced unequalled.—On MONDAY, NOV 26, the Performances will commence at a quarter to seven with the GRAND BATTLE of WATERLOO: Batty's unrivalled SCENES of the CIRCUS supported by the accomplished Artistes of this Establishment, and those celebrated Horses, Messrs Harry Keeble, Jackson, and Whaley. To conclude with MR. BRIGGS, or, THE PLEASURES of HOUSEKEEPING and HOUSEKEEPING.—Box-office open from 11 till 4.—Stage Manager, Mr W. West.

EXETER HALL.—ERNST and FORMES.—WEDNESDAY NEXT, NOV. 28th, will be held the SIXTH of the LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS, when HERR ERNST, and the Celebrated Vocalists HERR FORMES will appear, together with Mrs. Alexander Newton, Miss Eyles, Miss Isbecca Isaacs, and Miss Adelaide Newton, Mr. Lockey, Mr. Land, and Mr. Geo. Genge.
The Programme will commence with a Selection from Balfe's Opera "The Bohemian Girl," in which HERR FORMES will sing the Song "The Heart bowed down." Herr Formes will also sing "The Postman's Song." Ruskeu, "The Drinking Song," from "Der Freischutz," Weber; and Neukomm's popular Song "The Sea." The Sea!" HERR ERNST will perform a Nocturne and Rondo Piquante, for cello. Fantasia (by desire) on the Third and last time, "The Carnival of Venice," Ernst
Tickets, 7s; Balcony Seats, 5s; Stalls, 7s.; may be had of Mr. STAMMERS, 4, Exeter-hall; and of all Musicsellers

MISS DOLBY begs to announce that the SECOND of her SERIES of THREE SOIREES MUSICALES will take place at her Residence, 9, Rhodestreet, Marylebone, on TUESDAY, the 27th instant; to commence at eight o'clock precisely. Vocalists—Miss Rainforth, Miss Dolby, Mr. Bennett, and Mr. Sedlis, Instrumental Performers—Mr. W. S. Bennett, Mr. Lucazzi, Mr. Dando, Mr. Hill, Herr Lidel, and Herr Molique. Tickets, Half-a-Guinea each, to be obtained only of Miss DOLBY, at her Residence

LOVE'S POLYPHONIC ENTERTAINMENTS.—These celebrated ENTERTAINMENTS will take place on Monday, November 26, at the Townhall, Bexley; on Tuesday, Assembly-rooms, Dartford; on Wednesday, at the Guildhall, Rochester; on Thursday, November 29, at the Town-hall, Devizes; on Thursday, November 29, at the Assembly-rooms, Marlborough; on Friday, November 30, at the Town-hall, Worcester-square, Mare; on Saturday, December 1, at the Assembly-rooms, Ibbester; on Monday, December 3, at the Athenæum, Tiverton; on Tuesday, December 4, at the Assembly-rooms, Bridport; on Wednesday, December 5, at the Assembly-rooms, Crewkerne; on Thursday, December 6, at the Assembly-rooms, Blandford; on Friday, December 7, at the New Town-hall, Wimborne, and on Saturday, December 8, at the Town-hall, Romsey. Begin on each occasion at Eight precisely.

POSITIVELY THE LAST WEEK BUT ONE OF
THE MISSISSIPPI and MISSOURI RIVERS, exhibited, by command, to their Majesty the Queen, H. R. H. Prince Albert, and Royal Family, at Windsor Castle.—Now Views, showing the Western Banks of the Mississippi River, Towns, Villages, &c., to New Orleans. Exhibiting at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, every morning at half-past two, evening at half-past seven.—Admission, lower seats, 2s.; gallery, 1s

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—An Entirely NEW SET of DISSOLVING VIEWS ILLUSTRATING LONDON AS IT WAS AND AS IT IS, with a Descriptive Lecture, by Mr. J. H. Pepper, Four, and in the Evenings at a Quarter to Eight.—The LIGHTNING CALCULATOR, Daily at One o'Clock.—LECTURES on the CULTIVATION of the VOICE and on the ART of SINGING, by G. Cliffe, Esq., on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at a Quarter to Four, and on the same Evenings at Eight.—LECTURES on CHEMISTRY, by Mr. Ashley, and on EXPERIMENTAL HYDRODYNAMICS, by Mr. Bennett.—EXHIBITION of the CHROMATROPE. DIVERS and DIVING-BELL, &c. &c. Admission, 1s.; Schools, Half-price.

THE NILE, RE-OPENED with NEW TABLEAUX.—At the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadil y, the New and Splendid MOVING PANORAMA of the Nile, exhibiting the whole of the Stupendous Works of Antiquity now remaining on its banks between Cairo, the Second Cataract of Egypt, and the Second Cataract in Nubia. Painted by HENRY WARREN and JAMES FAHEY, from Drawings by JOSEPH RONOMI, made during a residence of many years in Egypt.—Afternoons, Three; Evenings, Eight o'Clock.—Stalls, 3s. 6d. 2s.; Gallery, 1s.

NOTICE.—SMITHFIELD CLUB PRIZE CATTLE SHOW, and EXHIBITION of SEEDS, ROOTS, IMPLEMENTS, &c., for 1849, COMMENCES on TUESDAY, instead of Wednesday, and CLOSES on FRIDAY Evening, instead of Saturday, as heretofore, 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th DECEMBER.—Bazaar, King-street, Portman-square.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"An Old Subscriber," Aberystwith.—The details were given in our late edition, and in the country edition of the 17th inst.
"W.," Truro.—Mr. Appel, late of Ipswich, now of 43, Gerrard-street, Soho, who introduced Anastatic Printing into England, will give you information respecting the invention.
"A. S."—Thanks, though we have not room for the translation.
"Rumsala."—Newcastle, should consult a Navy Agent.
"T. D. and J. R.," Plymouth.—"A Subscriber," Worthing; "Tyro;" "T. P.," Oakamoor; "H. J. W.," Hampton.—Declined.
"Economy."—Wales is proverbial for cheap living.
"W. H. T." Cooper-street.—Declined.
"A Poor Artist."—We cannot advise you.
"E.," Sandacre.—The intelligence did not reach us in time.
"Antiquarian" had better apply to the Secretary of the Society of Antiquaries, Somers's House
"Mnemonics," Liverpool, we had not before heard of.
"Nemo" should be "Sold," Paris; though the impertinence cost 10*d. postage.*
"J. A."—Fauvetia (French). Lannei.
"Roche."—Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within seven days of their date. The French stamps would be useless
"E. W."—The Chatelain is Mr. Chisholm, of Chisholm—a landed proprietor in Inverness-shire, and chief of the clan Chisholm.
"A Correspondent."—We cannot engrave the Selby meteor.
"R. G. C."—Apply to Messrs. Harrild and Son, Little Distaff-lane, City.
"Sou."—Does our Correspondent refer to the common heron, or heronshaw?
"E. L. S."—Two guineas and upwards, according to circumstances.
"A. C." Leeds.—We have received but one night at Her Majesty's Theatre.
"W. H.," Lincoln.—The charge will be 2s.
"J. D. A."—Mr. Scott Russell's address is Society of Arts, Adelphi.
"W. M."—Journeys.
"A. B. H."—The portraits cannot be had apart from our Journal.
"F. S." Hazel Hempstead.—Declined
"T. C. D." remarks that the otherwise correct account of the Sainte Chapelle, at Paris, in our Journal of Nov. 10, is inaccurate in stating the style to be Florid Gothic, it being extremely single, with lancet windows of the 12*th and* 13*th century.*
"M. M."—Her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta died at Clarence House.
"A. J. R. S."—We cannot inform you.
"S. C. A." Apply to Mr. Rogers, career, Carlisle-street, Soho.
"W. R." Liverpool.—A provincialism.
"Jane."—Jubilee is from יובל, a goat, a shout for joy; and signifies a term of public and solemn festivity, according to the ancient Hebrew custom, observed every 50th year.
"N. S. S."—Dandson's "Instruction Books," and Hamilton's "Works and Catechisms." The flute can be acquired at the beginning without a master.
"Enterprise."—Declined
"C. G." Brighton.—Mdlle Barbieri-Nina has been for the last seven or eight years a favourite prima donna in Italy. She is a very clever vocalist, although her organ has suffered from over-straining in the Verdi operas.
"C."—Any music publisher will give the required information.
"Llewellyn."—The arms of Hughes, of Gwerclas, county of Merioneth, the chief family of the name in that principality, are "Arg. a lion rampt. sa., armed and langued gu." Crest:—"A demi lion rampant sa., armed and langued gu." Motto:—"Kymmer-yn-Edernion."
"C. W."—Talbotype instructions, and other requisites, may be had of Knight's, Foster-lane, Cheapside.
"Bolton."—The price of an Ensign's commission is £450. The candidate must be under the age of twenty-two.
"A. Y. Z." Manchester.—The crest of the family in question is "A boar's head erased or, charged on the neck with a crosslet, gu."
"Louise Thompson."—The arrangements cannot be altered.
"A Bristol Subscriber."—The arms of Sir Frederick Cooper, Bart., are "Arg. a chev. gu. charged with another erm., between three laurel leaves proper vert." Crest:—"A hand holding two branches of laurel, meeting at the top proper." The name is Cooper.
"Augusta."—The title of Baronet descends to the eldest son; and if he die without male issue, then to the second son; and so on, until all the male descendants of the body of the original grantee become extinct.
"Gordon."—The late Duke had no child.
"Bozey," Todmorden.—Next week.
"L. P."—John Michel was not a great poet in Dublin in 1848.
"Lydia."—In "gravamen" the middle syllable is long.
"Irishwoman" may obtain a list of the governors, presentations, &c., by applying at the coachmaker-house of Christ's Hospital.
"Margaret," Halifax.—Gretna-Green marriages have not yet been repealed by Act of Parliament.
"Reade."—John Evelyn wrote a "History of Engraving."
"P. P. C." had better take the oil painting to a picture-cleaner.
"Mens." 1848.—The lines will not suit our columns.
"An Inquirer," Bangor, "and A Emigrant's Friend," Boston, should apply to Orr and Co., publishers, Strand.
"A Subscriber."—If the sum has not been applied for during the twelve years that have elapsed, it cannot be recovered.
"A. S. H.," Barnet—Very probably.
"R. H. P.," Loughborough.—We are not in the secret.
"Jason," Carmarthen.—We have so many demands of the kind named by our Correspondent, that we cannot promise compliance with any suggestions
"Numisma," Newcastle.—Apply with your coins to Mr. Webster, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent-garden.
"Brutus."—The splendid West of Rome, already announced, will form the frontispiece to the present volume of our Journal.
"R. L." Poole.—The runaway apprentice is punishable by law.
"H. S." Athenæum Club.—The arrangements are not yet sufficiently forward.
"Tyro," Liverpool.—We cannot aid you.
"A Correspondent."—The late Charles Matheus.
"H. S." Bath, should apply to the proprietor or manager of a theatre.
"A."—A descriptive treatise on Glyphiography was published by Mr. Palmer, the inventor, in 1843: apply respecting it at No. 79, Shoe-lane.
"T. W." Ban.—England.—The reply was to a grammatical question.
"K. S." Guern sey.—as thanked; but we cannot engrave the subject.
"Devon Cous ans Heyfers" we have not room for.
"R. L." Halifax.—Surenne's "Pronouncing French Dictionary," and Hamel's "French Grammar."
"H. S. W."—The petition through the Home Secretary of State.
"Coldshon, Cornwall.—The removal would not be illegal.
"T. P." Ely.—See the paper on Coals in the "Companion to the Almanac for 1850," not published.
"J. T.," Stafford.—The Ordnance maps are sold by Mr. Wyld, Charing-cross
"Thanks" should apply to the editor of a magazine: the chance is very slight.
"G. H. K.," Tadcaster.—Apply to a perfumer.
"H. H.," Carmarthen.—The condensed trial has appeared in our Journal.
"A. P."—There are so many females of Vaughan, bearing different names, that we cannot tell which our Correspondent requires. He must give the local designation. See the "General Armory" for the old Welsh crests.
"E. S."—The Committee of Privileges in the House of Lords came to a decision hostile to the claim of James Tracy, the pensioner.
"Geo."—The Prince of Wales is not Duke of Lancaster.
"Rusticus"—The "Gentleman's Magazine" has not noticed the statement sent, entitled to the quarterings of the B. family. He did not descend from that house, and could not consequently have a right to their heraldic honours. No lady can bear a crest, a mantle, &c. in England, no length of usage is deemed sufficient to validate a coat of arms
"H."—*The qualification for a Justice of the Peace is £*100 a year freehold.
"A Devonian" states that a family of Quarmes has been settled at Kingsbridge, in Devon, for many years, but is not aware of their being descended from the Quarmes of Cornwall
"R. H. S."—The devices submitted not being heraldic, would not subject the bearer to the penalties mentioned hearwise.
"J. H. W."—Your coin is a penny of Edward IV., 1461 1463, struck at York, very poor, and of no value.
"H. L. Dreyton.—The impression received is from a half-crown of Wilham III., which, being so badly preserved, should be thrown into the crucible.
"W. A. E."—Declined.
"A Subscriber of many Years." The two exceptions mentioned in your letter are important, but not sufficient to account for the present state of Ireland.
"C. H. S.," Lincoln.—Apply to Mr. Lumley, bookseller, Chancery-lane.
"Travelator," Liverpool.—Lardner's and Bell's treatises.
"Tom Pott," Aldbury.—Address "care of Messrs. Chapman and Hall, Strand."
"Tyro," Manchester.—Some of the editions of the Spectator contain a list of the original of the various characters.
"J. B.," Dublin.—See the Almanacks for 1850, for the new postal arrangements.
"W. F.," Liverpool.—Certainly not.
"Edensnit" is thanked; but we have not room for the lines.
"A Constant Reader," Worwich.—A guide to draughts may be had for 1*s.*
"C. V.," Alteratone.—The title is, certainly, not a good one, and should be changed.
"E. A.," Guildford, is thanked, though his suggestion is unavailable.
"Constant Reader," Dartmouth.—Verpena is the correct botanical name.
"Lisburn."—"A Constant Subscriber," Poole; and "Lines suggested."—Declined.
"M. W.," Hastings.—Kampilicon is a composition of ground cork and caoutchouc.
"A. L.," Malvern.—Carrowspace is literally clear-sightedness; as applied to some recent marvels, it appears to be "the art of seeing things invisible."
"A Subscriber from the First," Northampton.—The paper has not any preference.
"A Subscriber" to application to the parish.
"F. M. Y.," Woolwich.—The late Charles Horn composed the music of "Cherry Ripe," the words of which are by Herrick.
"Eldon."—The custom of children wearing coral, in all probability, originated in the ancient superstition which considered coral an amulet, or defensive against fascination; though the coral may be useful to rub the gums
"P. P.," Newcastle.—The interest of a Parliament may serve you; the favour of one of the Lords of the Admiralty would be better.
"H. M.," Dover.—A varnish for fixing pencil-drawings is sold by fancy stationers.
"E. B. Sydenham.—See "Companion to the Ball-room."
"J. H.," Barbro'.—The impression is from a copper coin of Louis Mocenigo, 11 Doge of Venice, 1702 9: of no value.
"Professor S.," Altona.—Enquiry shall be made concerning the overcharge for postage, and the promised works dispatched immediately through the appointed channel.
"Alcibiades." Under consideration.
"R. M. M." Brighton.—Apply by letter to the secretary of the association.
"Harry."—Apply at the Horse Guards.
"Zyrra," Edgbaston.—The arms of Mather, of Liverpool, appear, fully detailed, in the St. James's Magazine for November.

ERRATUM.—The Nelson Picture, engraved at page 316, is painted by R. Westall, R.A., and not by B. West, as stated above. "H. A. C." and "E. J. S." are thanked for the correction.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Raphael's Prophetic Messenger.——Chamier's Review of the French Revolution.——Rudimentary Dictionary of Terms.——Repentance and Prayer, by the Rev. W. B. Hawkins.——The Mother Country, by Sidney Smith.——Davidson's Comprehensive Pocket Bible.——Literary and Scientific Register and Almanack.——Bogus's Pocket Diary.——Newman, on the National Debt.——The Uncle's Legacy (3 vols.).
MUSIC.—The Sister Isle.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1849.

THE Overland Mail of the 2nd of July last conveyed intelligence to this country of a nature to give reason for the belief that the leniency shown to the Sikh chieftains had been misplaced, and that Gholab Sin,h was engaged in schemes with Shere Singh, Chuttur Singh, and others, of which the object was another attempt to overthrow the British power in India. The Mail of the 29th July represented these rumours to be exaggerated as to all the Sikh chieftains of note, and to be utterly groundless as regarded Gholab Singh. Since that time little or no notice has been taken of the matter in this country. The last Mail, which left Bombay on the 17th ult., proves, however, that the original statement was, in a great degree, correct, and that the Indian Government in reality committed a mistake in allowing Chuttur Singh and Sheer Singh, the leaders of the late formidable rebellion, to remain at large in their villages under a merely verbal promise that they would conduct themselves as loyal subjects. Their signal and total defeat by Lord Gough does not appear to have convinced these fanatics of the utter hopeless ness of their cause. In conjunction with other Sikhs, they planned a great demonstration for a stated day in October, which was to break out simultaneously at Attaree, their own head-quarters, at ten kos from Lahore; at the residence of Lal Singh, and others, near Umritsir; and at the residence of the Dewan Hakeem Rae, at Seealkol.

The Government was duly informed of their proceedings, and kept a strict watch over them. On the morning of the 1st ult., three expeditions left Lahore for the purpose of seizing the sever l conspirators. The Mail brings intelligence of the complete success of two of them; but left before any advices had been received from the officer in charge of the third. Mr. J. Lawrence, with Mr. R. Montgomery, the Commissioner of the Doab, the gallant Major Edwardes, and other officers, with a detachment of cavalry, quitted Lahore an hour after midnight, on the 1st of October, and arrived, before daybreak, at the village of Attaree—captured it without difficulty —and, in the midst of the surprise occasioned by the suddenness of the movement, captured the wily old chieftain, Chuttur Singh, and his four sons, Sheer Singh, Goolab Singh, Attor Singh, and Shj Singh, and carried them safely to Lahore, where they are now imprisoned. The conspirators at Urmitsir, including Lal Singh, and two other Chiefs of equal importance among the Sikhs, were seized with as little trouble, at the same time, by a body of troops under the command of Mr. C. B. Saunders, the Deputy-Commissioner, and committed, in like manner, to safe custody at Lahore. The next Mail will, doubtless, inform us of the success of the third movement. The authorities deserve the highest credit for the result of their measures, which may have prevented another war in the Punjaub. The country may safely anticipate that no further liberty will be granted to such doubly-convicted traitors as Chuttur Singh, his sons and confederates. Leniency to such men is cruelty to thousands whom they lead astray; and the Indian Government will not need any further warning, to mete out to them the full measure of justice.

It appears that even the golden glories of California are to be equalled, if not surpassed, and that a new Dorado has been discovered, which already swarms with adventurers. The latest accounts from Bolivia represent this golden district to be among the Andes, at seven days' journey from the city of La Paz, in Bolivia. The discovery of the treasure was made by an Indian who was travelling with bark upon his back. Happening to rest at a small stream, he observed a little piece of gold. He afterwards scraped up 14 pounds weight in the course of a few hours. The Governor of the district being informed of the occurrence, arrived at La Paz to consult with the Government as to the measures to be adopted for working the mines, and applications poured in from hundreds of people for licenses of plots of ground, according to the usual mining laws of the country. In the course of a few weeks nearly 9000 persons left La Paz for the scene of operations. This is not the first time that these regions have acquired a renown of this kind. The famous Silver Mountain and mines of Potosi are in the same district; and it has been known for many years that gold and silver exist in great quantities through a large extent of this remarkable land. At Tarma, across the Andes, upwards of a hundred miles from the city of Lima, the Californian process of washing the earth impregnated by the auriferous streams has long been carried on, but the places has never acquired the world-wide celebrity of California. We doubt much whether the new Dorado, however rich it may prove, will attract such swarms as the new conquest of the United States. The Bolivians, and other populations of Spanish origin, lack the energy and perseverance of Brother Jonathan; or the unparalleled natural wealth of Peru, Bolivia, and all the Andean regions, would long ago have been made available for themselves and the world.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

Her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert have entertained a succession of distinguished visitors during the past week at Windsor Castle. The Duke of Wellington, the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, his Excellency the Prussian Minister, Viscount Canning, Sir Robert and Lady Peel and Miss Peel, the Right Hon. H. and Mrs. Labouchere, Sir David Dundas, and the Right Hon. Thomas Pemberton Leigh, have been among the Royal guests. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent has dined at the Royal table daily.

The Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household, attended divine service in the private chapel on Sunday morning. The Hon and Rev. G. Wellesley officiated.

His Royal Highness inspected the 1 xhibition of French Arts and Manufactures, in George-street, Hanover-square, on Monday, and from thence proceeded to the new Houses of Parliament. The Duke and Duchess of Beaufmont paid a visit to the Queen and Prince Albert in the morning, at Windsor Castle.

On Tuesday Sir David Dundas had an audience of the Queen, and submitted to her Majesty the proceedings of some courts-martial.

On Thursday her Majesty and the Prince Consort visited her Majesty the Queen Dowager at the Priory.

During the week the Queen and the Prince have taken their usual early walks together; her Majesty has driven out occasionally in Windsor Park. The Prince, accompanied by the noblemen and gentlemen staying at the Castle, has enjoyed the sport of shooting; and the Royal children have ridden out daily on their ponies and in carriages.

The Court were to leave Windsor yesterday (Friday) for the Isle of Wight.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

There has been no improvement in the condition of her Majesty the Queen Dowager during the past week. On Monday the following unsatisfactory bulletin was issued :—

"The Queen Dowager has passed a restless night. Her Majesty's strength has of late diminished. "The Priory, Nov 19.

"DAVID DAVIES, M.D
"RICHARD BRIGHT, M.D."

The bulletin on Thursday was as follows :—

"The Priory, Nov. 22.

"The Queen Dowager has had a good deal of sleep, and was very tranquil throughout the night, but there is no improvement in her Majesty's symptoms.

"DAVID DAVIES, M.D."

The Duke of Devonshire arrived at Chatsworth on Thursday, from Lismore Castle, his Grace's seat in Ireland.

The Marquis of Chandos came to town, from Wootton House, last week, and has since departed on a continental tour.

The Earl of Westmoreland leaves London in a few days for Paris, in which capital the noble Earl will make a brief sojourn previous to repairing to Berlin, to resume his diplomatic duties.

The Earl and Countess Fortescue have left town for Malta, where they intend to winter, for the benefit of his Lordship's health.

The Earl and Countess Delaware and Lady Arabella Sackville West left Upper Grosvenor-street on Saturday, for Paris, en route for Nice, where they intend to winter.

Viscount and Viscountess Ponsonby are expected to arrive in town early in the ensuing month, from the British embassy at Vienna.

Count Flahault has returned to his residence in Tilney-street, from Paris. The Countess (daroness Keith and Nairne) and the Hon. Miss. Fahault have arrived in London from her Ladyship's seat in Scotland.

His Excellency M. Drouyn de Lhuys, accompanied by his lady, left the French embassy, on Tuesday last, for Paris, on leave of absence

His Excellency Mr. Abbott Lawrence, the American Minister, has taken the Earl of Cadogan's mansion, in Piccadilly, for a term.

We are enabled to announce that the marriage of Mr. Francis Moratio Fitzroy, only son of Admiral Lord William Fitzroy, with the Hon. Gertrude Dundas combe, daughter of Lord Faversham, will take place on Tuesday next, at St. George's Church.

The Marchioness of Ely was safely delivered of a son and heir on Thursday last, in Halkin-street West.

COUNTRY NEWS.

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.—In compliance with a requisition signed by upwards of 500 "influential" inhabitants of Edinburgh, a meeting was held in the Music hall in that city on Monday night, to receive Lord Dudley Stuart, M.P.; Sir John Walmsley, M.P.; Messrs. Joseph Hume, M.P.; and George Thompson, M.P., who are at present in Scotland as a deputation from the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association, and who having at full length explained their views, the following resolution was unanimously agreed to :—

That the inhabitants of Edinburgh here assembled, believing as they do, that good and economical Government will only be secured by a large extension of franchise; a shortening of the duration of Parliament; protection to every man in the exercise of the franchise, and a more equal distribution of political power, through the medium of local and electoral districts, heartily sympathise in the object aimed at by the National Financial and Parliamentary Reform Association, and of the means used to effect those objects; and this meeting tenders its warmest thanks to the gentlemen of the deputation for their able exposition of the principles of that association up to the present moment.

THE FREEHOLD LAND MOVEMENT.—A special meeting of the members of the Freehold Land Society was held at Birmingham on Tuesday evening, for the purpose of carrying out the resolutions of the late conference respecting the formation of a freehold union—the establishment of a publication called the Freeholder, &c. The entire subjects underwent full discussion; and the members present formed themselves into council to effect the objects in view. On Wednesday morning, Mr. Taylor (the secretary) received a letter from Mr. Cobden, M.P., containing various suggestions of a practical character respecting the formation and conduct of the union, and enclosing £10 as an annual subscription. Since the meeting last week, the society has received a great accession of members.

THE YEOMANRY CAVALRY.—The Wolverhampton Chronicle reports that at the petty sessions, last week, Mr. Robert Seal, of the Dudley troop of the Worcestershire Yeomanry Cavalry, attended in support of a charge against Mr. Henry Knight, of refusing to deliver up certain accoutrements belonging to that troop, of which Mr. Knight had been a member. The articles were valued at £ 10s. 10d.—In double which sum, together with a fine of £10, the defendant was convicted. A similar charge was also made against Mr. Joseph Parrish, the accoutrements in which case were valued at £1 8s. 8d. Mr. Parrish was likewise convicted in double the value, with £10 fine. The amounts were ordered to be levied by distress.

NARROW ESCAPE OF BLENHEIM PALACE FROM FIRE.—His Grace the Duke of Marlborough and domestics were aroused from their beds early on the morning of Friday week, by a female servant, who, fancying that she smelt something burning, very providentially gave an alarm, when the smoke-bit at the back of the stables was discovered in flames. The fire-engines were quickly brought in hear, and with a good supply of water the fire was soon extinguished. Upon an examination of the bin the fire was discovered to have commenced nearly at the bottom, and it was found to have been occasioned by spontaneous combustion, caused by the gardener, who had very considerately placed the green grass, the produce of one of the lawns, which had just been mown, and which amounted to nearly a cart-load, into the bin, when the new dung from the stables, being placed there daily, caused it to ignite. The bin was near the windows of the day and straw lofts, and, but for the timely discovery, the most serious consequences would have ensued, for, had the flames gained the ascendancy, the whole of that wing of the palace, including the chapel and library, would most likely have been destroyed.

AN UNDERGRADUATE ACCIDENTALLY DROWNED AT CAMBRIDGE.—On Saturday an inquest was held at Newnham, before Mr. D. King, coroner for the borough of Cambridge, on the body of Mr. William Gunning, son of the Rev. William Gunning, Prebendary of Wells and Vicar of Stowey, who was accidentally drowned the same afternoon in the Cam. From the evidence it appeared that the deceased engaged a "funny" in the Cam. The punt was rowing short distances up the stream, between a place known as Hawes's Island, and to a point where there is a chain passed across the river to prevent persons trespassing on the water the property of the late Colonel Pemberton. On the last of these courses it is presumed the boat came athwart the chain and capsized, when the deceased was immersed in ten feet water. An immediate alarm having been given, consequent upon his cries for assistance, he was shortly recovered, but on being conveyed to the shore, where the usual means of resuscitation were employed, life was found to be extinct. Verdict, "Drowned by the upsetting of a boat."

MELANCHOLY CATASTROPHE.—About three o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday last, a terrific explosion of combustibles took place on the premises of Mr. W. Armitage, chemist and druggist, of the Market Place, Penrith (Cumberland). About two years ago, that gentleman invented an explosive signal, for the purpose of indicating any danger that might arise on a railway line, and having received orders of late from several companies for a considerable number, was engaged on the present occasion in the manufacture of them, in a warehouse immediately over the kitchen, which stood detached a few feet from his dwelling-house; and Mr. Armitage, his father, Mr. Thomas D. Armitage, a young man named Stephen Evans (the son of a farmer), and they' sons Evans, his sister, were employed. In the kitchen below were Eliza Wilson, Mr. Armitage's housekeeper, and a servant. When Mr. W. Armitage entered, and opened the door of an iron safe, to take out some paste of a combustible nature, of which the signals are made, and which had been placed there to bake or dry, from some cause or other it exploded with a terrific report, igniting the contents of the warehouse above, reducing the whole building to a heap of ruins, and burying the above-named persons under the burning mass, with the exception of the servant maid, Roberts, who miraculously escaped through a window. Such a little boy of Mr. Armitage's in her arms, and sustained little injury except from fright. The fire was quickly extinguished, and operations commenced for the extrication of the sufferers. The first who was got out was Eliza Wilson, who, besides bruises, also had her legs being so much crushed and her body having sustained so much injury from burns and bruises, that she gradually sank and died about three hours afterwards. The youth Evans was then taken out, and although he was very short time. The other three—Mr. Armitage, his father, and the girl Evans—were quickly and successively extricated, but were quite dead. All the poor sufferers presented a most horrible spectacle, being charred by the fire and mutilated by the fall of the building, almost beyond possibility of recognition, except from their dress, or that portion of it which remained unburned.

THE BRITANNIA BRIDGE.—We learn from Liverpool that a serious accident occurred on Tuesday to one of the cylinders in the course of the day the supports gave way, and the cylinder was precipitated to the bottom of the Channel, and two men were killed and many wounded.

THE TRIAL OF COURVOISIER AND MR. CHARLES PHILLIPS.—Some imputations on the professional character of Mr. Charles Phillips, in the conduct of Courvoisier's defence, when tried for the murder of William Russell some nine years ago, having been recently revived in a weekly contemporary, that gentleman has, in a long and indignant letter (published in the Times of Tuesday) to a friend, Mr. Serjeant Wrangham, effectually refuted the calumny, and done full justice to his own reputation. Addressing Mr. Warren, who had urged him to the explanation, he says:—"Your true kind letter induces me to break the continuous silence with which for nine years I have treated such accusations to which you allude. I am the more induced to this by the representations of some valued friends, that many honourable minds begin to believe the slander, because of its repetition without receiving a contradiction. It is no disgrace to a barrister, however, that, even thus solicited, I stoop to notice inventions too abominable, I had hoped, for any honest man to have believed." The learned gentleman then proceeds to lay down and refute seriatim the charges which constitute the imputation against him. It consisted, first, in the asserted retention of Courvoisier's brief, and the continuance of the defence after the criminal had confessed his guilt. This Mr. Phillips dismisses very shortly, by a simple reference to the rule of professional duty, recognised by the whole bar of his profession, and on this occasion specially confirmed by the dictum of Baron Parke, who, when consulted on the instant, declared that, as the prisoner insisted upon the defence being continued, his counsel had no alternative. The next point in the accusation is, that in the course of the defence, and after the confession had been received, Mr. Phillips "appealed to Heaven as to his belief in Courvoisier's innocence." This is met by a denial which, having regard to the weakness of the only evidence adduced in support of the accusation, closes the question for ever in Mr. Phillips's favour. He says:—"The trial terminated on Saturday evening. On Sunday, in a London newspaper the passage imputed to me. I took the paper to court on Monday, and, in the Aldermen's room, before all assembled, after reading the paragraph aloud, I thus addressed the Judges: 'I take the very first opportunity which offers, my Lords, of most respectfully inquiring of you whether I ever used any such expression?' 'You certainly did not, Phillips,' was the reply of the late lamented Lord Chief Justice, 'and I will be your voucher to that effect to the last hour.' 'And I,' said Mr. Baron Parke, happily still spared to us, 'had a reason which the Lord Chief Justice did not know for watching you narrowly, and he will remember me saying to him, when you sat down, "Depend upon it, did you observe how carefully Phillips abstained from giving any personal opinion in the case?" To this the learned Chief Justice instantly assented.' Lastly, it has been said that Mr. Phillips, knowing the guilty client silent, endeavoured to throw upon the female witness the odium of that innocence he was by the same means, equally well assured of. To this, also, a complete answer is given. The trial occupied three days: Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. The confession was known to him (for the first time) we said on Friday morning. Mr. Phillips had but two opportunities of doing that with which he is charged; the cross-examination of witnesses for the prosecution, and his address to the jury. The former took place on Thursday, before the confession: and so nothing that occurred then can be adduced in support of the charge. And as to the latter (his address to the Jury), Mr. Phillips denies the imputation—reiterates the statement of his having consulted Baron Parke as to the proper effect of the confession, and reminds us that that respected Judge was upon the bench when his address was delivered; and, finally, appeals to the columns of the Times, the Chronicle, the Herald, and the Post, as not only containing no such expressions as those asserted to have been used, but also as, one and all, reporting an express disavowal, by Mr. Phillips, of any design, on his part, to impute guilt to the fellow-servants of the prisoner.

POSTSCRIPT.

A deputation from the Lambeth Anti-Cholera and Dwellings Improvement Committee waited on Viscount Errington on Thursday, by appointment, at the office of the Poor Law Commissions, Somerset House, for the purpose of soliciting his Lordship's countenance, inspection, and advice as to their sanitory operations in that vast parish. The noble Viscount having entered fully into the various subjects connected with the movement, to which he gave his unqualified approbation, appointed to meet the gentlemen of the deputation in Church-street, Lambe h, at half-past eleven A M, on Wednesday next, for the purpose of inspecting the system of street, court, and alley cleansing lately adopted by the committee

CHELSEA HOSPITAL.—It has been decided by the Commander-in-Chief that Sir Colin Halkett is to be Governor, and Sir Andrew Barnard to be Deputy-Governor, of Chelsea Hospital.

Mr. Pine, who has been for nearly two years Acting Governor of Sierra Leone, during the absence of Mr. Macdonald, the Governor, is appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Natal. He was Queen's Advocate in August, 1841.

ATTEMPTED MURDER AND ROBBERY.—A desperate attempt to rob and murder Mr. Davis, a member of Tattersall's, was made in Cromer-street, Brunswick-square, shortly after one o'clock on Thursday morning. One of a gang of three ruffians, it appears, approached from behind, and, seizing him by the throat, bade him as in a vice, while a second struck him on the head with a life-preserver three or four times, and killed him to the ground; he then commenced searching his pockets, but, before he could succeed in his object, the third, who had been on the look-out, gave the alarm, and they decamped, leaving their victim almost choked, and bleeding profusely from the wounds on his head. Mr. Davies, badly as he was hurt, immediately gave chase, but, as no policeman was to be met with for some minutes, the villains effected their escape. A reward of £100 has been offered for the conviction of the party who inflicted the wounds.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The scenes of violence which took place in the Assembly on Wednesday have produced two duels, and a third was to follow. As soon as the sitting closed, arrangements were entered into for hostile meetings between M. Segur d'Aguesseau (whose explanation about the Municipal Guards had caused the uproar) and M. Bertholon, and also between M. Brives and M. Berard. The former gentlemen fought immediately with pistols, but no injury was done, except to the coat of M. Bertholon, which received his adversary's ball, and the affair terminated. The latter fought on Thursday morning, and, after an exchange of shots, the belligerents quitted the field without either being wounded. The cause of the duel in the latter case was, that M. Brives reproved M. Berard for having pointed out to M. Dupin the persons he looked on as causing disorder. M. Berard replied that he only did his duty as Secretary of the Chamber, on which M. Brives retorted that, Secretary or no Secretary, he should not act as a spy or informer (mouchard). The third duel was to take place on Thursday evening, between M. Pierre Bonaparte and M. Rovigo, editor of the Corsaire.

The Republican journals are exceedingly indignant at the removal and dismissal of so many prefects, and complain that no Republican is now to be found occupying any station of importance.

M. Pierre Bonaparte has addressed an exculpatory address to the Minister of War, in which he seeks to justify his late conduct in leaving Algeria; and in the Assembly, on Thursday, he addressed some interpellations to the Minister of War concerning his dismissal, contending that he had fully discharged the duties of his mission before he left Africa for France, and that, being a representative, he was not compelled to remain longer with the army than he thought proper.

The Minister of War replied, denouncing the conduct of M. Pierre Bonaparte as contrary to military authority.

The Mountain party endeavoured to get up a scene similar to that of Wednesday, but the President speedily put an end to it, and the discussion soon terminated.

ITALIAN STATES.

The news from Piedmont is important. The Chamber has been suddenly, though not unexpectedly, prorogued by the King to the 20th inst. A dissolution of the Chamber is regarded as probable. The circumstances connected with this event occurred in the Chamber on the 16th inst., when M. Cadorna, an ex-Minister, moved that the debate on the treaty of peace entered into with Austria be suspended until a distinct law respecting outrages be agreed to in conformity with the honour of the state. The objector the motion was to pass a bul, granting civil and political rights to all Italian exiles. The Ministry opposed it most strenuously, but when the division was taken, they were left in a minority. The result caused the Government that they could not longer carry on public affairs with the Chamber as then constituted, and therefore, at the sitting of the 17th, the Minister of the Interior announced the resolution of the King to prorogue the Legislative Chamber.

IRELAND.

REORGANISATION OF THE YOUNG IRELAND AGITATION.

Mr. Duffy, of the Nation, and his adherents have again entered on the busy path of agitation. On Tuesday evening the "National Conference," which has been so much spoken of in the papers of late, was held at Dublin, in the Music Hall, Abbey-street, and the result of the formation of an association to be called "The Irish Alliance." Mr Feargus O'Connor was present, though regretted by the promoters of the movement to be absent.

The character of the association will be understood from the following resolution, which was unanimously agreed to :

Resolved—That legislative independence is the clear, eternal, and inalienable right of this country and that no settlement of the affairs of Ireland can be permanent until that right is conceded and established.

Mr. Corrie Connellan has resigned his office of Private Secretary to the Lord-Lieutenant.

In the Court of Queen's Bench, on Wednesday, an application was made for an absolute order to strike Mr. John Reynolds, M.P., off the burgess roll, the grant of which would, if complied with, be to deter that great man from serving the office of Lord Mayor, to which he had been elected. The Court only granted a conditional order, and the result is that the objection to Mr. Reynolds' name remaining on the roll cannot be discussed before the 1st of January, the first day of next term after he is installed as Lord Mayor.

The Grand Orange Lodge of Ireland met in Dublin on Tuesday, at Tommy's Hotel, Sackville-street. The proceedings were private. It is understood that the brethren were engaged in the consideration of Lord Clarendon's conduct in reference to their body.

POOR-LAW VALUATIONS.—The guardians of several unions are turning their attention to the reduction of the valuations, in proportion to the decline in prices The guardians of Macroom union have resolved upon a reduction of one third generally, previous to the striking of another rate.

The Poor-law Commissioners have dismissed the whole of the officers at the Carlow workhouse, in consequence of an investigation recently held into their conduct. A "rebellion" of 500 female paupers in the workhouse has been the consequence.

MOVEMENT AMONGST TENANT-FARMERS.—The movement commenced in the south is extending to the west. In the county of Roscommon there are still many extensive grazing farmers, who have suffered severely during the famine, and are now endeavouring to obtain a reduction of rent, as the only mode of enabling them to preserve the remnant of their property, and to remain upon the farms to which they are bound by lease. A circular has been issued, calling upon the tenant-farmers of a large district in that county to meet at dinner in the town of Castlerea, on Saturday (this day), for the purpose of taking into consideration "the position they are now placed in, from the great falling off in the price of all stock and agricultural produce."

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—The usual weekly meeting of the association was held on Monday, at Conciliation Hall. The attendance was exceedingly thin, and the proceedings of little interest. Mr. John O'Connell warned the members against the "Nation party," as he designated those who style themselves the "National Conference." The amount of subscriptions for the week was £29.

EVICTIONS IN ULSTER.—The Newry Telegraph has an account of the eviction of fifteen families in Milltown, in the vicinity of Lough Neagh. It is stated that the evicted parties were very poor, utterly unable to pay rent, or till the land; and that the estate from which they were ejected is in Chancery.

MELANCHOLY DEATH.—Mr. Thomas Deasy lost his life on Friday evening week, from accidentally falling (whilst inspecting the process of brewing) into one of the vats in the extensive brewing concern in Clonakilty, near Cork, of which he was the senior partner. His understanding prompt efforts to rescue him from his perilous position, owing to the great quantity of fluid with which the vat was filled, when extricated, life was found to be extinct. Every possible effort was made by Drs. O'Hea and Fiollott to restore animation, but in vain.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE.—Dr. Garrod has been appointed Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics at University College, vacant by the death of Dr. A. T. Thomson.

ROYAL DISPENSARY FOR DISEASES OF THE EAR.—The quarterly meeting of the institution (founded for the relief of indigent persons labouring under deafness and other diseases of the ear) was held on Wednesday, at the Dispensary, Dean-street, Soho-square Dr. Richards in the chair. The committee solicited the aid of the affluent for this useful charity, which was dependant on the voluntary subscriptions of the benevolent. The Dispensary, it is afforded relief to an increased number of applicants during the last quarter. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Harvey and to the chairman, and the meeting separated.

BROMPTON HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION.—On Thursday a very full meeting of the General Quarterly Board of Governors and Directors was held in the board-room; the Rev. Sir Henry Foulis, Bart., in the chair The most satisfactory report was made as to the progress of the chapel attached to the hospital. The report also stated that a legacy of £200 had been received from the executors of the late Miss Charlotta Christie, and also that the sum of £100 had been apportioned to the charity by Miss Rashout. As being part of some property left by the late Hon. Anne Rashout. It was also stated that since last August, there had been admitted to the wards of the hospital 103 patients. The report was received and adopted; and thanks having been cordially voted to the chairman, the meeting separated.

ICEBERGS OFF THE COAST OF LABRADOR.

ICEBERGS OFF THE COAST OF LABRADOR.

Not the least curious portion of the economy of Icebergs is the diversity of forms which they assume under varying circumstances. A Correspondent has favoured us with the accompanying Sketch of two Bergs, received from his relative, the Rev. Julian Moreton, Chaplain to the excellent Bishop of Newfoundland, whom he was accompanying to Labrador. They came in view as the vessel neared Battle Harbour. The Bishop and his Chaplain were the only passengers well enough to be on deck, there being at the time a heavy sea and very stiff head wind. One of the Bergs was sailing down to the south, slowly and majestically. It was, probably, more than 200 feet high, and was a very beautiful object.

Icebergs often fall to pieces in a moment, or turn completely over; a: there is only one-third of the mass seen above water. The distant specimen engraved was, at the first view of it, a low flat plain, of great length, with the head, as here shown, in the centre. "I began," says the Rev. Mr. Moreton, "to sketch the head first, of course, as the highest part; and, after a few seconds' hasty sketching, I looked up to my object, and found it suddenly changed by the two points at the extremity showing above water, the head having sunk almost level. The two points, at first, looked just like the upturned feet of a colossal figure. We went below for a quarter of an hour, and then returning on deck found only the toes remaining. The head and the other extremity shortly afterwards reappeared above water, at a considerable distance and were dashed to pieces on some reefs."

The Berg in front of the Sketch is still more striking in form.

SUPERB TAPESTRY PRESENTED BY LOUIS NAPOLEON TO THE ARMY AND NAVY CLUB.

GOBELIN TAPESTRY.

This superb production of the famed Gobelins manufactory was formerly in the possession of the Emperor Napoleon, as indicated by the Imperial insignia at the angles of the design. It subsequently came into the possession of his nephew, the President of the French Republic who has just presented the beautiful work to the Army and Navy Club. In size it is from 13 to 14 feet square. The subject is a sacrifice to Diana, highly artistic in composition; while the tapestry work, in tone and general effect, closely resembles an oil-painting, and is altogether worthy of the establishment of which the celebrated Lebrun was once director.

"Victoria Regia."—We are requested by Mr. G. E. Dennes honorary secretary to the Botanical Society of London, to state that the discovery of the Victoria regia, engraved in our Journal of Saturday last, was communicated to the above society in October, 1837, by Sir R. Schomburgk; and that the original drawing is in the possession of the society, having been presented by Sir R. Schomburgk, with the communication.

The Weather in Egypt.—The climate of Egypt at times furnishes convincing proof that there may be "too much of a good thing" even in matters appertaining to the weather. A correspondent writing at the close of the first week of the present month, says:—"After eight months of dust and sunshine, we think, in all fairness, we are entitled now to a shower; but it seems a vain hope. Alternate damp and dryness, heat and chill, impregnate the atmosphere, generating fevers and rheumatisms; yet still the change we look so anxiously for will not come. Our thermometrical range in the shade is still over 76 degrees, and necessity still forces the use of white costumes. What a contrast, doubtless, with England at this moment!"

Fatal Wreck.—The barque L'Europe, of Havre, has been lost, with the whole of the crew (except the second mate) and passengers, on the island of Guernsey. L'Europe was a vessel of nearly 400 tons burden, and was bound for Havre from Sagua la Grande, Cuba. She sailed on the 4th of October, and had a prosperous voyage till the morning of Thursday week, having safely passed the Lizard on the previous day with a fair wind from N.W. At two o'clock, when it was blowing a gale from the northward, accompanied by heavy showers of rain and hail, the master, reckoning that he had passed the Caskets, shaped his course for Barfleur Lighthouse; but, in an hour afterwards, land was seen on the larboard bow, and almost immediately rocks were perceived close at hand. An attempt was made to put the vessel about, but she missed stays, and in wearing ship much ground was lost. Two tacks were made to avoid the danger, which seemed imminent, and the best bower anchor was then let go very close to some rocks in proximity with the shore. The anchor, however, did not hold; and finally, about half-past five, the vessel was driven broadside on against a dangerous ridge of rocks a short distance below Hornet d'Albec, to the eastward of Vazon Bay, and shortly afterwards went to pieces. The second mate was the only one of the crew which gained the shore; all the rest perished, and a lady passenger and her two children. The bodies of the latter have been washed ashore with two of the crew, and were decently buried. Not a particle of her cargo was saved. The loss of the vessel and cargo is estimated at £5800. The Guernsey Comet states that the name of the lady passenger was Mdme. Dujardin, from Ghent, in Belgium, and the names of her children, Henry, aged about five, and Henrietta, three years. L'Europe was commanded by Captain Meheut, and she had a crew of nine men and a boy.

The Moon in Danger.—At a meeting, last week, of the Preston Improvement Commissioners (reported in the Chronicle of that town), Mr. German inquired "upon what principle the streets were lighted?" Mr Myers replied that "so soon as the sun was nine degrees below the horizon the lamps were lighted, and when he got twelve degrees above the horizon they were put out. That would answer very well," he said, "but the great difficulty was the moon. As to that lady, the following order had been made:—'On Sunday nights, and all other nights except moonlight nights, and then only during such hours as the moon shall be less than fifteen degrees below the horizon.'" Mr. German: "You had better throw the moon overboard. I believe she does no good." (Laughter.) Mr. Myers: "She is all at fault." (Laughter.) "On cloudy nights she gives no light at all." Mr. German moved that she be thrown overboard. (Laughter.) Seconded by Mr. Catterall. Carried unanimously. Moon thrown overboard—"man" and all.

F I N E A R T S.

THE RETURN FROM THE BEAR-HUNT.

THE TYROLESE BEAR-HUNTERS.

(From the German.)

THREE hunters went a-hunting
In wild-woods far away,
To chase the bear on mountain slopes
At dawning of the day.
They met dame Joris on the road,
Plump as a gourd was she,
And with her went her daughter bright,
The rose-red Margerie.

And it's whoop! oho! Hollo! alò!
The morn is shining fair
Whoop! Hollo! oy! and wish us joy
A-hunting of the bear.

"Get supper for us, Joris,
When we return to-night;
Good beer and wine, and crackling chine,
And a fire-side warm and bright.
Ere sets the sun, three hungry men
We'll seek your hostelry,
And Bruin dead in his old grey coat
Shall keep us company.

For it's whoop! oho! Hollo! alò!
The morn is shining fair.
Whoop! Hollo! oy! and wish us joy
A-hunting of the bear."

"I've got," quo' she, "a venison haunch,
A turkey served with brawn,
And foaming flagons of wine as good
As ever from cask was drawn.
And if you slay the shaggy bear
That prowls our forests through,
I'll share your meat, and help you drink,
And charge you ne'er a sous.

For it's whoop! oho! Hollo! alò!
The morn is shining fair.
Whoop! Hollo! oy! I wish you joy
A-hunting of the bear."

"What wilt thou give us, maiden?"
Said Reinhold, whispering low,
And clasped her by the yielding hand,
That nobody might know.
"I wish for something better than wine,
Better than golden fee,
A look, a smile, or a word of love,
My rose-red Margerie.

For it's whoop! oho! Hallo! alò!
The morn is shining fair.
Whoop! Hollo! oy! and wish me joy
A-hunting of the bear."

"I'll give," quo' she, "a squeezing hand
When nobody is by,
A whisper'd word, a favoring smile,
And a twinkle of the eye.
I'll give—but what have I to give,
Although I speak so free,
Unless it be a vow of truth
And the heart of Margerie?

For it's whoop! oho! Hollo! alò!
The morn is shining fair.
Whoop! Hollo! oy! 'tis ever joy
A-hunting of the bear."

They had their hunting on the hill,
And merry men were they,
And a beaten foe was Bruin the bold
At the closing of the day.
And Joris spread a regal feast,
The venison and the chine,
Turkey and brawn, and snow-white cheese,
And overflowing wine.

And 'twoss whoop! oho! Hollo! alò!
The wine-cup circles fair;
Whoop! hallo! oy! 'tis ever joy
A-hunting of the bear."

"We track'd his steps an hour ere noon—
'Twas up amid the snow;
And then we track'd him down again,
To the rocky gorge below.
And then our shots—one—two—and three—
Went whizzing in his side;
And the echoes raised a thunder tone
As he howl'd his last, and died!

And 'tis whoop! oho! Hollo! alò!
The wine-cup circles fair;
Whoop! Hollo! oy! 'tis ever joy
A-hunting of the bear!"

And Reinhold pledged the maiden
Again and yet again;
"I've woo'd thee, Margerie, many a month,
Oh, help me out of pain!"
"There, take my hand," said Margerie,
And wed me while you can,
But go no more a-hunting
When you're a married man.

For 'tis whoop! oho! Hollo! alò!
The bachelor may care,
But married men should stay at home
From the hunting of the bear!"—M.

MUSIC.

M. JULLIEN'S CONCERTS.

What was termed a "Beethoven Festival" took place on Tuesday night at Drury-lane Theatre, the whole of the music in the first part professedly gleaned from the works of the immortal composer. It was also insinuated that this festival was of a similar description to that glorious one which attended the inauguration of the statue of Beethoven in Bonn in 1845, an event duly recorded and illustrated at the time in the columns of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. It was stated in the bills that the scheme would "embrace some of the principal pieces performed at the celebrated Beethoven Festival at Cologne." This festival did not take place at Cologne, but at Bonn, and the only item in the Drury-lane programme to be found in the Bonn scheme was the C minor Symphony. M. Jullien should be more correct in his musical statistics. Another very important difference between M. Jullien's festival and that at Bonn must be explained. At the great German gathering there was the utmost reverence for the genius of the composer, and there was an artistical and conscientious execution of his works; whilst at the Drury-lane exhibition most unpardonable liberties were taken with the incipadrins of the mighty master-mind, and the interpretation, in many instances, was marked with coarseness and boisterousness. Will M. Jullien explain whether he found in the score of the C minor the parts for four ophicleides and a Saxophone, besides those of his favourite regiment of side-drums? The ordinary drums used at these concerts are woodeny, and the effect of many fine points is marred by this want of tone. Cleverly as M. Nadand has scored the sonata in F, it would have been preferable if Beethoven's work had been left in its primitive state. A fine Corregio requires no additional coloring. The practice of introducing detached movements from the Symphonies is in general objectionable, but it is not so offensive when the works of one composer form the items of an evening's programme; thus the Allegretto from the Eighth Symphony, and the Andante and Storm Allegro from the "Pastorale," were not unacceptable on Tuesday; but, when these movements are introduced between a Polka and a Waltz, nothing can be more repulsive. The marvellous execution by Saintou of De Beriot's "Il Tremolo"—a violin solo arranged from the celebrated "Kreutzer Sonata"—will not reconcile the true amateur to the impertinence of De Beriot in thus meddling with one of Beethoven's truest conceptions. Herr Konig's delicious singing of the "Adelaida", on the cornet-à-piston was a legitimate display, because the player confined himself to the exquisite imitation of the human voice in this incomparable ballad. The "Fidelio" overture commenced this odd selection, which, however, it is pleasant to record, was listened to from beginning to end with the greatest attention by the immense auditory filling the theatre, proving, whenever the time shall arrive (and it will come inevitably) that the grand instrumental productions of the classical composers shall be executed by an accomplished orchestra, with a first-rate conductor, at cheap prices, a large musical public will be found to patronize the undertaking. M. Jullien's speciality, it must be repeated, is dance, show, and comic descriptive music, such as his Army and Navy Quadrilles, and his newly-invented "Row" Polka, which last work peculiarly exhibits him in his own element. The "Row" Polka, to borrow M. Jullien's own analysis, is "on the follies of the day, introducing popular French comic airs:—1. Drin, Drin, and the March to California; 2. General Tom Thumb; 3. The Sea-Serpent; 4. Jenny Lind; 5. Lola Montes; Finale: The Sea-Serpent swallows up Lola Montes, Jenny Lind, Tom Thumb, and all the gold of California, and then, being nowhere to be found, is supposed to have swallowed himself." After this elegant extract from M. Jullien's explanation of his "Row Polka," perhaps it may be permitted for the intellectual amateurs to express a wish to hear the higher range of composition in another locality, as it would be as decorous to introduce between two of Handel's choruses in the "Messiah" the same "Row Polka," as to place it in the same bill with the works of Beethoven or Mendelssohn.

LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.

The second appearance of Ernst, at the fifth concert, on the 21st instant, attracted an immense auditory at Exeter Hall. He repeated his famed "Carnival of Venice" solo in the second part, introducing in the first his fantasia on Hungarian airs. In this last-mentioned composition, Ernst has soared so far into the regions of the impossible in execution, that it is no wonder his intonation should not always be found to be so certain as in his less flighty attempts. In the cantabile theme, his playing was perfection; but his abuse of daring harmonies—so liable to be out of tune from the slightest nervousness, or from the temperature affecting the instruments—was too conspicuous in the rondo. The furore he excited was proportions; and, in the combination of all the great qualities to constitute the first violinist of the age, he can bid defiance to any rivalry. The other solo player was Mr T. Harper, on the cornet.

The vocal portion of the scheme was almost without a redeeming point. Formes (who was the star) singing remarkably bad. Harold's "Zampa" overture was spiritedly played, but the cymbals were offensively out of time. If these Concerts are to preserve their popularity, some better vocalists must be engaged; such a massacre as the "Don Giovanni" selection is unpardonable.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—The Cork and Limerick journals are filled with long notices of the singing of Miss Hayes, at four concerts in those cities, last week. In the last-mentioned town, in which she was born, her reception was partial utarly fervent. The prices of the tickets rose to the penny Lind tariff. Her singing of the native melodies seems to have driven the audiences and critics out of their senses. It will require the exercise of Miss Hayes's good sense to re ist the intoxication of such a triumph, especially when the Cork Examiner foolishly places this undeniably charming vocalist as one "who may fearlessly sing by the side of a Grisi or a Lind."——On Tuesday last, Miss Catherine Hayes sang in Handel's "Messiah" at the Drill Hall, Limerick, Mr Stewart; and on Thursday, in Mendelssohn's "Athalia" and Romberg's "Song of the Bell," with Mr. Benedict as conductor.——The Dublin papers mention the return of Mr. Gustavus Geary, a young Irish tenor, who has been studying in Italy under Sigr or Rossi. He has, it is stated, a remarkably fine tenor voice.——Mr. Sims Reeves has been singing in Belfast. The local papers condemn his style as displaying, from its extreme polish, the forte, and not the piano sensible in his piano singing.——The seventh of the Monday Evening Glee Concerts was given on the 19th, at the Western Literary and Scientific Institution, Leicester-square. Mr. H. S. May conducted. The vocalists were—soprani, Miss F. Kemble and Miss Pitt; alti, Mr. J. T. Hill and Master Gould; tenors, Messrs. Howe and Williams; and bass, Messrs Lee and H. Jones: the soloists were Mr. H. Griesbach, violin; Mr. H. S May, piano; and Messrs A. Sedgwick and E. Barton, concertinas. In the first part a selection from Handel's serenata, "Acis and Galatea," was performed; and in the second, glees, catches, and songs, by Bishop, Webbe, Spofforth, C. Glover, F. Romer, Perring, &c.——Handel's "Messiah" will be given next Friday, at Exeter Hall, by the Sacred Harmonic Society, conducted by Costa; Misses Birch and Dolby, Messrs. Lawler and Sharman Cr wse principal singers.——On the eighth and last of the Holborn Vocal Concerts took place on Wednesday, at the National Hall.——Amongst the arrivals in London is that of M. Stephen Heller, the celebrated pianist. M. Heller, who is of German origin, is a resident of Paris, where he has distinguished himself not only as a pianist of the first rank, but also as a classical composer, whose works, from their peculiar grace and marked originality, have created some sensation.

PROVINCIAL CONCERTS.—Mr. John Parry gave his new entertainment, "The Lights and Shadows of Social Life," by Mr. Albert Smith, with marked success, on Tuesday night, at the Athenæum, Manchester.——The performances of the "Messiah," on Thursday evening, at the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, was very efficient. The band and chorus comprised nearly 200 performers, conducted by Benedict, with Seymour as first violin. Miss Catherine Hayes, Miss Poole, Mr. Bennett, and Mr. Phillips were the principal vocalists. The local critics strongly eulogise Miss Hayes's singing. On Thursday night Mendelssohn's "Athalia" was performed, with the above singers, and with the addition of Mr. Bradbid and Herr Damcke.——Mdme Dulcken, Mdlle. Schloss, M de Kontski, Herr Schönhoff, and Mr. Hausmann performed at a concert, at Warrington last Saturday.——Mr. Ellis Roberts, the celebrated Welsh harpist, has given two entertainments, on the music of Wales, at the Mechanics' Institution, Manchester, assisted by Miss Vaughan in the vocal illustrations.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS.

(Private Correspondence.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

The Government Standing Committee of things theatrical, after divers meetings, has resolved that the resignation tendered by M. Duponchel, one of the bosses of the Grand French Opera House, be accepted. This resolution is reported to the Minister of the Interior, who approves or disapproves the acts of the Committee of Theatres. Whether M. Roqueplan will remain sole director, or whether he will be associated with a colleague, is not yet known. The only opera which draws money is "The Prophète," whenever Duprez's masterpiece is given, the receipts are immense.

Madame Viardot's popularity is, if possible, on the increase. She is just coming out as a composer, having written the melodies of an "Album of Singing for 1850." Some of these melodies, which I have heard, are destined to make no little sensation, from their piquant originality.

The "Prop..te" appears destined to make the round of the world, for the following places are mentioned as mounting it:—New Orleans, New York, Stockholm, Berlin, Munich, Vienna, St. Petersburg, Odessa, Lisbon, Madrid, Barcelona, the Hague, Amsterdam, Dresden, Darmstadt, Breslau, Frankfort, Konigsberg, Hamburg, &c.

The tenor Luchesi is expected soon to make his début at the Italian Opera-House in Paris. Something is wanted there, and Ivanhoff, the last arrival, who are not satisfied to pay a high price for a very inferior entertainment. Moriani's voice is all but extinguished, and Flavio is an intolerably tiresome tenor. Madame Persiani, Mario, and Ronconi are the attractions to make a troupe, and Barbieri-Nini and Labloche are looked for with anxiety.

Alboni has been singing in French at Antwerp and Brussels, in Donizetti's "Favorita" and Halévy's "Reine de Chypre," Pauline Garcia and Mademoiselle Stoltz. Alboni's beautiful contralto voice is suffering from singing soprano parts. Halévy's "Fée aux Roses" has produced to the Opéra Comique £3400 in sixteen representations. Massol, the new tenor, appeared as a benefit at the Théâtre Historique, some airs from Halévy's "Charles the Sixth," with the greatest success. It is anticipated he will be re-engaged at the Grand Opera. We learn from Frankfort that Mdlle. Lind has arrived in that city. She declined to sing on the stage, but will appear in concerts. Liszt lately performed at a concert at Bremen, and was recalled four times. A series of "Mendelssohn soirées" has been commenced in Vienna by the Musical Society, the first of which took place on the anniversary of the composer's death, when the choruses from "Athalia" were executed.

THE THEATRES.

HAYMARKET.

The performance of "Othello" attracted a large audience on Monday, to witness Mr. Macready's final representation in the character of the Moor. Less pathetic than Mr. Phelps, less grandiloquent than Mr. Brooke, the Othello of Mr. Macready is more intellectual than either. He is fact, distinguished for the predominance of the intellectual. You see in it more of the long-wedded husband than the newly-made bridegroom—more respect to honour than to love. Othello is tempted into the commission of the crime, and then, in fact, judge in his own cause; and in the death of Desdemona intends her punishment, not her murder. The moral of the tragedy lies in this. It sets forth the inconvenience of any man being a judge in his own cause. Othello's self-interest blinds his judgment, and his impatience to be avenged conducts him too fast on the road to conviction. Hence the over-tempted Moor neglects property to sift the evidence, and gives us "no light as air" the weight of substantial proof. Justice can only live in a state of calmness from all personal bias; and Othello ultimately finds that in undertaking his own advocacy he had had a goal for his client. "O fool, fool, fool!" is the self-conscious exclamation with which the spectator sympathises in the last sadness, pitying while he condemns. Not to jealousy, but to this false social position, Othello falls a victim. Mr. Macready's Othello, too exclusively perhaps taking this view of the character, is a noble one rather than a touching one. In acting, it begets admiration rather than compassion. But it ought to be recollected that this interpretation of the character, however just, is but a partial one that this whole man was capable of the jealousy as well as of the noble sentiment of honour. Though not naturally disposed to suspicion, once the temptation thoroughly planted upon Othello, his entire soul is upheaved from its depths, and he rages in all the storm and whirlwind of conflicting passions. It is with great judgment that Mr. Macready defers this terrible display to the latest moment. His latter scenes are accordingly exhibitions of power such as have been seldom excelled. If not so intense and pitying as those of Edmund Kean, they are more energetic, and, in their general effect, scarcely less impressive. It only remains to add that Mr Wallack performed Iago with his usual discrimination; and Mr. Howe reasoned some appreciable Cassio. Miss Reynolds made a very pleasant Desdemona; her last scene was particularly successful. Mrs. Warner's Emilia was, as usual, vehement and startling. The play is placed on the stage with taste and care.

ADELPHI.

On Thursday evening, Mr. Sheridan Knowles's celebrated comedy of "The Hunchback" was revived here, for the purpose of giving Miss Glyn an opportunity of appearing for the first time, in the character of Julia. It will be recollected that this character was originally made by Mrs. Butler, whose performance, previous to that we are now recording, had never yet been equalled in the part, even by Miss Faucit. Associated as the character has been with the Kemble name, it is natural to identify Miss Glyn with its classic school, and to compare her assumption with that of its primitive representative. Nor will it suffer in any degree from the comparison. The comedy of Miss Glyn's early scenes is as perfect as the tragedy of her later; both are genuine, first-rate portraits, imitative not copied from nature, and painted by an artist of unrivalled power and well-cultivated taste. Miss Glyn must now be ranked with the highest histrionic professors—as a lady to whom nature has been bountiful in a fine person and the requisite physical attributes for the stage; and for whom a long-continued practice has given the advantage of ripened teaching, has done the utmost to make her an actress of proved proficiency. The character of Julia is one peculiarly fitted for her style and qualifications. The easy scenes give ample room for the exercise of her humour, her more sportive vein, while in the sublimity of passion, such as marks the last act, she is a thrower unpreparable. Never was the famous "Do it" speech delivered with more power and effect. It was perfectly appalling in its earnestness, intensity, and force. It cannot be long before Miss Glyn is universally acknowledged to be the modern Siddons or the English Rachel. We ourselves incline to the latter denomination, from certain characteristics of her style, which clearly belong to a foreign school. Miss Glyn bears, indeed, a closer resemblance to the great historic artistes of the Continent than to any actress at present on the English boards. It is this which gives grace, dignity, and intensity to her general action; and, above all, that exquisite repose which throws into such bold relief the more vehement and transitional. Finally, her reception was finished, that not a syllable of her words is ever lost in any part of the house.

The applause of the audience testified their vivid apprehension of the extraordinary example of the acting art to which they were unexpectedly witnesses, as no piece had been in active preparation for representation. Every kind of call the artiste herself was called before the curtain to receive her well-merited ovation, which was, it is almost needless to add, accompanied with the most enthusiastic demonstrations.

NEW STRAND.

On Wednesday evening Mrs. Glover appeared as Mrs. Candour, in the "School for Scandal," Mr. Farren performing Sir Peter Teazle. The comedy was well acted.

MARYLEBONE.

The "Love Chase" was performed on Monday, with unusual success. Mrs. Mowatt's Neighbour Constance is one of her best assumptions, and was performed with exceeding spirit, medium, however, by her delicate physique, and tempered by her refined taste. This lady is decidedly and deservedly winning on the public good opinion; and, with her intelligence and beauty, must become an established favourite.

SURREY.

On Monday Mr. Creswick appeared as the hero of Mr Sheridan Knowles's play, "The Wife," and on Tuesday as "Werner." Both the audience and the houses are mightily improving; and Mr. Creswick, by his elegant and judicious acting, is evidently creating a box audience. Were he to modulate his tones in the more declamatory passages, he would get rid of a fault which, in the vehemence of his delivery, sometimes affects its intelligibility. We trust that our suggestion as to the second pieces has been taken.

LITERATURE.

LETTERS ADDRESSED to his Royal Highness the GRAND DUKE OF SAXE-COBURG and GOTHA, on the THEORY OF PROBABILITIES, as applied to the Moral and Political Sciences. By M. A. QUETELET. Translated from the French by OLINTHUS GREGORY DOWNES, of the Economic Life Assurance Society. Laytons.

The work of M. Quetelet has long been known in this country to statists, as well as to all inquirers into the application of the Theory of Probabilities to Social, Political, and Moral Laws, which has now almost become a popular study. Several years since, M. Quetelet perceived this, and, in his own words, "felt how desirable it was that this weighty science should be rendered popular, and that it should be brought down from the high regions of analysis, and placed within the reach of those who are often most obliged to make use of it. It is as itself, in reality, a science of observation, and of observation alone, that both the legislator and the man called to the management of public affairs: both are often under the necessity of reading statistics of the past, and of endeavouring to collect from that some whatever may be useful for the future; they feel the want of means to appreciate the results produced by modifications introduced into the laws, and, in a certain measure, to ascertain the weight that should be attached to arguments for and against the advantage or prosperity of the country."

M. Quetelet is an able reasoner, and chooses his illustrations very happily, so as to render an apparently abstruse subject of easy comprehension and attractive character. He divides his work into four parts—the Theory of Probabilities Means and Limits—Study of Causes and Statistics; the latter we agree with the author in estimating as "a science which is far from being understood, though its utility is generally recognised in proportion as it is cultivated with discernment." The framework of the treatise in the letter form, a barrowed addressed to the two Princes named in the title-page; the Demonstrations by Elementary Algebra being transferred to the notes, at the end of the volume.

It is altogether a misfortune to a previous acquaintance with the more abstruse parts of mathematics to be essential to the study of the Theory of Probabilities; and the present translation of Quetelet's work will do much to extend the knowledge of this fact, as well as the general applicability of the study. This admits of interesting variety as the chances of events, their return—illustrated by the tides and sunset and the periods of August's and Herschel's grapnels and births, and horizontal variations; mathematical expectations, as shown in betting, lotteries, and assurance societies; verification of the harmony between theory and practice, &c. Under Means and Limits, the temperatures, and the type of the human race, admit of even anecdotic illustration. The Study of Causes is shown in natural phenomena, such as the flowering of plants; and the probabilities of life, in the domestic superstition of the Sabbath-day's child—

THE OPENING OF THE COAL EXCHANGE TO THE TRADE.—On Wednesday, the Coal Exchange was opened for the transaction of the public business of the trade. Mr. John Wood, the chairman of the Coal, Corn, and Finance Committee, and most of the members, attended in the building, and when the clock struck twelve, the classes of the Act and the Gazette notice having been read, the entrances to the hall were thrown open. Cheers were given for the Queen, the City of London, the coal trade, the chairman, and the architect of the building. The whole of the arrangements seemed to give perfect satisfaction to the merchants and factors, and the business of the day was immediately commenced.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE.—The enlargement of Buckingham Palace is now completed, and the ornamental decorations of the wing fronting St. James's Park are entirely finished. On the extreme centre is a triumphal arch, the buttresses supported by emblematic representations of Learning and Wisdom, flanked by Britannia and St George and the Dragon; on the crown of the arch is placed a shield, inscribed "V. R., 1847," enclosed within the Rose, Shamrock, and Thistle, and surmounted by a wreath of laurel; on the front of the north turret is placed a copy of the celebrated group from the Palace of the Athenians, and on the south a copy of the Apollo Belvidere; either extremity being filled up with military trophies. There are three entrances to the quadrangle, which now comprises 4000 square yards, the central being for the exclusive use of her Majesty. The internal decorations of the new wing, on which £14,000 will be expended, are rapidly proceeding, and already a portion is occupied. The celebrated marble arch, the cost of which exceeded £30,000, is to be pulled down, and the materials sold to liquidate the cost of the enlargement of the palace. In this structure there are solid blocks of marble weigh.ng between 30 and 40 tons. The cost of its demolition will exceed £200.

THE HOUSE OF LORDS.—The frescoes, which are just completed, are highly interesting, if only because they show the degree of perfection attained in an art which but a very few years ago was quite new to this country. The colours have the brilliancy of oil, with a most delicate finish. Mr. Cope's fresco represents the story of Gascoigne, and Mr. Maclise has taken for his subject an allegorical representation of Justice, in which the arraignment of a prisoner at the bar is set forth with great force and a striking simplicity of composition. The "Lear" of Mr. Herbert, which was one of the most remarkable paintings in the last exhibition of the Royal Academy, is copied in fresco by the same artist on the wall of the "Hall of Poets," as a monument to Shakspeare.

ROMAN CATHOLIC DAY OF THANKSGIVING.—In all the Roman Catholic churches and chapels throughout the metropolis a letter was read on Sunday last from the Right Rev. Dr. Wiseman, Vicar Apostolic of the London district, appointing Sunday next, the 25th inst., as a solemn thanksgiving day for the withdrawal of the late dreadful pestilence. The "Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament," or, where that cannot be performed, the chanting of a "Te Deum," is ordered to be added, together with some other prayers, to the usual services at the day. The letter likewise states, as a fact which ought to be particularly gratifying to the faithful, that, although many Roman Catholic clergymen of the district had been visited with attacks of cholera, still not one of them had died from its effects.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.—On Wednesday the first anniversary dinner of this institution took place at the Albion Hotel, Aldersgate-street, Mr. Charles Dickens in the chair. The report for the past year stated that the funded property of the institution amounted to £1000, and that the contributions of parties who were unable to attend exceeded £100. The subscriptions collected in the course of the evening amounted to a considerable sum, and amongst the donations was one of five guineas from Mr. Charles Dickens.

REGISTRY OF FISHING VESSELS.—It having been represented to the Commissioners of Customs that it would be attended with hardship to the masters and owners of small fishing vessels if they were required to find a surety to the registry bond, upon the registering of their vessels, as required by a general order of the Board, dated the 29th August last, the Board have experienced their consent to fishing vessels of not under 20 tons burden being exempted from the conditions of the regulation mentioned.

DISCONTINUANCE OF MAIL PACKETS BETWEEN HULL, ALTONA, AND HAMBURG.—The General Post Office has just issued the following notice:—The contract entered into in May last, for the conveyance of mails by steam-packets between Hull and Altona and Hamburg, terminating on the 23rd of this month (Nov.), on and after the 24th instant, all letters and newspapers for Hamburg, Denmark, &c., specially addressed to be forwarded viâ Hull, will be sent by private ship, and will be liable to the rates of postage heretofore charged upon letters and newspapers for those places when conveyed by private ships.

ST. MARYLEBONE SAVINGS-BANK.—There has been a considerable increase in the sums invested, as well as in the open deposit accounts, in this bank, during the last year; the numbers being, 1848, 19,019 accounts, £291,386; 1849, 23,382, £331,094.

ILLEGALITY OF LETTING OUT NEWSPAPERS.—On Tuesday, in the City of London County Court, Guildhall, in a case Hollingsworth v. Rutadine, wherein a claim was made for hire of newspapers, the Judge (Mr. Commissioner Bullock) decided that, by the 23rd of George 3, cap. 80, the letting out of newspapers was illegal, and that any debt incurred for the hire of such papers was not recoverable in any court of law; and, further, the person so letting was liable to a fine of £5 for every such offence. The claim was disallowed, with costs.

SUICIDE AT THE SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY TERMINUS.—On Monday afternoon, at about half-past four o'clock, whilst several persons were waiting on the platform of the terminus for the making up of the 4h. 35m. down-train for Windsor, one of the number (a gentleman) cast himself under an engine, which was running along the metals in order to be attached to one of the carriages. The driver of the engine did all that was possible to stop the locomotive and tender, but without avail, and the engine caught the arm of the unfortunate man, and, after pushing him some distance, the wheel of the tender passed over the back of his neck, and nearly severed the head from the body. The body was removed to one of the offices, and, having been searched, a white cambric handkerchief was found in one of his pockets, on which was written "Dr. Allan, R.N. It was afterwards identified as that of Mr. Allen, a surgeon in the navy, lately lodging in Norfolk-street, Strand.

DARING HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—On Tuesday evening, about six o'clock, as a young gentleman, named Conder, was returning from town to his residence at Brixton, he was attacked by three men in an unfrequented part lead ng from the vitriol manufactory, on Kennington-common, towards Camberwe.l-green. He was first seized round the throat by one of the villains, and then struck on the head with some heavy instrument; after which they robbed him of a silver double-bottomed watch, maker's name, "J. Cot, Geneva," a gold breqnet-chain and key; and rifled his pockets of their contents, which, fortunately, amounted to a few shillings only. The cowardly ruffians then struck him again, and made off. Though severely cut, it is hoped the injuries sustained are not of a serious nature. No clue has as yet been obtained to the perpetrators of this outrage; the night being dark, and the assault so sudden, Mr. Conder was unable to distinguish his assailants or to call for help. The pathway in question is favourable for such an attack, and ought not to be travelled after nightfall, unless the police keep watch over it.

FIRE AND DISCOVERY OF AN ILLICIT STILL.—On Sunday morning, about three o'clock, the premises of Mr. Austin, No. 6, King's-place, Camden-town, were discovered to be on fire. The flames having been extinguished, it was ascertained that part of the premises was used as a private still, the owners of which, upon hearing the alarm of fire given, succeeded in making their escape before the police came up. The whole plant was immediately seized by the authorities. The building was insured in the Phœnix Fire-office.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS, &c.—The number of births registered in the metropolis in the week ending Saturday last, Nov. 17, was—Males, 613; females, 613; total, 1226. The deaths from all causes were—Males, 427; females, 451; total, 878. This number exhibits a decrease of 54 from the weekly average of five previous autumns, corrected for increase of population; and the returns of the last ten years show that the present low rate of mortality is without example during the period of November. The number of deaths registered from 800 to upwards of 1200 deaths. The deaths registered last week from the zymotic or epidemic class of diseases were only 204, while the average is 307; those from diseases of the respiratory organs (exclusive of phthisis) were 134, while the average is 214. But the mortality from phthisis (or consumption) from bronchitis seems to increase, and is now about the average; and influenza was fatal to four young persons and an adult. The deaths from diarrhœa and dysentery in the week were 29, which is about the same as in former years at this season; those in the last four weeks have been successively 51, 40, 29, 22. From cholera, 8 deaths were registered, or two more than in the preceding week; the two cases the persons died of disease consequent on cholera, from which they had previously suffered. One of the 8 deaths occurred in Holland Cottages, St. John's, Westminster; one in Earl-street, Lisson-grove, Marylebone; one in Bond's Cottages, Hospital Fields; one in Bell-court, off Drury lane; one in St. John-street, Clerkenwell; one in Green-walk, Bermondsey; one in Lambeth; one in York-place, South Lambeth; and one in Nicholson-street, Bethnal-green. A boy, aged 6 years, died from hydrophobia from hours' illness, in Frederick-street, Bromley, an over-crowded and dirty neighbourhood, where cholera lately was rife METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean height of the barometer in the week was 29.863. The mean daily height was above 30 inches on Sunday, Monday, and Saturday. The mean temperature of the week was 45°2°; on Saturday it was 39°30°. It was above the average of the same days of seven years on the first four days, and below it during the rest of the week.

CHURCH EXTENSION.—At a meeting, on Monday last, of the Incorporated Society for Promoting the Enlargement, Building, and Repairing of Churches and Chapels, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair, grants of money were made in aid of the following objects: Building churches at St. Mary's district, Devonport; Croydon, Surrey; Hartlepool, Durham; Mumbury, in the parish of Whalley and Bury, Lancashire; Hucclecote, near Gloucester; and Hasland, in the parish of Chesterfield; rebuilding the church at Llanllawddog, near Carmarthen; enlarging or re-arranging the seats in the churches at Maiden Newton, Dorset; Aston Clinton, near Tring; Bridgwater (parish church); Caerhun, near Conway; Llangwnnadle, near Pwllheli, and St. Andrew's Worcester. A grant was also made in aid of the restoration of the church at Rochdale, recently damaged by fire. Two of the new churches are for districts recently constituted by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Greco."—You will find an elaborate analysis of the opening mentioned (Ruy Lopez Knight's game) by the celebrated Russian author, Major Jaenisch, in the July, August, and September Numbers of the Chess Player's Chronicle for 1848: and we are gratified to learn that the accomplished writer has contributed another article on the subject to the same periodical for next month, which cannot fail to excite the liveliest interest among all classes of players.

"T. P. B. S."—The King can Castle after having been checked.

"M. T. T."—Mate cannot be given in the Problem No. 301 in the stipulated number of moves by playing as you suggest.

"Academicus" The Enigma named shall be looked to.

"Bellaria"—Your note are under consideration.

"L. M."—It is not known. Sir Sir Frederick Madden's able article on the ancient Chess-men, "Archæologia," Vol. 24.

"Equus."—Your solution of Problem No. 301 was duly acknowledged as correct in our paper of last week. The same solution, which is the author's, has been received from at least fifty other correspondents.

"G. G."Aberdeen. Try it once more. The Problem is perfectly right.

"Max. L."Magdeburg.—The game received is highly acceptable, and we shall be much pleased to have the further contributions so politely proffered.

"D. L. R." "X. Y. Z."—It shall be given next week.

"Philadelphia."—Would you be good enough to repeat the question. Your former communication probably miscarried.

"G. S." Douglas.—A private communication has been forwarded.

"A Subscriber"—We must refer you to the dealers for the price of the Staunton Chess-men.

"A Reader," Milford-Haven.—For the unfixing reason that White would take the Kt with R, giving mate at once.

"The Elder Tyro" are marked in both cases See our notices to "Omicron" and "Amateur," in the last Number

"Cardinal Wolsey."—In your hand fide game, mate cannot be given in two moves.

"Oxford." Oxford.—For further our standard.

"A Reader Abroad."—The Rook at Black R 1st is a Black one. How then can it capture a Black Bishop?

"Presto."—The additional facilities which the new Chess-men afford for the acquirement of a knowledge of the game, render them an invaluable acquisition to the young amateur. Fine players will play finely with almost any Chess-men; but the best can hardly fail to produce finer games with pieces so admirably distinct and expressive as the "Staunton Men." The "Test-Book" may be got through any bookseller, we suppose.

"Ernest."—It is true, and we hail with no ordinary feelings of gratification the fact that Chess has at length taken root to the soil of all others best fitted for its productive development. Not in speak of Oxford and Cambridge, where Chessclubs are firmly established, the game is beginning to be cultivated with assiduity in all the most famous academical institutions in the country We are in possession of many admirable games contested lately among the alumni of Eton, Rugby, Harrow, Winchester, and Shrewsbury schools, with some of which we hope ere long to grace our columns. The game by correspondence between the amateurs of the last-named school and those of Brighton College is now under examination.

"B. H. T."—In any way, provided it is comprehended according to the conditions.

"Mercia."No. 301 cannot be solved as you propose.

"Short," Birmingham.—Begin with volume VIII., and go through Cabel's "Lessons for Young Players."

"G. S."—The rule you speak of obtains all over Europe at the present day. We cannot say when it was first introduced.

Solutions by "M. P." "Valley-field." "Rev. G. V. R." "Rev. J. S." "Rev. T. S. L." "F. E. S." "D. P." "M. P." "Carlo Pallero." "T. B." Liverpool, "Aberdon," "Veronica," "Academicus," "S. U." "F. G. R." "Max L." Magdeburg; "J. W. A." "J. H." "H. T." "S. S." "M. E. R." "Elisa." "Otho," are correct. Those by "Brutus," "Geo." "A. A." "T. B. S." Flushing, "Carlisle C. C." "Inertia," "B. H. T.," "R. R.," are wrong.

 Communications not answered this week shall be replied to in our next.

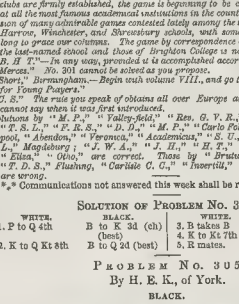
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 304.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. P to Q 4th	B to K 3d (ch) (best)	3. It takes B	K takes B
2. K to Q Kt 8th	B to Q 2d (best)	4. K to Kt 7th	K to Q 3d
		5. R mates.

PROBLEM NO. 305.

By H. E. K., of York.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White, playing first, mates in three moves.

CHESS IN PARIS.

Instructive specimen of the Evans' Gambit played between Messrs.

KIESERITZKY AND WITTONDS.

WHITE. (M. W.)	BLACK. (M. K.)	WHITE. (M. W.)	BLACK. (M. K.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	22. Q to Kt 2d	R K to Kt sq
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	23. Q R to Kt sq	Q to K R 4th
3. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	24. R B to K 2d	P to Q 3d
4. P to Q Kt 4th	B takes Kt P (a)	25. Q to her Kt 2d (e)	B to his 3d
5. P to Q B 3d	B to Q B 4th (c) (ch) (f)	26. Q to her Kt 8th (ch)	K to Q 2d
6. Castles	Q to K 2d	27. Q to her Kt 4th	Q R to Q Kt sq
7. P to Q 4th	Q Kt to Q sq	28. Q takes R	R takes Q
8. P takes P	B takes P	29. R takes R	P takes P
9. Kt takes B	Q takes Kt	30. K R to Q sq (ch)	K to his 3d
10. Q B to K 3d (b)	K Kt to B 3d	31. Q R to K 8th (ch)	K to his B 3d
11. Q B to Q 4th	Q to K B 5th	32. R to K to K B sq	Kt to K B 5th (ch)
12. P to K 5th	Kt to K 5th	33. P takes Kt	Q to K R 6th (ch)
13. P to K Kt 3d	Q to K R 3d	34. K to Kt sq	Kt takes B (ch)
14. P to K B 4th	Kt to K Kt 4th	35. B takes Kt	B takes B
15. P to K B 4th	Kt to K R 6th (ch)	36. P takes P (ch)	K to Kt 2d
16. K to Kt 2d	Q Kt to K 3d	37. K R to B 3d	Q to K Kt 4th (ch)
17. Q to Q Kt 2d (d)	Q to Q Kt 4th (d)	38. K to B sq	Q to her B 5th (ch)
18. B takes Kt P	Q B to Kt 2d (ch)	39. K to Kt sq	Q to her B 3d
19. Q Kt to K B 3d	P to K Kt 4th	40. Q R to Q 8th	Q to K Kt 3d (ch) and wins.
20. Q to K 3d	Q Kt takes P
21. Q B to K 3d	Castles on Q side

(a) This retreat of the Bishop has been shown, negue sed mansecum, to be a bad defence to the Evans' attack; and the honesty with which M. Kieseritzky still clings to it is therefore remarkable. For a good example of its inefficiency, see the game between M. K. and Mr. Horwitz, page 140 of the "Handbook."

(b) In the game referred to, Mr Horwitz have played Q to her 3d, and pursued the attack as follows:—

10 Q to her 3d	K Kt to B 3d	16. R takes P	P to K Kt 3d
11 P to K B 4th	Q takes K P	17. Q R to R 3d	K to B 2d
12 Q takes Q	Kt takes Q	18. Q R to K B sq	P to Q 3d
13. R to K sq	P to K B 4th	19 P to K Kt 4th	K to Kt sq
14. P to K to Kt 5th	Q Kt to Q 2d	20. Q R to K sq—And wins.
15 Kt takes Kt	P takes Kt

(c) Q to K Kt 4th would have won a piece.

(d) Better to have taken the P with the Rook, and then the Kt with Kt. 6th.

(e) Worse than useless.

(f) Well played.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
47. B to Q Kt 4th

Amsterdam to play.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 499.—By J. P., of Brighton.

White: K at B 2d, Q at K R 6th, R at K R 4th, Kt at Q R 3d.
Black: K at Q B 4th, P at Q 4th.

White to play, and mate in two moves.

No. 500.—By W. G., of York.

White: K at his B 5th, R at Q 3d, Kt at Q B 5th, P's at Q 2d and Q Kt 4th.
Black: K at Q 4th; P's at Q 2d and 3d, Q Kt 4th, and Q B 3d.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The total amount collected on the day of thanksgiving in the churches of the metropolis was £3160 18s. 2½d., exclusive of £260 contributed at the Great Synagogue.

A money purchase of £55,000. Consols was made on Tuesday by Mr. George Hudson, M.P.

The "Ex-Railway King," Mr. Hudson, has sold his Londesborough estate, his Seton Grange estate (bought for £70,000), and his Hutton Cranswick estate, comprising altogether about 16,000 acres of land in the East Riding of Yorkshire, to Lord Albert Denison (late Conyngham), the heir and executor of the late Mr. Denison. He retains now only his Baldersley estate, which cost about £125,000, and on which he has expended some £20,000, and Newby Park, which cost £30,000

The Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners' Benevolent Society has received an addition to its funds, which are distributed so judiciously and so beneficially—a donation of £200 from an anonymous benefactor, whose initials are "E. B."

Colonel Hawker is now at Birmingham, in order to superintend the forging, &c. for his new improvements in guns.

An invention of a novel character has been made in Paris. By a simple yet ingenious mechanism, the folding of newspapers, which has hitherto been performed by the hand, is now effected by a peculiar machine. With the assistance of one person to attend to it, this machine will fold 2000 newspapers in an hour.

The Boston Emancipator (United States) states that an inquest being held recently on the body of a female slave, whipped to death by her master, a jury of planters returned the following complaisant and considerate verdict:—"Died of apoplexy, brought on by excitement!"

A frightful storm occurred in Louisiana on the Bayou Lafourche, about the middle of October. The damage which it occasioned amounts to 150,000 dollars. Among the victims of the calamity was a planter named Gerbeau, and several Negroes were crushed to death.

The appointment of Master in Chancery, vacated by Mr. Wingfield, has been bestowed on John Elijah Blunt, Esq., the well-known equity draughtsman.

Messrs. George and Sir John Rennie has received orders to build and fit with their engines a handsome steam-yacht for his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia. She is to be 180 feet long, with a draught of water of only 8 feet, and calculated to run seventeen miles an hour.

Resolutions in favour of the annexation of Canada to the United States have been introduced into both houses of the Vermont Legislature United States.

Vessels arriving at New York lately from Liverpool and other parts of Europe have lost many of their passengers by cholera. The Berlin lost 43, the Montezuma 25, and several other ships from 10 to 20 each. The St. George 19.

There are now completed in the United States 8500 miles of railway, at a cost of 230,000,000 dollars 5000 miles more are in contemplation.

Charles John Bayley, Esq., is appointed colonial secretary at the Mauritius; Robert Carter, Esq., colonial treasurer at Newfoundland, and C. Lake, Esq., a stipendiary magistrate at Sierra Leone.

Mr. George Charles Moore is appointed her Britannic Majesty's Consul for the Society Islands, to reside at Tahiti, where he has been acting Consul for some time.

The removal of the British Consul (Mr. Niven Kerr), which we mentioned some time back, from Cyprus to Rhodes, is caused by the establishment, at the latter place, of an Insular Pachalic. All the Turkish islands in the Archipelago are to be subject to this new Government, instead of being under the rule of the Captain Pacha as hitherto. It has, therefore, been considered expedient that the representative of English interests should reside at the seat of Government, as fixed.

Earl Manvers has given up a beautiful field to the framework knitters and artisans of Carlton (Notts), for garden allotments. It contains about eight acres. The Earl of Chesterfield has promised at the earliest convenience a further portion of land, having given up twelve acres for the same purpose about six years ago.

A funeral took place at Dunbar lately, principally attended by sailors. The coffin had just been laid down, when a hare started up close at hand, and one of the sailors crying out, "A hare, a hare!" the mourners gave chase, and abandoned the corpse.

On Monday, two sermons were preached at St. Luke's Church, Berwick-street, in behalf of the Dorcas Visiting Society in the morning by the Lord Bishop of London, and in the evening by the Venerable Archdeacon Wigram. The collections amounted to upwards of £30.

The Government has recently added thirteen gentlemen to the commission of the peace for Birmingham. Of this numerous list, nine of the new magistrates are Whig-Radicals, and four Conservatives. In religion seven are Unitarians, and six members of the Established Church. No other church or sect is represented in the new batch.

The admiralty have determined to give Mr. Peacock's composition, for preserving the bottoms of iron ships, another trial, and have ordered that gentleman to send a sufficient quantity to Portsmouth Dockyard to cover the bottom of the Vulcan steam-frigate.

The Bishop of Hereford has declined to allow the enfranchisement of a piece of land near that city belonging to the see of Hereford for the purposes of a cemetery, on the ground that such an enfranchisement would be injurious to the see and to the Church. The Hereford Town Council, however, propose making an application to Parliament for an act authorising them to alienate it.

No less a sum than £151 18s. 1d. was collected at the Abbey Church, Great Malvern, on Thursday week, towards a new church to be erected at North Malvern.

A fatal instance of the unskilful employment of ether, as a sedative, occurred at Boston lately. A young lady, having occasion for a dentist's assistance, and fearing pain, consented to be etherised. Her wish was assented to and the sedative applied so effectually that she sank into eternal sleep. All efforts to restore her proved ineffectual.

There are numbers of English travellers on their way to Thebes and Upper Egypt, and considerable numbers en route at present. Last year, the usual intercourse was interrupted by the visitation of cholera, and it is expected the present year's numbers will experience an increase in consequence.

The Bishop of Jerusalem (Gobat) is at Cairo, where he intends remaining some weeks ere his return to the seat of his presidency.

The boilers to the two steam-engines at the General Post-office have just been furnished with an apparatus which supplies the furnace with coal without any care from the attendant, and at the same time consumes all or nearly all the smoke as fast as it is generated. The machinery is very simple, and said to be very effective. The invention, which is by Mr. Samuel Hall, of Basford, is patented.

A commission has been formed under the presidency of the French Minister of Commerce to report on the means of establishing at Paris, and in the large towns of France, public baths and washhouses, with the co-operation of the state, the departments, the communes, and private individuals.

Upwards of twenty-seven men, stone-gatherers and others, were on Monday last summoned before the county magistrates at petty sessions, Thorpe (Essex), for unlawfully entering the brig Fleece, wrecked on the main at Walton-on-the-Naze, against the consent of the master, and for unlawfully removing the cargo from the vessel. Four of the men were fined £4 each, or two months' imprisonment, and the remainder 40s. each, or one month. One was discharged.

The Egyptian Government has expressed a determination to suppress a local newspaper circulating among the European residents, under the title of the Pard of Alexandria. This hostility is said to arise from a desire to put down any agency calculated to diffuse inquiry or awaken intellectuality.

Late accounts from Egypt (November 9) represent the Government of Abbas Pacha as menaced by a false and economy. The pay of the soldiers is reduced, while the Pacha injures his health by extravagant indulgence in feasting. The Egyptian College at Paris has been dissolved, and there follows a general dissolution of the machinery of education set on foot by Mehemet Ali; for, in addition to the dispersion of the students from Abouzabel, the Polytechnic School at Cairo has been untenanted, and made over to the proprietor of the English Hotel, for the entertainment of overland travellers!

An Italian Opera has been opened in Alexandria to the great relief of the European community from the ennui that pervades all things in that monotonous place.

On Monday, a convict named Thomas Johnson escaped from Woolwich dockyard, disguised in the dress of a ship-wright. He was quickly missed, and in a short time was re-captured in the town.

The acceptance of the challenge of the Pacha of Egypt, conveyed by the Consul-General to the Jockey Club, is looked forward to with great interest in that country, where the feeling generally is, that, for the long distance, and on the loose footing the desert surface presents, the Arab horses will have the advantage—although there exists no manner of doubt as to the superior fleetness of the English race-horses. Ten miles of sand, four or five inches deep, are a very different matter from two or three miles of green turf on an English race-course.

The jurisdiction of the County Courts is expected to be increased to £50, in the next session of Parliament.

The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. Israel de Wolf Andrews as Consul, in New Brunswick and Canada, for the United States of America.

On Sunday night some thieves took advantage of the darkness to steal about 50 of the brass handles from the carriages on the line of the London and North-western Company, at the station near Birmingham.

A vessel laden with timber, and abandoned by her crew, was discovered by a pilot-boat, off Loop-head Light, county Clare, on the morning of the 17th.

A coil of copper wire, 12,200 feet long, was delivered at the Gutta Percha Company's works, City-road, at 4 P.M. on Monday, the 19th, to be covered with sulphureted gutta percha for the Prussian Government, with a direct injunction that it must be despatched by the Hamburgh mail on the following day. Notwithstanding this short notice the extraordinary feat was accomplished, the coil being shipped within 24 hours of its arrival.

THE HUNTING SEASON.—ECONOMY OF THE KENNEL.

THE KENNEL.

A different hound for every different chase
Select with judgment.—SOMERVILLE.

The commencement of the Hunting Season has suggested the accompanying artistic Sketches of what is usually termed "the economy of the kennel;" in which the principal stages of the management of dogs are depicted from real life. The locality whence these scenes have been sketched is the kennel of C. Bateman, Esq., of the York and Ainsty Hounds, to whom our acknowledgments are due for his kindness in affording every facility to our artist, Mr. Snow, the animal painter, of York.

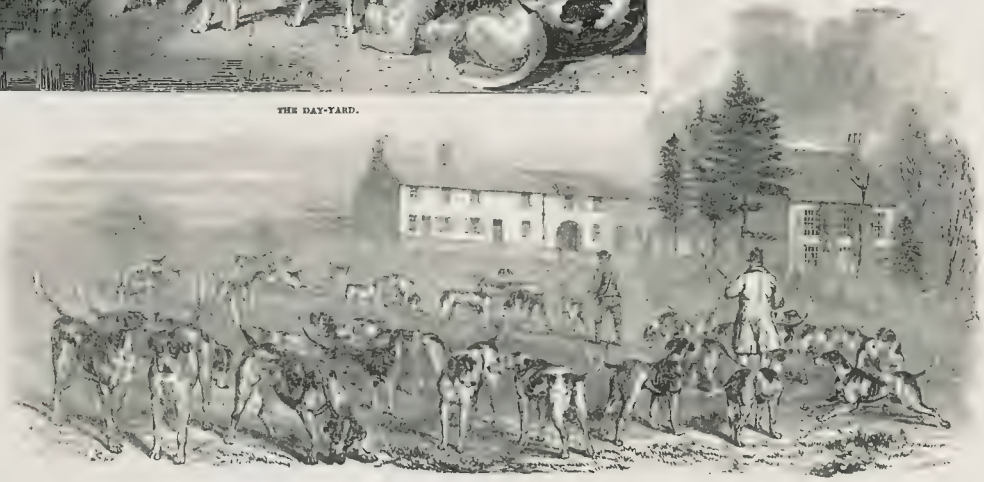
Without attempting to settle the much-vexed question of when the first regularly appointed pack of fox-hounds appeared among us, we shall proceed to the business of the scene before us; though we must quote, by way of epigraph Somerville's spirited description of a perfect hound:—

> Now there, with [illegible] breathe,
> And with a [illegible] round
> [illegible]
> I [illegible] eyes
> [illegible]
> His glossy skin [illegible]
> In lights or [illegible] brown,
> [illegible]
> [illegible]
> [illegible]
> [illegible]
> His [illegible] wide-spread thighs,
> And [illegible]
> [illegible]
> [illegible]
> [illegible]
> [illegible] and the nimble skill
> Of Phidias himself can't blame thy choice—
> Of such compose thy pack.

THE DAY-YARD.

The Kennel, the Day-yard, and the Keeper's House sufficiently bespeak their purposes.

Nimrod (Mr. Apperley) has vividly described the next scene—Drawing in to Feed. "See," he says, "sixty couple of hounds, all hungry as tigers, standing aloof in their yard (as is the practice in some kennels), and without even hearing, much less feeling, the whip, not daring to move until the order is given to them to move. And what is the order given? Why, at the words, 'Come over, bitches,' or 'Come over, dogs,' every hound of each individual sex comes forward, as the sex it belongs to may be called for, leaving those of the other sex in their places. Then the act of drawing them to the



THE KEEPER'S HOUSE.—"THE WALK-OUT."

THE HUNTING SEASON.—ECONOMY OF THE KENNEL.

DRAWING IN TO FEED.

feeding-troughs is an exceedingly interesting sight. Often, with the door wide open, and the savoury meat in their view, the huntsman has no use for his whip, having nothing to do but to call each hound by his name, which, of course, he readily answers to. The expression of countenance, too, at this time, is well worthy of notice; and that of earnest solicitation, of entreaty—we might almost say of importunity—cannot be more forcibly displayed than in the face of a hungry hound awaiting his turn to be drawn. He appears absolutely to watch the lips of the huntsman, anticipating his own name."

LITTER OF PUPS.

The full duties of the Huntsman and his Whips we shall not be expected to detail; but of that other important personage, the Feeder, some few words may be said: and they will suffice to convey a general idea of the kennel routine of his superiors in office.

The Feeder's business is to prepare the flesh and oatmea stirabout; to kill and skin the animals condemned to his shambles; to keep clean and in good order the kennel throughout; and to have in readiness at their stated times the meals. He is generally something of an original in his way, and, as a matter of course, very learned in all the mysteries of health and disease in the hounds for which he cooks. Supposing it to be a hunting day, he has all ready for the hunting hounds, which, if the meet is not too distant, generally return to kennel at four or five o'clock in the evening; notice having been given of their approach by a general chorus of the hounds at home, frequently heard in full song some minutes before the huntsman's horn. This is as singular a circumstance as it is common, for hounds whose kennel is in a quiet place to challenge the returning hounds at a distance of from two to three miles. On their arrival, the Huntsman and Whips give up their horses to the helpers, and proceed at once to feed.

It is beautiful to see eighteen or twenty brace of hounds, hungry and unfed since the preceding morning, and after a hard chase to boot, wait the calling of their names to "draw." Each has his individual mode of expressing his impatience. The older ones sit quietly, and all that escapes them is a low whine from a watery mouth. The younger ones are excessively fidgetty, but each waits till called to feed. They certainly make short work when at it; and the whole pack are full to repletion in a space of time which would astonish a gourmand. After feeding, they are let into one of the day-yards to clean themselves of the splashes of food with which they are plentifully endowed. This office one does for the other in all kindness, and with a sensible enjoyment of what may be called their dessert. After this, they are walked out for a quarter of an hour or so, and then to bed.

The lodging-house is well paved, thoroughly drained and ventilated, and supplied with raised benches, well littered with fresh dry straw, on which the hounds sleep—grouping themselves in the most singular manner. There appears to be a well-understood law amongst them as to the right of bench-room; so that, with the occasional occurrence of a growl and snap, the peace of the community is well kept. In the daytime they have the use of a dry, paved yard, well supplied with water.

The hounds in kennel are exercised thrice a day, and it is droll to see how they look for the usual "walk out" at its stated time—their airing-ground being a dry field, with, if possible, a southern aspect. Here they break off into groups, and enjoy themselves as they will for twenty minutes or half an hour, when they again return to kennel.

In one of the remaining illustrations we see a litter of pups. Their proper treatment requires that they be fed as soon as they will take nourishment; which, if they are numerous, will save the mother, and forward their own growth. Allow them air and room for exercise; and mark them in a way agreeable to fancy, so that each litter should be known by the register kept of these matters. When a month old, their dew-claws are taken off; and such breeders as steem their dogs at the same time take off the smallest piece of the tip of the tail.

With a portrait of the Earth-stopper, following his lonely occupation in some woodland in the still night, our series ends. Earth-stopping is a necessary preliminary to a fox-hunt; for by this means the foxes out prowling for game and poultry become shut out from their subterranean lodging, by having their earths, as they are called, stopped up. An Earth-stopper is usually attached to every fox-hunting establishment; and it is his business, in the night which precedes the hunt to stop up the various earths with thorn or furze-bushes, so intermingled with earth as to prevent the hunted fox from running to ground.

In the hollow countries, as they are called, where fox-earths are very numerous, several hands are required for the purpose: in Northamptonshire, for instance, the earth-stopping of a single hunt has cost £200 per annum. It is of the utmost importance, however, that the earths be unstopped as soon as the chase is over, as the foxes would otherwise be deprived of their natural kennel, and in seeking another they may be lost to that hunt. The earth-stopper attached to a fox-hunting establishment is often an old huntsman, whipper-in, or groom, past his riding day; and with his hobby, his terriers, lantern, and earthing utensils forms a characteristic group for the artist.

THE EARTH-STOPPER.

FEEDING.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN AND GREAT WESTERN.—A pamphlet has just been published, in the form of a letter to the proprietors of these companies, by "A Well-wisher of both Companies," in which the writer says—in order to put an end to the differences which have too long existed between the companies, the London and North-Western Company must become the owners of the Birmingham and Oxford, and Birmingham, Dudley, and Wolverhampton lines, and either the owners or lessees of the Oxford and Rugby line, and the war of the gauges become a mere historical reminiscence, by which a very large account would be saved in rent and the avoidance of duplicate stations at Birmingham, Leamington, and elsewhere. He proposes that the charges of these lines should be divided equally between the two companies, the London and North-Western Company having the sole control of the lines north of Oxford. He also suggests that the Paddington station of the Great Western Company should be given up to the London and North Western, a junction line between Ealing and Acton of the two companies near Wormwood Scrubs, where they are only half a mile apart, and lay down the mixed gauge from thence, so as to bring the Great Western traffic to Euston-square. The pamphlet has been forwarded to each shareholder, asking for his opinion on the subject.

AUDIT OF RAILWAY ACCOUNTS.—In pursuance of the resolutions passed at the recent meeting of the representatives of railway companies, communications in conformity with the instructions of the committee of railway chairmen appointed to prepare a bill for Parliament have been transmitted to the secretary of every railway company in the kingdom, calling their attention to the resolutions passed at the meeting, and to the suggested provisions of the proposed bill for the more efficient audit of railway accounts. Particular attention is called to the fourth resolution, recommending that those suggestions should be circulated among the shareholders of the parties most concerned in the efficiency of the audit, with a view to obtain their opinions on the outline of the bill.

DUBLIN AND BELFAST JUNCTION RAILWAY.—Mr. Dargan, the enterprising railway contractor, has taken the contract for the erection of the railway bridge over the Boyne. The span, one arch, is to be 200 feet wide and 90 feet above high-water mark

EXETER AND CREDITON.—Negotiations are understood to be going on between the London and South-Western and Bristol and Exeter Companies for the working on mutual terms of this line, the opening of which, but for disputes as to gauge, would have taken place twenty years ago.

SHREWSBURY AND CHESTER AND CHESTER AND BIRKENHEAD.—The disputes between these companies have been brought before the magistrates at Chester, and the terms proposed upon are, that the constituent company run without interruption, and that the booking-clerk of the Chester and Shrewsbury Railway is to have accommodation at the station for ten days. In the meanwhile an injunction is to be applied for to bring the legal points in dispute to a settlement, and to decide the question, whether the omnibuses driving in the direction of the Birkenhead Railway are not guilty, by bringing them into the railway-yard, of "wilfully impeding and obstructing the business of the station," within the meaning of the act of Parliament. The affair has created considerable excitement, both at Chester and Birkenhead. On the occasion of barricading the station against the entry of the omnibuses, a crowd was present cheering and shouting, and but for the interference of the magistrates, it was intended to take the station by storm.

THE HORRORS OF WAR.

A graphic letter in the Times, from a Correspondent at Temesvar, in Hungary, gives the following fearful picture of the sufferings of the besieged Austrian troops during the siege of that city last summer by the Magyars:—

"On the night of the 3rd of July the great bombardment began, when the whole of the remaining inhabitants fled into the cellars and casemates: sometimes 13 and 14 shells were seen in the air at one time; another sortie was therefore made by the garrison, when they spiked seven cannons and eleven mortars, but lost in killed and wounded 64 men. The heat of the weather had now, in the month of July, grown intense—30° of Reaumur, or 99° Fahrenheit. The casemate outer windows were all stuffed with wool and bags, and bags behind them, in case of elliptical cannon shot, for the works in front stood between the besiegers and the casemate windows, so as to guard against horizontal cannon balls; but those which, directed at too great an angle of elevation, were spent, occasionally entered these apertures. The atmosphere in these casemates was suffocating, from the crowd of human beings and the want of the circulation of air, and several children died of sheer terror in the arms of their parents. 'I shall remember it as long as I live,' said one of the citizens to me with a sigh; and then added, laughing, 'Long afterwards I used to dream it was still going on, and used to wake with such delight to find it was over.' As for the horses of the Uhlan regiment, they were ne'ther 'to hold nor to bind,' and were at last let loose, and in groups of 20 or 30 used to rush about the streets as if in the wilds of South America, and did no injury, as there was no one in the streets but those connected with the fire-engines. All those that were killed were at once eaten, for although there was abundance of corn in the fortress, and although at this moment the mill is the only construction in Temesvar that is standing, yet the people were put on short allowance of bread almost from the first all ate horse-flesh, except those soldiers that were of the Daco-Roman nation, who for a long time steadily refused; at last, an officer one day, entering a casemate, reproached one of these people with not communicating too much, for, said he, these others are too dainty soldiers to eat it. The Daco-Romans immediately answered 'Oh, yes, we can eat it,' and from that date they consumed horse-flesh like the others; and I was told by one that they made a very eatable salad out of the weeds that grew among the grass of the fortifications.

"On the 11th July another sortie was made in the night, in which 93 Austrians were killed and wounded. The houses now began to fall from the incessant bombardment, and the cellars were no longer safe. The governor had at first divided the garrison into three parts: one on duty at the ramparts, another in the walls and the fire-engines in the town, one-third in readiness under the cover of the casemates, and one-third in sleep; but, on the 14th, this arrangement was given up, all being put on active service, and sleep only as circumstances permitted. The fortified camp of the Bega was at the same time abandoned. The great powder magazine, immediately within the ramparts, was repeatedly struck by the shells—and is even now half unfilled—but they leaped off harmless as footballs, the roof having five feet of vaulted masonry above it, three feet of packed earth, and then a foot of masonry above. * * *

The fever now began to rage in the town, and on the 25th of July a quarter of the garrison had perished, a quarter was in the hospital, a quarter ailing and unserviceable, and only a quarter still efficient; and on that day alone five surrendered (!!!) rights. The bombardment had a terrible effect on the palace; even those who were in a fair way of recovery during the absence of the fire, no sooner heard the bursting of a shell and the fall of some neighbouring roof, than they would leap out of bed in a phrenzy, with fixed eyeballs, creep under the beds for shelter, and a couple of hours' attack of nerves fever usually finished them. In spite of the exertions of the fire-engine corps one edifice after another fell a prey to the flames. To the conflagration of a large convent of the Merciful Brothers, which served as a hospital, succeeded that of a range of sheds at the end of the 30th of July, of the two barracks at the Peterwardein gate, when the firemen, exhausted by twelve hours' previous exertions, allowed the whole mass to burn to the ground; and a loss, quite as great, was the consequence under such circumstances, was that of one of the only three engineer officers in the garrison, the brave Colonel Simonich, who, while making dispositions to have the fire extinguished, had his head carried off by a shell, and his body wholly proved fatal. The hospital was not only full, but in such a state that the air was pestilential. The sick and wounded preferring to remain without surgical assistance to entering the hospital.

"The Hungarians, now calculating that the garrison was exhausted, and anxious to anticipate the imperialist forces in an attempt to raise the siege, stormed the palisades, with a view to possess themselves of the town in front of the Peterwardein gate, but were beaten off, in spite of the extraordinary bravery and impetuosity with which the attack was made. A curious ruse on this night produced the retreat of the Magyars.—An imperialist (Captain Metz) going out to the left with the drummers and a few soldiers, they beat the drums, and made loud hurrahs, so that the Magyars, supposing they were taken in flank, retired in confusion. The day after, the cholera broke out in the town with the utmost violence, and Count Nugent, the garrison physician, died in a few days; some days the number of deaths being as high as 160; but Haynau was already in Szegedin, unknown to the garrison, who were now in a state of perfect ignorance if the state of the war. 'No man of us,' said one of the garrison bitterly, 'regarded his life as worth a day's purchase.' At length, on Aug. 6th, being the 100th day of the siege, Count Vecsey offered a capitulation, with all the honours of war, in consideration of he said, of the gallant defence. This was peremptorily rejected, with the announcement that the garrison would defend itself to the last man. Next morning the officer, looking from the tower of observation in the barracks, saw that several batteries were dismarked, and the low distant booming of artillery in the west announced to the garrison that a large and friendly force was not far off. The gallant Bakowics would fain have ordered a sortie as a diversion, but wounds and death, typhus and cholera, had reduced the once strong garrison to that 1233 infantry and 288 cavalry could be alone mustered, and to risk them was to surrender the garrison. On the 9th, the cannon being louder and louder, they knew that a battle was fought in the open field, the valley was covered all on the same evening Haynau, after his victory at Kis Beckakerek, entered Temesvar: and thus ended the siege of 107 days."

SYMPATHY FOR CHOLERA ORPHANS.—We learn with pleasure that it is intended by the committee of the Orphan Working School to recommend the governors, who meet on the 28th inst., to admit twenty additional children into the school in 1850, as a tribute of thanks to Almighty God for his prevalence of the establishment from the late visits on of cholera. There will thus be three elections during the next year of twenty children each, in January, April, and November.

A statue in memory of Lord Nelson is about to be erected at Norwi h, Norfolk being his native county. The proposal is a sais to be subscribed to the cost of which is to be defrayed by the sum of £ 1 a market-place has been chosen; that a pedestal be erected on it base, upon which it is said it would be placed; and that it be inclosed by a handsome palisading, with a gas lamp at each corner.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The only steeple-chase events of any interest on the tapis, for the ensuing week, are those to be decided on Tuesday and Wednesday, at Warwick. They have fair entries, and, with the aid of some well filled flat and hurdle stakes, will ensure a good meeting. The coursing meetings are as follows:—Monday, Wolverhampton; Tuesday, Ashdown Park and Malton; Wednesday, Spelthorne, (at Newmarket); and on Thursday, Clydesdale, Brampton, Hornby Park, and Lytham. The hunting season has commenced favourably as regards weather, but with several retirements, amongst them the Duke of Leeds and Lord Alford, whose stud have recently been disposed of at "the corner."

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—A slack day in every respect, only the two favourites for the Chester Cup, and Bolingbroke, The Knight of Avenel, The Italian, and The Nigger, being backed for any amount: the Derby investments were heavy.

LIVERPOOL STEEPLE-CHASE

6 to 1 agst Knight of Gwynne	6 to 1 agst Valo Hope	6 to 1 agst Proceed

CHESTER CUP

50 to 1 agst Peep-o'Day Boy (1)	66 to 1 agst Idle Boy (1)	100 to 1 agst Blucher (1)
50 to 1 — Lady Evelyn (1)	66 to 1 — Hermitage (1)	100 to 1 — Chatterer (1)
	80 to 1 — Kennington (1)	100 to 1 — Miss Ann (1)

DERBY

5 to 1 agst Kent's lot (t)	15 to 1 agst The Italian (1)	30 to 1 agst Voltigeur (1)
8 to 1 — B-lingbroke (1)	20 to 1 — Cyprus	30 to 1 — John-o-Gro's (1)
11 to 1 — Owl o'Galway (1)	20 to 1 — Sir Tatton (1)	30 to 1 — The Nigger (1)
12½ to 1 — Knight of Avenel (1)	25 to 1 — Clocher	33 to 1 — Moultan (1)
	25 to 1 — Dolphin
	66 to 1 agst Blarney and Pitsford (1)

THURSDAY.—Not above a dozen members present, and not a bet laid.

LIVERPOOL AUTUMN MEETING.—WEDNESDAY.

FREE HANDICAP HURDLE STAKES of 10 sovs each, and 50 added.—Mr. Ady's Mrs. James (Bradley), 1. Capt. Thompson's Venture (Canavan), 2.

The GRAND ANNUAL STEEPLE-CHASE FREE HANDICAP of 10 sovs each, and 100 added.—Lord Waterford's Sir John (J. Ryan), 1. Mr. Vever's Vain Hope (Archer), 2.

The OPTIONAL SELLING STAKES of 5 sovs each, and 30 added.—Mr. Ewbank's Fyrland, 1. Mr. T. Dawson's Fitzcharles, 2

THURSDAY.

The SELLING HURDLE STAKES of 5 sovs each.—Mr. J. Condron's Irish Ambassador, 1. Lord Lurgan's Sobriety, 2.

The SEFTON CUP HANDICAP of 15 sovs each.—Mr. Johnson's Priestess, 1. Mr. Meeson's Dart, 2.

The SELBY HANDICAP of 3 sovs each was won by Cauliflower.

The AINTREE PLATE of £30 was won by Mr. J. Condron's Peasant Girl.

MURDEROUS ATTEMPT.—The train which left Namur on Sunday last, at 4.30, with 400 passengers, attracted to Châtelet by the announcement of a game at ball to be given there, had arrived within sight of Charleroi, when the alarm whistle having been pulled, the driver at a short distance from the station, near the canal-bridge, no corresponding signal was hoisted by the guard at that point. After blowing his whistle repeatedly, the engine-driver, being extremely alarmed, slowed the engine, and looking down, walked on towards the station. There he found the unfortunate waykeeper lying on the ground, with a dagger wound inflicted on him, and several severe contusions on the head, evidently produced by some blunt instrument. Near this spot, the rails had been partially removed or loosened from the line. It appears, from the investigations which immediately took place, that the authors of this crime had proceeded to effect their work of destruction by means of hammers muffled with cloth, and that one of these instruments had been made use of to perpetrate the murderous attack on the waykeeper. Had the train continued its course, the rails thrown down would inevitably have been precipitated into the canal, and we should have had a repetition of the horrible disaster at Fampoux. The greatest praise is due to the presence of mind and cautious coolness by the engine-driver, by which a fearful accident was prevented.—Brussels Herald

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The past week in the English market has been as animated as the preceding was dull. Consols opened on Monday at 89¾, and on Tuesday, some scarcity of stock being apparent, added to the continued abundance of money, a rise of ¾ per cent. occurred, which was succeeded on Wednesday by a more important advance. Consols opened at 94 ¼; some extensive purchases on speculative accounts, and a rumour that the directors of the Bank of England intended to reduce the rate of interest on loans, caused an advance to 94⅝, afterwards receding to 94⅜ at the close. Yesterday, after the previous week's rise, a reaction would inevitably have been expected, but the minimum Bank rate would be Two-and-a-Half per Cent. No further improvement in prices, however, resulted, the business quotation being at 94⅜ for money, and 94⅜ for the account of the 6th inst. Exchequer Bills again quote 3 pm advance, and India Bonds also show improvement. Holders of the latter security are reminded that the last day for marking the Bonds for the present dividend is the 30th inst., after which no Bonds will be marked, they will be paid off, and the premium consequently sacrificed. At the close of the week prices were not quite so buoyant; the last quotations for the Bank Stock, 194; Reduced, 93¾; Consols, 94⅜; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 94 ; Long Annuities, to expire January, 1860, 8 7-16; Ditto, thirty years, October 10, 1859, 8 3-16; Ditto, thirty years, Jan. 5, 1860, 8 11-16; India Stock, 260; India Bonds, £2,000, 8 pm; Ditto, small, 8 pm; South Sea Stock, 92; New Annuities, 92; Consols for Account, 94⅜; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 49 pm; Small, June, 48 pm.

The Foreign Market, although tolerably firm, has not been the scene of any extensive speculation. Business was not much extended at the beginning of the week, in consequence of the advices by the last American mail; 27½, however, being the highest quotation. This price has not been since maintained. Peninsula securities are a shade lower, but no sales of prices have been effected to any material limits. At the close of the Market Brazilian was 85; Buenos Ayres Bonds, 6 per Cent., 42; Danish Bonds, 1825, 3 per Cent., 72; Equador Bonds, 3¾; Mexican, 5 per Cent., 25¾; ex. int. Dumpos, 6¾; Portuguese, 4 per Cents., 42, Ditto, Account, 26½; Spanish, 5 per Cent., 1840, Account, 17¾; Ditto, 1841, 10; Ditto, 3 per Cent., 26½; Belgian, 4½ per Cent., 88½; Dutch, 2½ per Cent., 12 Gold., 54½; Ditto, 4 per Cent., Certificates, 92½.

The animation in the English market had not the slightest beneficial effect on the prices of Shares. Depression is still the predominant feeling of the public—in all cases coming into the market as sellers, whatever any advance of the most trifling character is registered. This added to heavy on the part of the speculators, whose operations it assists, readily explains the low quotations even the best lines are now obtainable at. The following list:—Aberdeen, 13; Ditto, Preference, 5½; Caledonian, 11; Ditto, New, £10, Preference, 7½; Chester and Holyhead, 10; Eastern Counties, 6½; Ditto, Extension, Five per Cent., No. 1, 2 pm; East Lancashire, 12½; Great Northern, 6½; Ditto, Five Half, A, Preference, 10; Ditto, Late-Half, B, Six per Cent., 5½; Great North of England, 214; Great Western, 56; Ditto, Half shares, 20½; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 10½; Ditto, New, £17, 6½; Hull and Selby, Half shares, 46; Lancashire and Yorkshire, Half shares, 84; Ditto, New, 8½; Ditto, Preston and Wyre, 37½; London, Brighton, and South Coast, New, £5, Guaranteed Six per Cent., 127½; London and North-Western, 112½; Ditto, New Quarters, 36½; Ditto, Fifths, 11½; Ditto, New, £11 Shares, 31; London and South-Western, 88; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, Quarters (No. 1), 11½; Ditto, New, £10, Preference, 9; Midland, 43; Ditto, £50 Shares, 8½; North Staffordshire, 8; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 31; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 4½; South Staffordsh re, 4½; South-Eastern, 18½; Ditto, Scrip, No. 4, 6½; South Wales, 17; Wear Valley, 6 per Cent. Guaranteed, 29½; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 16½; York and North Midland, 18½; Ditto, Preference, 5½; Boulogne and Amiens, 6½; Northern of France, 2½ dis.; Sambre and Meuse, 1½.

On Friday the Consol Market was not quite so active as on the preceding day. The fall in prices, however, was trifling. The Three per Cents, were done at 94⅛, and the New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 93¾. Bank Stock, 193½; India ditto, 260; India Bonds, 8 to 8½ pm. Exchequer Bonds were taken freely firm. Brazilian, 85; Dutch Two-and-Half per Cents, 54½; Russian, 108; and Spanish Three per Cents, 26½. In Railway Shares only a moderate business was doing.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—A very moderate supply of English wheat having arrived for our market this week, the show of samples here to-day was small; nevertheless, owing to large imp rtations from abroad, the demand for all descriptions was in a very dull state, and prices barely equal to those obtained on Monday last. Upwards of [illegible] of wheat have reached us, and there was a considerably [illegible] to-day's market. Scarcely any free foreign arrived [illegible] during and since last week's decline of 1s per quarter since have been submitted to [illegible] of the day was exhausted. The first trading [illegible] rated about sixteenpence [illegible] quarter lower. Malt was in the same [illegible] as on Monday, and prices were [illegible] quarter. Owing to the increased supply of foreign oats [illegible] was sluggish, but that of Englis h was steady. The oat trade ru ed exceedingly heavy, at a fall in the quotations of quite 6d per quarter. Beans, peas, indian corn, and flour were dull in the extreme, at rather lower

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 2630; barley, 4850 malt, 4936; oats, 3190; flour, 6[illegible] beans, —; foreign wheat, 28,850 barley, 19,142; oats, 17,[illegible]; flour, [illegible]

Arrivals this week.—English: wheat, [illegible]; barley, [illegible]; malt, [illegible]; oats, [illegible]; flour, [illegible]; beans, [illegible]; peas, [illegible]. Foreign: wheat, [illegible]; barley, [illegible]; oats, [illegible]; flour, [illegible]; beans, [illegible]; peas, [illegible]; Indian corn, [illegible].

Average prices of the week.—Wheat, [illegible]; barley, [illegible]; malt, [illegible]; oats, [illegible]; rye, [illegible]; beans, [illegible]; peas, [illegible]; flour, [illegible].

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, [illegible]; barley, [illegible]; malt, [illegible]; oats, [illegible]; rye, [illegible]; beans, [illegible]; peas, [illegible]; flour, [illegible].

Tea.—[illegible] packages of Assam have been sold [illegible] at very full prices. On Wednesday [illegible] various kinds were offered. [illegible] changed hands at barely late rates. [illegible]

Sugar.—Only a limited business has been doing in raw, on somewhat lower terms. Refined goods dull. Brown grocery [illegible] per cwt.

Coffee.—Sales move off slowly, but we have no disposition to notice in prices. Good ordinary and fine Ceylons are wanted, and [illegible] 6d to 4s 6d per cwt.

Rice.—Dealers purchase cautiously. In prices we have no change to report. The supply offering is moderate.

Provisions.—The demand for Dutch butter is tolerably steady, at full prices. Fine singles, [illegible]. Holsteins, [illegible]. Friesland and Cork, [illegible] 6d to 1s per cwt. For most qualities of Irish butter—the supply of which is extensive—the buyers is very inactive. As most of the bo ders are not finished to prese as, late rates are fairly maintained. We quote Carlow, [illegible]; landed, [illegible]; Clonmel and Kilkenny [illegible]; Waterford, [illegible]; Cork, 60s to 68s; Waterford, 60s to 64s, and other kinds, 56s to 58s per cwt. Bacon is dull. Brown sides, [illegible] per cwt. Hams move off slowly, but we have no disposition to notice in prices. Good ordinary and fine [illegible] per cwt. Lard is [illegible] 6d to 4s 6d per cwt.

*Hops

NEW BOOKS, &c.

NEW WORKS AND NEW EDITIONS
LATELY PUBLISHED BY

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD AND SONS,

37, GEORGE STREET, EDINBURGH; AND 22, PATERNOSTER-ROW, LONDON.

1. THE CAXTONS: a FAMILY PICTURE. By Sir E. BULWER LYTTON, Bart., author of "Pelham," &c. &c. In 3 vols. post 8vo, price 31s 6d.

2. THE POEMS and BALLADS of SCHILLER. Translated by Sir EDWARD BULWER LYTTON, Bart. With a brief Sketch of Schiller's Life. In 2 vols, crown 8vo, price 21s.

PROFESSOR AYTOUN

LAYS of the SCOTTISH CAVALIERS, and OTHER POEMS. By WILLIAM E. AYTOUN, Professor of Rhetoric in the University of Edinburgh. With an Appendix containing an Examination of the Statements in Mr Macaulay's "History of England" regarding John Grahame of Claverhouse, Viscount of Dundee. A New Edition, in foolscap 8vo, price 7s 6d.

THE WAR IN INDIA

LEAVES from the JOURNAL of a SUBALTERN during the Campaign in the Punjaub. 1848-49. In 1 vol, small 8vo, price 6s.

THE LATE GEORGE PRINGLE RUXTON.

LIFE in the "FAR WEST." By the late GEORGE F. RUXTON, Esq., Author of "Travels in Mexico." In 1 vol, small 8vo, price 6s.

SAMUEL WARREN.

1. NOW and THEN. By SAMUEL WARREN, Esq., F.R.S. A New Edition, being the Third; with the Author's last Corrections and Improvements. In 1 vol, small 8vo, with cloth gilt, price One Guinea.

2. THE DIARY of a LATE PHYSICIAN. A New Edition, in 2 vols foolscap 8vo, price 12s.

3. TEN THOUSAND a YEAR. A New Edition, in 3 vols foolscap 8vo, price 18s.

4. THE MORAL, SOCIAL, and PROFESSIONAL DUTIES of ATTORNEYS and SOLICITORS. In 1 thick vol, foolscap 8vo, price 9s.

DR. MAYO.

LETTERS on the TRUTHS CONTAINED in POPULAR SUPERSTITIONS. By HERBERT MAYO, M.D. Post 8vo, price 4s 6d

A. KEITH JOHNSTON.

1. THE PHYSICAL ATLAS of NATURAL PHENOMENA. By ALEXANDER KEITH JOHNSTON, F.R.G.S., F.G.S., Geographer at Edinburgh in Ordinary to her Majesty. In imperial folio, half-bound Morocco, price £3 3s.

2. THE PHYSICAL ATLAS of NATURAL PHENOMENA [illegible] expressly for this Edition, by Messrs W. and A. K. JOHNSTON, and engraved and coloured under their superintendence, with DESCRIPTIVE LETTERPRESS and a VERY COPIOUS INDEX. In Imperial quarto, half-bound Morocco, price £1 16s 6d. Now ready.

3. THE NATIONAL ATLAS of HISTORICAL, COMMERCIAL, and POLITICAL GEOGRAPHY, from the most Authentic and Authorities Sources, with an INDEX of upwards of 14 000 Names of Places, compiled from the Maps. A New Edition, in imperial 4to, half-bound Russia [illegible]

JAMES GRANT

MEMOIRS and ADVENTURES of SIR WILLIAM KIRKALDY of GRANGE, Knight-Commander of French Knights, Lord of the Secret Council, and Governor of the Castle of Edinburgh for Mary Queen of Scots. By JAMES GRANT, Esq. In one vol, post 8vo, price 10s 6d.

DAVID RUNTON

LETTERS of EMINENT PERSONS ADDRESSED to DAVID HUME. In 8vo, uniform with Burton's "Life of Hume." Price 10s

GEORGE CLEGHORN.

ANCIENT and MODERN ART: HISTORICAL and CRITICAL. By GEORGE CLEGHORN, Esq., of Weems. Second Edition, corrected and enlarged. 2 vols, foolscap 8vo, price 12s

PRINCIPAL HILL

LECTURES in DIVINITY. By the late GEORGE HILL, D.D., Principal of St. Mary's College, St. Andrews. A New Edition, in one vol, 8vo, price 14s.

MRS HEMANS.

THE POEMS of FELICIA HEMANS. With Illustrative Notes; a Selection from the Early Prose Criticisms; and a Portrait of the Author, engraved by Finden from the Bust by Fatcher. In one vol, royal 8vo, price One Guinea

MRS SOUTHEY.

1. SOLITARY HOURS. A New Edition, in foolscap 8vo, price 5s

2. THE BIRTHDAY, and other POEMS. In foolscap 8vo, price 5s

3. CHAPTERS on CHURCHYARDS. A New Edition, in one vol, foolscap 8vo, price 7s 6d.

45, George-street, Edinburgh; and 37, Paternoster-row, London.

Orders received by all Booksellers

ALISON'S HISTORY OF EUROPE.

I.

THE HISTORY of EUROPE, from the Commencement of the French Revolution in 1789 to the Restoration of the Bourbons in 1815. By ARCHIBALD ALISON, LL.D. In 8 vols 8vo, A New Edition, being the Seventh; in 20 vols, crown 8vo; with a copious Index. Price £6 6s.

II.

The HISTORY of EUROPE. A Library Edition, publishing in monthly Volumes, price 15s each. This Edition is printed in large type, on superfine paper, to range in libraries with the standard editions of our English historians, and is ENBELLISHED WITH PORTRAITS. Vols I to VIII are published.

* * A limited number has been printed on thick paper, in royal 8vo, with proof impressions of the Portraits.

III

The ATLAS to ALISON'S HISTORY of EUROPE. Constructed under the direction of Mr. ALISON, by ALEXANDER KEITH JOHNSTON, F.R.S.E., F.G.S., Geographer in Ordinary at Edinburgh to her Majesty

In crown 4to, uniform with the History, £2 12 6

In demy 4to, to range with early editions of the History . 3 13 6

In Re-issue, in Monthly Parts, royal 4to, to accompany the royal 8vo Library Edition, price 8s 6d each.

IV

EPITOME of ALISON'S HISTORY of EUROPE for the use of Schools and Young Persons. In 1 vol, post 8vo, price 7s 6d.

* * A Selection of Maps are published as an Atlas to illustrate the Epitome, price 7s.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

THE MILITARY LIFE of JOHN DUKE of MARLBOROUG . With some Account of his Contemporaries. In 8vo, price 18s. With Map and Plans of Marlborough's Campaigns.

II.

THE PRINCIPLES of POPULATION, and their connexion with Human Happiness. 2 vols, 8vo, price 30s.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD and SONS, Edinburgh and London.

Sold by all Booksellers

Super royal 8vo. 32mo. cloth, gilt edges, price 2s.

BRYANT'S POETICAL WORKS; with a Portrait of the Author, and a Vignette engraved on steel; forming Vol. II. of GRISWOLD'S CABINET EDITION of CHOICE READING.—Vol. I., Longfellow's Outre-Mer, a Pilgrimage beyond the Sea.—Vol III., "Oliver Goldsmith: a Biography," by Washington Irving.—Vol IV.

CLARKE'S MINIATURE EDITIONS, 64 each.—I. The Language of Love. II. The Language of Flowers. 3. The Bell-cord Manual. 4. English Songs

Twelfth Thousand of small 8vo, cloth gilt (or Sequel Present), with Engraved Frontispiece and 4 Title-page, price 6s 6d

ELLEN SEYMOUR; or, The BUD and the FLOWER By Mrs. SAVILE SHEPHERD

"An exceedingly interesting and well-written tale."—Evangelical Christendom. "Needs no recommendation to ensure for it a perusal."—Protestant World.—"A well-written tale."—Christian Magazine.—"Ellen Seymour, or, the Bud and the Flower," well, doubtless, find numerous readers; we need one among them by the time we shall have another Christmas and advantage Gone to present."—Englishwoman's Magazine.—Bath: Binns and Goodwin. London: Simpkin, Marshall, and Co. Dublin: J. Robertson. Edinburgh: Menzies.

Now ready Price One Penny, or Post-free, 1s. 6d.,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING-BOOK

This work is a unique attractive by the EARL ARRANGEMENT. The NOVELTY which smoothes all difficulties appears to Beginners and to the PLEASING ORIGINAL READING which entice the learner to advance of his own accord. The whole is ILLUSTRATED by UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of original designs for the most & string interest.

Published at the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London. A Liberal Allowance to the Trade and to Schools. Supplied for Cash only. Remittances to be made to the Office. On application, terms may be known.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK for 1850

Being the Sixth Annual Issue of this most beautifully embellished and useful Almanac. Illustrated by DUNCAN and other Eminent Artists The Notes of the Month, by Mrs. Loudon, contain a variety of new and useful Tables, &c. &c. The Astronomical Department by JAMES C. ADAMS, Esq., F.R.A.S., and of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich. Published by WILLIAM S. ORR, 156, Strand, London

* * Country orders supplied for Cash on

NEW IRISH WORKS.

LISPINGS of the LAGAN. By FRANCIS DAVIS Price 2s

ANNALS of ULSTER; or, IRELAND FIFTY YEARS AGO By the late Mr. SAMUEL M'SKIMIN. Price 1s

London: HAMILTON PARKER-row; PARRIS TON & BRANDreet Dublin: J. MCGLASHAN, 126, Grafton-street; J. ROBERTSON

In foolscap 8vo, price 5s,

THE LORD OUR SHEPHERD: An Exposition of Psalm xxiii

By the Rev. JOHN STEVENSON, Vicar of Patrixbourne with Bridge. Can ornbury, late Perpetual Curate of Clapham, and Curate of Surbiton. Also, Sixteenth Thousand, in post 8vo, bound in cloth, price 7s. 6d.

CHRIST on the CROSS; an Exposition of the Twenty-Second Psalm.

By the same Author.

London: J. H. JACKSON, Islington-green: ROBERTSON, Dublin: ALLEN, York: LEWIS, Bridlington: and all other Booksellers

NEW WORK BY

THE FAMILY ECONOMIST, Vol. Second, Price 5s, will be published with the Magazines on the 1st of March. It is to be had in Parts, in paper wrapper.

London: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS

STORIES FOR SUMMER DAYS AND WINTER NIGHTS. By the Editor of the "Family Economist." The FIRST VOLUME of these popular Children's Stories will be published with the Magazines on the 1st of December. Price One Shilling

London: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS

Ready with the Magazines on the 1st of December.

COTTAGE COOKERY.—By ESTHER COPLEY, Author of "Cottage Comforts." &c. &c. Re-printed from the "Family Economist." Price One Shilling bound in cloth

This will be the most complete and useful Cookery for the Working Classes published

London: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS

MINIATURE PLANTS and TREES.—Part I., containing Instructions to Propagate and Manage them, in No. XII. of the FAMILY FRIEND, Price 2d. Monthly Part, 1, is now ready, 8 pp. 8vo, cloth gilt, price 2s 6d Elegant Presentation Copies extra cloth, gilt, and gilt edges, 3s 6d

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN and all Booksellers

CHRISTMAS PASTIME.—Vol. I. of the FAMILY FRIEND just published, pri e 2s 6d, contains hundreds of Amusements, Conundrums, Logogriphs, Charades, Acrostics, Transpositions, Anagrams, Experiments, Curious Games, &c. &c. Elegant Presentation Copies, extra cloth, gilt, and gilt edges, 3s 6d

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN and all Booksellers

CRESS.—The celebrated HERR HARRWITZ has just made a new DISCOVERY of the CHESS DEPARTMENT of the FAMILY FRIEND Problems and Games, with Editorial Notes, in every Number, Price 2d. FORTNIGHTLY

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN; and all the Booksellers

PRIZE ENIGMAS.—The Editor of the FAMILY FRIEND has instituted a SERIES of PRIZE ENIGMAS. The Second Prize Enigma will consist of a Gold Watch, a handsome Set of Books, &c., a second Set of Books, upon the plan of the Prizes, for those who supply the correct solution See "Family Friend" for December, price 2d.

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN, and all Booksellers.

NEW SONG, "GENTLE THOUGHTS," Composed by E. J. RIMBAULT. Price 2s. (Sent postage free) This is one of the most pleasing songs of the season. Both words and music are full of expression and beauty. It will be an agreeable companion to the two highly successful songs, "Gentle Words" and "Gentle Lays," by the same composer.

London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—"YES! I HAVE DARED TO LOVE THEE!" by the Author of "Will you love me then as now?" "Oh, tell me, Irish Girl, how you move." "The Secret," &c., price 2s (sent postage free). "This Song will be the greatest favourite of the set." "Words and music full of feeling and appropriate character. We recommend it as one of the best songs of the day."

London: DUFF & HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

"THE SISTER LEE," Song, written and composed by CHARLES BALL. Dedicated to his Excellency the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland. Pianoforte Accompaniment by Signor LANZA. Price 2s (sent free). This delicious Song may be had through any music seller in the United Kingdom, or will be sent direct (postage free) by the Composer, CHARLES BALL, 33, Albany-street, Regent's park, London, on receiving twenty-four postage stamps.

HAMILTON'S DICTIONARY of 3500 MUSICAL TERMS, Thirty-second Edition, by J. BISHOP, upwards of 500 more than in any other work. Price 1s; Fifteenth Edition of Hamilton's Modern Instructions for the Pianoforte, fingered by Czerny, 4s; and Twenty-fifth Edition of Hamilton's Catechism of Music, 1s.—London: R. COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street. Publishers to the Queen

THE ST. JAMES'S MAGAZINE, and THE SAINT'S REGISTER, edited by J. BERNARD BURKE, Esq., Author of "The Peerage," and published on the 1st of every month, price 2s 6d, is devoted to subjects of historical importance, to tales, biographies, description, genealogical research, and to matters of leading feature in the Heraldic Register of the Creation of Gentlemen, Knighthood, and Nobility, illustrated with Coppery and Engravings. These features of having their source recorded, are suggested to communicate with the Editor, care of Mr. HARRISON, the Publisher, 59, Pall-mall.

Just published, price 1d,

THE FAMILY ALMANACK for 1850; or, Children's Guide to Manners in the Dinners and Tea Party, Evening Parties, Conversations, Hints, and Memoranda; with a feast of other original matter

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN, and all Booksellers and Newsmen

TWO HUNDRED STEEL ENGRAVINGS for 8s 6d. These beautiful plates consist of finely executed Views, Portraits, and Figures, from the various Annuals. The impressions are perfect, all different, and admirably adapted for Albums, Scrap-books, Illustrations of Correspondence, &c. A Specimen Sheet sent free by post immediate y on receipt of a post-office order. JAMES REYNOLDS, 174, Strand

READING AND BOOK SOCIETIES.

NOW READY, DELIVERED GRATIS,

A NEW PLAN for READING and BOOK SOCIETIES THROUGHOUT the KINGDOM

A Plan provides an unlimited supply of Standard Works, all the best of double, treble, and quadruple editions, to purchase any work desired, as the first demand has subsided, at one-half the published price.

Delivered Gratis, and sent Post-free, to order, on receipt two stamps, addressed to Mr BELL, Librarian, 19, Holles street, Cavendish-square

NOTICE to BOOK BUYERS.—WILLIAM SELLER has just published Part 99 of his CATALOGUE of MISCELLANEOUS LITERATURE, comprising a large collection of Works on the Drama, Topography, and Natural History, at very low prices and moderate terms; receipt of one penny stamp; grat s on application.—1, Upper East Smithfield, Tower-hill, London

ANCIENT COINS and MEDALS.—Mr. APPLETON WILLIAMS, one of the Numismatic Wood Engravers to the Royal Mint, and author of several Treatises on Coins and Medals, has in stock a collection of fine Greek silver, and fine Roman and Second Brass some fine Roman Denarii, the rare consular Coin of Julius Cæsar, and numerous Coins and Medals of Saxon and Anglo-Norman Kings and Queens, and the most Valuable Collections purchased for cash to any amount, and the most liberal prices given in exchange for duplicates. Commissions executed for many of the Nobility and Gentry. All business conducted in strict confidence. Coins and Medals engraved for Seals, &c., at 2s 6d per line, and Arms painted on vellum, 10s 6d. Specimens of Coins, Medals, and Seals, and Arms painted, sent free by post on receipt of a stamp. Address, 16, Hatton-garden, Holborn.

DIETETIC COCOA.—Dyspeptics and persons of delicate constitutions are strongly recommended to use TAYLOR BROTHERS' DIETETIC COCOA, as being very superior to any preparation of the cocoa-nut hitherto introduced. This article is a combination of the choicest portions, by which the oily part of the nut are ameliorated at the same time its flavour, purity, and nutritive properties are maintained. It is an essential article for the delicate stomach, as it combines great nourishment with ease of digestion, and will be found particularly grateful and soothing to the nervous system, and proves at this season of the year both invigorating and refreshing. Sold retail, in tins, 1s, 2s, and 5s each, by all the principal grocers and tea-dealers, and wholesale by TAYLOR BROTHERS, at their Mills, Brick-lane, and Wentworth-street, London.

SHIRTS, HOSIERY, and UNDERCLOTHING.—RENDY WITHERS, 24, Poultry, begs inspection of his Stock of Hosiery and Underclothing. It is one of the largest and best in London.—Ladies', children, and Gentlemen's Shirts (ready made, or to measure), without stand-up neck names, 31s 6d and 37s 6d the half dozen.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS, 30s. the Half-dozen. "For thirty years before us Mr. Ford's Eureka appears in every way calculated to fit and fully bears out the inventor's statement, as 'the most unique and perfect fitting shirt made.'"—Observer, October 7th, 1849. List of Prices, with Directions for Self-measurement, sent free. Patterns of the new Coloured Shirtings forwarded on application. Receipt of Six Postage Stamps.—RICHARD FORD, 185, Strand, London

SIX VERY SUPERIOR SHIRTS for 26s., to Measure. Any Gentleman can have a perfect fitting shirt, made of the best quality, made to measure, for the above remarkably low price, if not approved of exchanged, or the money returned. Printed Directions for self-measurement, and a fashionable assortment of Patterns sent post free. HOSKINS and Co., Shirt-makers and Inventors of the Self-measurement, 60 to 64, Bishopsgate Street Within (a few doors from Leadenhall-street), and 76, Strand. Established 65 years

THE CORAZZA SHIRT.—CAPPER and CO. have the honour to inform the gentry and public that they have received a patent for the above-named shirt, which they have much pleasure in recommending as the best shirt ever yet made. Any gentleman can have the CORAZZA or any other form of Shirt, of the best manufacture and highest quality, made to measure, for the price of 3s. 3d. round the wrist; 5s. the height of the wrists, 6s. to 12s each; good Linen Shirts, 10s to 20s each. Directions for self-measurement, and a fashionable assortment of Patterns, sent free by post. CAPPER and CO., 24, Regent-street, St. James's, London.

KELLING OFF

KING and SHEATH, Sole Patentees, No. 264, REGENT-STREET, having DISSOLVED PARTNERSHIP,

W. SHEATH is now SELLING OFF the VALUABLE STOCK, consisting of Silks, Shawls, Velvets, Lace, French Merinos, and every article connected with the Silk, Lace, and Drapery Trades, all EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS.

For the convenience of Ladies in the Country, Patterns will be sent postage free.

Address, W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street, London

SUPERIOR FRENCH MERINOES, at 1s 6d the full Dress.

The Superfine Qualities at 1/s 9d and 2s 6d the full dress. Patterns sent free for inspection. Address, W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS in Black Glacés 8.4s, at 1s 6d the Yard. Black Poult-de-Soie, at 2s the Yard. 8 pcs Gros royal, at 2s 6d the full dress. Patterns Postage free. Address, W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street, London.

CHARLES VYSE solicits the attention of his Customers to his entire NEW STOCK of WINTER DONNETS, now ready for inspection, and is sure to find out that has been produced this season, viz. the HUNGARIAN, which for its elegance and variety, is one of the most fashionable and useful bonnets of the season. CHARLES VYSE, 30, Ludgate-hill, St. Paul's. Bonnets forwarded to any part of the country carriage-free. A fashion-plate of the HUNGARIAN BONNETS. Muslins supplied with dress-rate PATTERN BONNETS at really wholesale prices

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN.

Establishment in 1778.

LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN, and WEDDING and GENERAL OUTFITS for HOME, INDIA, and the COLONIES,

at

JOHN CAPPER and SON, 69, Gracechurch-street, LONDON, (adjoining the Lombard-street Entrance) under competent Female superintendance. The prices are economical, the stock is well assorted, and the workmanship excellent of superior quality, very cheap.

BABY LINEN.

Parcels of £3 sent throughout the Kingdom free of all railway carriage.

LISTS, with PRICES, sent POST-PAID

on application to the Establishment, as above.

213, REGENT-STREET

Ladies residing in the Country are most respectfully informed that

KING and COMPANY will forward PATTERNS of all the new Silks, Satins, Velvets, Poult-de-Soies, Gros Royals, Glacés, Moirés, and every article connected with the general Drapery Trade, free of Postage, to any part of the Colonies, Postage Free, on application by letter addressed to

KING and COMPANY,

243, Regent-street,

Opposite Hanover-chapel, London.

N B All Parcels exceeding the value of £5 will be forwarded carriage free.

And all Payments can be made by Post-office Orders payable to WILLIAM KING and Co.

It is with pleasure we announce to the public that the above Establishment has been established with the greatest success, and every article connected with the general Drapery Trade, can be had at KING and Co.'s, 243, Regent-street, opposite Hanover-chapel.

The following is a COPY of a WARRANT forwarded by command of H.R.H. the Duchess of Kent, to Mr JOHN RAHLES, Proprietor of the ROYAL HILL MAGAZINE, 332, Oxford street, owner of the Regent Circus:—

"This is to certify that John Rahles, of 332, Oxford-street, is hereby appointed Hatter to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent."

"Given at Frogmore House, this 8th day of November, 1849

"Her Royal Highness's commands,

(signed) "C. COUPER."

A similar warrant has also been forwarded, by command of H.R.H the Duchess of Gloucester to Mr. JOHN RAHLES, Proprietor of the ROYAL HILL MAGAZINE, 332, Oxford-street, owner of the Regent Circus.

Lace GEORGE and BADLEY, Silkmercers, from Holywell-street, to GEORGE Nearly from business.

JOHN GREGORY, SILKMERCER, 192, Regent-street, begs to announce his numerous patrons and the public, that, in consequence of relinquishing business, the whole of his STOCK of Rich and Elegant Silks, Satins, Velvets, Lace, Crapes, Shawls, Mantles, Cashmere, and every description of Dress Goods are offered for immediate SALE, much below COST PRICE. Every article in his Stock has been marked in a plain figure—a real and immense reduction, so as to effect an immediate clearance. J. GEORGE desires to state that the Business will be carried on as usual, there will be a sufficient guarantee for the principle upon which this sale will be conducted. 192, Regent-street, nearly opposite Conduit-street.

THE SALE IS NOW ON.

BONNETS.—PARISIAN MILLINERY.—To Cash Purchasers, wishing to avoid the charges of Private Millinery, are respectfully informed that the Stock of Rich Velvet Bonnets, all colours, Cap, &c., complete, One Guinea each Rich French Satin Bonnets, Ribbon, Silk, and Feathers, 10s 6d to 21s each Rich Satin or Duchess, richly trimmed, Patent Crape, 15s 6d to 25s 6d Widow Bonnets, rich double crape, 7s 6d to 17s 6d Fine White Swan Chips, for Brides, 10s 6d each Dunstable Whole Straws, the new shape, 2s 6d to 3s 6d More fashionable or more becoming Bonnets cannot be produced, and the Public are invited to visit this London to select from. Country Numbers supplied with pattern Bonnets, and Ribbons, Silks, and Feathers, to match. 2, Dorset-buildings, Dorset-street, Salisbury-square Proprietors, E. WOOKEY and CO

EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS in real FRENCH MERINOES, at BEECH and BERRALL'S, 63 and 64, Edgware-road.

375 Pieces in Black and all colours, at 2s 6d per yard.

450 ditto, at 2s 11d

589 ditto, finest imported, at 3s 6d

Patterns sent free to any part Postage Free

Address, BEECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Edgware-road

N B The Newest Designs in Velvet Mantles Lined with a new and useful Material, called the Waterloo Plaid, Genuine Address as above

BEECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Edgware-road

DAMASK TABLE-LINEN, as LAMBHEID and PERRIN'S, 2, Princes-street, at the LINEN-HALL BAZAAR

The London Company, 66, Cheapside, Bloomsbury-square, are now in possession of their new premises, 2, Princes-street, Cheapside, and continue to import the finest Damask Table-linen, manufactured expressly for the Establishment at Belfast, and will

FALLEN RAILWAY ARCHES, AT CAMDEN TOWN.

FALL OF RAILWAY ARCHES.

On Sunday morning last, about half-past seven o'clock, seven of the newly-constructed arches of the East and West India Docks and Birmingham Junction Railway suddenly fell with a tremendous crash. They were situate on the western side of the Kentish Town-road, and but a short distance from the junction of the line with the London and North-Western Railway at the Camden station.

On Saturday night the whole of the works were left in an apparently safe condition, and the only indication of the approaching catastrophe was at about half-past five o'clock in the morning, when the watchman on duty was alarmed by hearing a cracking noise proceeding from the arches. The seventh arch from the bridge which crosses the Kentish Town-road gave way first, and the six others followed in rapid succession. The greatest fears were entertained that the large arch which crosses the Kentish Town-road would follow; but the solidity of the structure, with the exception of a slight cracking of the brick-work on the western side, withstood the shock. The state of the arch, however, is considered sufficiently dangerous to induce the contractor to adopt the precaution of preventing either foot-passengers or vehicles passing under it, barriers having been erected and police stationed on either side to prevent it. The arches which have fallen were from twenty to thirty feet span. The contractor, Mr. Hicks, and others are wholly unable to account for the catastrophe, as they allege that the construction was upon the most approved principle, and of the best materials and workmanship. It is fortunate that the occurrence did not take place on a week day, when the workmen were employed in placing the ballast over the arches, and in erecting the massive stone-work cornices along the spandril walls. On the Saturday night, at six o'clock, Mr. Hicks's men, 70 or 80 in number, were paid in a small wooden counting-house under the very arch which first gave way. Had the fall taken place at that time, the loss of life would have been immense. The loss sustained by the occurrence is estimated at about £2000.

MATLOCK RAILWAY.—HIGH TOR TUNNEL.

A portion of the Manchester, Buxton, and Midlands Junction Railway has lately been opened, and must have been a delightful boon to the pleasure-seeking tourists of the past season. It is that part of the line which extends from Ambergate to Rowsley, a distance of eleven miles and a half, but attractive for affording excursions to Matlock Bath, Chatsworth, and Haddon, to which celebrated places trains have incessantly poured in from all the principal towns of the midland counties. We agree with a correspondent of the Derbyshire Courier, in considering this portion of the line—from Ambergate to Rowsley—to lie through one of the most enchanting districts in the world, unsurpassable in boldness, grandeur, and magnificent character.

On starting from Ambergate there is nothing particularly worthy of notice, if we except the noble woods of Alderwasley. On approaching Whatstandwell-bridge the rails, canal, turnpike-road, and river being all in juxtaposition, is certainly rather extraordinary, and a circumstance seldom or never occurring.

With the appearance of a dwelling-house planted on the top of a masoned tunnel, the great and increased beauty of the scenery may be said to commence. The valley narrows, and as you pass over the chaste metal bridge, which crosses the Derwent, and approach the south entrance to the Lea Wood tunnel, the view around and in front is exquisitely grand. A metal aqueduct for the canal here crosses the rail. On emerging from the Lea Wood tunnel, at the north end, the country appears to open out a little more, and you pass Lea valleys and manufactories to the right, and the highly-cultivated and rich pastures of F. Arkwright to the left. Here, also, is the terminus of the High Peak Railway, an object of great curiosity, from its numerous inclined planes, and the manner it is worked by stationary engines and endless chains.

Further on, as you approach Willersley Tunnel, you see Willersley Castle, Rock House, Cromford Church, the Heights of Abraham. Willersley Tunnel is long and dreary; but you emerge from it to the Matlock Bath Station, where a majestic amphitheatre of scenery opens. To the left, on the opposite side of the river, is the celebrated Matlock Bath.

You next pass through the High Tor Tunnel, dry and comfortable, and the gloom much dissipated by an opening in the centre, wherein you enjoy daylight for a second or two, and a pretty view of the road and river. On emerging from the High Tor Tunnel, another picturesque amphitheatre strikes your view—the river and new bridge, neighbouring woods and rocks, the residence of John Greaves, Esq., Boat-house Inn, &c.—all tending to render this, perhaps, as interesting a scene as any of the foregoing.

The High Tor is one of the most remarkable rocks in England, in consequence of the immense mass of bare perpendicular rock exhibited to such an altitude. The limestones of the Jura, in Southern Germany, do not show so bold a face. The granite of the Alps have perpendicular faces or chasms to the depth of 2000 feet, but then no living being has ever been able to descend and look up to their gigantic forms; on the contrary, in Derbyshire, you can walk in amongst these masses, and admire and somewhat estimate their proportions. In Wales, Scotland, and on the Alps, the scale of altitude and breadth is vast and profound, requiring time to consider and estimate their vast proportions; but in Derbyshire the exquisitely beautiful prevails. The lofty rocks and bold crag, richly wooded; the magnificent upland and rounded knoll; the sweet valleys intersected with silver streams, such as the Derwent, the Wye, and the Dove, are comprised in one beautiful picture; whilst the attractions of either of these rivers, the lovers of the rod and line can well attest. They are, perhaps, the best for trout and grayling in the kingdom.

In our Illustration is shown the fissured face of the Tor, and its thickly-wooded base, through which the tunnel is cut.

We hope on some future occasion to resume our illustration of this delightful line of railway. The next portion to be executed is 14 miles to near about Calver.

Royal British Bank.—This institution, incorporated by Royal Charter, and established for the purpose of introducing into this metropolis the principles of the Scottish system of banking, commenced operations at the premises of the bank, Tokenhouse-yard, on Monday. In the evening the Governor and Deputy-Governor, together with a large company of the directors and shareholders, celebrated the inauguration of the undertaking by a dinner at Lovegrove's Hotel, Ludgate-hill. Mr. John M'Gregor, M.P., the Governor of the bank, presided.

THE HIGH TOR TUNNEL, MATLOCK, ON THE MANCHESTER, BUXTON, AND MIDLANDS JUNCTION RAILWAY.

London: Printed and Published at the office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198 Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday November, 24, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 401.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

THE GERMAN DIFFICULTY.

THE long-foreseen difficulty between Prussia and Austria has at length arisen upon the question of German Unity. Austria has officially declared that she will not recognize the proposed German Parliament which has been summoned to meet at Erfurt under the auspices of Prussia; and that, if necessity arise, she will be prepared to prevent its assembling by force of arms. The step thus taken is a serious one, and provocative of a civil war; and if such a civil war should unhappily break out, it is difficult to see how it can be prevented from embroiling Europe.

Yet the question of German Unity is one which the German people ought to be allowed to decide for themselves, and in which the rest of Europe has no other interest than that which each separate state of so mighty a commonwealth must always have in the peace, happiness, and prosperity of the whole. The west of Europe, more especially, can but desire that Germany should take the rank to which she is fairly entitled by the intelligence, the numbers, and the wealth of her people; and can but deplore that the rival ambitions of German Sovereigns, and the various personal and dynastic interests involved, should make the attempt to fuse into one homogeneous power the various petty states of Germany, a matter of such extreme peril to the rest of Europe.

There are, in reality, four classes of interests involved in the struggle which has been going on in Germany ever since the peace of 1815, and of which the final issue was only placed in a clear manner before the world in the months succeeding the French Revolution of 1848. The intellect as well as the sentiment of Germany has long brooded over the vision of a Germany united under one Government, and forming one large, prosperous, and free state. The late King of Prussia took the first step towards the realization of this great project. The scheme for the abolition of the various custom-houses, by which each small German state made a fiscal war upon its German neighbour, originated in Thuringia in 1816, and was warmly supported by the King of Prussia, not merely as a desirable and sensible reform of an absurd system, but possibly with those ambitious dynastic views of which he was accused at the time. "By persuasion, by coercion, and by the popularity of the scheme with the German people, and by its proved advantages," says Mr. Laing, in his "Notes of a Traveller," "the Zollverein, or German Customs Union, was extended over all the countries, from the Lake of Constance to the Baltic, from the Moselle to the Niemen, with the exception only of Hanover, Mecklenburg, the Hanse Towns, the Danish-German provinces of Holstein and Schleswig, and one or two small principalities." This great fiscal and political movement thus included Prussia, Bavaria, Saxony, Wurtemburg, the principality of Hesse, the duchy of Hesse, and Hesse-Homburg, the Thuringer League, the Grand Duchy of Baden, Nassau, the town and territory of Frankfort, and the duchy of Brunswick, the population of the whole of which exceeded 30,000,000. Its object combined internal Free-Trade among the Germans of all these states, with protection to German industry against the rest of Europe and the world. "The enthusiasm and unanimity of all classes on all subjects connected with this League," continues Mr. Laing, "and the discussions of its importance and effects on the prosperity of all United Germany, exceeded any demonstration of the public mind ever known among the German people. The first object of Prussia, in taking up the League, was, no doubt, to advance her own power over the industry and commerce of all the rest of Germany—to secure an exclusive market for the productions of her manufacturing provinces on the Rhine; but her second was to interweave her influence with the material interests of all Germany, so as eventually to supplant Austria and the state machinery of the German Confederated States, and bring all the latter ultimately under the Prussian sceptre." Such was the steadily-pursued policy of Frederick William III. It gave the sentimental idea of unity a material footing among the people, and associated the great trading and commercial interests with the students and philosophers, the poets and romancers, amongst whom the theme had long been a favourite one. Frederick William IV. never lost sight of the policy of his father, and he took advantage of the effervescence of public feeling excited by the French Revolution of 1848, to advance a step further. The late King was slow and cautious in his projects for the aggrandisement of Prussia. The present Monarch has not been more ambitious, but more impulsive and hasty; and his famous declaration to his insurgent people in March, 1848, that, for the future, "Prussia should ascend into Germany"—Das Preussen geht in Deutschland auf—gave the whole of Europe to understand that he no longer thought it necessary to cover his pretensions with a veil; and that, failing other means of success, he would, if need were, use those of popular clamour and the revolutionary sentiment and excitement of the time.

This declaration brought Prussia into a direct antagonism with the Emperor of Austria. A large portion of the Austrian Empire is essentially German—which portion, if the King of Prussia succeeded in his design, would necessarily form part of the new Empire of Germany. Austria would, in this event, form the mere fragment of an Empire, composed of her Hungarian, Sclavonian, and Italian territories. These two great Powers are, therefore, the two first parties involved in the struggle for "German Unity." The third is composed of all the various Kings, Grand Dukes, Dukes, Princes, and small potentates, from the Kings of Hanover and Bavaria down to the Dukes of Nassau, Hesse, and Saxe-Coburg, who would be "mediatized," or, in other words, dethroned, and transformed into hereditary Peers of Germany, if this revolution should be accomplished. These Princes have no desire to be swallowed up in the devouring jaws of the ambition of Frederick William IV. The fourth party to the quarrel is Russia, who must foresee this danger, among many others, that, if Austria, by any turn of events, were deprived of her hold upon Germany, by the loss of all her German territory, she would be impelled, by the impulse of self-preservation, to become a Sclavonic, instead of a Teutonic state, and to gather under her wing all those scattered Sclavonian tribes and nations who bear no love to Russia—including those portions of ancient Poland which fell to the share of Russia and Prussia in the three successive dismemberments of that unhappy land. Russia will, therefore, should Prussia persist in her Erfurt Parliament, and Austria attempt to carry her threat into execution, throw her whole weight in favour of the status quo in Austria and in Germany; and the former parties will then resolve themselves into two: Russia and Austria will be fast allies, as they were in the Hungarian insurrection; and the small Princes of Germany will be compelled by the popular enthusiasm of the German States, to range themselves, per fas aut nefas, under the banners of the King of Prussia.

THE BRITISH SQUADRON IN THE DARDANELLES.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

But Austria cannot be prepared for a war of this kin.l; and Russia can have no desire to precipitate such a catastrophe. Prussia cannot recede, but she may temporize; and it is her own interest, as well as that of all Germany, that she should do so. It may, therefore, be anticipated that these three Powers, though they may snarl at each other, will not at present attempt to bite. Besides, it is quite possible, although it may be somewhat difficult, to re-constitute Germany on a basis that would satisfy all interests, without the sacrifice of such a power as Austria to the personal ambition of the King of Prussia. It may be necessary that Germany should be united; but it is not at all essential that it should be united under the sceptre of the House of Brandenbourg. The actual position of the question has been ably stated by the Prince of Leiningen, half-brother of her Majesty Queen Victoria, in a memorial, at present exciting much interest in Germany. The Prince was chief of the Archduke John's first Cabinet, when the Frankfort Parliament of last year gave some countenance to the notion that the re-cons itution of Germany was a possible thing; and his opinions are entitled to all the respect which high position, proved intelligence, and opportunities of forming a correct judgment, can claim. He says: "Instead of that unity for which this time last year men were ready to sacrifice their substance and their blood, we now have a perfect dualism; in lieu of transcendant liberty, the military dictatorship of two great Powers. Germany, that was then on every lip and in every heart—for whose glory and greatness the very utmost was readily to be dared—the very thought of such a Germany has vanished now; the moment has been lost, never again to return. The changes and revulsion of circumstances are really astonishing. The will of the nation, if such it may be called, is broken and frittered away. The business of reconstructing Germany has slipped from the hands of the representatives general of the nation, and has passed into those of the diplomatists of Europe, into those of the superior Governments and their large armies. That Germany, which was the aim of the patriots, which was preliminarily enunciated in the well-known programme of Gagern, and which was at last ruined and mangled by the National Assembly—that Germany is now the figment of a dream. What is to be done now? An answer to this question is nowhere to be found. No one has courage to give a direct answer to it. First of all, it must be considered whether the Federal State is to be brought about by force of arms, or by a second revolution, or rather by both at once; and whether in this way the hindrances above mentioned are to be, or can be, removed."

The Prince concludes that neither Prussia nor Austria can or will go to war to decide the supremacy of Germany. He concludes, moreover, that the question is not ripe for immediate solution, and advises "all those who have hitherto numbered themselves among the German patriots, to direct their efforts—1. Towards the production of a union between Austria and Prussia, by the removal of all hindrances which can possibly stand in the way of such a union; and 2. Towards the defence, on the one hand, of true constitutional liberty." This is good advice; but, whether the King of Prussia and the Emperor of Austria be not too far involved to follow it, is a question that the future will show. It is quite clear, however, that war is not the interest of either.

THE MEDITERRANEAN SQUADRON.

Upon the preceding page our Artist has pourtrayed the several vessels of the Squadron now at anchor in the Dardanelles, and consisting of the Queen, Hosse. Calcdonia, Prince Regent, Powerful, Vengeance, Bellerophon, Vanguard, Vanguard, *Vanguard

WEST INDIES.

We have news from Jamaica to the 23rd October. The island was healthy.

The course pursued by the Legislative Assembly appears to be anything but satisfactory to the public, being characterized by the grossest personalities.

The Import Duties Bill was passed into a law of the island on 20th October. It contains a clause levying duties on all goods imported into the island since the 5th of October. The tariff of this bill has been somewhat changed, the duty on salted pork having been increased 4s. per barrel; manufactured tobacco also had been raised, whilst unmanufactured had been decreased. The bill has been passed for fifteen months.

There was still a good deal of excitement regarding retrenchment, but nothing satisfactory had been done, more than the appointment of a committee, who would report to the House.

In proof of the deplorable state to which the island had been reduced, it is stated that the paupers of Kingston (numbering from 80 to 100 old and miserable creatures), to whom a small weekly allowance was made from the city funds, had for three weeks been dismissed without their usual pittance, there being no funds to relieve them. Crime was on the increase.

The African superstition of Obeeism was reviving at a fearful pace in several parts of the island. This is attributed, in a great measure, to the moral retrogression of the peasantry, owing to the abandonment, within the last two years, of schools in the rural districts, consequent on their present inability (from the discontinuance of planters' subscriptions and the low rate of wages) to contribute the necessary means for their support as heretofore.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

THE QUEEN v. WILLMER AND SMITH.

The Attorney-General, on Saturday, in the Bail Court, applied, upon the part of Mr. J. L. Ricardo, M.P., chairman of the Electric Telegraph Company, and of the directors of that company, for leave to file a criminal information against the defendants for a libel published in the Morning Herald of the 14th October last. The libel was very lengthy, containing various charges of undue partiality on the part of the company towards the Times and other papers, in the disposition of the Morning Herald; and in this libel Messrs. Willmer and Smith had taken occasion to allude to a communication made to London from Liverpool in July, 1848—a period of great excitement and disturbance here, and elsewhere, and they had accused the directors of having made that communication public in the neighbourhood of Capel-court for their own peculiar purposes—he supposed for purposes of stock-jobbing. He would read to the Court the passage to which he referred:—

> On the 27th of July, last year, a hoax was played upon us, by fictitious news from the south of Ireland being handed to us for publication in the London morning papers. The news was of a very startling description, and proved to be utterly untrue; but that fact is quite immaterial to the case at present. Upon taking it to the Electric Telegraph-office, the clerk said that the wires were engaged by their own business, and could not be disturbed; but that they forgot to forward it at once to the Morning Herald without charge, on the condition that they might afterwards use it themselves. This arrangement, we believe, was immediately acceded to. The conditions, however, were entirely broken by the company, for the intelligence was first made known in Capel-court, afterwards to Sir George Grey, in Downing-street, and the eleven o'clock was delivered at the Morning Herald office, though it had been given to them at Liverpool at a quarter-past seven. So much for good faith.

The Attorney-General explained what had really taken place on the occasion referred to. Mr. Ricardo, on the arrival of the message, was apprised of its peculiar importance, and that the following notice from the manager at Liverpool had accompanied it:

> The news just sent was received in Dublin last night, by special sustain to Mr. Conway, editor of the Dublin Morning Post. It was brought to this office to be sent, as a private message, to three of the London papers. Our express—which had no reference to this important news—was in course of transmission. I declined to stop our express, which had precedence to this important news—unless they allowed it to go to the company, assuring them that all the papers would be supplied. Rather than delay it until ours was finished, they agreed to do so. You can, therefore, make any use you think proper of it. Is it to be posted? It is known in the west, and will be in town to-night. Smith's clerk came together. I have the original report received from Mr. Conway, which I refused to send until I had seen Mr. Conway's letter in which the report was enclosed.

Fearing the extreme importance of the message, Mr. Ricardo at once went to the Home Secretary, and communicated to him the news received by the company; and he also placed the instruments of the company at the command of the Government, that they might ascertain the authenticity of the intelligence. Mr. Ricardo also stated to the Home Secretary the nature of the message, and informed him that, from the conditions on which the company had received it, they could not delay its transmission more than half an hour or three quarters of an hour. Having communicated the information to Sir G. Grey, and enabled him to give such orders as might be necessary in case any excitement should be caused in London by the publication of the intelligence, Mr. Ricardo went to the London office at Westminster, and gave directions that the information should be sent to the various papers, and should be posted in the company's news-room. He (the Attorney-General) had the most positive affidavit of Mr. Ricardo, and other gentlemen present at the company, declaring that they believed that Mr. Ricardo stated they had, neither on that nor on any other occasion, used that or any other news for their own purpose.

The Court granted the rule.

THE QUEEN v. THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF ROCHESTER.

Sir F. Thesiger applied on Saturday last to Mr. Justice Patteson, in the Bail Court, for a rule, calling upon the Dean and Chapter of the cathedral church of Rochester to show cause why a writ of prohibition should not issue, to prohibit them from proceeding further in the matter of certain charges which had been preferred against the Rev. Robert Whiston, concerning a certain pamphlet which that gentleman had published, under the title of "Cathedral Trusts and their Fulfilment;" or in the matter of a certain citation under the seal of the Dean and Chapter, bearing date in August, 1849; or for carrying into execution a deprivation signed in a document of the like date, by which the sentence of deprivation appeared to have been pronounced and received by the Dean and Chapter, for the removal of Mr. Whiston from the head-mastership of the Free Grammar School of Rochester, or for the office of minor canon of the same church, &c. According to the affidavits and documents before him, it would appear that the cathedral church of Rochester was founded and endowed by Henry VIII. in the year 1541. By the same endowment the Dean and Chapter were created a corporation, and estates and possessions were given to them for divers purposes; but one material purpose was the foundation and endowment of a grammar school, which was to consist of a head-master and under-master, twenty free scholars, and other boys who might be educated at that school. The statute provided for the appointment of a head master and under-master; provision was also made for four students being sent to the University, and being maintained there out of the funds of the endowment. It therefore appeared by the statutes that there was to be a grammar school established; a head-master and an under-master, who were to be appointed by the Dean and Chapter; 20 free scholars, and four students who were to be sent to the Universities—the free scholars and the students to be maintained out of the funds of the Cathedral endowment. Stipends were fixed for all the parties. The Dean was to receive £100 a year; the Canons £20 a year, the free scholars a small sum (£2 13s. 4d.); and the students who were to be sent to the University were to receive, until they took the degree of Bachelor of Arts, £5 a year; and after taking that degree, until they took the degree of Master of Arts, £10 13s. 4d. a year. It was clear that the object of the endowment was, by these stipends, to exhaust the whole fund. In November, 1842, Mr. Whiston was appointed head-master of the Grammar School; he continued his office was for life, or during good conduct; and it appeared that his predecessor before the last had died in office; and his immediate predecessor had left only upon being presented to a living by the Dean and Chapter, which conferred him in his options. Mr. Whiston, finding that no provision had been made by the Dean and Chapter for the accommodation of boarders in the school, laid out £4000 in the purchase of a house and land for the purpose of providing the necessary accommodation, and in addition to the large sum of £2700 upon fitting up the house, £700 of which was for the accommodation of the boarders. This he would not have done had he not considered that his office was for life; and that he was not liable to be removed "for any cause whatever negligent, or unfit or inapt to teach," which were the words of the statute. At that time there was not a single free scholar in the school; but soon after his appointment he had not less than 20 boys, and only 20 free scholars, which would show that he was fit for his office. Mr. Whiston, having his attention called to the statutes of the founder, and finding reason to believe that the object of the founder was that all the different persons mentioned, and particularly the free scholars and the students, should be educated, he felt a respect pend allotted to them under the statutes, and that the whole of the possessions of the Dean and Chapter should be exhausted, in certain proportions, in the satisfaction of the different stipends; and finding that the Dean and Chapter had already had been allotted at £100 a year, had now been raised to the sum of £1500 a year, and that the canons, who were to receive £20 a year, now had £700 a year, but that the free scholars were still left at the original stipend of £2 13s. 4d., and that the students at the Universities received only £5 a year, believed that the Dean and Chapter were not following the intention of the founder, and were not performing their duty in that respect and students; he therefore wrote a letter to the Dean and Chapter upon the subject, requiring from them a more equitable appointment of the funds. A correspondence ensued, which terminated in the Dean and Chapter depriving Mr. Whiston of his office, on the ground of his having committed a grave offence, by publishing the above-named on the subject, viz. "Cathedral Trusts and their Fulfilment," in which he took a review of all the cathedrals under the new foundation. Complaint having included among them—and brought them to bear upon the question; expressing himself in strong and energetic language with regard to what he considered to be a most flagrant breach of trust with respect to all these different cathedrals of the new foundation. They, however, subsequently restored him to his office; and further proceedings on their part led to a protest from Mr. Whiston, which they rejected, and a second time removed him from his office.

The question is at present before the Lord Chancellor in the Court of Chancery; and, pending that appeal, the present application was made.

Mr. Justice Patteson had great doubts whether in this case a prohibition would lie. He thought it must be a mandamus to restore Mr. Whiston; but, if Sir Frederick had a strong opinion the other way, he had better adopt the course he thought best. It was only his (Mr. Justice Patteson's) first impression.

Sir F. Thesiger would rather take his Lordship's first impression than his own last.

Mr. Justice Patteson said, it seemed to him it would be better to have a mandamus to restore. He did not see how it was possible for the Dean and Chapter to deny that they had deprived this gentleman after their sentence

Rule for a mandamus granted.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

THE ATTEMPTED PARRICIDE AT CHISWICK.

On Wednesday, Henry Bathurst Monkhouse, 27, mariner, who was indicted for feloniously shooting at John Farmer Monkhouse, his father, with intent to murder him, was placed at the bar, but, on application of counsel for the prisoner, the trial was postponed to next session, to allow time to make inquiries with regard to the prisoner's state of mind

THE MURDER AT THE MILLBANK PENITENTIARY.

John Francis, aged 33, and described as a watchmaker, was placed in the dock on Thursday, charged with the wilful murder of Thomas Hall.

Mr. Bodkin stated the facts of the case, which, though but recently before the public, we may notice briefly. The prisoner at the bar was a convict confined in the Millbank Penitentiary, and on the 9th ult. he was calling out from his cell for one of the warders of the prison, when the deceased went to him and chided him, and threatened to inform the governor. The door of his cell was opened for the purpose of enabling the prisoner to bring out a large covered earthen pan which was in his cell, and, with another prisoner, he brought it down as usual to the water-closet, where he emptied the contents and returned, with the empty pan in one hand and the lid in another. Upon the prisoner coming back to the cell, where the deceased was standing, the prisoner struck him with the lid and knocked him down, and when down he struck the deceased several times; and when persons who were attracted by the noise came up, they found Mr. Hall nearly dead.

Evidence fully supporting the case having been adduced,

Mr. Ballantine addressed the jury on behalf of the prisoner, and said that, upon the facts, he felt the jury could come to no other conclusion than that of returning a verdict of guilty against the prisoner. But he had to urge upon their attention the state of mind of the prisoner, which he would be able to show was from his youth upwards unsettled, and was at the time of the commission of the offence unquestionably in a state of insanity. The learned gentleman commented at some length upon the evidence, and endeavoured to show that even from that evidence there were certain signs of insanity, which those who were better acquainted with the prisoner would corroborate, and detail facts which would prove his insanity beyond all question

At the close of his address the learned counsel called his witnesses.

Mr. Nathan Constable, a surgeon, in St. Mary Axe, said he had known the family of the prisoner for many years, and had attended them professionally. Knew his sister Amelia, who died two or three years ago. He knew her from her birth—she was only two or three years younger than the prisoner. Disease was hysterical madness. I know that his aunt is in confinement. The whole family are of weak mind. A cousin of the prisoner attempted to commit suicide by throwing herself into the river.

Mr. Blyth, resident medical officer on board the hospital-ship Unity, at Woolwich, said: In March, 1846, the prisoner came on board, and I attended him; and both Mr. Bessey and myself considered him insane. He had a delusion that some one intended to hurt him, and at night he used to shout out that some one was murdering him. He remained several weeks insane, but gradually recovered. He was under my observation at the hospital, when he was suffering from dyspepsia and an ulcerated sore, which he thought might turn into an abscess. Hereditary insanity is very seldom cured.

Mr. Bodkin then called the following witnesses:

Dr. Sutherland, jun., said: I am a physician, confining my practice and attention to diseases of the mind. By the direction of the Governor, I visited the prisoner on two occasions in Newgate, when I had a conversation with him. I formed an opinion on the state of his mind. I asked him if he recollected when the murder was committed, and he said he did. I spoke to him about his hearing, and he said he was out of his mind in 1846, and that the convicts said if I had not been for the officers in the ship, he would have thrown himself overboard. I [illegible] said he did not recollect. If the prisoner was insane, or really mad, in 1846, from terror, I should think it very probable that the same cause would produce temporary insanity again

Mr. M'Murdo, surgeon of Newgate, said he had seen no symptoms of insanity exhibited by the prisoner while in the prison. He had been there early in part of 1845 was seized with temporary insanity from terror, and was sane for two years afterwards, but was subsequently affected by terror, I think insanity might again return.

Mr. Beddk.n then made a few observations in reply, but was interrupted by

Mr. Baron Alderson, who said there was really no question in the case; for, although there could be no doubt about the guilt of the prisoner, it was equally clear, from the evidence which had been given, that he was a person of weak intellect, who had been once mad, and who, at the time of the murder, might have been seized with a return of his madness by circumstances acting upon his mind, and thus become a certain irresponsible for his actions. If the Jury thought he was sane, they would find him guilty; and, if not, they would return a verdict of insanity.

The Jury, without leaving the box, returned a verdict of Not Guilty, and found that he was insane.

The prisoner was then removed.

IRELAND.

REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—At the weekly meeting on Monday, in Conciliation Hall, Mr. John O'Connell read the following letter from Mr. Bright, M.P., which was afterwards ordered to be inserted in the minutes of the Association:—

> Rochdale, 29th Nov., 1849.
>
> My dear Sir,—I duly received your letter of the 20th inst., and also your letter of the 22nd, enclosing a resolution of the Loyal National Repeal Association, expressive of their appreciation of my recent speech on Ireland. I can say with all truthfulness that I am not conscious of having stated the views I have formed and publicly explained with regard to the calamities which afflict your country have met with, the entire opinion of the Association. I have seen the land, and I have seen the people. I know the land is fertile, and that the people are industrious. With these elements, I propose to work out the salvation of Ireland; and my policy would so secure to industry its reward, and, by perfect justice in your political and ecclesiastical arrangements, so extract the zest of bitterness from your social system, that were it adopted I have faith that Irishmen would speedily effect the restoration of Ireland.
>
> I am delighted to learn that, using the constitutional means with you and with us on the great questions which so deeply interest both countries; and I shall especially rejoice if the coming session of Parliament exhibits a more cordial and united effort on the part of the English and Irish members to secure those wise legislative measures as shall be formed for the relief of your suffering country.
>
> I feel grateful to your association for the resolution they have passed, and to you personally for the very kind manner in which you conveyed it to me, and beg to subscribe myself
>
> My dear Sir,
>
> JOHN BRIGHT.
>
> Hon. Secretary, Loyal National Repeal Association of Ireland

The rent for the week was £21 6s. 2d.

THE COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Sir John Romilly was recently in Dublin on the subject of a bill to be presented on the opening of Parliament for the abolition of the Court of Exchequer. The Chancellor of the Exchequer is aware of all equity business in the Court of Chancery. The amount of business in the Four Courts is far less than some time ago, suitors preferring the cheaper and more summary courts of the assistant-barristers.

AGRICULTURAL IMPROVEMENT.—A meeting, attended by Sir R. Kane (the President of the Queen's College), Mr. Fagan, M.P., Colonel Chatterton, the High Sheriff, and several other gentlemen of distinction, was held in Cork, on Saturday last, for the purpose of establishing a model farm and school of industry in Munster, in connexion with the provincial college, "by the formation of an agricultural, botanical, and arboricultural garden, and experimental farm, and also a museum of materials connected with these important subjects, so as to secure to this locality the appropriation of the £5000, as set forth in the second section of the 11th and 12th Vic., chap. 115." The necessary steps to carry out the objects of the meeting were unanimously adopted.

INCREASE OF EJECTMENTS.—At the recent quarter sessions of Thurles, county of Tipperary, nearly 270 ejectment processes were entered for adjudication—many of them affecting several holdings derived under intermediate landlords, known by the designation of "middlemen," a class of half-proprietors which famine and poor-rates have nearly extinguished. In the Superior Courts at Dublin, also, an unprecedented number of ejectments have been brought during the present term, particularly in the Court of Queen's Bench, bearing out that court the forms are less expensive and tedious, inasmuch as the occupiers alone need be served with copies of the ejectment notices, whilst, in the Common Pleas and Exchequer, all parties interested in the property must receive notice of the proceedings. Those ejectments apply to almost all parts of the south and west.

SOUTH AFRICAN EMIGRATION.—From all parts of the country emigration is still in progress, and shopkeepers and small traders, as well as farmers, are going off, although some unfavourable accounts have been received from persons who had sailed last spring of the prospects for emigrants in the United States, whither the tide of emigration has been flowing. The Clonmel Chronicle has the following from a Cashel correspondent:—"Vast numbers are still emigrating to America from this locality and the adjacent parts of the country. Such is a strong opinion against going to any British colony, solely on the ground that taxation is expected in all such places. Some emigrants have a strong prediction for the mother colonies, but this is forced to yield to a sense of self-interest, and hence the preference has been to the United States. It is, and about this place, at a maximum, if any one can be found to take it. Thousands of acres are lying profitless; money is rapidly disappearing from amongst us; the farms are passing to all which tends, to enrich thereby a foreign land, where, they allege, no other barony constable nor rate collector will take their hard-earned gains."

THE COMTE DE MONTEMOLIN.—Letters dated the 17th ult. have been received from Venice; by them we learn that the Comte de Montemolin has conferred the order of Isabella the Catholic on Mr. George Merry, for his zealous and gallant services during the war, and his fidelity on all occasions and through all varieties of fortune.—Morning Post.

NATIONAL FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETY.

A meeting of the National Freehold Land Society was held at the London Tavern on Monday night. The chief object of this society is to qualify its members to vote at elections for counties. For that purpose freehold estates of considerable extent are to be divided into plots of sufficient value to confer the right of voting, and the qualifications so obtained are to be allotted to the members at cost price. The chair was taken by Mr. Samuel Morley. Amongst those on the platform were—Messrs. Richard Cobden, M.P., Wm. John Hall, Charles Gilpin, John Morland, W. S. Burdon, John Cassell, &c.

The hall was crowded in every part. Mr. Cobden's entrance was announced by loud cheering from the body of the meeting.

Mr. Cobden, M.P., proposed the first resolution as follows:—

> That this meeting is of opinion that the freehold-land movement, adapted as it is to the varied pecuniary circumstances of all classes of the people, is calculated to improve the parliamentary representation of the country

He said, if he understood the nature of the meeting, it was one for business purposes. They were met to support and promote the objects of the National Freehold Land Society—an association formed to enable individuals, by small monthly contributions, to accumulate a fund for the purchase of the county franchise. That association had a double object—it was at once a deposit for savings, and a means of procuring a vote. They did not meet as part of the Birmingham Freehold Union, which was formed of gentlemen from all parts of the country subscribing to stimulate by all legitimate and constitutional means the extension of the freehold franchise. Their object was to purchase large estates and divide them in small portions among the members of the association at cost price. In that consisted the force and the value of the principle of association. It was not a building society. It was registered and enrolled under the Building Societies Act, certified by Mr. Tidd Pratt, for the purpose of giving all the security of the act of Parliament to the members; but it was, in fact, a mutual benefit assurance society, which proposed to give other advantages as well. Building societies possessed no power of purchasing land dividing estates. It was true a bit that was proposed to be done at the risk and upon the responsibility of the directors of the association, who would purchase at their own peril, and give the refusal of such portions as were necessary to the members at cost, or wholesale price. A great deal of the success of a associations of this kind depended, first, on the correct calculations of those who had its formation; and, secondly, on the stability and character of those who had its responsible management. With regard to the calculations on which this society was founded, it had been stated that it was proposed to find a freehold qualification for £30—that was on the first prospectus but he (Mr C.) imitated it would be omitted. All he proposed to do himself was, that whatever property was bought, should be divided among the members at cost price; and he could not and would not pledge himself whether a vote would cost £20, £30, or even £40. He had certainly happened in Birmingham to hear that a number of votes were bought for as little as £20; but that might have been a lucky accident; and he (Mr. C.) would certainly not be a party to delude any one into the belief that he could vote regular price, having shared this principle. The next consideration was that which concerned the managers of the society. He was happy to see the chairman one of the trustees—he needed not to say that his friend stood well in Lombard-street—(hear)—and all the other trustees were men whom he would be happy to leave trustees in the event will for his family. That was the only test in public matters; and, if a man would not bear it, he (Mr. C.) would have nothing to do with him. Besides the trustees, however, there was to be a board of directors. In the first attempt every member of the board who he was in town, and could only say he would be very happy to meet any of the gentlemen composing it in private life and call him his friend. So far he firmly believed that the affairs of the society were in the very most respectable hands. It had been objected that the association would not be able to find freehold property of sufficient size and quantity in a convenient position. There was difficulty in everything; and those whose business it was to turn a green eye upon all things would, no doubt, find them in this. But he believed the difficulty in working out this plan was not insuperable. (Hear.) It was true that in seeking to purchase property they might not be able to get it at their own door; but in that case they would only have to go farther afield. He saw no difficulty in qualifying for any county. The land need not be land to build mansions on, but might be good enough for a night even be agricultural soil; but it would give a secure rent. If it was in the neighbourhood of a town, it was certain to increase in value, because, as the operation of the corn-law repeal would diminish the price of food, towns would grow more and more consequently ground in their neighbourhood would rise in price. The avidity of the peasantry for small plots of land was most surprising. In Wiltshire it was taken such advantage of that £7 per acre was paid for small holdings. Therefore, any member of the society wishing to let his purchase would be certain to get 40s. per annum per acre for it as garden-ground. Having explained the question practically, he should next go a little wider into the question, and look at it generally. They were assembled in the confident hope that the qualification they were no Red Republicans or Revolutionists, they were digging down to four centuries to find the origin of the freehold qualification. The question was—and it was not to be disguised—had a great change in the circumstances of the country of public power in this country? He avowed that his object in promoting the association was, by all legal and constitutional means, to place the political power of the country in the hands of the middle and industrious classes. (Cheers.) England had no occasion to fight in the streets. Their forefathers did that for them during the whole of the 17th century, in which England was in the same position as France

THE NEW DRAWING-OFFICE, AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

we rejoice to find that the Bank have thus done something for the art as well as the public and their proprietors.

HER MAJESTY'S SHIP "PLUMPER," AT HONDURAS.

We have been favoured by a Correspondent with the accompanying Sketch of her Majesty's steam screw sloop Plumper, on the occasion of her taking possession of the Fort at Truxillo, one of the harbours of the province of Honduras, under the following circumstances, on the morning of October 4:—

"It appears that the Government of Honduras has at different times borrowed from British merchants sums of money, and in other ways contracted a considerable debt, which it has shown great disinclination to liquidate. The Plumper was, accordingly, sent to insist on the immediate payment; and for this purpose, on arriving, on the evening of the 3d, she took up a position to command the batteries and landing-place, at Truxillo, and prepared for action. An officer was then sent to communicate with the Governor; but no satisfactory answer having been received, at dawn on the following day the Plumper, in the promptest manner, landed an armed party of sailors and marines, headed by the gallant Captain, with the first and second lieutenants, and Mr. Bush (mate). Forthwith they took possession of the strong fort, and by their intrepid daring, and the judicious manner in which the whole affair was conducted, prevented a shot being fired. The Plumper at this time, with the steam up, and anchored close abreast of the fort, in charge of the master, had all her guns loaded with shot and shell, and was fully prepared to support her landing party, if resistance had made it necessary; but the vigilant people left on board saw, with much satisfaction, the comparatively small band march into the fortress, at the gate of which a guard of above 30 soldiers laid down their arms and surrendered.

Having retained possession of the place until the Governor had, from the commissariat chest—besides laying an impost upon all the inhabitants, to the number of about 5000—met the debt to the utmost of his ability, the fort was evacuated, and the Plumper left the same evening for Jamaica.

CAPTURE OF FORT TRUXILLO, HONDURAS BY HER MAJESTY'S STEAMER "PLUMPER."

EXPOSITION OF FRENCH INDUSTRY.

A large collection of specimens of the industrial arts of France has lately been opened at 13, George-street, Hanover-square, and has proved very attractive as an exhibition. It has been admirably arranged under the direction of M. Sallendrouze de Lamornaix, ex-deputy and member of the Acting Council of Manufactures at Paris, and himself one of the largest and most distinguished manufacturers of France. The articles exhibited, it is understood, are the property of a body of manufacturers, and include a selection from the late National Exposition at Paris; out of which, and our own projected "Great Exhibition of the Works of Industry of all Nations," in 1851, the anticipatory assemblage of M. Sallandrouze de Lamornaix has, doubtless, originated. It is not, however, strictly speaking, a National Exhibition, as our forthcoming one will be; but when we say that it contains some exquisite works from Sèvres, the Gobelins, and Beauvais, and the ancient Royal carpet manufactory of Aubusson, the reader will conclude it to partake largely of a national character.

The several articles are arranged with much taste and effect in a suite of seven rooms, besides galleries, staircases, and corridors; and when these are lighted with gas, in chandeliers of beautiful design (for the Exhibition is open until ten o'clock at night), the scene is a very splendid as well as interesting spectacle. Wherever the eye turns, specimens of art at once elaborate and beautiful arrest its gaze and invite scrutiny. Bronzes and other ornamental metal-work, of exquisite design and perfect finish; costly and luxurious cabinet-work; Sèvres porcelain, admirably painted and embellished; bookbinding, with which the illuminated missals of mediæval times cannot be compared; tapestry from the looms of the Gobelins; carpets from Aubusson; silks, satins, and velvets from Lyons; paper pattern of extraordinary beauty in design; lacework and cashmere shawls, which must ensure to the exhibition the patronage of the fair sex; specimens of jewellery, though not in such quantities as might have been expected; and last though not least remarkable, boots and shoes, in the soles of which sewing is dispensed with: these are the leading classes in which the articles are arranged with much artistic taste. In viewing the several rooms, it is impossible not to feel that in articles of ornamental luxury, in elegance of design, and splendour of material, the industrial ingenuity of France is guided in the right direction of art; and that nowhere is art studied in a greater variety of forms and appliances than by the French manufacturers. There is, however, a constant tendency to adaptation from the antique—in some instances objectionable, but generally exercised with skill and judgment.

SEVRES PORCELAIN.

The first room in the suite of apartments in Geo ge-street is principally occupied with bronzes; and that of most pretension is an allegorical representation of Shakspeare, by M. Emile Thomas. The most curious object in the apartment is a missal, the property of the Queen of Spain, and lent by her to be exhibited. it is bound in purple velvet, inlaid with gold and gems. Another interesting item is a specimen of bookbinding, of beautiful design, delicately carved in lime-wood.

CENTRE-PIECE, BY VILLEMSENS.

The second room is filled with specimens of cabinet-work and ornamental furniture by MM. Tahan and Laurent, and with a large collection of those artistic objects for which the establishment of M. Susse is so well known.

The staircase leading from the second room to the third is hung with decorative papers from the manufactory of MM. Madire and Genoux, which are of characteristic excellence of design.

The third room, in position and otherwise the most important, has its walls hung with immense Aubusson carpets, and tapestry from the looms of the Gobelins. The carpets represent happy combinations of fruit and flowers, and tesselated patterns, which are preferable to walking over mullions and Gothic tracery. We have engraved part of one of the Aubusson products. But most striking is a vast piece of tapestry hanging opposite the carpets, upon which Steubens' celebrated picture of "Peter the Great, saved at the shrine from the Strelitz conspiracy," is copied with marvellous effect. The colours have wonderful freshness and beauty, and the figures are of colossal boldness. Time was when tapestry was made at Mortlake, on the Thames, and used to hide clumsy joinery, and keep the wind from piercing through many a wainscot cranny; it is now hung up in palaces as a picture. We omitted, by the way, to mention a set of tapestry pictures in the second room, mistakable for paintings. To return to the large room, there are some beautiful specimens of Roman Catholic church furniture; and some chocolate sets of Sèvres porcelain, which really deserve to be carried from place to place in satin-lined cases. The portraits on some of the porcelain have the highest finish of miniatures; and mighty pretty women they are, too, as Peggy would have said.

The bronzes in this apartment are by Marchand and Charpentier, and attracted great attention at the Paris exhibition. The furniture, which is of a very costly and elegant description, is by MM. Grobé Frères, and has been arranged in the apartment with great taste. The chalices and other altar ornaments have been contributed by Villemsens. The pianos and other musical instruments are by Erard, Kriegelstein, and Jaulain. The last great feature in the exhibition of specimens in the third room is the collection of porcelain from Sèvres, conspicuous among which are three superb vases. The largest, which is of a tazza form, is a combination of bronze and porcelain, the body of a brilliant blue, with garlands of flowers beautifully painted by Jacobs; the other two are of remarkably elegant upright forms, with diapered gold grounds, and having in compartments the portraits of men illustrious in the arts of peace.

In the small corridor leading to the fourth room, are two exquisitely carved oak cabinets by Grobé.

BRONZES, BY CHARPENTIER AND SUSSE.

In the fourth room are specimens of ornamental mouldings in laminated zinc, by the "Société des Zincs de la Vieille Montagne," which gained the large gold medal at the late Paris Exposition. Another thing in this room worth notice is a new machine, exhibited by M. Schlumberger, of Mulhouse, for carding wool. It appears to act with great ease, and in a very effectual manner, and is stated to card from 50 lb. to 60 lb. of wool in the day.

In the fifth room, which is surrounded by a gallery, supported upon twisted columns, is a collection of optical instruments by the celebrated Lerebours, of Paris. Among these is an object-glass, said to be the largest and clearest yet manufactured. This apartment also contains specimens of silk, satin, and velvet manufactures from the looms of Lyons.

The staircase leading up to the gallery is ornamented by paper from the manufactory of Zuber, who recently received the decoration of the Legion of Honour for the improvements he has introduced into this branch of national industry. The gallery contains books published by Matthias, Plon, Paguerre, and others. The walls are ornamented with carpets, shawls, printed goods, lace, &c.

The sixth contains beautiful Cachmere shawls, by Gaussen, Heibert, and Denseirouze; lace from the manufactories of Delile and Deschamps; and of artistic jewellery from Froment Meurice, Rudolphi, Rouvenat, Philippe, and others.

PART OF AUBUSSON CARPET.

The seventh room is occupied by the manufactures of M. Sallandrouze de Lamornaix. Here are seen tapestry little inferior to that of the Gobelins; curtains destined for the reception-rooms at the Hôtel de Ville, Paris; portières in all the best styles; and a variety of other productions, for which M. Sallandrouze de Lamornaix has been honoured by the decoration of the Cross of the Legion of Honour, and medals at each Exposition from a very early period.

The specimens we have engraved comprise a group of Sèvres porcelain of the most exquisite form; a small group of bronzes by Charpentier; and a beautiful bronze, an ornamental centre-piece for the table, by Villemsens; besides the carpet, already mentioned.

The group of Sèvres comprises three vases of most beautiful form and decoration—the dark one, of deep blue, with gilt flowers, being in the style denominated the Egyptian: the central one, white, with blueish ornaments, Etruscan; and the third, covered with decorations in the richest cinque-cento style. A beautiful little figure of a satyr, in bisque, holding a basket intended for flowers on his head, forms part of the group, and it is impossible to express too high an opinion of the ability displayed in this elegant little model; the careless freedom of the position, and the sly merriment of the face, being most admirable. A small salt-cellar, supported on four dolphins, remarkable for the delicacy of the workmanship, though of questionable taste, completes the group.

Of the two bronzes by Charpentier, which we have engraved, one represents a figure in armour and surcoat, holding a lance with its pennon, the lance bearing on its shaft a trophy composed of the Roman fasces, shields, swords, &c., branches for six lights being affixed to the fasces. This figure is remarkable for its characteristic modelling and picturesqueness, though a serious anachronism is committed in having a soldier clad in mediæval panoply, carrying a classic trophy. This candelabrum is extremely appropriate for a baronial hall. The figure by the side of the trophy-bearer is a beautifully executed man-at-arms. Most of the objects sent by Charpentier are of a chivalrous character, and a chandelier is of extreme richness and piquant design. We should observe that all Charpentier's bronzes are coloured, so as to carry the appearance of being formed of steel and bronze, and this has a very nice appearance. In the same Illustration with the knights just described, is a flower vase of bronze, by Susse, of excellent design and workmanship. The centre-piece, by Villemsens, is an effective and picturesque group, consisting of a shaft supporting a bowl of lotus leaves, from which are pendant festoons of vine, &c. On three sides of the shaft are figures emblematic of hunting, fishing, and agriculture, admirably modelled; and the base is of rich and pleasing character.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Dec. 2. First Sunday in Advent.
MONDAY, 3.—Belzoni died, 1823.
TUESDAY, 4.—Sun rises 7h. 49m., sets 3h. 51m.
WEDNESDAY, 5.—Mozart died, 1792.
THURSDAY, 6. Nicholas. Moon's Last Quarter 6h. 34m P M
FRIDAY, 7.—Sun rises 7h. 53m., sets 3h. 50m.
SATURDAY, 8. Conception of B. V. Mary.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 8.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. h m	M. h m	M. h m	M. h m	M. h m	M. h m	M. h m
3 10	3 39	4 8	4 35	5 10	5 45	6 20
A. h m	A. h m	A. h m	A. h m	A. h m	A. h m	A. h m
3 28	3 57	4 25	4 53	5 28	6 3	6 39
M. h m	M. h m	M. h m	M. h m	M. h m	M. h m	M. h m
3 45	4 14	4 42	5 10	5 45	6 20	6 57
A. h m	A. h m	A. h m	A. h m	A. h m	A. h m	A. h m
4 3	4 32	5 0	5 28	6 3	6 39	7 15

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Mr. BATTY has the honour to announce, that his BENEFIT will take place on MONDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 3rd, when, by desire of numerous Friends, a Popular Selection of the Most Famous Artistes of the establishment, the following gentlemen have, in the most handsome manner, announced their valuable services:—YOUNG HERCULES, the great American Equestrian. M. PAUL LANZAS will, in a manner, black more BEDA; and M. HENOIT PUCK will, in a highly original manner, display his performance. The whole will conclude with the BATTLE OF WATERLOO, concluding with a Look, Picture of Equestrian Novelties.

EXETER HALL.—WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.—WEDNESDAY NEXT, DEC. 5, will be the SECOND CONCERT when the celebrated Vocalist, FRANCESCO BERGER, will make his FIRST APPEARANCE for this season, and will sing, together with M. DUSSEK and SIGNOR ARCHETTI, the admired Duet by Rossini, "Ecco ridente in cielo." Leader, Mr. BLAGROVE. Conductor, Mr. COOPER. Stalls, 7s.; may be had of Mr. STAMMERS, at the office of the Concerts, 4, Exeter Hall, and of all music-sellers.

MR. WILLY'S CONCERTS, at the NEW MUSIC ROOMS, ST. MARTIN'S HALL, 86, LONG ACRE. The Second Concert will be given on MONDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 3rd, when Mr. WILLY will be assisted by Mr. BENNETT, the celebrated violoncellist Signor PIATTI, Miss DOLBY, Miss ELLEN LYON, Mr. W. H. HOGUIN, Messrs. PERSHING, SHARLAND, REED, PRATTEN, and other members of Mr. Willy's Quadrille Band, will perform at the First Concert on MONDAY Evening next, December 3rd. Commence at half-past Seven. Tickets 2s. 3s. and 5s each

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The First of a Series of Illustrated Lectures, by Dr Bachhoffner, on the Philosophy of Scientific Recreation, Daily at Two o'Clock, and on the Evenings of Tuesday and Thursday at Eight. An entirely New Set of Dissolving Views of London in the Nineteenth Century and as it now is, with a Descriptive Lecture, Daily at Half-past Four, and in the Evenings at a Quarter to Ten. The Views of Rome are shown Daily at One o'Clock. A Lecture on the Celebration of the Votes and on the Art of Singing, by Mr. G. Buckingham Ellis, Esq., on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at a Quarter to Four, and on the alternate Evenings at Eight. Lectures on Chemistry, by Mr Ashley. Exhibition of the Oxy-Hydrogen Microscope. Diver and Diving-Bell, &c. Admission, 1s.; Schools, Half-price.

WILL POSITIVELY CLOSE ON SATURDAY NEXT, DEC. 8TH,
THE MISSISSIPPI and MISSOURI RIVERS, exhibited, by command, to her Majesty the Queen, H.R.H. Prince Albert, and Royal Family, at Windsor Castle.—New Views, showing Western Towns of the Mississippi, Town, Towns, Villages, &c., to New Orleans. Exhibiting at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, every morning at half-past two, evening at half-past seven.—Admission, lower seats, 3s.; gallery, 1s.

THE NILE, RE-OPENED, with NEW TABLEAUX.—At the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, the New and Splendid MOVING PANORAMA of the NILE, exhibiting the whole of the Stupendous Works of Antiquity now remaining on its banks between Cairo, the Capital of Egypt, and the Second Cataract in Nubia. Painted by HENRY WARREN and JAMES FAHEY, from Drawings made by them on the spot, during a residence of many years in Egypt.—Afternoon Three; Evenings, Eight o'Clock.—Stalls, 3s.; Pit, 2s.; Gallery, 1s.

NOTICE.—SMITHFIELD CLUB PRIZE CATTLE SHOW, and EXHIBITION of SEEDS, ROOTS, IMPLEMENTS, &c., for 1849, COMMENCES on TUESDAY, instead of Wednesday, and CLOSES on FRIDAY Evening, instead of Saturday, as heretofore, 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th DECEMBER.—Bazaar, King-street, Portman-square.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

E. J. S., Romford—The usual charge for bidding volumes of our Journal is 5s. 6d., but we could undertake the order.

J. H. KENNEDY.—We can see nothing to do with pattern lotteries.

B.—Distance may be measured by a Perambulator, or surveying wheel, with a dial plate; or by a Pedometer, in the form of a watch.

NEMO.—If our Castle is, as we stated last week, ab. 40 feet miles north-west of Pennycuik.

S.—The issue of "Raising the Wind" is by the late Mr. Kenney; this is all we can reply to HENRY Oxford.—Both ladies are living: the Latter has not rel ired from the stage.

VERITAS.—The speech may be found in the newspapers for June, 1842

A SCHOOLBOY.—The italicised words in the Bible were supplied by the Translators

F. H. Bills of Exchange were invented by the Jews, as a means of removing their property to nations where they were perse-cuted.

CANUS.—Apply to Ackermann and Co., Strand.

F. M.—Sir Robert Should the Island be declared a destination, we will [illegible]

C. [illegible] and fow and far

B. [illegible]

M. [illegible] and it may be had in Parts at 2s. 6d. each.

W. H. [illegible] price 18s

An Old [illegible] Copy and The Centrifugal [illegible] some time, been exhibited in London

ESPANA.—Trudgeon's French and Spanish, and Spanish and French Dictionary (Longman and Co.) professes to be the most complete of all. Neuman, perhaps, comes next.

J. B. H., Huddersfield.—"De good by health, and blest to find it same," is by Pope.

L. M. N.—Legal.

VETUS.—We cannot precisely inform you.

HOMO, York.—Apply to Mr. Cubitt, engineer, Lomas-street, Southwark

WOOLBRIDGE.—Of Newcastle, Esho-square

T. R.—Fee views may be, blained of Messrs Evans, publishers, Lincoln's-inn-fields. The "Bear Hunt" is by Landseer.

R. S.—The address of Lord Ashley is 21 Upper South street, Grosvenor square.

BRAN.—We have no item in the machine.

WARLIKELY.—The price of M. Soyer's new Cookery Book is 7s. 6d.

W. G.—See the instructions in Wood Engraving, in No. 114 of our Journal.

AN EAST INDIAN, Edinburgh.—White's Curry-stuff is sold by Morel, Piccadilly.

W. H., near Chesterfield should apply to a private hor.

J. F., Cork.—See the article on "Canary-birds," in No. 241 of our Journal.

E. F. G.—The consenting reply is the accept-

R. J. W.—The foundation is an excellent one

W. M., Cork.—No Number in question may be had, by remitting the stamps

A. D., Derby.—You have been misinformed.

W. H.—Horse and Co., 178, St. Vincent-st.

F. G., Wolverhampton.—The address of Mr. Harry Perry, patentee of the [illegible] shower horses, a Look-yer-street [illegible]

A YOUNG AUTHOR.—The address is 23 Paternoster-row. The remuneration varies [illegible]

C. [illegible] Chemical Gazette, to be had [illegible] order of any bookseller.

M. [illegible] can neither confirm [illegible]

[illegible]

J. H. [illegible] the security [illegible]

CORA, should [illegible] to the Commissioners of Police about the morning [illegible] such a solicitor as to the liability of the landlord.

DOUBLE.—[illegible] X X. X. A. H., Gainsborough; T. C., Tunbridge Wells.

TYRO.—Burgess' Lithographs may be heard of at Ackermann's and Co, Strand

A. M., Clapton.—Financial

F. F., Hampstead.—We cannot give the recommendation in question.

F. F., Hampstead.—We cannot give the recommendation in question.

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER, Plymouth.—The Columbian Debt has long since been divided into Grenada, Venezuela, Peruvina, and Guatemala Bonds. You are recommended to apply to a country banker or stockbroker, who will, on receipt of a letter, be able to inform you the best mode of proceeding

BETA, S. N.—The best course to charge anything you may choose to pay, you having the option of charging the bill or not, on the terms proposed

H. [illegible] Address the Vice-Chancellor of the [illegible]

A. [illegible] Prince of Leiningen, K.G., is [illegible] brother of Queen Victoria being son of the Duchess of Kent by her first husband [illegible] Edward Prit, Chief Secretary of Ireland, is son of Joseph Pearl, Esq., of Bowes near [illegible] and is consequently the late Sir Robert Peel, Bart

ABSENT.—S. S. Brighton.—You've five-pulses [illegible] of Jas II will not be on a premium [illegible] a very brilliant state

HERALDICUS TYRO.—The crest cannot be authentic [illegible] intermixed six generations [illegible] of the original grantee, [illegible] assumption by a stranger of the original grantee, [illegible] only satisfactory mode of establishing a pedigree is by parish registers, wills, and family papers. The heraldic charges on a shield of arms have no particular meaning, [illegible] The use of supporters [illegible] belongs to those families only whose right is acknowledged at the Heralds'-office. The only commoners who are entitled, legally to supporters, are Knights Grand Crosses of the Bath, and Knights Grand Crosses of St. Michael and St. George, the chiefs of the whole in scotland, and those to whom the honour appears as by specific grant. The popular definition of a gentleman is that stated by our Correspondent.

A CONSTANT READER.—We do not know of any authorised [illegible]

H. C. P. Messrs. Wrench, Sandeman, Kirk & William-street, London

J. S. S., Jedburg.—Received.

A.—Christianity According to the doctrine of the Catholic Church, each person of the Trinity is a distinct and real God yet the three are one mind.

SAPERE.—The General Board of Health are at Gwydyr House, Whitehall. See No. 237 of our Journal

A CONSTANT READER.—The Marquis of Waterford sits in the House of Lords as Baron Tyrone, of Haverfordwest, County Pembroke

MRS. BRIGHT.—Residence in this country will [illegible] natural-born subject. Apply at the Foreign Office

S. G.—The arms of [illegible] are "Ar, [illegible]

ANNIE AND [illegible] is nothing in [illegible] within a ribbon exhibiting his motto.

[illegible] Should her Majesty the Queen Dowager [illegible] Wm. Warren, College-street, [illegible]

[illegible] Illustrations," 2 vols., in Three Parts [illegible]

[illegible] ation on Bridges and Crests has reached us

A. LEGOBLEY St. Sidwells.—George Edward Knox are the Christian names of Lieutenant Knox

ROS, Todmorden.—Which family of Lockwood [illegible]

A TYRO.—It is not lawful for a [illegible] his deceased wife's sister, under any circumstances

BOOKS, &c. RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Swedenborg; a Biography.—The British Gazetteer.—Sullivan's Album for 1850.—The Circuiteer.—The Four Pilgrims.—The Family Friend. Vol. I. Napier's Excursion in Southern Africa.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1849.

THE news from California brought by the mail steam-ship Hibernia shows the progress that has been made in constituting the golden region into a state of the North American Union, and in providing for the due administration of its affairs. The State Convention of California has been engaged for some time in drawing up a Constitution. It was expected that the questio vexata of slavery would give rise to long and acrimonious debates, and that the settlers of California would not be scrupulous in recognising that "domestic institution" of the Southern States which considers oxen and black men in the same light of goods and chattels. It has turned out otherwise; and, much to its credit, the Californian Convention has agreed, without a division, that no slavery shall be permitted within the territories of the new state. A few members of the Convention spoke in favour of submitting the question to the separate vote of the whole people; but, as they did not propose an amendment to that effect, California was unanimously declared to be a free state. The Convention having established the principle, did not, however, carry it out to its full extent; but, on the question of the suffrage, decided that every male citizen of the United States, resident for six months in California, and 21 years of age, with the exception of Indians, Africans, and the descendents of Africans, should be entitled to the privilege of a vote.

The Legislature is to consist of two branches—an Assembly and a Senate, elected for two years. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, and the Executive department are to be elected in the same manner and for the same term; and generally the other details of the Constitution are based upon the model of those existing in the older states of the Union. San José has been chosen for the capital, instead of San Francisco. The new Constitution was to be submitted to the people on the 7th November, and, if adopted by them, as there was every reason to anticipate it would be, the Legislature was to assemble in the first week of December. It was expected that Colonel Fremont would be elected Governor. The present population of California exceeds 100,000 persons, of whom 25,000 are established in San Francisco and its immediate neighbourhood. The accounts from the "diggings" continue to be equally favourable, and, although possibly exaggerated, leave no room to doubt that the yield of the precious metal is exceedingly abundant.

THE progress of the bold experiment made by the President of the French Republic continues to be watched with much interest in this country, and in every part of Europe where the people are not involved in revolutions of their own. In France, the equanimity with which the great bulk of the people look on is somewhat extraordinary, and will, no doubt, encourage the President to pursue the straightforward, honest, and manly course which has so scared and scattered the various factions with which France is afflicted. He has risen greatly in popular estimation since the dismissal of the Odillon Barrot Ministry, and has displeased no other parties than those conflicting ambitions which sought to make a tool of him for their own purposes. They mistook their man when they speculated on making of him either a General Monk or a Richard Cromwell. The French caricaturist of the Journal pour Rire has happily expressed their confusion and the President's policy:—"Messieurs," he is represented as saying to Messrs. Molé, Thiers, and Barrot, "on ne dit que vous avez promis de ne marcher sur le ventre; mais cet exercise ne me convient pas; l'état de ma santé est trop délicat. Sortez! His energy, combined with his scrupulous adherence to the forms and spirit of the constitution under which he was elected, and which he has sworn to obey, and with the daily extending recognition of his tact and ability, have already produced a salutary effect upon the hostile Assembly. To judge from present appearances, the apprehended coup d'état will be rendered unnecessary, by the establishment of a better feeling between these two cognate powers. The great bulk of the Assembly consists of waverers—of men who will adhere to the winning cause, whatever it may happen to be; and large numbers of these have already expressed their adhesion to the policy of the President. A coup d'état could be a gain to no party; and the Assembly is as much interested in preventing it as the President. The French are not yet ripe for liberty. They do not even understand it. What they do understand, and, above all things, desire, are order and stability. They see no chance of either under any kind of restoration, or under the tender mercies of the Red Republicans; but they see something like a fair prospect of both under Louis Napoleon. The greater his honesty and courage, the fairer the prospect for the defeat of all the factions. Hence his present popularity, and hence the acquiescence of the great bulk of the people in a personal policy which would not have been endured under Louis Philippe. Hereafter, the bounds of French liberty will be extended. At present it requires a foundation; and that is the task upon which the President is employed. For the sake of France, we trust his experiment will have a fair trial.

A ROYAL COMMISSION has at length been appointed to inquire into and report upon the state of Smithfield Market. The constitution of the Commission will deprive the most obstinate stickler for the modern barbarism of a cattle market in the heart of a great city, of all pretext for accusing it of being drawn from amid men of one opinion. All interests are fairly represented in it. As jurymen upon this great question, we have Mr. Cornewall Lewis, M.P., and the Hon. F. Byng, as representing the interests of the people at large; Professor R. Owen, as representing science; Sir James Duke, M.P., and Mr. John Wood, of the Court of Common Council, as representing the pecuniary interests of the Corporation of London; and Mr. Wm. Miles, M.P., the celebrated agriculturist. In such hands as these all parties may be well contented to leave the question.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

We lament to announce the continued and increasing illness of this illustrious lady. The bulletins of the past week, we have no much reason to fear, leave no ground for hope of a favourable change in her Majesty's condition.

On Sunday her Majesty was described to have had little sleep during the previous night, and to be more feeble in consequence.

From Sunday to Thursday there was no favourable change; and on Friday her Majesty's health was thus reported:—

The Priory, Nov. 30.

"The Queen Dowager has passed an extremely restless night, and her Majesty shows symptoms of increased distress this morning.

"DAVID DAVIES, M.D."

Her Majesty is attended by her angust sister, the Duchess Ida of Saxe-Weimar and the Princesses Anne and Amelia, daughters of the latter, as well as by all the members of her household.

The Duchess of Kent paid a visit to her Majesty on Monday.

POSTCRIPT.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

CAPELL v. THE OVERSEERS OF ASTON AND OTHERS.—This was an appeal from a decision of the revising barrister of the North Staffordshire district, who decided that shareholders in Freehold Land Societies were not entitled to be placed upon the Parliamentary register. That decision excited great dissatisfaction amongst the numerous parties interested, and an appeal was made to the Court of Common Pleas. The case was argued at great length during the present term, and the Court took time to consider. Yesterday (Friday) the Court delivered judgment, reversing the decision of the Court below, and ordering the name of the appellant to be placed upon the register. There were several other cases of the same nature, in which the same judgment was pronounced. This decision will have the effect of greatly increasing the parliamentary constituency of the county.

CONSECRATION OF THE NEW BISHOPS.—Dr. Hinds, Bishop elect of Norwich, and Dr. Ollivant, Bishop elect of Llandaff, were consecrated on yesterday (Friday) morning, at St. Mary le Bow Church, Cheapside, with the usual solemnities. The Bishop of Madras (Dr. Dealtry) will be consecrated next Sunday.

We understand that the Master-General of the Ordnance has appointed George Butler, Esq. (Chief Clerk in the Secretary's office), to be Secretary to the Ordnance, in the room of the late R. Sykes, Esq.

Mr. George Bowyer, D.C.L., has been unanimously elected by the Benchers of the Hon. Society of the Middle Temple to the office of Lecturer of that Society. Mr. Bowyer was a candidate for the borough of Reading at the last election.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE POLISH REVOLUTION.—Thursday being the 19th anniversary of the Polish revolution of 1830, a great number of the Poles resident in London attended the funeral service performed in memory of those who fell in that national struggle. Mass was said by the Rev. Mr. Long in St. Patrick's Chapel, Sutton-street, Soho.

THE SCOTTISH HOSPITAL.—Yesterday (Friday) being St. Andrew's Day, the annual meeting of this excellent national society was held in the hall of the Corporation, Crane-court, Fleet-street, for the election of officers of the Corporation, and for the transaction of the ordinary business. Sir Walter Stirling, Bart., in the chair. The minutes of the previous quarterly meetings were confirmed. Major Adair, the secretary, then read the report and balance-sheet. Thanks were voted to the Duke of Montrose, for the dignified way in which he had sustained the office of president of the institution, as also to the Chisholm, and to the medical and other officers of the society, for their valuable services, and they were re-elected. The Marquis of Stafford, the son of the Duke of Sutherland, was elected in the room of the late Sir Charles Forbes, so also was the Lord James Stuart, in the room of the Right Hon. Fox Maule, whose period of office had expired. After an interesting discussion with respect to the condition and progress of the children in the school, during which it was resolved that the superintending clergyman of the schools should make an annual report of their condition, a vote of thanks was moved to the Chairman, and the meeting separated.

THE CITY POLICE ORDER AS TO DESTITUTE PERSONS.—The following order was communicated to the City police force on Thursday:—"The Commissioner orders that the sergeants and constables of the City Police take all persons found begging in the streets before a magistrate; and that all destitute persons be taken to the relieving officer of the district in which they may be found, and unless forthwith relieved, that the officer be summoned for neglect of duty."

FIRES.—On Thursday night, between eight and nine o'clock, two alarming fires broke out. The first was at the Albion, 23, Macclesfield-street, Soho-road, the property of Mr. Haswell, by which the upper part of the house was burned out, and the lower rooms much damaged.——The other fire happened on the premises of Mr. Graves, a staymaker, carrying on business at 81, Boswell-street. The flames were confined to a workshop in which the fire commenced, but great damage was done to the lower portions of the premises and the stock by water.——On Thursday morning, at half-past eleven o'clock, a fire broke out in the private residence of Mrs. Mary Fewtner, a lady of independent property, situate in Wells Lion-street, Pentonville. The flames originated in the back parlour, at which time Mrs. Fewtner was lying in the room asleep. The cries of the poor lady brought assistance, and by great exertions the fire was subdued, but not until nearly the whole of the building and wearing apparel in the room were destroyed, and Mrs. Fewtner so frightfully burned that little hopes are entertained of her recovery.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Paris journals of Thursday and Friday supply a few details (but they are of little interest) connected with the alleged Legitimist conspiracy. What whatever might have been its proposed object, neither the individuals engaged in it, nor the means they adopted to carry it into effect, gave it the appearance of a very formidable conspiracy. The persons apprehended at the Rue de Romfort are, as we have already stated, of no station, influence, or talent; and they seem to have exercised little or no discretion in endeavouring to conceal their operations.

M. Lamartine's constituents are not the only ones pleased at his long absence from his parliamentary duties, but that hon. member has written to say, that illness has been the principal cause. Feeling, however, that the electors of Loiret ought to be more efficiently represented in the Assembly, M. Lamartine promises, that if in three weeks his health should not improve, he will resign his seat into their hands

M. Proudhon has laid before the Assembly a proposition for a yearly tax of six per cent. on rentes.

AUSTRIA AND PRUSSIA.

The reported rupture, which we have noticed in another place, between Austria and Prussia, turns out to be a false alarm. The Berlin State Gazette gives it an official contradiction, by declaring, upon authority, that Austria had not protested against the meeting of the Parliament at Erfurt, in December, and consequently that there could be no foundation for the other part of the rumour, that the Court of Vienna intended to enforce that protest by armed intervention, if necessary. Other German journals also confirm this statement. Private letters from Berlin of the 25th ult., however, assert that a dispatch had been received by the Prussian Government from Austrian Cabinet upon the subject, warning the former of the dangers that might arise from a collision between the Power at Erfurt and the Power at Frankfort; but that it contained neither protest nor menace. The misunderstanding appears to have arisen from the vagueness of phraseology employed in transmitting the substance of the dispatch in question through the electric telegraph, by which medium it was first communicated to the public.

ITALY.

The Grand Duke of Tuscany has granted an amnesty to all persons convicted of political offences, with a few exceptions specially mentioned.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

CAMBRIDGE.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE.—Subjects for the Voluntary Classical Examination, 1849-50.—"Platonis Theæetetus," "Aristophanis Pax," "Cicero pro Cœlio Oratio," "Horati Satiræ." Michaelmas Term, 1849. Subject for Latin Prose Composition.—"Quorum ad forum humano generi permiciosum." Latin Lyrics: "Miltonus captus oculis divina poemata dictabat." Subject which a candidate who has not previously obtained a similar prize. The essays must be sent in to any one of the tutors before the end of term.

The Queen has been pleased to nominate the Rev. Brownlow Maitland to the Ministry of Brunswick Chapel, in the parish of St. Mary-le-bone, in the county of Middlesex, and diocese of London, void by the resignation of the Rev. Thomas Scott Smyth, M.A.

The Rev. Charles John Abraham, B.D., Fellow of King's College, and one of the Assistant Masters of Eton College, is about to give himself to the service of the Church in New Zealand, and for that purpose has to assume the chair of Vice-Principal of St. John's College, under the Bishop of the diocese. The pupils of the rev. gentleman are now engaged in raising a sum for the foundation of a scholarship in St. John's College, about £300 per annum, which has been contributed by the undergraduates of Christ Church, Oxford.—Cambridge Chronicle.

CONVERSIONS FROM DISSENT.—The Bishop of Hereford has just ordained two Dissenting ministers for the ministry of the Church of England; the Bishop of Chester has ordained two, who came over with their congregations, deeply impressed with reading "The Primitive Church in its Episcopacy." The Bishop of Lichfield has received nearly sixty applications from Dissenting preachers to be ordained ministers of the Church.—Cheltenham Chronicle.

PREFERMENTS.—The Rev. William Palmer, Vicar of Whitchurch Canonicorum and Rural Dean, has been appointed by the Lord Bishop of Salisbury to the Prebendal stall of Highworth, in the Cathedral Church of Sarum, vacant by the death of the Venerable Archdeacon Onslow. The Rev. John Faithful Grover Fortescue to the Rectory of Sarcoham, Essex. The Rev. Burleton J. J. Martin to the Rectory of Stockbridge, Hampshire. The Rev. W. G. Giles to Dungarvon Rectory. The Rev. Thomas Hincks to the Rectory of Donkeigan, Antrim. The Rev. Henry Murphy to Dunluce Rectory. The Rev. W. Clowes to the Vicarage of South Scarle, Notts. The Rev. W. B. Drewe to the Vicarage of Longstock, Hants. The Rev. E. Bridgeman to the Vicarage of Kinnerley, Salop. The Rev. T. U. Gibson to the Vicarage of Dacre, Cumberland. The Rev. George Masters, D.D., to the Vicarage of Compton Chamberlayne, Wilts.

PENITENTIARY SISTERHOOD.—A sisterhood is about to be established at Cowper, near Eton, under religious rule, to devote themselves to the reformation of the frail members of their own sex, under the patronage of the Bishop of Oxford, the Dean of Windsor, the Provost and Head Master of Eton College, and other clergy and gentry of the neighbourhood. About eighteen applicants have been already admitted.—Bristol Journal.

A few days since Mr. Henry Siviter, bookseller, Kingsland-road, purchased a lot of books at the Auction-room, Fleet-street. Amongst them was a quarto volume, entitled "Venables on Diabetes." On getting them home, for was his custom, he commenced arranging them for sale, and on inspecting the above work found some of the leaves pasted together, and on separating them discovered a £50, and two £10 Bank of England notes

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—At the ordinary meeting of this society, on Wednesday night, at the Institution, St. John-street, Adelphi, the essay, by M. J. A. Leon, upon "Improvements in the cultivation and manufacture of sagar," for which the Henry Highgate Prize, a silver gold medal was awarded in June, 1849, was read. Models of Mr. Mitchell's screw pile lighthouse, Mr. Marsden's sewer trap, and a series of specimens of enamelling and painting on earthenware, were also exhibited.

KING'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL.—From the report read on Wednesday, at a quarterly court of governors, held at the hospital, in Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Lord Radstock in the chair, it appeared that the number of patients admitted into the hospital during the six months ending September 29, 1849, amounted to 664, and the out-patients to 11,588; that the number of patients since the opening of the hospital (in the year 1840) was 11,497; out-patients, 138,779; making a total of 140,276. The financial statements showed that the subscriptions and donations, from the 1st of January to the present time, amounted to £3039 7s. 5d., and the expenditure to £3871 0s. 7d. The expenses of the last quarter, as compared with those of the corresponding three months in the previous year, showed an increase of £300; and this increase was attributable to the prevalence of the cholera. A letter from the Duke of Sutherland was produced, announcing the Grace's resignation as president of the institution; but it appeared that circumstances had prevented the appointment of a successor. The Earl of Carlisle having expressed his willingness to become a vice-president, his lordship was elected by acclamation.

ORPHAN WORKING SCHOOL, HAVERSTOCK-HILL.—At the half-yearly meeting of governors of this charity, held at the London Tavern, on Wednesday, it appeared from the report which was read on the occasion, that there are at present in the school 187 children—120 boys and 67 girls; out of whom 8 boys will leave before the termination of the present year. The committee recommend the admission of 20 extra children this half-year, in addition to which there will be 9 vacancies in 1850. The state of the school is at present most satisfactory, and the progress of the children affords ample proof of the care bestowed on them by their teachers. An interesting legacy was announced, viz. £20 from Mr. Neal, who left the school to himself at a recent date. The committee further report the taking of a piece of ground in the City-road, for a chapel school. A collection in aid of the present election had already reached £195, and the meeting presided over by S. M. Peto, Esq., M.P., had produced £500. Altogether the institution was in a most promising and satisfactory condition. The committee concluded their report by recording the gratifying fact that during the recent epidemic not a single child was attacked with cholera at the institution at Haverstock-hill. The election of 20 extra children, pursuant to the recommendation of the report, closed the proceedings.

BUILDERS' BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.—A meeting of the members of this institution, for providing for decayed members of the building trade and their families) was held at the London Tavern on Thursday, when five pensioners were elected on the funds of the institution. It appears that, though the society has been established only two years, they are now in a position to grant pensions to the extent of £120 per annum; £500 has been invested towards building an asylum; £900 has been subscribed to the relief fund; the annual subscriptions amount to £80; and there is a balance at the bankers of £200.

SOUTHAMPTON DOCK COMPANY.—A special meeting of this company was held at the offices, in Bishopsgate-street, on Monday; Colonel Pratt Barlow in the chair; when it was resolved, that, in order to pay off the debentures now due in the course of next year, a stock not exceeding £50,000, entitled to a preference dividend of 5 per cent, should be created. It was also resolved that a further preference stock should be created, for the purpose of paying off debentures as they fall due, to the amount of £177,000, in such amounts, and upon such terms, as general meetings of the company may from time to time determine. The operation will be spread over a period of seven years, when the whole of the debt will be paid off, and the capital of the company will then consist exclusively of £600,000 stock, with power to create another £100,000 stock, should it be necessary to provide accommodation for increasing trade.

CHELSEA BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.—The eleventh anniversary of this society was observed on Wednesday evening, at a dinner at the Commercial-rooms, in the King's-road. The Rev. Dr. Wilson, the Rev. A. F. Pettigrew, and a large number of the principal inhabitants of the locality were present. As the chair was occupied by Dr. W. V. Pettigrew, who explained that the object of the society was, by means of the small contributions which benevolent persons in the parish supplied, to relieve that class of the suffering poor whom honesty pride would not permit to apply for relief at the workhouse. About eleven years ago, a person was found starved to death near that spot. Two or three of the jury-men who sat on the inquest conceived the idea of raising a subscription to assist those who, they would not get relief in the workhouse, were starving. This was his society. It had now existed eleven years, and, during that time, nearly 6000 individuals had been relieved either by pecuniary aid, coals, or other articles of which they stood in need; and this had been done by means of the small contributions raised from all classes, and ranging from one penny upwards, and with a total income under £30 a year. (Cheers.) The health of the founders of the society and other supporters and friends was given, and in the course of the evening a liberal subscription was made towards the objects of the charity.

CITY OF LONDON COMMITTEE OF HEALTH.—On Wednesday the City Board of Health assembled at Guildhall, Mr. Berkley in the chair. Mr. Simon, the officer of Health, read to the committee an abstract of the report, which it was resolved should be appended to the report to be prepared by the City Solicitor, detailing the proceedings of the committee since their appointment. The report will be presented to a general meeting of the Court of Common Council to be dissolved. The dissolution of the Committee of Health will, we believe, be a preparatory step to the formation of a committee invested with far greater powers, and permanently appointed for the sanitary protection of the health of the citizens of London. The subject of the remuneration of the medical officers of the City unions was then resumed, and the committee agreed to a resolution recommending the payment of a sum to the gentlemen who rendered assistance to Mr. Simon, proportioned to his labours.

ABOLITION OF BURIALS IN TOWNS.—At a very full meeting of this society, held in the society's rooms, Bridge-street, Blackfriars, on Wednesday, Mr. G. A. Walker, president, in the chair, several communications were read and discussed. Among a letter from Mr. Wilson, respecting his proposed scheme for a national cemeterial pyramid, and a voluminous report from the chairman, embodying his views on the subject of urban burials. The following is an abstract of the resolutions advocated by Mr. Walker. 1. That a general system of extramural sepulture shall be forthwith organised throughout Great Britain 2. That medical men be appointed to fill the ancient office of "searcher," to that no body be removed for interment without a certificate of death. 3. That the interment of the dead during the summer months within a period of 5 days be compulsory. 4. That for London, common land in the neighborhood of railways should be purchased for cemeterial purposes sidings or branch lines conveying the funeral trains into the ground itself, as proposed by Mr. Walker himself to the Select Committee on Interments in Town in 1842. 5. That a central administration be appointed to register every event (except religious) connected with the burial of the dead at fixed and specified charges, which latter shall not exceed certain maxima laid down therein. 6. That the duty of providing for the interment of the dead be confined to the parochial or other local administrations. The report received the hearty support of the meeting; and a motion was unanimously carried for its adoption, printing, and circulation, without delay.

RAGGED AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS AND REFUGE.—On Tuesday night the third annual meeting of the subscribers to these schools (which are situated in King Edward-street, Spitalfields) was held at the London Tavern—the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor in the chair. According to the report of the institution—which has now been in operation about two years—has produced the most satisfactory results. To show the necessity for such an establishment in the locality, the report stated, that 800 houses visited, there were found 1600 families and 3600 inhabitants of these, about 360 occasionally attended public worship, and 400 children attended the Sunday-school, one-half of whom only received daily instruction. In these 800 habitations there were found 400 Bibles and 400 Testaments. When the Industrial School was established, there were 12 boys admitted; but it had been found impossible properly to combine the two operations in the present premises. Of the original number in the Ragged School, only 7 remain. The average daily attendance at the infant school, opened in August last, is from 100 to 137, and at the evening school it is 50. At the classes for needlework the attendance frequently exceeds 40. Among the contributions received have been £50 from the Corporation, £20 from Lady Suffield, and £21 from Earl Manvers. The expenditure exceeded the income in the sum of £87, the former being £1064. Lord Radstock moved the adoption of the report, remarking that the Schools of the City of London were in a bad locality. The Rev. Charles Marshall, Chaplain to the Lord Mayor, seconded the motion, which passed unanimously.

DOAN'S SEWAGE MANURE PLAN.—A meeting was held on Tuesday evening, at the Literary Institution, Leicester-square, to hear Mr. Doan an explanation of his plan for deputrefying and disposing of the metropolitan sewage, so as not to permit of its contaminating the Thames. Mr. F. B. Daniel, M.D., having taken the chair, Mr. Doan proceeded to read his paper. In his preliminary observations he called attention to the fact that 120,000 persons died annually in this country of cholera, and that of this 125 who died daily in London, only 9 died of old age. Looking at the course of the late epidemic, it might be safely inferred that a great portion of the ordinary and extraordinary mortality of the country arose from bad sewage, and the use of contaminated water. The lecturer criticised severely the tardy proceedings of the Board of Health, and averred that satisfactory experiments for sewage might have been made for as many shillings as the Board of Health had spent pounds. Having glanced at the statistics of cholera, with which the public were familiar, Mr. Doan proceeded with his experiments, especially from that of sewage water taken from the Northumberland-street sewer. The following is an outline of his process. The water, to the amount of about a gallon, is poured into a glass vessel, and on it a small quantity of his disinfecting agent (the composition of which is kept secret). A sediment soon forms at the bottom of the receiver when the filtrated water flows out of a tube near the top of the vessel. It is then received into another filtering apparatus, containing what the lecturer describes as animal charcoal. The water is then strained through sea-sand, and is exhibited quite colourless, free from unpleasant odour, and, by those who tasted it, said to be tolerably pleasant to the palate. The matter which has been precipitated in the receiver, is then collected in a cloth, and becomes what is described as British guano. This substance answers to the tests by which Peruvian guano is proved to be genuine, and of its fertilising power proofs are cited from several farmers who have used it as a manure. Mr. Doan proposes to apply his principle to the deputrefying of London sewage, by arresting the fluid in its course and collecting it into dams, and thence pumping it into a series of tanks, in which the disinfecting agent has been previously placed. Here the water is to be purified, the grass collected, and the filtrated water allowed to flow into the Thames, which, as the lecturer alleges, will not be in the slightest degree contaminated by the contact. So far as the purification of the sewage water is concerned, the experiment appeared to be satisfactory The water was filtered very perfectly, and in a short space of time; but, as the disinfecting agent is kept a secret, it would be impossible to decide as to the efficacy of the process for sanitary purposes.

THE FAMILIES OF THE DECEASED CHARTISTS, WILLIAMS AND SHARPE.—On Wednesday evening, at a public meeting held at the City School-rooms, Cowper-street, City-road, for the purpose of making a provision for the widows and families of Williams and Sharpe, who, a short time since, died at the Westminster House of Correction, while undergoing the sentence of imprisonment for sedition, it was stated that a number of subscriptions had been already received. Amongst the contributors were—the chairman of the meeting, Mr. Luke Hansard, £5; Baron Rothschild, £5 5s.; Sir Joshua Walmsley, £2 2s.; Messrs Harmer and Bell, £3 3s.; Lord Dudley Stuart, £2 2s. Resolutions in accordance with the proposed object having been adopted, the meeting, after subscribing liberally, separated.

CHARTER HOUSE.—The Marquis of Lansdowne was elected a Governor of this Corporation on Thursday, in the room of the late Lord Bishop of Llandaff.

SMITHFIELD MARKET.—A Royal Commission, to consist of the following members, has been appointed to inquire into the live and dead meat markets of London:—Mr. G. Cornewall Lewis, M.P. chairman), Lord Feversham, Sir Harry Verney, Bart., M.P., Sir James Duke Bart., M.P., Mr. William Miles, M.P., Professor Richard Owen, Mr. John Wood (Common Council man of Cheapside Without).

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, appointing John Elijah Blunt, Esq., to be one of the masters in ordinary of the High Court of Chancery, in the room of William Wigram Field, Esq.

MUNIFICENT BEQUEST FOR A WORKING MAN'S HALL.—On Monday evening, Mr. Thomas Cooper, author of the "Purgatory of Suicides," announced, at the Literary Institution, John-street, Fitzroy-square, that a bequest of £10,000 for the erection of a working-man's hall in the metropolis had just been made by a Mr. Jenkins. The building is to be for the free use of working men of all denominations, under the control of five trustees (the names of four of whom were mentioned). Mr. Hall, the apologist, it was said, has expressed his intention, on the completion of the building, to present his fine museum to it; and, further, that a gentleman, whose name did not transpire, would furnish a library of 1000 volumes.

GENERAL POST-OFFICE.—On and after this day (Saturday, the 1st instant) a closed mail will be made up at this office for Holland, and transmitted daily (Sundays excepted) via Ostend, to Antwerp, and thence by railway to Cologne, which the public may desire to forward in this manner, should be addressed, "By Closed Mail viâ Belgium." The rates of postage to which such letters will be liable will be a combined British and foreign rate of 1s. 4d. the single letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight; 2s. 4d., when above half an ounce and not exceeding one ounce weight; and so on, according to the scale for charging inland letters. This postage may be paid in advance, or may remain unpaid, at the option of the sender. Newspapers and prices current will be chargeable with a postage of one penny each, which must be paid in advance.

William Long, Esq., of Queen-street, Cheapside, having placed, ten years ago, in the hands of trustees, £10,000 Three per Cent. Consols, £10,860 Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. ditto, and 3000 Bank stock, to become ultimately the property of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, after the decease of a small life, Mrs. Fowler his sister, and certain annuitants; and Mrs. Fowler (who has left to the society a bequest of £550), as well as Mr. Long, having died in January last, the society has come into possession of about £27,000, sufficient being retained to pay the salaries for the quarter to the annuitants. An anonymous donor has given £4000 Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Consols to the same society.

LONDON SPRING WATER COMPANY.—A company has just been provisionally registered, and is about to go to Parliament for an act of incorporation, having for its object the supply of London and the north-western suburbs with pure spring water, from wells to be sunk in the chalky strata found in the neighbourhood of Watford. The promoters are to be placed in a position at such an altitude above the metropolis as to ensure a constant supply of water by high pressure to its inhabitants, without the necessity of employing cisterns. The company also propose to supply water at Harrow, Pinner, and other districts, which are at present beyond the reach of the existing water companies, and where great inconvenience is experienced in obtaining that essential necessary of life. The proposed capital is £250,000, with power to raise it, if necessary, to £500,000, in shares of £25 each.

METROPOLITAN IMPROVEMENTS.—According to the last report of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, the amount of property under their control, [illegible] property valued for the purposes of the income-tax at £[illegible] 17s. 1d. in the United Kingdom, [illegible] £[illegible] 2s. 2d. in Scotland, and £[illegible] 13s. 8d. in Ireland. The gross receipts for the year ending Lady-day last were £[illegible], being an increase of £[illegible] 8s. 4d. on the receipts of the preceding year. The net receipts for the year ending Lady-day last were £[illegible], being an increase of £[illegible] 13s. 8d. on the net receipts of the preceding year, and the total amount paid into the Exchequer during the year ending Lady-day last was £[illegible], being an increase of £[illegible] 13s. 8d. on the total amount paid into the Exchequer during the year ending Lady-day last was £[illegible], being an increase of £[illegible] 13s. 8d. on the total £779,958.

BATTERSEA-PARK.—The Commissioners of Woods and Forests, in their report just issued, state that their proceedings for the acquisition of the property to form Battersea-park have been impeded by the refusal of the owners of property to form Battersea-park have been impeded by the refusal of the owners of property to form Battersea-park have been impeded by the refusal of the owners of

THE RETURN OF THE DOVE.

THERE was Hope in the Ark at the dawning of day,
When o'er the wide waters the Dove flew away;
But when ere the night she came wearily back
With the leaf she had pluck'd on her desolate track,

The children of Noah knelt down and adored,
And utter'd in anthems their praise to the Lord.
Oh bird of glad tidings! oh joy in our pain!
Beautiful Dove! thou art welcome again.

When peace has departed the care-stricken breast,
And the feet of the weary one languish for rest;
When the world is a wide-spreading ocean of grief,
How blest the return of the Bird and the Leaf!

Reliance on God is the Dove to our Ark,
And Peace is the olive she plucks in the dark.
The deluge abates, there is sun after rain—
Beautiful Dove! thou art welcome again!—C. M

SIR JAMES ROSS' EXPEDITION.

We this week present two additional Sketches of the Expedition.

The first shows an extraordinary appearance in the sky, whilst the explorers were in their winter quarters, in Port Leopold. The time is noon, and the sun is just visible above the horizon; this phenomenon was witnessed in November, 1848, a few days previous to the sun's total departure His upward ray shot into a huge column towards the zenith, and, at an altitude of 40°, burst into the flame-like appearance here depicted.

It will be recollected that after the cylinders were deposited at Cape York, ice was seen from this place, extending right across Prince Regent's Inlet; consequently, the ships stood towards the north, for Cape Fallbot, upon the north shore of Barrow's Straits; early in September, and on the 7th of that month, stood across to Leopold Island, the rendezvous; and here getting entangled in the ice, were swept past the island, but subsequently got free and entered Port Leopold, a spacious harbour, with excellent groundings and deep water on the 11th of September, 1848. Here were immediately deposited three months' provisions for each ship, on shore at Whaler's Point, at the entrance of the harbour. The harbour at that time was perfectly clear of ice.

The provisions were deposited with all despatch, under the impression that the Expedition would start the next morning; but on the 12th, from the significant appearance of the young ice setting in very sharp, and the probability of being frozen in at a more disadvantageous position, Sir James Ross was induced to delay his departure, and ultimately to make this anchorage his winter quarters, this being the most eligible point of departure in the ensuing spring. In the course of a few days Sir James's predictions were verified; the harbour continued to freeze over, alternately freezing and clearing until about the 24th when the ice became settled.

The crew were now employed to cut a canal forty feet wide, leading in towards the north-east side of the harbour, and protected by Whaler's Point from any heavy pressure of ice setting in from the inlet, or Barrow's Straits. This harbour was found to be most commodious and safe, with good depth of water and sandy bottom. The ice was perfectly flat, and frozen over with as plane a surface as the Serpentine in January. The ships were moored abreast each other, about two hundred yards apart. As soon as they were frozen in, they were housed over, from the forecastle to the mizen-mast, and the anchors were weighed and stowed.

The sun was not seen from the 9th of November until the 9th of February from the ship, but from the top of a hill, N.E. Cape Leopold, a sight was caught of him so early as the 26th January.

It was here that the white foxes, the "Twopenny Postmen," were caught and collared. The thermometer at this time was about 15° below zero; but the Sylvester stove apparatus, which answered admirably well, always kept the lower decks at a temperature of between 55 and 60 degrees. All around Leopold Harbour nothing was seen but snow rocks 1100 feet high, bounded on each side, and a narrow low ridge enclosed the harbour northward. There were very few icebergs seen from this point.

The companion Sketch represents a travelling party crossing Prince Regent's Inlet; the tent is pitched for the night, or rather day (for the explorers always travelled by night, on account of the snow-blindness), an officer is taking a look round with his glass, and the second sledge, drawn by two men, is just arriving.

The fourth of the detached parties sent out from Leopold Harbour consisted o four men, under Lieutenant Brown (Enterprise), and a fatigue party, com-

APPEARANCE OF THE SKY AT PORT LEOPOLD.

"NOAH'S SACRIFICE—THE ARK RESTETH ON ARARAT—THE BOW IS SET IN THE CLOUD."—PAINTED BY D. MACLISE, R.A.

NOAH'S SACRIFICIAL HYMN.

THINE awful judgments, mighty Lord,
Afflict the sinful earth no more.
Lo! on the skies Thy Light is pour'd,
To cheer her valleys as of yore.
Th' invading seas forsake the shore,
The green hills glitter to the day;
Lord! at thine altar we adore,
And bless Thy mercy as we pray

Behold us from Thy throne above,
And let our sacrifice reveal
The speechless gratitude and love,
The deep contrition that we feel.
Accept it, Lord, and kindly deal
With us, Thy children of the sod;—
In spirit as in flesh we kneel,
And praise Thy goodness, Lord our God.

Bright o'er the cloud Thy bow appears,
And spans the smiling arch of heaven;
The pledge to sorrow—born of tears—
That God has with his anger striven;
And that while mortal life is given,
No more shall downward floods be hurl'd,
Nor fountains of the deep be riven
To drown and desolate the world.

No more shall spring and autumn fail,
Nor skies refuse the needful showers;
And morns shall glow, and eves grow pale,
In due succession of the hours.
The ground shall yield its fruits and flowers
And labour cull its destined store;
And all the teeming earth be ours,
Freed of its curse for evermore.

Lord! we are grateful: hear our prayer!
Oh, never may our sons unborn,
With wicked hearts Thy judgments dare,
Or laugh Thy righteousness to scorn.
Break on the world, refulgent morn!
When men in all their wide increase,
No more by evil passions torn,
Shall live in Piety and Peace.

Lord! let it come! that Earth renew'd
In Beauty and in Love may glow;
And that with ceaseless gratitude
All human hearts may overflow;
That age succeeding age may know
Thy pure religion's heavenly light,
And countless generations show
Thy name, Thy goodness, and Thy might.

Join, children, join, the hymn of Love!
Shout, list'ning sky! ye planets sing.
Ye wond'rous firmaments above—
Thou Earth and every living thing—
Give praise to Heaven's Almighty King!
The bow of promise beams again,
While clear th' angelic voices ring—
"Glory to God—Amen! Amen!"

C. M.

---

posed of Mr. Court (second master) and four seamen, accompanying them about ten miles, who set off in an easterly direction, across the ice, from the eastern nameless shore of Prince Regent's Inlet. They were absent seven days, and had exhausted all their provisions when they returned. They had very bad weather, so thick that no observations could be taken, and were obliged to steer by compass (Captain Cator's). The sun was only visible twice—just before midnight and just before morning. They went across to a place called the Peak, a remarkable peaked hill in Parry's chart. Here they erected a cairn as conspicuously as possible, and made the usual deposits. On the east coast they found a remarkable difference as compared with the west coast. On lifting the stones on the former coast they found small quantities of water. Half-way across the inlet the ice was perfectly smooth; but towards the eastern shore the ice got so exceedingly rough and "hummocky," that Mr. Brown was obliged to leave the sledges about seven miles off shore, and picked them up again on his return, after they had erected a cairn, &c. In the passage back they suffered from the snow-drift, and the temperature was down to 12° below zero. They saw a flock of gulls, and several bear tracks, during their expedition. During one night, or day rather, a bear must have passed close to their resting-place, as his track was fresh on the snow round the tent when the party awoke.

After Sir James Ross's return, the process of cutting through the ice was a most arduous one. The line having been marked out by the officers, fifteen and eighteen feet ice saws were set to work with triangles; and cut on an average 200 feet in a day; four saws, and sometimes six, were employed at once, the ice being from three feet to five feet thick.

The ships first moved a little down the canal, and then, watching and seizing every opportunity, they gradually got down to the entrance; the ice in the inlet having receded considerably from the harbour, created a little motion, which assisted in some degree in breaking up the ice at the entrance of the harbour.

The Expedition, in progressing southward, passed an immense multitude of gigantic icebergs, varying from 100 to 200 feet high, and from a quarter to half a mile in length. These tremendous bergs often came between and threatened the ships with destruction, and were a source of perpetual harass, often exciting much apprehension from their colour, or rather their colourless appearance. It was, indeed, a task of no ordinary skill and ability sometimes to steer clear of them.

TRAVELLING PARTY.—TENT PITCHED FOR THE DAY, IN PRINCE REGENT'S INLET.

A Correspondent of the Athenæum suggests, with respect to the Esquimaux report of the Expedition—

"Has it occurred to any one that in the rude sketch brought home by the whalers, the space between the ships which has been called 'sea,' and ergo Prince Regent's Inlet, may, after all, be the land and sea between the actual position of the Enterprise and Investigator last winter and the western coast of Banks's Land, or some other point beyond the extreme exploration of Sir James Ross?—and whether the disputed 'track' may not have been that of the exploring party's sledges which the Esquimaux had crossed in their wanderings? It has been an argument for the truthfulness of the report, that one of the ships in the drawing is apparently on her beam ends a peculiarity which would scarcely have occurred to the artistic genius of an Esquimaux. It would be interesting, therefore, to know if either of Ross' ships was in anything like this position; as the fact, if so, would be an additional reason for the adoption of the opinion which I have merely suggested."

MUSIC.

GRISI AND MARIO IN RUSSIA.

(Private Correspondence.)

ST. PETERSBURGH, Nov. 14.

The death of the Grand Duke Michael, the Emperor's brother, did not interfere with the opening of the theatres, the public mourning not exceeding three weeks. On the 13th of October the Italian Opera season commenced, and Grisi made her début in Russia in the part of Semiramide. She sang splendidly, and acted as she can act, and, of course, took the audience by storm. As soon as she came on the stage she was completely resistless, and she remained for some time before she was allowed to begin to sing, so deafening was the applause, which increased when she came forward. Every time she re-appeared on the stage was the signal of uproaring plaudit. It is the custom of the Russian public, when an artiste is successful, to call him or her before the curtain twelve or fifteen times, and Madame Grisi was completely tired at the end of this protracted ovation.

Mdlle. de Meric's début as Arsace was very successful. She sang very well, and has established herself as a favourite. "Semiramide" has been given three times, as every opera is here, because the subscription is not, as in London, for every night, but for any of the three performances given every week.

Mario's début, which was looked for as a great event, took place as Arturo, in Bellini's "Puritani," and it is needless to state how he was received, how he sang, and how he was applauded. The ladies threw their bouquets at him—a custom which would not be much approved of in London or elsewhere. Mdme Frezzolini was the Elvira. She sang very nicely; she rather disappointed us the first time of hearing, but she grows considerably on re-hearing, and it is very natural that her singing should sound thin and poor, after our London stars. Her upper notes are sweet, and in compass are as high as those of Persiani, but with much less fioriture. Mdme. Frezzolini's execution is always perfect, and her vocalisation, now that singing in tune is getting so much out of fashion with many singers The medium notes of Mdme. Frezzolini are some. Her histrionic powers do not equal those of Miss Catherine Hayes, or even of Mdlle. Corbari; but she has good taste, and in any characters not exacting dramatic power is a nice singer.

The next opera to the "Puritani" was "Norma." The excitement for this opera was immense. It is not only a favourite opera, but Grisi's name and fame are associated with the Druidical Priestess. The house was filled to overflow. The effect she produced in every part of the opera cannot be described; after the trio the public rose at once with a deafening applause, which lasted some minutes. In the last scene, the ladies wept aloud; certainly La Diva was never heard to such perfection before; her voice was in the finest condition, and her spirit and energy untiring. "Norma" has been given four times. At its last representation, Gardoni was replaced in Pollio, by Lavia. Gardoni has been very indisposed lately.

After "Norma," "Lucia" was given; and, despite of Rubini's great triumph here as Edgardo, Mario's success has been enormous. If you had heard Mdlle. Corbari sing Lucia with Mario and Coletti, you would form a higher notion of her capabilities. I was taken by surprise to hear her sing the cavatina and other pieces in a style to challenge comparison with first-rate artistes. She sang all the roulades and shakes, and played the character as well as Frezzolini. I am sorry to say, Mdlle Corbari has no intention to return to the Royal Italian Opera next season. She will not easily be replaced in Mdlle. Corbari's parts.

"Linda" has been performed with Mdme. Frezzolini, Mdlle. de Meric, Signori Gardoni, Tamburini, and Tagliafico. Although well executed, the opera is not appreciated here—the music is too simple. Mdlle. de Meric, on her return of the imperial Guard from Hungary, places cannot be found at the theatre, and the subscription was already sufficiently large. The Emperor and his family will be settled in town in a few days, and will visit the theatre at the end of the month.

The season here is not yet really commenced; it may be compared to the first and second months of the London season. No concerts or parties have yet been given, but all in due course. The weather is as mild as in London. The other day we had a degree below zero, and snow, but it is now warm and damp, the snow is melted, and it rains.

On Saturday "Lucrezia Borgia" will be given, with Grisi, Mdlle. de Meric, Mario, Tamburini, and Tagliafico. Every place is taken.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday

Adolphe Adam's two-act opera, "Le Fanal" (the Light-house), which was intended to have preceded the ballet of "La Fille de la Fées," has been found too long for the purpose, and has therefore been postponed. Cerito and St. Leon have arrived, and will soon commence their engagements; and Carlotta Grisi will then make a tour. M. Roqueplan is now sole director of the Grand Opera. M. Duponchel returning exclusively to his trade as a goldsmith. M. Duponchel's fame will remain at the Opera, as the engaging a great singer in the mise en scène of "La Juive," "Le Prophète," "La Fillende des Fées," "Gustave Adolphe," &c., all containing magnificent spectacles.

Amongst the débûts at the Italian Opera-house, have been those of Madame Rossetti (Madame Moriani), and Mdlle. Vera in Adina, in the "Elisir d'Amore," and M. Brignoli, a tenor, as the Visconte in "Linda," Madame Persiani being the heroine.——On Saturday night Lablache will appear for the first time this season, as Magnifico, with Mdlle. Angri as Cenerentola, another of her best parts.——Lucchesi, the new tenor, from La Scala, will appear in a few days as the Conte in Rossini's "Barbiere."——Halévy's "Fée aux Roses," with Madame Upsale and M. Bataille, continues to draw crowded houses to the Comique.——In the "Val d'Andorre" and "Les Mousquetaires de la Reine," by the same popular composer, being given in the alternate nights

The Earl of Westmoreland, the British Minister at Berlin, and, as the Revue Musicale justly states, "himself an artiste, and one of the most generous patrons of art and artists," has passed through here on his return to the Prussian capital.

Signora Fiorentini, who lately made such a successful début at the Italian Opera, in Berlin, in Norma, has since sung Donna Anna, in "Don Giovanni." She is a Spanish lady by birth, and married to a gentleman of the Englishman. She was a pupil in London of Signor Crivelli, and her first appearance on any stage was at Berlin. She is very handsome, and has a fine voice, but of course is, as yet, but a novice.——Balfe is in Berlin, superintending the production of German adaptations of his operas, the "Bon man" and "Kolatcha."——Mdlle. Lind sang at the Royal Concert at Potsdam, on the occasion of the Queen's birthday, at the express invitation of the King of Prussia; she sang her Swedish melodies, the air from the "Puritani," and in the duo "Ah! perdona ancora," with Rossini's "Stabat." She has left Berlin for Hamburgh, to sing in Haydn's "Creation," but was to return to the former capital in eight or ten days.——A new oratorio, by Naumann, called "Christ, the Messenger of Peace," was performed, under the composer's direction, by the Academy of Singing. The choruses made a great impression.——Labitzki, the well-known dance-composer, after having given concerts, à la Strauss, at the public gardens, the Kroll, and at Potsdam, has left for Hamburgh.——M. Niedermeyer's new "Mass," executed at the Church of Saint Eustache, St. Cecilia's-day, for the benefit of the Musical Association, although not produced under the most ideal circumstances, is a clever work.——Meyerbeer's "Prophète" will be produced at Vienna on the 1st of January, and, it is expected, under the composer's direction, although he has not yet left Paris.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—The Mendelssohnian night at Drury-lane Theatre, on Tuesday, was crowded to excess. The first part was devoted to Mendelssohn's works, of which the Allegro and Andante in D minor, the movement and rondo of his only violin concerto, admirably played by Sainton—the War March of Priests, from "Athalian," with Jullien's favourite body-guard of orchestraleides overpowering the others—the Scherzo, Scherzo, Notturno, Wedding March, and an interlude and Burlesque March not heard before in this country, from the music to the "Midsummer Night's Dream"—were the chief items. Ernst again stirred Essex's pulses at the end of the London Wednesday Concerts. He played a Nocturno and his Rondo Papagino, and the "Carnival of Venice." The other soloists were Maycock, corno bassetto; T. Harper, trumpet; and Richardson, flute. The vocalists were Mrs. A. Newton, Misses A. Nunn, the sisters Cole, R. Isaacs, Eyles, Messrs. Land and Godder, and Miss Formes. The spirited execution of Cherubini's "Anacreon" overture by the band, is worthy of mention.——The first of Mr. Willy's series of six classical concerts will be given on Monday, at the Beethoven Rooms, Hall, Long-acre.——Mr. Platt, the celebrated player on the horn, who, for the last quarter of a century, has been the chief orchestral performer on his instrument at the Philharmonic Society, Ancient Concerts, Royal Italian Opera, her Majesty's Theatre, and the principal provincial Festivals, is now compelled to retire, from physical inability to continue his valuable services. In acknowledgment of his steady performance of his duties, and of his great talents as an orchestral player, Sir George Smart, Sir Henry Bishop, Mr. Costa, and a numerous body of amateurs and professors, will, at the earliest favourable moment, organise a farewell concert for Mr. Platt's benefit.——Miss Catherine Hayes appears to have made a great impression at Manchester as at Limerick, Cork, and Dublin: her singing of the "Somnambula," of "Ah! non giunge," quite electrified her auditory at the Free Trade Hall; and her pathos in Wallace's ballad, "Why do I weep for thee," and in "Kathleen Mavourneen," elicited equal enthusiasm. "In an experience of some years," states the Manchester Examiner, "we do not remember (with one great exception) such a complete success. Proud should be the English musical world of such an acquisition."——Mr. Charles Halle's second classical chamber concert, at Manchester, was numerously attended. He was much applauded in the pianoforte works of Chopin, Mendelssohn, and Beethoven.——The Monday evening "Concerts of the People" continue to be well patronised.——Mr John Parry's entertainment has been given this week by him at Stafford, Newcastle-under-Lyne, Dudley, and Stourbridge. His success at Liverpool and Manchester, with "Lights and Shadows of Social Life," was prodigious.——Mdlle. Marie, the pianiste and vocalist, gave a concert at the Hanover-square Rooms on Wednesday night, assisted by Messrs. Watson, Wilhmann, Sharp, and Sedgwick.——Our notice of Handel's "Messiah," at Exeter Hall, on Friday night, conducted by Costa, must be given next week.

M. JULLIEN'S ANNUAL BAL MASQUE is announced for Friday next, with, among other novelties, "a superb cryst[illegible]

The Russian Scientific Academy has announced that, in obedience to the directions of the Emperor, a committee has been appointed to report on the project of the French chemist, M. Archerot, for lighting St. Petersburgh with electricity. Experiments are to be made on a large scale in several parts of the city.

THE THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.

On Monday Mr. Phelps gave [illegible] new theatre opportunity of witnessing his remarkable impersonation of [illegible] Shakspeare's [illegible] "Henry IV." Nothing can better show the versatility of the actor's power. His range of characters is large; and, strange as it may appear, his Falstaff is one of his best: and yet it is a triumph over personal difficulties, which, indeed, make it proportionately greater, as the product of artistic labour—honourable both to the man and the actor.

LYCEUM.

Mr. Dance has adapted the French piece, "Brutus, lache Cæsar," most admirably, under the title of "De acate Ground" effectively acted by Madame Vestris, Mr. Charles Mathews, and Mr. Roxby. The dialogue and situations are sustained by clever wit, and the characters are refreshing, and it is very natural that her singing should sound thin and poor, after our London stars. Her upper notes are sweet, and in compass are as high as those of Persiani, but with much less fioriture. Mdme. Frezzolini's execution is always perfect, and her vocalisation, now that singing in tune is getting so much out of fashion with many singers The medium notes of Mdme. Frezzolini are some. Her histrionic powers do not equal those of Miss Catherine Hayes, or even of Mdlle. Corbari; but she has good taste, and in any characters not exacting dramatic power is a nice singer.

The next opera to the "Puritani" was "Norma." The excitement for this opera was immense. It is not only a favourite opera, but Grisi's name and fame are associated with the Druidical Priestess. The house was filled to overflow. The effect she produced in every part of the opera cannot be described; after the trio the public rose at once with a deafening applause, which lasted some minutes. In the last scene, the ladies wept aloud; certainly La Diva was never heard to such perfection before; her voice was in the finest condition, and her spirit and energy untiring. "Norma" has been given four times. At its last representation, Gardoni was replaced in Pollio, by Lavia. Gardoni has been very indisposed lately.

After "Norma," "Lucia" was given; and, despite of Rubini's great triumph here as Edgardo, Mario's success has been enormous. If you had heard Mdlle. Corbari sing Lucia with Mario and Coletti, you would form a higher notion of her capabilities. I was taken by surprise to hear her sing the cavatina and other pieces in a style to challenge comparison with first-rate artistes. She sang all the roulades and shakes, and played the character as well as Frezzolini. I am sorry to say, Mdlle Corbari has no intention to return to the Royal Italian Opera next season. She will not easily be replaced in Mdlle. Corbari's parts.

"Linda" has been performed with Mdme. Frezzolini, Mdlle. de Meric, Signori Gardoni, Tamburini, and Tagliafico. Although well executed, the opera is not appreciated here—the music is too simple. Mdlle. de Meric, on her return of the imperial Guard from Hungary, places cannot be found at the theatre, and the subscription was already sufficiently large. The Emperor and his family will be settled in town in a few days, and will visit the theatre at the end of the month.

The season here is not yet really commenced; it may be compared to the first and second months of the London season. No concerts or parties have yet been given, but all in due course. The weather is as mild as in London. The other day we had a degree below zero, and snow, but it is now warm and damp, the snow is melted, and it rains.

On Saturday "Lucrezia Borgia" will be given, with Grisi, Mdlle. de Meric, Mario, Tamburini, and Tagliafico. Every place is taken.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday

Adolphe Adam's two-act opera, "Le Fanal" (the Light-house), which was intended to have preceded the ballet of "La Fillende des

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

YORK AND NORTH MIDLAND.—Special Meeting: Nov. 29: York: H. T. Thompson, Esq., in the chair.—After a long discussion, the various recommendations contained in the third and fourth reports of the committee of investigation were agreed to, it being again decided that the chairman of this company ought not to be the direction of any other company. On the subject of preference shares, a committee, consisting of two of the committee of investigation, two preference shareholders, and two original shareholders) was appointed to consider the question. The meeting was further adjourned to the 21st December.

RAILWAY AUDIT.—Meeting of Railway Shareholders: Nov. 29: Liverpool: A. H. Wylie, Esq., in the chair.—This meeting was convened for the purpose of taking into consideration the question of railway audit. The chairman moved a resolution to the effect that the resolutions agreed to by the associated body of railway directors at the meeting in London, on the 5th of November, at which the Earl of Lonsdale presided, were not sufficient to meet the necessities of the case, nor calculated to effect a sufficiently satisfactory audit of railway accounts. This was carried, as also a resolution that a petition be presented to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, praying him to reduce the proxy stamp from 5s. 6d. to one penny, the present rate preventing a legitimate expression of opinion on the part of many shareholders.

SOUTH STAFFORDSHIRE RAILWAY.—Special meeting: Nov. 29: Walsall: J. Foster, Esq., in the chair.—The terms of the proposed lease were laid before the proprietors. The lease was to be for 21 years; and the head capital of the company being taken at £668,375, or £8 10s. per share, the rent was to be at the rate of 2 per cent. for the first year, and 4 per cent. afterwards. Any further capital required to be raised by way of loan, the lessees paying the interest, not exceeding 4½ per cent. The lessees were to deposit £10,000 as guarantee for carrying out the lease, which was to become forfeited in the event of default in carrying out any of its provisions. At the end of 11 years the rent to become 4½ per cent. on the capital: unless the lessees gave notice of their intention to decline the lease on those terms, when the lessees may require them to continue on the original terms. The lessees were to set aside £1400 a year as a sinking fund for keeping up the line and for the repair of the same, and to be applied on being returned to the company at the conclusion of the lease. After a long discussion, a poll took place upon the propriety of leasing the line, which was decided in the negative at five minutes past nine, by a majority of 2253 against 774.

SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.—On Wednesday, a special general meeting of the directors was held at Shire Elms, to determine on the propriety or otherwise of making application to Parliament in the ensuing session for an extension of the time for carrying out the provisions of the act for the extension of the line from the Waterloo Terminus to London-bridge. The chair was taken, at one o'clock, by Mr. Chaplin, M.P., who observed, respecting that question, that the company had not hitherto commanded the fruit trade of the Levant and the Peninsula, because of the loading and unloading at the Nine Elms; but it was thought that by the proposed means they might succeed in attaining it. They felt—or rather he felt personally, for the directors did not all take the same view (Hear, hear)—he felt that they would succeed. If the object could not be attained without going to London-bridge, it might be required two or three years hence that they had not gone there. (Cries of "Never.") The directors, having pledged themselves not to move without the shareholders, had been faithful to their promise. The last night's meeting, on the 31st August last, had the directors chosen to take that course; but the directors had preferred taking the opinion of the shareholders before proceeding any further. The powers having cost so much to obtain, they would certainly have been censurable had they not submitted to the proprietors the question of renewal. (Hear, hear.)—On the question of application to Parliament being put, together with an amendment, the latter was carried, the effect of their decision being to negative the proposition to apply to Parliament for an extension of time. The extension scheme itself is thus virtually abandoned.—On the subject of the audit of accounts, the following resolution was carried, viz.:—

That a committee be appointed to examine the question of audit, and to recommend, in a report to the shareholders, the plan they may deem best for procuring and establishing an efficient audit, and also such measures as they may think are essential to the protection of the interests of the shareholders

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN AND NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RAILWAY COMPANIES. We are informed that the London and North-Western board have resolved to resist the claim of the North Staffordshire Company to have the Manchester through traffic pass over a portion of the North Staffordshire Railway.

GOVERNMENT AUDIT.—The returns from the shareholders of the London and North-Western Company show about six per cent. only in favour of Government audit.—The returns from the Midland shareholders are nearly in the same proportion.

CALEDONIAN RAILWAY.—We understand that this company are in treaty with an eminent contractor to lend £200,000 on their plant, at 5 to work the line for a term of years, subject to the matter being confirmed by the shareholders.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE "gathering" at Warwick on Tuesday last was fully as numerous as could have been expected at this season, and the sport, which, owing to the frost, was confined to flat racing, was unexceptionable. With the meeting which was to have come to a close; that it should have continued so long is a proof of the progress of innovation even in Turf affairs. The steeple chases were put off until Wednesday next. Of the events to come off on Tuesday, we have little to say; the Steeple Chase Calendar would have been "blank" but for the postponement of the Warwick and Leamington events. The Coursing fraternity, however, do not seem inclined to rest upon their oars; the fixtures embrace (weather permitting) Newmarket Champion (five days), on Tuesday; Snaith and Kenilworth on Wednesday, each two days; and Newcastle (two days), on Thursday. Those who wish to see coursing of the highest class will do well to patronise Newmarket.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—Many of the influentials having taken flight for Leamington, business was on a limited scale, at the undermentioned prices:—

WARWICK STAKES.

7 to 2 agst Doctrine	4 to 1 agst Priestess	5 to 1 agst Defaulter

LEAMINGTON STEEPLE-CHASE.

6 to 1 agst The Chandler	10 to 1 agst The Doctor	15 to 1 agst Abd-el-Kader
8 to 1 — Sir William Yeoman	14 to 1 — Venus	15 to 1 — Morris Day
10 to 1 — Knight of Gwynne		20 to 1 — Little Houghton

CHESTER CUP

50 to 1 each laid agst Pimp-o-Day-Boy, Wham colt, and Lady Evelyn; 1000 to 15 each agst Comack, Melody, Richard, and Vesta; and 1000 to 10 each agst Sibaddry and Deogh.

DERBY.

9 to 1 agst Bolingbroke (t)	22 to 1 agst Cyprus	35 to 1 agst Pitsford (t)
12 to 1 — Ghillie Callum	22 to 1 — Swordsman	35 to 1 — Sir Robert (t)
12 to 1 — Knight of Avenel	26 to 1 — Delicosa	35 to 1 — John o'Groat
16 to 1 — Italian (t)	26 to 1 — The Nigger (t)

TUESDAY.—Some hearty betting was done this afternoon on the Derby, all the favorites being backed, and three of them, viz. Bolingbroke, Maldiw, and John-o'-Groat, for five or six hundred pounds each; Ghillie Callum and the Knight of Avenel were also in favour, although the outlay on them was not by any means extensive. There is every prospect of this being the best betting race known for many years.

CHESTER CUP

1000 to 15 each laid agst Melody, Lusmahago, Escodarius, Halo, and Chantinclere, and 1000 to 10 each agst the Baroness and Pendulum filly

DERBY.

9 to 1 agst Bolingbroke (t)	25 to 1 agst Chunder	30 to 1 agst John-o'-Groat (t)
12 to 1 — Ghillie Callum (t)	25 to 1 — Maldiw (t)	30 to 1 — Sir Robert
13 to 1 — Knight of Avenel	25 to 1 — The Nigger (t)	33 to 1 — Moultan (t)
	26 to 1 — William the Con- queror (t)	33 to 1 — Voltigeur
15 to 1 — The Italian	25 to 1 — Swordsman	50 to 1 — Little Boy (t)
22 to 1 — Cyprus	100 to 1 agst Rhux colt (t)	100 to 1 — Confidence (t)

WARWICK AND LEAMINGTON NOVEMBER MEETING.—TUESDAY.

MATCH of 25 sovs.—Mr. Smith's Faith (Dallimore), 1. Mr. Langley's Shamrock (Sharp), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 5 sovs each and 20 added.—Mr. Meiklam's Emma (Marwood), 1. Mr. Rose's Clothworker (Brooks), 2.

THE CORINTHIAN HANDICAP of 10 sovs each, and 20 added.—Mr. E. R. Clark's Gisella (Captain Little), 1. Mr. Jenning's Subduer (Owner), 2.

The WARWICK STAKES of 15 sovs each, and 50 added.—Mr. Dawson's Priestess (Arnold), 1. Mr. Smith's Master Downes (Payne), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 5 sovs each. Mr. Fowler's Cingari, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb, 1. Mr. Meiklam's Polonaise, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb, 2.

WARWICK AND LEAMINGTON STEEPLE-CHASE.—The continuance of the frost has rendered it necessary to postpone these races until Wednesday next.

WINTER FOR THE RICH AND POOR.—There were that night in many great mansions blazing fires and loud revelry—all in-door comforts being wondrously enhanced by a sense of triumph over the storm without. Sleet was on the window-panes, but cannot find entrance, and there were also on the bleak highway, and in the ruts on the skirts of villages, many torpid and famished wretches creeping for shelter under walls and hedges, and trying to sustain the bite-and-sup-a-law day should open upon their wretchedness. In the midst of contrasts of extremes does not always touch us so keenly as the strata of mixed existence that lie between wealth and poverty, in which the struggle to keep out the wolf that howls on the threshold is a harder and more wearying one than drawing down pauperism, which goes straight to its refuge in the charities of the world.—The Ladder of Gold," by Robert Bell, in bentley's Miscellany

STEAM SHIP-BUILDING.—The beautiful steam-yacht, sent by Messrs. Galloway to Egypt for his Highness Sayed Pasha, of which an illustration and account was given in our publication of October 13, has arrived at Alexandria, after an extraordinarily quick passage, although she encountered stormy weather throughout the voyage; and we are happy, for the sake of the increase of the reputation of English craft, to hear that this specimen of our productions has given satisfaction and produced general admiration, not merely from the Pasha of Egypt, but from the engineer and from ship builders, but also from the elegant style of her decoration. Captain Rooke, who conveyed her to Egypt, has returned to England, and speaks highly of the handsome treatment he received from his Highness Sayed Pasha, who presented him with a handsome cigrette of diamonds (worth at least £100) as a mark of his approbation.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A CONSTANT READER. By adopting the utility defence for pr. propos. Black, in Problem 298, we do contract into moves. What draws his opponent from taking the K bt with his Kt and giving mate at the second move?

WESTMORELANDENSIS.—The position is correct, but much too simple for publication.

X Y Z, Glasgow.—"The Chess Player's Text Book" contains as much information as a young player can digest for the first twelve months of his career.

W. P. H.—Entirely from memory.

J. B. H., Stuttgardt.—Many thanks. They shall be examined forthwith.

F. S., Finching.—Against two players as each boxed.

INVESTIGATOR.—In the beautiful Problem numbered 301, mate can only be accomplished in the way shown in our solution. If White, for his second move, play, as you propose, 2. Q to Sec 8 7th, Black may reply with, 2 Kt to Q 8 5, and delay the mate beyond the stipulated number of moves.

A PRIVATE PUPIL.—The Games and Problems of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS are not obtainable through any other chan 1

D. L. E.—The key move is 1 B to Q 2d

B. T. S.—The new Chess move may be got of Staunton, Bell, Ries, Queen-street, Norwich, we are to Appleton, 10a Paternoster-row, and of the Illustrated London News, 198 Strand

CAMILLA.—Apply to Mr. Patty, of Newport.

CAMILLA WOLSEY, TOT.—Black would simply take the P with P on passing

A CHESS-PLAYER.—In the first case Black cannot, in the second he can, Castle

R. V.—Thanks. It is very simple, though ingenious in idea.

OBSERVER.—To prevent fraud, there is a label on the outside, at the bottom, of each box, with the signature "H. Staunton;" and, before purchasing, the buyer should see that this label is duly attached.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 305.

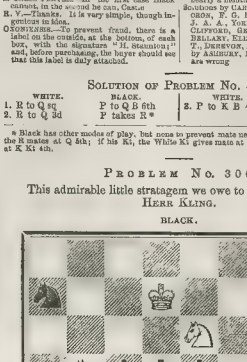
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to Q sq	P to Q B 6th	2. P to K B 4th	Mate.
2. R to Q 3d	P takes R *

* Black has other modes of play, but none to prevent mate next move. If he move his B the R mates at Q 8th; if his Kt, the White Kt gives mate at Q 7th; and if his B Pawn at K Kt 4th.

PROBLEM NO. 306.

This admirable little stratagem we owe to the ingenuity of HERR KLING.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE LONDON AND AMSTERDAM CHESS CLUBS.

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
48. Kt to Q 7th

London to play.

CHESS IN THE METROPOLIS.

An interesting specimen of the Evans Gambit, played between two distinguished Metropolitan players.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	19. Q R to K sq	Q to K Kt 3d
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	20. P to K R 4th (a)	Kt to K Kt 2d
3. B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	21. P to K R 3d	P to K R 3d
4. P to K Kt 4th	B takes P	22. P to K B 5th	Q to K R 3d
5. P to Q B 3d	B to Q R 4th	23. P to K R 4th	Q R to K sq
6. P to Q 4th	B to Q Kt 3d	24. Q to K R 2d	Q R to K 4th
7. P to Q 4th	P takes P	25. R to K B 3d	K R to K sq
8. P takes P	P to Q 3d	26. P to K Kt 5th	P takes P
9. P to Q 5th	Q Kt to K 2d	27. P to K B 6th (b)	Kt to K B 4th
10. B to Q Kt 2d	K Kt to B 3d	28. P to K B 7th (ch)
11. B takes K Kt	P takes B	(c)	K tak s P
12. K Kt to Q 4th	Castles	29. Kt takes K Kt P
13. Q Kt to B 3d	P to K B 4th	(ch)	K to Kt sq
14. K to R sq	P takes P	30. Q R to K Kt sq	R to K 8th
15. Q Kt takes P	P to K B 3d	31. Kt to K 6th (dis-
16. P to K B 4th	B takes Kt	covering ch)	K to R sq (d)
17. Q takes B	Kt to K B 4th	32. R takes R and wins.
18. Q to K B 2d	Q to K sq

(a) The attack is played with remarkable correctness and ability

(b) We conceived. Black dare not take the Kt, or the Pawn marches on to B 7th, checking King and Rook.

(c) This is the right step.

(d) Black might apparently have made a much better play by taking the Rook with Rook (ch). Let us suppose:—

30.	B takes R (ch)	(If White at move 34, interpose his Q Black
31.	Q takes R (ch)	must obviously win by exchanging Queens,
32.	Q takes P (ch) [the	and then taking the Kt.)
	game is safe] takes	33. R to K Kt 3d Q to K 4th (ch)
	Kt, on account	34. K to R 2d (best) Q to K R 5th (ch and of its having al	draws the game
	ady moved
33.	Kt to Kt 2d	(At move 26, if White interpose his Rook,
34.	K to Kt 2d	Black wins by playing R to K B sq, &c.)
	Q to K 5th (ch)

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 601.—Berliner Schachzeitung.

White: K at Q R sq, Q at K R 4th, R at Q Kt 6th, Bs at K R 3d and K B 2d, Kts at Q B 3d and 8th, P at K B 6th.

Black: K at his 4th, Q at her R sq, R at K R 2d, B at K B 2d, Kts at K 5th and 7th, Ps at Q 6th and Q R 4th.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

No. 602.—By W. C., of Manchester.

White K at Q sq, Bs at K 7th and Q 5th, Ps at Q 2d and Q B 3d.

Black: K at Q 6th, Ps at Q 2d and Q B 5th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 603.—By an AMATEUR of St. Albans.

White: K at Q Kt 7th, R at Q 6th, Kt at K Kt 7th, B at K R 6th, Ps at K B 6th and K Kt 6th.

Black: K at Q sq, B at Q 2d, Ps at K 2d and K B 3d.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 604.—Berliner Schachzeitung.

White: K at his B 5th, R at Q B 4th, B at Q R 8th, Kt at Q B 6th, Ps at Q 3d and Q B 2d.

Black: K at Q Kt 4th, Ps at Q 3d and 5th, Q B 6th, and Q R 3d.

White mates in four moves.

THE REAL CAUSE OF CHOLERA.—The Rev. Dr. M'Neile thinks that the cholera is a judgment on this country for favouring "Popery;" the Rev. Mr. Toye, of Gateshead, that it is to deter people from marrying the sisters of their deceased wives; the Rev. Mr. Gutch, of Leicester, attributes it to parliamentary electors voting for Dissenters and Jews, instead of Church of England men, whilst others again attribute it to the omission of "Dei Gratia" from the new form.—Gloucester Journal.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will commence their sittings on Wednesday, the 5th inst., at the Council-office, Whitehall, for the purpose of hearing appeals from the colonies and elsewhere.

We have much pleasure in announcing the accession of the Right Hon Fox Maule, M.P., to a seat in the Cabinet.

By the will of the late Mrs. Dreyer, lately deceased, the principal sum of £600 is bequeathed to each of the parishes of Bungay St. Mary and Holy Trinity, the interest of which is to be applied yearly for the benefit of the poor, at the discretion of the minister and churchwardens of the two parishes for the time being.

A good example to Irish landlords is set at Athlunkard (county of Limerick), the property of Captain Hamilton Jackson, where upwards of 300 labourers and tradesmen are daily employed in drainage, embanking, and constructing farm buildings.

On Tuesday last, the Right Rev. Bishop Wiseman administered confirmation to eight gentlemen converts to the Roman Catholic faith, at the Chapel of the Oratory in King William-street. The Bishop also previously administered adult baptism to one of the candidates, and subsequently the whole number received the holy communion. The number of converts included two barristers, but their names did not transpire.

The Chapter-house at Canterbury has been just roofed similarly to the Houses of Parliament, by galvanised iron.

Two very fine jack were caught at Marlow, Berks, on Saturday, by Mr. J. S. Wilkinson, one weighing 20 lb. and the other 8 lb. They were unusually fine feeders.

M. Francisque Bouvet, member of the Peace Congress, has given notice of a motion in the French Assembly for the reduction by one-half of the continental 80,000 soldiers demanded by the Government for 1850.

An elaborate glass window has just been placed in the north side of the communion aisle in Heavitree Church, near Exeter, by Richard Ford, Esq., of the Alhambra, as a memorial to his deceased wife. The figures of St. Mark and St. James are finely depicted on rich coloured glass from Italy.

At the meeting of the Bonapartist Club of the Beaux Arts, on Saturday night, at Paris, it was resolved that the object of the club is to assist in securing harmony between the National Assembly and the President of the Republic on the ground of the Constitution.

On Tuesday last, the new church of St. Mark, Ocker Hill, Tipton, was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Lichfield, in the presence of most of the clergymen of the neighbourhood. The Bishop in his robes, and the clergy in surplices and hoods, &c., walked in procession from Gospel Oak House, the residence of Messrs. Walker, to the church, preceded by the children of the National and Sunday Schools, the teachers, a band of music, and eighteen choristers in surplices, from the adjoining parish of St. James's, Wednesbury, singing the Old Hundredth Psalm

A serious accident occurred on Monday morning, about eight o'clock, on the East Lancashire Railway, when the luggage train belonging to the Lancashire and Yorkshire Company approached the Walton junction just as the East Lancasaire passenger train from Liverpool reached the spot. Before the respective engines could be stopped, the former train ran into the latter, and, although, happily, no lives were lost, several persons were severely wounded.

We learn by the arrival of her Majesty's ship Constance at Spithead, that previously to her departure from Valparaiso on the 28th of August, Admiral Hornby had started her Majesty's frigate Inconstant, directly to San Francisco, on the coast of California, to protect British subjects. Everything at California, is described as being in a very unsettled state; the American Commodore Jones, in the Ohio, had stopped all arrivals of provisions by sea, as the inhabitants had refused to obey the Government orders, and were too strong for him to use force on shore.

Lord Reidhaven, the Hon. Lewis Grant, the Hon. George Grant, and G. Orred, Esq., enjoyed several days of first-rate shooting in the covers at Ballachastle, Inverness-shire, during last week. In one day no less than 434 head of game fell to their guns, and in six days the party bagged 834 head.

A stormy petrel (Mother Carey's chicken) was found on Friday week in the parish of Bawdrip, near Bridgewater. This is unusually early, and betokens a hard winter.

Mr. W. M. Praed, judge of the Newton Abbott County Court, last week, dismissed the high bailiff of that court from his office, in consequence of discovering that several sums of money received by that functionary in various cases had not been paid over by him to the persons entitled to them.

On Monday evening a fire broke out in the crucible manufactory of Mr. Cleghorn, Weavers lane, Horsleydown, and in spite of the most strenuous exertions, the flames could not be conquered until the factory in which the disaster commenced was nearly destroyed. The escape of the adjacent premises may be ascribed wholly to the indefatigable exertions of the Firemen.

The vessel Minnins arrived at the port of Liverpool, from Hong Kong, has brought 2290 pigs of iron, as a portion of her cargo, consigned to a firm of commerce. This is a very interesting importation from the Chinese empire.

During the last fortnight there have been some half-dozen incendiary fires in the neighbourhood of Pudsey and Hatton, in Derbyshire; haystacks, sheds, and other buildings have been set on fire, and in some cases considerable damage has been done.

At the recent rent audit of Henry Seymour, Esq., at Knoyle House, Wilts, he kindly made liberal abatements to the tenantry, with a view, as a landlord, to meet the present high prices, and thereby to enable them to cope profitably with him in endeavours to render assistance to the deserving peasantry during the pressure of the approaching winter.

The election to the office of Rugby Head-mastership, vacant by the appointment of Dr. Tait to the Deanery of Carlisle, will take place at Rugby, on the 17th inst. Several Oxford clergymen of the highest distinction have been announced as candidates.

The vessel Urania, arrived in the Docks from Bassora, has brought several packages of marbles as a portion of her cargo. These marbles are a further portion of the Assyrian sculptures brought to this country for the purpose of being deposited in the British Museum.

On Tuesday last, the Lord Bishop of Winchester consecrated the new church of St. Mary, in Andover. The service of the day was read by the Rev. C H. Ridding, after which a most eloquent sermon was preached by the Lord Bishop, from the 83rd Psalm, verse 6, "Holiness becometh thy house for ever."

A metallic plug for boats, &c., having been projected and introduced to the Admiralty, their Lordships have ordered a trial of the invention to be made in the boats of her Majesty's ship Blenheim, at Portsmouth, and to be reported upon.

The following official notice has just been posted in the hall of the Trinity House of Marine: "No naval officer, whatever his rank may be, shall, upon any consideration, be permitted to enter this department without first obtaining a special letter of introduction from the Minister of Marine." What a commentary on Republican Liberty, Equality, Fraternity!"

The Hon. Mr. Stanley, M.P. for the borough of King's Lynn, the eldest son of Lord Stanley, and the grandson of the Earl of Derby, arrived at Georgetown, Demerara, on the 13th of October last, and was received with every mark of respect and consideration. The object of his visit is said to be to acquire information concerning the West India possessions of the Crown.

A valuable library and museum have been offered by an ardent lover of the arts to the corporation and inhabitants of Plympton, as being the birthplace of Sir Joshua Reynolds, provided a suitable building be erected for its reception, and a curator appointed for the care of the same

It is said that Lord Alexander Lennox, a second younger son of the Duke of Richmond, will offer himself as a candidate for the representation of the Rape of Bramber.

At a recent meeting of the Sunderland Town-Council, Sir Hedworth Williamson, Bart., M.P., was unanimously re-elected an alderman. The office was declared vacant at a previous meeting of the council, in consequence of the absence of Sir Hedworth for more than six months from the borough.

Mr. Hamnett, of New York, has offered Jenny Lind 1000 dollars per night, for 200 nights, and made a further offer to place a carriage at her disposal, and to pay every description of expenses attending the concerts or operas. He has also proposed to place £10,000 in the hands of her bankers in London to secure the fulfilment of his proposa.

Lieutenant-General Richard Pigot has been appointed to the Colonelcy of the 4th Dragoon Guards, vice Sir G. Anson, G.C.B., deceased. Lieut.-General Pigot was formerly of the 21st Dragoons

The Marquis of Westminster, on Friday week, called together several aged and infirm labourers who have been employed for years in the gardens and other parts of the estate at Eaton Hall, and awarded them pensions for the remainder of their days. This act of benevolence was most justly appreciated by the Marquis, in sums averaging from 3s. to 6s. each, according to the age and inability of each individual to follow any employment.

It is announced that Government has decided on establishing a penal colony for convicts in Western Australia.

John Naylor, Esq., of Liverpool, has purchased Hooton Hall estate, late the residence of Sir William Massey Stanley. The price is about £80,000, and the timber to be taken at a valuation. The estate comprises 900 acres.

In consequence of the eminent services rendered to the cause of Mechanics' Institutes by the Dean of Ripon, the friends of the Yorkshire Mechanics' Institutes have determined to mark their sense of his valuable aid and assistance by presenting to his family a well-executed and full-length portrait of the rev Dean, as a lasting memorial of the affection and esteem in which his character is regarded by the members of these several institutions.

The police corps of Liverpool now numbers considerably above a thousand, the men being consecutively numbered. There are amongst the force six superintendents, and a number of inspectors, brisewk keepers, and their assistants, &c. The boys has latterly been slightly reduced, and in round numbers is at present about 1150 strong.

Two monster trains went into Birmingham on Monday, conveying persons from Leicester, Derby, Nottingham, Stamford, Peterborough, and the adjacent districts, to view the exhibition of Hunters' and Cobs at Bingley Hall. Each train was drawn by two engines, and the visitors who thronged the exhibition conducted themselves with great decorum.

OSBORNE, ISLE OF WIGHT.

The Views which we this week give of her Majesty's Marine Residence comprise a representation of the entrance front, and an alcove in the pleasure-ground. In the former, the lofty campanile, from the summit of which floats the Royal standard, in a most conspicuous feature; and the portion of building to which the campanile is attached, denominated the Pavilion, is the part built for the especial accomodation of her Majesty and Prince Albert, whilst the old mansion of Osborne was reserved for the suite and attendants. The old house being found inconvenient for the purpose assigned, it was pulled down, and an extensive pile containing a great number of apartments erected on its site, the Pavilion still being devoted to her Majesty's use.

Though not a pile of huge character, Osborne is an extremely spacious and elegant building, and in every part shows that refined taste has presided over its erection. The entrance doorway is under a porch, whence the great staircase in the central portion of the Pavilion is attained. The campanile contains several apartments; the upper one having three windows on each face, forming a delightful observatory whence superb views of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight are obtained. Corridors, covered and open, connect the Pavilion with the main building, thus affording easy access between the two buildings, and breaking, with good effect, their general architectural features.

The alcove is a pretty little bit, at the end of the main building, and looking towards the pleasure-grounds. Within the alcove, two Grecian busts, and a small figure of a man falling from a horse, are the decorations, the arched ceiling being simply panelled. The alcove is very elegant in character, and partakes of the same simplicity and unostentatiousness of character that pervades the whole of the architectural arrangements of Osborne.

ALCOVE, OSBORNE.

Singular Cavern in Illyria.—The Kaurt formation in the maritime district of Illyria consists principally of limestone, which rests on sandstone. It presents a curious appearance, being full of holes and fissures. The whole rock is so traversed, and, as it were, sown over with deep funnel-shaped and crateriform abysses, and the mass of strata, 1000 feet thick, is described as being fuller of pores than a sponge. Hence, the rain speedily sinks into the interior of the mountain, and the only water seen on the surface is at most a few small pools. In the region of the sandstone and slate, on the contrary, running water is not wanting; but, immediately on reaching the limestone formation, the water falls into it, often through highly romantic, portico-like openings, and continues its course under ground, returning to the light only when the sand-stone again appears. In heavy storms of rain the water accumulates in the interior of the mountains, and, swelling up to a great height, drives out the air frequently with much violence through the narrow fissures and caverns connected with them above. This circumstance shows that holes, which on the surface are very small, are yet often continued deep into the interior. The want of water in Trieste has long been felt, and an examination of many of these holes in the vicinity of that town was made with the view of discovering some subterraneau stream which might supply the inhabitants with water. At length an opening of no great width, but sinking perpendicularly into the ground, was discovered at Trebich, and followed with great perseverance. The fissure sometimes expanded into a wide cavern, sometimes contracted to a rent of scarce a finger's breadth, and required great labour on the part part of the workmen in blasting, &c., to follow up the chasm. Once, in a wide of the opening, all trace of its continuation was lost, when suddenly an intelligent miner from Carinthia heard a loud roaring and howling, and concluded that the water in the interior, rising in consequence of heavy rain, was forcing the air through some narrow opening. He then found, near the roof of the cave, a small fissure which again led in the right direction. At length, after eleven months of hard labour, he discovered a very capacious cavern or grotto, 370 feet high, at the bottom of which, 1023 feet below the surface of the earth, and 63 feet above the surface of the sea level, a considerable stream of running water was found. The water enters the cavern by a low vault, and flowing among the numerous large blocks which have fallen from the roof, expands into a long narrow lake. The lake was explored by means of a raft, and was found to pass under a vault which descended below the surface of the water. This put a stop to the investigation. During heavy rain, the water has already been seen to rise 260 feet; but, judging from an old float of a mill-wheel found in a higher part of the cavern, it must sometimes attain to a height of 300 feet above its usual level.—Journal of the Geological Society.

The Council of University College, London, have received notice of two legacies—one of £500 for the hospital, by Mr. Lewis Morris Cuthbert, of Lyon-terrace, Maida-hill; the other for the college, £100, free of duty, by Mr. Wilkins, of Mackworth, Derbyshire.

Mural Paintings.—During the recent alterations in Brooke Church, Norfolk, several interesting frescoes were discovered upon the walls of the building. They were completely hidden by repeated coats of whitewash and colouring; and it was with great difficulty that the subjects themselves could be deciphered. The parable of the Prodigal Son was represented in great beauty and detail. In an arcade beneath, the ecclesiastics of St. Edmundsbury, who no doubt were the limners, had figured the Deadly Sins, not in full, as in Canfield Church, but in the act of descending into the open jaws of the monster of hell. Superbia, Ira, Avaritia, and Gula were the only four that could be discovered. These paintings, with others in different parts of the church, whose subjects are not known, were probably as old as the fourteenth century. Tracings and drawings of the whole, by Mrs. Beal, were exhibited lately at the Thetford Aggregate Meeting of the Norfolk and Suffolk Archæological Associations.

Ancient Coins.—An important discovery of ancient coins has lately been made near the village of Hahnweiler, in the district of St. Wendel. A peasant found an earthen jar filled with 82 silver coins, in excellent preservation, and to the weight of 2½lb.; 28 of these coins are of the size of the old Brabant dollar. There are among them 19 Saxish and Thuringian coins, of from 1574 to 1608; 3 Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel coins, of from 1594 to 1615; 2 struck by the Archduke Ferdinand of Austria and Count of the Tyrol, without date; of Rudolph II., of the years 1603 and 1605; 1 of the Emperor Maximilian, of the year 1566; and 1 of Albert and Elizabeth, "Archiduc. Austriæ, Duc. Burgund. et Brabant." 54 coins are of the reign of Philip II., King of Spain and of the Netherlands.—Cologne Gazette.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT OSBORNE.

Her Majesty and the Prince Consort have again sought their quiet retreat in the Isle of Wight. The Court left Windsor Castle on Friday week, and travelling by the Great Western Railway to Reading and Basingstoke, proceeded thence by the South-Western Railway to Gosport, where they embarked in the Fairy Royal steam yacht, under a Royal salute, and steamed across the Solent to Osborne. The Princess Royal and Prince Alfred were prevented from accompanying their august parents, in consequence of a slight attack of chicken-pox, which, since the illness of the Queen, has affected all the Royal children except the Princess Louisa. There Royal Highnesses were, however, sufficiently recovered on Wednesday to proceed to Osborne, under charge of Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. A. Gordon and Miss Hildyard.

The Court attended divine service on Sunday in Whippenham Church, where the Rev. Mr. Prothero officiated.

There has been no addition to the Royal circle during the week.

The fineness of the weather has enabled both her Majesty and the Prince to take their accustomed early walkng exercise in the park and grounds of Osborne daily, and the Royal children have frequently accompanied their august parents.

The ex-Queen of the French, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess de Nemours, and the Duke and Duchess d'Aumale, visited the Exposition des Produits de l'Industrie Française, in George-street, on Friday week.

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and the Princess Mary, returned to Kew on Wednesday, from Brighton, where their Royal Highnesses have been visiting the Duchess of Gloucester during the past week.

Their Royal Highnesses the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburgh-Strelitz have left the Duke of Cambridge's residence at Kew, on their return to Strelitz, viâ Calais.

The Prince Poniatowski, Minister Plenipotentiary from the Grand Duke of Tuscany, has arrived in town.

The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, the Marquis and Marchioness of Stafford, and the other members of the family, have arrived at Trentham. The Marquis of Stafford attains his majority on the 19th inst.

The Duke of Devonshire arrived in town on Monday, from Chatsworth.

The Duke of Wellington has left Apsley House for Strathfieldsaye.

The Marchioness of Blandford left town on Tuesday for Wynyard Park, on a visit to her noble parents, the Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry.

The Earl of Westmoreland left Harley-street on Sunday last for Berlin, viâ Paris. The Countess embarked on Tuesday, and is gone direct to Berlin. Lord Burgherah and his young bride are gone to Ireland.

The Earl Grey has taken a mansion on Carlton House-terrace.

The Earl of Carnarvon, we regret to hear, has been lately suffering from severe indisposition at his seat in Berks.

The Earl and Countess of St. Germans, and Lady Louisa Eliot arrived in town on Thursday, from a visiting tour in Scotland.

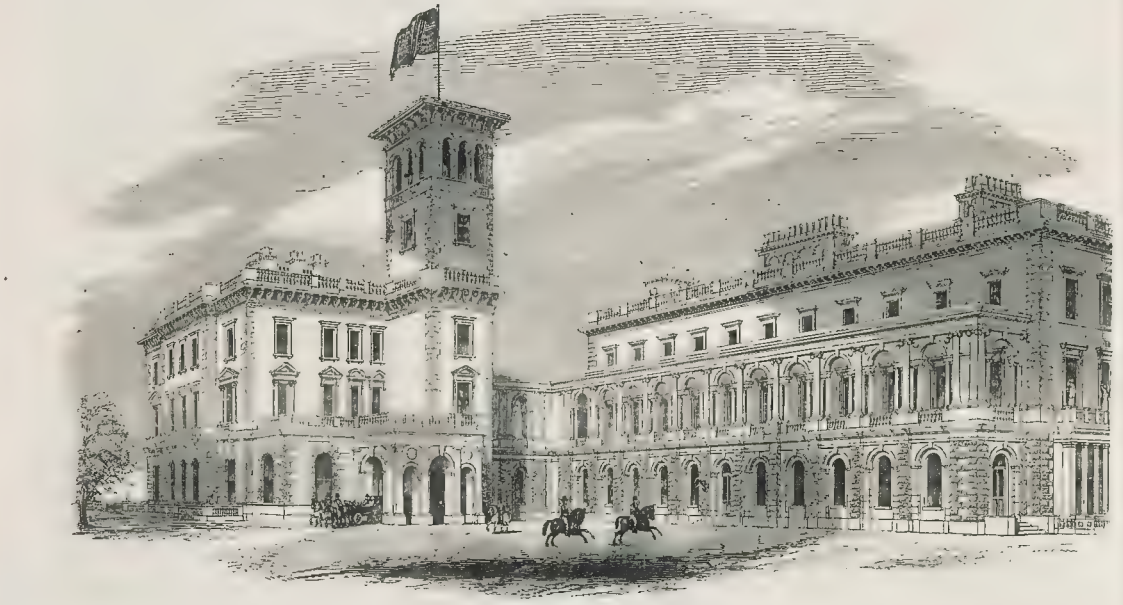
Lord Thomas and Lady Sophia Cecil have just returned to London from a tour in Germany.

His Excellency M. Drouyn de Lhuys arrived at the French Embassy on Wednesday from Paris.

Major-General Fox has returned to town from Paris. Lady Mary Fox remains for the winter in the French capital.

Marriage in High Life.—The marriage of the Hon. Gertrude Duncombe, second daughter of Lord and Lady Feversham, with Francis Horatio FitzRoy, Esq., only son of Admiral Lord William FitzRoy, was solemnised on Tuesday, at St. George's Church, Hanover-square, in the presence of a very numerous circle of relatives and friends of both noble families. The bride was magnificently attired in a dress-corsage-ouverte of white glacé silk, trimmed with rich Honiton lace over a veil of the same material, and a wreath of orange-flowers, with a bouquet of the same, completing the costume. In attendance upon the bride was a train of six young ladies; viz. the Hon. Helen Duncombe, younger sister of the bride; the Misses FitzRoy, sisters of the bridegroom; the Lady Charlotte Scott, daughter of the Countess of Eldon; Miss Caroline Paget, and Miss Tighe. The bride was led to the altar by her noble father; and the various parties to the interesting ceremony having taken their respective places, the religious service was duly performed. After the usual attestation had been made in the parochial register, the bride and bridegroom left the church in a handsome new chariot, for Lord Feversham's residence in Belgrave-square, where the event was subsequently celebrated by a grand breakfast, given by Lady Feversham, at which all those present at the church assembled. The happy pair left town at two o'clock for Hillyers, on the Sussex coast.

Lord Burgherah, whose marriage with Miss Locke was recently announced, has been in Kerry during the past week, visiting the Locke estates. His Lordship was approaching Tralee from O'Dorney, accompanied by Major Fairfield and Mr. Day, when his carriage was upset and thrown into a river. His Lordship and company escaped with a few bruises.



OSBORNE.—ENTRANCE FRONT.

PLATE PRESENTED TO CAPTAIN LITCHFIELD, R.A.

This handsome testimonial has just been presented by the proprietors of the Cheltenham College to their Honorary Secretary, for his able services on behalf of the institution.

The Plate consists of a magnificent Centre-Piece, nearly two feet in height, designed and manufactured by Messrs. Martin, Baskett, and Martin, of Cheltenham, to whom great credit is due for the manner in which the whole is executed. From a richly ornamented tripod rises a centre, formed of lotus and acanthus leaves, and supporting a vase for flowers or fruit. On each side is placed a beautifully modelled allegorical figure, representing Science being crowned by Prosperity. On one side of the tripod is a view of the Cheltenham College; the second panel contains the family arms; and the third bears the following inscription:—

PLATE PRESENTED TO CAPT. LITCHFIELD.

"Presented by the unanimous vote of the Proprietors of the Cheltenham College, at their annual meeting on the 19th of June, 1849, to Captain Richard Litchfield, R.A., in testimony of their gratitude for his unwearied and invaluable services for a period of eight years as their Honorary Secretary."

PLATE PRESENTED TO THE EX-MAYOR OF SOUTHAMPTON.

This superb piece of plate was presented, on the 2nd ult., to George Laishley, Esq., at the close of his Mayoralty of Southampton. The presentation took place in the Victoria Rooms: R. Andrews, Esq., the Mayor, in the chair—and was witnessed by nearly 1000 persons.

The testimonial consists of a handsome silver candelabrum, nearly three feet high, with six branches, and a large glass centre, containing a beautiful bouquet of flowers. The base is a tripod, representing rocks, from each angle of which flows a stream, with water flowers. The base supports three figures, emblematical of Friendship, Hospitality, and Generosity—the British Lion standing out in bold relief near the latter figure. There is a shield on each part of the base, on which are engraven respectively the arms of the town of Southampton, the arms of George Laishley, Esq., and on the third the inscription. The candelabrum weighs nearly 400 ounces, and the details and workmanship are very elaborately executed. It was supplied by Mr. Alfred Fegier, of the High-street, at a cost of upwards of £250. The testimonial bears the following inscription:—

PLATE PRESENTED TO THE EX-MAYOR OF SOUTHAMPTON.

"Presented to George Laishley, Esq., by his fellow-townsmen, as a testimonial of their hearty esteem of his conduct throughout his Mayoralty—his devotedness to its duties—his well-directed energetic diligence—his reverence for religion—his earnest and active humanity during the prevalence of Cholera—and the public-spirited, generous, and conciliatory hospitality, by which he has done honour to the town, to his office, and to himself. England expects every man to do his duty; and England honours every man who fulfils it.—Southampton, November 9th, 1849."

MR. WALLACK AS "OTHELLO," AND MR. MACREADY AS "IAGO," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.

On Monday, the tragedy of "Othello" was repeated, with an exchange of characters; Mr. Macready enacting Iago, and Mr. Wallack Othello. The part of Iago, as played by Mr. Macready, is an unique performance. It has never been done justice to by the public; though never popular, it is, in our opinion, his very best character. Mr. Macready aims in it at an immense variety. Iago, according to his conception, is one who, not to write it profanely, becomes all things to all men, in order that he may win them over to his purposes. His intellect is fertile in invention, and his assumption of character is that of the perfect artiste in real life, who has, by whatever means, to make his fortune out of the infirmity of his associates. Marked differences and surprising contrasts distinguish Mr. Macready's Iago, in his intercourse with Rodrigo, with Cassio, with Desdemona, with Emilia, and with Othello. He is frivolous, or moody, sympathetic or contemptuous, polite or irascible, according to the occasion and the person. The part, therefore, as Mr. Macready performs it, is not one, but manifold. It is many characters artistically harmonised in an intelligible unity; and, as such, presents an amount of ability and an extent of resources almost astonishing. It has always been to us a topic of surprise, that the critics, and the public opinion of the day, should have suffered such a performance to pass without especial comment. But so it has been: its very excellence, perhaps, being the principal reason why it was never adequately appreciated.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR DECEMBER.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

But, though thus "various and contrarious" in his relation with others, to himself Iago is intensely individualised. In his soliloquies, Mr. Macready is, indeed, mighty. Iago's jealous, revengeful, cunning, and unscrupulous disposition—with all its subtle traits and intricate intentions—is brought out and interpreted with wonderful intelligence, power, and effect. There are also minor beauties, which it would be well to particularise, but that the investigation would lead to an extensive analysis of the character, for which we have at present no proper opportunity.

One scene, however, must be particularised—the great scene of Temptation in the third act. As a whole, this scene is one of the very most difficult in Shakspere. In acting, every thing depends on Iago maintaining such a deportment towards Othello, that the Moor should have no reason to suspect his designs. Here it was that Young, elsewhere so excellent as Iago on the old pattern, used to fail. Mr. Macready performs it with exquisite judgment and fine artistic tact. He hits it exactly between wind and water. It is a triumph of histrionic skill. The exceeding subtlety of the temptation becomes even painful to the observer; but we can but point it finally pointed, without any apology for Othello's contrition of Iago's honesty and his wife's guilt.

It would be unjust to close this notice without a word of commendation to Mr. Wallack for his careful and poetical delivery of the text of Othello. If deficient in passion, his rhetorical points had frequently extraordinary merit; and sometimes a passage was enounced with equally remarkable energy and precision. Miss Reynolds, as Desdemona, was likewise deserving of high praise: an elegant actress, she mightily improves with study and practice, and will ultimately secure an enviable position on the English stage. At the conclusion of the tragedy she was deservedly summoned before the curtain with Mr. Macready, Mr. Wallack, and Mrs. Warner, whose Emilia was in great force.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR DECEMBER.

THERE are but few novelties to mention for this month. The cold weather compels ladies to wrap themselves up in furs and wadded mantles; and the season for balls not having arrived, evening toilets are not yet thought of. More attention is, therefore, paid to morning dresses than any others. There is but little alteration in dresses, the bodies being worn very high and plain; the skirts are not so full as last year, and most of them are trimmed in front with either bows of ribbon or very light passementerie of the same colour as the dress.

Our Engraving illustrates a morning dress in levantine, made close to the waist. The sleeves are very large, falling two inches over the wrist, and trimmed with a wide plissé à la vieille. A French cambric pelerine, with the embroidered jockeys sculped, and a small embroidered collar ornamented with a bow, worn on the body, completes this very neat morning toilet. The casaquins are very fashionable and very becoming; they are worn in black and coloured velvets, trimmed with black lace, furs, or plissé, according to the different hours of the day in which they are intended to be worn.

The morning caps are elegantly made, with rich dentelles flat on the top of the head, gathered at the two ears, and at the back of the hair. A wreath of ribbon bows is placed on the top

The bonnets retain their autumnal shape; in velvet their ornaments are extremely simple, and are generally made of a small black lace, ribbons and no bugs so much worn as they were last year. Net trimmings or flowers are no longer fashionable under the front of the bonnet: they are replaced by a small flat cap trimmed with a narrow point plissé, which is most becoming.

At no period have the cuffs been worn larger or wider. For morning toilets they are in embroidered muslin

Aprons for ladies are very much trimmed, richly embroidered in coloured silks, and trimmed with small lace flounces. In Paris they are very fashionable, and always worn with morning négligés

Blouses for boys are made in black velvet, cut square on the shoulders, with large falling sleeves, as first introduced in our Engraving. The shirt is of fine cambric, extremely wide, and finished at the wrist by a wristband.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

FRAMING OF CHARGES BY COURTS-MARTIAL.—The following important order has just been issued from the Adjutant-General's office:—

Circular Memorandum.

Horse Guards, Nov. 19, 1849.

It appearing that the term "disgraceful conduct" has been employed in framing charges in many instances in relation to offences not contemplated by the 29th clause of the Mutiny Act, and the corresponding Articles of War (from the 7th to the 12th), and are liable to the penal consequences of offence coming under that designation: and it being evident that the indiscriminate use of the term "disgraceful conduct" must affect the Commander-in-Chief desires that, in all cases in which any one or other of the legal descriptions of "disgraceful conduct" are specified in the aforesaid clause and Articles of War, it shall not be characterised as such in the charge by the term "disgraceful conduct" shall be incorrect, and applied to those offences only on conviction of which the offender is liable to be deprived by the sentence of the Court of the benefit of his service. By command,

JOHN MACDONALD, Adjutant-General.

NEW VESSELS.—Two three-deckers, to be named respectively the Royal Sovereign and Mercury, each of 121 guns, are intended to be built on the slips at present occupied by the steam-sloops Argus and Furious, in Portsmouth Dockyard. The following are the ordered dimensions of each:—

	Ft. In.
Length between the perpendiculars	210 0
Length of the keel for tonnage	171 1
Breadth extreme	60 0
Breadth for tonnage	59 2
Breadth moulded	58 4
Depth of hold	24 8

Burden in tons, 3183 87-94

They are both after the lines of the Prince of Wales, 120, designed by Captain Sir William Symonds, now building in this dockyard.

WITHDRAWAL OF SIR W. PARKER'S SQUADRON FROM THE DARDANELLES.—Orders have been sent out to Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, Bart., G.C.B., to retire from the Dardanelles with the fleet under his command, and proceed to Malta.

Admiral Sir Charles Ogle, Bart., has given £1372 10s. 6d. Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Consols, to the Portsmouth, Gosport, and Forton Hospital, established during the period of the gallant Admiral's service as commander-in-chief at Portsmouth; and a similar amount to the Dreadnought Seaman's Hospital, off Greenwich; the proceeds having been placed at Sir Charles Ogle's disposal for the benefit of any casualty hospital.

A number of shipwrights have commenced laying the blocks under the new ship at the east side of Portsmouth Dockyard Parade-ground for supporting the keel of the large steam-frigate ordered to be built for a screw-propeller, and to carry 80 guns.

Her Majesty's ship Constance, 50 guns, Captain W. C. Courtney, arrived at Portsmouth, on Saturday last, from the South Pacific, with Australian gold, and other freight, to the amount of 1,750,000 dollars, or thereabouts, on behalf of mercantile interests.

During the past week the Lord Gambier and the Abram have arrived at Hull from Davis's Straits, but neither of them bring any intelligence respecting the Arctic Expedition.

DUELS IN FRANCE.—A duel was fought on Saturday between M. Pierre Bonaparte and the Duke of Bovigo, editor of the Legitimist journal Gazette. The police having interfered, prevented the meeting in the morning, but in the afternoon they repaired to the wood of Boulogne, where the duel took place. The weapon chosen was the sword. M. Bonaparte was slightly wounded in the hand and breast; he, however, succeeded in disarming his adversary, who asked to continue the combat with small swords. To this the seconds of M. Bonaparte objected, and proposed pistols. It was understanding having been come to by the friends of both parties, a declaration was signed, and they left the ground. M. de la Valette, editor of the Assemblée Nationale, who had been challenged by M. Pierre Bonaparte to-day, a meeting, encounter, awaited in the Salle des Pas Perdus with his seconds the issue of the duel, to place himself at the disposal of M. Bonaparte. The second duel was fought on Sunday morning, in a field near the railroad station at St. Germain, between the parties, viz. M. Pierre Bonaparte and M. Adrien de la Valette. This meeting grew out of a letter by M. Pierre Bonaparte to M. de la Valette on the subject of an article which had appeared in his journal, of which he was not the author, but of which he had assumed the responsibility. The terms of the letter being considered insulting, M. de la Valette demanded satisfaction of M. Bonaparte. After firing a shot each, at twenty paces, the affair was declared terminated, and the parties left the ground. In consequence of these frequent duels arising out of disputes in the Assembly, it is said the Attorney-General will demand authority to prosecute.

THE AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.—By the brig Thomas Snoade, we have received accounts from Cape Coast Castle to the 1st of October. The station had not been visited by any English ship of war for six months, and only one foreign (an American) had been off the place in the same period. The members of the Missionary Society were actively employed in their duties or no business calling attended their lab urs. The house occupied by the bishop (a black) is described as a most splendid building. The Ashantees continually arrive in the town with parties of slaves, half of whom they sell at the rate of two doubloons per slave, taking the amount out in goods, which are carried back into the country by the portion of slaves not sold. Those sold soon find new owners, and if any questions are put as to their absence, the Europeans are told that they have run away to the bush. In fact, the station is no check to slave trading: it affords no supplies to slipping, and is very unhealthy. The troops and officers of the present relief of the 1st West India Regiment are all well, being a favourable contrast with last year's relief, of which all the officers died. Capt. G. Robeson, commanding the detachment now at Cape Coast, is come home on sick leave. Lieut. Robeson remaining in command.

FINANCIAL AND PARLIAMENTARY REFORM.

The missionaries of reform busily ply their propaganda. On Monday evening last, Sir Joshua Walmsley, M.P., and Mr. G. Thompson, M.P., appeared before the citizens of Glasgow, as a deputation from the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association, and entered into full explanations of the principles of that body.

Mr. Hastie, M.P., presided; and the following resolution having been agreed to, a committee was appointed to form a district branch association, viz.:—

That, considering that the national expenditure is excessive, and may be very much reduced without injury to the efficient public services of the State, the finances, and that a reform in the Commons House of Parliament is necessary, this meeting approves of the objects of the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association, and cordially welcomes to the city the deputation from that body now present, consisting of Sir Joshua Walmsley, M.P., and George Thompson, Esq., M.P., who have been invited by a preliminary meeting to address the present assembly.

In the metropolis a meeting of the Southwark Branch Association was held on Tuesday evening, at the Literary Institution, in the Borough-road, for the purpose of advancing the interests of the parent body. Mr. Apsley Pellatt, Esq., occupied the chair; and amongst the gentlemen by whom the meeting was addressed, were, Colonel Thompson, M.P., and Mr. C. Pearson, M.P.

The following resolution was agreed to, viz

That this meeting, convinced of the reckless extravagance that exists in the national expenditure, and of the utter impossibility of managing the present unjust and vexatious Income-tax, or of ever pressing as it does on the middle and labouring classes of the community, had with the question the establishment and progress of the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association, and Judge Bennett, in the only constitutional means to support the principles and measures recommended by that body, to secure a sweeping reduction in the public expenditure, even if it involve a large and extensive change in the electoral franchise, as being the only remedy for abuses so deeply affecting the moral and social condition of the people.

ERUPTION OF A VOLCANO IN JAVA.—A letter from Batavia (Java), of the 26th of September, gives some account of a late eruption of Mount Merapi, a volcano in the district of Kadoe, believed to be extinct. The eruption began on the morning of the 14th of September, during a violent hurricane, and lasted until the evening of the 17th, that is to say, more than three days. The mountain vomited forth immense quantities of stones and ashes in every direction. This matter, impelled by the action of the wind, was spread through the whole district of Kadoe, and also those of Djokjokarta and Soerakarta. At several points the soil was covered with ashes to the depth of three inches. The river of Blongkeng was almost wholly filled up, and it is feared that its waters must overflow in the rainy season. The inhabitants fled, and no life was lost; but the loss of property, including crops of rice, tobacco, and indigo, with whole fields of corn, was immense.

Birmingham was visited on Tuesday by one of the densest fogs witnessed in that town for several years. It commenced about twelve o'clock, and gradually increased until four, when the whole town became enveloped in the most uncomfortable darkness. Towards six o'clock in the evening it seemed to be gradually disappearing.

Captain Hosken, late of the Great Britain, and who since accompanied Rajah Brooke to Borneo, has returned to Bristol for a short time. Captain Hosken, however, we are informed, intends again to go out to Borneo.

ANALYSIS OF BANKRUPTCIES.—In the year from November 7, 1845, to November 3, 1846, there were 1296 bankruptcies gazetted. We select the numbers of manufacturing trades:—Calico printers, 2; carpet manufacturers, 2; cotton manufacturers, 35; dyers, 8, woollen manufacturers and dealers, 24. The following are the numbers in other trades:—Bankers, 21; coal-merchants, 26; corn-merchants, 33; commission-agents and factors, 21; farmers, 17; ironmongers and founders, 39; Hundrapers, 27; merchants, 33; millers, 28; stock and share-brokers, 11; tailors, 30; timber-merchants, 29; victuallers, 87; wine and spirit-merchants, 34.

ACCIDENT TO SIR NORTON KNATCHBULL, BART.—On Saturday last, on the arrival of the 4.39 down train at Ashford station, on the Dover line, Sir Norton Knatchbull, in attempting to leave the carriage before the train had stopped, lost his balance, and was thrown with such force upon the platform that his collar-bone was dislocated and his arm broken. He was immediately taken to his own residence, Mystole, where he was met by Mr. Whitfield, surgeon, who rendered him every professional assistance, after which he left for Mersham Hatch, where he is now progressing favourably.

Major-General Bowles, who was at the siege of Copenhagen, 1807, and was served at the passage of the Douro, Bidassoa, Nivelle, Nive, and Adour; at the battles of Talavera, Salamanca, and Vittoria; at the sieges of Ciudad Rodrigo, Badajos, Burgos, and San Sebastian; at the capture of Madrid, at the investment of Bayonne, and at the battles of Quatre Bras and Waterloo, and the subsequent capture of Paris, has succeeded to the distinguished service pay of 25s. per diem.

MASTER OF THE CEREMONIES AT BATH.—Mr. Nugent has been chosen master of the ceremonies, by a large majority over the other competitors.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The market has been again buoyant, prices having not only been well maintained, but steadily advancing. Consols on Monday opened at 94¼ to ¾, and receded to 95, fluctuating within that quotation, notwithstanding a large amount of money stock was brought into the market. On Tuesday a further rise occurred, the market being very buoyant. Consols touched 96¾, at which price a large purchases was made. Towards the end of business, a slight reaction, however set prices firm at 95¾ ¾. This excitement was succeeded by a quiet day on Wednesday, prices fluctuating barely one quarter per cent, Consols closing at 95¾ for money. Again, on Thursday, the market became weaker, and some realised, reduced prices 95¼ ¾ for money, but on Friday, the last day, the market rallied. Exchequer Bills have declined in consequence of an es for investment in Consols. A slight improvement in prices took place, however, on Thursday; Exchequer Bills remarked a fluctuation of 5s. between the highest and lowest prices were firm, but the speculative excitement had apparently subsided. Prices last stood at Bank Stock, 209¾; Reduced, 94¾; Consols, 95¾; New Three per Cent. Annuities, 94¾; Long Annuities to expire in Jan. 1860, 8 7-16; Ditto, 20 years, Oct. 10, 1859, 8¼; Ditto, 30 years, Jan. 5, 1860, 8⅝; India Stock, 262; India Bonds, £1000, 63 p; Ditto under £1000, 63 p, Consols for Account, 95¾; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 48 p; £500, June, 48 p; Small, June, 51 p.

There has been an increase of business in the Foreign Market, Spanish having been in some demand, in consequence of a reported intention of the Government to take an early opportunity of offering some compromise for the overdue interest on the Five per Cent. Stock, as well as an arrangement with regard to the Passive Stock. Portuguese are quoted as advancing, in consequence of the advertisement announcing the payment of a dividend for the first half-year of 1848 on the Five per Cent Stock of 1841, and the Four per Cent. Stock of 1845, as well as on the New Three per Cent Stock. Mexican quotes a slight improvement, from the nature of the last American advices, and the prospect of the current operations were, for Brazilian Bonds, Account, 87; Ditto, Small, 86¾; Buenos Ayres Bonds, Six per Cent., 46; Ditto, Account, 44¾; Danish Bonds, 1825, Three per Cent, 71¾; Greek Bonds, Five per Cents, 1824, 16; Ditto, 1825, 16; Ditto, 1846, Account, 27⅝; Peruvian Bonds, Four per Cent., 52½; Ditto, Account, 50¾; Ditto, Deferred, 17¾; Portuguese, Five per Cents, Small, 85; Ditto, Four per Cent., 39¾; Ditto, Account, 39¾; Russian Bonds, 1822, Five per Cents, 104; Ditto, Account, 103⅝; Ditto, 1849, 11¾; Ditto, Coupons, 8⅝; Ditto, Passive, 3⅝; Ditto, Three per Cent., 37½; Venezuela Bonds, Two-and-a-Quarter per Cent., Deferred, 7¾; French Rentes, Five per Cents, 89f 50c; Exchequer, 20f 50c; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cent, 12 guild., 55; Ditto, Four per Cent., Certificates, 83.

Shares have been comparatively steady, and as the Account progressed, in some instances showed an advance. As previously reported, the absence of public purchases leaves the market open to bearing operations, and the rise in prices now at the close of the Account, proves that the belief in heavy bearing operations, expressed in the LEADER and LONDON NEWS of last week, was well founded. The last prices are, for Aberdeen, 13; Bristol and Exeter, 54; Ditto, Thres, 15⅝; Caledonian, 12⅝; Ditto, New £10 Preference, 8⅝; Chester and Holyhead, Preference, 4⅛; Eastern Counties, 7⅛; Ditto, New, Quartered 6 per Cent., 11¼; East Lincolnshire, 28; Great Northern, 7⅞; Ditto, B, 6 per Cent., 4¼; Do, 5 per Cent., Pref., 7⅛; Great South, and West, (Ireland), 3; Great Western, 59; Do, 4 Shares, 11¼; Do, Fifths, 1⅛; Do, New, £5 8⅝; Lancashire and Yorkshire, Fifths, 2⅞; North Midland, 19¼; Ditto, Preference, 6; Boulogne and Ardres, 5⅝; Namur and Liege, 6¼; Northern of France, 2⅝; Orleans and Boulonais, 8; West Flanders, 1¾.

SATURDAY MORNING.—There was considerable agitation in the market yesterday; Consols opened at 95¾ ¾, and receded to 95⅝ ½, but closed at 95¾ ¾. In the Foreign Market Spanish was the favourite [illegible] Portuguese, Five per Cent., 39. Mexican Bonds [illegible]

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Exclusive of those of flour and some other articles, the total imports of foreign grain into London this week have exceeded 20,000 quarters, as will be seen by the returns below. To-day the show of English wheat was small, the arrivals coastwise having been only 1200 quarters, while the supply of foreign was also very limited. The business of foreign qualities was exceedingly heavy, at barely Monday's decline in the quotations From abroad, 16,000 quarters have arrived, but the whole of the parcels which only little business was transacted—were mostly held at full prices; but the middling and inferior kinds were somewhat lower. The trade ruled heavy, and barley was quoted 1s. per quarter less money. Malt was extensively supplied with foreign oats, owing to which the trade ruled heavy, and [illegible] were somewhat lower. In beans, peas, Indian corn, and flour, next to nothing doing.

English.—Wheat, 1390 barley, 1780; malt, 1870; oats, 1230; flour, 2060 [illegible] 740. Foreign, wheat, 16,270; barley, 31,080; malt, ——; oats, 84,8.0 quarters [illegible] flour, 1200 sacks and 2000 barrels.

Mark-lane Express.—Monday, Nov. 26.—There was a very limited supply of wheat this week coastwise, and the trade was heavy, at 1s to 2s per quarter less money. Foreign was in large supply, and the trade was heavy, at 1s to 2s per quarter less money. Flour was in good request, at 1s per barrel higher. Barley was in large supply, and the trade was heavy, at 1s per quarter less money. Malt was in good request, at 1s per quarter higher. Oats were in large supply, and the trade was heavy, at 1s per quarter less money. Beans and peas were in good request, at 1s per quarter higher.

ENGLISH WHEAT, per imperial quarter.

	s.	s.
Essex and Kent, red	36	40
Ditto white	38	42
Ditto, rye	36	40
Ditto, grey	34	38
Ditto, Chevalier	40	44
Ditto, Talavera	38	42
Ditto, Lincoln and Norfolk, red	34	38
Ditto white	36	40
Ditto, rye	34	38
Ditto, grey	32	36
Ditto, Chevalier	38	42
Ditto, Talavera	36	40
Scotch, red	34	38
Ditto white	36	40
Ditto, rye	34	38
Ditto, grey	32	36
Ditto, Chevalier	38	42
Ditto, Talavera	36	40
Irish, red	32	36
Ditto white	34	38
Ditto, rye	32	36
Ditto, grey	30	34
Ditto, Chevalier	36	40
Ditto, Talavera	34	38

FOREIGN WHEAT, per imperial quarter.

	s.	s.
Dantzic, Konigsberg, and Pomeranian, red	36	40
Ditto white	38	42
Marianopoli	38	42
Odessa	36	40
Taganrog	36	40
Egyptian	32	36
Salonica and Smyrna, white	38	42
Ditto red	36	40
Baltic, red	36	40
Ditto white	38	42
Petersburgh	36	40
Archangel	36	40
Riga, Elsineur, and Memel	36	40
Danish and Holstein	36	40
Pomeranian and Prussian	36	40
Rostock	36	40
Hamburgh	36	40
Oldenburgh	36	40
Holland	36	40
Belgian, Mons, and Ghent	36	40
Ditto, Antwerp	36	40
Ditto, Ostend	36	40
French, Dunkirk, Boulogne, and Calais	36	40
Ditto, Rouen	36	40
Ditto, Nantz	36	40
Ditto, Bordeaux	36	40
Spanish	36	40
Portugal	36	40
Genoa, Leghorn, and Naples	36	40
Trieste and Venice	36	40
Gibraltar	36	40
Malta	36	40
Barbary	36	40
Brazil	36	40
Chilian	36	40
Mexican	36	40
Peruvian	36	40
Columbian	36	40
Monte Video	36	40
Buenos Ayres	36	40
Canada	36	40
New Brunswick	36	40
Nova Scotia	36	40
United States	36	40

FOREIGN FLOUR, per barrel.

	s.	s.
Dantzic, Konigsberg, and Pomeranian	36	40
Marianopoli	36	40
Odessa	36	40
Taganrog	36	40
Egyptian	36	40
Salonica and Smyrna	36	40
Baltic	36	40
Petersburgh	36	40
Archangel	36	40
Riga, Elsineur, and Memel	36	40
Danish and Holstein	36	40
Pomeranian and Prussian	36	40
Rostock	36	40
Hamburgh	36	40
Oldenburgh	36	40
Holland	36	40
Belgian, Mons, and Ghent	36	40
Ditto, Antwerp	36	40
Ditto, Ostend	36	40
French, Dunkirk, Boulogne, and Calais	36	40
Ditto, Rouen	36	40
Ditto, Nantz	36	40
Ditto, Bordeaux	36	40
Spanish	36	40
Portugal	36	40
Genoa, Leghorn, and Naples	36	40
Trieste and Venice	36	40
Gibraltar	36	40
Malta	36	40
Barbary	36	40
Brazil	36	40
Chilian	36	40
Mexican	36	40
Peruvian	36	40
Columbian	36	40
Monte Video	36	40
Buenos Ayres	36	40
Canada	36	40
New Brunswick	36	40
Nova Scotia	36	40
United States	36	40

ENGLISH FLOUR, per barrel.

	s.	s.
Essex and Kent, red	36	40
Ditto white	38	42
Ditto, rye	36	40
Ditto, grey	34	38
Ditto, Chevalier	40	44
Ditto, Talavera	38	42
Lincoln and Norfolk, red	34	38
Ditto white	36	40
Ditto, rye	34	38
Ditto, grey	32	36
Ditto, Chevalier	38	42
Ditto, Talavera	36	40
Scotch, red	34	38
Ditto white	36	40
Ditto, rye	34	38
Ditto, grey	32	36
Ditto, Chevalier	38	42
Ditto, Talavera	36	40
Irish, red	32	36
Ditto white	34	38
Ditto, rye	32	36
Ditto, grey	30	34
Ditto, Chevalier	36	40
Ditto, Talavera	34	38

BARLEY, per imperial quarter.

	s.	s.
Essex and Kent, grinding	22	24
Ditto, malting	24	26
Ditto, Chevalier	26	28
Ditto, Talavera	24	26
Lincoln and Norfolk, grinding	22	24
Ditto, malting	24	26
Ditto, Chevalier	26	28
Ditto, Talavera	24	26
Scotch, grinding	22	24
Ditto, malting	24	26
Ditto, Chevalier	26	28
Ditto, Talavera	24	26
Irish, grinding	22	24
Ditto, malting	24	26
Ditto, Chevalier	26	28
Ditto, Talavera	24	26

MALT, per imperial quarter.

	s.	s.
Suffolk, pale	56	60
Essex and Kent, pale	56	60
Chevalier	60	64
Talavera	58	62
Ware, pale	56	60
Chevalier	60	64
Talavera	58	62
Norfolk and Lincoln, pale	56	60
Chevalier	60	64
Talavera	58	62
Scotch, pale	56	60
Chevalier	60	64
Talavera	58	62
Irish, pale	56	60
Chevalier	60	64
Talavera	58	62

OATS, per imperial quarter.

	s.	s.
Essex and Kent, feed	22	24
Ditto, potato	24	26
Ditto, Poland	26	28
Ditto, Angus	24	26
Lincoln and Norfolk, feed	22	24
Ditto, potato	24	26
Ditto, Poland	26	28
Ditto, Angus	24	26
Scotch, feed	22	24
Ditto, potato	24	26
Ditto, Poland	26	28
Ditto, Angus	24	26
Irish, feed	22	24
Ditto, potato	24	26
Ditto, Poland	26	28
Ditto, Angus	24	26

BEANS, per imperial quarter.

	s.	s.
Essex and Kent, small	32	36
Ditto, large	34	38
Ditto, Tick	30	34
Lincoln and Norfolk, small	32	36
Ditto, large	34	38
Ditto, Tick	30	34
Scotch, small	32	36
Ditto, large	34	38
Ditto, Tick	30	34
Irish, small	32	36
Ditto, large	34	38
Ditto, Tick	30	34

PEAS, per imperial quarter.

	s.	s.
Essex and Kent, hog	32	36
Ditto, maple	34	38
Ditto, white	36	40
Ditto, boilers	36	40
Suffolk, hog	32	36
Ditto, maple	34	38
Ditto, white	36	40
Ditto, boilers	36	40
Scotch	32	36
Ditto, maple	34	38
Ditto, white	36	40
Ditto, boilers	36	40
Irish	32	36
Ditto, maple	34	38
Ditto, white	36	40
Ditto, boilers	36	40

SEEDS, per bushel.

	s.	s.
Clover, red	36	40
Ditto, white	36	40
Rapeseed	36	40
Linseed, English, sowing	36	40
Ditto, Baltic, crushing	36	40
Ditto, Odessa	36	40
Coriander	16	20
Carraway	36	40
Tares, old	36	40
Ditto, new	36	40
Trefoil	36	40
Mustard, white	36	40
Ditto, brown	36	40

HOPS, per cwt.

	£	s.	£	s.
Sussex, pockets	4	0	5	0
Weald of Kent, ditto	4	0	5	0
Mid ditto	4	0	5	0
East ditto	4	0	5	0
Farnham	4	0	5	0
Yearling Kents	4	0	5	0
Sussex	4	0	5	0
Yearling ditto	4	0	5	0
Bags	3	0	4	0

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, Nov. 27.

PRIZE MONEY.

Notice is hereby given to the officers and crew of her Majesty's sloop Heroine, Charles Edmunds, Esq. Commander, that they will be paid, on Wednesday, the 19th of December, at No. 24, Admiral-street, Stepney, in proportion to their respective bounties for the Christian slave-ship *Zephyr*o, seized on the 28th of March, 1848; and that the last will be by cash, at the same place, on Wednesdays and Thursdays, for the three following months

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 16

Corps of Royal Marines.—Captain and Brevet Major J Ashmore to be Lieutenant-Colonel, and Brevet Major W Parker to be Major, vice Ross, who exchanges

Second Lieut W F Burton to be First Lieutenant, vice Foote.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED

J D HARWOOD, Liverpool, ironmonger. J BROGDEN, Bradford, Yorkshire, woolstapler

BANKRUPTS.

W EDWARDS, Liverpool-street, City, merchant. G HAYLOCK, March, Cambridgeshire, cabinet maker. ELIZABETH RUST, Founders, Essex, brickmaker N PATTISON, Crutch, Worcestershire, dealer and chapman. J WOODHOUSE, Sheffield, commission agent. H BRIDGES, Oxford-street, cabinet maker. A WOOLFREY, Poole, auctioneer. R H GOULD, Strand, tea merchant. J MASON, Nottingham, boot and shoemaker. W GILES, sonne, Liverpool, commission-agent. S INMAN, Ashton-under-Lyne, cotton spinner and paper manufacturer

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

R HENDERSON, Greenock, paper-maker. J HOUSTON, Paisley, merchant. D M'KIE, Calnicie, farmer.

WAR-OFFICE, Nov. 30.

2d Life Guards: Lieut Hon G Maude to be Captain, vice Naylor; Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant J G Adam to be Lieutenant, vice Maude

4th Dragoon Guards: Lieut-Gen R Pigot to be Colonel, vice Gen Sir G Anson, G C B

Coldstream Foot Guards: Lieut-Colonel Hon G A Spencer to be Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Meiklam

3d Foot: Cadet A L Coussmaker to be Ensign, vice Lukis 17th: Lieut J F O Conner to be Capt, vice Edwards, Ensign G T Rose to be Lieut, vice O Conor. 18th: Lieut J Swinburn to be Capt, vice Sclater, Ensign W Clarke to be Sec Lieut, vice Bentinck. 23rd: Brev Major F J George to be Major, vice Pooley, Lieut R P Pigott to be Captain, vice George, Ensign F G King to be Lieut vice Dashwood, Cadet W Markham to be Ensign, vice King. 31st: Cadet A Schreiber to be Ensign, vice Burke. 39th: Lieut B McKee to be Lieut, vice Swinburn; F G Stapleton to be Ensign, vice Birkwhistle. 37th: Capt and Lieut-Col E C W M Mansfield to be Lieut-Colonel, vice Bourchier, Lieut-Col Hon G F Berry to be Lieutenant, vice Parker; Ensign F P Drought to be Lieutenant, vice Ashton. 45th: Lieut E J T Montresor to be Captain, vice Mackay, Ensign L Rimes to be Lieutenant, vice Montresor. 64th: V Ryan to be Ensign, vice Shirley. 70th: G H Grosvenor to be Ensign, vice Perry 84th: Lieut A Campbell to be Lieutenant, vice Gallagher, Ensign J Cumming to be Lieutenant, vice Campbell. R A S Todd to be Ensign vice Wyatt. 97th: Brevet Major W M Hamerton to be Captain, vice Searle; Lieut R E Jones to be Captain, vice Hamerton; Ensign E K Jones to be Lieutenant, vice Dillon. 98th: Ensign W E Cunningham to be Lieutenant, vice Hamilton

The undermentioned Officers to be Lieutenant-Colonels in the Army: Brevet Major W M Hamerton to be Lieutenant-Colonel in the Army.

The undermentioned Officers to be Captains in the Army: Lieut R Dalton, 104th, Lieut-General Sir G Anson, G C B, Lieut-General Sir A F Barnard, G C B, to be Lieutenant-Governor, vice General Sir G Anson, G C B.

The following appointments, inserted in the Gazette of the 23d inst, have been cancelled.

78th Foot: Lieut Hon G A Lockhart to be Captain, vice Hamilton; Ensign J S Fitzroy to be Lieutenant, vice Lockhart.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 24.

Corps of Royal Marines: First Lieut C F Cooke to be Captain, vice Capt T Park; Second Lieut O P Smith to be First Lieut, vice Cooke

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED

J WHITEWAY, Chudleigh, Devonshire, innkeeper.

BANKRUPTS.

F C CHRISTY, F ADAMS, and J P CHRISTY, Manchester, engineers. G WETHERILT, Downstreet, Piccadilly, ironmonger. T GILL, Castle-street, Leicester-square, retailer of beer. B DIMSDALE, Oxford-street, saddler. R SKINNER, West Stalling, Kent, brickmaker. S FREEMAN, Bridgewater, Somersetshire, victualler. B BENNETT, Chelsea, corn-dealer J and J COWLISHAW, Derby, railway-carriage builders. J BEER, Exeter, shoemaker. J NEWTON, Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancashire, cotton-spinner. J SCHOLEFIELD, Manchester-square, timber-merchant. W STEANE, Wellingborough, Northamptonshire, grocer W and J BAKER, Birmingham, brass-founders. HENRY Ashton, Wiltshire, grocer. W G BARTLETT, Rosemary-lane, Whitechapel, pastry-cook and confectioner. H ALLEN, Bristol, victualler. J HOLLAND, Bristol, builder. H FINCH, S WILSON, J CLARKE, and J COATES, Sunningley, Yorkshire, scribbling millers. R NOBLE, Leadenhall-street, City, tailor. J BOWLER, of the Crescent, Southwark-bridge-road, Southwark, hat-manufacturer

BIRTHS.

At Calverley Park, Tunbridge Wells, the wife of Captain Brenton von Donop, Royal Navy, of a daughter. At Ardtornish, Morvern, Argyllshire, the wife of the Rev J H Hamilton, of a daughter. At Edinburgh, the wife of Sir J S Stirling, of a daughter. At Corby

NEW BOOKS, &c,

ELEGANT GIFT-BOOK FOR THE SEASON.
Just ready, in a handsome super-royal 8vo. volume, price 16s, cloth gilt,

THE NILE BOAT; or, Glimpses of the Land of Egypt. Illustrated by Thirty-five Steel Engravings and Map, also, numerous Wood Cuts. By W. H. HART, ET. Author of "Days in the Desert," "Walks about Jerusalem," &c
London: ARTHUR HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK for 1850;
Being the Sixth Annual Issue of this most beautifully embellished and useful Almanack. Illustrated by DUNCAN and other Eminent Artists. The Novel of the Month, by Miss LOUDON; besides a variety of new and useful Tables, &c. &c. The Astronomical Department by JAMES GLAISHER, Esq., F.R.A.S., and of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.
Published by WILLIAM SMITH, 192, Strand, London.
* * Country orders supplied for Cash only

TO GOVERNESSES AND TEACHERS OF MUSIC.
Published this day, price 6s 6d, and free by post for 7s 6d,
GUYLOTT'S ORIGINAL FAMILY PRECEPTOR for the PIANO-FORTE.—"This work, alike invaluable to Student and Pupil, contains 56 of the most beautiful melodies of the day, all correctly fingered, with full explanatory remarks, by which a knowledge of the Science of Music may be easily acquired."
WEBB'S Royal Music Saloon, 32 Soho-square.

NEW STORY OF SCOTTISH LIFE.
Now Ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.,
PASSAGES IN THE LIFE OF
MRS. MARGARET MAITLAND, OF NANTY SIDE
WRITTEN BY HERSELF.
"This work has given us much pleasure. There are Mrs Maitlands in real life, and we are sure that the Maiden Aunt has a place for found so favourable a representative in print. As regards purity of mind, generosity of aim, and great observation of character, Mrs Margaret Maitland might claim consanguinity with the Rev. Micaia Balwidder."—Athenæum.
"This work is full of great power, abounding in natural feeling. The moral it inculcates will be of bold practice to all. Pathos in deep spirit, it produces a corresponding effect on the mind. Written by a woman, it is a book which any man, however high his reputation as a writer, may have been proud to have penned its pages."—Observer.
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-st.

WORKING MEN'S ESSAYS ON THE SABBATH. SIXTH COLLEGE PRIZE.—Just published, price 3s.,
SABBATH LABOUR: is SEVENTH-DAY SLAVERY; a Voice from Ireland on the Sabbath Question. By J. C. ULSTERSMAN, Working Hatter, Belfast. With Five Illustrations, by T. FITZELL, Architect, PARKINSON and OAKEY, Typesetter-row; PHILIP and SON, Liverpool and Hull.

PRESENTS for CHRISTMAS and the ECCLESIASTICAL YEAR.
1. THE CHURCHMAN'S YEAR: An Explanation of every Epistle, Gospel, and Lesson. Crown 8vo, 10s 6d.
2. THE CHRISTIAN PILGRIMAGE: An Explanation of the Services from Baptism to Burial. 2nd Edition. 1 vol small 8vo, 5s. By the Rev. CYRIL FLEES TOWNSEND, M.A., Vicar of Braunlinghan, and Chaplain to his Grace the Duke of S. Manchester.
MASTERMAN, 3, Waterloo-place, and St. Paul's Churchyard, London.

SOWERBY'S ENGLISH BOTANY.—
RE-ISSUE IN MONTHLY PARTS, at 3s 6d
Part 29 of this work is now ready, as are also Vols. 1 and 2, containing together upwards of 420 Coloured Descriptions, at £1 19s 6d per Vol., 8vo.
Copies of Vols. 1 to 7, comprising the Flowering Plants, in neat boards, well-adapted for presents (this work being the only complete Illustrated Flora of any country), £13 13s 6d.
To be had of the proprietor, JUDITH SOWERBY, 3, Mead-place, Lambeth, and of all Booksellers.

PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH, by Post 1s 6d.
RAILWAY LIBRARY (THE). The NEW VOLUMES are The PRAIRIE. By J. F. COOPER.
PRIDE and PREJUDICE. By Miss AUSTEN.
Also in this Popular Series,
The Pilot | Ionic and Sensibility
Red Rover | Pension | Monnair and Mac Malone
Last of the Mohicans | Charms and Counter Charms
Lionel Lincoln | Precaution
GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and Co. Soho-square; and all Booksellers.
Newsmen, and Railway Stations.

Nearly ready,
HERALDRY: a GENERAL ORDINARY of BRITISH ARMORIALS, to an Alphabetical Arrangement of the various Charges, Bearings, and Accessories, carefully grouped and subdivided. This work is designed to supply the great desideratum of accurate Heraldic and Genealogist, since, besides showing the Applications of the various Charges, it gives the Blazon of the Families of Families, &c. &c. It is designed to enable the inquirer to ascertain with facility the name of the Family by whom any given Coat has been borne: to which respect it differs from all other Armorial Dictionaries, inasmuch as instead of referring a specimen, which is rarely, or who will constitute no rare bearings, are requested to address Mr. JOHN E. PAPWORTH, F.R.I.B.A., 11a, Great Marlborough-street, London.

CHEAP EDITION of the NOVELS and TALES of G. P. R. JAMES, Esq.—SIMMS and MINTYER beg to announce that the Copyright of all Mr. James's Works of Fiction; it is their intention to publish them in the PARLOUR LIBRARY, for works of other established Authors. To meet the views of those who may desire to have these works bound in a more handsome manner than that hitherto attached to works issued in a cheap form, they have been also in Volumes bound in fancy cloth, with gilt back, at 1s 6d each. The consecutive numbers will be dropped, but a selection may be made from the Series without having the appearance of being imperfect. Published this day,
THE GIPSY. Price 1s. in boards, or 1s. 6d. in fancy cloth, gilt back.
Simms and Mintyer, Paternoster-row, London, and Donegal-street, Belfast; Philip and Son, Liverpool; J. Menzies, Edinburgh; Griffin and Co., Glasgow; J. M'Glashan, Dublin.

NEW EDITION, 20,000.
Now ready, Price One Shilling; or Post-free, 1s. 6d.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON READING BOOK.
This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of the SPELLING, which smoothes all difficulties of pronunciation, and by the ORIGINAL and USEFUL HERALDIC ILLUSTRATIONS, which entice the learner to advance of his own accord, and in which the ILLUSTRATED LONDON READING BOOK HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects and scenes of interest, forming by far the most startling introduction to learning ever published (144 Pages.)
A Prize Edition of 1000, appears extra.
Published at the Office of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London. A Liberal Allowance to the Trade and to Schools. Supplied for Cash only. Applications to be made to the Office. On application, terms may be known

Just published, price 1s 6d,
THE FAMILY ALMANACK for 1850; containing a Guide to Mothers on the Diseases and Treatment of Children; upwards of 300 Receipts, Hints, and Memoranda, with a host of other useful matter.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN; and all Booksellers and Newsmen.

Just published, THE FIRST VOLUME of the FAMILY FRIEND.
Expressly established as the favourite of Fifty Thousand Subscribers. It is confidently hoped that the Excellence and Cheapness of the Work now Advertised will ensure it an Immense Popularity
The Volume contains Twenty-four Coloured Plates, which are written from a real Manipulations
The Farmer's Daughter, or, The Ruined Home and Eleven other Tales.
Lectures to Little-folk, by Aunt Esther Whitehead, upon interesting branches of Natural Science.
Answers to Correspondents.
About Fire.
A Visit to the Zoological Gardens.
Notes of Sea-weeds; Illustrated with many
All the Varieties Domestic
Illustrated Instructions in Wax-Flower Making. By a Practical Botanist. The only Work published which are written from a real Manipulations
The Farmer's Daughter, or, The Ruined Home and Eleven other Tales.
Lectures to Little-folk, by Aunt Esther Whitehead, upon interesting branches of Natural Science.
About Fire.
A Visit to the Zoological Gardens.
Notes of Sea-weeds; Illustrated with many
All the Varieties Domestic
Illustrated Instructions in Wax-Flower Making. By a Practical Botanist. The only Work published which are written from a real Manipulations
Fancy Instructions for the Manufacture of Genuine Evergreens, or Reticulata, the natural beauty for Decoration, at a trifling cost.
A Mass of Valuable Matter, under the heads of the Gardener's Friend, the Housewife's Friend, the Naturalist's Friend, Varia, Poetry, Sacred Music, together with Pantry Fruits from History—Statistics—Coffee Treasures—Hints to Wives—Hints to Husbands, &c.
Price 5s Cloth Gilt, or Illustrated Presentation Copies, Extra Cloth, F II Gilt, Printed upon Superfine Paper, 7s 6d
* * As a Christmas or New Year's Present, the FAMILY FRIEND is a charming and appropriate Book
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN; and all Booksellers.

BOOKS for PRESENTS.—JOHN FIELD begs to call the attention of Heads of Schools, and the Public generally, to his immense Stock of Juvenile, Miscellaneous, and Illustrated Works, suitable for school prizes and birthday presents, in neat and superior bindings, at a great reduction from the published prices. Books, Prayer-books, and Church Services, from 1s to £3 3s. Albums and Scrap-books from 2s to £4 4s. Stationery of every description at the lowest possible prices. 95, Regent's-quadrant, corner of Air-street.

NEW MUSIC.

"THE SYREN POLKAS."—Twelve New Polkas, the title in gold and colours, are in THE PIANIST, A. No 18, for December, price 2s. Post free, thirty stamps. Also, Jenny Trefle' three popular songs, including "Pray, true, true," in No. 19, price 1s. Post free, eighteen stamps. "Pianista" Office, 16a, Argyll-street, Regent-street; and 37, Paternoster-row.

Just published, price 2s sewed,
ONE HUNDRED ROUNDS, for Two, Three, Four, Five, and Six Voices, selected, adapted, and serially opened by CHARLES H. PURDAY. Most of these Rounds are new to the British public in their present shape, some have had new words adapted to them, and the original tune is given in words and music.—London: HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

LOVE YE ONE ANOTHER! New Song, by HENRY RUSS, in the VALLEY OF FLOWERS. Price 2s. "We welcome Mr. Russ very warmly. His pieces are not of that trite school which, as long as it gives words, cares little for their meaning."—"Melodious and musician-like."—For other notices of three popular songs, see Herald, Despatch, Daily News, also Church and State Gazette, Oct. 26. Post-free for 30 stamps.—Library, 1, Edwards-

JULLIEN and CO.'S MUSICAL PRESENTATION LIBRARY will be worth at least treble its cost to subscribers. In this Library subscribers are allowed to select, and retain as their own property, Music to the full value of those Subscription cards—a privilege not allowed in any other Library; thus, each subscriber is not only presented with £3 3s worth of New Music, but is also Lord by supplied on loan, during the year, with every description of New, Classical, and Popular Compositions. Upwards of 1000 volumes are also at the subscribers' disposal, comprising every opera in a complete form; ever published, together with numerous collections of Classical Works, by the most eminent composers. Terms, One Guinea. N.B. The complete Pianoforte Score of Le Prophete is now ready, and forms the first volume of the Library, and a portion of the Presentation Music.—Subscription, £3 3s a year. Prospectuses forwarded free, on application to JULLIEN and CO. 214, Regent-street.

JULLIEN'S ALBUM for 1850.—Just published, this very favourite Annual, containing numerous beautiful Illustrations by Brandard. The musical contents comprise all the most popular airs, quadrilles, &c. of the season, by Jullien, Koenig, Barrot, &c.; together with 30 New Songs, by Balfe, Wallace, Angelina, Meyerbeer, Mori, &c. Purchased TOGETHER'S or established house, 7s 6d, and 2s, King William-street, London-bridge. Drawings of the instruments sent post-free. Old instruments taken in exchange.

PIANOFORTES.—The Cheapest House in London. Pianofortes in ROSEWOOD cases, 6½ octaves, by CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.—A variety of genuine secondhand, by Broadwood, Collard, Worms, and other makers, from £14.

ERARD HARP.—FOR SALE, a Bargain, a very superior and fine-toned Double-Action Instrument, seasonably ornamented, and in every respect equal to new, together with Stool, Cover, and Packing-case. Price 60 guineas. To be seen at CHAS. HOLDERNESS'S Pianoforte Warehouse, 444, New Oxford-street.

PICTURE-FRAMES, LOOKING-GLASSES, and every branch of Carving and Gilding manufactured on the premises, saving all intermediate profits. Prized Sheets of Patterns free by post. Gold Wire Blinds. Frames in the Compo. Mouldings in the Antique Artist and the Trade should preserve the address—WYKE, FOLLIT'S Great Mart, 63, Fleet-street, corner of Bouverie-

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House, where they may be had no very more than 5 minutes per week. The great reduction of price at once sets aside all rivalry, either of the Swiss manufactories, or any of the London trade. Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free—Detached Lever Watches, and Pocket Chronometers, at Moderate Prices. Money returned if not approved of.

HAWLEY'S GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, jewelled in four holes, all the latest improvements, with richly engraved cases and dials, gold, £5 5s, silver, £3 5s. Ladies' ditto, jewelled in four holes, £4 14s; silver, £2 15s. Youths' watches, £3. All carefully regulated, and warranted to keep correct for twelve months. 264, High Holborn, sons of the late Thomas Hawley; 276, Strand, and the only genuine watchmakers of that name in London.

GOLD and SILVER WATCHES.—SARL and SONS, Watchmakers, 18, Cornhill (opposite the Royal Exchange), respectfully invite attention to their very extensive and superior Stock of Watches, they continue to manufacture lower than any House in the Trade. A written warranty given with every Watch. Second-hand Watches purchased or taken in exchange.

A HANDSOME PRESENT.—A GOLD WATCH and fine GOLD CHAIN, fitted complete in a morocco case, for £3 15s, very suitable for a present. The description of the Watch: Fine full-jewelled lever, backed gold case, gold dial, horizontal movement, four holes jewelled, manufacturing power to go whilst being wound up. Any Watch not approved of may be exchanged, or money returned in a twelvemonth's time, allowed. The chain is of the 9ct quality.—SARL and SONS, Watchmakers, 18, Cornhill (opposite the New Royal Exchange).—N.B. These elegant presents can be forwarded through any Post-office with perfect safety, upon the receipt of an order for the amount.

SARL'S ARGENTINE SILVER PLATE.—SARL and SONS, 18, Cornhill, solicit an inspection of this beautiful metal, which continues to stand unrivalled amongst all the substitutes for silver. The magnificent stock has lately been enriched with many additional specimens of the newest and most approved designs. The spoon and fork department includes every pattern usually made in solid silver. Orders to any extent can now be promptly executed from their extensive manufactory. Full price lists can be obtained gratis at the Manufactory, 18, Cornhill.

DESSERT FRUIT KNIVES and FORKS.—The Cutlers' Company (incorporated by Royal Exchange) invite attention to their new and splendid assortment of the above—which are manufactured in their Argentine Silver—for the approaching season. They may be had in sets of 12 or 18 pairs, with or without a nearly-fitted morocco case, commencing at £2 10s the set of 12. Pamphlets and Price Lists forwarded.

IMMENSE REDUCTION.—ALBATA PLATE, JEWELLERY, Paper and Japan Tea-trays, Lamps, Candlesticks, Tea Urns, and General Hardware Stock.—CHARLES WATSON, (the old proprietor) having taken possession, under a bill of sale from the sheriff, of the entire Stock of Messrs Watson and Co., of 72, Aldersgate-street, will, for the purpose of immediately realising, offer the whole of it at a large sacrifice, until the whole is sold off. Persons are invited to call in plain figures and the terms of the price will be taken therefrom. The business has been established 30 years, and is a most favourable opportunity for the uniform excellence of its articles.—This is a bona fide sale, and no reasonable offer will be refused for goods.—An illustrated Catalogue is sent free on application.

CALIFORNIA.—The undersigned, having been informed that shipments of Galvanized Metal, both in an unmanufactured form, or boiler, are still going forward to California, again give notice that they alone have the right of IMPORTING, SELLING, or GIVING AWAY METAL of any description in the United States, including California, and that any parties infringing the copyright by engaging in the forwarding of the principal parties, will subject themselves to the stoppages of their goods, and to heavy penalties, which have already been enforced in several instances. Any parties applying to the undersigned Metal or Houses in California will get every information on application to MORWOOD and ROGERS, Bread-street, Upper Thames-street, London.

DIETETIC COCOA.—Dyspeptics and persons of delicate digestion will find TAYLOR BROTHERS' LIBERTY COCOA, as being more superior to any preparation of the cocoa-nut hitherto introduced. This article

CURLY HAIR.—It is not generally known that the human hair contains a minute portion of a peculiar salt, which is the natural agency for the build of the atmosphere: the absorption of moisture immediately causes the hair, however well curled, to become straight. Wave, however, the hair can retain a good supply of its natural unguent, the power of the saline particles to absorb moisture is counteracted, the hair will run in curls, and a sufficient supply is, however, rarely sufficient. MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT is the only railroad preparation for producing and preserving curly hair. It nourishes the hair, preserves its natural curliness for any length of time either in the hot-room or during exercise in damp weather; it also renders it silky, added by brushing, beautifully clean and silky.
Milton's Hair Lubricant is sold in wrapped stout pots, 2s each. Any Bookseller in the country can procure it in his weekly parcel. The Wholesale Agents in London are Messrs Barclay and Co., Farringdon-street.

FOUR FIRES FOR ONE PENNY, by EDWARDS'S PATENT FIREWOOD.—Sold by all oilmen and grocers. Sold delivered to the carrier, on receipt of a post-office order for 10s, payable to THOMAS STEVENSON.—19, Wharf-road, City-road.

BEARD'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS are now daily at Mr. RICHARD BEARD'S ESTABLISHMENTS, 85, KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY;
34, PARLIAMENT-STREET; and at
ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, REGENT-STREET.
Also, 34, CHURCH-STREET, LIVERPOOL, and 34, MARKET-PLACE, MANCHESTER.

NEWTON'S GLOBES.—Patronised by her Majesty and Prince Albert.—The nobility, gentry, and public in general are respectfully informed that Messrs. NEWTON have constantly on sale a large assortment of GLOBES of all sizes and kinds of mounting, varying in price from 2 to 42 guineas per pair; smaller sizes, suitable for presents, at from 2s to 30s each; School Globes, 12 inches in diameter, on an improved principle, 3 guineas per pair. Manufactory, 66, Chancery-lane.

PISTOLS.—The best and most complete Stock of every description of Holster, Belt, and Pocket Pistols, reduced according Prices, from 45s; Improved Double-Action ditto, 84s; Single ditto, from 50s a pair; Improved Air Canes, 50s.
REILLY, Gun Maker, New Oxford-street.

STANDARD or NATURAL SHERRY, pure, fine, and delicate, at 30s per dozen. Rich fruity Port, firmly crusted, 40s; also, at 48s, with aroma profuse, and becoming mellow and ready. Old Pale, 50s 1842 Claret, a delicious wine—a one-dozen cases, 45s; pints, 24s. Cash. Carriage-free. TUDMAS and DUTTA, 30, Lawrence-lane, Cheapside, City.—Mile Punch, 9s.

STOUT and PORTER.—JENNER, WICKING, and JENNER are now delivering, for CASH, to private families, their celebrated Porter at 1s; and Imperia. Stout at 16d; per Gallon. Can be had in casks of 4½, 9, 18, and 36 Gallons.
South London Brewery, Southwark Bridge-road

ALPACA UMBRELLAS.—The economy both in the cost and wear of this umbrella, has been fully proved during the last eight months, and which is testified by the very great patronage which continues to be conferred upon it. It may be obtained of most umbrella dealers in the United Kingdom, from 10s. 6d.—W. and J. SANGSTER), 140, Regent-street, 94, Fleet-street; 10, Royal Exchange, Cheapside

French Cambric Handkerchiefs, at 6s 6d per dozen
The Finest Qualities, from 10s 6d to 18s 6d the dozen.
Address,

KING and CO., 243, REGENT-STREET, LONDON.
SAMPLES of the above will be forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom, on receipt of 8, 12, or 20 Postage Stamps, according to the quality required.
KING and CO. beg to announce that they are selling wide Black and White

LACE FLOUNCINGS,
at 2s 6d per yard, usually sold at 5s 6d
White Mechlin and Valenciennes Lace,
at 3s 6d per yard, usually sold at 7s 6d.
Patterns sent Postage Free.—KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

A PURCHASE BY TENDER
KING and COMPANY beg to announce that they have purchased
In Dublin Fifteen Hundred Dresses of BROADED POPLINS,
at 1s 6d per yard, or 2s 6d the Full Dress.
The above Goods are as effective as those usually sold at 5s 6d per yard sent for inspection to any part of the United Kingdom or the Colonies
Address,
KING and COMPANY,
243, Regent-street,
London

N.B. All Parcels exceeding the value of £5 will be forwarded carriage-free. All Patterns sent can be made by Post-office Orders, payable to WILLIAM KING.

THE LADY'S NEW POLKA JACKET (Registered, 6 & 7 Victoria, cap. 65).—W. FORD, Riding Habit Maker to the Royal Family, all orders for the fashions of the Ladies to this new and useful Jacket, made of mohair cloth, especially for cold weather. Price 21s Guineas. Forwarded Free. For Riding or driving, the article of dress is unequalled. A drawing, pattern of measure, and directions for self-measurement, will be sent on application to the Patentee, W. FORD, 10, Hosier-street, Cavendish-square, London; or to Mr. Ford, 36, Princes-street, Brighton, and Mr. WHITTY, 3, College-green, Dublin

BEECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Edgeware-road, respectfully apprise their numerous patrons and the public, that they have just received, for the approaching AUTUMN and WINTER SILKS; and, as these Goods are bought under very unusual circumstances, they confidently assert advantage may be obtained in selecting from this Stock.
Rich Striped Glacés, Brocaded, and Glace Silks, at 1s 9d, 1s 11d, 2s and 2s 6d per yard.
Rich Plain, Shot, and White Satins, for Slips, at 2s 9d per yard.
Rich Striped Satins, for Trimmings, at 2s 6d, 2s 9d, 3s 6d per yard.
Beautifully Watered ditto, 2s 6d to 3s 11d per yard.
For the convenience of Ladies residing in the country, patterns will be sent postage free.
Address, BEECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Edgeware-road.
N.B. The Newest Shapes in rich Velvet Mantles, lined with silk, and trimmed with Lace, Velvet, Black, Waterloo Blue, Greens, Adelaides, and Rose, at Two Guineas each.

EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS in real FRENCH MERINOES, at BEECH and BERRALL'S, 63 and 64, Edgeware-road.
275 Pieces in Black and all colours, at 2s 4½d per yard.
150 ditto, very fine, at 2s 11d.
539 ditto, finest imported, at 3s 6d.
Also, a Purchase of Remnants for any Part Pongee Free.
Address, BEECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Edgeware-road.

BONNETS.—PARISIAN MILLINERY.—To Cash Purchasers, wishing to avoid the charges of Private Milliners, consequent upon the following prices:—Rich Crinoline Silk Velvet Bonnets, all colours, Cap, &c., complete, One Guinea each. Rich Velvet Bonnets, all colours, Cap, &c., complete, 15s 6d each. Morning Satin or Duraze, richly trimmed. Patent Crape, 10s 6d to 15s 6d. Velvet Bonnets, Cap, &c., complete, 7s 6d to 10s 6d each. Fine White Sewn Chips, for Brides, 10s 6d each. Dunstable Whole Straws, the new shape, 2s 11d to 5s 11d. More fashionable or more becoming Bonnets cannot be worn. Also the largest Stock in London to select from. Country Milliners supplied with pattern Bonnets, at a small profit.—ELLIS, 39, CORNHILL HOUSE, 39, Cornhill, 3 doors-street, Leicester-square. Proprietors, E. WOOKEY and CO

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN.
LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN, and WEDDING and GENERAL OUTFITS for HOME, EXPORTATION and the COLONIES, are supplied by JOHN CAPPER and SONS, 77, Cheapside-church-street, LONDON, in a Separate Department,
under competent Female Superintendence, where prices are economical, the materials and needlework excellent.
BABY LINEN.
of superior work, doubtfully cheap.
Parcels of £5 and upwards forwarded to the railway carriage.
LISTS, with PRICES, sent POST-PAID
to Ladies, on application.

DAMASK TABLE-LINEN, as EXHIBITED at the QUEEN'S and ROYAL ARCADE, at the LINEN-HALL, BELFAST, on the 11th of August, 1849.
The Linen-Hall, Regent-street, Bloomsbury-square, are now receiving their firs. supply of Damask Table-Linen from Patterns exhibited to her Majesty at Belfast, and will continue to import the other Patterns as they arrive.
Household Linen, including Sheetings of ENGLISH, IRISH and SCOTCH MANUFACTURE, at 30 per cent. less than the best fabrics in Ward's Establishments. Depôt for Damask and other Towelling.
Linen-Hall, Regent-street.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and SMYRNA SPONGES.—The Tooth-brush searches thoroughly into the divisions, and cleanses them in the most effectual manner. Sponges, Hair-brushes, Combs, Nail-brushes, Shaving Hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia bristles, which will not scrape the enamel from the teeth, and are recommended by the dentists as infinitely less hard than the ordinary hair-brushes.—An immense Stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponges.—METCALFE and CO., the largest Stock in London to select from. Country Hillers supplied with pattern Sponges, at a small profit.—METCALFE and CO., 130, NEW BOND-STREET, 3 doors-street, Leicester-square. Proprietors, E. WOOKEY and CO

THE TOILET of BEAUTY furnishes innumerable proofs of the high estimation in which ROWLAND'S LOTION is held by the most distinguished possessors of brilliant complexions, luxuriant hair, and pearly teeth. Warm, powerful, yet delicate, it retains a good supply of its natural unguent, the power of the saline particles to absorb moisture is counteracted, the hair will run in curls, and a sufficient supply is, however, rarely sufficient.
MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT is the only railroad preparation for producing and preserving curly hair. It nourishes the hair, preserves its natural curliness for any length of time either in the hot-room or during exercise in damp weather; it also renders it silky, added by brushing, beautifully clean and silky.
Milton's Hair Lubricant is sold in wrapped stout pots, 2s each. Any Bookseller in the country can procure it in his weekly parcel. The Wholesale Agents in London are Messrs Barclay and Co., Farringdon-street.

FOUR FIRES FOR ONE PENNY, by EDWARDS'S PATENT FIREWOOD.—Sold by all oilmen and grocers. Sold delivered to the carrier, on receipt of a post-office order for 10s, payable to THOMAS STEVENSON.—19, Wharf-road, City-road.

TRELOAR'S COCOA-NUT-FIBRE MATTING WAREHOUSE, 42, Ludgate-hill.—There are many worthless imitations; but the best and only genuine fabric is that manufactured and sold by J. TRELOAR, 42, Ludgate-hill

CHUBB'S LOCKS and FIREPROOF SAFES.—CHUBB'S PATENT LOCKS give perfect security from false keys, and are so fitted any attempt to open them. CHUBB'S PATENT FIREPROOF SAFES and BOXES are the best preservatives of deeds, books, plate, &c. from fire and thieves. Cash-boxes and Japan Deed-boxes, and Street Door-Latches.—C. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London

PATENT IMPROVED RESPIRATOR; the only pure WARM AIR Breather.—Persons with Difficulty of Diseased Lungs should not be without Mr. MOSELY'S Respirator, for the use of which restores health, rendering the risk of going to a warmer climate unnecessary. It is under regular consulting and respirating, and is worn without objection. Depot, 183, Strand.—Descriptives sent on application

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS, 30s. the Half-dozen.—"The Shirt before us (Mr. Ford's Eureka) appears in every way calculated to fit, and fully bears out the inventor's statement, as the most unique and the most perfect fitting Shirt made."—Observer, October 7th, 1849.—List of Prices, with Directions for Self-Measurement, sent Free by Post. Patterns of the new Fronts and Wristbands forwarded to select from, on receipt of Six Postage Stamps.—RICHARD FORD, 185, Strand, London.

SIX VERY SUPERIOR SHIRTS for 26s., from the best and largest stock in London. A choice of 200 patterns in coloured Shirts. Six for £1; or Six best quality, made to measure, 30s. Satisfaction (as usual) guaranteed, or the money returned. Printed prized lists, with directions for self-measurement, post-free.—RODGER and Co., Shirt-makers and Inventors of the "British Shirt," 32a, for 24s. (the best fitting shirt in the world), 59, St. Martin's-le-Grand (corner of Newgate-street).—Established 1828.

THE CORAZZA SHIRT.—CAPPER and WATERS having given great attention to perfecting the Shirt, can recommend it for fitting with a precision and ease hitherto unknown. Any gentleman sending his last Shirt, Drawers, or Dressing Gown of Shirt, by sending measures taken tight—1, round the neck; 2, round the chest; 3, round the waist; 4, round the wrist; 5, the length of the wearer. Fine-best Cotton Shirts, with fine linen fronts, re-tare, and wristbands, for 12s each; or three for 34s. Also for 10s 6d each, additional charges for Dress Shirts, from 32 to 45 each.—26, Regent-street, St. James's, London.

BEARER'S SUPERIOR OVER-COATS, First-rate Garments at Reduced Charges, and guaranteed to resist any amount of rain. A very large Stock to select from. To be had at London, at 69, Fleet-street, and 69, Cornhill.

HUNTING COATS.—HOLLAND'S now Coat, combining great style, superior quality, and of great durability, namely THE BERKELEY, at the reduced price of Three Guineas. Also the improved and well-known CLUB FROCK, for Hunting Wardrobe.—HOLLAND'S, 150, Strand, Lists of reduced prices for cash, to meet the present urgent demand forwarded by two doors west of Somerset House

A NOVELTY for the approaching Season is in preparation, to which a distinguishing name has not yet been given, but which the Inventor, Mr. NICOLL, has been assured by Lords and Gentlemen of the highest rank, will be most comfortable, and great acquisition to Gentlemen's Attire every professional and private. Specimens can be seen at 114, 116, and 120, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill; as also the TREBLE GABARDINE, or FALETOT, called THE NICOLL, which contains all the characteristics of the famed Paletot (registered 6 and 7 Vic., cap. 65) in the most improved form, and additional advantages for being convertible from a warm to a light Overcoat, or vice versa, at the pleasure of the wearer, or as the mild or cold nature of the weather may require (the garment can be seen worn to be perfectly free from pressure). It will be found, perhaps, the best preservative of health in this variable climate. THE NICOLL has been secured by Royal Letters Patent in ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, and the COLONIES, and is protected by the Provisional Registration of the Designs Act, and of Messrs. NICOLL'S (the Patentees) recognised AGENTS, and in LONDON only at Messrs. NICOLL'S, viz. at 114, 116, and 120, REGENT-STREET, and 22, CORNHILL.

THE NICOLL PALETOT (Registered 6 and 7 Victoria, c. 65) WATERPROOFS, 114, 116, 120, REGENT-STREET, and 22, CORNHILL.—Messrs. NICOLL, of Merchant Taylors' Company, now in almost universal request, for the Country, Riding or Walking, Seaside, &c. Shooting Jackets, adapted for the season. Messrs. NICOLL announced the use of the word PALETOT, but Messrs NICOLL are the sole inventors of the above-named Garments.

MESSRS. NICOLL'S Wholesale and Country-House Departments for the London Branches in the Shipping and Woollen Trades are in CHANGE-ALLEY, CORNHILL, and 130, REGENT-STREET.

A USTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, and the COLONIES.
GOOD HOPE, NATAL, &c.
PASSENGERS to the COLONIES generally, may obtain their OUTFITS from S. W. SILVER and Co.'s, OUTFITTERS, 66 and 67, CORNHILL, at wholesale prices. SILVER and Co make nearly the whole of the articles required for an outfit themselves, and particularly so that the Cabin Folding Furniture may become permanent Household Furniture on their return.
They also engage PASSAGES, and give shipping INFORMATION, but they deliberately recommend all persons not having friends being to give PASSENGERS who place themselves in their hands every possible attention, and pledge themselves for their customers (gratis) through their AGENTS in the COLONIES.
SILVER and Co. give PASSAGE MONEY on AUSTRALIA, at sixty days sight, of £20 for every adult proceeding to Port Phillip.
The EMIGRANT Fitting-out Branch is at No 4, BISHOPSGATE-STREET, opposite the London Tavern, and contains every article, including bedding, may be obtained for FOUR POUNDS.
A Branch of each at ST. GEORGE'S-CHAMBERS, LIVERPOOL

NONE LIKE IT!—None like it, for Economy, either in its Original Cost, or its Consumption of Fuel. None like it, for its beautiful Ventilating Principle, by which it purifies the air in a room to that degree that it is the most healthful. None like it for its universal applicability, suiting the Smallest Apartment and the Largest Hall, Church, Chapel, Counting-house, Public Building, Shop, &c. This is no Stove and the PATENT PORTABLE VENTILATING CAST-IRON REGISTER GRATE, which has been for several years sold with a few seasons. In operation daily at GEORGE and JOHN DEANE'S Wholesale Ironmongery, opening to the Monument, King William-street, London-bridge.

THE REGISTERED IRON COT.—These Cots are made with moveable sides of perforated metal, in imitation of cane, forming a perfectly safe and very pleasant bed for Children of all ages. They are strongly recommended for the adoption of Cots generally, on their great solidity, and their not easily getting over the youngest children. A large Assortment of Iron and Brass Bedsteads, made with the Patent Dovetail Joints, and all the latest Improvements. The German Spring Mattress, for the easy adaptation of Bedding.—TYLOR and PAGE, Patentees and Manufacturers, 313, Oxford-street, adjoining Hanover-square Rooms, and 42, Cheapside.—Price Lists, with Engravings, forwarded on application.

IMPROVED SECURITY for LETTERS.—The Public are cautioned against the use of any kind can be so seized upon by the application of steam, as to render it impossible to the purpose intended. Thus it is with the adhesive envelope (however apparently secure), which can be opened and closed by the vessel containing boiling water, or even by breathing on) be opened with ease, and closed with perfect security, by the application of steam for the dishonest and the curious. To remedy which, LEOPOLD ANELLANG begs to acquaint Solicitors, Merchants, and the Public in general, that he has introduced an article in SEALING-WAX, which, for its attractive appearance, and its durability, for general use, is to be the best security ever yet offered to the Public. To be had, wholesale and retail, at his Manufactory (only), No. 84, Red Lion-street, Clerkenwell, where parties may see HARD WAX manufactured expressly for foreign correspondence. Dealers supplied on liberal terms.—Observe, 84, Red Lion-street, Clerkenwell.—N.B. Sold also by all respectable Stationers in town and country.

DEAFNESS.—NEW DISCOVERY.—The ORGANIC VIBRATOR, an entirely new, extraordinary, powerful, small, newly invented Instrument for Deafness, entirely different from all others, to surpass any thing of the kind that ever has been produced; it is modelled to the ear and so little remarked when in use, invisible, and, being of the same colour as the skin, is not perceptible. It enables even the most extreme cases of deafness to hear distinctly in all the most public assemblies; the naturalness sensation of singing noises in the ears is entirely removed, and it affords all the advantages of a natural ear to be derived. Also invaluable newly-invented Spectacles. S. and S. BRITTAIN, Patentees and Chemists, 4, Coventry-street, Piccadilly.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New-road, London.—People of England! if you desire to retain yourselves of the awful working of the poisons introduced by doctors as medicine, in order to avoid being as their victims, read Dr. Coxe's beautiful "Of the 20th October, page 342. Oh, oh, the quacks

We see by the newspapers that the man who received the £50 for Sandy Brush's gymnastic exercises, is a most mysterious character. Pray have any drops or pieces of money or articles been quietly given to him? Oh, oh, the quacks trade!

Society is [illegible] and [illegible] Dr. Coxe's [illegible] also also the case of Miss Abercrombie, reported by Mr Justice Talfourd, on the final examination of Charles Dodd, vol. p. 7.

We have also quoted out of the world with strychnine, in order to [illegible] insurance offices of large sums of money. Oh oh, the gutses trade!

No wonder, fellow countrymen, that with all these poisons of doctors [illegible] so many people are dying, and that the [illegible] consumed, the very blood of the people is poisoned by these poisons of doctors just as it is by tobacco, gin, and opium.

At the world goes round and round.

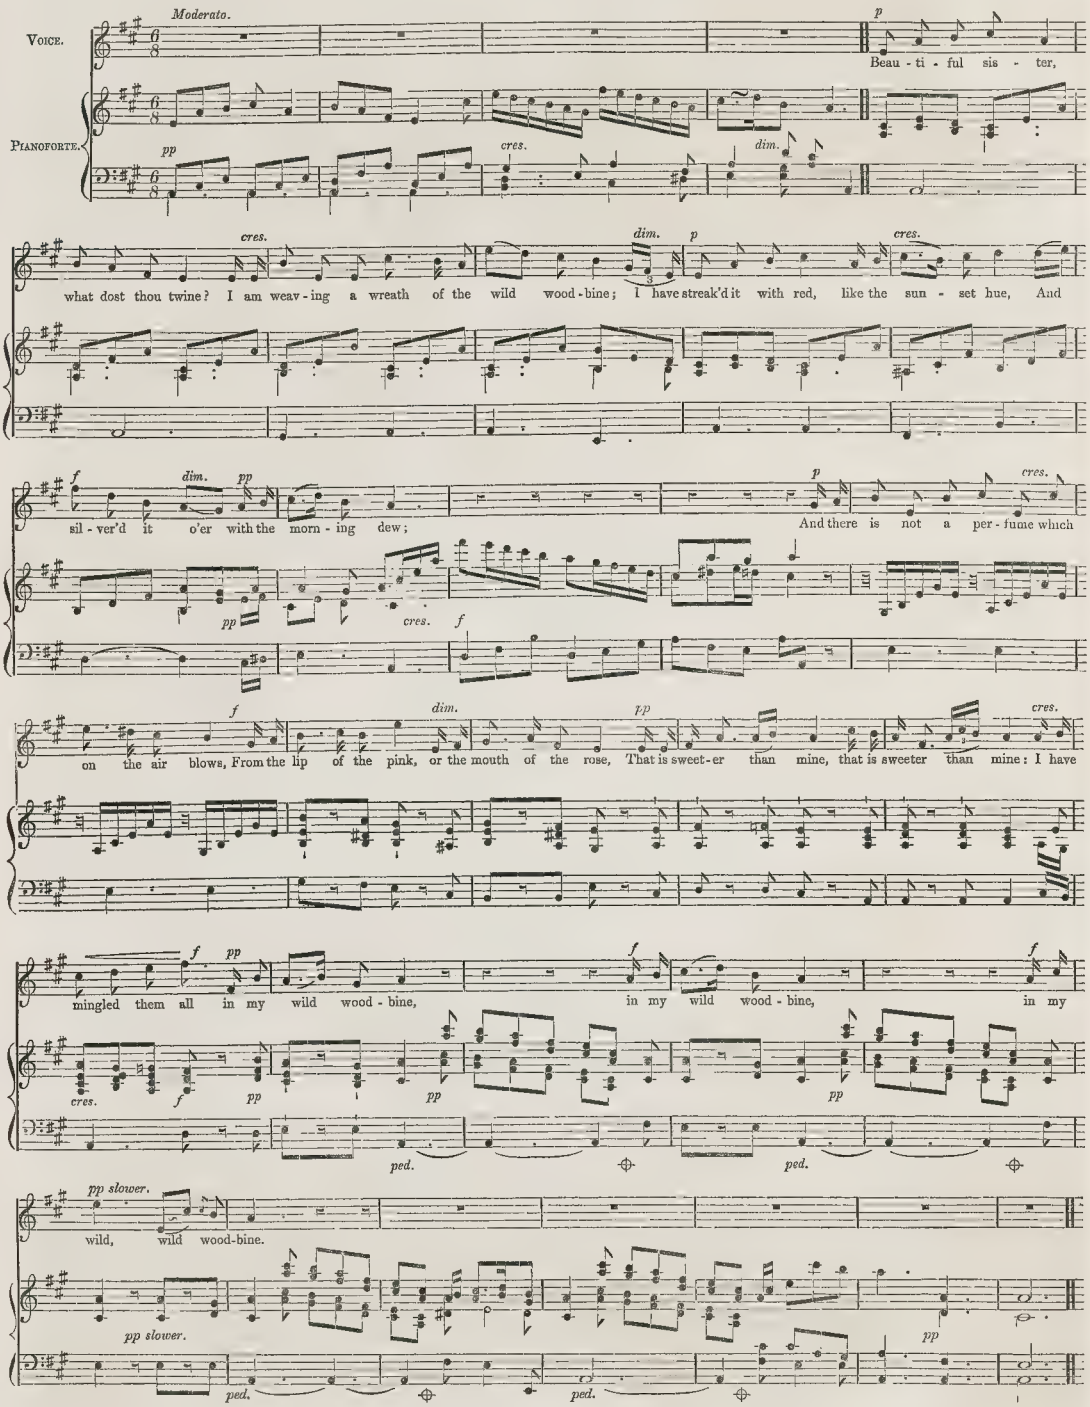
The British College of Health and Society of Hygeists again remind all parties, however high their position may be, that they are responsible to God, for supporting, either directly or indirectly such an odious system as that of poisons being [illegible] in order to put gold into the pockets of a particular class the doctors

THE LECTURE on the HYGEIAN SYSTEM of JAMES MORISON, the Hygeist, delivered at the Public Reading-room, Exeter, by HUGH SMITHSON, on Wednesday Evening, the 27th of June, 1849, is just published, price 2d, or by post. May be had at the British College of Health, New-

THE FLOWER SPIRITS.

WORDS BY THOMAS MILLER.

MUSIC BY J. SMITH, ESQ., MUS. DOC.,
STATE COMPOSER FOR IRELAND.



2.

White watcher of blossoms! what weavest thou?
I am stringing the hawthorn-buds on a green bough;
I have dyed them with pearl, and stolen a flush
Of the dawn from the hills in the morning's first blush;
For the odours they breathe all were brought unto me
By the breeze, and the birds, and the murmuring bee:
And Love, when he utters his tenderest tale,
Will tell how they perfumed the May of the vale.

3.

Golden hair'd sister! why dost thou sigh?
Sad thoughts float around me, like clouds on the sky:
I think of the false vows that oftimes are sworn,
Of the rose that will wither, and leave but the thorn;
Of the hopes that live on, when love long is dead,
Like the stem left behind when the blossom is shed;
And that is the cause why I sigh—why I sigh—
To think that the heart must be broken and die.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, December 1, 1849

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 402.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

THE NEEDLEWOMEN OF LONDON, AND THE REMEDY FOR THEIR DISTRESS.

PUBLIC attention has, for some weeks past, been directed with painful intensity to the deplorable condition of the labouring poor of the metropolis. The Morning Chronicle, with a clear perception of the fact that social evils are not only the most perilous and the most widely spread, but the least understood of all the ills which afflict large communities, has despatched its Commissioner to investigate and report upon "the condition of the people." The statements put forth by the gentleman upon whom has devolved the task of making the world acquainted with the privations, the struggles, the all but hopeless misery of the poor of the metropolis, have been of a nature to startle the most apathetic, and confound the wisdom of the best-informed amongst us. The chord of public sympathy has been touched, and men have asked themselves, not simply whether it was just or Christian-like, but whether it was SAFE, to permit the continuance of such misery without some attempt to relieve or to remove it. A great writer once said that the most dreadful of all spectacles that the world could offer, was that of a strong and hungry man willing to work but finding none to employ and feed him. We have seen, however, in our day, a still more deplorable spectacle than that—the spectacle of thousands of the most interesting and the most helpless of our kind working from day to day, and from year to year, for pittances barely sufficient to support life, and utterly insufficient to provide for the decencies of civilisation, as understood even by the poorest, most ignorant, and most degraded amongst us—working without hope and without ceasing, and with the full knowledge that the prolongation of life is but the prolongation of a misery upon which no light can shine.

But, while every one admits the evils which afflict such large classes of our population, and while the humane, the generous, and the charitable open their hearts and their purses to mitigate the pressure of the distress, none come forward with a remedy. We want a cure, not an alleviation; but we seek for it in vain. If, for instance, we take the case of the needlewomen of London—the most numerous and the most distressed of the unhappy workers of this metropolis—and ask ourselves what society or the Legislature can do for them, we find that nothing can be done, except in the way of mitigation. Thirty-three thousand five hundred women are engaged in London in slop-work and needle-work, of whom twenty-eight thousand five hundred are under twenty years of age, and they live, or attempt to live, on sums varying from 4½d. to 2½d. a day. About twelve hundred of these poor creatures assembled on Monday night last, to give whatever information might be required of them to the gentleman who is engaged in the investigation of their condition. Those amongst the twelve hundred who were possessed of under-clothing—indispensable alike to health and to decency—were requested to hold up their hands. Four persons alone made the expected reply. Those amongst them who had gained seven shillings during the week were asked to make the customary sign. Not one hand was held up. Ninety-eight had earned only one shilling; eighty-two had earned one-and-sixpence; only five had earned as much as six shillings; whilst two hundred and eighty-three had earned nothing whatever. No language can exaggerate such misery as this. It tells its own tale better than all the studied eloquence that could be brought to strengthen and to elucidate it; and will work, or has already worked, its way to the hearts of thousands of those who can feel for the sorrows of humanity.

But some men, more earnest or more practical than others, ask themselves what is to be done to remove from amongst us a misery like this. Amid many attempts to solve this problem and to arrive at the causes of the evil, we have seen none that can approach the simple but energetic appeal of the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, a gentleman whose heart seems to be in every good cause, and who appears to unite the tact of a man of business and the practical wisdom of statesmanship, with philanthropy and Christian charity, which are far better than either. "Let us see," he says, in an admirable letter, "what are the causes of the evil. 'The cause,' says every one, 'is the mania for cheap goods, which drives down profits and wages to the starvation point.' But a mania for cheapness would not, in itself, enable the purchaser to get goods cheap, unless other causes operated to their cheap production. The will of the purchaser has, in fact, much less to do with the matter than the position of the salesman and the producer. Every capitalist—by which I mean every man embarking his money in any trade or calling, with a view to get his living—is trying to attract custom to himself by underselling his neighbour. Every labourer—i. e. every man, woman, and child working for wages—is trying to secure employment by accepting lower wages than his neighbour; and every purchaser, as a matter of course, prefers the cheapest article. The truth is, our wealth and our population have both outgrown the narrow area of our country. We want more room. We have too much capital and too many people—more capital than we can employ with profit—more people than we can maintain in comfort. All reports tell the same tale in a greater or less degree. In the mine, in the field, in the factory, everywhere a fierce competion between money and money—between man and man."

And what is the remedy? Shall we declare that there shall be no underselling of labour or of goods? and that man shall no longer

> Compete with brother man as foe with foe.

We might as well attempt to declare, by an act of the Legislature, that in England two and two shall no longer be considered as four, or any other impossible and preposterous thing. Shall we forbid people to buy cheap? The idea is equally ridiculous. Or shall we forbid the employers to employ, and the workers to work, under a certain rate of wages? Yes! when we repeal the law of gravitation, or any other fundamental law of life and the universe—but not until then. Or are we, to use the words of Mr. Sidney Herbert,

ARREST OF LEGITIMISTS, IN THE RUE RUMFORT, PARIS.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

"to persuade people, as a matter of duty, to give more for a thing than they can get it for—the tradesman to pay for Parliament, the consumer for his goods, more than the market price? Is all bargain to become a matter of charity?"

No; social evils are neither to be cured by act of Parliament, nor by attempting to contravene the laws of nature.

What, then, is to be done? There is but one course possible—which is to convey the surplus female labour of England to those parts of our empire where female labour is at a premium, because it is scarce. "The number of women in Great Britain," we again quote the words of Mr. Herbert, "greatly exceeds the number of men. In 1831, the females out-numbered the males, in round numbers, by 117,000; in 1831, by 213,000; in 1841, by 320,000; and at this moment, so great has been the male emigration in the last nine years, that there cannot be less than half a million more females than males in Great Britain. But in the southern hemisphere is a vast continent, which is as much a part of the British Empire as Wales, but in which the disproportion of the sexes is enormous. Philanthropists have been shocked at the results upon society. In 1847 there were in South Australia 31,862 females to 17,531 males, including children, the disproportion among adults being, of course, greater. In New South Wales, in 1847, of the adult population 83,572 were males, and only 41,809 were females."

The obvious remedy is to equalise the female labour market of Great Britain and Australia. We cannot raise female wages by act of Parliament; we cannot create new trades and professions in which women may labour at home for a more decent recompense than they now obtain; we cannot compel linendrapers to discharge the strong-limbed loungers who now serve behind their counters in vast troops, to the displacement of so much female labour: but we can confer a boon upon hundreds and thousands of poor women, by providing them with the means to seek a happier country, where the day's labour is sure to meet the day's reward, and where every human being with strength and ability to work is a blessing to society, and not a curse, as in this old and over-peopled region. "Let us not," as Mr. Sidney Herbert recommends, "be scared by the magnitude of the evil with which we have to contend; but rather let us make our efforts commensurate with it. We must have vigorous action and large means. Let those who cannot give a large sum down, give it in instalments in three, four, or five years. Let those who have much give much, and let all give generously according to their ability. Neither time nor money can be wasted which is devoted to such a work."

Though we shall not cure by these means an evil which admits of no thought, if of any cure, we shall, at all events, relieve the miseries of thousands of patient, humble, and deserving people, who have strong and peculiar claims upon our sympathy and regard; we shall lighten the pressure upon the labour market at home; we shall increase the wealth and the happiness of a splendid colony; we shall carry joy and light into hundreds of unhappy homes; we shall make the widow's heart to sing with gladness; we shall pour balm into the spirit of the dejected and the forlorn; we shall raise the fallen, fill the despairing with hope, and we shall show the reality and the earnestness of our Christianity, by our good deeds rather than by our loud professions. Great as is the evil, its magnitude is not such as to deter the men who have determined to grapple with it. Religion and philanthropy, statesmanship and policy, the instinct of charity, and that of self-preservation, will all combine in the good work, and we will not doubt that ere many months have passed over our heads a beginning will have been made in this cause of sufficient importance to call for the united exertions the charitable who have already resolved to aid it, and to swell their ranks by many hundreds and thousands of those who "watch and wait." No Utopia is dreamed of. The result is calculable and within reach. It requires no aid from Governments or Legislatures. It only requires the organisation of the charitable, who fortunately abound in Great Britain, and the leadership of men of heart and head. All these things have been found, and the good work—being well begun—is already half accomplished.

ARREST OF LEGITIMISTS IN PARIS.

On the night of Sunday week, a number of Legitimists, assembled at a house in the Rue Rumfort, near the Madeleine, were arrested by a body of city sergeants, supported by a company of the line. The outline of the plot of the "conspirators" is thus described:—Every one is aware that the city of Paris is divided into twelve arrondissements, and that each arrondissement is subdivided into four quartiers, or districts, making forty-eight in all. Each quarter had its representative. As two persons were missing on the night in question—there being only forty-six arrested—the council was not complete. The mission of each of the forty-eight was to propagate his cause in the quarter he was patriotic enough to take under his charge, and in which he was bound to have a certain number of men, furnished with arms, and ready to turn out at the first signal in the cause and name of Henry V. A sum of money was intrusted to each representative for the same purpose; and it is stated that, for some days past, several men, in some of the low quarters of the city, were paid from twenty to forty sous per day in the shape of bounty money. The members of the council were also remunerated for their attendance. That money, though not large in amount, was furnished by some person or persons, is clear. Three thousand francs in gold were found in the possession of one of the parties arrested, but that does not prove much. Not a single name of the many high and influential persons who constitute the recognised Legitimist party, has been discovered as implicated, directly or indirectly, in this affair. Search has been made in the houses of the prisoners, where some arms, ammunition, and papers were found. The whole of the prisoners were transferred to the Conciergerie, and placed at the disposal of the Procureur of the Republic.

The arrest was a strange scene. It was night, forty-six gentlemen emerged from a door, numbered 16, and were escorted to hackney-coaches which had been sent for by commissaries of police and their agents. Soldiers, cavalry and foot, surrounded the carriages. Two rows of soldiers of the line were formed, between which the noble chevaliers defiled, in a very resigned attitude as gentlemen conscious of their rank and privileges. About the conclusion of this comedy, the great body of the drames appeared—a host of policemen and sergens de ville, in their cloaks—playing the parts of the servants in the first act of "Il Barbière di Siviglia," which they had been performing, pendant for weeks, under the windows of this amiable and very inoffensive little assembly.

THE LORDS' REPORT ON THE SLAVE TRADE.

The following document has just been published:—"Report by the Lords' Committee appointed a select committee to consider the best means which Great Britain can adopt for the final extinction of the African slave trade.—Ordered to report.—That the committee have met and have considered the subject-matter to them referred, and have come to the following resolutions, viz.:—'That the evidence which has been given before this committee has led them to the conclusion, that, although the efforts of Great Britain have suppressed the slave trade, and although it is doubtful whether the number of slaves exported during the last two years is not greater than in some preceding years, that upon the whole a large reduction of the trade has been effected, and its probable increase has been prevented. That all the evidence goes to prove that the prevalent impression as to the general unhealthiness of the cruising squadron is without foundation; and, further, that the withdrawal of the squadron from the coast of Africa would cause a great immediate increase in the slave trade, and would inflict most serious injury on the legitimate commerce of Africa. That the committee see reason to believe that certain alterations in the equipment and directions of the cruising squadron, which would be attended with little or no additional expense, would greatly add to its efficiency.' But on this and other points the committee are of opinion that further evidence should be taken, before any practical suggestions can be offered to the House; they have, therefore, resolved, on account of the advanced period of the session, to report to your Lordships the foregoing resolutions, and to recommend that the committee should be re-appointed in the next session, to pursue the consideration of the subject, and to report the same to the House. And the committee have directed the minutes of evidence taken before them, together with an appendix and index thereto, to be laid before your Lordships.—23rd July, 1849."

On Monday afternoon, about half-past three, the railway-bridge which has been recently constructed over the new cut of the canal, near Messrs. Norton's mill, in Walverhampton, suddenly gave way, without any warning, and fell with a tremendous crash, a heap of ruins, into the hollow below. The bridge had been erected for the purpose of connecting the road leading from the entrance to the new railway station of the Shrewsbury and Birmingham and Shrewsbury Railways with the station itself, about to be erected on the other side of the new cut. Its span was between forty and fifty feet. There was no person hurt.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The only feature that marks the news from Paris this week is the return from Belle-Isle of the 400 political prisoners lately pardoned by the President of the Republic. Upon the vessel coming to anchor at Havre they raised the shout of "Vive la République!" and "Vive le Président!" when M. Parchet, who was present on the part of the Government, addressed them, and said that the past was forgiven, but it would be expected that they would hereafter show by their conduct that they had deserved the clemency of the Government. The cry was uttered was seditious, which led two individuals to severe punishment, and he wished to ascertain whether they were still inclined to repeat that exclamation? Only one of the number answered the illegal shout, when he was immediately seized, and conveyed back to prison at Belle-Isle. The 399 behaved extreme well; and when their liberation was given to them at Paris on Monday, they quietly repaired to their own homes.

M. P.-ais's proposition, to abolish the exhibition on the pillory of the names of those who had fled from trial, was rejected by the Assembly on Monday evening.

The President of the Republic and his suite, accompanied by the Minister M. Fould, visited the theatre Variétés on Monday evening, which convinced the audience that the report of a difference existing between them was without foundation. The former was loudly cheered, both on his entrance and his exit.

Twenty-seven of the forty-eight persons arrested in the Rue Rumford, for a Legitimist conspiracy, and calling themselves the Legion St. Hubert, have been set at liberty; nineteen have been detained for further examination, as being designated for the post of ministers in the projected army of the Loire.

A man of the name of Pernet, formerly a pupil in the Polytechnic School, was tried on Tuesday for exciting the people to take arms on the 13th June. He was found guilty, and ordered to be imprisoned for five years.

In the latter part of the week the President of the Republic was unwell, but has indisposition was not of a serious character.

It is in contemplation to put a stamp upon newspapers

M. de Persigny is to go to Berlin as Ambassador Extraordinary for three months.

A statement of the receipts and expenditure of the year has just been published, from which it appears that the expenditure to the present time amounts to 1,653,340,587f., while the receipts are given at 1,411,732,017f. The additional credits demanded, though not yet voted, and amounting to 3,293,735f., and the additional duties on stamps and registrations, are not, however, included in the total just given. The deficit for the present year consequently amounts to 239,600,315f.

Favourable news has been received from Algeria. A telegraphic despatch from Marseilles announces that General d'Herbillon, who had been sent to chastise the nomade tribes south of Zaatcha, had come up with them on the 16th of November, at day-break, at a place called Oumal, and beaten them, after killing 200 men, and capturing 3000 camels and 15,000 sheep. An immense booty had been taken in the shape of tents and ammunition. All the chiefs had also united. It was supposed that this success would lead to the quick surrender of Zaatcha.

ITALIAN STATES.

Neither from the Austrian or the other provinces of Italy does there come any news. From Rome, accounts of the 27th ult. state that it was quite uncertain when the Pope would make his entrance into the Eternal City, and his ecclesiastical government.

General Baraguay d'Hilliers, the French Commander-in-Chief, had published no proclamation since his arrival in Rome. His time was chiefly occupied in reviewing his troops. The last exception from Civita Vecchia had consisted of 1200 men, for the purpose of presenting his letters of credence to the Pope.

PRUSSIA.

The public attention in Berlin has been recently absorbed by the trial of Mr. Waldeck, one of the most eminent lawyers and statesmen in Prussia, and late Judge of the chief tribunal of the kingdom, on a charge of "a criminally knowledge of a treasonable design," without giving information of it to the legal authorities. He had a fellow-accused, named Ohm, a Jew adventurer, who was the person who had denounced him on the occasion of the Polish rebellion conspiracies.

On Monday the jury acquitted M. Waldeck, after a short consultation, of the charge. The prosecution admitted that the evidence had failed, and not only abandoned the case, but gave the jury to understand that of No Guilty. The Attorney General confined himself to justifying the authorities for carrying on the case, stating that it had been mixed up the forgeries of the accused Ohm, against whom his prosecution was charged of forging the books of the bank at all. Haworth appropriated this money to his own purposes, and it is supposed that before the investigation, which is still holding, is concluded, the amount embezzled will be found to exceed the sum of £35,000.

DREADFUL LOSS OF LIFE.—A melancholy accident, resulting in the sudden destruction of twenty lives, occurred on Tuesday morning last, near the mouth of the Tyne. It appears that about nine o'clock A.M., the Betsey, of Littlehampton, timber laden from the Baltic, was obliged to put into the Tyne from stress of weather; in making for the harbour she struck upon the Herd Sand, which stretches a considerable distance along the south side of the river from the entrance. A life-boat was manned, and with a crew of twenty-four persons proceeded to the stranded ship for the purpose of saving her crew. On hailing the ship it is the practice to lash the life-boat alongside the distressed vessel by means of ropes both from the stern and the stem. In this instance, unfortunately, only one end of the life-boat had been so secured, when she swung round with the tide, and a heavy sea taking her in midships, she was instantly upset, and the whole of the crew, with the exception of four men, met with a watery grave. Only one of these lives as yet has been recovered—that of a man named Isaac Robson. The disaster was observed from the shore, and two boats put off to render assistance. They arrived in time to save the four survivors, three of whom were picked off the life-boat; and they also succeeded in saving the crew of the Betsey. The vessel was expected to be got off without serious damage.

PRISON BREAKING EXTRAORDINARY.—On Monday morning, at five o'clock, the governor of the Worcester city gaol was aroused by the police, who had found a number of prisoners assembled together, hanging from the wall of the prison next Friar-street. On search being made, it was discovered that a notorious character, named Evans, alias Phillips, alias Bradshaw, who was awaiting his trial at the next spring assizes, on several charges of burglary, was missing from his cell, and had escaped from the prison. On further search it was also discovered that the governor's sitting-room had been broken into, and a number of silver spoons and other articles of plate taken from the plate chest, which had been forced open. The prisoner's escape was a most extraordinary one. The turnkey had seen him in his cell and locked him up at four o'clock the previous evening. The door of his cell was secured by a massive bolt and staple on the outside, and it is supposed that the prisoner had previously succeeded in unscrewing the four nuts from the screws which held the staple, by which means he very easily forced open the door, from thence he traversed a passage to the day-room, the door of which he forced by removing the staple in a similar way to the one attached to his cell door; he had then to encounter another door leading into the day-yard, having a lock and staple still more massive than the preceding ones: this he also forced by removing the staple, and he was met by a high wall, surmounted by a most formidable chevaux de frise. This he is supposed to have scaled by means of towels, supplied him by some of the female prisoners; this feat brought him into the women's yard, out of which he got by climbing some tall palisading, and alighted in the prison yard adjoining the governor's house. He then forced open the window of the governor's sitting-room, which he ransacked, and took from the governor's plate chest every article in it. From this spot it would appear he went round the prison yard to the infirmary, which adjoins the prison wall, and here he performed the most desperate feat of all. This building is about eighteen feet high, and has three windows placed in a triangular position, about six feet apart, looking into the prison yard. He succeeded in climbing up the building from one window to the other (in which he is supposed to have aided himself by the towels), and from thence to the top of the outer wall of the prison. There he drove a strong nail into the wall, and attached to it a piece of stout string, to which he also attached several towels, by which means he let himself down into the street, got clear off, and no clue has as yet been obtained to his whereabouts. The man is 30 years of age, 5 feet 6 inches in height, brown hair, gray eyes, pale complexion, slender make, with three small moles on the left arm.

IRELAND.

The election of Mr. John Reynolds, M.P., to the office of Lord Mayor of Dublin for the ensuing year, was confirmed on Saturday last.

Patrick Mathews, Esq., has been elected to serve as Mayor of Drogheda; and Mr. Shea for Cork

THE IRISH POST-OFFICE.—Mr. Augustus Godby, head of the Irish Post office, retires on full pension of £800 a year. Mr. Godby is to be succeeded by Mr. Cornwall, private secretary to the Postmaster-General. Lord Clanricarde Mr Cornwall is to be succeeded by Mr. Blake, of Portumna.

RETRENCHMENT.—The different Government offices in Dublin have received orders to return a list of expected contingencies for next year, on the most economical terms, in pursuance of a resolution of the House of Commons in last June.

REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—The usual weekly meeting of this association was held at Conciliation Hall, on Monday. Mr John O'Connell, referring to the Young Ireland party, observed that, at the late meeting of the Irish Alliance, sentiments had been uttered, and even rules had been adopted, which were wholly irreconcileable with the declarations which had been made at the late resignation of the wild doctrines of physical force. He (Mr. O'Connell) greatly feared that his duty to the people of Ireland would compel him to withhold his consent from any union between Conciliation Hall and the Alliance, unless on the fundamental principle of peaceful, legal, and constitutional agitation was in the first instance conceded to them. The rent was announced to be £13 10s.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Major-General Prince George of Cambridge has assumed the command of the troops in Ireland during the absence of Sir Edward Blakeney, who has been summoned to the council of the Commander-in-Chief upon an important military question which has been discussed at the Horse Guards during the week. The matter is said to have reference to the command of one of the regiments in Ireland.

THE SLAVE TRADE.—We learn that on the 4th September last her Majesty's ship Kingfisher captured, after a chase of seven hours, the Brazilian brig Augusta do Rio, of four guns and twenty-nine men, fully equipped for the slave trade.

THE LATE QUEEN DOWAGER.—The following circular memorandum has been addressed by the Lords of the Admiralty to the respective commanders-in-chief on the home stations, respecting the mourning in the fleet for the late Queen Dowager: "Admiralty, December 3. It is with great regret that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty announce the death of the Queen Dowager, who departed this life at seven minutes to two o'clock on the morning of the 21 instant. The flag of the commander-in-chief is to be shifted from her Majesty's ship —— to her Majesty's ship ——, and the Royal standard is to be hoisted half-mast high on board her Majesty's ship —— (the flag ship). The ensigns, jacks, and pendants of all ships and vessels are also to be hoisted half-mast high. The Royal standard and the colours of her Majesty's ships and vessels are to continue thus hoisted until the day after the interment of her Majesty. On that day each ship is to fire in succession 30 minute guns."

THE SQUADRON OF EVOLUTION.—Her Majesty's ships La Hogue, 60, Captain Montagu; Leander, 50, Captain S. C. Jones; Arrogant, 46, Captain Fitzroy; Encounter, 14, Captain Gordon; Scourge, 8, Commander Lord H. F. Kerr; and the Conflict, 6, Commander Drake, were off Lisbon on the 29th ult.

The Ganges, 84, Captain Smith, C.B., passed through the Straits of Gibraltar on the 23rd ult., eleven days from Plymouth, en route to Malta.

AN EMIGRANT SHIP ON FIRE.—NARROW ESCAPE OF FOUR HUNDRED PERSONS. The Tay (with the West India mail) brings an account of the total loss of the emigrant ship Caleb Grimshaw, Captain Hoxie, by fire, 15 miles S.E. of the island of Flores, one of the Azores. The emigrants, 350 in number, with the crew, were providentially saved from being burnt to death. The fire was raging at about eight o'clock on the night of the 12th ult. The decks were immediately flooded. On raising one of the fore-hatches the fire was discovered abreast of the chain cable. The heat was so intense that no one could approach it, and the immense quantities of water poured into the ship by the crew and passengers generated steam, and the heat at length became insufferable. But this was the only means by which the fire was kept from being speedily communicated. The boats were towed astern of the burning vessel for five days and nights, filled with poor emigrants bewailing their fate, while about 60 were on a raft, when a ship was seen bearing towards them, and we just proceed to call on the Captain, Captain Cook, bound from London to New Brunswick, in ballast. As soon as the captain of the Sarah saw the signal of distress he immediately approached the Caleb Grimshaw, but was only able to get on board, during the night of the 17th, three hundred of passengers, owing to the wind blowing hard. The next day, the 18th, he got on board about 150 passengers. Night approaching, and the wind still increasing, he was obliged to lay to. On the 19th there was a heavy sea, and no more could be got off. On the 20th about 10 persons, who had escaped from the burning ship, volunteered to return and relieve those who were on board at work, as by this time there was no water or provisions to be got without raising the hatches. The mainmast was now set low down, and the upper deck was working each way. On this day the ship boats, to the steward of Flores into smooth water, and during the night all the passengers that remained on board were got off. Before the last of the crew left, they lifted the hatches, and immediately the ship burst into a terrific blaze. The escape of all the persons, 399 in number, was most miraculous, the ship being on fire for eight days and nights. Nothing but the continual flooding the ship prevented her from being burnt to the water's edge, and every one on board perishing before relief could be had. The men and crew worked like heroes. The conduct of the master of the Sarah was beyond praise. For the three days and nights did he hover about the burning ship, amidst the most imminent peril, with never-tiring every opportunity to lower his boats to save some of the passengers. Nothing could exceed his heroism and coolness. The Sarah, under Divine Providence, the unhappy emigrants owe their preservation. Although perpetually obliged by the tempestuous wind and heavy sea to leave them apparently to a dreadful fate, he always endeavoured to keep in sight, and cheer their aching hearts with a prospect of escape. The Sarah arrived at Fayal with the crew and passengers of the Caleb Grimshaw in safety. The passengers had lost everything on board, and were perfectly destitute, for they had the greatest difficulty to get food from the burning ship to keep them alive. Capt. Hoxie chartered the Sarah to take on the passengers to New York. The Sarah had not left Fayal when the Tay took her departure, but the American Consul was using the most strenuous efforts to arrange everything for her leaving. The Caleb Grimshaw belonged to Messrs. Grimshaw, of Liverpool. The origin of the fire was not known.

NEW ROUTES AND MAIL CONTRACTS.

In the month of September, 1603, Captain James Lancaster arrived in the Downs, "having made the first voyage to India," says the historian, "in two years and seven months." About 1803, one of the King's ships went to Calcutta in the short space of seven months. In that time so far as the speed of a single vessel sailed two centuries before, allowing the latter to have remained four months at anchor to trade, in twenty-three months. The voyage to India is now performed in a still shorter period; and by the Isthmus of Suez, travellers and light goods are transmitted to Bombay in a month, and Hong Kong, at the mouth of the Canton river, in seven or eight weeks. Taking the average of voyages two centuries and a half ago at one year out and one year home, since that period the time necessary to communicate between England and India has been shortened from one year to one month.

The progress thus indicated is still going on, and the communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans is shortly to be facilitated by several new routes to be made across the continent of America. The first to be achieved, and the most important, is the Panama Railroad. It will be forty-six miles long, uniting the Bay of Panama, in the Pacific, and the port of Chagres, on the Atlantic. A portion of it, comprised between the Bay and the river Chagres, a distance of twenty-one miles, has been contracted for, and the work was to be commenced on December 1. The other portion to Linson Bay, a distance of twenty-five miles, is also in hand; and when the whole is completed, which it will be in two years, a traveller, to use the language of an American journal, "may light his cigar as he is leaving the Atlantic steamer, and before he has smoked it to an end, may ascend the ship's side in the Pacific."

This route is the shortest proposed; but it passes through a district that has generally been described as swampy and unwholesome, being within 9° of the Line. The eagerness now displayed in constructing it, and the great expedition formed from its success, do great honour to the sagacity of Mr. William Paterson, the projector of the Bank of England, and his associates, who attempted, in 1698, to found a colony on the Isthmus at Darien, for the very purpose of promoting a communication between the two oceans. They then regarded that point as the highest on the globe, and proposed to make it the route between England and China. They expected to shorten the voyage so much as to be enabled to undersell all their competitors. The colony was opposed with great acrimony by many jealous rivals, and failed; but the present plan restores its projectors to high honour, and excites regret that they were not allowed to confer on commerce and their country the great advantages they so clearly foresaw. Perhaps it is for the general advantage that they did not succeed. Established then, the route would have been monopolized by one European nation; now, being established in a territory belonging to one of the noble governments of America, which will derive equal advantages from the traffic of all nations, it will probably be equally open to all. Sir G. Napier, at the meeting of the Scottish Hospital, on the 30th ult., mistakingly spoke of the work as undertaken by the Government of the United States; but was corrected by Mr. Laurence, the American Minister, who said that the United States would ask this country to subscribe with themselves, and sought no exclusive privileges. The road is in fact making by private individuals, sanctioned by the Government of New Grenada; and we may trust to the mutual jealousy of the governments of the great nations of the world to protect the independence of the little State that holds this great pass.

Another route proposed is across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, in the dominions of Mexico. A highway has already been constructed from the Gulf of Mexico to the Gulf of Tehuantepec, by Messrs. Geary, Manning, and Mackintosh, and Hargon and Co., to whom the privilege has been conceded. The distance is 144 miles, and it is expected that a railway, which can be made for £2,000,000 sterling, will, ere long, supersede the highway. In the meantime, steamers are about to run from the termination in the Gulf of Mexico to New Orleans, and from the termination in the Pacific to San Francisco. This route will be shorter from New Orleans to San Francisco than the Panama route by 1000 miles, and shorter from New York, when the railway projected across the Peninsula of Florida shall be completed, by 2000 miles. Besides being so much shorter, it passes through a better climate, being from 9° to 16° north of Panama; and should a railway be constructed across Tehuantepec, it promises to be a great highway between the United States on the Atlantic and on the Pacific.

Another scheme in progress is a great ship canal, which an American company has undertaken to make, from the mouth of the River San Juan, in the Gulf of Mexico, through the Lakes of Nicaragua and Leon, to the Pacific. Occupying a very large portion of the whole distance between the two oceans, and requiring only a canal of about twenty miles in length to connect them, these great Lakes seem destined by nature to form a water communication between them. The project is highly favoured by the Governments of the United States and of Nicaragua, and will, there is now no doubt, be carried into effect. This route lies between Panama and Tehuantepec, but nearer the former than the latter. It passes through a fertile and picturesque country, and will enable vessels of light draught of water to pass from one sea to the other. Before five years have elapsed, three lines of communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific, beyond the territories of the United States, will be completed. After that is accomplished, few ships, perhaps, will sail to China by the Cape of Good Hope, and still fewer will go round Cape Horn.

Within the United States it is proposed to connect the upper part of the valley of the Mississippi by a railroad with California. The line will run between 35° and 39° north latitude. Starting from St. Louis, on the Mississippi, it will proceed by the valley of the Kansas to the valley of the Upper Arkansas; and then, passing into the valley of the Rio del Norte, it will cross the Sierra Madre and the Rocky Mountains. Deflecting to the north, it will afterwards enter the Great Basin, and, touching the new-founded settlement of the Mormons on the Great Salt Lake, will run straight to San Francisco. The length of this railroad is about 2000 miles; but there is no doubt the work will be achieved. At a Convention from all the States of the Union, held at Memphis, which closed its labours on October 26, it was resolved to call on the Government to provide at the early period for the construction of a national railroad to the Pacific, in the best and cheapest manner, applying the money obtained by the sale of the national lands to defray the expense. At the same time, the Convention recommended the Government, by the appropriation of the public domains, to aid in the formation of branch lines from the great trunk to the Northern Lakes, to the great thoroughfares leading to the Atlantic, and to suitable points on the Gulf of Mexico. Already, as General Cass stated in a letter read to the Convention, the United States are rendered by the telegraph more compact than they were at the time the Constitution was adopted. And this new work of railways connecting the Great Northern Lakes with the Gulf of Mexico, the Atlantic with the Pacific Ocean, will unite the many millions of people for whom the vast territory of the United States is destined to be a home, as closely as we are united in England by the railways. Such great enterprises in constructing the Panama, Tehuantepec, and Nicaragua routes, the Convention recommended that the Peninsular Generals of the United States, and the Secretaries of War and of the Navy should make contracts for the transportation of the mails, of troops, and of naval and military stores from the Atlantic to the Pacific by the shortest, speediest, and cheapest route. They keep the end of communication steadily in view, and while they exert themselves to produce a railroad, connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific within their own territory, they promote cheap communication by the formation of railways across the continent beyond them.

To harness all the vast changes which will ensue from opening these new routes, particularly that across the Isthmus of Panama, is impossible. They will, probably, far exceed those which ensued from the discovery of America, and from reaching India by the Cape of Good Hope. One obvious consequence of shortening sea voyages by intermediate stages, will be to facilitate [illegible] pel the employment of steam-vessels to a much greater [illegible] and for this contingency the Americans are preparing, by building [illegible] number. By using them, while the route is considerably shortened, we may expect that the time necessary to carry goods to China will be speedily reduced to something less than the time now required to transmit passengers by the Isthmus of Suez. By the route across the Isthmus of Panama, though the long sea voyage from that port to New Zealand will make it difficult, we shall reach our possessions in the South Sea in fifty or sixty days. Commerce is sure, in the end, to follow the safest and speediest route; and it will probably all pass from China, and all the Islands and places in the Pacific Ocean, including our own colonies, to Europe, across the continent of America. As that continent becomes peopled, as the communication increases between it and Asia, already crowded with inhabitants, the trade will become so immense, that the seas for the route of Europe, including that of England, will become, perhaps, insignificant and subordinate. As a part of the commerce of the world, our commerce may continue to flourish; but to isolate it, and not draw supplies from the general stream, will probably dry it up for ever

The Panama Railroad has a practical bearing. To continue our success, we must raise all the facilities the continent of America, with all its railroads and steamboats, offers us. Our merchants be no cosmopolites, will not neglect these advantages, but our Government may. All our mails, however, to be carried quickly and cheaply, must be carried by the common and generally used routes. Every weekly arrival from N. York now brings intelligence from Jamaica and other places further south two days or a fortnight later than is brought by our West India mail packets, which come direct. Political objections ought not to interfere with transmitting our mails by the shortest route; and in all future contracts for carrying them, we must profit by the conveniences, whether of railroad or steamship, which the continent of America is preparing for the country requires that not a single farthing of money should be misapplied, and by transmitting our mails by the shortest sea voyages to America, and forwarding them by its railroads and steamboats, and by our own steam ships passing to and from the colonies, we may speedily save the expense of the West India and Rio Plata lines of packets. By and by we shall communicate with China by the same means, and be spared the expense of maintaining a communication by the Mediterranean and the Isthmus of Suez

The accompanying Engraving represents the lines of the two most important routes we have briefly described—the railroad over the Isthmus of Panama, and the ship-canal across Nicaragua.

CAPTURE OF CHINESE PIRATICAL JUNKS.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

H.M.S. Medea. WHAMPOA, Sept. 16, 1849.

I SEND you a Sketch and detail of proceedings in this quarter, which may not be uninteresting.

Her Majesty's ship Medea left Hong-Kong on the evening of the 8th instant, and arrived at a place called Tienpak early on the morning of the 7th, when the commander immediately pulled in towards the harbour, with the view of obtaining a pilot for the coast of Hainan; and, if possible, some information regarding the Sylph and Cossack Family, both of which vessels, not having been heard of for several months, were supposed to have been taken by the pirates who infest that part of the China Sea.

The harbour was found to be filled with heavily-armed junks, to the number of fifty or threescore, fifteen or twenty of which were very large, and mounting upwards of twenty-two guns each, full of men, and answering exactly to the description of the piratical vessels which have been making great havoc in these seas lately. There were also from 100 to 150 cargo junks, several of which were boarded for the purpose of ascertaining the residence of the Mandarin on shore. From them the commander learned that he had retreated some distance in shore; and they themselves were detained until ransom was paid for their liberation.

The appearance of the Medea in the roads, and the approach of her gig into the harbour, caused great excitement among the armed junks. They hung red flags over their guns, and displayed a variety of other warlike demonstrations. It was therefore considered prudent to return on board, without landing, as the town was some distance inland.

As soon as the gig left the harbour, five large junks were observed to weigh and stand out, but shortly anchored in a small creek on the right-hand entrance of the harbour, about three miles from the main body of their comrades, and about a mile and half nearer the ship. Commander Lockyer, not conceiving that he possessed sufficient evidence of these vessels being pirates, did not feel justified in making an attack upon them, and accordingly left the roads at 6 P.M. that evening, in further search of the missing ship's.

Having passed Taifoong Island, the Medea came up with a junk which had been seen bearing about a league to windward of the harbour. She was hailed to send a boat, when a Chinese, who stated himself to be the chief officer, came on board, and said that another vessel had been in company with him, but was separated by squalls; and that his own captain had been taken to the eastward, and was also detained a prisoner until a ransom of twenty taels of silver should be paid. He was examined in the cabin, when he described the vessels that took his consort, gave the name of his owners, and asserted his capability of pointing the pirates out amongst those in the harbour. On receiving this man's deposition, his junk was taken in tow, and the Medea returned to and anchored at Tienpak about 8 P.M.

The commander resolved to take a force in, and endeavour to re-capture the vessel the said to have been seized. The following morning, at six o'clock, the gig, cutter, and the two paddle-box boats pulled in, manned and armed. On their rounding the point of sand, which partly composed the narrow creek, and whilst the Chinaman was pointing out the piratical vessels which had seized his consort, the five armed junks above-mentioned brought their broadsides to bear upon the mouth of the creek in a most seaman-like manner, triced up their boarding-nettings, and commenced a heavy fire upon the boats, which was immediately returned with grape and musketry at the distance of 200 yards. Orders were then given to pull alongside and board, which was most gallantly done; the boats being received by a heavy shower of spears and smoke-balls, which latter burst several of the men very severely. However, in about twenty minutes the vessels were captured, with a very considerable loss on the part of the Chinese, from the boats' fire of grape and musketry, besides several who were drowned endeavouring to swim ashore.

It was considered impracticable to bring these junks out of the creek, as the wind was foul, and the whole pirate fleet was getting under weigh, evidently with the view of cutting off the boats on their return. The prizes were, therefore, set fire to, and soon blew up; and the expedition pulled back to the ship, under a heavy fire from nine of the largest junks, who had already got well within range. The boats at this period were in a very critical position, as the ammunition was nearly expended, many men being hors de combat, and upwards of thirty junks in the background endeavouring to come up with the boats; and there is little doubt, that, had they succeeded in cutting off their retreat, not one of the party would have returned to tell the tale, the men being greatly exhausted by the five miles pull in, and the severe exercise in a broiling sun, besides the pull on board.

The Medea engaged twelve junks of about 230 tons, mounting two long 18-pounders, and eight 12-pounders, with more than fifty men each; and the other two were of 150 tons, with two long 18-pounders, and six 12 pounders, and forty men each. The total expended, in guns and men; besides a great many spears, jingals, and matchlocks; which all were well provided with powder and

Medea's force on this occasion was as follows:

Gig, Acting Commander Lockyer; Dr. Hastings, Acting Surgeon; Mr Spong, Clerk; and 18 seamen.

Cutter, Mr. Walker, Acting Mate; Mr Ansell Master's Assistant; and ten seamen.

First Paddle-Box Boat (one 18-lb. carronade), Lieutenant W. H. Wood, Mate; Midshipman; Mr. Harwood, Midshipman, and twenty-three seamen and marines.

Second Paddle-Box Boat (one 18-lb. carronade), Mr. W. B. Sim, Acting Master, Mr. Wilkinson, Midshipman, Mr. Prowse, Midshipman; and twenty-three seamen and marines.

Making a total of twenty-two officers and men. One seaman was killed by a round shot, and [illegible] Chinese who had given information at the pirates; and Mr. Wilkinson, midshipman, and ten men, were wounded.

Two men found in chains on board one of the pirates were taken to Hong-Kong. A woman and her child, who had jumped overboard from the [illegible] men, were saved, and landed by the gig.

This will be a wholesome lesson to these pirates. A small steamer that could cross the bar would effectually exterminate this powerful nest. It seems they thought the boats would not follow them in, as that is their method when they have been cut off by the large junks. Lucky it was they did not.

AN EYE-WITNESS.

ATTACK BY BOATS OF H.M.S. "MEDEA" ON ARMED PIRATICAL JUNKS, IN TIENPAK HARBOUR, ON THE SOUTH-WEST COAST OF CHINA.—(SEE PRECEDING PAGE.)

CONVENT OF ST. GEROSIMUS, NEAR THE BLACK MOUNTAIN.

THE INSURRECTION IN CEPHALONIA.

The revolt that has lately disturbed the peace of Cephalonia has had the natural consequence of drawing our attention to that island, and of investing with interest many particulars that otherwise would be disregarded. But it is not by virtue of any such contingency that Cephalonia becomes worthy of notice. It is the largest, and in some respects the most important constituent member of the Septinsular Republic; and though, as things go at present, this does not involve the exercise of much political significance, yet, in the event of European war, we could not afford to be careless of these our possessions. There must always be a close relationship between the protectorate of these islands, and the naval command of the Mediterranean. Cephalonia especially is in this respect valuable, because she has an harbour sufficiently capacious for the entire fleet of Great Britain. Between Argostoli and Lixuri there is abundant room for all our first-rates to swing at anchor, and withal excellent holding ground; and here it was that the French fleet sought refuge from the search of Nelson. The harbour is so deep, and so protected by the land, that, with topmasts struck, large ships would not be discernible till the search had been pushed well round the point, about half way down the harbour. Thus the French men-of-war managed to escape the frigates that were sent in to reconnoitre; and emerged eventually to fight the battle in Abonkir Bay!

Perhaps to the possession of this magnificent harbour must be partly attributed the spirit of mercantile adventure which distinguishes the Cephalonists. We say partly, because beyond doubt much of this honourable distinction is due to the superior development of general industry which marks them—an industry which shows itself in matters unconnected with this peculiar advantage. They show, in daily life, an energy which constitutes a clear difference between them and any of the other islanders. The Corfuites, for instance, though enjoying many inducements to diligence, are certainly to be reckoned amongst the idlest of people. The fables of the Golden Age are almost realized in their agricultural experience, if we may speak of agriculture where the labours of the field are unknown. Their olive trees, on which they chiefly depend for produce, yield their crops almost untended; and the ground gives them a vintage with no further solicitation than the mere planting of the vine. They are, in fact, ruined by the very exuberance of their soil. Enough for the support of existence is attainable without trouble; and with this sufficiency they live contented, seldom or never entering into the toil of industrial or commercial competition. Corfu has no indigenous manufactures, nor does she export any produce, nor, indeed, boast of any craft beyond the dignity of a tabaccolo. Now, Cephalonia has a large fleet of merchantmen, that every year trade to the Black Sea for corn. They are well built and well found in every respect, as it behoves vessels to be that undertake the navigation of the stormy Euxine. Besides this a very busy trade is driven in their own produce, which is exported chiefly in English bottoms, this produce being currants. Zante has monopolized the credit of furnishing us with this delicate condiment, but at present quite as many are grown at Cephalonia. We may remark the same truth in the instance of these islanders that political economists have established on general grounds, viz. that the hardihood engendered by the necessity of struggling with disadvantages of soil and circumstance is the saving of a people. The Cephalonists have to work hard for their crops, the soil being disposed to a great extent on steep mountain declivities; but the consequence is, that they are a hardy and industrious community. Unhappily, they have not learned to set aside the besetting evils of Ionian morality, as we learn by the atrocious and cowardly exhibitions with which their occasional outbreaks are marked.

They who have attended to the accounts published of the late disturbances must have been struck with the atrocities brought to light. Some license may be conceded to the fury of popular excitement, but no excuse can be devised for the malefactions that have lately disgraced Cephalonia. The defence of Theodore Vlacco is quite a curiosity, aiming as it does at the exculpation of himself by the incriminating of all the witnesses, and speaking so coolly of the horrible crimes which he had been bribed to commit.

The patron saint of Cephalonia is St. Gerosimus. In giving an account of these communities, it is quite necessary to notice the tutelary saint. Saint Spiro at Corfu; St. Dionysius, at Zante; and St. Gerosimus, at Cephalonia, have almost superseded the worship of Him for whose sake professedly they are venerated. There is a Convent of St. Gerosimus at a short distance from Argostoli Of this building we give a Sketch—not because it is itself a very picturesque object, but because here it was that, according to the confession of Vlacc., the Lord High Commissioner was to have been assassinated. It lies nearly at the foot of the Marro Vouno, or Black Mountain.

Cephalonia, like St. Maura, has extensive Cyclopean remains. Krani, near Argostoli, presents some of the finest specimens of this kind to be found anywhere. The architecture is of the primitive order, the stones being of irregular shapes, unwrought by the chisel, and cohering only by the force of gravity. But the more picturesque remains are to be found at Samos, on the other side of the island. This town was destroyed by the Romans, in consequence of the inveterate addiction to piracy which rendered the Samians the pests of commerce. Great pains were taken to remove the vestiges of the town, but in some parts the architecture is so massive as to have defied the effort. All over the beach, and on the slopes of the hill, massive stones bear witness to the magnitude of the structures from which they must have been rolled down. In one particular place so much of the original walls remain, that a modern superstructure has been raised upon them, so as to furnish accommodation to the present generation. Once upon a time this building was a convent; it now is occupied as a police-station. The modern village of Samos is close down by the beach, and is of the same general appearance as any other small fishing village. The Bay of Samos is the most beautiful part of the island and is shut in by the shores of Ithaco.

In this island is a natural curiosity which deserves notice. Near Argostoli is a spot where the water runs inland in a continuous stream, but only for a short distance. The course of the stream cannot be traced, and, to all appearance, it terminates abruptly, at the end of a channel only a few yards long, which it has worn for itself in the rock. The rate at which the water enters has been computed to be about 1100 tons a day; what becomes of it subsequently to its entrance, no one can say. This natural curiosity has been turned to good use, in the way of a mill-stream. A mill has been erected here, which does good work for the Cephalonians. Its situation is picturesque, at the entrance of the harbour, commanding a view of Lixuri, on the opposite side. It was at this village that Vlacco was executed by sentence of court-martial.

MILL AT ARGOSTOLI, WITH LIXURI IN THE DISTANCE.

BARON HAYNAU.

The Baron Haynau, whose conduct in the late Hungarian war was stained with such acts of atrocity as will long cause his name to be held in execration throughout Europe, is stated to be a natural son of the Duke of Hesse, by a goldsmith's daughter. He was born at Cassel, in the year 1786, and appears to have been long notorious for his eccentricities, which, when he was for some time in military command at Grätz, led to his being considered insane.

In May last, upon the recal of Baron Welden from the superior command of the Austrian troops, he was replaced by Baron Haynau, who was appointed under the style and title of Commander-in-Chief of the Austrian army in the kingdom of Hungary and the principality of Transylvania; he being, at the same time, charged with the direction of the Government in both those countries, declared in a state of siege. He, probably, may have been considered to have gained this distinction by his cruelties, when, on the 30th of March, he arrived with an Imperial force and a battering-train before Brescia, which had revolted against the Austrians. After a six hours' bombardment, the city was entered, the barricades in the streets carried with great slaughter, and the beautiful city almost razed to the ground. In August, he added to his inglorious conquest the capture of Szegedin; and, within a week, he led the Imperial army to Temeswar, where a sanguinary conflict ensued, which terminated in the utter defeat of the Hungarians.

At the close of the war, Haynau carried into effect the exactions from the Hungarians with such unsparing cruelty, that he received the Imperial command to retire to less active service. Nevertheless, so strange is human nature in some of its phases, and so notorious are his Imperial Majesty's huge subjects for their inconsistency, that we find this execrated commander's conduct receiving their approval; and within the last month a deputation, consisting of a number of the most distinguished citizens of Pesth, has presented a most beautiful album to General Haynau, as a "token of gratitude!"

The General has since occupied a better position, though it will take a multitude of good actions to wash the blood-stains from his evil reputation. Another proof has just been given that it is the intention of Government to treat the Hungarian insurgents as mildly as circumstances will permit. Baron Haynau had issued orders to the courts-martial to carry on the proceedings against all those implicated in the late rebellion who, in obedience to his proclamation of the 1st of September, surrendered themselves to the authorities, without depriving them of their liberty, except where there are existing proofs of their having been guilty of some flagrant crime. The consequence is, that all those who voluntarily surrendered themselves are now at liberty, and those who may in future do so will enjoy the same privilege.

GENERAL HAYNAU.

EDINBURGH CORN EXCHANGE.

CURIOSITIES.—X.

BRONZE FOUND AT SILCHESTER.

This presumed relic of Roman art was found, about seven years since, by a woman reaping in a field at Silchester, situated on the borders of Hampshire, adjoining the county of Berks. Silchester is the Caer Segont of the Britons, and the Vindonum of the Romans. It is one of the most perfect Roman stations in the south of England. The foundations of the streets may still be traced, running in parallel lines across the area. Constantine was invested with the purple in this city in 407. Ælla, the Saxon chief, destroyed this place on his march from the Sussex coast to Bath in 493. A great number of coins—many of which are in the possession of the holder of the above relic of antiquity—have been discovered here, at different periods. The present bronze is cast hollow, of beautiful execution, spirited in character, and in excellent preservation. It is in the possession of Mr. Charles Havell, Waterloo-place, King's-road, Reading.

An Aid to Early Rising.—A mechanic residing at Newcastle, street, Hulme, has constructed a little machine for the purpose of awaking himself early in a morning. To a Dutch clock in the kitchen he has attached a lever, from which a wire communicates through the ceiling to the bed-room above, in which he has fixed his novel invention. Having set the lever to any hour at which he may wish to be awakened, when the time arrives is is released by the clock, and the machinery up-stairs rings a bell, then strikes a match, which lights an oil-lamp. This lamp runs upon four wheels, and is at the same instant propelled through a tin tube on a miniature railway, about five feet long, which is raised by small iron supports a few inches above the bedroom floor. Near the end of the "line" is fixed an elevated iron stand upon which a small teakettle is placed (holding about a pint); and immediately under it, by the aid of a spring, the lamp is stopped, and its flame boils the water in the kettle in twenty minutes—thus enabling him to take a cup of tea or coffee prior to going to work. The bell attached is so powerful that it awakes his neighbour, and the machine altogether is of a very neat appearance, the mechanism being of polished iron. The inventor has made it during his leisure hours, and has been about eighteen months in bringing it to a state of completion. He has also combined economy with utility, as the working of it does not cost more than a halpenny per week.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway.—A committee of shareholders has been formed at Manchester, at a meeting held on Thursday week, at which a resolution was passed to the effect, that the present position of the company requires the adoption of measures for effecting a thorough and unrestricted inquiry into its affairs.

Winding up of Joint-Stock Companies.—Peremptory orders have been issued by the Master in Chancery, Sir George Rose, on William Frederick Hill and William Revell Vigers, contributories, for the payment by them several y of £1305 and £300 to the official manager, by twelve o'clock on the 25th of February, 1850, towards the winding-up and discharge of the liabilities of the Godolphin Mining Company.

Opening of the Eastern Union Railway to Norwich.—On Monday the extension to Norwich was opened to the public for the conveyance of cattle, goods, &c. This precaution is deemed necessary in order that the line may be properly consolidated for the running of passenger trains.

Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire.—On Tuesday, at the Star Hotel, Manchester, a meeting of shareholders in the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway took place, to call for an investigation into the affairs of the company. There were about fifty gentlemen present, Mr. Samuel Lees, of Southport, presiding; and resolutions were passed in favour of another investigation of the company's financial position and into the policy of the management. The meeting also condemned the policy of management in seeking to create new capital before the borrowing powers of the company were exhausted. The proceedings were not over at five o'clock.

Strike of Engine-drivers.—The engine-drivers on the East Lancashire Railway have for nearly two months past been in dispute with the directors of the company, about grievances which they allege to exist; and on Saturday last they all struck work. The company has been obliged, consequently, to entrust their trains to the pilotage of such hands as they had been able to pick up within the week from other lines, and by the promotion of such men from among their own remaining servants as were deemed capable. We have heard of no accident; and, from the measures which the directors and managers have taken, in their anxiety to guard against any fatality, it is probable that they will rub on smoothly.

The Audit Question.—The whole of the answers received from the London and North-Western shareholders give about twelve per cent. in favour of a Government audit. The stock represented by those who are against a Government audit amounts to about £8,500,000

York and North Midland Railway.—The directors of this company, and the committee appointed to confer with them as to the best mode of dealing with the question of the Hull and Selby purchase, and the preference shares created for that purpose, have resolved to recommend that 4½ per cent. in perpetuity, instead of the 4 per cent. recommended in the report of the committee of investigation, be guaranteed on the £10 per share already paid on the Hull and Selby shares, and 5 per cent. on the remaining £15 per share, in case the directors should hereafter deem it necessary to call up that sum.

Cameron's Coalbrook Steam Coal, and Swansea and Loughor.—Extraordinary General Meeting: Dec. 6: Edward G. Winthrop, Esq., in the chair. The objects of this meeting were threefold: 1st, to confirm a recommendation of the directors for calling up the remaining £4 of the capital of the company; 2ndly, for the construction of a railway to Llanelly; and, 3rdly, to confirm the contracts entered into between this company and the parties who had come forward and advanced money to relieve them from their present difficulties. After considerable discussion, resolutions in support of these purposes were unanimously carried, and a cordial vote of thanks to the chairman and directors concluded the business of the meeting.

NEW CORN EXCHANGE, EDINBURGH.

This building, just completed from the designs of David Cousins, Esq., architect, of Edinburgh, is a great addition to the many architectural beauties of "Auld Reekie."

The area of the building, within walls, is 152 feet in length by 93 feet 6 inches in width. The main front is 96 feet in length, and it is 39 feet in height to the top of the main cornice. The receding portions at either end are occupied as staircases; and that at the west end is continued as a campanile, or bell tower, to the height of 93 feet.

The style of architecture adopted is the Italian, and (as our Engraving shows) the front is a very effective and varied building—the mouldings rich and elegant, without being expensively laboured, and the designs of the windows different on each story. There is a handsome Doric portico to the door, which opens to the front portion of the ground-floor, occupied as a vestibule to the Corn Exchange, or great hall at the back, within which the grain is exposed for sale both in sample and in stock. This hall is lighted entirely from the roof, which is divided into three compartments, the greater portion being covered with patent glass tiles; and the vertical sashes of the centre compartments are hinged for ventilation.

The roofing of the hall is considerably lower than the front of the building; it is supported by two rows of iron pillars of ornamental design; though in this portion of the edifice, as in the front, more attention has been paid to general harmony of effect, produced by good proportion, than to trust to unnecessary ornateness of parts.

The first, or one-pair floor, over the vestibule, provides accommodation for a bank, for the convenience of parties attending the market. A hall, sixty-six feet in length, occupies the remainder of this floor, in which these parties may meet for the settlement of their accounts. The second floor over these apartments is laid out as a granary, for storing corn or other seeds which may not have been disposed of at the market.

INTERIOR OF THE EDINBURGH CORN EXCHANGE.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Dec 9.—Second Sunday in Advent.
MONDAY, 10.—Grouse shooting ends.
TUESDAY, 1.—Terrible slaugh er of British troops in Affghanistan; 17,000 Hyde., 1842
WEDNESDAY, 12 Phœbe H sel, the woman-sold.er, died, 1821, aged 108.
THURSDAY 13.—St. Lu.. Sun rises, 8h. 0m.; sets, 3h. 49m.
FRIDAY 14.—Sir ... John P.M. Isaak Walton died, 1683, aged 90.
SATURDAY, 15.—L.. ... died, 1816, aged 53.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,

FOR THE WEEK ENDING DEC 15, 1849.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m
0 50 1 12	1 25 1 51	2 1 2 30	3 0 3 33	4 1 4 38	5 2 5 43	6 3 6 48

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager Mr. W. BATTY.—In consequence of the continued success of Mr. Bill's Pantomime, which, being most positively his Last Six Nights, Wonders will never cease. On Monday, and during the week, the following accomplished Performers:—Mlle Louise Tournaire, Mlle Josephine, Mlle Jeannette Josephine, Mesdames Dawson, Austin, and Bridges, Messrs. Powell, James Bridges, and Mr. Tourniaire. On Monday, Mr. Batty's Juvenile Establishment will commence at a Quarter to Seven, with the Pony Act, and the Battle of the Alma. Mr. Batty will appear in the Roman Gymnast. His original Character. To be succeeded by Batty's Inimitable SCENES OF THE ARENA. Clowns Messrs T. Barry, Jackson, and Wheale. To conclude with (the Last Night) MR BRIDGES, or, the Disasters of Housekeeping and Horsekeeping.—Box-office open from Eleven till Five.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, EXETER-HALL.—Conductor, Mr. COSTA. NEXT FRIDAY, DEC 14, Handel's MESSIAH (preceded by the "Dead March in Saul"). Vocalists: Miss Birch, Miss Dolby, Mr. Lockey, and Mr. H. Phillips. Tickets to admission 7s 6d; to the Gallery, and the 6d each, at 6, Exeter-Hall. Mr. Hullah's 2d Concert of Vocal Music will be given on the three following Tuesday evenings. Tickets for the previous performance will be furnished with two for this occasion. Persons notified as the course of practice of secular Choruses for this performance, are requested to forward their applications to No. 6, Exeter Hall, accompanied by a Post-office order for the amount, payable to Mr. HOPE BOWLEY.

EXETER HALL.—WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.—WEDNESDAY NEXT, Dec 12, will be held the EIGHTH CONCERT, when the following, among other artistes, will appear:—Mrs. Alexander Newton, Miss Poole, Mr. Bridge (Pupil's first appearance), Mr. Leffler, Herr Formes, M. Distin and Sons, and the celebrated Violinist, Herr Ernst.—Tickets, 10s 6d, 7s, 5s, 3s, and 2s; stalls, 7s; may be had of Mr. Summers, 4 Exeter Hall, and of all music sellers.

MR. WILLY'S CONCERTS, at the NEW MUSIC-ROOM, 28, ST. MARTIN'S HALL, 859, LONG-ACRE.—The eminent Pianist, Mr. Sievrak's Benefit, and celebrated Violoncellist, Signor Piatti, the Misses Williams, Messrs. Zerbini, Weiske, Reed, Prate, and other members of Mr. Wily's Concert Band, will perform at the SECOND CONCERT, on MONDAY, Dec. 17th.—Tickets, 3s and 2s each. Reserved seats, 5s.

MISS DOLBY begs to announce, that, in consequence of the Payment of her late honoured Majesty the Queen Dowager being fixed to take place on Tuesday next (not 11th, as before announced), her LAST SOIREE is POSTPONED until the TUESDAY following, the 18 h inst.—2, Rhode street, Manchester-square.

BANVARD'S PANORAMA, by particular request, will remain OPEN for FOUR DAYS longer, at the EGYPTIAN HALL, PICCADILLY.—To accommodate a numerous visiting the Metropolis during the coming Cattle Show, the celebrated Painting of the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, lately exhibited at Windsor Castle, an view over 3000 miles of American scenery, will be exhibited Monday, Dec. 10th, Tuesday 11th, Wednesday, 12th, and Thursday, 13th, when it will positively close.—Morning Exhibitions, Admission, 1s; Lower Seats, 2s.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The First of Twelve Courses of Lectures, by Dr Bachhoffner, on the Philosophy of Scientific Recreations, will commence, and on the Evenings of Tuesday and Thursday at Eight. A Descriptive Lecture, Daily at Half-past Four, and in the Evenings at a Quarter to Ten. The Views of Rome are shown Daily at One o'Clock. A Lecture on the Cultivation of the Voice, and on the Art of singing, by Mr. Gaffney, Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday, at a Quarter to Four, and on the alternate Evenings at Eight. Lectures on Chemistry, by Mr Ashley. Exhibition of the Oxy-Hydrogen Microscope. River and Diving-Bell, &c.—Admission, 1s; Schools, Half-price.

NOTICE.—SMITHFIELD CLUB PRIZE CATTLE SHOW, and EXHIBITION of SEEDS ROOTS IMPLEMENTS, &c., for 1849, COMMENCES on TUESDAY, the 11th inst., and not on Monday, the 10th DAY Evening, instead of Saturday, as before announced, in consequence of the Queen Dowager's funeral.—Baker-street Entrance to remain as before.—By order of the Executive Committee, JOHN THOMAS BARRAUD, Secretary.

GREAT EXHIBITION OF INDUSTRY OF ALL NATIONS, 1851.

The FIRST LIST of the Names of Promoters and Subscribers is now being made up, to be reported forthwith to H.R.H. PRINCE ALBERT, President of the Society of Arts. Persons desirous of subscribing to the Guarantee Fund are requested to intimate the same immediately to the Chairmen of the Local Committees, which have been formed in

Aberystwith	Devonport	Launceston	Stroud
St Austell	Dover	Lancaster	Swansea
Bath	Dublin	Leeds	Stafford
Bristol	Dudley	Liverpool	Shrewsbury
Bodmin	Exeter	Manchester	Stoke-upon-Trent
Bradford	Falmouth	Middlesbro'	Stockbridge
Brighton	Guildford	Norwich	Truro
Birmingham	Gloucester	Newport	Walsall
Barnstaple	Hereford	Newcastle-upon-Tyne	Wakefield
Leeds	Hadersfield	Tyne	Wexford
Coventry	Halifax	Nor hampton	Worcester
Carlisle	Ipswich	Nottingham	Wolverhampton
Canterbury	Kidderminster	Plymouth	Great Yarmouth
Dartmouth	Limerick	Penzance	York
Derby	London	Sheffield

or to the Executive Committee, 1, Old Palace-yard, Westminster.

DIGBY WYATT, Secretary

GREAT EXHIBITION OF INDUSTRY OF ALL NATIONS, 1851.—NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that important Town and District Places which have not been visited by a deputation from his Royal Highness the Prince Albert, President of the Society of Arts, will be visited in the course of the present week, as suitable arrangements can be made. In the meantime, it is requested, that the formation of the Local Committees in such places may be expedited forthwith to the Secretary of the Executive Committee, 1, Old Palace-yard, Westminster.

DIGBY WYATT, Secretary.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A Z—The question, and, probably, now the only way of obtaining complete naturalisation, as a matter of right, is by memorial to the Secretary of State under the recent statute, the 7 and 8 Vict., c. 66. Any fee may be demanded by that act with the exception of his being compelled to take the oath of allegiance. The expense and mode of proceeding may be known by inquiry at the Home Office or the Treasury. A person may be naturalised also by special act of Parliament or be made a denizen by letters-patent. But these courses will be beyond us.

ALICE—Your name is not in the Directory, as is residing at his cottage in Wilts

J. W. of Hull—Your report has been received, and is under consideration.

INVENTOR—We are not aware that it has been patented. Apply to Carpmael and Co. Strand

J. M.—No portion in question would be affected by the notice, had they not been justified by law.

A SUBSCRIBER, Lancaster, should apply at the secretary of the society

M. T.—See the Maps of the Stars published by Knight, 1840. For second-hand

A SUBSCRIBER—would find such a work in Bohn's edition of Barrow's Tour in Ireland."

W. H.—Lace is not to be cleaned

T. J.—Your communication has been received, and will be attended to.

Rebuilt at Ilkley, Yorkshire, A.D. 1849 or 1850, when the

W. M.—Apply respecting the old copy to Mr Pickering, publisher, Piccadilly

VICTORIA should apply to Watkins and Hill, Charing-cross.

A SUBSCRIBER, near Chesterham, has not mentioned

AN ARCHITECT, Birmingham.—If the design Mr. Mudie has was designed by Mr Cunningham

W. S. Cape Town, is thanked for the [illegible] in the matter, however, settled

N. O. A.—Specimens have not yet been adopted by reason of other prizes having been awarded

W. S.—Apply to Mr. [illegible] by work on glass painting

C. B.—[illegible] to recommend himself apply to the corporation

CHAS. SCOTT—[illegible] to the Secretary of the Society of Arts

VIATOR—[illegible] Farm Accounts.—Mr. [illegible] Survey—have no knowledge

PHILIP NEVILL—[illegible] Highway, published

N. A. C.—[illegible] Secretary for Foreign Affairs, [illegible] Commander-in-Chief

W. F. B.—Should apply at the Office of Stamps and Taxes in Somerset-house, by a Memorial addressed to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue.

PHILOMATH—[illegible] Dynamic Electricity.

A CONSTANT READER—The [illegible] is sent from a Roman bulla, worn in all probability by a female.

J. T.—Back numbers of our Journal can be had, unless published within a month

A FARMER, Ireland.—Your letter of [illegible] a question of [illegible]

L. S.—We may enter into any agreement that pleases him, if he has not the regular apprenticeship to serve to it.

X. Y. Z.—For how to make a Christmas Tree, see No. 360 of our Journal

R. H., Jun.—Application at the office of [illegible] Sunderland, has obtained a considerable [illegible] of the Tyne, and [illegible] in great Britain for, estimating its depth from [illegible]

T. Jacob.—The shaft [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Gallery, near Baldock, has attained a depth of 360 feet, and is [illegible] in great Britain for, estimating its depth from [illegible]

C. M.—[illegible] Short-hand, improved by Harding

W. F. B.—Should apply at the Office of Stamps and Taxes

D. P.—[illegible] consult our Treatise on Painting

A SUBSCRIBER, Chipping-Campden.—The [illegible] sent is from a Roman bulla, worn in all [illegible] Roman people

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

The American Literary Society.—The members and friends of this society on Tuesday night had a conversazione, the first since it was instituted, about twelve months ago, at the Clarence Hotel, Aldersgate-street. George Cornewall Lewis, Esq., M.P., occupied the chair; and in introducing the business of the evening said that the objects of the society were by means of a library and free intercourse of mind on literary subjects, to form a point of attraction and a centre to which the philosophically living in London. In commending the purposes of the society, a considerable gentleman took occasion to remind the members and their friends a worthy cultivation of the English language, and, we must add, standing from the ass of the Welsh, he added it was by no means a literary language, and might be a barrier in the way of advancement. Mr. Sheridan Knowles, taking up the same subject, improved upon them with the necessity of not loving their native language too well. For himself, in wandering through their romantic country, and in following the footsteps of Irish Walton from river to lake, he had no difficulty to make himself understood in the peasantry, a thought they were often his only guides. In speaking to Welsh men, he could not help the fact which he owned them, that his first literary effort was attended by their country. It was the first time he had read his own self in print. When he was a boy of fourteen, animated by the romantic scenery, the hill and dale, of their country, he wrote a little song, called "The Welsh Harper;" and he had also thought that production not bad, although in his latter written plays which had met with approbation, he confessed he had never read London streets with so proud a step as when the music-seller put that in print into his hand. The meeting was also addressed by Messrs. Wynn, Hughes, J. Wynn Edwards, Roberts, and M. Lloyd, barristers; Rev. J. Mills (in Welsh), Rev. R. Jones, Rev. B. Williams, and other gentlemen. Many of them dwelt on the language of their country as copious and capable of all the purposes of literature. The meeting was well attended, and the influential position of many present augured well for the society. Mr. Pulesion, honorary secretary, read a number of letters from gentlemen in high station, expressing their approbation of the objects for which it had been founded.

The Exeter-buildings Ragged Schools—Emigration.—On Tuesday, a meeting of the friends of these schools was held in the Cadogan Rooms, Sloane-street, it being the first anniversary of their formation. Lord Ashley was in the chair, and expressed his high gratification at their meeting, after an absence of little more than a year, to celebrate their second anniversary, and his regret at the absence which had crowned their exertions with success. [illegible] difficulty, if not impossible, to urge anything new in favour of the great [illegible] which had called them together, and therefore he could only hope to convince the friends present, on the good cause, and next year he hoped to congratulate them on the increased good they had accomplished. These schools were singularly adapted to the wants of the people and the wants of the [illegible] had been in the public for years, and he hoped soon to see them in every quarter of this great economy. He had made a proposition to Government to connect emigration with them, so that the best-conducted of the schools are shown, by a Government grant and the aid of the friends of the cause, be enabled to emigrate, but he had been refused. He did not complain of this, for he knew only urge them to greater exertions on their own part. And here he might mention, that on the day before he had been speaking to a lady as to the title of the school in which she was employed. She replied, "Don't call it a Refuge School, for that will bear with its name the idea that all who are congregated in it are those you wish to get rid of;" name it the Colonial Training School." (Hear.) Nothing could have been a better suggestion that lady had established one here if, and seen the working of many others, and all had been attended with success. The noble Lord next adverted to the dreadful condition of the neighbourhood of the metropolis, and to a meeting of theirs which he had attended on the previous night, where he pointed out to them the advantages which would accrue to them by a system of emigration, seeing that, of the last census, the female population of this country was 247 000 above the males, whilst in our Australian colonies the male population was predominant where persons of good character could earn from £20 to £50 a year, and in two or three years hardly can do them in better terms, and gladly would give them but for a week, and if their wages were raised from present sympathy, they would be lowered again when the public voice was lulled. This seemed certainly to be his views of an emigration scheme, and although he had the promoters of ragged schools to send out much younger children than as yet they could do, for amongst these hard-boiled and ill-paid women, were some of the most virtuous who would be a protection to their younger companions, and he hoped those present would assist him in that work. (Hear, hear.) The noble Lord concluded by saying that there never was a time more fitted for these actions, for all were now in their favour; hands were all that were required, and these, he trusted, would speedily be supplied. (Hear, hear.) The noble Lord read a favourable view of the proceedings of the society, but showing only a balance of 17s. 6d. in hand, and a debt of £18 12s. on the building account, arising from the erection of additional schools.

Court of Aldermen.—Death of the Queen Dowager.—At a court held on Tuesday, Sir Peter Laurie, in an address suitable to the occasion, moved the following resolution:—"That this Court deeply sympathises with the most gracious Majesty, Prince Albert, the Royal Family, and the nation, in their affliction occasioned by the demise of her Majesty Adelaide Queen Dowager, who by the attractive consistency of her character, and unceasing endeavours to promote the cause of charity, her urbanity and condescension, had justly endeared herself to all classes of society, and whose memory will be revered to the latest posterity." Alderman Humphrey said it would give him the highest gratification to second the resolution. He had a great veneration for the memory of Queen Adelaide to the Mansion House, for he had attended as one of the Sheriffs during the Mayoralty of Sir Peter Laurie, when Queen Adelaide partook of a déjeûner at that scene of civic festivity. (Hear, hear.) The resolution was then agreed to unanimously.

Industrial Home for Gentlewomen.—The title of this society, perhaps, requires explanation. It explains its objects as a new experiment, in that the institution is intended to meet the case of such as, by the death of a farmer or a husband are thrown on the world, and seek refuge from destitution in an asylum, for which their previous condition of life had, in the majority of such cases, rendered them unfit. Many subscriptions, we see, have been gathered towards the support of this worthy design. The site chosen for the "industrial home" is No. 3, Harley-street, Red-lion square; where, on Wednesday, a public meeting was held, the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird in the chair. The objects of the institution were eloquently enforced on a highly respectable and numerous assembly. Among the speakers on the occasion was Mr. Samuel Carter Hall, who moved a resolution in favour of the ladies, who had been, it seems, mainly instrumental in founding the institution. The Rev. Mr. Short, the clergyman of the district, undertook, also, to visit the inmates of the establishment. The design, in fact, promises well, and merits public support.

London Association for the Relief of the Poor.—At the annual meeting of this association, established in 1789 to supply the poor of the City and surrounding districts with coals cheap during the severe winter months, which was held at the London Coffee-house, Ludgate-hill, on Wednesday evening—the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor in the chair—it appeared from the report, that this year was the jubilee of the establishment of the association, during which period the founders had dropped off one by one, till now only two of them remained (Mr. Alderman Wilson, who believe, who has been on the committee of management thirty-two years). The operations of the society during the past winter were so far successful that the committee were enabled to pay off the debt of £2.00, which existed at the period of the last annual meeting; and, although the subscriptions had not run united to so much as in former years, through the establishment of many similar societies, yet the exertions of the committee having made a very favourable contrast for coals, the relief to the poor had been very little diminished. Under the circumstances to which he had referred, that the committee were unable saries. The ceremony commenced at eleven o'clock, in the presence of a select but crowded congregation. The Lord Primate having taken his seat on the throne, and the several Bishops appointed to officiate being placed at his right hand, the prayers were read by the Rev. J. Thomas, and the lessons by the Rev. G. Elliot.

DR. DEALTRY, BISHOP OF MADRAS. DR. HINDS BISHOP OF NORWICH. DR. OLLIVANT, BISHOP OF LLANDAFF.

Immediately after the conclusion of the prayers preceding the Litany, the Rev. R. Boultbee, B.D., delivered a sermon appropriate to the occasion, taking his text from the 10th chapter of the Gospel of St. Mark, and part of the 43rd and 44th verses:—"Whosoever will be great among you shall be your minister, and whosoever of you shall be the chiefest, shall be servant of all." The rev. gentleman concluded a very impressive discourse by praying that this solemn occasion might point out to all the important duties they were about to engage in. He prayed that the teachings suggested by his text might be impressed upon all in this consecration of Fathers in the Church; and that the newly-elected Prelates, in their several capacities, might receive from on high efficacy in their holy office, and that they might find cheerful submission to wholesome discipline.

At the conclusion of this part of the service, the Archbishop advanced to the altar, accompanied by the five attendant Bishops, and proceeded with the Communion service; the Bishop of Hereford reading the Epistle from the 20th chapter of Acts, 17th verse, and the Bishop of Manchester the Gospel, from the 21st chapter of St. John, 15th verse.

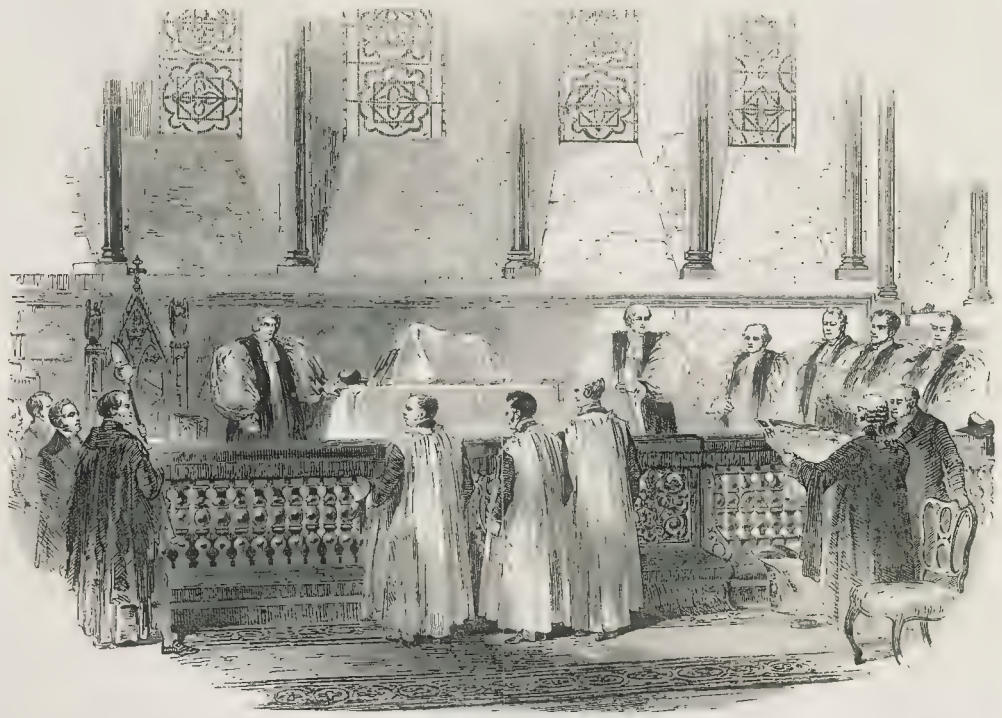
The Nicene Creed having been read, the Bishops of Lincoln and Carlisle left the altar, and proceeded to the vestry, shortly returning with the Bishops elect robed in their rochets, whom they presented to the Archbishop in the following form:—"Most Reverend Father in God, we present unto you these godly and well-learned men to be ordained and consecrated Bishops."

The Archbishop then demanded the Queen's mandates for consecration, which were produced and read by Mr. F. H. Dyke, the Registrar. The oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and due obedience to the Archbishop having been administered to the new prelates respectively, by Mr. Felix Knyvett, the secretary, the Litany was read, and immediately afterwards the Lord Primate addressed the usual questions to the new Bishops, who remained outside the altar. This part of the ceremony over, the Bishops elect retired again to the vestry, and put on the rest of their episcopal robes; and returning to the front of the altar the "Veni Creator Spiritus" ("Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire") was read by the Archbishop, Bishops, and congregation.

The Bishops elect were then consecrated; the Archbishop presenting a Bible to each, with the following impressive exhortation:—"Give heed unto reading, exhortation, and doctrine. Think upon the things contained in this Book—be diligent in them, that the increase coming thereby may be manifest unto all men. Take heed unto thyself and to doctrine, and be diligent in doing them; for by so doing, thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee. Be to the flock of Christ a shepherd, not a wolf; feed them, devour them not. Hold up the weak, heal the sick, bind up the broken, bring again the outcast, seek the lost. Be so merciful, that ye be not too remiss, so minister discipline, that ye forget not mercy; that when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye may receive the never-fading crown of glory, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

The new Bishops then took their seats with the other Bishops attending; and, with a large portion of the congregation, partook of the Holy Sacrament from the hands of the Lord Primate.

The ceremony occupied upwards of three hours.



THE READING OF THE QUEEN'S MANDATES.

THE LATE QUEEN DOWAGER.

THE LATE QUEEN DOWAGER ADELAIDE; FROM A PORTRAIT BY SIR W. C. ROSS, R.A.

Barely have we been called upon to announce an event appealing more forcibly to the sympathies of all classes of the community than that which it is our painful duty to record—the death of Adelaide, late Queen Consort of William IV., and Queen Dowager of England.

Let us now review the circumstances which more than her high lineage have given to the truly feminine character of this illustrious lady, not only a record in history, but a home in the hearts of her own generation.

It may be truly said of her Majesty, that we owe to her the revival and perpetuation of that beautiful system of domesticity in regal life which had already given such infinite credit and charm to the court of George III., and which was happily to pass (with increased splendour to our present gracious Sovereign and her family. In the loss of the admirable lady whose death we here mourn, the rich and the noble have parted with a pattern whom it was a pride and a pleasure to imitate, the poor have been deprived of a friend who never forsook them. As is usual with the virtuous, the biography of the Queen presents little or nothing of a stirring or eventful character: her path of life lay through one unvarying course of domestic piety and private charity, pious birth, alliance, and fortune were, with her, only additional aids and incentives in doing good.

Amelia Adelaide Louisa Theresa Caroline, Queen Dowager, was the elder daughter of George Frederic Charles, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Meiningen, by Louisa Ulrica, daughter of Christian Albert Lewis, Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenburg. The issue of this marriage were—first, her lamented Majesty, who was born on the 13th day of August, 1792; secondly, Ida, born in 1794, and married, in 1816, to Bernard, son of the Archduke Charles of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, by whom she has had issue; and, thirdly, Bernard Henry, the reigning Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, born in 1800, and married, in 1823, to Mary, daughter of Prince William of Hesse.

Her Majesty's father died on the 24th of December, 1814, at the early age of forty-two, and by his last will left the guardianship of his children, and the administration of his estates to the Duchess Dowager, as Regent. Under this excellent and accomplished woman, the children were educated in great retirement, and with a strict regard to moral principles. From earliest childhood, the Princess Adelaide, in particular, was remarkable for her sedate disposition and retired habits. The greatest portion of her time, it is said, was devoted to her studies, and though perfectly cheerful with her intimate companions, she took little pleasure in the gaieties of courtly life. When arrived at more mature years, she manifested a strong repugnance to that laxity of morals and contempt for religious feeling which had sprung out of the French Revolution, and infested almost all the Courts in Germany. That of Meiningen, fortunately, by its seclusion and apparent insignificance, but, above all, by the prudent vigilance of the Dowager Regent, escaped the moral contagion: thus the Regent Duchess was left in undisturbed possession of her authority, and the tranquil enjoyment of domestic comfort. So favoured by Providence, the little Court of Meiningen was distinguished by its purity of principles, and its two Princesses were objects of admiration from their exemplary conduct. Their chief delight was in establishing and superintending schools for the education of the humbler classes of the community, and in providing food and clothing for the aged, helpless, and destitute. The Princess Adelaide, above all, was the main support of every institution which had for its object the amelioration of the condition of her fellow-creatures; and in this devout exercise it was that her Majesty first imbibed those exalted qualities of mind and heart which, in a more extended sphere, have since been so extensively displayed for the advantage and happiness of the British people.

After the death of the lamented Princess Charlotte, in 1817, it became indispensably necessary that the Princes of the blood Royal should enter into the married state. His late Majesty King William IV., then Duke of Clarence, selected for his future partner the Princess Adelaide of Saxe-Meiningen. On the 11th July, 1818, the Duchess Dowager of Saxe-Meiningen and her daughter the Princess Adelaide, having previously arrived in England, the marriage took place in the Palace at Kew. The Duke and Duchess of Kent were at the same time re-married according to the rites of the Established Church. Both the brides were given away by the Prince Regent, the Archbishop of Canterbury performing the ceremony. The Duke and Duchess of Clarence took leave of the Royal Family in a few days after their marriage, and proceeded to Hanover, in the capital of which kingdom they passed the winter of 1818, and the spring of 1819.

While on the Continent, her Royal Highness prematurely gave birth to a princess, who was christened on the day of her birth, but died very soon afterwards, and was interred in the royal vault at Hanover. The Duchess' recovery was gradual, and for change of air, she proceeded to Meiningen, visiting Göttingen and Hesse Phillipsthal en route.

The joy of the people of Saxony on again beholding their beloved Princess knew no bounds, and from the moment she entered the precincts of the Duchy, she was met and welcomed by the vassals of her brother, and carried in triumph for a distance of nearly thirty miles to the capital, where Holyday was kept for a month. The Royal Duke, too, by his kind and condescending manner, and devoted attention to his amiable consort, soon won the hearts of the people of Meiningen, and became as popular as one of their own Princes. After a residence of six weeks in the castle, the Court removed to Liebenstein, where, by aid of its mineral springs, in the course of the summer, the Duchess received her health.

In October, 1819, the Royal pair left Meiningen, on their return to England. They landed at Dover, and a residence on the sea-coast being recommended, the Earl of Liverpool, then Warden of the Cinque Ports, kindly offered the Duke the use of Walmer Castle, near Deal, where the Duke and Duchess sojourned for six weeks. The winter of this year was passed in London, where her Royal Highness gave birth to a fine healthy princess, who, by special desire of George IV., was christened Elizabeth, but when about three months old, the Princess was carried off by sudden illness. The calm resignation of the bereaved parents in this moment of severe trial, and their humble submission to the Divine will, is described as one of those scenes that give dignity to rank, and impress deeply upon the mind the truth and value of the Christian faith.

In 1826 the Duke and Duchess of Clarence terminated their usual travelling on the Continent, and came to reside permanently at Bushy. The domestic life of the Duke and Duchess at this period is thus described by Dr. Beattie, who was for some years his Royal Highness's private physician:—

> To his illustrious partner, whose many and exalted virtues his Royal Highness so duly appreciates, no man can possibly evince more delicate and uniform attentions. There are not, perhaps, of the present day, two personages of similar station, in whom the virtues of domestic life are more pleasingly exemplified. With those excellent qualities of mind and heart so eminently possessed by the Royal Duchess, it is not surprising that her Royal Highness should have won and should retain the esteem and affection of her illustrious consort. His mind is fully alive to their vital importance as regards his present happiness, and to the influence they must exercise over his future prospects.

The death of the Duke of York, in 1827, made the Duke of Clarence heir presumptive to the throne; and, on the death of George IV., he became King, under the title of William IV., and the Duchess a Queen Consort. Their coronation took place on the 8th of September, 1831.

It was during their residence at Bushy Park, namely, in June, 1830, that the melancholy tidings of the death of George IV., at Windsor Castle, were brought to the Royal Duke and Duchess. It is related, that, upon receiving the intelligence, her Royal Highness burst into tears; but that, recovering her presence of mind, she immediately requested that the messenger who had brought the tidings would accept a prayer-book which lay upon the table, with her name written therein, as the first gift of the Queen of England.

KING WILLIAM NAVAL ASYLUM, AT PECKF, BUILT AT THE EXPENSE OF THE LATE QUEEN DOWAGER.

We believe the first introduction of Queen Adelaide in public after her husband came to the throne, was on the 17th of July, when the late King received the deputations from the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, when, after the rev. and learned members had had the honour of kissing hands, the King, to their agreeable surprise, requested them to remain till they had been introduced to the Queen, who soon after made her appearance, and gave a gracious reception to the academical dignitaries.

Queen Adelaide accompanied the King to Bushy Park on the 29th of July, on which occasion the rangership of that Royal domain was bestowed on her Majesty for life by the King. Her Majesty, from her long residence there, had previously expressed a strong attachment to the place.

The popularity previously enjoyed by the Duchess was very much increased on her elevation. The sphere of usefulness which she had hitherto so worthily filled was greatly enlarged when she became Queen; and the regard for her many amiable and excellent qualities was correspondingly increased. After sojourning a short period at Windsor Castle, the King and Queen proceeded to Brighton for the benefit of the sea air. While on this coast, their Majesties made excursions to several places in the vicinity, and, among the rest, to Lewes, where an address was presented, and his Majesty entertained at a déjeuner. In his Majesty's reply, on his health being drunk, the following passage, referring to his beloved consort, occurred:—"There is, gentlemen, one point which I have passed over, but of which it was my intention to have taken notice. You have drunk the health of her Majesty the Queen, and, in returning you my thanks, I meant to have done the same on her part also. Among the many favourable circumstances under which Providence has called me to ascend the throne of this country, there is none which I look upon as of greater importance to set a higher value, than that I have personally been the happy fortune to be married to an individual so excellent in every amiable and good feeling. In this country character finds its way forth into the world, and is always known; I have no doubt, therefore, that you are already well aware of what I would say; but I must take the opportunity of speaking what I am most sincerely convinced of—that her Majesty, who sits before you, possesses every estimable quality calculated to give worth and lustre to her exalted station. Of this I am satisfied also, that a great share of that good and kind feeling which has been so largely manifested towards me since I have occupied the throne has not only been due to her estimable qualities, but has strictly tended to have been exhibited and paid on account of that sense which is entertained of them." This speech was listened to with great attention, and made a deep impression on the company. The Queen was much affected by the manner in which the King spoke of his domestic happiness.

The conduct of her Majesty towards the children of her husband, when she was Duchess of Clarence, is known to have been extremely kind; and that kindness in her manner became but the more conspicuous by the elevation in her position. They were all retained in the closest intimacy with her Court. She witnessed with pleasure their being ennobled; and she felt delight in beholding the King distributing all the private income he could command among them.

It may also be mentioned here, that her Majesty delighted in treating and regarding the Princess Victoria as the heiress to the Throne; and her last act, it may be said, as Queen Consort, was in the command for a ball of unequalled magnificence, given at St. James's Palace on the 26th May, 1837, in honour of the Princess Victoria attaining her eighteenth year—at last, attaining that age when it became eligible for her at once to ascend the throne, upon the demise of William IV.

It is unnecessary to detail Queen Adelaide's married life further than to state that it was passed in the society of her relatives, and of the King, with whom she appeared, and was well loved, up at almost every public ceremonial. One circumstance, however, cannot be passed over without notice. In November, 1834, the break-up of the Melbourne Administration, and the dissolution of Parliament by the King, renewed the political excitement which, since the passing of the Reform Bill, had comparatively subsided. At this period a rude outburst of feeling was directed against the Queen, which, to the disgrace of others who form an opinion on the gross injustice of the attack, was participate' in by many parties in a better sphere of society. The removal of Lord Melbourne from his post of Premier was attributed to her Majesty's influence, although it was not even known to the Queen until it had been publicly announced. The mis-statement was instantly contradicted; but it created a popular prejudice which it required years of generous actions to efface. Her Majesty felt the stigma so unjustly affixed to her character. On the occasion of the customary address of the Bishops on his Majesty's birthday, in 1832, after the King had returned his reply, his Royal Consort, in performing her part in the ceremonial, could not master herself with this very touching sentence: "My Lords, I am particularly obliged to you for this declaration of attachment, at a period when I am most cruelly and undeservedly insulted and calumniated on many occasions."

The spring of 1837 was one of mourning for the Court. The Queen Adelaide received the distressing information of the demise of her venerated mother, whose health had been on the decay several months, during the 29th of April, having attained the age of 68 years.

Before the Queen had recovered from that bereavement, the health of William IV. began to fail, and those best acquainted with his Majesty's symptoms at once anticipated a fatal result. He was sensible of all that passed around to the last moment of his existence, and expressed the most heartfelt grief at the constant attendance which he received from the affectionate members of his family. Queen Adelaide set an example to her sex of patient assiduity and attention to her illustrious consort.

Her Majesty remained in close attendance on the King until the moment of his death (the 25th June, 1837). The transition was easy, and unattended with any apparent effort or struggle; his arm rested upon the Queen's shoulder, and his faithful partner's hands supported his breast—a position which her Majesty had maintained for upwards of an hour previous to the fatal event.

At the time, as the King lay in St. James's Chapel, the Queen Dowager was prostrated with illness, and was unable to attend the funeral.

After King William's death, the Queen Dowager received the pecuniary provision which had been settled upon her, under which she for a time resided with the Royal Family, with Marlborough House and Bushy for her residences.

The Queen Dowager passed the following autumn and winter at St. Leonard's-at-Sea. In October, 1838, having been ordered by her medical attendant to resort to a more genial climate for the winter, her Majesty embarked at Portsmouth on board the Hastings, for Malta. On her arrival there, she was enthusiastically welcomed by the population, and received by the authorities with all the honours due to her exalted rank and highest possible dignities. At this period, the want of church accommodation was much complained of at Malta by the British residents there, amounting to about 2000; whilst the only place of worship was the Government Palace Chapel, which only afforded 300 sittings. The Queen Dowager, on being informed of this spiritual destitution, resolved to supply the want by the erection of a new church. The first stone was laid by her Majesty on the 20th of March, 1839, and the [illegible] was completed at a cost of [illegible], exceeding by more than the amount of her Majesty's original grant. The dimensions of this church exceed those of any of the modern churches of London; the length of the area being 110 feet, breadth 67 feet, and height 60 feet. The front of the edifice, facing N.E., has an Ionic portico, with a bas-relief of St. Paul casting the viper off his hand into the fire, the inhabitants of Melita (see Acts xxviii.). The wings have statues of St. Peter and St. Paul; and the tower and steeple are 130 feet high, terminating with a cross.

Her Majesty returned to England in May, 1839, and in the autumn made a tour in the provinces, visiting the Earl of Denbigh, at Newnham Paddocks; the Earl Howe, at Gopsall Hall; the Earl of Warwick, at Warwick Castle; Sir Robert Peel, at Drayton Manor; and the Duke of Rutland, at Belvoir Castle; returning to London in November, and passing the winter.

In 1840, her Majesty made the tour of the Lakes of Cumberland and Westmoreland, on her way visiting the Earl and Countess of Brownlow, at Belton House, near Grantham; the Earl of Harewood, at Harewood House, near Leeds; and, after a progress of the Lakes, the Earl and Countess of Shrewsbury, at Alton Towers, from whence she proceeded to Matlock; and subsequently went to view Sudbury Hall (Lord Vernon's seat), in the same county, which her Majesty afterwards engaged as her winter residence. The Queen Dowager arrived at Sudbury in September (28th), and remained there until the 5th of February in the following year, when her Majesty came to London in November, to visit the Queen after the birth of the Princess Royal. Queen Adelaide returned in the following winter to Sudbury Hall, and, while resident there, became alarmingly ill, her life having been for some time despaired of by her medical attendants.

In the winter of 1842, her Majesty took up her abode at Canford House, the seat of Lord De Mauley, in Dorsetshire, and left for Marlborough House in the spring.

In August, 1843, her Majesty repaired to Witley Court, Lord Ward's seat, near Worcester, which princely seat she took for three years, and during her residence there enjoyed very good health. Here her Majesty performed innumerable acts of private charity; and the name of Adelaide will long live in the grateful remembrance of the inhabitants of Worcestershire. (An Engraving of Witley Court appeared in No. 66 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

In September, 1846, the Queen Dowager took Cassiobury, the seat of the Earl of Essex, near Watford, where her Majesty was honoured by the company, for three days, of the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert. In 1847, her Majesty paid a short visit to Germany, embarking at Ramsgate, in June, for Ostend, and returning in August. (Engravings of her Majesty's visit to Cassiobury appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, N°. 234.)

In October, 1847, her Majesty, accompanied by their Serene Highnesses the Duchess Ida, Prince Edward, and the Princesses of Saxe-Weimar, embarked on board the Hone, 120, at Portsmouth, for Madeira, and on her way to that island put in at the Tagus, and was there received by the Queen and Prince Consort of Portugal. On the morning of April 2 in the following year, the Queen returned to Spithead, visited the Queen and Prince Albert at Osborne, the same night sleeping on board the Hone, and the next day returning to London. The succeeding winter was passed at Bentley Priory, near Stanmore, which Queen Adelaide had taken of the Marquis of Abercorn; here her Majesty expired on Sunday last

The character of the late Queen Dowager was pre-eminently distinguished by pious munificence and benevolent sympathy. Her Majesty is understood to have distributed from her yearly income the large amount of £20,000 "in public charities," and £10,000 in privately relieving the wants and sufferings of a numerous class of applicants. The building and endowment of the church at Malta may head the list. She contributed to the funds of nearly all the societies engaged in the advancement of religion; amongst which are the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, the Colonial Bishopric Fund, the Sons of the Clergy, the churches in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, the Emigrants' Episcopal Fund, the churches in Australia and Cape Town; the cathedral at Adelaide, and that also at Newfoundland; the London Diocesan Board of Education, the Ragged Schools Fund, the National Society, the Christian Knowledge Society, the Church Building Society, the Church Missionary Society, the Metropolis Churches Fund: but the enumeration would be endless, and it would prove no easy task to detail any useful institution which had not had the benefit of her liberal aid. It was the practice also of her Majesty to subscribe largely to all the charities in every place where she happened even for a time to reside, especially to those of the parish of St. Martin, in which her town mansion stands. The late Queen Dowager was also a munificent patroness of the fine arts. Her taste was admirable in estimating the productions of the pencil and the chisel. There were few ladies in England, even amongst those most devoted to these refined enjoyments, whose opinion upon the productions of the painter and sculptor was superior to hers. In her choice and appointment of artists, and in the commissions which she so liberally gave, the same taste and discrimination were conspicuous. Such was she who has now departed from amongst us—a Princess and a model of piety—a Queen, full of gentleness—a widow, superabounding in deeds of beneficence. To all, the loss is great—so great, that it is felt and lamented in every corner of the land; but to the poor, it is irreparable.

The accompanying Portrait of the lamented lady is copied by permission from a fine print engraved by Ryall, from a miniature by Sir W. C. Ross, R.A., and published by Mr. M'Lean, Haymarket.

A few words referential to the illustrious family from which Queen Adelaide derived descent may not be inappropriate. The House of Saxe-Meiningen is a scion of that of Saxe-Gotha, her Majesty's great-grandfather, Bernard, Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, having been fourth son of Ernest the Pious, Duke of Saxe-Gotha, and elder brother of Duke Ernest, Duke of Saxe-Saalfeld, from whom descends Prince Albert. The family of Saxe is one of the most ancient and illustrious of the Sovereign Houses of Europe. Its Princes, who frequently commanded armies and acquired great military renown, were as eminent in peace as the munificent patrons of art, science, and literature. The present chief of the race is the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar, who, but for the institutions of Hanover, would have succeeded to the throne of England. Had he done so, he would have been the fourth sovereign of Saxony. The next branch of seniority is that of Saxe-Meiningen; the third, Saxe-Altenburg; the fourth, Saxe-Coburg-Gotha; and the fifth, the Royal House of Saxony. By female descent, Queen Adelaide connected, in direct line, from our famous English Monarch, the great and good king Alfred.

HER MAJESTY'S LAST ILLNESS.

Her Majesty's health, always delicate, became alarmingly so during her residence at Bushy in the spring of the present year—indeed, symptoms of dropsy manifesting themselves, Drs. Seare and Chambers were accosted by her Majesty's medical advisers, with the view of combating the disease and fortifying the failing strength of the Royal patient against a crisis that might occur. The result has been [illegible] as the Queen Dowager proceeded to Worthing, where she remained about a fortnight without deriving any substantial benefit from the change. Her Majesty then proceeded to Tunbridge Wells for a short period, where the Queen and the Prince Consort paid their Royal relative a visit. At the latter end of June the Queen Dowager returned to her residence at Bushy-park, in a very unsatisfactory condition. It was evident that her frame was on the decline, change of air not having proved, as it always had done previously, in her case of great benefit.

[illegible] Her Majesty [illegible] Bushy-park to Bentley Priory. In the meantime, her relatives in Germany were apprised of the feeble condition of her continued delicate health; and the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Meiningen and the Princess Mary arrived from Germany on the 6th of September, and were followed by the Prince Hereditary. The Serene Highnesses remained a week to her Majesty until the 20th of September, and on the 29th of the same month their Serene Highnesses the Duchess of Saxe-Weimar, and the princesses Anne and Amelia arrived; and by the [illegible] Queen Adelaide rose with great composure.

Her Majesty, up to the 6th of October, was, notwithstanding her increasing weakness, enabled to take frequent carriage airings, but that was the last day she was enabled to go out on any excursion.

Her Majesty then took to her chamber, and since that period her health rapidly declined. On the 12th of October, the Queen and Prince Albert, on their return from Osborne, visited their illustrious relatives, and, in the same week, the Duchess of Kent, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, the Duchess of Gloucester, and the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburgh-Strelitz, paid visits to the Queen Dowager.

The Bishop of London attended at the Priory on the 18th of October, at her Majesty's desire, and administered the Holy Sacrament to the Royal sufferer.

The Queen and Prince Albert paid their last visit to their illustrious relative on the 22nd ult., [illegible] of October, and during the week previous to Queen Adelaide's decease her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent twice visited her Majesty. Since Monday week, the bulletins issued by her Majesty's physicians denoted that little if any hopes remained of her prolonged existence, and on the following Friday her condition excited the greatest alarm. On the forenoon of that day a distressing change took place, and the immediate relatives of her Majesty were instantly summoned to her chamber. Her Majesty, however, rallied, and on the next morning (Saturday) was apparently more cheerful. At seven o'clock in the evening another serious change took place, which denoted beyond any doubt the approach of death. From this time her Majesty never rallied, but passed from life in a calm slumber, after a feeble cough, which occasioned the bursting of one of the vessels of the lungs. Her Majesty expired at seven minutes before two o'clock.

Their Serene Highnesses the Duchess Ida of Saxe-Weimar, the Princes Edward and Gustave, and the Princesses Anne and Amelia were present at the dissolution of their illustrious relative. The Earl and Countess Howe, Sir David Davies, the Rev. Canon Wood, the Rev. G. P. Hudson, Sir Andrew Barnard, Colonel and Mrs. Cornwall, and Miss Lindson were also in attendance.

On Saturday, the following bulletin of her Majesty's health was issued:—

"The Priory, Dec. 1, 1849.

"The Queen Dowager has not passed a good night, though less restless than the previous one

"Her Majesty continues in a weak state. "DAVID DAVIES, M.D."

Dr. Bright arrived at the Priory on the Saturday night, and remained in attendance until her Majesty's decease.

Her Majesty's physicians issued the following bulletin:—

"The Priory, Dec. 2, 1849.

"Her Majesty the Queen Dowager expired at seven minutes before two o'clock on Sunday morning, the 2d of December, without any appearance of suffering, and retaining her composure of mind to the last. "DAVID DAVIES, M.D.

"RICHARD BRIGHT, M.D."

At a later hour, a London Gazette Extraordinary was published, containing the melancholy announcement in the following terms:—

"Whitehall, Dec 2, 1849.

"This morning, at seven minutes before two o'clock, her Majesty the Queen Dowager [illegible] Queen Adelaide, [illegible] Majesty and all the Royal Family, after a painful and protracted illness, which she bore with extraordinary patience. The loss of this most excellent Princess will be deeply mourned by all classes of her Majesty's subjects, to whom her many eminent virtues rendered her the object of universal respect and affection."

Captain Bedford, Gentleman-Usher to her late Majesty, left the Priory at an early hour on Sunday morning for town. Expresses were forwarded to her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert; to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, at Frogmore House; and to their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, at Kew.

Intelligence of the mournful event was also communicated, on Sunday forenoon, to the Right Hon. George Grey, her Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, and to the Lord Mayor.

The great bell of St. Paul's, as is customary on the demise of a member of the Royal family, tolled soon after the news was received in the City.

A deep gloom was cast over the village of Stanmore from the mournful death of her Majesty, whose liberal charities to the poor of that district, as well as her paternally unostentatious deportment, had rendered her deeply beloved by all classes of the inhabitants. The bell of the parish church of Stanmore tolled heavily during the afternoon.

FUNERAL OF HER LATE MAJESTY THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

The funeral of the late Queen Dowager is definitively fixed to take place on Tuesday next.

The remains of her Majesty will be deposited in the Royal Vault in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, but will not be interred in the state and with any of those ceremonials which for many centuries past have accompanied the interment of the Princes of the Blood Royal of Great Britain.

The ceremony of "lying in state" is to be altogether dispensed with on this occasion; and, contrary to all former precedent, the funeral will take place a mid-day, instead of, as usual, by torchlight, in the evening.

Another deviation, which from the usual custom will be observed, members of the Royal Family, is the omission of the process of embalming the body, which has been dispensed with, it is said, by express desire of her late lamented Majesty.

The procession will leave Bentley Priory at an early hour on Tuesday morning, and proceed, viâ Rickmansworth, Uxbridge, and Slough, to Windsor. At Slough the corpse will be joined by the Prince Consort and other members of the Royal Family, who will accompany it to St. George's Chapel.

The distance to be travelled from Bentley Priory to Windsor is about twenty miles.

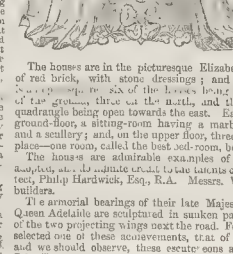
The inner coffin was sent down to the Priory on Monday morning, and the mortal remains of her late Majesty were placed therein the same afternoon by partners of the firm of Messrs. Bailey, also lead, will enclose the Royal funeral. The second coffin, which is lined throughout with lead, was sent down to Stanmore on Wednesday. The coffin is nearly completed, and will be exhibited at Messrs. Banting's premises in St. James's-street this day (Saturday).

With reference to the omissions above noticed, it is stated that an objection exists to the ceremony of lying in state taking place at Bentley Priory, in consequence of that mansion not being Royal property. The removal of the late Queen's remains to London for the purpose is also thought undesirable on many accounts, not the least of which is said to be the great risk of accident from the rush of spectators who would inevitably endeavour to obtain admission to view the ceremonial.

We are indebted to the courtesy of Messrs. Tapprell, Holland, and Son, for a copy of the inscription on the State Coffin, which is as follows:

DEPOSITUM
Serenissimæ Principissæ
ADELAIDE,
REGINA DOTARIÆ.
OBIIT IIDO DIE DECEMBRIS,
ANNO DOMINI M.D.CCC.XLIX.
ÆTATIS SUÆ LVIII.

KING WILLIAM NAVAL ASYLUM, AT PENGE.



HIS interesting foundation is one of the many testimonials of the late Queen Dowager to the revered memory of her Royal Consort, William IV. About 8½ acres of ground were purchased at Penge, of Dudin Browne, Esq., by her Majesty; and, at her expense, 12 dwelling-houses have been there erected, and just completed. These asylums are intended for the widows of Commanders, Lieutenants, Masters, and Pursers in the Royal Navy,—three for each class; and each widow will have an endowment of about £30 per annum, besides the residence.

The houses are in the picturesque Elizabethan style of architecture, of red brick, with stone dressings; and the plan of the Asylum [illegible] the six of the houses being situated on two west side [illegible] and the other three on the south side, the quadrangle being open towards the east. Each house contains, on the ground floor, a sitting-room having a marble mantelpiece, a kitchen, and a scullery; and, on the upper floor, three rooms, each with a fireplace—one room, called the best bed-room, being larger than the others. The houses are admirable examples of the style of architecture adopted, and do infinite credit to the talents of their accomplished architect, Philip Hardwick, Esq., R.A. Messrs. Ward and Nixon were the builders.

The armorial bearings of their late Majesty, King William IV. and Queen Adelaide are sculptured in sunken panels against the gable ends of the two projecting wings next the road. For our initial letter we have selected one of these achievements, that of the late Queen Dowager; and we should observe, these escutcheons are from the studio of Mr. John Thomas, and are in his most picturesque and effective style.

A very deep well has been sunk in the grounds of the Asylum, affording a capital supply of water.

LITERATURE.

EXCURSIONS IN SOUTHERN AFRICA. By Lieutenant-Colonel E. ELERS NAPIER. 2 vols. Shoberl.

The author of this work was lately on royal on special services in Kaffirland, and, therefore, may fairly be presumed to have possessed opportunities for collecting information which rarely present themselves to private individuals. At this era, it is peculiarly that he had prepared for publication a mass of evidence, wherein the misgovernment of the Cape, its wrongs, and their unprincipled authors, were unflinchingly exposed. Its bold statements, however, deterred publishers, and the Colonel kept his MS. by him, resolving that he would some time taken out of his grievance. However, one day he resented; and a friend undertook to modify the evidence, and make the work suitable more seasonable by adding some hints on the now engrossing topic of emigration, besides much valuable information on the missionary and convict systems in Southern Africa.

The Colonel seems to have had some difficulty in determining on his plan; but, ultimately, he set to work in a perfectly business-like manner, by noting all the various tribes of Southern Africa—past and present, abroad and at home, and this, with what he himself witnessed in the country, forms the staple of the work. He then touches upon the "Convict Question at the Cape," which, very clearly proves these wars originated in the most mistaken course of policy, obstinately pursued towards a set of faithless and rapacious savages, who were constantly tempted to plunder the colonists with impunity, owing to the unprotected state in which the whole extent of the eastern frontier has invariably been left.

"Now, as to the 'Convict Case' itself, it stands briefly as follows: When the question was first mooted of converting the Colony of the Cape of Good Hope into a penal settlement, Sir Harry Smith strongly remonstrated against such a step. In reply, he received an assurance from the Colonial Secretary of State, that his measure should be carried into effect without the concurrence of the inhabitants; which assurance was accordingly communicated to them, and apparently quieted their apprehensions; for their dissent to the proposed 'experiment' has been openly and unanimously manifested. However, we are the expression of such sentiments had possibly time to reach England, a vessel was thence despatched to Bermuda, with instructions to convey from that island a certain number of convicted felons, for the purpose of being deported and landed at the Cape of Good Hope."

The first volume of Colonel Napier's work is chiefly occupied with the details of his voyage out to Cape Town, and the earlier part of the campaign against the Kaffir War of 1834-35. These chapters show great di igence to have been laid in the collection of materials, as well as excellent observat on of what the Colonel experienced in his journey itself. There is a lively intelligence about this volume, which is very attractive.

In the second volume, more strictly speaking, the "EXCURSIONS" commence; and we have "treks" and waggon mishaps, gallops, broussas, forays, skirmishings, and other varied movements—all, doubtless, excellent opportunities for witnessing the life and manners of the people, and especially the romance of savage life. At the same time, the towns and villages, forts and ports, are agreeably described. By the way, we perceive that in one of the chapters the author bears tes imony to the characteristic spirit of one of a series of Lucrayings gi en in our Journal, by saying of two full-grown Kaffirs, "I wish the TRAVELS LONDON has so faithfully portrayed the boys' gentleman in black,' that I shall waste no more time on the subject."

These sketches of the lives of the chiefs in this volume are very interesting; especially the account of Macomo and Sandilla. The excursions are spiced with some entertaining chase adventures and bush life; and, altogether, the work is the most copious, complete, and attractive which has appeared for some years on the Cape colony. It is written throughout with great spirit, a keen eye to time and circumstances, and an acute knowledge of "what to observe."

The volumes are handsomely printed, and embellished with portraits of the late Sir B. D'Urban, and the present Governor, Sir Harry Smith, besides some cleverly executed landscape illustrations.

A NEW MODE OF TREATING DEAFNESS. By JAMES YEARSLEY, Surgeon to the Metropolitan Ear Institution. Churchill.

This pamphlet is a reprint from the Lancet, of Mr. Yearsley's mode of treating "deafness when attended with partial or entire loss of the Membrana Tympani, associated or not with discharge from the ear." Cases are detailed, and the following is the remedy:

"A very small quantity of wool is sufficient. It must be moistened in some fluid (distilled water), without any compression, and gently pushed down the passage with the point of a probe. I have had constructed for the purpose a set of instruments which are calculated to meet and overcome every difficulty; for I need scarcely say that it is very easy to talk of passing a foreign body down the meatus, but it is not so easily done. Besides, it is not sufficient to merely pass it down to the site of the membrane; but when there, the spot must be found which it is indispensable the wool should occupy and cover: for then only, and not till then, will success attend the operation, and the patient regain the hearing. I would the rules, which, of course, vary with the case, the patient may be taught to manipulate upon himself, and all that is required is, to renew the cotton, night and morning, or morning only." This is quite sufficient to maintain the improved hearing in the intervals."

AFFAIRS OF HUNGARY.

The subjoined memorial has been drawn up and presented to Lord John Russell, First Lord of the Treasury, and to Viscount Palmerston, principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, with a view to the friendly intervention of her Majesty's Government with regard to the future position of Hungary towards Austria. The signatures belong to members of either House of Parliament —

"We, the undersigned, desire to express to your Lordships, and, through your Lordships, to the rest of her Majesty's confidential servants, the deep interest which we have taken in the contest which has been recently carried on between the Hungarian nation and the Emperor of Austria. Not less deep is the interest which we now take in the final settlement of the question at issue between them, and in the permanent pacification of that great country. Sincerely attached to the liberties of our own country, the final establishment of which is due to the successful termination of struggles analogous to those which have been made from time to time in Hungary with equal sincerity desirous of maintaining the peace of Europe, we are fully sensible of the great importance, that the settlement of the questions at issue should be effected in a manner, and upon terms, satisfactory to the Hungarian nation, not only for the sake of Hungary herself, but because we apprehend that a settlement unsatisfactory to the country will sow the seed of renewed discontent, may lead to fresh local disturbances, and by the local disturbance of so large an element of the system may endanger the tranquility of the whole.

"The object of the undersigned is internal liberty, national independence —European peace. For the attainment of these objects we trust the Court of Vienna will bear in mind that the satisfaction and contentment of Hungary will afford the greatest security. Hungary, however, the means by which the authority of the House of Hapsburg has been re-established, the undersigned are of opinion that the occasion p rmits, even if it does not call for, the intervention of Great Britain, in counselling the Austrian Government to exercise of its restored executive power With respect to the mode and opportunity of interfering, the undersigned offer no specific opinion, but we hops that her Majesty's Government will not shrink from suggesting and pressing the following Republican France has abolished capital punishment for political offences, it will not be wise to allow a contrast to be drawn unfavourable to the clemency of monarchical governments.

(Signed)

"Fitzwilliam, Northampton, Zetland, Beaumont, Kinnaird, Hatherton, Conyngham, Gosford, Stanley of Alderley, Dudley, Radnor, R. M. Carew, Berkeley Cavendish, Robert Grosvenor, Harry Verney, Thomas Slingsby Duncombe, T. Perronet Thompson, Thomas Wakley, John Sadleir, Pierce Somerset Butler, William Scholefield, John Bargus, Robert A. Slaney, Thomas E. Headlam, Joseph Reynolds, E. K. Tenison, Michael Sullivan, T. Chisholm Anstey, James Heywood, Fr. Mowatt, George Thompson, John O'Brien, James Kershaw, Henry Salwey, Joseph Locke, William Caffin, William Ralph Cosens, Francis P. Dunne, Nicholas M. Fenwick, Torrens M'Cullagh, T. G. Marshall, D. Jophson Norreys, T. Dawson Rawdon, James Wyld, Savile C. K. Ogle, Charles Pearson, Lawrence Heyworth, James Clay, H. A. Aglionby, the O'Gorman Mahon, B. M. Willcox, William Pinney, A. E. Cockburn, Richard M. Fox, W. Sharman Crawford, Alexander Hastie, W. J. Fox, John Twiseil Wawn, John Pilkington, Pryse Loveden, William Hutt, William Evans, Thomas Sidney, B. Hall, P. Crampton, Joseph Brotherton, J. MacGregor, W. Marshall, T. Twisden Hodges, John Williams, T. A. Mitchell, Charles Cowen, Edward N. Buxton, Dudley Coutts Stuart, De Lucy Evans, Maurice O'Connell, William Ewart, R. Perfect, M. Forster, E. H. Carter, William Clay, G. W. Fitzwilliam, W. Lockyer Freeman, T. Milner Gibson."

MUNIFICENT BEQUESTS.—The late Mr. Lewis Morris Cuthbert, of No. 7, Lyon-terrace, Maida Hill, by his will and testament, bequeaths the following sums for benevolent purposes:—To the Westminster Hospital, at Brompton, £3000; Royal Free Hospital, £7000; University College Hospital, £500; Committee for Promoting the Establishment of Baths and Washhouses for the Labouring Classes, £100; School of Industry, Paddington, £100; National Benevolent Institution, £100; Scripture Readers' Society (England), £900: Law Clerks' Society, £200; Officiating Minister at Endell street Church, St. Giles's, for the purpose of the pew at that district, £100; Christ Chapel (Maida Hill) National and Infant Schools, over Pay, £2.00; Western General Dispensary, £100; Poor-box of eleven of the Metropolitan and City Police Courts £100. The above sums are to be paid by instalments of £10 annually £650 (making in all £6500). Mr. Cuthbert held an appointment in the Court of Chancery as clerk to Master the Hon. Sir George Rose.

The system of reduction in the Customs department is still being carried into effect in the various ports in the United Kingdom, although of comparatively small amount in each case, will, in the aggregate, form an important item in the financial estimates.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

PHRONE—You are quite right, and the suggestion causes opportunely. A more elegant and effective Christmas present than a set of the new Chess-men, with their beautiful box, could hardly be chosen.

LOVELACE 1. For the volumes you mention. 5, 6, 7, and 8 of the Chess Player's Chronicle you should apply to Hastings, of Carey-street. We doubt if they are to be had of any other bookseller. 2. The Chess column in the Illustrated London News is not conducted by Lewis, but by Mr. Staunton, who is not now at Stockholm, he returned to Berlin early. A copy of the diagram sent, at the George and Vulture Hotel, Cornhill.

LONDON, Camberwell—Your proper plan is to screw yourself a member of the New Suburban Chess Club in that neighbourhood. If you propose you should apply to the President, the Rev J S Sweet, 6, Grange-street, Hampstead-road

HENRY—It is White's 4th move which is inaccurate; that of course, the game being an "Evans Gambit" should be 4. P to Q Kt 4th, not 4. P to K Kt 4th

BELLAIR—We will endeavour to our solution of Enigma No 501.

BELGRAVIA—A list of members composing the St George's Chess Club can be obtained on application to Mr R Longbottom the secretary of the Polygon Chess Club

PHANTASMA, Oxford—They are addressed to post office, Salisbury. The Chess column is conducted by the two communications of Horton and D'Orville, and not by Lewis, as you suppose.

NON-PAREIL, Portsmouth—Your solution of Problem No 505 is correct. Address Mr. Staunton, No. 1 of the plates of h. rg yphics published by Messrs. Bell and Daldy, York-street, Covent Garden. Members and Visitors of the Ancient Egyptians." We are not aware that Layard's magnificent discoveries have yet brought to light any evidence of tabular amusements among the ancient Assyrians

J T K The problem to which you allude appeared in La Regence, and is as follows:—White King at his B 6th, B at Q Kt 5th, Kts at K 6th and Q 4th, P at Q B 6th Black King at his sq, P at Q 3d White to play, and mate in two moves. It is very neat indeed

THE GAMESTER. Problem 30 cannot be solved in the way you suppose, depend on it.

S B A. YOUNG PLAYER, and NOVICE—See the notice above to W E J.

AN OLD IRISH GENTLEMAN. M K P. Tschebigeff. A NOVICE.—Impossible. Black would take the Pawn with his K a Pawn en passe of

OMICRON. An impossible "trifle," we fear. Instead, if Black interpose his free Kt at the second move, J F S—White's 4th move should be 4. P to Q Kt 4th, and Black then takes that Pawn with his Q Bsq

R M—The two Kings must always have an intervening square between them

CARLISLE C C—Apply to the Hon Secretary of the Brighton Chess-club, Clarke Pier, Brighton, for the rules and regulations of that club. When your club is fairly established, will you favour us with a list of members, and the days and place of assemblage?

H S. Birmingham; J R. Lenham. W J G. Hastings—An egregious mistake; you forgot that in each case Black would take the Pawn with his Pawn en passe.

X Y Z—The game between the London Club and the Club of Gentlemen is expected to terminate every move. Upon its conclusion we purpose giving it in full, with copious notes and variations

CARLO FOLIERO—It shall have an early place

E H G. Your reply in the paper of yesterday.

ARTHUR H. The game duly received by correspondence between the celebrated Shrewsbury and Wyvern Clubs. Can give back, if required, as we have a copy apart from yours.

SEA, Lincolnshire—Through any Chess-men dealer. But, beyond moderate and wearisome analysis, there are none to be had so cheap as the newly-registered Pieces. The highly ornamental ones for them is alone worth a guinea, as a most elegant drawing-room ornament

MAX L. Magdeburgh—We shall be glad to hear again from our courteous consultant of Magdeburgh

Solutions by the Rev J T. PAYNE, F G W E. ARENDON, HUBERT MAGAHEE, MAZARIN, P G B, OTHO HELLARY, HUGHESTON, GESU, LEICESTRIUS, LANCET, CARLISLE C C, DERVEON, V S B, W G, Manchester, E H G, CARLO FOLIERO, Rev T R S, Rev W H, and several Young Players.

Solutions by the Rev J T. PAYNE, F G W E. ARENDON, HUBERT MAGAHEE, MAZARIN, P G B, OTHO HELLARY, HUGHESTON, GESU, LEICESTRIUS, LANCET, CARLISLE C C, DERVEON, V S B, W G, Manchester, E H G, CARLO FOLIERO, Rev T R S, Rev W H, and several Young Players.

 Answers to a host of Correspondents are unavoidably deferred until next week

The gentlemen of the King's College School will have great pleasure in settling the preliminaries, before the Christmas vacation, for a game of chess by correspondence with any other school, to be commenced immediately after the vacation. Address Mr C B Clarke, King's College School, Somerset House, Strand, London (previous to Dec 15, or after Jan 2.)

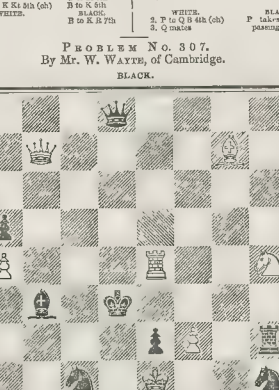
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 306.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to K 3d	P to Q B 5th, or (a), (b), (c).	2. P takes P (ch)	K takes P
		3. Q mates.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
(a) 1.	B to K 1 7th	3. Q mates
2 Kt to K B 4th (ch)	P takes Kt
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
(b) 1.	P to K 6th	2. Kt mates
2. Q to K Kt 5th (ch)	B to K 8th
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
(c) 1.	B to K 8 7th	2. P to Q B 4th (ch)	P takes P in passing
		3. Q mates

PROBLEM NO. 307.
By Mr. W. WAYTE, of Cambridge.

BLACK.



WHITE

White to play, and mate in three moves.

CHESS AT LIVERPOOL.

The following finely-contested example of the good old solid "Giuoco Piano," is one of the latest games played by Mr. Spreckley prior to his regretted departure for China.

WHITE (Mr. Spreckley.)	BLACK (Mr. Mongredien.)	WHITE. (Mr. Spreckley).	BLACK (Mr Mongredien).
1 P to K 4th	P to K 4th	28 B takes B	Q takes B
2 K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	29. Kt to Q 4	Kt to B 3d
3 K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	30. K Kt to Q B 4th	Q to B 4th
4. P to Q B 3d	P to Q 3d	31. Q Kt to R 4th (c)	Q takes Q P
5 P to K R 3rd	P to K R 3d	32 Q takes Q	Kt takes Q
6. Castles	K Kt to B 3d	33. Q Kt to B 6th	Kt takes Kt
7. P to Q 4th	P takes P	34. Kt takes Kt	R to Q sq
8 P takes P	B to Q Kt 3d	35. R to Q sq	R to B sq
9. Kt to Q B 3d	Castles	36. R takes B	R takes R
10. K to K P sq	Kt to Q R 4th	37. Kt takes it (ch)	K to his 2d
11. K B to Q 3d (a)	P to Q B 4th	38. Kt to Q B 6th	P to Q Kt 3d
12. P to Q 5th	P to Q B 5th	39. Kt to Q 6th	K to Q 3d
13. B to Q 3 2d	B to Q B 2d	40. K to Kt sq	K to Q 4th
14. P to Q Kt 4th	P takes P (in passing)	41. K to B 2d	K to B 5th
15. P takes P	Q B to Q 2d	42. Kt takes P (ch)	K takes P
16. P to Q Kt 4th (b)	Kt to Q B 5th	43 Kt to Q 6th	K to B 4th
17. P to Q Kt 3th	Q Kt to K 6th	44. Kt to K 8d	P to Q 5 5th
19. P to Q Kt 3th	Q to K 2d	45 K to his 3d	P to K Kt 4th
20 P to K B 4th	Kt takes B	46. K to Q 3d	K to K Kt 4th
21 Q takes Kt	K R to K sq	47. K to Q 2d	P to K R 5th
22. P to K 5th	P takes P	50. P to K Kt 4th	P to K R 6th
23. K to Q R 3d	P to Q 3d	51. K to Q 3d	P to Q R 6th
24. K to Q R 2d	Q takes P	52 K to Q 2d	P to Q R 7th
25. Kt to K B 3d	Q to K 2d	53 Kt to B 2d	K to Kt 7th
26. K R to K sq	Q to K B sq	54. P to Q Kt 5th	K takes Kt (g)
27. K takes R	P takes R (d)	And White mates in seven moves.

(a) This opening is a mod l of some extensively studied and defence

(b) Hardly so strong as B to Q 3d, intending to win the Kt next move

(c) We should have supported his Kt with Kt, and then playing P to K B 4th

(d) By taking with the R he would clearly have lost his Q R Pawn.

(e) This first step of a profound and masterly combination.

(f) Compelled; Black to exhaust his moves

(g) the only chance of drawing remained in playing the King to Kt 8th, instead of taking the Kt; and even that was a forlorn hope.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 503.—By Mr. W. CAWLEY, of Manchester.

White's K at his 2d, B at Q B 6th, Kts at Q 8th and Q Kt 4th, Ps at K Kt 3d, and Q B 3d.

Black's K at his 5th, Q at K B 3d, Kts at Q B 5th and Q K 3d, P at K 4th.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

No 504.—By the same.

White's K at Q sq, R at K B 5th, B at K B sq; Ps at K B 6th, Q 6th, Q B 3d, Q Kt 2d and Q B 2d.

Black's K at his 6th, Ps at K B 3d, K 5th, Q 3d, Q B 4th, and Q R 3d.

White to play, and mate in five moves

No 507.—By Mr. G. S. JELLICOE, of Oxford.

White: K at his R 3d, Rs at K Kt 4th and Q Kt 2d, Kt at K B 6th; Ps at K R 2d and 5th, and K B 2d

Black: K at his R sq, R at Q R 3d, B at K B 2d; Ps at K R 5th and 2d, K B 6th, Q B 3d, Q Kt 4th, and Q R 6th.

White to mate in four moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The appeal of Mr. Gorham against the Bishop of Exeter from the Court of Arches has been announced for hearing before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on the 11th inst. The Archbishops of Canterbury and of York, and the Bishop of London, will attend the hearing as Privy Councillors; and all the members of the Judicial Committee are expected to be present on this occasion.

The installation of the newly-appointed Dean of St. Paul's, the Rev. H. H. Milman, took place on Friday week, at St. Paul's Cathedral Explosions, by which a number of colliers—amounting in the whole to about 60—sustained more or less injuries, occurred on Wednesday and Thursday week, at the Eskyr Colliery, on the Eaglesnush estate, worked by Messrs. Penrose and Evans.

Lieutenant Graham and Mr. Elliott, late officers of her Majesty's ship Chilvers, undergoing imprisonment in the Devon county gaol, pursuant to a court martial, were, on Monday, by order of the Lords of the Admiralty, removed to the Queen's Prison, London.

The Queen has conferred a pension of £100 per annum, from the civil list, upon Mr. George Petrie, one of the honorary secretaries of the Royal Irish Academy, who is well known for his extensive antiquarian research s

Sir Joshua Walmsley, M.P., and Mr. G. Thompson, M.P., continue to hold meetings in Perth, Greenock, and the p rts of Scotland, in furtherance of their scheme of financial and Parliamentary Reform.

It is stated that the large property possessed by the late Colonel Latouche, who died in London about three weeks since, will fall into the possession of the Knight of Kerry. A great portion of this property is situate in the county of Dublin

There is at present a vacancy in the Penge Asylum, founded by her late Majesty the Queen Dowager for the widows of naval officers, caused by the death of Mrs. Fisher, the widow of a paymaster and purser. Applications for vacancies are made through Captain Bedford, R.N., late Gentleman Usher to the lamented Queen Adelaide.

The imports into Liverpool, for the two weeks ending the 28th of November, were:—102,688 bushels of wheat, 2334 bags of wheat, 8313 barrel of flour, 9543 bags of flour, 13,040 bushels of oats, 143,483 bushels of Indian corn, 70,840 bags of Indian corn, 6480 bus hels of peas, 4590 bags of peas, 15,020 bushels of beans, 110 bags of barley, 3996 boxes of cheese, 513 loose cheese.

In the Newcastle-upon-Tyne Court of Bankruptcy, the certificate of Mr. Cuthbert Grey, formerly M.P. for Gateshead, was recently suspended for twelve months. The judge observed that the bankrupt was open to the charge of culpable extravagance and reckless proceedings. The debts are £155,000, and the assets are barely recoverable.

The two Misses Bathurst, grand-daughters of the late Dr. Bathurst, Bishop of Norwich, were received into the Roman Church a few days since; one of them by the Rev Father Ludwig, Redemptorist at Great Marlow, and the other by the chaplain of the Good Shepherd, at Hammersmith.

Mr. Trelawny, M.P., delivered a lecture at the Plymouth Mechanics' Institution on Wednesday evening week, on "The Elevation of the Working Classes." The hall was honored to attentively by a large and respectable audience

On Monday, some fishermen of Exmouth caught a shark. The monster was more than seven feet in length, and about three feet round in the largest part. The appearance of its serried ranks of teeth was truly formidable.

A letter has been addressed to the council by Lord John Russell, offering to place at the disposal of the Royal Society, for scientific purposes, this year, £1000, and probably the same amount in successive years. The offer has been accepted

On Saturday the members of the Oxfordshire Association for the Protection of Agriculture held a meeting at the Star Hotel, Oxford, when it was resolved to dissolve the society, it being no longer useful, and it was further resolved to present the funds in hand, amounting to £440, to the Radcliff Infirmary

Mr. Gordon, the Government Inspector of Schools for the Church of Scotland, has resigned that office, on being appointed Secretary to the Education Committee and Inspector of the Schools of the General Assembly. Mr. Gordon does not enter on the duties of his new situation until January next

New South Wales provincial papers, viz. the Maitland Mercury and Hunter River Advertiser to August 15 inclusive, mention that the statement of quarterly exports of wool, tallow, &c. showed a considerable increase.

A very handsome tablet is about to be erected in little Marlow Church to the memory of the late Field-Marshal Sir George Nugent. His remains were interred in the same grave with those of his equally distinguished brother, Admiral Nugent.

The estate in Perthshire, known as Solierzie, and formerly in the possession of the celebrated Duncan Ferguson, who, with his untiring but valiant son, was killed during the late campaign in India, is about to be disposed of by public auction.

The King of the Belgians has conferred the cross of the Commander of the Order of Leopold on Prince Callimak, Minister of the Porte at Paris and Brussels. His Majesty has also sent the Grand Cross of the same Order to Ali Pasha, Minister of Foreign Affairs at Constantinople

In consequence of the lamented illness of the Queen Dowager, the play, as announced for the 10th, 13th, and 17th of December, at Westminster School, will not take place

By the supplementary charter recently granted, the powers of the University of London have been considerably extended; and it is now authorised to receive certificates in arts and laws from all the Universities of the United Kingdom, as well as from the respective Colleges of Oxford and Cambridge, in addition to those institutions which were previously empowered by the Crown to issue such certificates.

The "rowing man" will be interested in learning that a boat-race, between picked crews of Oxford and Cambridge, will take place on the Thames on the 15th inst. Boats have been ordered at Searle's, and the crews are in active training

A letter from Philadelphia says that a box of gold-dust, directed from San Francisco to New York, had been opened with an augur by some ingenious and curious rogue, and 10,000 dollars' value abstracted from it.

A gift of £2500 has been made by W. Laslett, Esq., to the parish of St. Nicholas, Worcester.

Eastern, near Wokingham, Berks, the beautiful seat of Admiral Sir John Sinclair, Bart., has been purchased by John Walter, Esq., M.P. for Nottingham. The property fetched nearly £60,000.

During the last summer no fewer than 8520 dogs were killed in the streets of New York, and 6760 dollars were paid as premiums to the killers.

Last week a fatal affray took place near Aldersey-road, in Cheshire, between poachers and gamekeepers, one of the former being killed on the spot. So deeply has the disturbance in the locality affected Mr. Aldersey, of Aldersey-hall, that he has instructed his tenant, George Lightfoot, to destroy all the game on his manor, and to give away his greyhounds.

Russia continues to construct war vessels; seven new ones, two being men of war, were to be launched on the 23rd and 24th ult., at Nikolajew

According to an Imperial ukase, dated the 23rd of November, the exportation of gold and silver, which has been prohibited since May, 1848, will again be allowed from St. Petersburgh on and after the 12th of the present month.

The Adelaide (South Australia) papers of June 9 report the arrival there of the Royal Sovereign and Childe Harold, from Plymouth (February 17th), the Inconstant also last from Plymouth (February 18th), the Garland Grove, last from Port Philip (May 29th), and the Dorothy, which sailed from Plymouth on the 4th March

The Procureur de la République at Paris, on Monday, soon after its publ cation, ordered the seizure of the pamphlet entitled "Le 13 Juin, par Ledru Rollin," printed by M. Schneider. Proceedings are instituted against the printer and all the publishers of the work. In the Assemblée Législative, on Monday, a scene occurred in the evening by the customary festival dinner at which Mr. Newsgate, M.P., supported by Mr. Spooner, M.P., presided.

The Paris papers mention the death of Mme. Sister of the late Prince Bishop of Hohenloe, the Princess Eleanora Henriette, Canoness of Innsprunk, on the 17th of November, as had been predicted by her brother, the Prince Bishop on his death-bed only a few days before.

An eel was caught in the Conan, near the mouth of the river, at Inverness, a few days ago, of an unusual size. When deprived of head and entrails, it weighed no less than 35lb. This sea serpent on a small scale occasioned considerable trouble in the cook.

The Magyar Hirlap announces that Bishop Horvath, ex-Minister of Hungary, has arrived in France, under the assumed name of Morand

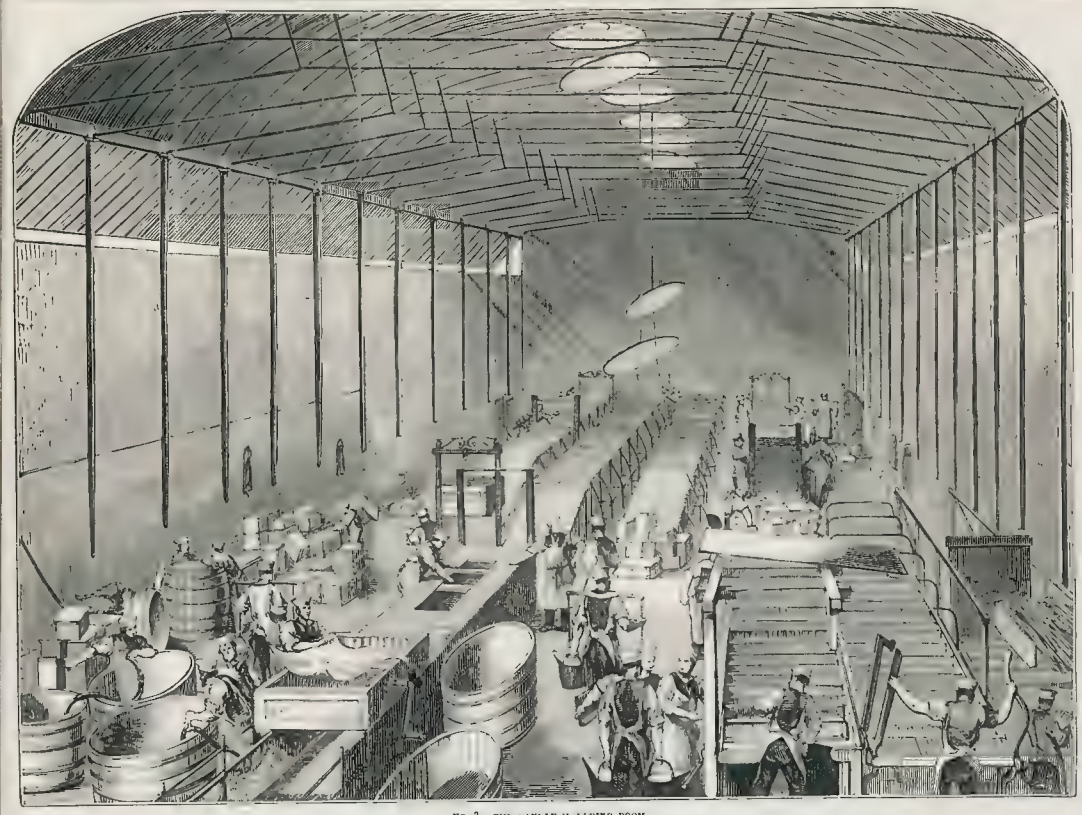
Twenty-eight Hungarian refugees left Hamburgh on the 30th ult., for the United States, and others are to follow. A committee for raising funds for their passages has been established, and it has allowed them 6000 marcs (the mare is 16 sch.) for the expen-es of their conveyance to America.

The locataire of the concierge of the Hôtel de Ville of Boulogne-sur-Mer, having ascended on Sunday to the belfry of the hotel to convey something to the workmen, fell from a great height through a trap which had been accidentally left open, and was killed on the spot.

On Sunday evening, about seven o'clock, at No. 38, Rue de Rivoli, Paris, Mme. Arnould-Plessy, the celebrated tragedian, was so severely burnt, in consequence of her dress having accidentally caught fire, that she died the next day.

PRICE'S PATENT CANDLE COMPANY'S WORKS.—No. 1.—THE SPREADING AND STRIPPING DEPARTMENT.—(SEE PAGE 382.)

NO. 2.—THE STEAM BOILING AND ENGINE-HOUSE.



NO. 3.—THE CANDLE MOULDING ROOM.

NO. 4.—THE "NIGHT LIGHT" AND PACKING DEPARTMENT.

PRICE'S PATENT CANDLE COMPANY'S WORKS.

PROBABLY, there are thousands of our readers who either have used, or heard of, "Price's Patent Candles;" but we feel certain there are very few among the number who have the least idea of the immense extent to which machinery, aided by chemical science, is applied in manufacturing that simple article of nightly consumption—a Candle. Almost every inhabitant of London, and of our provincial cities and towns, must have witnessed the primitive, and equally patient. process of what an angler would term "dipping for tallow candles with cotton lines."

Every one knows how rude and ill-formed are these primitive occupants of the candlestick; but, in course of time, progression, one of the natural laws governing all civilized communities, led to the production of the moulded candle, an obvious improvement, so far as it was concerned, upon the original dip. But the mould candle, though presenting a smoother exterior to one sense, was still the offensive tallow to another, with all its collateral disadvantages of guttering and spluttering, besides endless snuffing. To these fortunate people inhabiting such terraces as Carlton-terrace, and such squares as Grosvenor-square, the Candle question was, like many others, both of domestic and political economy, of little import. The magnates of the land were perfectly satisfied, and wisely too: they had their wax and spermaceti lights, their portable gas thermo-lamps and gilt-tirine chandeliers, their girandole and carcel lamps, in which they burnt huiles au naturel ou parfumées, just as they pleased; and, what was better still, they had plenty of money to pay for these curious refinements.

Such was the position, or rather the clare-obscure of artificial light in this country, when Messrs. Edward Price and Co. started up and solved the great problem of cheap Illumination, by the application of the Belmont and Composite Candles which have the external beauty of wax, combined with an equally illuminating power; which are divested of the objectionable odour of tallow; and, finally, which are so perfect in their combustion as to require no snuffing. These candles were not only welcomely received by the general public, but were speedily adopted by the wealthy classes; and many an unsuspecting traveller may have paid at an hotel for "Wax Lights, 3s. 6d.," when the cheap and excellent commodity from Belmont has really been the illuming power.

The discovery was worked out, upon a moderate scale, at Belmont, Vauxhall, until first gradually, and then rapidly, superseding the sale of moulds and tallow-tensive mill-works there for the manufacture of cocoa-nut oil. The Patent Candles, however, are principally made from another species of palm growing on western parts of the coast of Africa, and botanically known as Avoora Elais, and Elais guineensis. It may be satisfactory to those of our readers who advocate the no-consumption of sheep as a means to know that by far the greater part of the evidence, before a Committee of the House of Commons, that the increased consumption of palm-oil, greatly attributable to the above improvements in candle manufacture, had led to the employment of a vast number of persons, who, otherwise would be engaged in the slave-trade.

[illegible] Vauxhall and Saint Lambeth. In addition to these home-

We will now leave both Greyon and the slave-trade, with the permission of our readers, leaving them to accompany us to Belmont, while we describe the various departments of the works as they were explained to us, on our recent visit. Mr. [illegible] the engaging director. A huge [illegible] of palm-oil, has just arrived alongside the river from one of the packets, and [illegible] huge iron cranes are employed in discharging the cargo. Each enormous tub is lifted in succession upon a raised platform, where a steam pipe is introduced into it to liquify the contents, which the change of climate in the transit from Africa has thoroughly solidified. The oil, thus dissolved, which is of a bright orange colour, is conveyed through a pipe to reservoirs. From these reservoirs it is by chemical processes converted into an odd, brownish-looking substance resembling wax. These processes being completed, the material is again loaded into barges, which are taken up to the branch works at Battersea. Here the discoloration of the material, engendered by the previous processes, is expunged.

From Battersea the material is re-conveyed to Belmont, where, upon being landed, it is taken to the spreading and stripping department. (See Engraving No. 1). Here the purified palm-oil is carried in large troughs to the machine shown in the centre of the illustration, by which it is, in endless lengths, carried against a revolving cutter which shaves it into pieces sufficiently small to pass down the sliding tube, attached to which is a carriage provided with two heavy rollers. Falling upon these carriages, the material is spread upon cocoa fibre mats in layers of an equal thickness, regulated by an iron frame. Each layer of the material is covered with another mat, and, when sufficient masses of these Compo-site sandwiches have been formed, they are conveyed on trucks to the pressing department. In these rooms stand forty-two powerful hydraulic presses, worked by applying steam power to several pairs of pumps, the bands of which are driven up or down by a simple contrivance of the man who superintends the steam-the oleic acid, which, as it is forced from between the mats, trickles down into a vessel placed to receive it. After the mats, with the layers of crystals between them, have been submitted to the stupendous pressure of many hundred tons, and irregularly congealed, by coming in contact with the cool metal of the moulds. During the long time usually found necessary for the solidifying, it crystallized, causing the candles to have a speckled, unequal surface; a small quantity of arsenic was therefore added, which, by combining with the stearic acid, prevented the crystallizing. In the process, however, which was entirely suppressed the arsenic one, the warming of the moulds has removed the necessity of heating up the mats as, which, therefore, is poured in almost at its congealing point; and it would being at the same temperature, the material hardens into one uniform mass, before any crystallization can take place.

The moulding frames, which, prior to this ingression, were described as being wicked, having become sufficiently warm by passing through the heated closet, are raised by a lever to the level of the floor, and the pressing-frame which fills the moulds and fills them and then the frame is pushed upon a carriage and trans ferred to another line of railway, along which it passes to the candle-drawing machine. The operation of this machine is the most curious part of the process. A set of ramrods, provided with a spring catch, which lays hold of the mould-tops, pushes them with the candles attached through the moulds (as pellets are driven through a pea-shooter), and thus by a single effort grasps a whole set of cand es, and wicks the next set. The candles just drawn are held down by a spring cate., and the wicks cut off evenly by a traversing circular knife. These operations are carried on with rapidity. In each of the drawing-machine frames, constituting a candle-machine, there are, when first cottoned, ninety-two rods of wick; therefore, supposing the six machines which we saw at work were started simultaneously with 552 entire length of candles would be made in exhausting one single wicking of the machines!

The candles, as they become released from the moulds by the drawing machine, are conse to the Belmont Candle Company. Viewed from the room, they appear to belong to some unoccupied factory; so much, unfortunately, has the presence of smoke become associated with the notion of a brisk trade; but once within this busy scene, and Mr. Mackinnon will first assure those four apparently idle chimneys are discharging weekly, by night and by day, from Monday morning to Saturday night, the entire combustible products of 160 tons of fuel an furnaces of nine than a thousand-horse power. He would also find that both Jenkin's and Bazeddine's furnaces, which are employed, besides consuming the smoke as fuel, are feeding themselves with the refuse coal of the London market, at a price per ton much below that paid for the ordinary steam coal.

Our readers will be surprised to learn, that there are in active operation the following auxiliaries to the stately manufactory of this establishment: a laboratory, engineers, carpenters, tinmen, coppersmiths, and weavers' shops, forges, a cooperage, a sealing-wax manufactory; and, though last, not least, a steam printing-machine!

The principal part of the buildings in which these multifarious occupations are carried on are of corrugated iron, by which precaution they are rendered nearly fire-proof. In addition to this foresight, copious supplies of water, with hose ready laid, are kept in reserve at various points of the works. We were particularly struck with the cleanly and healthy appearance of the numerous hands employed, which is no small degree attributable to the inodorous shape of the manufactured material, when compared with the nauseous fumes arising from tallow; and, upon the whole, rarely have we visited a manufactory which afforded us so much pleasure as our day at Belmont.

MUSIC.

CLASSICAL CHAMBER MUSIC.

Mr. Willy, the violinist, has commenced, at St. Martin's Hall, a series of six concerts, for the purpose of affording the general public, at very moderate prices, the opportunity of hearing a selection of classical chamber compositions executed by first-rate players. Hitherto, this school of music has been a sealed book to the multitude, albeit well known in the rich and aristocratic circles. Mr. Willy's notion of opening the magnificent stores of instrumental writings for the appreciation of the masses, is a philanthropic one, and deserves every success. The very attempt proves the accuracy of the views so frequently urged in the columns of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, that the patronage of the public may safely be called upon on behalf of the intellectual in art, and that cheap, trivial, and trashy concerts are only sustained because there is no superior entertainment for amateurs with moderate means to resort to. If Mr. Willy's undertaking for chamber music be successful, the organisation of a large orchestra for the effective performance of the grand symphonies and overtures of the great masters will follow in due course.

The programme comprised Haydn's Quartet in D, No. 63, and Mendelssohn's Trio in D minor, op. 49, in the first part; and Beethoven's Sonata in F major, op. 5, and Onslow's Quintet in A minor, in the second part. Mr. Willy led the Quartet of Haydn, Zerbini having the second violin part, Weslake the viola, and Piatti the violoncello. The selection was highly appropriate, as rendered by Willy; and in the detached and brilliant passages of the presto—a movement to which many of our musical hearers are locked in their [illegible] di-

[illegible] before received them. The trio was decidedly played. Stephens Bennett, who performed in this work at the Musical Union, gave a poetic reading to the Mendelssohnian music, on

British farmer to be thus calumniated without stating, in reply that which he knew to be true, that, notwithstanding the disadvantages—and they were numerous—put in their path as to soil and climate, the British farmer had succeeded by his zeal and industry in raising a greater amount of produce than was the case in most parts of the Continent, and even in the United States of America, which had been so roughly cultivated. Was it the fault of the farmer, or of the Government and Parliament, that, during a long series of years, every discouragement had been offered to British industry, and that the farmer could have now no encouragement and inducement to employ things until, sooner or later, he profitably could? Surely the farmers had been encouraged to look for relief only to the landlords, and they were told that this was only a landlord's question. Was it not well known to them all, and proved by experience and calculations, that the rent which no one could dispute, that no reduction could be made by the landlord? And was it not true that rents could not be greatly reduced or considerably diminished without great injury to the fortunes and chances of the tenant? It was a landlord's question, which it certainly was not, he would ask, what crime had the landlords committed, requiring the total confiscation of their property? He contended that the present state of things must, sooner or later, be productive of ruin to the whole of British land. Seeing persons had endeavoured to delude the farmer to hope for better times, and they seemed to think that the burden of the old song—

> Never there are come days
> Waits at the doors would be realised. With far more truth it might be urged upon farmers—

> Worse times are coming, boys,
> Don't wait as they come.

They were asked to wait until the skill and industry which raised the produce of the soil were ruined. Were they to wait until England was reduced to the condition of a Spanish or Portuguese district of land were deserted, and where land of good quality could not at present find a purchaser, even at £1 an acre for its fee simple? He conjured the farmers not to be disheartened or discouraged, but to act with a firm conviction that other times would eventually be crowned with success. They should above all things keep > th' incomparable will,

> And courage never to submit or yield.

(Cheers.) None of them could ever again find support for the great majority of the present House of Commons. (Cheers.) It would therefore be their duty, whenever the opportunity should occur, to remove from their places, which they now so unworthily held, those who had so trampled on their rights, so betrayed their interests, and betrayed their trust. (Cheers.) It was therefore the duty of the people in all parts of the country to call loudly for that which ought not to be refused, which could not, with justice, be withheld—a dissolution of the present House of Commons. Let them speak their sentiments upon this subject in a voice of thunder. Let their demand be heard in the Palace of the Queen, as well as in the Chambers of Parliament. (Cheers.) Let it be known whether those members of Parliament who had violated the trust reposed in them, who had deserted their pledges, and who had broken their promises, would then dare show an unblushing face to the people. (Cheers.) It would then be seen whether the voice of an oppressed and injured people would not have some weight in the House of Commons, and some of its members be induced to alter their votes. Through the exertions of his friend Mr. Young and the society of which he was a member, he looked for brighter and happier days, and the return of that protection which it had been foolishly and falsely said was impossible, but which, he contended, was necessary, was unavoidable, and which could not be obtained, if they would only unite with one heart and hand to say it must be had. (Loud cheers.) The only doubt on his mind was whether protection would precede or would follow revolution; for sure he was, true it justice—and he asked for nothing more than justice—was denied to the most important class in the country, they would in no long time suffer the greatest and most awful calamities which could affect any country a social revolution (Loud cheers.)

Mr. G. F. Young next spoke in support of the resolution, and after adverting to the impossibility of the Englishman competing with the under-paid foreigner, he press-ed to comment upon the effect produced upon the interests of the nation by the application of the doctrines of Free-trade, and he did so because he maintained there was no force in the recommendation they had so often heard—that Free-trade should be allowed to have a fair trial. Free-trade had been tried it had been convicted—it had been condemned (Loud cheers.); it was for the most my now to proceed to execution, and he had no doubt that the people of the country would do it. He had occasion a few days ago to address a letter to a gentleman in reply to one which that gentleman had sent to the newspapers, and then to him; and he must say that it was with no small astonishment he saw his name in the public prints, appended to a letter addressed to the Marquis of Queensberry. His reply had also been sent to the newspapers; and since then he had received a letter from a person with whom he was entirely unacquainted. That gentleman recommended him to call upon the Queen, and implore her to grant a free trial. He had no doubt that if the Queen could be induced

NEW BOOKS, &c.

13 Great Marlborough-street.

MR. COLBURN'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

1.
LIVES of the PRINCESSES of ENGLAND. By Mrs. EVERETT GREEN, editor of the "Letters of Royal and Illustrious Ladies." 2 vols, with Illustrations. 21s bound.

2.
VOL. IX. of THIERS' CONSULATE and EMPIRE UNDER NAPOLEON. Comprising the History of the Events in Spain and Portugal, from the Abdication of Ferdinand VII. and Charles IV., to the Siege of Saragossa. N.B.—Orders should specify "COLBURN'S EDITION."

3.
PASSAGES in the LIFE of Mrs. MARGARET MAITLAND of SUNNY HILL. Written by Herself. "This story creates an absorbing interest, by the deep and masterly touches of nature with which it abounds."—John Bull

4.
LEONARD NORMANDALE; or, The THREE BROTHERS. By the Hon. C. STUART SAVILE. 3 vols. Just Ready.)

NEW and ELEGANT PRESENTS for the YOUNG.

A TREASURY of PLEASURE BOOKS for YOUNG CHILDREN, with upwards of One Hundred Illustrations by John Absolon and H. Weir. Bound in a beautiful ornamental cover, designed by Owen Jones. Price 7s 6d plain, 10s coloured.

TALES OF SCHOOL LIFE, by AGNES LOUDON, author of "Tales for Young People." Illustrated by Absolon. Royal 16mo. 3s 6d plain, 4s 6d coloured.

THE WONDERS OF HOME, in Eleven Stories, by GRANDFATHER GREY. Royal 16mo. 3s 6d plain, 4s 6d coloured. CONTENTS: A Cup of Tea, A Piece of Sugar; Milk Jug; Lump of Coal; Hot Water. A Pin; Jenny's Sash; Harry's Jacket; A Tumbler; A Knife; This Book.

To be had of the proprietor, ARTHUR SKETCHLEY, 23, Mead-place, Lambeth, and of all Booksellers.

PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH, by Post 1s 6d.

RAILWAY LIBRARY (THE). The NEW VOLUMES are PUBLISHED By J. F. COOPER.
PUBLISHED THIS DAY, By Miss AUSTIN.

The Pilot	The Spy
Red Rover	Lionel Lincoln
Last of the Mohicans	Deerslayer (nearly ready)

Sold by HOULSTON and Co., Soho-square; and all Booksellers.

THE PETIT COURRIER DES DAMES; or, JOURNAL of FRENCH FASHIONS and POLITE LITERATURE to receive the above elegant Journal of French Fashion, which arrives from Paris and delivered to the Subscribers every Saturday, at 2s the Quarter, and postage free to all parts of the country. Also, the JOURNAL DES DEMOISELLES on the 15th of the month, at 1s 6d and 1s the year.—24, Southampton-street, Strand.

NEW MONTHLY WORK, by MRS. ELLIS, Author of "Social Duties," "Mothers of England," &c.

Now published the First Number, price 8s, to be continued on the 1st of every month,

MRS. ELLIS'S MORNING CALL; a Table Book of literature and Art being a new and original Miscellany, especially written and arranged for the amusement and instruction of the Ladies of the British Empire. It will be conducted by Mrs. ELLIS, and open with a new work of fiction, written by her in monthly parts, from her admired pen. Tales and Sketches by the ablest writers will also be regularly found in its pages, with which will be further illustrated with engravings from paintings by the most eminent modern artists; embracing everything that can interest the Mother, the Wife, and the Daughter, in connection with the Fine Arts and Elegant Literature

JOHN and FREDERICK TALLIS, London and New York.

Just published, bound in embossed leather, large 8vo, price 25s.

ANCIENT COINS and MEDALS: An Historical Sketch of the Origin and Progress of Coining Money in Greece and her Colonies, its Progress with the Romans, under the Roman Empire, and its Decline with the fall of that Power; by H. N. HUMPHREYS author of "The Coins of England," illustrated by numerous examples of rare and exquisite Greek and Roman Coins, executed by a new process in fac-simile of the originals, in electrotype relief, and in their respective metals

GRANT and GRIFFITH, corner of St. Paul's Churchyard.

Now ready, bound in a beautiful cover, printed in gold and colours, price 8s, quarto, gilt edge (5s 6d postage free).

THE LADY'S ANNUAL and MATRON'S MANUAL of FEMALE WORK.

NEW SERIES for 1850. Consisting of new, elegant, and useful Designs, printed in colours, in Knitting, Netting, Crochet, Raised Cut-work, Braiding, with directions for working the same.

* * Encouraged by the large sale of the former Volume, the proprietors have spared no expense in making the equally deserving of patronage.

GRANT and GRIFFITH, corner of St. Paul's Churchyard.

NATIONAL SOCIETY'S MONTHLY PAPER

CONTENTS OF DECEMBER NUMBER.—Queen's Letter—Grants to Schools and Diocesan Training Institutions—St. Mark's College, Whitelands and Westminster Training Institutions. Organizing Masters—Diocesan Inspection—Sunday Evening Schools. Bath and Wells, Ripon and Limerick Dioceses Boards—Secretaries and Model Training Lost tation on Teaching Etymology—Selection from the Examination Papers for Masters and Mistresses, Easter, 1849—Plan of United Canpes and School-room—Advert sements, &c. Remarks on the Progress of the Paper, with a Table of Subscriptions, and Title and Index to the Numbers for 1849 —The Subscription, 2s 6d, for 1850, payable in advance, will be due on the 1st of January next. Price 2d, by Post, 3d, or 2s 6d a year —National Society's Depository, Westminster

NEW EDITION, 20,000.

Now ready, Price One Shilling; or Post-free, 1s. 8d.,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING-BOOK.

This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of the SPELLING, which accords with the principles experienced by beginners, and by the PLEASING ORIGINAL READING LESSONS, which unite the Instruction of the Child's mind with the whole is ILLUSTRATED by UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects and scenes described, forming by far the most attractive introduction to learning ever published. 144 Pages.)

A few Copies are Coloured, price 1s extra.

Published at the Office of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London. Also of the Booksellers and Newsmen throughout the Kingdom. Supplied for Cash only. Remittances to be made to the Office. On application, terms may be known.

FORTY EDITIONS of ODELL'S SYSTEM of SHORT-HAND, making in all nearly 100,000 copies, have been sold. The 41st Edition is now ready, and can be obtained of any bookseller in town or country.

London. GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, publishers, 5, Paternoster-row.

This day is published, price 8d, post free for 10 stamps, the 41st Edition,

ODELL'S SYSTEM of SHORT-HAND; by which the nature of taking down Sermons, Lectures, Trials, Speeches, &c., may be acquired in a few hours, without the aid of a Master.

A SUPPLEMENT to ODELL'S SHORT-HAND; containing Exercises and more advanced information. Price 8d, post free for 10 stamps

London: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, publishers, 5, Paternoster-row.

BOOKS for PRESENTS.—JOHN FELT begs to call the attention of Heads of Schools, and the Public generally, to his immense Stock of Juvenile, Miscellaneous, and Illustrated Works, suitable for school prizes and birthday presents, in neat and superior bindings, at a great reduction from the published prices. Bibles, Prayer-books, and Church Services, in all sizes and styles. Blank and Scrap-books from 1s to £4 4s. Stationery of every description at the lowest possible prices. 59, Hatton-garden, corner of Ely-place.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS, &c.—THOMAS HOLMES begs to call the attention of the public to his immense Stock of BOOKS, well SUITED for PRESENTS, which he is enabled to offer at very reduced prices. Catalogues are now ready for the season, in all the late improvements in handsome and durable Bindings. At a great reduction in the prices, a large assortment of Books of Illustrations, Standard, Juvenile, and Miscellaneous Works, suitable for Christmas, New Year's, and Holiday Presents. A Catalogue of Books may be had free on receipt of two postage stamps. 76, St. Paul's Churchyard.

TWO HUNDRED STEEL ENGRAVINGS for 8s 6d. These beautiful plates consist of finely executed Views, Portraits, and Figures, from the various Annuals. The impressions are perfect, full-sized, and admirably adapted for Albums, Scrap-ties &c., for Fancy purposes, and form an elegant present. Sent free by post immediately on receipt of a post-office order. JAMES REYNOLDS, Print Warehouse, 174, Strand.

SOYER'S MODERN HOUSEWIFE, or MENAGE. The Publishers beg to acquaint the trade that in a few days they will be able to SUPPLY the remaining ONE-HALF of this work.

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co.; and OLLIVIER, Pall-mall.

BOSCOBEL: A History. The ST. JAMES'S MAGAZINE for November and December contains the whole of this romantic narrative, the only minute and authentic history of King Charles the Second's famous escape

E. CURTICE, Publisher, 24, Holles-street.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK for 1850;

Being the Sixth Annual Issue of this most beautifully embellished and useful Almanack. Illustrated by DUNCAN and other Eminent Artists. The Notes of the Month, by MRS. LOUDON; besides a variety of new and useful Tables, &c. &c. The Astronomical Department by JAMES GLAISHER, Esq., F.R.A.S., and of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.

Published by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, London.

* * Country orders supplied for Cash only.

French Cambric Handkerchiefs, at 6s 6d per dozen.
The Finest Qualities, from 10s 6d to 18s 6d the dozen.
Address,

KING and CO., 243, REGENT-STREET, LONDON

SAMPLES of the above will be forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom, on receipt of 8, 13, or 20 Postage Stamps, according to the Quality required.

BLACK BROCADED POPLINS, at 2s 6d the full dress.
Patterns sent (Postage free) to any part of the Kingdom.
Address, KING and COMPANY, 243, Regent-street.

BLACK FRENCH MERINOES, at 12s 6d the full dress.
The Finest Quality at 25s the full dress.
Patterns sent Postage free KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

BLACK BROCADED SATINS, at 30s the full dress
The Richest Quality, at 45s the full dress
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO , 243, Regent-street.

BLACK GLACE SILKS, at 19s 6d the full Dress.
The Richest Qualities at 27s 6d
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO , 243, Regent-street.

BLACK WATERED SILKS, at 25s the full Dress.
The Richest Qualities, at 45s
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO , 243, Regent-street.

BLACK FRENCH SATINS, at 30s the full dress.
The Richest Quality, at 3 Guineas
Patterns sent Postage free. KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

BLACK GROS DE COSSE, Gros Royals, and Widows' Silks, at the full Dress
Patterns sent Postage free KING and CO , 243, Regent-street.

THE CATTLE-SHOW.—Visitors to the Cattle-Show are invited to inspect the Stock of Messrs. HALL and JEFFS, Tarpaulin Manufacturers, who have just manufactured a set of fashionable shepherd's Plaids, at 13s 6d each, and Cuffs to match, at 6s 6d per pair; all warranted made from full-seasoned skins

HALL and JEFFS, 276, Regent-street (opposite Hanover-street)

COURT MOURNING.—CHARLES VYSE begs to inform his numerous Patronesses that his STOCK for the present lamentable occasion is replete with all the newest designs and which he assures them will be charged the lowest possible price

CHARLES VYSE, 59, Conduit-street, St. Regent-street.

CHARLES VYSE solicits the attention of his numerous patronesses to his entire NEW STOCK of WINTER BONNETS. C. V. would likewise call their notice to the newest bonnet that has been produced this season, viz. the HUNGARIAN, which, for its elegance and novelty, will be one of the most fashionable and select bonnets of the season. CHARLES VYSE, Ladies'-hatter, 59, St Paul's N B. Trimmed bonnets sent into the country carriage free. A fashion has just appeared in the MOURNING BONNETS. Patterns supplied with first-rate PATTERN BONNETS at ready wholesale prices

DAMASK TABLE-LINEN, as EXHIBITED to the QUEEN and PRINCE ALBERT, at the LINEN-HALL, BELFAST, on the 11th of August, 1849

The Irish Linen Damask Co., Hart-street, Bloomsbury-square, are now receiving their first supply of Damask Table-Linen from Patterns exhibited to her Majesty at the Linen-Hall, and will continue to import like other Patterns as manufactured

Household Linens, Sheetings of ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTCH Manufacture, always kept in stock; also, the best fabrics in WELSH Flannels. Depôt for Sedan and other Towelling.

Established 1800

KING and SHEATH, Silkmercers, &c., 264, REGENT-STREET, have just received, SURPASSED PARTNERSHIP.

W. SHEATH is now SELLING OFF the VALUABLE STOCK, Consisting of Silks, Shawls, Velveta, Lace, Furniture, Orders to any Extent Linens, Sheetings, &c., &c., at EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS For the convenience of Ladies in the Country, Patterns will be forwarded

Address, W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

MOURNING SILKS.
Black Glacés Silks, 19s 6d to 42s 6d the full dress.
Black French Merinoes, 12s 6d to 25s the full dress.
Rich Black Watered Silks, at 42s the full dress
Rich Black Satins, at 30s to 70s 6d the full dress
Rich Brocaded Satins, at 42s 6d to 63s the full dress
Patterns sent postage free. Address, W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

WHITE, PINK, and SKY GLACE SILKS, at 21s the full dress.
The Richest Four-de Soies, at 25s 6d to 42s the full Dress
Patterns Postage free. W. W. SHEATH, 264 Regent-street.

WEDDING, DINNER, and WALKING DRESSES.
Rich Brocaded Glacés, 25s 6d to 42s 6d the full dress
Very Rich Brocaded Satins, the richest, 42s 6d the full dress
The Richest Imperials, Patent Dyes, 10s 6d to 12s 6d
Usual 5 gold at 8 guineas Patterns sent Postage free.
Address, W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN.
Established in 1778.

LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN, and WEDDING and GENERAL OUTFITS for HOME, INDIA, and the COLONIES.

JOHN CAPPER and SON, 60, Grasschurch-street, LONDON, have a Separate Department under competent Female superintendence. The prices are economical, the materials and needlework excellent.

BABY LINEN,

of superior work, decidedly cheap.

Families of £3 and upwards, in the United Kingdom, have all their sailaway carriage.

LISTS, with PRICES, sent POST-PAID

on application.

BONNETS.—PARISIAN MILLINERY.—To Cash Purchasers, wishing to avoid the charges of Private Milliners.—Compare the following prices:—Rich Gumos Silk Velvet Bonnets, all colours, Gen. &c., complete, 5s each. Rich Velvet and French Satin or Glacés Silk, all colours, 12s 9d to 16s 9d. Mourning Satin or Glacés, rich trimmed, latest fancy, 12s 9d to 13s 6d. Widows' Bonnets, with double crape veil, 13s 6d to 17s 6d. Fine Velvet Bonnets, Paris Shape, 16s 9d each. Ladies' White Muslin Caps, the new shape, 2s 11d to 3s 11d. More fashionable or more becoming Parisian Caps for general wear cannot be had. The largest Stock in London to select from. Country Milliners supplied with pattern Bonnets enough for each county, at CHARGUOIS and HOGG, No. 39, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square. Proprietors, R. WOOKEY and CO.

PRESENTS FOR CHRISTMAS.
PRESENTS for MOTHERS, SISTERS, and DAUGHTERS.
PRESENTS for WIVES
PRESENTS for AUNTS, NIECES, and COUSINS.

The choicest, newest, and neatest gift is one of CAPPER and SON'S LADIES CUTLERY CASES, fitted with their Celebrated Plantagenet Manufactures, namely, Best Steel Knife, Scissors, Bodkin, Stiletto (pearl handle), Silver Thimble, Pencil Case, &c., in a superior box. All warranted. Prices, 15s, 21s, and upwards.

C. STEWART and Co.,
22, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

The above will be sent to any part on receipt of the amount by Post-office Order. Gentlemen's Dressing Case containing, also, Crochet Needle (with pearl handle), &c., and makes an elegant and appropriate present.

It gives us pleasure to draw attention to the exquisite superiority and finish of Stewart's Cutlery.—Morning Herald.

PRESENTS FOR CHRISTMAS.
PRESENTS for FATHERS, SONS, and BROTHERS.
PRESENTS for HUSBANDS
PRESENTS for UNCLES, NEPHEWS, and COUSINS.
PRESENTS for the BLIND, NERVOUS, and PARALYSED.
PRESENTS for the LEARNED, and BED RIDDEN

The newest table gift to an Aged, Blind, Nervous Parent, is a Bed-Reading Candlestand Fitted in a pair of STEWART'S CELEBRATED PLANTAGENET GOLD HANDLES, Ivory Handles, Bronzed finish, in an elegant box, look and key. Price One Guinea; Post-free, 21s.

How Razors can be used in bed, in the dark, or on ship-board, and how with ease, safety, and expedition, effectually remove the beard, and look cut the skin. Those who have never shaved previously can now shave themselves

C. STEWART and Co., Painters,
22, CHARING-CROSS, LONDON.

Description, particulars and testimonials, and list of Country Agents sent free.

"With this simple improvement upon the Razor in ordinary use, the most nervous or timid person may shave without the smallest fear of injuring the face."—Morning Post.

NEW MUSIC.

LE PROPHETE.—The celebrated MARCH from METERBEER'S Grand Opera, LE PROPHETE, for the Pianoforte, by J. HERZ, 3s.; also the favourite Airs from the same popular work, by W. H. CALLCOTT, 3s. The QUADRILLES and WALSES, arranged by JULLIEN

CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 67, Conduit-street.

VIELKA; or, The Camp of Silesia. By METERBEER. VAL D'ANDORRE, by BALFEY. KING CHARLES the SECOND, by MACFARREN.—the Music of the above popular Operas, and various arrangements of the Airs, for the Pianoforte, CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 67, Conduit-street.

MISS CATHERINE HAYES.—The SONGS and BALLADS sung by the above distinguished vocalist—"Adieu, with love," by W. Howard; "Why do I weep for thee?" by W. V. Wallace; and "Oh, say you love me truly," by G. Linley. Also, the favourite cavatina, "O vane pompe," sung by Miss Hayes at her Majesty's Concerts, Buckingham Palace.—CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 67, Conduit-street

"SHE SHINES BEFORE ME LIKE A STAR," Ballad from Macfarren's Opera "King Charles the Second." "As she shines before me like a star," may be presented as the model of what a ballad ought to be."—Times, October 29 "The ballad, 'She shines before me like a star,' is a perfect gem of melody."—Daily News, October 29

CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

CHEAP MUSIC.—New Music, bound in volumes, of every kind, 8d in marks; price, selling at 3s (baresé works of Herz, Jullien, Verdi, Rossini, and all the first masters, at half-price and quarter price. Vast choice of new pieces at 6d and 8d, music of all new operas on terms this only competition. Every description of new and choice music kept, all warranted correct and perfectly printed —WALKER'S, 17, Soho-square, the old cheap shop, established 60 years. New Catalogue by post on receipt of two stamps.—17, Soho-square.

PIANOFORTES, the best of every description, English and Foreign, for SALE and HIRE, at CRAMER, BEALE, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES.—TOLKIEN'S splendid-toned Piccolos, with 6½ octaves, C. G. Fall, Metallic Plate, only 25 guineas. Parties requiring a first-rate instrument for a little money will do well to call at TOLKIEN'S old established house, 27, 28, and 29, King William-street, London-bridge. Drawings of the instruments sent free by post. Old instruments taken in exchange.

ST. GEORGE'S CHESS CLUB, READING and NEWS ROOMS, 5, CAVENDISH-SQUARE, in connexion with the ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION Annual Subscription, Entrance Guineas, which includes access to the Library and Exhibitions. No entrance fee or liability The Rules and Regulations, with a List of the Members, may be obtained on application to Mr. R. I. LONGBOTTOM, Secretary.

MONEY.—A Gentleman is entrusted with the money of a large capitalist to INVEST in large or small sums, upon Government or Landed Property, Annuities, Life Interests, &c.; also upon the Personal Security of Noblemen and Gentlemen. N.B. Reversions purchased. Applications to be addressed to Mr. CHARLES ALLEN, 19, Regent-street, Waterloo-place.

BRACELETS, Brooches, Mantle Fasteners, and Shawl Pins, exquisitely made in PARIAN and PORCELAIN, suitable for Christmas Presents.—A list sent (on receipt of a stamp) from the MART HOUSE, 44, Jamaica-street, Stepney.

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWINGROOM, LIBRARY, and DINING-ROOM.—Mr CENNANT, 149 Strand, near Somerset House, has just received a new and elegant assortment of Groups, Figures, Busts, Chimney Ornaments, Candelabra, Inkstands, Tables, Paper-weights, &c., in Italian A abaster, Marble, Bronze, &c.

GOLD and SILVER WATCHES.—SARL and SONS, Watchmakers, 18, Cornhill (opposite the Royal Exchange), respectfully invite attention to their very extensive and superior Stock of Watches, which they continue to manufacture lower than any House in the Trade. A Warranty accompanies every Watch. Pamphlets, containing Sketches and Prices, gratis

A HANDSOME PRESENT.—A GOLD WATCH and fine GOLD CHAIN, fitted complete in a morocco case, for £4 4s. Every article warranted. Sent to any part. The watch is as follows: Double-banked gold case, gold dial, horizontal movement, four holes jewelled, maintaining power, capped, bezel being round, and all recent improvements. A written warranty given, and a twelvemonth's trial allowed. Sent to any part. Observe, SARL and SONS, Watch Manufacturers, 18, Cornhill, opposite the New Royal Exchange.—N.B. These elegant presents can be forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom, with the usual caution on order for the amount

SARL'S ARGENTINE SILVER PLATE.—SARL and SONS, 18, Cornhill, solicit a perusal of the splendid retail, which continues to stand unrivalled amongst all the substitutes for silver. The magnificent steel that lately been supplied with many splendid novelties in dinner, tea, and dessert services. The spoon and fork department includes every pattern usually made for Silver. Orders to any Extent Linens, Sheetings, &c., &c., at EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS For the convenience of Ladies in the Country, Patterns will be forwarded

Pamphlets, with sketches and prices, can be obtained gratis at the Manufactory, 18, Cornhill.

DESSERT FRUIT KNIVES and FORKS.—SARL and SONS, 18, Cornhill, (opposite the Royal Exchange), invite attention to their new and splendid assortment of the above—which are manufactured by the most eminent Sheffield Cutlers, of outstanding season. They may be had in sets of 12 or 18 pairs, with or without silver ferrules, commencing at £2 12s the set of 12. Pamphlets may be obtained gratis

ELECTRO and SHEFFIELD PLATE.—The Catalogue of Prices, with Drawings of Silver Plated Dish Covers, Hot-water Dishes, Stoves, Fenders, Kitchen Ranges, Tin Baths, Table, Is published, and may be had gratis, or will be sent postage free, on application to the Manufactory, 39, Oxford-street, (corner of RATHBONE-PLACE). Catalogues sent to Merchants and Shippers for Exportation.

SILVER PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS beg to call the attention of customers to the reduced prices at which they are now selling the best wrought London-made SILVER SPOONS and FORKS, and Silver Tea and Coffee Services. The Pamphlet, illustrated by drawings, and containing the weights and prices of the various articles required in family use, may be had on application, or will be sent, post free, to any part of Great Britain, Ireland, or the Colonies.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet explaining the various constructions, and the advantages of each, with a List of Prices, will be forwarded, Gratis, by post, if applied for to SAVORY and SONS, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank. Watches, &c., sent to any part of the World.

THE NEW FISH CARVING KNIVES and FORKS.—T. COX SAVORY and Co. respectfully inform their customers that they have a large STOCK of the above useful articles of their own manufacture, in Ivory, Buffalo, and Stag Handles, ready for use from 25s. the pair, in silver from 84s. the pair. A pamphlet containing drawings of the above in all the various sizes may be had gratis on application, or will be sent by post free of charge. T. COX SAVORY and Co., 47, Cornhill, London, seven doors from Gracechurch-street.

THE NEW FISH CARVING KNIVES and FORKS.—T. COX SAVORY and Co. respectfully inform their customers that they have a large STOCK of the above useful articles of their own manufacture, in Ivory, Buffalo, and Stag Handles, ready for use from 25s. the pair, in silver from 84s. the pair. A pamphlet containing drawings of the above in all the various sizes may be had gratis on application, or will be sent by post free of charge. T. COX SAVORY and Co., 47, Cornhill, London, seven doors from Gracechurch-street.

ROYAL PAPIER MACHE WORKS and SHOW-ROOMS. JENNENS and BETTRIDGE, Manufacturers to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. Prince Albert, and to the Royal Family, 6, Halkin-street West, Belgrave-square, London; and 99, Constitution-hill, Birmingham.—N.B. An immense assortment of Papier Mache Trays always on hand, of which are especially adapted for Presentation

THE FINE ART SUBSCRIPTION GALLERY, 26, Pall-mall, for LOAN of WORKS of ART.—The Directors respectfully invite the Patrons of Art to view their Subscription Gallery for the Issue of Works of Art. Every department will contribute examples to the Collection.—Landscape, Figure, Animal, Portrait, Still Life, Fruit, Architecture, Ornamental and Decorative Designs, and the Choicest Works of the principal Water Colour Painters. The Terms, which have been arranged to meet all classes, will be forwarded, post-paid, to all parts of the Kingdom. 24 and 26, Rathbone-place.

VOTES of THANKS, &c., displayed on Vellum, in imitation of the finest Engraving, and Embossed by BUNNING and CO., Wedding Stationers, &c. SPECIMENS BOOKS of Engraving for the Trade, on application (or sent to any part of the Kingdom), free from Stamps. Chaste Crests, Cyphers, Arms, Public Bills of Exchange and Lading, Invoice Headings, Cards, Seals, Dies, Door Plates, and Presses. WEDDING and VISITING CARDS, &c. Terms, which have been arranged to meet all classes, will be forwarded, post-paid, to all parts of the Kingdom. 24 and 26, Rathbone-place.

VOTES of THANKS, &c., displayed on Vellum, in imitation of the finest Engraving, and Embossed by BUNNING and CO., Wedding Stationers, &c. SPECIMENS BOOKS of Engraving for the Trade, on application (or sent to any part of the Kingdom), free from Stamps. Chaste Crests, Cyphers, Arms, Public Bills of Exchange and Lading, Invoice Headings, Cards, Seals, Dies, Door Plates, and Presses. WEDDING and VISITING CARDS, &c. Terms, which have been arranged to meet all classes, will be forwarded, post-paid, to all parts of the Kingdom. 24 and 26, Rathbone-place.

LATE GEORGE and BRADLEY,
SILKMERCERS, FROM HOLYWELL-STREET
Mr. GEORGE RETIRING FROM BUSINESS.

JOHN GEORGE, late of Holywell-street, begs leave respectfully to remind his numerous patrons and the public that his agreement with Messrs. WHITE and FINLEY, his successors, compels him to close the present Stock on the house premises, on or before JANUARY NEXT; and as there is a portion of the Stock still remaining, he begs to state that the Prices will be reduced to ensure an immediate sale

The present Stock comprises a quantity of rich Garment Satins, Plain Gauze and Foreign Silks, Black and Coloured English and Foreign Velvets, Irish Poplins, Plain and Embroidered Merino Dresses, Silk Skirts, Mantles, and Wos. Shawls, and a large lot of Printed Cashmere and Barege Dresses and shawls, at HALF-PRICE. To Ladies purchasing any of the above articles this will be found an opportunity seldom to be met with, as J. G. trusts that the long standing and good reputation of his house will be a sufficient guarantee of this being a bona fide sale

Every article necessary for FAMILY or COMPLIMENTARY MOURNING

THE SALE IS NOW ON, AT 194 REGENT-STREET

TRELOAR'S COCOA-NUT-FIBRE MATTING WAREHOUSE, 43, Ludgate-hill. There are many worthless imitations for the best article of genuine fabric is that manufactured and sold by T. TRELOAR, 42 Ludgate hill

FOUR FIRES FOR ONE PENNY, by EDWARDS'S PATENT FIREWOOD.—Sold by all oilmen and grocers. 36d delivered to the carrier, on receipt of a post-office order for 1s, payable to THOMAS STEVENSON.—18, Wharf-road, City-road.

PISTOLS.—The best and most complete Stock of every description of Holster, Belt, and Pocket Pistols, Sporting Rifles, Fowling Pieces, Powder Flasks, Shot-belts, Percussion Caps, Wads, &c., from the trade, are kept at MANTON'S Manufactory, 23, Davies-street, Berkeley-square.

BRETT'S SAMPLE HAMPERS of SPIRITS, 20s each.—These favourite little packages have every year improved in their contents, and this TWENTY-FIRST Annual Presentation certainly exceeds all that have gone before it! Delivered in London, or forwarded to any part of the country, for a Sovereign.—HENRY BRETT and Co., Old Furnival's Inn, Holborn.

STANDARD or NATURAL SHERRY, pure, fruity flavour, and unadulterated, 36s per dozen. Rich Dalt's Port, strong crusted, 42s: also, at 42s, with strong cruste, and beeswing and a fine Sherry, 30s; Cold Pale, 36s. 1841 Champagne, in imperials or cases, 42s; pints, 24s. Cash. Carriage-free. THOMAS DAKIN, 21, St Lawrence-lane, Cheapside, City.—Milk Punch 9s

OYSTERS.—The REAL BURNHAM NATIVE OYSTERS, in fine condition, from the beds, are packed fresher and travel better than any Oysters from London. To be had only of JOHN SWEETING, Fish and Oyster Merchant, 109, Cheapside, City. Sent to any part of the kingdom, &c. The 5s. Superior Oyster Rooms. Stood's Baldoon Ale. Reid's Stout. Depot for Patent Knife-Cleaners, Wimbush's Blacking, &c.

ALPACA UMBRELLAS.—The economy, both in the cost and wear of this umbrella, has been fully borne out by the use and experience of the last eighteen months, and which is testified by the numerous testimonials which continues to be bestowed upon it. It may be obtained of most umbrella dealers in the United Kingdom, from 5s. 6d.—and at J. SANGSTER, 140, Regent-street; 94, Fleet-street; 10, Royal Exchange; 75, Cheapside.

NEWTON'S GLOBES.—Patronised by her Majesty and Prince Albert.—The nobility, gentry, and public in general are respectfully informed that Messrs. NEWTON have constantly on sale a large assortment of GLOBES of all sizes and kinds of mounting, varying from 5 inches to 12 guineas per pair; smaller sizes, suitable for presents, at from 2s to 30s each; School Globes, 12 inches in diameter, on an improved principle, 3 guineas per pair. Manufactory, 66, Chancery-lane.

CHUBB'S LOCKS and FIREPROOF SAFES. —CHUBB'S PATENT LOCKS give perfect security from false keys, and are to detect any attempt to open them. CHUBB'S PATENT FIREPROOF BOXES are the best preservative of Deeds, books, plate, &c. from fire and thieves. Cash-boxes and Japan Deed-Boxes, and Street-Door-Latches.—C. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

HUNTING COATS.—HOLYLAND'S new Coat, combining great style, superior quality, and of great durability, namely THE BERKELEY, at the reduced price of Three Guineas. Also a novel and stylish article, the CHESTWOLD HUNTING WAISTCOAT.—HOLYLANDS, 150, Strand, Lists of reduced prices for cash, to meet the present urgent demand for economy. Two doors west of Somerset House.

SIX VERY SUPERIOR SHIRTS for 26s., from the best and largest stock in London.—A choice of 200 patterns as coloured Shirts, Six for £1; or Six best quality, made to measure, 30s. Satisfaction (or the cash guaranteed, or the money returned. Printed priced lists, with directions for self-measurement, post-free. HODGKIN and Co., Shirt-Makers and inventors of the Self-measuring Shirt, 67, Fleet-street (the best fitting Shirt in the world), 69, St. Martin's lane (corner of New-street).—Established 50 years.

THE CORAZZA SHIRT,—CAPPER and WATERS having given great attention to perfecting the Shirt, can recommend it as the most perfect combination of comfort and economy. Any gentleman can have the Corazza or any other form of Shirt, by measuring directly round the neck, round the wrist, round the chest; 3, round the waist; 4, round the wrists; 5, the height of the wearer. Any length of sleeve, body, or wrist. Four linen fronts, cuffs, and wrists, 8s to 12s each; good Linen Shirts, 10s to 12s each; additional Shirts for Dress Shirts, from 3s to 45 each.—26, Regent-street, St. James's, London.

THE EIDER DOWN QUILT is the warmest, the lightest, and the most elegant covering; it is suitable for the Bed, the Couch, or the Carriage, and is comfort to invalids cannot be too highly appreciated. To be seen in great variety, and Lists of Prices and Sizes sent free, by Post, on application to HEAL and SONS' Bedding Factory, 196 (opposite the Chapel), Tottenham Court-road, London.

GREY GOOSE FEATHERS, 1s. per lb.—HEAL and SONS never so cheap as at present. HEAL and SONS' present Prices are:

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Poultry	0	9	Best Grey Goose	1	0
Grey Goose	1	0	White ditto	2	2
Foreign (Mixed)	1	2	Best Hungarian ditto ..	2	6

Purified by Steam, and warranted sweet and free from dust.

Heal and Son's Bedding, containing the particulars of weights, sizes, and prices, sent free by Post, on application to their Factory, 196, Tottenham Court-road, London.

CLARK'S PATENT ELONGATING DRESS-BOX, presenting the combined advantages of convenience, comfort, and durability. May be put into a taken off without using the hands, is perfectly waterproof, will not collect dust, and is lighter than any other box. Is elegant in appearance, and does not project at the side of the coach. May be had of all shoemakers on enquiry for Clark's Goloch. Manufactured by C. and J. CLARK, Street, near Glastonbury. London Office, 1, Regent-street City-road.

DEAFNESS.—LADIES' HEAD-DRESS.—The MIMOSA, or FLOWER CORNET, may be worn with Walking, Dinner, and Evening Dress.—W. PINE has perfected and registered this elegant and efficient Ear-Flower, which may be worn without detection, with all the advantages of an Ear-Trumpet.—To be obtained only of Mr. W. PINE, 352, Strand, one door from Wellington-street, the sole Inventor and Manufacturer, suited to every degree of deafness, with all other acoustic impediments, at various prices.

IMPROVED RESPIRATOR (Roof's Patent, for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, and DELICATE THROATS, has separate channels for the inspired and expired air, warms and purifies the atmosphere before it is received into the lungs, and is particularly recommended for the easy respiration it permits. It neither requires cleaning nor repairing, and is made resembling a handkerchief, folded in the pocket. Testimonials to be seen and directions sent on application. Depot, 183, Strand, near Norfolk-street.

THE REGISTERED IRON COT.—These Cots are made with moveable sides of perforated metal, in imitation of basket-work, affording a perfect and very handsome Bed for Children of all ages. They are strongly recommended for the elegance of their appearance, for their durability, and their entire safety from even the youngest children. A large Assortment of Iron and Brass Bedsteads, made with the Patent Sacking, and all the late Improvements. The German Spring Mattress, and every description of Bedding. JENNENS and BETTRIDGE, Manufacturers, 313, Oxford-street, adjoining Hanover-square; and 3, Queen-street, Cheapside.—Price Lists, with Engravings, forwarded on application

PAPER HANGINGS and ENAMELLED DECORATIONS. By Royal Letters Patent.—E. ARCHER, 451, Oxford-street, invites the inspection and patronage of his suite of SHOW-ROOMS, which are replete with the most recherché Decorations adapted for the Drawingroom, Dining-room, Boudoir, &c. The Rooms are also elegantly furnished with every article of utility and elegance, and each article marked in plain figures the price. There are also Workmen constantly on the premises, by E. T. A.'s Patent Machinery, Paper-Hangings of every class and for every purpose to use. Also kept, a large stock of superior Continents. Paper-Hangings by the best makers. Second-hand Patterns Paper for Halls; and the Trade supplied. Paper and Oak Paper of excellent quality, 1d per yard. P.S.—The Trade liberally treated.—451, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON

ELEGANT TOILETTE REQUISITES, each of Jodaliide Attributes -ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL is highly and universally appreciated for creating and sustaining luxuriant tresses. ROWLAND'S KALYDOR is a preparation of unparalleled efficacy in improving and beautifying the Skin and Complexion, and ROWLAND'S ODONTO or Pearl Dentifrice, is celebrated for its beautifying and preservative effects on the Teeth and Gums. The patronage of Royalty throughout Europe, and the numerous testimonials constantly received of their efficacy, afford the best and surest proof of their merits BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS. Some are offered under a similarity of name, and sold by Perfumers and Hairdressers, with similar attempts at deception. The only genuine of each have the Name and Address "ROWLAND

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 403.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

THE WANTS OF GREAT CITIES.

THERE are many monopolies established in the public interest, and which depend solely for their existence upon the public toleration of them as necessary evils. Monopolies are things so odious that no excuse can justify them, except the consideration that by their means great objects are achieved which could not otherwise be accomplished. Of this class of monopolies, that of the supply of water to large towns and cities is at once the most important and the most abominable. No civilised community could tolerate the trade of one great baker, or miller, or butcher, charging his own price, and raising the market at his own pleasure; yet the people of our large towns have hitherto endured the equally pernicious monopoly of the water merchants—of men who dole out to us a scanty supply of one of the first necessaries of existence—who charge us a famine price for liquid filth, and deprive us of our healthful and requisite share of the greatest as well as the commonest of all natural blessings, pure water.

Originally, the water monopolists were public benefactors. They undertook, in their corporate capacity, and at great risk, the task which private enterprise was unwilling or unable to accomplish. They may, not unreasonably, allege the hardship, after success has crowned their enterprise, that they should be deprived of the profit for which they speculated, and held up to public odium for doing what none else at the time had spirit and courage to do. But every monopolist may make a similar claim. There never was a monopoly that did not entrench itself, either upon a service rendered, a sum paid, or a prescriptive right. But the public necessity, which is the growth of time and circumstance, is superior to all these; and no monopoly ought to be endured in a civilized country if its operation is to shorten or impair life—to create a nuisance or a pestilence—or to deprive mankind of the healthy enjoyment of their animal functions. Ancient communities understood these things better than modern ones. It is a strange chapter in the history of civilisation, that, in the middle of the nineteenth century, the largest, most populous, and most refined city in the world should not have arrived at such a degree of intelligence as to make the supply of water to the people a matter of municipal, and not of private arrangement.

Private enterprise, with the spur of cupidity in its side, has, no doubt, been able to achieve many things which might otherwise have remained unaccomplished. But it begins to be understood that there are some things which private enterprise cannot touch with safety, and that there are municipal, as well as individual and national rights which require the most jealous supervision on the part of a people having any real claims to freedom or to civilisation.

So much evil has been done by our acquiescence in this cruel monopoly—so many lives have been lost—so much disease has been generated—so much vice and immorality have been clearly traced to its operation, that the people have at length opened their eyes wide enough to measure it in its whole magnitude; and it is now very generally acknowledged that an abundant supply of wholesome water should, strictly speaking, be a matter of sanatory and municipal police, not of trade; and that communities ought no more to be at the mercy of speculators for water, than for light and air and permission to breathe.

It is difficult, however, to uproot a monopoly like this—which is not supported by any statutory enactment, but which simply exists by its own weight and antiquity, and its occupation of a field unoccupied by others. Such a monopoly in private individuals can only be combated successfully by the creation of a legal monopoly, vested in the public. Every well-regulated city should monopolise certain functions and duties, and suffer no intrusion upon them. In all civic and sanatory purposes there should be no divided rule. But before a city like London can exercise powers so great, it must itself exist as one community and as one corporation—with one jurisdiction and with one authority co-extensive with its boundaries. But there is in fact no such place as municipal London. It does not exist even as an idea. The old City is a mere fragment, and its Lord Mayor is a nobody, who can only exercise such petty powers as he has within a very narrow boundary, and without reference to the wants or necessities of the far more important agglomerations of towns that hem it in on every side. For all useful purposes the old City is obsolete—Elizabethan London is not the London of the age of Victoria. We think, however, that the time is fast approaching when for all sanatory and municipal purposes, for drainage, sewerage, gas-lighting, police, water supply, and local self-government of every kind, no difference of size or jurisdiction between the city of London and the metropolis of Great Britain ought to be permitted; and when Southwark, Lambeth, Westminster, Marylebone, Finsbury, the Tower Hamlets, and all the immense out-lying districts, with their population of two millions, should be included with the city of London in one grand municipality, governed severally by their Mayors or Sub-Mayors, popularly elected and popularly responsible. Then, and then only, may the inhabitants hope that sanatory precautions will be complete, that the Thames will be unpolluted, that water will be abundant in the houses of the poorest, that the burial of the dead among the living will be entirely prevented, and that London will be a well-governed and healthy city. Vestries and local boards are very useful bodies in their way; but the manner in which they manage the public interests in some of the monster parishes of London, is not such as to encourage the idea of their immaculateness, or to prevent us from desiring their abolition, and the substitution, in their room, of a more responsible authority. The squabbles of parish with parish, of vestry with vestry, and of board with board—the clashing of contending jurisdictions, and the perpetual surging and heaving of local jealousies and animosities, stand constantly in the way of improvement. Our sanatory reformers must not lose sight of this subject. The growth of London is one of the most extraordinary things in an extraordinary age, and care must be taken that it do not increase in filth and unwholesomeness as it increases in size, and that its polluted and poisoned river, its contaminated atmosphere—foul with the abominations both of the living and the dead —do not at last render it unfit for human habitation. To remove these various evils, a large and centralised authority is needed, with power to tax and to untax, and to abolish all private monopolies in water, in gas, in paving, in sewerage—to equalise poor-rates, and to make the labour of paupers available for street cleansing, and other sanatory purposes. This is the great necessity of the metropolis—a necessity that will grow with its growth, and increase with the millions of its population.

CLASS I.—NO. 19.—MR. E. JONES'S HEREFORD OX.—£30 PRIZE, AND SILVER AND GOLD MEDALS. CLASS VI.—NO. 80.—MR. J. ROB'S WEST HIGHLAND OX.—£10 PRIZE.—(SEE PAGE 388)

SMITHFIELD CLUB CATTLE-SHOW.

In this respect London should be a municipal republic, preserving to the fullest extent the right of self-government, but concentrating authority in order to economise it. The genius of English people is eminently municipal and local; but, for all purposes except that of electing members to Parliament in the various boroughs of which this mighty metropolis is composed, the genius of the people finds no room for its display. The people have no effective control over their own affairs; they are the prey of jobbers and monopolists. Their substance is wasted, their health is impaired, their comfort is destroyed in a thousand vexatious ways, and they are powerless to help themselves.

The present has been called "the age of great cities." It is high time that something should be done to prevent great cities from becoming great nuisances, and to secure to their inhabitants those local and civic rights, which are far more important for their welfare, for their health, and for their good government, than those merely political privileges for which the people are most clamorous. While water and light are only sold at famine prices, while pestilence is to be had for the seeking, and while the paupers of one parish is maintainable for one shilling in the pound, and that of the parish adjoining cannot be fed under five shillings, we cannot but think that a large municipal reform is needed to introduce something like an equality of burdens, and to make London a wholesome and a comfortable residence. It is high time that the proper distinction should be drawn between civic and national requirements—that the public should look after the public interest—that the tasks which cannot be accomplished in detail should be undertaken in the gross, and that the health of whole communities should cease to be at the mercy of interested monopolists and jobbers on the one hand, or of ignorant though well-meaning obstructives on the other. Such a reform would, doubtless, be a large and a startling one, but that is no reason why it should not be undertaken.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

There is no intelligence of importance from Paris. A grand dinner was given by the Prefect of the Seine to the President of the Republic, on Monday, to commemorate the President's election, that day being its anniversary. Upon the health of the latter being drunk, Louis Napoleon referred to the year that had expired, during which period he had held the chief rule. He said he felt proud that by the assistance of those Ministers who had surrounded him he had been able to maintain the law intact, and to preserve tranquility without recourse to violence. He trusted that the forthcoming year would be more fertile in happy results, of which he could have no doubt, feeling assured that men of heart and intelligence would unite together to establish the eternal principles of religion and morality, as well as the new rules of a sound policy. Loud applause followed the conclusion of the President's speech. The banquet was succeeded by a ball. A brilliant crowd thronged every part of the vast building. Upwards of 6000 invitations had been issued, and the rooms were at one time so full that it was difficult to move. The President of the Republic, attended by the Prefect and the municipal council, frequently promenaded the rooms until a late hour, conversing affably with several parties

On Monday evening a petition was presented to the Assembly from Marseilles for the better observance of the Sabbath, after a good deal of conversation, the petition was referred to the Minister of Justice.

In the Assembly, on Tuesday, M. Baune attacked the Minister of War for his late circular to the police, ordering them to supply him with confidential reports on the conduct of official persons, and also on the general disposition of the public so far as coming within their observation.

The Minister of War defended himself, by referring to the same practice which had been adopted by all preceding Governments, and also upon its being strictly constitutional.

Col. Charras declared that the conduct of the Minister of War was inquisitorial, and encouraged imaginary discoveries.

The order of the day was moved, and voted by 378 to 202, thus giving a majority to Ministers of 176.

The Minister of Finance has brought before the Assembly his motion for the re-establishment of the impost on spirituous liquors. He contends that there has been no outcry against it, and that, if it be rejected, he knows not of any measure which can supply its place; for as income-tax has been already repudiated by the Assembly and the country. He stated that fifty-eight provincial towns had expressed themselves favourable to the reimposition of the tax.

Ministers calculate upon a large majority in their favour on the question.

A practical exemplification of what is understood among the peasants by Socialism was given lately at Mouzeuil (Vendée), by a small number of persons, who commenced digging up the land, with the view of dividing it into equal portions among themselves. The sub-prefect and an armed force quickly repaired to the spot, and captured the whole party.

Some members of the Montagne have presented a proposition to the National Assembly, to the effect that, in order to make up the deficit which would be caused by the abolition of the tax on potable liquors, a patriotic donation should be made until new receipts be created; such donation, however, to be limited to the year 1850, and be received by the collectors of the ordinary taxes.

Mr. Robert Stephenson, the English engineer, has been made a Knight of the Order of the Legion of Honour. He is a gentleman; it will be remembered, made the surveys for the Northern Railway.

ITALIAN STATES.

The only quarter from which any news comes is Rome, and even that is of an uncertain character. On the 4th inst. it was thought probable that the Pope would speedily return, at the instance of a deputation from Rome.

From Austrian Italy we learn that the fortifications at Verona are proceeding with great activity. No hopes are entertained of saving the free port of Venice; it is even believed the arsenal will be transferred to Pola. Treaties are so heavy that several communes of the Venetian territory have proposed the dismissal of all their employés except the clerk, and the suppression of all expenses of cultus.

AUSTRIA

The report of a probable misunderstanding between Austria and Prussia, on the ground of the former objecting to the Prussian scheme of German Unity, which is to be inaugurated at the approaching Diet at Erfurt, has been revived, but nothing definite or certain is known on the question.

In Hungary great discontent prevails among all parties with the present order of things—the aristocratic party, because their privileges are broken down; the popular party, on account of the encroachments made upon their liberty by the administration of Haynau.

From Bohemia we learn, under date of the 8th inst., that an evening paper in Prague had been suppressed, and several students arrested in consequence of some appearances of disaffection in that city.

A Vienna the publication and circulation of six of the principal Vienna papers (the Presse among the number) has been stopped. These papers will not be allowed to appear so long as the state of siege continues.

TURKEY.

We have advices from Constantinople of the 29th ult., at which date the affairs between Russia and Turkey were in a satisfactory state as regards the whole. There was a continual interchange of note between the representatives of the two Powers, which indicated that every difference of opinion respecting the refugees had not been finally adjusted, though from the secrecy observed, it was impossible to ascertain, with anything like correctness, where the difficulties existed. The British fleet continued in Besika Bay, and the French fleet at Ortiki.

UNITED STATES.

The steamer America reached Liverpool on Wednesday morning, with letters and papers from New York of the 30th ult. Tranquility prevailed throughout the States. A deficit of from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 dollars had been discovered to the treasury, and a new loan, or a revision of the Tariff, or both, were expected. It is understood that the deficiency arises from the expenses of the late war, humanity, &c.

CANADA

There is nothing new relative to the annexation movement by the annexationists. Some distinguished adherents had obtained grants of lands at Lake Superior, reported to contain copper lands; but, upon the arrival of troops from Toronto, the riots were put down.

MEXICO.

Accounts from Mexico of the 29th ult. state, that a conspiracy had been formed to restore Santa Anna, the leader of which had been captured and shot.

BERMUDA

We learn from the last arrival that there has been a riot in Bermuda, owing to the Legislative Council having passed a law subjecting debtors to the same prison discipline as criminals. Several fires were lost.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

We have received the Cape papers of the 30th October, being one day later than the last advices

We read in the South African of that date

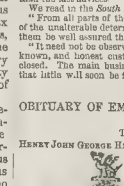
"From all parts of the colony the most convincing proofs are daily received of the unalterable determination of the colonists to rely upon the pistols. Let them be well secured that such a deliverance is not to be calculated on that alone

"It need not be observed that business is not suspended with ordinary, well-known, and honest customers. Shops are only half, or rather only partially, closed. The mail business of the country proceeds with little interruption, and that little will soon be found to be less than is generally supposed."

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

THE EARL OF CAERNARVON.



HENRY JOHN GEORGE HERBERT, third Earl of Caernarvon, and Baron Porchester, of High Clere, Hants, in the peerage of Great Britain, was the elder son of Henry George, the second Earl, by his wife, Elizabeth Kitty, daughter and heiress of Colonel John Pitt, Duke Acland. He was born at the family town mansion, 43, Grosvenor-square, on the 8th June, 1800. Whilst about eleven years old, on his father's accession to the Earldom, he became, by courtesy, Lord Porchester, a title by which he was best known afterwards. He was educated at Eton and Christ Church, Oxford. After the completion of his studies, his Lordship went upon a long tour of foreign travel. He was in Italy in 1821, and soon after visited the Peninsula, having taken an active part in favour of Don Carlos, he fell into the hands of the opposite party, with whom he remained for some time a prisoner. Thence his wanderings extended through Morocco and other parts of Africa, through a considerable portion of Germany, and through the cities of Greece.

From these travels Lord Porchester returned to England an accomplished gentleman, to win distinction as an orator, a poet, and a dramatist. "The Moor," a poem, and "Don Pedro," a tragedy, established his literary reputation, and his brief but brilliant career in the House of Commons gave fame to his eloquence Amongst the speeches that he there delivered against the Reform Bill, there was one impressive and eloquent that Sir Robert Peel said he should be perfectly contented to rest the whole cause at issue upon the arguments contained in that single harangue—an assertion which was met with laudatory cheers from both sides of the House.

Lord Porchester married, on the 4th August, 1830, Henrietta, eldest daughter of the late Lord Henry Molyneux Howard, and niece to the late Duke of Norfolk. By this lady his Lordship leaves a numerous issue.

Lord Porchester succeeded to the Earldom of Caernarvon on the death of his father, the 18th April, 1833; but he found the sphere of his genius contracted in the Upper House, and supervening ill-health compelled him, in a great measure, to retire from public life. His attention was latterly much occupied in the restoration of the old family seat, Highclere Castle—a work commenced in 1841, and hardly yet finished. He was also a cultivator of the more curious and beautiful American plants, having in his garden some of the rarest specimens ever imported to England. His action, in 1844, against Mr. Villebois, to maintain his right of free warren over the manors of Highclere and Donnington, created some sensation at the time; and the wide expression of satisfaction on its termination in favour of the Earl was a strong proof of his Lordship's popularity. His death is now no less the subject of general regret. His attendant of Mr. Christopher Eales, the architect, may be ranked as the model establishment, has been erected under the superintendence of a baths and washhouses commission, appointed by the vestry of Marylebone, who adopted the Baths and Wash-house Act soon after it came into operation in 1846. The cost of the entire building, which is a very neat structure of red brick with Bath stone facings, will amount to very nearly £30,000. The establishment contains 107 baths, with slower and vapour baths in addition, for first and second-class customers. There are also two capacious swimming-baths, surrounded by dressing-boxes; and the washing department contains 84 pair of tubs, with separate drying-closet for each, and a large ironing-room, each class having separate entrances. The whole of the baths are so constructed, that, while the greatest privacy is preserved, they have also the advantage of the open area of the whole building at the top, for the purpose of ventilation. The visitors having been conducted over the various departments of the baths by Mr. Eales, the architect; Messrs. Jacob Bell, M'Evliy, Potter, and other commissioners, accompanied by their secretary, Mr. Gomm, were invited to the commissioners' board-room, where an elegant déjeuner was laid out for the occasion.

Royal Humane Society.—On Tuesday afternoon a meeting of subscribers and committee of management of this society, for the recovery of persons apparently drowned or dead, was held at the offices in Trafalgarsquare, for general business. The report for the past year (being the 76th of the society's existence) stated there had been 132 cases, comprising 158 persons, out of whom 144 were successfully treated and recovered, the remaining 11 were beyond the reach of recovery. The number of persons who had bathed in the Serpentine Piver was estimated at 91,720, which number is nearly 10,000 below the usual average. Twenty persons were rescued from drowning by the society's boatmen, and several medical assistants attached to the establishment-house—14 other individuals were likewise prevented or rescued from committing suicide; and during the skating last winter a great number who had been immersed were saved by the society's apparatus. In this respect, also, the society have been instrumental in saving and restoring more than 25 000 lives. During the past year one honorary gold medallion and 18 honorary silver medals were voted for cases of rescue, attended by extraordinary courage and risk of life; 22 honorary bronze medals have been awarded; the thanks of the society presented to nine individuals; and 125 other claimants were rewarded with money.

Asylum for Orphan Institution.—A general election to the benefits of this excellent institution took place on Monday, at their house, St. Andrew's-place, Regent's park. Those admissible to the charity are orphan females who have attained the age of fourteen, and whose parents, prior to their decease, had been in the army, the navy, or the church; and the benefits enjoyed by these received upon the funds are—entire support for a limited number of years, and an education of so superior a character that many of the former wards of the institution are now governesses in the highest families in the kingdom. Before the hour for polling, which was two o'clock, the committee met as usual to transact business, and unanimously passed a resolution expressive of their sorrow at the loss of her late Majesty the Queen Dowager, who had deprived that institution, in common with many others, of a most liberal supporter. The number of candidates at the opening of the poll was seven; and the following, at four o'clock, were declared successful:—Frances A. Hall, 1159; Matilda L. Sewy, 944; Olivia S. M'Kie, 885; Henrietta Dukes, 620; Clara J. Caler, 440; Harriet A. Burgess, 427.

Female Orphan Asylum, Westminster-road.—A special court of governors of this charity, held on Monday, at the School house, Westminster-road, for the election of five children to the school, took place. Mr. R. Farrer, who presided, expressed, on his regaining that, in times of pressure and distress like the present, the election did not secure the admission of a greater number of orphans; but the fact was, that the diminution of the subscriptions had obliged the governors recently to sell out £1000 of their stock, to meet contingent expenses. The objects of this association are to receive female orphans from the ages of eight to ten years, and to educate and maintain them until of an age to earn their own living, when they are all provided with situations as domestic servants.

The Association for Improving the Dwellings of the Working Classes.—On Wednesday morning, another edifice, built by this association, for 234 single men, in Spitalfields, was publicly opened. It possesses many comforts and conveniences consisting of separate sleeping-apartments, lavatories, an extensive kitchen, with ample ranges, boilers, [illegible] rooms, and every appurtenance of a large and well-regulated establishment. The entire structure is warmed by hot air, and there is a comprehensive system of ventilation throughout. There is likewise a large and lofty coffee room, reading-room, smoking-room, separate safes and keys for the food of each inmate, and, indeed, nothing appears to have been overlooked which could contribute to the social condition of its future occupants. Another large pile of buildings, built by the Messrs. Piper, is in a state of hardness, for dwellings of families, which each and apartments to be complete in itself, doors opening upon the common landing place, after the manner of the chambers in our Inns of Court, with the addition of having many domestic and culinary comforts within reach, and the immunity from fire which the Temple, Lincoln's-inn, and Gray's-inn frequently subject to. There will be a school-room in the latter building for the children of the occupants. Mr. W. Beck, of London, is the architect of both edifices. A large and respectable body of visitors have inspected the admirable arrangements for the health and comfort of the inmates, a meeting of the shareholders was held in the coffee-room. The chair was taken by the Earl of Carlisle, and subsequently by Viscount Ebrington. The meeting was addressed by the chairman, Sir R. Howard, the Rev J. Harris, Mr C. Cochrane, Dr. Southwood Smith, and Mr. Bowley of Gloucester.

Royal Jubilee Asylum.—On Wednesday a quarterly meeting of governors was held at the Dispensary House, Aldersgate-street; Mr. Atkinson in the chair. The secretary reported that Mr. W. Savory had that morning been elected surgeon in the place of Mr. Smith, resigned. It was announced that the vestry of St. Botolph had voted the sum of fifty guineas to the charity, in consideration of its great utility during the prevalence of the late epidemic. A governor announced that St. Anne's vestry likewise intended to contribute the like sum. The chairman said, from what he had seen, these good examples would be generally followed. There had been this year an extra expense of £400 on account of the cholera, and the number of patients was all very large. The receipts during the year ending at Michaelmas last were 20,000. From the medical officer for the past quarter was as follows:—Number of patients receiving aid from July 1 to September 30, 1849, 5681, namely, from the entry-book, 3865; casualties, 1816; under cure on the 30th of September, 1849, 1816; been cured 2241; relieved, 1422, died, 21. Under cure at the end of September, 1849, 1877.

Sewers Ordeblies.—St. Pancras.—At a numerous meeting held on Monday evening, in the vestry-room of the parish of St. Pancras, in pursuance of a requisition signed by 634 rate-payers, to consider the cleansing of the streets of the parish by means of street orderlies, the Rev. Thomas Dale, the vicar, in the chair, it was resolved: "That, asking into consideration the many advantages attendant on the system now adopted by the vestry of this parish of cleansing the public thoroughfares by means of street orderlies, which advantages include a high state of cleanliness, a diminution of dirt and discomfort in houses; a decrease in the injury to goods for sale, and to shops from mud and dust, and increase to the comfort of foot passengers; an improvement to the public health, and considerably diminished call for able-bodied paupers (especially during the winter season) might otherwise become a burden on the poor's rate, this meeting is of opinion that the street-orderly system is deserving of adoption throughout the parish, and especially, but not exclusively, recommends the new paving boards to adopt, with the least possible delay, this approved mode of cleansing the courts and alleys, as well as the streets inhabited by the wealthy, throughout the districts under the management of the parochial authorities."

East India Military College, Addiscombe.—The half-yearly meeting of the directors of the East India Company was held on Tuesday, at their Military Seminary, Addiscombe, for the distribution of prizes to those gentlemen cadets who had distinguished themselves during the past half-year. Colonel Galloway presided, who stated that the directors had consented to appoint forty-seven officers from the cadets six engineers, thirteen artillery, and eighteen infantry. The following is a list of those gentlemen who obtained the respective appointments:—Geo. A. Craster, Henry A. Brownlow, W. S. Trevor, Joseph H. Soady, Jasper O'Maine, Henry T. Rogers. Mr. Brownlow obtained the sword for good conduct. The Pollock Medal, and various other prizes were awarded to Mr. Craster. The remarks of General Galloway, on the presentation of these appointments and their rewards, must have added much to their value

School for the Indigent Blind.—A meeting of this charity was held at the London Coffee-House on Thursday, Mr. Tubbs in the chair. It appeared from the report that the number of pupils now in the institution was 24 [illegible] the year was £1,[illegible] 24 [illegible] 1849, £[illegible] 1848, £[illegible] 1847, £[illegible] 1846, £[illegible] 1845, £[illegible] 1844, £[illegible] 1843, £[illegible] 1842, £[illegible] 1841, £[illegible] 1840, £[illegible] 1839, £[illegible] 1838, £[illegible] 1837, £[illegible] 1836, £[illegible] 1835, £[illegible] 1834, £[illegible] 1833, £[illegible] 1832, £[illegible] 1831, £[illegible] 1830, £[illegible]

CLASS II.—NO. 29.—THE MARQUIS OF EXETER'S SHORT-HORNED OX.—£30 PRIZE, AND SILVER MEDAL. CLASS IV.—NO. 56.—THE EARL OF LEICESTER'S NORTH DEVON OX.—£20 PRIZE, AND SILVER MEDAL

SMITHFIELD CLUB CATTLE SHOW.

The approach of "Merry Christmas" has brought with it to the metropolis this Exhibition, so characteristic of the season and the nation.

The private view was accorded on Monday evening, at the Bazaar, King-street, Portman-square, and presented a spectacle in every respect gratifying and satisfactory. The popularity of the Club among stock-feeders may be gathered from the fact, that the entries for this year exceed those of any preceding year in the proportion of one-fifth, while the improved character of the stock is too evident to admit of the slightest question.

The Prince Consort is again a large contributor to the Show, and his Royal Highness is fortunate in having obtained no less than three prizes. The Duke of Beaufort, for the first time for some years past, contributes three or four very fine oxen, but his Grace's efforts, although highly commendable, have not found favour in the sight of the judges. The Duke of Richmond, the Marquis of Exeter, the Earl of Leicester, the Earl Fitzwilliam, the Earl of Radnor, and the Earl of Aylesford exhibit with more or less success, but the chief prizes in most of the classes are carried off by yeomen farmers, among whom we are glad to observe several names not before familiar in the award of the judges.

On Tuesday morning the Bazaar was thrown open to the public at eight o'clock, and during that and the succeeding days, to the close of the Exhibition, it was densely crowded by a continuous throng of highly-respectable people, as well as large numbers of fashionably-attired ladies. Amongst the early arrivals were his Grace the Duke of Richmond, the President; his Grace the Duke of Beaufort, the Duke of Rutland, the Earl of Warwick, the Earl of Leicester, Earl Spencer, Lord Portman, the Earl of Aylesford; the Hon. Major-General Wemyss, squerry and land-steward to his Royal Highness Prince Albert; the Hon. J. Wentworth Fitzwilliam; Mr. Pusey, M.P.; Colonel Sibthorp, M.P., &c.; all of whom expressed their satisfaction with the Show in very warm terms

A rather remarkable circumstance connected with the present Show is, that more than one-half of the horned cattle were sold on the first day; and, what is still more curious, the best lots have been secured by country butchers.

Three or four of the metropolitan cheaters d'industrie made their appearance in the course of the day, but were soon detected and removed.

About 20,000 persons passed through the Bazaar during the first day.

The following is the list of prizes in the various classes:—

President.—The Duke of Richmond

Vice-Presidents.—The Earl of Aboyne; Mr. Philip Pusey, M.P.; the Earl of Hardwicke, the Earl Spencer, the Earl of Yarborough.

Trustees.—The Duke of Richmond, Mr. B. T. Brandreth Gibbs, the Lord Portman.

Stewards.—Beasts and Long Wool Sheep: Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. W. Torr, Mr. George Turner. Short Wool Sheep and Pigs: Mr. Ellman, Mr. Grantham, Mr. Jonas Webb.

Judges.—Beasts and Long Wools: Mr. Thomas Townsend, Mr. John Booth Mr. Thomas Reynolds. Short Wool Sheep and Pigs: Mr. John Ford, jun.; Mr John Clayden, Mr. Wm. Saxby.

Hon. Secretary.—Mr. B. T. Brandreth Gibbs.

OXEN OR STEERS.

CLASS I

The first prize, of £30, to No. 19, viz. to Mr. Richard Jones, of Woodstone-odge, near Peterborough.

A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. James Cartwright, of Wistanstow Salop.

The second prize, of £15, to No. 4, viz. to Mr. Stephen Gooch, of Honingham, near Norwich.

The third prize, of £5, to No. 3, viz. to Mr. Thomas Batson, of Kynaston-house near Ross.

CLASS II.

The first prize, of £30, to No. 29, viz. to the Marquis of Exeter, of Burghley-park, near Stamford.

A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to the Marquis of Exeter.

The second prize, of £15, to No. 39, viz. to Mr. James S. Bult, of Odhill house, Kingston, near Taunton.

The third prize, of £5, to No. 31, viz. to his Royal Highness Prince Albert.

CLASS III.

The first prize, of £25, to No. 45, viz. to Mr. R. Stratton, of Salthrop, near Swindon.

(Continued on page 396.)

CLASS VIII.—NO. 108.—MR. WHEY'S SHORT-HORNED COW.—£20 PRIZE, AND SILVER AND GOLD MEDALS. CLASS VII.—NO. 84.—MR. W. FLETCHER'S SHORT-HORNED COW.—£[illegible] AND SILVER MEDAL

ARRIVAL OF CATTLE AT THE RAILWAY TERMINUS, EUSTON-SQUARE.

FARM BUILDINGS AT LISCARD, CHESHIRE.

THESE new and extensive farm buildings of Harold Littledale, Esq., at Liscard Cheshire, are pleasantly situated on gently elevated ground, on the north side of the road leading from Liscard to Poulton-cum-Seacombe, about a mile from the Mersey (by Egremont), and cover about four statute acres, which include the buildings, farm-yards, stack-yard, manager's house and garden, cottages, shrubberies, &c. The premises are rendered conspicuous by a tall chimney, steam power being used in all the operations for which it can be made available. Although, however, the buildings, with their enclosed yards, cover a large area, when the numerous uses to which they are applied and the amount of business carried on are taken into account, the whole establishment, with its modern improvements and adaptations, may be pronounced to be the most compact, and perhaps the most convenient and appropriate, of any to be found in the United Kingdom.

The buildings are of substantial brick-work, faced with stone and slated. There are eight two-story cottages for the work-people, with neat shrubberies around them near the road, resembling little villas. Four of these cottages are very complete ones. Further eastward stands the bailiff's house—a handsome building in the Elizabethan style, with a porch. At one end there is a good kitchen and flower garden, and in front (southward) greensward and shrubberies, sloping down to a pond, with a little island in the middle

The whole of the buildings were designed and planned by Mr. Torr, of Ribby, Lincolnshire, and were built by Messrs. Samuel and James Holme, of Liverpool. They are plain in structure and generally one story in height. The roofs throughout are of wood; and tension rods, forming a strong arch against outward pressure or expansion, supply the place of the heavy principal beams formerly used.

Mr. Littledale occupies about 350 acres of excellent land in Liscard and the adjoining township of Wallasey, the whole of which he has, by skill, capital, and unremitting industry, brought to a state of cultivation and productiveness far surpassing what was before known in that district.

Entering at the east side of the group of buildings, there is a ten-stall stable for farm horses. Opposite to this stable there is a harness-house, and, near by, a four-stall stable, for the shandry horses that take out the milk to the customers in the neighbourhood.

The piggery comes next in order. There are eight large pig-sties, under a lofty shed, open at one side. The poultry-houses are immediately over the sleeping places of the pigs, and so arranged that the poultry derive warmth from the natural heat of the pigs, which ascends to the houses above them

Over a lobby or passage in the quadrangle there is an immense water-tank. It is filled by the steam-engine, from the pond before alluded to, and contains 10,000 gallons. This tank supplies the engine-boiler and the whole of the premises, by hydraulic pressure, through pipes laid in various directions, thereby saving much labour. In the centre of the yard there is a small tank filled from it to nearly the level of the ground, for the use of the young ducks and chickens.

The shippons, or cow-houses, are particularly deserving of notice, both from their size and structure. Two of them contain 32 cows each, and one of them 16, or 80 in all. The stalls are wide, and are formed or partitioned with huge blue Welsh flags or slates. The cows are all fastened, two in each stall, in a manner that gives them freedom to stand or lie, or to turn on their sides. The boiling-house is conveniently near, and the boiling is accomplished in a superior manner by steam, which is introduced into the boilers from the steam-engine boiler.

There is a room for steaming hay, in which a ton or more can be steamed at a time. The cutting-machine is over it, and feeds the material down through the floor. There are a great number of buildings devoted to various purposes—as a washing-house for roots, a straw and chaff-house, a tool-house, extensive cart-sheds, a compost-shed for the preparation of artificial manures and the preparing of guano; houses, partly under ground (with cased walls filled in with charcoal as a non-conductor, and air-vents that may be plugged up during frost), for the storing and preserving of potatoes or of turnips; a slaughter-house; a curing or salting-room for bacon and hams—where we noticed some very simple and practically useful shelves made of broad slates (to salt bacon on), with grooves cut in them to carry the brine off into the pickling-tubs underneath—a room for smoke-drying the same; a blacksmith's and a carpenter's shop; an implement-house, and a churning-house.

The steam-engine is of ten-horse power, and is a beautiful piece of machinery. Near it there is, on the ground-floor, a winnowing-machine (Clyburn's patent); immediately over which, on the second-floor, is a remarkably compact threshing-machine, without rollers, on the patented principle of Parsons and Clyburn; also a corn-separator, by Clyburn—this is found an essentially useful machine. In the same story is the granary, a large and commodious room.

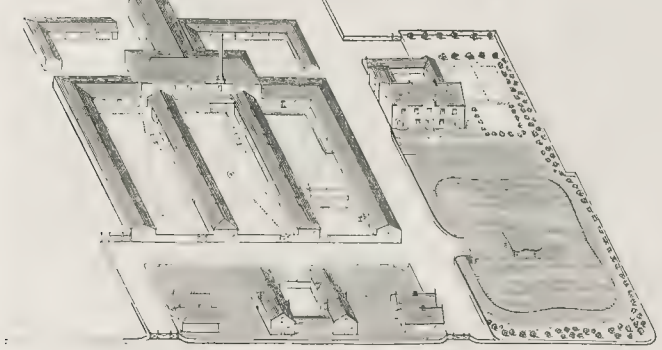
There is a drying-kiln, laid with perforated tiles, heated by a range of six steam-pipes under them, the heat being derived from the steam-engine boiler. There are two superior chaff-cutting machines; also one of the corn and linseed crushers from the Otley iron-works, of a large size. All the various machines are driven by straps, or belts, from shaftings most admirably arranged along and under the beams of the building

The Manager's House is on an extremely convenient and comprehensive plan; and the Dairy adjoining is perfect. It is a large oblong-square room, elegantly and tastefully fitted up. There are ten square ventilators round the sides. The roof is of the pavilion or caved form, groined, with a handsome foliated centre-piece, which, being in open-work, leads the air to a large ventilator at the top of the building. The walls more exposed to the sun are built with a hollow space of three inches in them, through which a current of air passes; and there is a double ceiling, for the same obvious purpose of keeping an equal temperature in summer and winter.

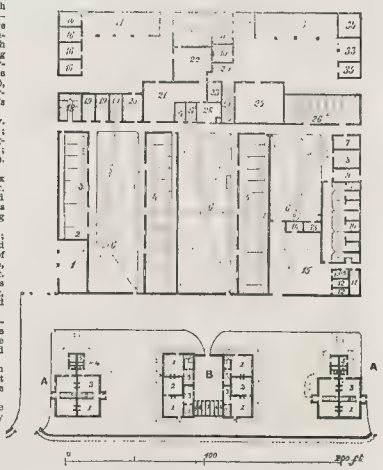
Near the entrance-gate is a weighing machine, with an indicator in the adjoining cottage, by which loads of hay, roots, &c. can be weighed, as well as the live weight of cattle accurately ascertained. The whole of the buildings are most efficiently spouted, and the water is carefully carried to the large pond before alluded to, by drains, independent of those for the liquid manure tanks.

The celebrity of these farm buildings has attracted, and is daily attracting, an immense number of visitors from all parts of the kingdom. Last year Sir Robert Peel honoured the proprietor with a visit, and was highly delighted with what he saw, declaring that it "was the most complete thing he had ever seen."

We need but add that the highest commendation of the public at large is due to the spirited owner, who has not only shown an example to farmers worthy of imitation, by producing a greater quantity of food from a given area of land than was done before, but who, being a merchant, has proved that the active pursuits of commerce and agriculture may be harmoniously and advantageously combined for the general good, as well as the advancement of individual interests.



FARM BUILDINGS AT LISCARD, CHESHIRE.



GROUND-PLAN OF FARM BUILDINGS.

REFERENCE TO FARM BUILDINGS.
1 Compost House	12 Turkeys, Geese, &c	24 Boiler Ditto	REFERENCE A
2 Rail House	13 Shed for Pigs	25 Granary	1 Living Room
3 Shippon for 15 Cows	14 Ditto for Poultry	26 Stable for 10 Horses	2 Pantry and Stairs
4 Ditto 28 Ditto	15 Poultry Yard	27 Cut Chaff	Kitchen
5 Ditto 32 Ditto	16 Potato Stores	28 Steaming House for	4 Ashes
6 Manure Tanks	17 Implement and	29 Well [Roots	Coals
7 Gear House	Root Shed	30 Smithy
8 Milk House Stables	18 Calf-Houses	31 Carpenters' Shop	REFERENCE B
9 Pigs' Food	19 Loose Boxes	32 Churn House	1 Kitchen
10 Piggeries	20 Engine	33 Cart Shed	2 Parlour
11 Ducks	21 Straw House	34 Drill House	3 Bed, ivy
	22 Barn	35 Slaughter House	4 Coals
	23 Engine House	36 Stack Yard	5 Ashes

GROUND-PLAN OF FARM BUILDINGS.

We are indebted for this seasonable Illustration to the Farmer's Magazine, a work of great practical value to agriculturists.

THE BIRMINGHAM AND MIDLAND COUNTIES GREAT CATTLE-SHOW.—The award of prizes for fat cattle, sheep, pigs, and poultry entered for this (the first) annual exhibition of agricultural animal stock upon an extensive scale in the midland counties, took place at the private view on Monday morning last. The stock—consisting of not fewer than 800 head—had arrived on Saturday, and all the arrangements were fully completed on that day. When lighted by gas at night, the scene was extremely pleasing, and judges of farming stock declared that, in point of quality, the show of cattle and pigs was far above the average of similar exhibitions formerly held in other parts of the kingdom. Prince Albert, the Earl of Warwick, Lord Hatherton, the Earl of Aylesford, and Sir F. Lawley were among the fortunate exhibitors. On Wednesday the public exhibition was attended by an immense concourse of persons, many of whom came from a great distance. Colonel Wemyss, one of the equerries to Prince Albert, was present; and his Royal Highness remitted £50 towards the expenses of the show. The stock exhibited was quickly sold, at good if not extravagant prices. The dinner took place at the Town Hall on Thursday, and concluded the proceedings of the third day with eclat.

A meeting of highly influential agriculturists was held on Friday week, at Cirencester. The party dined in three separate rooms, after which they assembled in the large assembly room of the Ram Hotel, which was crowded to excess. The chair was taken by Earl Bathurst, and among others present were Lord Villiers, M.P., Mr. Maitings, M.P., Hon W. L. Bathurst, Sir W. H. Bench, Bart., Sir Thomas Tancred, Bart., Mr. Mechi, &c.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, December 16.—Third Sunday in Advent.
MONDAY, 17. Oxford Michaelmas Term ends.
TUESDAY, 18.—Sun rises 8h. 4m.; sets 3h. 50m.
WEDNESDAY, 19.—Ember Week. Sun rises 8h. 5m., sets 3h. 50m.
THURSDAY, 20. Sun rises 8h. 5m.; sets 3h. 51m.
FRIDAY, 21. St. Thomas. Shortest day. Winter commences.
SATURDAY, 22.—Moon's First Quarter, 7h. 40m P.M.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE
FOR THE WEEK ENDING DEC. 22, 1849.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
3 0	3 18	3 33	3 50	4 7	4 25	4 40	5 0	5 15	5 36	5 55	6 15	6 40	7 0

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1849.—Under most distinguished Patronage. On which occasion MRS GIBBS, formerly MISS GRADDON (of the Theatre Royal Drury Lane, &c), will have the honour of making her FIRST APPEARANCE in England, and most respectfully begs to announce to the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, that on the above Night, and SECOND TIME during the Season, will be performed, in Two Acts, the Comedy, in Three Acts, called MARRIED AND SINGLE. Characters by Mrs. Gibbs, Mr. Compton, Mr. Frank Matthews, &c. To conclude with the Farce, in One Act, called MY FRIEND FROM INDIA. Characters by Mr. Compton, Mr. Frank Matthews, Mr. Gallot, Mr. Bland, Mrs. Fitzwilliam, &c. Boxes, 4s.; Pit, 2s. Private Boxes, Two Guineas, and may be obtained at the Box-office. Doors open at Half-past Six; to commence at Seven o'Clock. Stalls may be taken of Mr. Nutt, at the Box-office, and of Mrs. Gibbs, 7, Upper Berkeley-street, Portman-square. The Box-office will be open on the day of performance from eleven till five. Doors open at Seven o'Clock; performance to commence at half-past Seven o'Clock precisely. Acting Manager, Mr. Frank Matthews. Treasurer, Mr. Gallot. Prompter, Mr. Bland. Machinist, Mr. Fitzwilliam. Leader of the Band, Mr. Willy. Conductor, Mr. Harrison. Doorkeeper, Mr. Hughes. Box-keeper, Mr. Pitt. Property Man, Mr. Hall. Wardrobe Keeper, Mr. Hall. Assistant Wardrobe Keeper, Mr. Hall. Assistant Property Man, Mr. Hall. Assistant Machinist, Mr. Hall. Assistant Leader of the Band, Mr. Hall. Assistant Conductor, Mr. Hall. Assistant Prompter, Mr. Hall. Assistant Treasurer, Mr. Hall. Assistant Acting Manager, Mr. Hall. Assistant Doorkeeper, Mr. Hall. Assistant Box-

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION OF WORKS OF INDUSTRY OF ALL NATIONS IN 1851.—On Monday a meeting of merchants, bankers, manufacturers, and others was held in the Exchange Hall, Nottingham, for the purpose of promoting this exhibition. The Mayor (Mr. R. Birkin) having opened the proceedings, the town-clerk read some correspondence which had passed with Mr. Digby Wyatt, and the statement made by Mr. Cole, of the objects which were contemplated. Mr. T. Carver, hosier, moved, "That this meeting highly approves of the proposed exhibition of the works of industry of all nations to be held in London in 1851, and considers it calculated to promote the agricultural as well as the commercial and manufacturing interests of the community, and to cement a friendly union among the nations of the world." Mr. R. Morley, of the firm of J. and R. Morley, hosiers, of Nottingham and London, seconded the motion, and strongly urged the expediency of appointing committeemen who would take an active part in working out the objects of the meeting. The resolution was carried unanimously. Mr. Reckless, lace-manufacturer, moved, "That this meeting acknowledges with thanks the invaluable exertions of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the President of the Society of Arts, for the establishment of the institution, and will earnestly assist in the furtherance of the general objects of the proposal." Mr. Haunay, hosier, in seconding the resolution, reminded the meeting that there was no town in Great Britain which could produce manufactures of greater beauty than Nottingham. If there were any doubts on the subject of expense, these might be resolved by leaving each locality to pay for itself, but he was opposed to a tax on the country at large. He approved of money prizes, but thought £500 too large a sum for one prize. Mr. C. Paget, as an agriculturist, spoke of the value attached to medal prizes. Mr. H. Reckless explained that the medals would be in addition to the money prizes. The resolution was passed unanimously. On the motion of Mr. T. Reckless, seconded by Mr. Mallet, a committee was appointed, and the proceedings terminated.

DINNER TO MESSRS. GIBSON AND BRIGHT.—On Monday evening last the electors of Manchester entertained their representatives, the Right Hon. Thomas Milner Gibson and Mr. John Bright, at a public dinner in the Corn Exchange. About 500 gentlemen sat down to an excellent dinner, provided by Mr. Towers, of the Queen's Hotel. Mr. James Kershaw, M.P., presided. The health of the members of the borough was drunk with great enthusiasm, and responded to by Mr. Gibson and Mr. Bright with great ability and at much length. Mr. W. F. Fox, M.P., was also present, and made a long and eloquent speech, on his health being proposed.

THE CATHEDRAL GRAMMAR SCHOOL AT ROCHESTER.—A meeting of the friends of the Rev. Robert Whiston, Head Master of the Cathedral Grammar School at Rochester, was held in that city on Saturday last, at which the following statement was read, and the subjoined resolutions were unanimously adopted and agreed to:—The statutes of Rochester Cathedral (A. D. 1542) assign to the Dean £100, to each of the canons £66, to each of four minor canons £5, and to each of 20 grammar boys £3 13s. 4d. a year; they also require the students and boys to be maintained out of the funds of the church. The income of the Dean is now at least £1626, and that of a canon at £580; while the other offices are still £5 and £3 13s. 4d. each. Mr. Whiston, as master of the Cathedral School, after persevering and protracted, but unsuccessful efforts, from February, 1848, to May, 1849, to procure an augmentation of these stipends, published a pamphlet on "Cathedral Endowments, and their Establishment," in which he proved that 50 boys at Canterbury, 40 at Westminster, 40 at Worcester, 24 at Ely, 20 at Rochester and Peterborough, and 18 at Durham, are entitled to maintenance out of the funds of those churches respectively, and that the publication of this pamphlet the Dean and Chapter of Rochester stated, on June 23rd, 1849, that they were under the painful necessity of removing the complainant from his office; Mr. Whiston immediately instituted proceedings in Chancery, but without success, the Vice-Chancellor, Sir J. Wigram, conceiving that he had no jurisdiction to redress the wrong, and regretting that he was under the necessity of refusing Mr. Whiston's motion. Upon this Mr. Whiston appealed to the Lord-Chancellor, and the Dean and Chapter again recognised him as head-master, but cited him to appear before themselves to justify the pamphlet and answer interrogatories thereupon, at the same time denying him counsel or the presence of a friend. The result was, that on October 10th, 1849, the Chapter and Dean (as they say) "felt themselves under the painful necessity of reverting to their former conclusion, and removing the complainant from the superintendence of the school." Immediately afterwards, without advertisement or competition, they elected for his successor the Chaplain of the Rock County Gaol. Under these circumstances, Mr. Whiston has appealed to the Court of Queen's Bench; and on the application of Sir F. Thesiger, Mr. Justice Patteson has granted a rule nisi for a mandamus to the Dean and Chapter to restore him. The proceedings in Chancery are still pending, and the law costs are already heavy. Resolved, "That, as the cause of education in Rochester must be spared by the very wealthy body against which Mr. Whiston is contending, and as the interests of education and the due fulfilment of cathedral trusts are deeply interested in the success of his efforts, the members of the city and the public will cordially unite in an earnest and liberal endeavour to obtain such an important object." Resolved, "That subscriptions be forthwith entered into, and that Messrs. Baker, Sage, and William Mancham, Esqs., be appointed the treasurers, and that all persons be requested to forward their subscriptions to either of those gentlemen, who will acknowledge the same." Resolved, "That this meeting do enter into subscription," which was done accordingly, to the amount of nearly £200.

PICTURE GALLERY, HOLYROOD PALACE.—For a long time back the pictures in this gallery have become so obscured, by the accumulated dust of years, as to obtain the character of the portraits of ancient worthies of doubtful or impossible authenticity. This circumstance having been brought under the notice of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, by Mr. Mathieson, clerk of her Majesty's works for Scotland, they have appointed Mr. Welker, of 15, Hanover-street, Edinburgh, to examine and repair the whole of the pictures in that gallery. Those which have been already lined and cleaned by him are said to be greatly improved by the process.

LAUNCH OF THE HUMBER FERRY PONTOON.—A pontoon, or landing-stage, constructed by Messrs. E. B. Wilson and Co., of Leeds, for the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company, and intended for the terminus of that railway at the extremity of the noble pier in the Humber, at New Holland, opposite the port of Hull, was launched at Goole last week, in the presence of a large company of spectators, including several of the most eminent engineers. The huge machine, which is 60 feet wide, 240 feet in length, and 8 feet deep, and weighs nearly 700 tons, has been constructed entirely in the works of Messrs. Wilson, at Leeds, under the superintendence of Mr. Fenton. It has been conveyed by the Aire and Calder Navigation, in detached portions, from thence to Goole, where it has been finally completed. The hull of the vessel is entirely constructed of iron, the deck of Baltic timber, averaging six inches in thickness, and weighing 200 tons. The launching arrangements have been conducted by Messrs. Spencer and Hallett, the well-known shipbuilders, of Hull; and on the morning above-named, at ten o'clock, the vessel was launched, in the most successful manner, from the wharf of the Aire and Calder Company, into the river Ouse. She went sideways down the slips beautifully into the water, and after floating about twenty minutes in the mid-stream, was brought to the shore, and moored by a band of music and several hundred visitors. The National Anthem was played. The company then retired, and immediately afterwards six steamers—four of which had come up from Hull, and were in attendance—were attached to her cables, and brought her down to New Holland in the short space of three hours and a quarter. In two days from that time, and with the assistance of Mr. Linn, the contractor for the New Holland works, and of the gentlemen on board, put into its place between the dolphins, erected for the purpose, by which it is to rise and fall with the tide, and forms the most magnificent landing-stage for passengers and traffic on the Humber, if not in the world.

THE ROCHDALE SAVINGS-BANK DEFALCATIONS.—Great excitement prevails in Rochdale in consequence of the increased amount of defalcation which the close investigation of the last few days has brought to light. The defalcations now exceed £9,000. Mr. Edd Pratt recommends the appointment of a committee, formed jointly of depositors and trustees, to conduct the examination of the accounts until the whole deficiencies can be fairly estimated, and until this time all proceedings of a legal nature will be postponed. At the meeting of depositors called by Mr. Hunt, solicitor, of Rochdale, and by no having in his intention reference to the subject to which I had supposed him to apply it. I am not aware that the doctrine advanced concerning the Sacraments, and to which my chief object is distinctively the doctrine of Dissenters. But I fully acquiesce in the opinion that any doctrine propounded in our Church contradictory to its articles and formularies, justly calls for a protest from its more [illegible] members; and such a protest, if unhappily it should ever prove necessary, will always be received with the attention to which it is entitled, from your faithful servant and brother,

J. B. CANTUAR."

THE PRIMATE'S VISITATION.—A strange piece of gossip has been prevalent in clerical circles as to a certain very disagreeable proceeding at the Archbishop of Canterbury's late visitation at Dover. The sermon, it appears, was preached by one who deems the Church's teaching of baptismal regeneration, and he took occasion not only to controvert the doctrine, but to ridicule it. The great body of the clergy present—so the story goes—were so indignant at his unscrupulous remarks upon so sacred, and, as they thought, vital a question, that they besought the Archbishop not to read aloud at dinner the usual toast on the occasion, but merely to drink it. The Archbishop, however, though expressing but a qualified approval of the sermon, deemed to comply with their request, and in due course his Grace proposed the obnoxious toast, which was not only refused to be drunk by a large majority of the company, but received by them with the most marked expression of dissent and aversion. Correspondent of the Oxford Herald. [We are in a position to add, that the above statement is substantially correct.—Oxford Herald.]

PREFERMENTS.—The following preferments and appointments have last taken place:—The Rev. Archibald Campbell Tait, to the Deanery of Carlisle. The Rev. George Wilson and Murray, to the Rectory of West Ilsley, Berks, which, diocese of Lichfield. The Rev. T. Dainty, to the Prebendary of Ufton, cum parte Decani, founded in the Cathedral Church of Lichfield. The Rev. John Salter, Rector of Iron Acton, Gloucestershire, to an Honorary Canonry in the Cathedral Church of Bristol. The Rev. David Wright, of Spennithorne, Bedale, Yorkshire, to be a Minor Canon of Bristol Cathedral, in the room of the Rev. Sir Charles Macgregor, resigned. The Rev. Francis Alfred Bowles, to the Rectory of Sutgleton, Sussex. The Rev. J. P. Roberts, to the Rectory of Eastergate, Sussex. The Rev. William Pulsford, to the Rectory of Seaton, Rutland. The Rev. Alan Greenwell, to the newly-constituted Rectory and Parish Church of Colebourne, Lancashire. The Rev. George Rowland Medley, to the Vicarage of Fingringhoe, Essex. The Rev. Gabriel Galpy, to the Vicarage of Bucklebury, Berks. The Rev. C. H. Hutchinson, to the Vicarage of West Dean, Sussex. The Rev. J. G. Bentley, to be Head Master of the Grammar School, Lichfield. The Rev. S. Buckland, P.C. of Great Torrington, to be a surrogate for the diocese of Exeter. The Rev. W. Murray, P.C. of Salcombe, Devon to be a surrogate for the diocese of Exeter.

VACANCY.—PERPETUAL CURACY.—Wellcombe, Devon; diocese Exeter; value £71; pat., Lord Clinton; Rev. J. M. Cockshott, dec.

MASTERSHIP.—Chigwell, Essex; head mastership of grammar school; £50 with residence; to be a layman; testimonials on or before January 15, 1850.

FUNERAL OF THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

ON Thursday morning, at eight o'clock, the mortal remains of the late lamented Queen Adelaide were removed from Bentley Priory, Stanmore, for interment in the Royal mausoleum in St. George's Chapel, Windsor. In accordance with the last desire of the illustrious deceased, the funeral proceedings were conducted in a comparatively private manner; for, with the exception of the presence of a strong detachment of the Life Guards, there was nothing beyond the ordinary display observable at the funeral of a private individual. The coffin was covered with a rich crimson silk velvet, studded by gilt furniture. A double row of burnished gold nails formed the outline, and the compartments were formed by a triple row of small nails. The sides were relieved by massive gold handles, and the corners were of the same, ornamented by an engraved crown. The lid in its upper compartment had a large raised regal crown, and in its lower division was an inverted torch and extinct sergent. The plate bore the inscription:—

Depositum
Serenissimæ Principessæ
ADELAIDÆ,
Reginæ Dotariæ
Obiit Die. Decembris,
Anno Domini MDCCCXLIX.
Ætatis suæ LVIII.

The inhabitants of Stanmore and its neighbourhood testified their respect for the memory of her late Majesty by closing their houses, and the bell of the parish church was tolled for some time after the funeral had left.

Upon arriving at the south porch of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, the Royal body was received at the door by the Archbishop of Canterbury and Canons of Windsor, and placed upon the platform, the crown and cushion being upon it.

The procession then moved into the choir in the following order.—

The Archbishop and the Canons of Windsor.
Garter
The Lord-Chamberlain of her Majesty's Household, attended by one of his Officers.

Supporter of the Pall, Lord Byron.	THE BODY, Covered with a Black Velvet Pall,	Supporter of the Pall, Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence.
Supporter of the Pall, Lord Frederick Fitzclarence.	adorned with Escutcheons of	Supporter of the Pall, Viscount Barrington.
Supporter of the Pall, Earl of Sheffield.	Her late Majesty's Arms.	Supporter the Pall, Marquis of Cholmondeley.

THE CHIEF MOURNER,
The Duchess of Norfolk (sister), and by a Lady
His Serene Highness the Prince Bernard of Saxe-Weimar.
His Serene Highness the Prince Charles of Saxe-Weimar.
[illegible]
Master of the Horse to her late Majesty.
Lord [illegible] Lord in Waiting to her late Majesty.
Ladies of the Bedchamber to her late Majesty.
Maids of Honour to her late Majesty.
Women of the Bedchamber to her late Majesty.
Clerk Marshal of the Household to her late Majesty.
Surgeon-Extraordinary to her late Majesty.
Physicians to her late Majesty.
Gentlemen Ushers to her late Majesty.
Senior Page to her late Majesty.
Dressers and Wardrobe Maid to her late Majesty.

Five Sailors. Five Soldiers.

Upon entering the choir, the chief mourner took her seat at the head of the corpse, the Lord Chamberlain of her Majesty's household took his place at the foot, the Vice-Chamberlain standing near her Lordship, and the other persons composing the procession arranged themselves behind the chief mourner and on either side the chapel.

The Archbishop of Canterbury read the service and the part before the interment; and the anthem performed, the Royal body was deposited in the vault, and the Archbishop having concluded the service, Garter pronounced near the grave the style of her late Majesty; after which the Lord Chamberlain and the Vice-Chamberlain of her late Majesty's household broke their staves of office, and, kneeling, deposited the same in the Royal vault.

His Royal Highness the Prince Albert was present in his Royal Highness's stall during the ceremony. The Duke of Cambridge also occupied his stall. The Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Kent, the Duchess of Cambridge, and their Serene Highnesses the Duchess of Saxe-Weimar, and the Princess Ann of Saxe-Weimar, and the Princess Amelia of Saxe-Weimar, occupied the seats marked for them.

The Duke of Wellington, the Duke of Norfolk, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Marquis of Abercorn, and Lord John Russell occupied stalls in the Chapel during the ceremony.

[Circumstances beyond our control have prevented the Illustrations we purposed giving of this mournful ceremony being presented this week. They shall appear in our next Number, accompanied by a full account of the proceedings.]

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

THE SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY AT DOVER.—The following protest against the sermon preached at the recent Visitation of the Archbishop of Canterbury at Dover, with the reply of his Grace, has been published:—"To the Most Reverend Father in God, by Divine Providence, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.—May it please your Grace, —We, the undersigned clergy of the deaneries of Dover and Elham, attending the Primary Visitation at Dover, on the 9th of October ult., feel as due to your Grace in candour, as binding upon ourselves in duty, to represent the feeling felt on our minds by a certain part of the sermon then delivered to us. So far as that sermon touched on a high line of ministerial duty, responsibility, or solemnity, the sympathy goes with it; the more so, that it simply followed, in that respect, those views which the published works of your Grace had long since given to the Church. But this, if possible, has added greater pain to our calm consideration of the statements that followed; because, without going into any detail of those statements, we feel that they unquestionably set up the direct contradictory of our scriptural belief in the efficacy of the sacrament of the Church of Christ. And, as ministers of that Church in England, we are constrained to express to your Grace a conviction ulterior to this. While we recognise the grace which has decided against those holding distinctive Roman doctrine in the Church of England,' we feel that the same justice decides against the holding distinctive Dissenting doctrine in the same Church of England. And while we should protest (as many of us have done) against this one, we desire to guard against any possible imputation that we do not feel equally bound to protest against the other. As this memorial aims at nothing but the humble and dutiful expression of our real feelings on the lamentable subject, we will only add our prayer for every blessing on the Archiepiscopate, in which Divine Providence has placed you over us, and remain, your Grace's humble and faithful servants." [As many of the names as have room] follow.

"Addington, Oct. 17, 1849.—Reverend Brethren,—I beg to acknowledge the protest you have sent me against some of the statements uttered by Mr. Gambier at the recent Visitation. I had the impression that I had not differed from what he expressed by ourselves. But I should not choose to pronounce a positive, still less an official opinion, without seeing the sermon as well as hearing it. more especially as one sentence, which I afterwards mentioned to Mr. Gambier as having appeared to me most objectionable, he explained as not having in his

I am not aware that the doctrine advanced concerning the Sacraments, and to which my chief object is distinctively the doctrine of Dissenters. But I fully acquiesce in the opinion that any doctrine propounded in our Church contradictory to its articles and formularies, justly calls for a protest from its more [illegible] members; and such a protest, if unhappily it should ever prove necessary, will always be received with the attention to which it is entitled, from your faithful servant and brother,

J. B. CANTUAR."

THE PRIMATE'S VISITATION.—A strange piece of gossip has been prevalent in clerical circles as to a certain very disagreeable proceeding at the Archbishop of Canterbury's late visitation at Dover. The sermon, it appears, was preached by one who denies the Church's teaching of baptismal regeneration, and he took occasion not only to controvert the doctrine, but to ridicule it. The great body of the clergy present—so the story goes—were so indignant at his unscrupulous remarks upon so sacred, and, as they thought, vital a question, that they besought the Archbishop not to read aloud at dinner the usual toast on the occasion, but merely to drink it. The Archbishop, however, though expressing but a qualified approval of the sermon, deemed to comply with their request, and in due course his Grace proposed the obnoxious toast, which was not only refused to be drunk by a large majority of the company, but received by them with the most marked expression of dissent and aversion. Correspondent of the Oxford Herald. [We are in a position to add, that the above statement is substantially correct.—Oxford Herald.]

PREFERMENTS.—The following preferments and appointments have last taken place:—The Rev. Archibald Campbell Tait, to the Deanery of Carlisle. The Rev. George Wilson and Murray, to the Rectory of West Ilsley, Berks, which, diocese of Lichfield. The Rev. T. Dainty, to the Prebendary of Ufton, cum parte Decani, founded in the Cathedral Church of Lichfield. The Rev. John Salter, Rector of Iron Acton, Gloucestershire, to an Honorary Canonry in the Cathedral Church of Bristol. The Rev. David Wright, of Spennithorne, Bedale, Yorkshire, to be a Minor Canon of Bristol Cathedral, in the room of the Rev. Sir Charles Macgregor, resigned. The Rev. Francis Alfred Bowles, to the Rectory of Sutgleton, Sussex. The Rev. J. P. Roberts, to the Rectory of Eastergate, Sussex. The Rev. William Pulsford, to the Rectory of Seaton, Rutland. The Rev. Alan Greenwell, to the newly-constituted Rectory and Parish Church of Colebourne, Lancashire. The Rev. George Rowland Medley, to the Vicarage of Fingringhoe, Essex. The Rev. Gabriel Galpy, to the Vicarage of Bucklebury, Berks. The Rev. C. H. Hutchinson, to the Vicarage of West Dean, Sussex. The Rev. J. G. Bentley, to be Head Master of the Grammar School, Lichfield. The Rev. S. Buckland, P.C. of Great Torrington, to be a surrogate for the diocese of Exeter. The Rev. W. Murray, P.C. of Salcombe, Devon to be a surrogate for the diocese of Exeter.

VACANCY.—PERPETUAL CURACY.—Wellcombe, Devon; diocese Exeter; value £71; pat., Lord Clinton; Rev. J. M. Cockshott, dec.

MASTERSHIP.—Chigwell, Essex; head mastership of grammar school; £50 with residence; to be a layman; testimonials on or before January 15, 1850.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

REDUCTION OF THE ARMY AND NAVY.—It is stated in military circles, that it is intended that a considerable reduction shall be made in the number of soldiers and sailors required for the ensuing financial year, 1850-51.

BARRACK ACCOMMODATION.—New barracks are to be constructed without delay at Primrose, Galway, and additional accommodation is to be given for troops in barracks at Cahir, Fermoy, Carrick-on Suir, and Dublin.

CONVICT GUARDS FOR AUSTRALIA.—Circulars have been forwarded to the several districts for returns of pensioners who may be disposed to volunteer their services to form convict guards for this colony. They are to assemble at Fareham Fort, and one ship will be immediately despatched.

PRINCE EDWARD'S ISLAND.—It is said that pensioners will be enrolled and formed into local companies, under the command of an experienced officer, for service in this colony. This arrangement, if carried into effect, will completely put a stop to the desertions which are continually taking place from the detachment stationed in that island.

THE NEW ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—There are several volunteers for the command of one of the other pinnaces, in the new Arctic expedition to be organised to proceed, via Behring's Straits, in search of Sir John Franklin. It is understood that the Enterprise and Investigator are to be at once refitted for the expedition.

COURTESY TO FRENCH NAVAL OFFICERS.—Lieutenant Messeigny, of the French Navy, on a visit to this country, has received similarly courteous attention to visit all our dockyards and victualling yards. At Deptford, especially, it has been ordered that every facility is to be afforded to the Lieutenant in acquiring information with reference to providing the navy.

SMALL ARMS.—Col. Anson, who has now the control over the small arms department of the Board of Ordnance, is using every exertion to obtain the best kind of musket for our service. Three specimens were last week taken to his office, one by a Brussels gunsmith, another by a German, and the third by Colonel Hawker, on his return from Birmingham.

THE ROYAL ARTILLERY COMPANY.—The following orders have been lately issued:—Hon. Artillery Company.—All volunteer duty is suspended. The arm-room, band-room, and dress-room will remain closed. Henry Fitzroy, Lieutenant-Colonel commanding Hon. Artillery Company. December 8."—"Hon. Artillery Company.—Mr. Ballis is appointed Acting-Quartermaster until further notice. By command of Lieutenant-Colonel Fitzroy, W. H. Neild. December 10."

THE Commissioners of the Northern Lighthouses have given notice that a lighthouse has been built upon the rock called "Ship of Sands," off the Mull of Kintyre, in the county of Argyll, the light of which will be exhibited on the night of Monday, the 7th of January, 1850, and every night thereafter, from sunset till sunrise.

GRAND MASONIC BANQUET TO HIS EXCELLENCY SIR CHARLES NAPIER, G.C.B., AT SIMLA.

ON Monday, the 1st of October, the Masonic fraternity of Simla entertained Sir Charles Napier, G.C.B., at a banquet in the Assembly Rooms, and invited many distinguished guests to meet his Excellency. The party was the largest given at Simla for many years. A little after seven P.M. the approach of the distinguished guest of the evening was announced, and when in grand procession, consisting of Sir H. M. Elliot, the Hon. J. C. Erskine, and Major Michell, preceded to meet Sir Charles, and invited him to enter the lodge, which was held in an adjoining room. His Excellency, in full uniform, and wearing the apron and insignia of a Royal Arch Mason, was received on entering the lodge by the Worshipful Master, and a numerous assemblage of the brethren of the mystic craft. After a short interval, the lodge-room doors were thrown open, and Sir Charles, accompanied by the Worshipful Master and brethren of the craft, proceeded to the reception-room, where the uninitiated guests were assembled.

The band of the Governor-General, which was in attendance, soon gave the signal for dinner by striking "The Roast Beef of Old England." Covers were laid for seventy, on tables forming an open horse-shoe, and, great as was this number for the size of the banqueting-room, all crowding and confusion was avoided by the admirable arrangements made. At eight P.M. the chair was taken by the Worshipful Master, Lieut.-Col. Curtis, C.B., who was supported in his duties at the upper table by Sir H. M. Elliot, K.C.B.; the Hon. J. C. Erskine, Esq.; and Major Michell, in the absence of his Excellency Brigadier-General Wheeler, C.B. On the right of the chairman sat Major-General Sir Charles Napier, G.C.B., and on his left Henry Torrens, Esq., Lieutenant-Governor; while near him, on either side, were seated Colonel Mountain, C.B., Adjutant-General of her Majesty's Forces; Colonel Stuart, C.B., Secretary to the Government; Colonel Grant, C.B., Adjutant-General of the Army; Colonel Burch, Judge-Advocate-General; Mr. Courtenay, Private Secretary, &c.

The band played at intervals during dinner; and, on the dessert being laid, the chairman proposed the usual masonic toast of "The Queen and the Craft," which was followed by the band playing "God save the Queen."

The Hon. J. C. Erskine next proposed "The Earl of Zetland, Grand Master of the Masonic Order in Great Britain." Then, "Her Excellency," proposed by Brigadier-General Wheeler, C.B., who observed that, the noble Marquis being member of a Scotch lodge, could not be elected Grand Master of India; but, notwithstanding the ties and cares inseparable from his exalted position, he had graciously accepted the office of Grand Patron of the Order. Air, "God save the Queen."

The chairman then addressed the company, introducing the toast of the evening:—"Gentlemen, I have been honoured by a request to propose to you a toast which requires no preface to insure its cordial reception. The name and career of our gallant guest, Sir Charles Napier, are too well and too widely known to permit me, even presuming to comment on them. His services and success have been stamped by the approbation of the first soldier of the age. (Cheers.) Tried in many high posts, and tested by conjunctures as dangerous as difficult, ever true to the ancestral motto of his ancient race, 'Ready, aye ready,' he has been found equal to every emergency that has marked a long and brilliant career. The Masonic fraternity may well feel proud to see the gallant General ranging himself under the banners of their time-honoured order, and appearing among them as a devoted brother. (Cheers.) I shall not longer trespass on your time, gentlemen, but at once call on you to drink the health of Sir Charles Napier in a bumper, with three times three."

The toast having been followed by the chairman's toast abundantly testified the enthusiasm with which it was received. The bank struck up "The British Grenadiers," and almost immediately after the air ceased Sir Charles Napier rose and said:—"Worshipful Master and Gentlemen, I return my cordial thanks for the honour you have done me. I should not myself have been inclined to admit that I merit the compliments paid me, but introduced as they have been by Colonel Curtis, and acknowledged in the manner you have been pleased to receive them, I suppose I must believe I am, in some measure, deserving of them. I few masons can say that they owe so much to masonry as I do: I can add [illegible] years ago, a good-for-nothing boy, I was expelled from a masonic lodge, and yet I fear I could not work myself into a chapter of that high degree, but with the aid of my friend, Colonel Curtis, I hope to rub off the rust and be able to do so, for, as I said before, probably no man present can say that he is under the same obligations to masonry that I am; and I am always glad of an opportunity of acknowledging that same to the craft. I was once a prisoner without [illegible] of being even exchanged, and expected to be sent to Verdun, to which place the French and prisoners were consigned; but at that time, the two Governments of France and England were so exasperated against each other, that their anger fell on individuals, and there was no exchange of prisoners; a mutual wish was taken that a chance of prisoners to every one of the two friends again. In this state of despair and misery, knowing that my family must have been [illegible] me to have been killed, I was casting about in my own thoughts for some way in which I could communicate with my family; I came across a mason, had gated the once formidable Sikh nation, the same chivalrous bearing has characterised his brilliant career (hear, hear), the same signal success has attended his arms. (Cheers.) Opposed, at various periods, to the armies of three distant nations, each differing in caste, in colour, and in creed, he compelled each, in turn, to bow before the British flag. (Loud cheers.) Engaged in no mean struggle with an ordinary, untrained, or unarmed enemy, but committed to a deadly contest with a fierce, a disciplined, and a determined foe, the most formidable yet opposed to British arms in India (hear, hear), it cannot be conceived that the great victories achieved, and the important objects attained, by Lord Gough, could be accomplished without cost; but well and nobly has he ever upheld England's honour—overthrowing every obstacle, overcoming every difficulty, and bringing to a triumphant termination every campaign he conducted, commanding in chief. (Long and loud cheers.) Amongst the many great and good qualities for which the Viscount is remarkable, none are more eminently conspicuous in his Lordship's character, than that singleness of heart, that stern honesty of purpose, that deep devotion to the honour of his country, so happily, so gracefully alluded to by the noble Lord at the head of the Indian Government, in the hearing of most of us now present, on a very recent occasion, when Lord Gough presented to the Marquis of Dalhousie the captured Sikh guns, trophies of his latest triumph. (Hear, hear.) Honours, rank, and distinction have justly rewarded his eminent services and public virtues; but they alone who have been honoured by the personal friendship of Lord Gough, and enjoyed the privilege of seeing him in the amiable relations of domestic life—as husband, father, and friend—can estimate the entire worth of his kindly, generous, and noble nature." (Deafening cheers.) The Worshipful Chairman concluded by calling on the company to fill a bumper to the health of Hugh Viscount Gough—long may he enjoy his well-won honours in his native land."

GRAND MASONIC BANQUET TO SIR C. J. NAPIER, G.R., AT SIMLA.

The party rose en masse, and drank the toast with every honour. Cheers, long, loud, and heart-stirring, showed the feeling of the company for the noble and gallant officer whose health had just been so rapturously received. On the party re-seating themselves, the band played "Should auld acquaintance be forgot?"

Sir Henry Elliot next, in a neat speech, proposed "the health of Mr. Thomason and our guests." (Hear, hear.)

The toast was received with rapture; and, when the cheering had subsided the band played "Rule Britannia."

At the conclusion of the air, his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor rose and acknowledged the toast, and, in the course of an eloquent address, which we regret we have not room to report fully, Sir Henry observed of his fellow guests:—"Their bravery has won those possessions which my brother civilians and I are only managing. Their prowess has added province after province to British India. Their gallantry has recently added to our empire the kingdom of the Punjaub." (Cheers.) Sir Henry concluded by referring to the main principles of the Order—charity, goodwill, and brotherly love.

His Honor resumed his seat amid great applause, and, after a short interval, again rose, and proposed "The health of the Worshipful Master," who presides so ably on the present occasion.

"The health of the Worshipful Master, Colonel Curtis," was then drunk with loud cheers.

Lieut.-Col. Curtis rose and thanked the company, adding, "I may be permitted to indulge a pardonable pride in the post I now occupy, having on my right one of England's first soldiers, and on my left one of India's first statesmen. (Loud cheers, during which the speaker made an inclination right and left to Sir C. Napier and Mr. Thomason.)

At a little before twelve, Sir Charles Napier and the Lieutenant-Governor retired, followed by most of the company.

The entertainment passed off most successfully. The banqueting-room was brilliantly illuminated by chandeliers, whose light fell on the splendid and varied uniforms and masonic insignia of the company, and abundantly lit up the tables, which were covered with a profusion of plate. The dinner and wines were of the choicest description; and the entertainment was in every respect worthy of the great occasion.

THE NELSON COLUMN, TRAFALGAR-SQUARE.

The first instalment of the artistic embellishment of the pedestal of the Nelson Column has just been placed on the side facing Whitehall. It is a fine alto relievo, in bronze, by Mr. C. E. Carew. The subject is "the Death of Nelson;" the point of time selected by the sculptor that when Lord Nelson was being carried from the quarter-deck to the cockpit, after he had received his mortal wound. Captain Hardy, who had been in conversation with him only a few moments before, on turning round, saw him lifted from the deck by a marine and two seamen. "Well, Hardy," said Nelson to his captain, "they have done for me at last." "I hope not," was the reply. "Yes, they have shot me through the back-bone." Immediately afterwards, on observing that the tiller-ropes were shot away, he said, "Let new ones be rove." This was the last order that the hero gave on the deck of the Victory.

BRONZE ALTO RELIEVO, BY CAREW, FOR THE NELSON MONUMENT, TRAFALGAR-SQUARE.—THE DEATH OF NELSON.

Although we have termed the scene "The Death of Nelson," the sculptor has invested it with a new interest by his skilful narration of the event. The central portion we have already described. At the back of this group is the surgeon, with an expression of the deepest grief on his countenance, supplying the place of words, to tell that for Nelson's wound all human succour was in vain. Each figure of the whole stands out in beautiful relief. In the compartment to the left are three sailors engaged in tightening some of the cordage of the ship, and repairing the damage which the enemy's fire has effected. One of the three has his back turned towards the spectator, and close to his feet kneels a sailor holding a handspike, and leaning on a gun, apparently arrested in his movements by the conversation between the dying hero and Captain Hardy. Each of these two portions is of surpassing merit; and on the first the eye naturally rests last: as the point d'appui of the whole. In the front, lying on the deck, are an officer and a marine who have fallen to rise no more. Behind, stand two marines and a Negro sailor. One of the former has detected the marksman by whose shot his noble commander has been struck down, and is pointing him out to his companion. The latter has raised his musket, and has evidently covered his mark, whilst the black, who stands just before the two marines, has "elewed" himself round, and, grasping his firelock with a convulsive hold, looks at the intended victim with all the ferocity of a wild beast. The upper part is well filled by the sweeping of the sails, the cordage, and the wreck of a yard that has been shot away and fallen obliquely across the mainmast, just over the central group. The figures are not colossal, but of life-like size, and the minutest details of the scene have been well preserved.

The weight of the relievo is about 5 tons. It was cast in three divisions, at the foundry of Messrs. Adams, Christie, and Co., Rotherhithe, and absorbed the metal of five mortars and one 32-pounder, which were supplied by the Government. The height is 14 feet, the breadth about 13 feet 7 inches. There appears to be scarcely the slightest flaw in any part; and this is attributed by the artist, in a great measure, to the metal having been poured into the mould in a horizontal, instead of a vertical, position, according to the usual practice.

The three other alto relievos, to decorate as many faces of the pedestal, were entrusted to Messrs. Watson, Woodington, and Ternouth; the two latter of whom, both artists of high promise, have since died.

The subject given to Mr. Watson represents Nelson animating and directing the boarding of St. Vincent.

Mr. Woodington was engaged for the Nile, where Nelson, being wounded, had gone below, and the sword of the commander of the Spartiate is brought to him by Captain Berry.

Mr. Ternouth had, previous to his decease, completed the full-size model of the Copenhagen panel, showing the landing of Nelson after the battle.

It may be interesting to enumerate the Illustrations we have already given of the Nelson Column.

Number 79 of our Journal contains an Engraving of the Statue of Nelson.
Number 77 illustrates the Column, and its accessories, completed.
And Number 81, the Column, with the Builder's Scaffolding.

THE TOWN OF KILRUSH.

CONDITION OF IRELAND.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE NEW POOR-LAW

(From our own Correspondent.)

[The present fearful Condition of Ireland, made considerably worse, we believe, by the operation of the New Poor-Law, has induced us to give, as far as possible, a faithful report of the working of this Law with Illustrations of Localities, sketched by our own Artist.]

GENERAL STATE OF KILRUSH.

Kilrush, which gives its name to a Poor-law Union, will be celebrated in the history of pauperism. With Clifden, Westport, Skibbereen, and other places, it forms one of the battle-fields of Ireland, in which property, under the guidance of legislation, has fought with poverty, and been worsted in the conflict. It is our purpose to describe the progress of the contest, and, as Sterne took a single victim to make mankind sensible of the horrors of slavery—as a single case of flogging women did more to rouse the people of England against the iniquities they had countenanced in the West Indies, than many volumes of general description—we presume that we shall make the condition of Ireland, and the working of the Poor-law there, more effectually known by selecting a single Union for remark, than by parading before our readers a great multitude of statistical facts. Our Commissioner is on the spot, and we illustrate the Sketches and condense the facts he has supplied us with. Sketch No. 1. represents the town of Kilrush.

As an appropriate introduction, we quote from the Times of Tuesday an account of the

"DEPLORABLE STATE OF THE KILRUSH UNION.

"The Limerick papers bring melancholy accounts of a "crisis" which has at length taken place in the affairs of this unfortunate Union. Money and credit are all gone, and starvation has literally set in among the paupers in the workhouse, the inmates having been sent to bed on Thursday night without having eaten any dinner—the only remedy that the guardians could suggest to numb the sense of hunger. The Limerick Chronicle's statement is as follows:—

"'Notwithstanding the exertions of the local board and Poor-law inspectors, the in-door paupers were obliged to go to bed without dinner on Thursday night. The master brought the state of the house, as regards want of provisions for that day, before the board, when soup and chopped turnips grown on the land was the only food available. The out-door paupers are in a desperate state, crowding the depôts and following the relieving officers by thousands to town to get into the workhouse; but one day's admissions (300 admitted) so crowded the auxiliary, that admission was impossible. Barley, the produce of the land about the workhouse, has been ordered to be threshed; but are 2600 paupers to be fed on the principle of "live, horse, and you'll get grass?" It is fearful to think of the state of the Kilrush Union—nothing but starving creatures from the country to be seen pouring into a starving workhouse; the Board meet every day, but, if we are to judge from the general confession of that body, they are able to effect no good. The chairman, Colonel C. M. Vandeleur, took the chair yesterday, and his presence was sufficient it was thought to get the 'needful,' but to no purpose; out-door paupers and relieving officers were sent home, and in-door paupers recommended to go to bed. The coroner attended an inquest on a man who was found in a dying state on the side of the road near Kilmurry. Mortality in the workhouse has been small; but, owing to the able-bodied on the out-door relief being struck off, the deaths in that department are every day increasing to a frightful extent. Relieving officers complain that they must bury their dead without coffins. The Board yesterday agreed to petition the Poor-law Commissioners on the state of the Union, and said that the guardians would not be morally responsible for the deaths that may occur through starvation.'"

Kilrush is in the county of Clare, and on one bank of the Shannon. It is situated in a district that is both fertile and picturesque. It has all the conveniences of a haven, and might have all the advantages of a great trading and fishing port. It is, for Ireland, a tolerably large town, with well-built stone houses, and broad, clean streets, though it has plenty of mud cabins and dirt, like every other Irish town. It is going rapidly to decay, and most of the houses could be bought for less than the value of the stones they were built with. The Poor-house is now, and likely to be for a long period, the principal build ng in the town, and, with the Catholic chapel, constitute its architectural distinctions.

SCALPEEN.

THE VILLAGE OF TULLIG.

The Union to which it gives a name consists of nine districts:—1. Kilrush and Killimer. 2. Knock and Kilcolin. 3. Kilriddan and Kildysert. 4. Kilmihil and Kilmacdoan. 5. Kilmurry. 6. Kilfiddane. 7. Kilkee. 8. Moyarta. 9. Kilbally-owen. It extends right across the Clare peninsula, between the Shannon and the Western Ocean, and contained, in 1841, a population of 82,368. Of this population, very considerably reduced in numbers, there were no less than 22,961 receiving relief out of the workhouse, at the cost per week of £589, in April, 1849; and in June the number was increased to 29,049, who were maintained at a cost of £780 16s. 5d. Taking the average of the two months, the number relieved was more than 25 per cent. of the population of 1841; and taking the large number in June the number relieved was more than 35 per cent.; the cost of maintaining them was something less than 6d. per head per week. At the same period there were in the union workhouse about 2500 paupers, making the total number of persons relieved in June 31,549, or more than 43 per cent. of the population of 1841. If we knew the exact number at present, greatly reduced as it is, we should, no doubt, find that they were more than one-half of the whole population, or more than 50 per cent., are receiving relief. So far as mere figures go, it is an afflicting picture to see every man, woman, or child, in possession of a crust or a pound of meat, besieged by another beggar for a share of that which is hardly sufficient for his own wants.

From this general view we pass to an example of the manner in which the out-door paupers live. In the workhouse the people, till the last arrival, were tolerably well taken care of; and until the general destitution, that they were well housed, clothed, and fed, in comparison with the mass. Our second Sketch represents what is called a Scalpeen. There is also something called a Scalp, or hole dug in the earth, some two or three feet deep. In such a place was the abode of Brian Connor. He has three in family, and had lived in this hole several months before it was discovered. It was roofed over with sticks and pieces of turf, laid in the shape of an inverted saucer. It resembles, though not quite so large, one of the ant-hills of the African forests. Many of the poorer women have also been levelled take up their abodes in such places; and even in them there is a d[illegible] A Scalpeen is a hole, [illegible] rather loftier and grander in its dimensions. It is often erected within the walls, when any are left standing, of the unroofed houses, and all that is above the surface is built out of the old materials. It possesses, too, some pieces of furniture, and [illegible] ngenuer superior to the Scalp. In such, or still more wretched abodes, burrowing as they can, the remnant of the starving population is hastening to an end, and after a few years will be as scarce nearly as the exterminated Indians, except the specimens that are carefully preserved in the workhouse. Those whom starvation spares, disease cuts off.

Even from the Scalps the poor are hunted. "None of the houseless class," says Captain Kennedy, the poor-law inspector, "can now find admittance save into some over-crowded cabin, whose inmates seldom survive a month." A month's agonies the result of hunger, dirt, and fever—fever being expelled from a home, suffices to destroy life. It is a sort of Majendie experiment made on human beings—not on cats in an air-pump, or on rabbits with prussic acid. Yet the instinctive love of life is so great, so strong is the sentiment by which Nature ensures the continuance of the race, that Brian Connor dreads nothing so much as that he shall not be allowed, now that his hut has been discovered, to burrow longer in security; and like a fox, or some other vermin, he expects to be ear[illegible]ed, and left even without the shelter of what may be called a preparatory grave. The mud cabins and turf huts that the peasantry lived in before 1846 were denounced by every traveller as the scandal of civilised Europe; and it was supposed that worse habitations were not on the earth; but the Irish have proved that in their lowest deep there is still a lower deep—that a Scalpeen is worse than a mud-hut, and a Scalp worse than a Scalpeen.

[illegible] watched and man are [illegible] wrap each other in countenance, and perpetuate crime and wretchedness. What hope, then, can be entertained of ever again el evating the Irish, when the bulk of them are degraded to Scalps and starvation, even to the dignity of mud cabins and plenty of potatoes? The may die out or may be killed off; but, when the half of the whole live on 6d. per week, and are thankful for being allowed to burrow in Scalps, there must be more hope of the savages of New South Wales or the Bra[illegible], than of those whom knaves have flattered with the name of the "finest peasantry in the world."

A great and a just sympathy is just now excited by the sufferings of the needlewomen of the metropolis, and by the hard labour and poor pay of females in various branches of town industry. But they at least find shelter; most of them have clothing; they manage to get food, though the supply is scanty; and [illegible] with the Scalp, or burrowing hole, of the Irish peasant.

The present condition of the Irish [illegible] mainly brought on by ignorant and vicious legislation. The destitution, of the [illegible] fed as they were by the taxes of the state and the charity of the world, to immediate decay; but a false theory, assuming the name of a political economy, will which it has no more to do than with the astrology of the days of Nostradamus or Gener[illegible] Haynau, led the landlords and the legislature to believe that it was a favourable opportunity for changing the occupation of the land and the cultivation of the soil from potatoes to corn. Which mere food, mere cultivation, mere employment, were the requisites for maintaining the Irish in ex stence, the Legislature and the landlords set about introducing a species of cultivation that could only be successful by requiring fewer hands, and turning potato gardens that nourished the maximum of human beings, into pasture grounds for bullocks, that nourished only the minimum. The Poor-law, said to be for the relief of the people and the maintenance of the able-bodied, was for the nurture of their destruction. In their terrible distress, from that temporary calamity with which they were visited, they were to have no relief unless they gave up their holdings That law, too, laid down a form for evicting the people, and thus gave the sanction and encouragement of legislation to exterminate them. Calmly and quietly, but very ingenuously—though we cheerfully exonerate the parties from any malevolence, they only committed a great mistake, a terrible blunder, which in legislation is worse than a crime—but calmly and quietly from Westminster itself, which is the centre of civilisation, did the decree go forth which has made the temporary but terrible visitation of a potato blight into a permanent wasting, through the slow process of disease and houseless starvation, nearly the half of the Irish.

The land is still there, in all its natural beauty and fertility. The sparkling Shannon, teeming with fish, still flows by their doors, and might bear to them, as the Hudson and Thames bear to the people of New York and of London, fleets of ships laden with wealth. The grounds or Corcasses of Clare are celebrated for their prodigious verdure. The country abounds in limestone; coal, iron, and lead have been found. It has an area of 827,394 acres, 372,237 of which are uncultivated, or occupied by woods or water. It is estimated that there are 226,000 acres of unoccupied lands and that of these 160,000 are capable of cultivation and improvement. Why are they not cultivated and improved, as the wilds of America are cultivated and improved by the brethren of the Irish? Why are these starving people not allowed and encouraged to plant their potato-gardens on the wastes? Why are they not married to the unoccupied soil, as a humane politician proposes to provide for the starving needlewomen of the metropolis by marrying them to the Canterbury and New Zealand? A more important question cannot be asked. There is about Kilrush, and in Clare, and throughout Ireland, the doubly melancholy spectacle of a strong man asking for work as the means of getting food, and finding none; and of a benevolent country in order to yield up to him its rich but latent stores: yet it lies idle and unfruitful. Why is not this doubly melancholy spectacle destroyed by their union, and converted into life and happiness, as oxygen and hydrogen, each in itself destructive, become, when united as water, the pabulum of existence? We shall fully consider that question before we quit the subject, but we shall now only say that the whole of that sad, unenlightened, and unenlightening policy is now progressing—that many of them are absentees—that almost all are in embarrassed circumstances and that, from ignorance, or false theory, or indolence, they persist seeing the land covered with such misery as we have described, without bringing the land under cultivation themselves, or allowing the people to cultivate it. Their greatest ambition, apparently, is to get rid of the people.

Our third Sketch shows the destitution to be seen about Kilrush and in many other parts of Ireland. No conqueror ever left more conspicuous marks of his devastation. The Sketch is not of a deserted village—though that was a miserable [illegible]spectacle, for the wretches who once vowed it as the abode of [illegible]y and peace still linger and hover about it—but of a destroyed village. The ruthless spoiler has been at work and swept away the shelter that honest industry had prepared for suffering and for sorrow. A conqueror would not have had time and scarcity to do the mischief which is perpetrated in safety [illegible] within one fortnight of May 7, in 841, one-fifth or 20 per cent. of the whole population were turned out of their houses and the houses pulled down. Not less than 2000 houses were levelled in the Union of Kilrush in the years 1848-49. Ireland is now marked with many such monuments of the terrible [illegible] of landlords and of the legislature as the roofless village represented in our sketch.

(To be continued next week.)

IRELAND.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.—Most of the workhouse schools in this country are connected with the National Board. The Northern Whig states that at the last meeting of the Lisburn Guardians a motion was submitted that their schools should be placed in connexion with that board. The motion was opposed by a majority of the Board of Guardians, on the ground that the chairman, who presided, declared that he could no longer be chairman of the union. After some discussion, it was agreed to postpone any final decision until the beginning of next month.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE GROWTH OF FLAX IN IRELAND.—The annual meeting of this society was held in Belfast last week.—John Sharman Crawford, Esq., presiding. The valuable report was read. Of all the means for the operations of the society in extending the cultivation and preparation of flax throughout the country, in aid of which two separate grants of £1000 each had been obtained from the Treasury, through the intervention of the Lord-Lieutenant. The concluding passage of this really important report observes:—

In several of the workhouses, both in Ulster and the other provinces, flax has been spun and woven into linen; and in some cases the plant has been grown on a portion of the ground laboured by the paupers. In a few instances, also, the fibre has been scutched in the workhouses, as a means of employing the inmates. Generally speaking, the art of spinning the coarser description of hand seutch ng in the poor-law unions of the south and west would be very desirable, as in cases where a district has just entered on flax culture, and where no mill has been established, farmers are often deterred from proceeding with it, from the great expense of preparing the flax by the labour of hackpeel and hands. The linen manufacture is particularly adapted in the present time of trade from long depression, and, as much activity prevails in many of its branches, there is a good prospect to growers of flax of a large demand and remunerating prices for their produce. The establishment of a school of Design in Belfast, and the patronage of her Majesty the Queen to the finer branches of the manufacture, are likely to give them a favourable impulse, and to increase the consumption of the raw material. This society has now been nearly nine years engaged in its arduous labours to accomplish the great national object for which it was formed. During the period that has elapsed since its foundation in 1841, it has succeeded, notwithstanding the opposition that prejudice and long-rooted habits have produced, in general improvement in the agricultural practices of the farmers in all the districts of Ulster to which its operations have been extended. It has introduced scutching machines of a very superior description to that formerly in use, and has thus accomplished a [illegible] only in labour and material. It has induced the saving of a large portion of seed, lost in the steep-pool, thereby rendering it unnecessary to increase the profits of the crop, by the sale of the seed, or its use in feeding his cattle. Since its attention has been directed to the districts of the other provinces, it has done much towards the general extension of flax cultivation at which it has aimed. Out of the 33 counties of the provinces of Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, its operations have been extended to 21. In some of those (Cork, Mayo, Limerick, Tipperary, Kilkenny, and Queen's County) flax cultivation to a small extent has firmly taken root; and in the rest it is in a greater or less state of progress, according to the circumstances of the district at which the society took it up. Where flax has been extensively grown during the late years of distress, it has been of the utmost service to the poorer class, by enabling them to pay their rents, and thus to remain in their farms and live stock the food crops that would otherwise have gone to pay rent and taxes; but where, from the first, it has been [illegible] by the small quantity of land on which it has been very great, more especially to the weaker classes of the peasantry. When the society was instituted, flax was the only crop in which the Irish farmer had to undertake any competition with the foreign grower, and that grain and cattle, &c., were subject to considerable duties on their importation into these countries, the duty on which flax had been removed for a long period, and was entirely free of duty. It must, notwithstanding the peculiar suitability of our soil and climate to the growth of flax, be evident to all, that the [illegible] by the premium that existed on the cultivation of other crops. At the present moment, however, a new era has arisen in the history of flax and linen in Ireland, and with the increased attention that has been paid to the details of management [illegible] the cessation of the society, and the consequent cessation of its operations in the country, it is now a more favourable position to make good its way than it has ever yet been. In England and Scotland, the reduced rates for grain produce have caused much attention of late to be turned to the cultivation of flax, and in those countries the poor commodity we have had means to [illegible] for advice and information, which they have always readily granted, considering, as they do, that this question is not merely of national, but of imperial moment. The cheapness of labour in Ireland must always give us an advantage in a crop requiring so much manipulation as flax, and experience has proved that in all the channels for the successful prosecution of this branch of agriculture we are in no case inferior, and often superior, to our rivals throughout the world.

THE PRACTICAL INSTRUCTORS FUND.—The Earl of Clonearty announced, at the meeting of the Agricultural Society of Ireland, last week, that the Lord-Lieutenant had placed a further sum of £1000 at the disposal of the society, for the re-appointment of the Practical Instructors, who have rendered such invaluable service in the promotion of improved husbandry in Ireland.

THE POOR-LAW.—The increasing embarrassments of the distressed unions in the south and west form the leading topic in the Irish papers, and writers earnestly demanding legislative intervention and remedy. In the well-known union of Kilrush there are further evictions to aggravate all the existing misery. Forty-five landholders have agreed upon eighty-nine cases, and some waste land in Kilmurry, were evicted last week. They had held under a middleman, as intermediate landlord, and this person having been ejected for non-payment of rent, the superior landlord now takes possession. A harrowing account of this "clearance" is given in the Limerick and Clare Examiner. It is stated that the land has been let to a neighbouring farmer, who, when bidding for it, "exhibited a stocking full of gold." The landlord's game, it was once accepted. In the Westport and Castlebar unions great exertions are made to diminish the expenditure of the staff, and to put a stop to out-door relief. In Westport the Marquis of Sligo is actively engaged in the preparation of the new rate-book for the purpose of electoral div sions. Even in the comparatively well-circumstanced union of Parsonstown, King's County, where the Earl of Rosse has been so creditably assisting himself, the poor-law is not working satisfactorily to the Poor-law Commissioners, it appears, have, for the present, waived all claim to the repayment of the instalments of the debt due to the Treasury. At a recent meeting of the North Dublin Union, Mr. Gregan, the auditor, in his report, remarking upon the report of the financial condition of the Limerick unions, observed that "that county comprised some of the best land in all Ireland, yet the produce per acre, in the year 1847, was but the barrels of wheat, 3 barrels of oats, and 9½ of oats. That was miserable produce to be drawn from such fine land; but things were worse in 1848, for in that year the barrels of wheat descended to 4½, and the oats to 5 barrels per acre. Under such indications of poverty the property of Limerick converted the opportunities they enjoyed in the possession of such excellent land, and went far to explain the embarrassments in which the unions of Limerick were involved."

THE PUBLIC LANDED ESTATES COMMISSION.—The total number of petitions presented to the court up to Saturday last exceeded one hundred and fifty. The Dublin Evening Mail, in referring to the approaching [illegible] of the court, says:—"We are unable to calculate the amount of debts represented, or the value of the properties involved, but the former must considerably exceed three millions sterling, while the latter, in times more auspicious to vendors, must likewise represent several hundreds of thousands per annum. To show the increasing confidence in the court, as well as the hard work in prospect for the commissioners, we can state that between the 16th and 30th of November, or within fourteen days, sixty-seven petitions were presented. Of these, nineteen refer to Connaught, one embracing a very large property, that of Lord Oranmore, owner, and Sir Moses Monteflore and Samuel Gurney, petitioners. Another noble Lord, long an absentee, the Earl of Ashtown, is brought before the court by Mr. Gregan, M.P., and A. Wall. In the south, a very fine property, Mr. Deane Freeman's, is likely to pass into market overt."

THE IRISH PROTECTIONIST MOVEMENT.—The Protectionists of the sister country are beginning to bestir themselves. The Limerick Chronicle announces that "a very important document is now circulating through Ireland, at the instance of the Earl of Glengall and other peers, in the shape of a petition to her Majesty, praying for the restoration of the agricultural interests of this country." That journal adds: "We believe it is intended as a groundwork for an amendment to the Address in Parliament next session, in case some means of relief are not recommended in the Queen's Speech on the meeting of Parliament." We understand the petition is prepared with great ability, taking a brief review of the evils of this country, social and political, and brushes throughout a spirit of nationality on one hand, and loyalty on the other. The abolition of the Vice-royalty of Ireland is the only questionable topic in the address."

EMIGRATION.—The tide of emigration still continues unabated, even at this inclement season of the year. On Friday week the Jane Black sailed from Limerick for America with nearly 300 passengers, some of them very wealthy farmers, who carried with them the enterprise and capital for which they had no prospect of profitable investment in their own country. Artisans from the same city and neighbourhood at the same time proceeded in considerable numbers by the train for Liverpool, en route to America.

THE WEATHER.—During the latter portion of last week the weather was exceedingly boisterous, violent gales being accompanied by a very heavy fall of rain. The accounts from the provinces describe a similar state of the weather, and the floods have inflicted considerable injury in various parts of the country. At Waterford it blew a regular storm. In the vicinity of Dublin there were some extensive floods, caused by incessant rain, but no accident of a serious character has resulted. The pavilion raised at Belfast for the reception of the Queen has been destroyed by the heavy gales.

REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—The Association met on Monday, at Conciliation Hall, Mr. James Murphy in the chair. There was a very thin attendance. Mr. John O'Connell, referring to the negotiations on foot for a union between the parties composing the "Irish Alliance" and the repealers of Conciliation Hall, said that the negotiations were commenced by the Very Rev. Dr. Spratt, who took up the idea that there might be an amalgamation between both parties. Two or three communications had already passed between the negotiating parties; but there was no hope of a speedy settlement, for he must confess he did not see his way distinctly to that termination which Dr. Spratt had so much at heart; namely, a re-union of repealers upon principles that were perfectly peaceful, legal, and constitutional. However, the committee appointed by the association were giving their most anxious consideration to the subject, and the association might rest satisfied they would ever keep in view their guiding star of peaceful and legal agitation. In concluding, the hon. gentleman moved that the association do approve of the conduct of the committee in entering into the negotiations he had referred to, and that authority be given them to carry the matter to an issue. The resolution was adopted; after which, the rent was announced to be £15 16s.

HUNGARIAN REFUGEES IN LEITH.—Thirty-five Hungarians—a portion, we believe, of the defenders of Comorn—have been landed lately at Leith [illegible] seven of these are gentlemen of rank, education, and formerly of wealth, and all [illegible] were provinces. They were arrested on landing on their way to America, and were waiting for a passage, when the Austrian police, acting under foreign and evil influence, drove them from the city and compelled them to seek refuge on our shores. They are indebted to Captain Blackwood, of the Martello, for a cabin passage at half-price. It is gratifying to be able to state that the merchants of Leith have at once raised £60 for the strangers cast among them, and mean at least to try to make up £2-0, which will pay the passage to America and other expenses.

THE THEATRES.

PRINCESS'S.

Under the title of "Mina," a new two-act opera, the music by Signor Schira, and the libretto by Messrs. Val. Morris and G. Linley, was produced on Saturday night, with marked success, and has been repeated this week with equal tokens of favour. Signor Schira has been many years a resident in this country, and has been the musical director and conductor at Drury-Lane and the Princess' theatres, under the respective dynasties of Messrs. Bunn and Maddox. As a singing-master, also his session from the theatre, Signor Schira has been well known, and he had the general reputation of being an accomplished professor of his art, who, in other countries, had been recognized as a composer of merit and promise. The lessee of the Princess' was, therefore, quite right when he afforded Signor Schira the opportunity of composing a work for the English stage, and the result has quite justified the selection. Signor Schira has shown that he is well qualified for the lyric drama, for he has succeeded under every possible disadvantage—not only of inadequate execution of his work, but despite of the very worst libretto that ever composer was inflicted with. It is an undeniable evidence of Signor Schira's abilities, that for such a miserable poem he has composed such elegant and dramatic music.

The title of the drama would indicate that it had reference to Spain and General Mina, whose exploits in the Basque Provinces would amply intensely interesting stage situations; but this is not the case. Mina is not a Spaniard, but a young and warbling Swedish nightingale—as exemplified by Miss Louisa Pyne, that charming vocalist, who so recently has risen to fame, and is delighting the town with her melodies, which, since the days of Miss Stephens, has had no parallel. And Mina is the daughter of Gernstaern (H.Corri), who, under the name of Ratson, is concealed in Dalecarlia, at that period of Swedish and Danish History (1550) when Gustavus was in exile, and Christiern, King of Denmark held Sweden in thraldom. The Royal personages, however, do not figure in the drama; but there is Count d'Orville, a French noble, whose life has been saved in shipwreck by Gustavus, in whose service the Count has performed many a gallant deed, and who falls in love with Mina. The Swedish maiden reciprocates this affection, thereby giving mortal offence to a bluff burgomaster, Ofver (Mr. Weiss), who is attached to Mina, notwithstanding the disparity of years, and who applies this motive to Jenny (Mrs. Weiss), Mina's maid. Ofver, to be revenged of the French officer, whose likeness to Gustavus deceives the stupid burgomaster and innkeeper, in the belief that D'Orville is the Swedish King, denounces him to the Danes; and the gallant Frenchman, to save the life of his Royal benefactor, who has been taken prisoner, frees the Monarch, by confirming Ofver's mistake in the identity. This incident concludes the first act, the second is occupied with the attempts of D'Orville and Ritson, to escape the clutches of the Danes; and Mina, by the old stage trick of making the escort drunk, accomplishes the escape. Ritson then returns home of Dalecarlia, who are in fact his attached tenants, and, after "blowing up" the Danes, serves to reconcile Ofver to Jenny, "sword in hand," as the book says, of the gain of a great battle by Gustavus, whereby he secures his throne, Ritson his estates and rank, Mina her Frenchman, and Jenny her Burgomaster, who, we presume, will be content with matrimony. This ensuling Miss Louisa Pyne to sing her [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Mrs. Gibbs, formerly Miss Graddon, of the Theatre Royal Drury-Lane, after a long sojourn in America, will make her first appearance in England, since her return, at the St. James's Theatre, on Wednesday next. The performances will be, "Follies of a Night," "Twas I," and "Midas."

A young lady, of good family, and, we believe, foreign extraction, who has played with great success in the provinces, will shortly make her first appearance at Plymouth.

MUSIC.

LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.

The début of Mr. Bridge Frodsham, the new tenor, has been exciting for some time past considerable curiosity, as it was given out that it is, in voice and style—although only known previously as an amateur—he was to be the English tenor par excellence. He was tremendously received at Exeter-hall last Wednesday, on his entrance to sing a common-place ballad by Augusta Read, "by no means as a token." It was encored rapturously, and even demanded a third time, but the singer returned only to bow his thanks for this great ovation. Mr. Bridge Frodsham is remarkable for his strong likeness to Sims Reeves, and, at a distance, it is difficult to distinguish the new-comer from the popular artiste; but the resemblance has no affinity in an artistical point of view. Mr. Frodsham is at present but an agreeable tenor, certainly not a great one in any sense, whether it be in quality, power, or style. His organ is like that of Robinson, the counter-tenor, only not so strong, nor is it so unctuous. But he will be a welcome addition to the list of our concert singers, even if his physical force should prevent him from being a dramatic vocalist, although we think that is the leading tenor. Mr. Travers also sang in the scheme; and, from his style of delivering the very difficult first tenor air of Raoul, in the "Huguenots," beautifully accompanied by Mr. Hill on the viola, there is every reason, to anticipate he will be of valuable service in the new English Opera House, now in progress of formation. The other singers were Miss Poole, Mrs. A. Newton, Miss Eyles, the M'ses Cole, and Miss Kell, Mr. Lefler, Mr. Land, and Herr Formes. Ernst was the lion instrumentalist; he played his divine "Elegie" most poetically and passionately—producing heart-rending tones from his instrument. In a quaint air de danse, of antique form, he was encored, and again, but more coyly so, in Mayseder's air, with variations, when he substituted "the Carnival." His cadences in the Mayseder air was one of the most prodigious feats in executive dexterity ever heard, and seemed to astonish the orchestra quite as much as the enormous audience.

M. JULLIEN'S CONCERTS.

These popular entertainments terminated on Wednesday night. Last night (Friday) was the ultimo lal nacqued. In the programme of Monday, a portion of Berlioz's "Harold" Symphony, one of the first instrumental pieces that has been written since the Beethoven Symphonies, was performed. It is to be hoped that the Philharmonic Society, next season, will address itself to the symphonies or Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" choral Symphony. It is time that the works of the greatest instrumental writer of the age should be rendered as familiar here as they are in France and Germany.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—Madame Sontag commenced on Tuesday last a second musical tour in the provinces, at Brighton, which will terminate on the 22d inst., visiting Canterbury, Southampton, Dorchester, Bath, and Bristol. Hayes sang last Monday, at the Beaumont Institution, Mile-end, with the Misses A. and M. Williams, Huddart, &c. Miss Hayes will commence a new tour, Mr. Travers being the tenor, to sing in Italian operas and concerts in the chief towns of the United Kingdom, up to March next.——The "Messiah" was given for the third time at Exeter Hall last night (Friday), with Misses Birch and Dolby, and Messrs. Lockey and Phillips as principals; Costa being the conductor ——Mr. John Parry has given Mr. Albert Smith's entertainment this week at Nottingham, Derby, Lichfield, West Bromwich, and Leamington, and will give "Lights and Shadows" at the Hanover Rooms early next month.——Handel's "Joshua" will be performed next Monday by the London Sacred Harmonic Society (Surman), at Exeter Hall; and on the same evening, at St. Martin's Hall, Mr. Willy will give his second classical concert.——Mdlle. de Meric has met with great success at the St. Petersburgh Italian Opera, as Orsini in "Lucrezia Borgia," in which Grisi, Mario, Tagliafico, and Tamburini also appeared.——Signora Fiorentini (Mrs. Jennings) sang Norma, at Potsdam, by command of the Royal Family of Prussia.——Mdlle. Alboni is in Paris, and will, probably, appear at the French Grand Opera, in the "Favorita."

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The steeple chase fraternity have had little to occupy them this week, the Harsedon meeting having been the only one within the "home circuit;" within the provinces everything has been "blank." The only fixtures for next week are Woodford on Tuesday, and Wolverhampton on Thursday. The coursing arrangements will include Tuesday, Deptford (Wiltshire) on Wednesday and two following days, Biggar and Combermere on Thursday, and the Spelthorne (in the vicinity of Swindon) on Thursday and Friday.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The business transacted this afternoon was limited in amount, and altogether destitute of interest; it is only necessary, therefore, to submit a list of the market prices.

METROPOLITAN STEEPLE CHASE.

3 to 1 agst Sir Arthur	4 to 1 agst British Yeoman	5 to 1 agst Vain Hope

CHESTER CUP.

50 to 1 agst Peep-o'-Day Boy (t)	66 to 1 agst Damask (t)	6 to 1 agst Hough
50 to 1 — Lady Evelyn	66 to 1 — Vesta	100 to 1 — Iron Rail (t)
66 to 1 — Llandaff (t)	66 to 1 — Chanticleer	100 to 1 — Hungar (t)
66 to 1 — Cossack (t)	66 to 1 — Re-tater	100 to 1 — Kissaway (t)
	66 to 1 — Rualdry
	100 to 1 agst Knockington (t)

DERBY

9 to 1 agst Bel ugbroke	30 to 1 agst Voltigeur (t)	33 to 1 agst Mavor
12 to 1 — Ghilo Callom	30 to 1 — John o' Great (t)	40 to 1 — Blarney
20 to 1 — The Nigger		66 to 1 — Rina colt

THURSDAY.—Beyond a strong disposition to back the Night of Arabel, and an improvement in the Nigger, the betting this afternoon was as unimportant as it was dull. The prices generally show scarcely any change:—

CHESTER CUP.

50 to 1 agst White colt (t)	2000 to 25 agst Hesperus (t)	1000 to 10 agst Kissaway (t)
50 to 1 — Llamabaco	2000 to 25 — Kensington (t)	1000 to 10 — Shillmilier
66 to 1 — The Baroness (t)	2000 to 25 — Sir Richard (t)

DERBY

9 to 1 agst Bellingbroke (t, and afterwards offered	25 to 1 agst The Nigger (t to £250, and afterwards offered	25 to 1 agst John o' Great (t)
11 to 1 — Ghilie Callum (t)	25 to 1 — Mildew (t)	40 to 1 — Mavers (t)
12 to 1 — Knight of Arabel (t)	25 to 1 — Voltigeur (2 bbls) (taken freely)	Garforth (t) and afterwards offered
1000 evn. between Mavors and Mavor		2000 to 30 — The Sweed (t)
		2000 evn between Mavors and Pisaford

DERBY, 1851.

10,000 to 150 agst Hippolytus (t)

METROPOLITAN STEEPLE CHASES.—WEDNESDAY.

METROPOLITAN HANDICAP of 20 sovs each.—Mr. Treasjold's Maria Day (Frisby), 1. Mr. Vevers's Vain Hope (Archer), 2.

FREE HANDICAP STEEPLE-CHASE STAKES of 5 sovs each —Mr. Oliver's Trustme-not (J. Mason), 1. Mr. Vevers's g by the Cardinal (Archer), 2.

THE AMATEUR STEEPLE-CHASE did not come off.

MATCH, 25 sovs.—Mr. Reed's The Cobb (R. Reed), 1. Mr. Frank's Sampson (Jackson), 2.

CAUTION TO BUYERS OF GAME.—A few days ago, a Lincoln gentleman who was out shooting picked up a dead partridge, which, having much of injury upon it, excited his attention. On arriving home he opened the bird, and submitted the meat, &c. in the stomach to the analytical test, when traces of arsenic discovered was pretty nearly sufficient to have poisoned an entire family, and had this bird been found by poachers, or netted by them when unable to fly, it would in all probability have been sold to the dealers, and thus a very serious affair might have resulted. Farmers now steep their seed in arsenic.—Lincolnshire Chronicle

INCOME TAX APPEALS.—The following notice has been issued by the Income Tax Commissioners for the City of London as to appeals regarding the property and income tax under schedule D: "Notice is hereby given, that if any person shall think himself aggrieved by the assessment of the said parish of ——, in respect of the property arising from processions, trusts, offices, and of the other profits chargeable under schedule D of the Property and Income Tax, 5th and 6th Vict., chap. 35, for the year ending the 5th day of April, 1850, he may (upon giving due notice in writing to the Surveyor of the said parish, sliding at ——, of his intention) appeal to the Commissioners for General Purposes acting in and for the said district, at the meeting which will be held for the purpose of hearing and determining such appeals, on Wednesday, the 26th of December inst., at their offices, 36, Basinghall-street, at 11 in the forenoon." The parishes in the City will be taken alphabetically. A similar notice has been issued for the metropolitan boroughs of the Tower Hamlets, Finsbury, Marylebone, Lambeth, Southwark, Greenwich, and the City of Westminster.

DARING HIGHWAY ROBBERIES IN THE METROPOLIS.—This description of offence is remarkably on the increase. On Monday information was received by the police that Edward Francis, Esq., of Shadwell, had been knocked down in High-street, Shoreditch, and robbed of a watch and appendages, value £50; that Mr. William Seagrove, of Islington, had been assaulted near the Angel, and robbed of his watch and £5; that a gentleman had been knocked down in Wheeler's-fields, Camberwell, and robbed of a gold watch, maker's name Jacob, No. 53,781; also that a gentleman had been knocked down in Keate-street, Spitalfields, and plundered of a silver watch, duffy maker; and that an inhabitant of Russel-square had been attacked at the corner of Montagu mews, by two men and a woman, and plundered of a watch and appendages, value £50. Instant alarms were raised, but they all escaped.

FEMALE EMIGRATION.—The Glentanner, Government emigrant-ship, which arrived at Plymouth on Tuesday last for the purpose of taking out a large body of Irish female emigrants to Sydney, has been docked, having touched her bottom on her way down the river Thames.

It seems not to be generally known that, by the County Court Amendment Act of last session, all privileges of attorneys are abolished. It is provided by the 18th section that no privilege shall be allowed to any attorney, solicitor, or other person, to exempt him from the provisions of the act, or the County Courts Act, for the more easy recovery of small debts and demands in England.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W E H, Kirton, must forgive our suggesting the advisability of his studying the "Laws and Rudiments of Chess," before he again ventures to impugn the integrity of our Problems. Let him refer for a moment to the well-known rule which governs the set of a Pawn advancing two moves (see p 15 of the "Chess-Player's Text-Book"), and he will at once perceive that if White, in Problem 305 or 306, move the Pawn as he proposes, Black would take it en passant with his Pawn.

T S O—It would stand in writing thus: "R Rook to his 8th."

BRETES.—The Problem cannot be solved in two moves. 2. We have nothing whatever to do with either of the periodicals you mention

ΦΛΑΜΑΒΥΣ.—The diagrams in question must have miscarried

RELIANT, SIR G S.—Many thanks; they shall duly be examined.

ONSCROS.—There is nothing to prevent the Black King going to Q B 2d, which would certainly delay the mate beyond three moves

G J, Grimsby.—You are right. The note at move 17 was taken from the French magazine, where the game originally appeared

J C W M T O, PUBLO-CHESS, HON' SECRETARY, SUBSCRIBER FROM NO 1.—Ineligible

M KIRKHEITCET.—The Numbers have been forwarded: but the mismanagement of the Postoffice will in regard to Pamphlets transmitted to or from the country and the Continent renders us very doubtful of their safe arrival. The last number of La Regence has not yet come to hand

W E H, Kirton—It is impossible to make any great progress in the acquirement of the game until you are familiar with the most rudimentary information. Get the "Chess-Player's Handbook," or some other elementary treatise, and study the rules and general principles. The little book you mention is now quite antiquated and out of date

A JUVENILE FELLTOE.—See our notice to "An old Irish gentleman" in the last Number

J S, Dublin.—See the notice to "Heath," in our last Number

W H J, Birmingham.—The first named work has not yet been published

The second is published monthly, price 1s 6d

Solutions by BROCKLANDS, VALLEY FIELD, EOS, M E R, J H, ASHBURY, F G W, ARENDON, RICHMOND, P G R, R, STONEHIS, are correct. Those by F G B S, MILO, are wrong

M A, Downing College.—Your suggestion has been anticipated. We have just seen an extremely elegant folding Chess-board, by Leuchars, of Piccadilly, purposely adapted for the new Chess-room; and which, when closed, forms, with its elastic flough richly-studded ornaments, a framework for the Carton Pierre "Sarcophagus," as unique as it is appropriate.

BELLAST.—Blank diagrams for taking down positions can be got for a trifle per hundred, either at the office of the Chess-Player's Chronicle, or of Barlaud, in Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn

C P DE J, St Petersburgh.—A private communication has been despatched

CARLO FOLLERO.—Your five-move problem can be solved two ways in four moves

R T C. Though any bookseller, price 3s

BLADUD—I. The advantage would certainly be on the side of Bristol, which possesses many amateurs of high prowess and one player, Mr Wilson, of pre-eminent talent for the game. 2. The "Palladrom" was written by Mr G Walker, and, if we mistake not, has long been out of print; a note, addressed to the Author, at the London Chess Club, would, however, obtain you the information you require

J H—A player of six months's standing would see the mate at a glance

G—If your three problems, you have selected two. The third 69 is not solvable in five moves

ALPHA.—You have been misinformed. The New Chess-men can be got in the material called "Cattuca," and very beautiful they look in it

Solutions by F E O, DERWYN, M P, The New G H B. The Rev C L. The Rev H B, CASSA, FERS, BELLARY, are correct. Those by A A, MORGAN, AN OLD BUSHMEER, ROBERT MADDEN, CARLO FOLLERO, J A, are wrong

E H G—In your last problem we doubt the possibility of White mating in three moves, if Black play 1. Kt to Q B 3d.

TITUS.—The promised work on the endings of games, by Messrs Horwitz and Kling, is not likely, we apprehend, to be published this year

AN IRISH AMATEUR.—In Problem No 306 the mate cannot be deferred in the way you propose; for, if Black play 1. Kt to Q B 3d, White replies with 2. P to Q B 4th: Black then takes the Pawn in passing, and the White Queen, taking the Q P, forces mate

D C C—The problem on the wrapper of the Chess Chronicle is the famous "Indian" one. It is perfectly correct, and unquestionably the finest four-move stratagem extant.

F C—The notice is ingenious, and we may probably have something to say regarding it when we have more space at command

L W L, Tewkesbury.—You should advertise your desire to play a game by correspondence with a very young player like yourself

R V—Too early for our columns

TYRO.—You are altogether wrong

GREENWICH CHESS CLUB (Established Nov., 1849).—This Club will be happy to play a friendly Game by Correspondence with any Club established within the last Six Months. Address, "Honorary Secretary, Literary Institution, Greenwich." Dec. 8, 1849.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 307.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to Q 8 4th	Q to her 8th*	3. R mates
2. Q to K 4th (ch)	Q takes Q (a), (b).

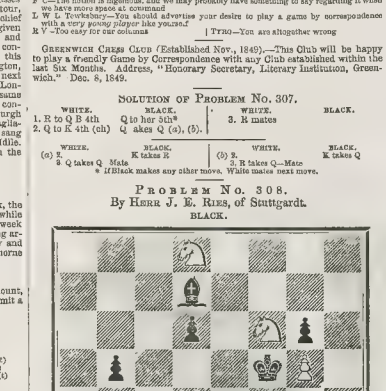
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
(a) 2.	K takes R	(b) 2.	K takes Q
R Q takes Q Mate		R takes Q—Mate

* If Black makes any other move, White mates next move.

PROBLEM No. 308.

By HERR J. E. RIES, of Stuttgardt.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE.

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
49. Kt to Q B 5th.	48. K to Q B 5th

London to play.

CHESS IN THE METROPOLIS.

MR. HORWITZ gives the Q Kt to a London Amateur.

(Remove White's Q Kt from the board.)

(Double Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. Horwitz.)	BLACK (Mr. K.)	WHITE (Mr. Horwitz.)	BLACK (Mr. K.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	14. Kt to K sq	P to K Kt 4th
2. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	15. K Kt to B 3d (a)	Q Kt takes Q P (b)
3. P to Q Kt 4th	B takes Kt P	16. Kt takes Kt	Q to K R 5th
4. P to K B 4th	P takes P	17. Kt to K B 3d	Q to K R 4th
5. P to Q B 3d	B to Q R 4th	18. P to K Kt 4th	Q to K Kt 3d (c)
6. Q to her Kt 3d	Q to K R 5th (ch)	19. K to Kt 2d	Q takes K P
7. K to B sq	K Kt to R 3d	20. Q to her R 4th (d)	K R to K sq
8. K Kt to B 3d	Q to K Kt 5th	21. Q takes B	Q takes B
9. P to K R 3d	Q to K Kt 6th	22. Q takes Kt P (ch.)	K to R sq
10. P to Q 4th	Castles	23. Q takes Kt	B to Q 2d
11. Q B to Q 2d	P to Q 3d	24. B takes P	B to B 3d
12. K to K sq	Q Kt to B 3d	25. Q to B 6th (ch)	K to Kt sq
13. Q R to K B sq	P to Q R 3d	26. B to K R 6th

And Black struck his colours.

(a) White, seeing the Kt to K sq to induce his opponent to advance the K Kt P. he now retires the Kt, threatening to win the Q next move by R to K sq.

(b) Accepting the P in native would have been dangerous play.

(c) This is an insidious move. Now, if White attacks the B, he threatens to win the Queen.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 503.—By MR. W. CAWLEY.

White: K at Q R 3d, R at Q R 6th, Bs at K 8th and Q Kt sq, Kt at Q Kt 2d, Ps at K 4 2d and Q B 4th.

Black: K at Q B 4th, Ps at K 3d, Ps at K R 4th and K 3d.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 509.—By the Rev. J. H. SWEET

White: K at his R sq, R at K Kt 8th, B at Q Kt 3d, Kt at K Kt 6th, Ps at K 6th and Q B 5th.

Black: K at his sq, B at K B 7th, Ps at Q Kt 3d and Q R 2d.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 510.—By C. S., of the Brighton Chess club.

White: K at K R 8th, Rs at K B sq and K R 7th, Bs at K Kt 4th and K B 2d, Kts at K 3d and Q 8th, Ps at K 4th and Q Kt 4th.

Black: K at Q 3d, Q at K Kt 4th, Bs at K B sq and Q 8th, Kt at Q B sq; Ps at K Kt 2d, K B 3d, K 4th, and Q 2d.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 511.—By an Amateur of York.

White: K at K R 7th, K at K 4th, Kt at K B sq, P at K Kt 3d.

Black: K at K B 4th, P at K B 3d.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Bucks Association for the Relief of Real Property will hold its next meeting at Buckingham before the end of the month, and at Marlow in the second week of January.

The annual exhibition and dinner of the Leicestershire Agricultural Society took place at Leicester on Friday week. The show of cattle was more numerous than usual, and the distinction of the fat stock was, perhaps, superior to any previous specimens. His Grace the Duke of Rutland carried off the first prize in class 1 with a splended fat ox.

As the messenger of the paper-mill at Hylton was returning, on Saturday last, from Sunderland Bank, with the money to pay the wages of the workmen, he was attacked and robbed of about £25, with which the depredators have escaped.

A new church is about to be erected at Deal, to which the following contributions have been made:—The late Queen Dowager, £50; The Archbishop of Canterbury, £200; the Earl and Countess of Clanwilliam, £100

At the Bishop Auckland County Court, last week, a claim for an extra fee of £1, for the burial of a non-parishioner, was disallowed.

A gift of £2500 has been made by W. Laslett, Esq., to the parish of St. Nicholas, Worcester.

An excellent eight-day clock has recently been erected in the tower of New Romney Church, by Mr. Henry Scarratt, of Kingston, presented to the parish by Sir William Sarsfield Rositer and Lady Cockburn, of Downton Hall, in memory of their fourth daughter, lately deceased.

The American Government has just called on the publishers of the Vienna Journals to deposit, within thirty days, the caution money of 10,000 florins (£0,000£), required by the law of 14th March, but the publishers complain loudly of this, as a needless aggravation of the severity of the state of siege.

A letter from Odessa mentions that a division of five Russian ships, of 100 guns each, had just arrived in that port, to embark troops for Sebastopol, which is the ordinary station of the Russian fleet in winter.

The Legislative Assembly of France has rejected, by a large majority, a proposal to abolish the punishment of death.

Mr. F. O'Connor has sued several of the occupants of the Chartist allotments at Heronsgarth for arrears of rent, although it is said he had promised that he would forgive them one year's amount. The consequence is, that the poor fellows have now nothing but ruin before them.

It is decided that the great meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society of England for the ensuing year will take place in Exeter, in the week commencing Monday the 15th of July. There will be a pavilion erected for the great dinner, to accommodate at least nine hundred persons.

Miss Stead, Esq., of Toddington, near Cambridge, was married in London on the 1st inst., after which the new-married couple repaired to Brighton, where the bride took cold and died on Tuesday, the 4th inst.

Sir Christopher Rawlinson is appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Madras, in the room of Sir James E. Gambier, who retires, after a very long service on the bench in India; and William Jeffcott, Esq., succeeds Sir Christopher Rawlinson as Recorder of Pulo Penang, and Chief Judge in the Straits Court of Criminal Judicature for Malacca and Singapore.

The rolls of the final distribution of the Deccan prize money, due to the 66th Regiment, have been received from India.

James K. O'Dowd, Esq., is appointed Solicitor-General for the Island of Mauritius. Mr. Bruce has been appointed a stipendiary magistrate at the Bahamas, and Mr. John Lawless is appointed her Britannic Majesty's Consul for the island of Martinique.

General O'Donnell, Inspector-General of Infantry in Spain, lately presented General Narvaez, in the name of the chiefs and officers of that arm of the service with a magnificent sword which they had had made for him by subscription, and which cost 190,00 reals (near £2000)

The Popular of Madrid says that it is quite certain that the Pope has refused his sanction to the past sales of national property, and that there is no foundation whatever for such a report.

The new jury created in the judgeship of the Westminster County Court, by the death of the late Mr. Dennis Cresgh Moylan, is to be filled up by the appointment of Mr. Francis Bayley, the revising barrister.

The Belgian Moniteur announces officially, that, in consequence of the death of the Queen Dowager of England, the King of the Belgians has gone into mourning for two months from the 6th.

According to the German Reform, the circulation of State paper in Prussia amounts to 28,844,847 thalers.

A funeral mass takes place in the Church of the Invalides at Paris, on the 15th inst. (this day), in memory of the ninth anniversary of the arrival of the ashes of the Emperor at Paris. The President of the Republic was to be present, and the Archbishop of Paris to officiate, assisted by several bishops and high dignitaries of the Church.

Matthew Bell, Esq., M.P., at his rent-days, recently held in Durham and Northumberland, made a return of 10 per cent. to his tenantry.

An importation of 2300 slabs of tin has taken place by the vessel John Selby, arrived in the docks from Canton, and the vessel Fortitude has also brought 1246 slabs of tin from Whampoa as part of her cargo. The importation of tin from the Chinese empire is not of common occurrence, and the arrivals are of some interest and importance.

A lady in Fort Glasgow bought some small whitings last week from a woman who came to the door with them, and on emptying them up to clean them the girl found a fourpenny-piece in the stomach of one!

Mr. Sheiley has retired from the contest for the representation of Shoreham, and Lord Alexander Gordon Lennox, third son of the Duke of Richmond, is, therefore, likely to walk over unopposed.

M. d'Hautpoul, Bishop of Cahors, in France, uncle of the Minister of War, has just died at an advanced age.

A notice at the Paris Post-office states that, from the 1st of January next, the letter-boxes will remain open till six o'clock, instead of till five as at present.

A return obtained by Mr. Greene, M.P., shows that the total number of prisons in England was reduced in 1849 amounted to 146, of which 24 were brought down from the Lords. The number which received the royal assent amounted to 132.

The Ann Gales, of London, outward bound, was lost off Crondon Reaf, Yarmouth, between six and seven o'clock on Saturday last. The crew, with the exception of the mate, perished, making twelve souls who met a watery grave, including the captain's wife

On Wednesday, the 28th ult., Colonel Findley's cook, in Fort George, Inverness, bought a turbot of superior quality, weighing 16lb, and when opened for the purpose of being cleaned, there were found in the belly two large whiting and a large herring, all entire and in good condition.

The Kilkenny papers state that tenant protection societies are spreading through that and the neighbouring counties of Ireland. The object of these societies is to oppose evictions.

According to the Limerick Chronicle a vast reduction in the number of students in Trinity College, Dublin, has taken place this term, caused by the poverty of the country, and the opening of the Provincial Colleges at Cork, Belfast, and Galway.

It is stated that a deputation from the contractors, to whom the Irish bankrupt unions are so deeply indebted, had an interview with Lord John Russell and the Chancellor of the Exchequer last week, and that "the result has been highly satisfactory to the parties interested."

The Princess Royal of Hanover gave birth to a daughter on the 3rd.

The Austrian Government has just taken the works of the railway from Pesth to Vienna for 3,000,000fl., to be paid in eight years, and bearing interest at four per cent.

The miners of Newcastle, being desirous to enlist the public sympathy and influence in favour of legislative protection against the fearful loss of life by colliery explosions, are issuing a series of monthly tracts, to elucidate the necessity of some preventive measure being enacted for that purpose.

M. Verheyst, the most celebrated book collector in Europe, or perhaps in the world, has just died at Brussels at an advanced age. He had founded a very curious establishment, consisting of a house of several stories, and as high as a church, and disposed so as to contain about 300,000 volumes arranged according to their subjects.

UNCARTING SHEEP.

SMITHFIELD CLUB CATTLE SHOW.

(Continued from page 388.)

A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. R. Stratton.
The second prize, of £15, to No. 42, viz. to Mr. Harvey Combe, of Downside, arm, Cobham.

A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. G. S. Foljambe
The second prize, of £10, to No. 146, viz. to Mr. J. Stokes, of Ruddington, Notts
The third prize, of £5, to No. 149, viz. to Mr. W. Fisher Hobbs, of Boxtead-lodge, near Colchester.

UNCARTING PIG.

The third prize, of £5, to No. 46, viz. to Mr. T. Bond, of Bishops Lydeard, near Taunton.

CLASS IV.

The first prize, of £20, to No. 56, viz. to the Earl of Leicester.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to the Earl of Leicester.
The second prize, of £10, to No. 57, viz. to Mr. J. Tucker, of Abbey Print-works, Stratford, Essex.

CLASS V.

The first prize, of £15, to No. 69, viz. to the Earl of Leicester.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to the Earl of Leicester.
The second prize, of £5, to No. 64, viz. to the Earl of Aylesford, of Packington near Coventry.

CLASS VI.

The prize of £10 to No. 80, viz. to Mr. J. Rob, junior, of Thorpfield, near Thirsk, Yorkshire.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

CLASS VII

The first prize, of £20, to No. 84, viz. to Mr. William Fletcher, of Rodmanthwaite, near Mansfield.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. William Fletcher.
The second prize, of £10, to No. 96, viz. to Mr. J. W. Peters, of South Petherton, Somerset.
The third prize, of £5, to No. 87, viz. to Mr. Edward Bowly, of Siddington House, near Cirencester.

CLASS VIII.

The first prize, of £20, to No. 108, viz. to Mr. Samuel Wiley, of Branaby, near York.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. Samuel Wiley.
The second prize, of £10, to No. 106, viz. to Mr. Edward Newbatt, of Old-place, Sleaford, Lincoln.

CLASS IX.

The first prize of £20, to No. 121, viz. to Mr. Richard Hickson, of Hougham, near Grantham.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. Richard Hickson.
The second prize of £10 to No. 116, viz. to Mr. Robert Beman, of Moreton-in-the-Marsh, Gloucestershire.

LONG-WOOLLED SHEEP.

CLASS X.

The first prize, of £20, to No. 137, viz. to Mr. G. Walmsley, of Rudston, near Bridlington.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. G. Walmsley.
The second prize, of £10, to No. 130, viz. to the Marquis of Exeter, of Burghley-park, near Stamford.
The third prize, of £5, to No. 136, viz to Mr. T. Twitchell, of Willington, near Bedford.

CLASS XI.

The first prize, of £20, to No. 143, viz. to Mr. G. S. Foljambe, of Osberton-hall near Worksop.

LONG-WOOLLED SHEEP (NOT LEICESTERS).

CLASS XII.

The prize of £10 to No. 150, viz. to Mr. R. Beman, of Moreton-in-the-Marsh.

A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. R. Beman.

CROSS-BRED SHEEP.

CLASS XIII.

The first prize, of £10, to No. 171, viz. to Mr. John Hitchman, of Little Milton near Wheatley, Oxon.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. John Hitchman.
The second prize, of £5, to No. 173, viz. to Mr. Charles Howard, of Biddenham near Bedford.

CLASS XIV.

The prize of £10 to No. 178, viz. to the Earl of Leicester.
A silver medal to the breader, viz. to the Earl of Leicester.

SHORT-WOOLLED SHEEP.

CLASS XV.

The first prize, of £20, to No. 188, viz. to Mr. William Rigden, Hove, near Brighton.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. William Rigden.
The second prize, of £10, to No. 195, viz. to Mr. G. S. Foljambe, of Osberton Hall, near Worksop.

CLASS XVI.

The prize of £10 to No. 201, viz. to the Duke of Richmond.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to the Duke of Richmond.

CLASS XVII.

The first prize, of £20, to No. 210, viz. to the Duke of Richmond.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to the Duke of Richmond.
The second prize, of £10, to No. 213, viz. Mr. John Wentworth, Beckhampton near Marlborough.

SHORT-WOOLLED (NOT BEING SOUTH DOWNS).

CLASS XVIII.

The prize, of £10, to No. 217, viz. Mr. William Humfrey, of Oak Ash, Chaddle worth, near Wantage.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. Mr. William Humfrey.

PIGS.

CLASS XIX.

The first prize, of £10, to No. 238, viz. to Mr. William Fisher Hobbs, of Boxted lodge, near Colchester.
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. William Fisher Hobbs.
The second prize, of £5, to No. 233, viz. to his Royal Highness Prince Albert.

CLASS XX.

The first prize, of £10, to No. 236, viz. to Mr. Samuel Druce, jun., of Eynsham, near Oxford
A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to Mr. Samuel Druce, jun.
The second prize, of £5, to No. 243, viz. to his Royal Highness Prince Albert.

CLASS XXI.

The prize of £5 to No. 251, viz. to the Earl of Radnor. A silver medal to the breeder, viz. to the Earl of Radnor.
The gold medal for the best ox or steer in Classes 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, to No. 19, viz. to Mr. R. Jones, of Woodstone Lodge, near Peterborough.
The gold medal for the best cow or heifer in Classes 7, 8, and 9, to No. 108, viz. to Mr. S. Wiley, of Brandsby, near York.
The gold medal for the best pen of one-year-old long-woolled sheep in Classes 10, 11, and 12, to No. 137, viz. to Mr. G. Walmsley, of Rudston, near Bridlington.
The gold medal for the best pen of one-year-old short-woolled sheep in Classes 13, 15, or 18, to No. 188, viz. to Mr W. Rigden, of Hove, near Brighton.
The gold medal for the best pen of pigs in Classes 19, 20, and 21, to No. 251, viz. to the Earl of Radnor, of Coleshill.
Besides the above, there was a great number of particularly fine Fat Stock; among which a Lincolnshire Ox, exhibited by Mr. H. Ingram, was much admired

(Continued on page 400.)

FEEDING.

SCENE FROM THE NEW TRAGEDY OF "GARCIA," AT SADLER'S WELLS THEATRE.

SADLER'S WELLS THEATRE.

On Wednesday, Mr. F. G. Tomlins's long-announced tragedy of "Garcia, or the Noble Error," was produced, and met with a success which deserves to be called triumphant. This success was well merited, on account of the skill betrayed in the structure of the drama and the ingenuity of its story. The tragedy itself, it is well known, has been long in print for private circulation, and is one of the number of "unacted dramas," the claims of which to stage representation have from time to time been so strongly and properly asserted. In this instance they have been fully justified. The merits of this play are all on the score of its stage adaptability; the demands which it makes on closet appreciation are few in comparison though the struggle between conscience and crime is depicted with a power which entitles the author to take high rank as a tragic poet, though seriously and vexatiously wanting "in the accomplishment of verse." The incident on which the piece is founded is exceedingly novel—the murder of a witness by a nun, to prevent his evidence being received against his mother. The Countess de Vyera (Miss Glyn) has sheltered, during a storm, a fugitive Morisco, Rodriguez Xeryfe (Mr. Graham), pursued by the officers of the Inquisition, and thereby herself falls into the hands of the tribunal, by whom she is condemned. But the Queen of Spain, perceiving the injustice of the proceeding, interferes, and procures her discharge. Previous to this, however, it is proposed that the infidel Moor should be re-examined by the court, and, according to his evidence, the matter to be finally adjudged. A nobleman, the Marquis de Pacheco (Mr. Marston), for his own ends, advises Garcia, the Countess's son (Mr. Phelps), to waylay Xeryfe, and to render his evidence impossible by his murder.

Mr. Phelps merits great credit by the very effective manner in which he gave artistic interpretation to the feelings of the son and a noble-minded man under such a temptation—the agony which he suffers in the commission of the crime, and the remorse with which he is subsequently maddened. All these feelings are exaggerated when he ultimately finds that the crime was useless, and that his mother has been saved by means independent of it. Then it is that Garcia feels that he had wanted faith—that he had abandoned his "trust in Heaven," and thereby brought upon himself a just punishment. Faith would his mother excuse him, and, in her dying moments, pronounces him, as if by inspiration, to be forgiven; but he submits with heroic satisfaction to his fate, and is led out to execution, leaving behind him that noble mother, for whose safety he had become guilty, dead of a broken heart for the doom to which he had thereby subjected himself. The distress of such a scene is exceedingly touching; and, enhanced as it was by the truly magnificent acting of Miss Glyn, became indeed sublime. At the conclusion of the performances the author made his appearance on the stage, as did also Mr. Phelps and Miss Glyn, and all three were most enthusiastically and deservedly applauded.

THE LATE MR. EBENEZER ELLIOTT.

Sheffield—long and honourably distinguished for its association with men of genius—has just lost one of its most fervid lights—Ebenezer Elliott, the Poet for the Poor, as he is termed by one of his brother bards. "Though Elliott was a native of Masborough, and died at Argill-hill, near Barnsley, he belongs," says the Sheffield and Rotherham Independent, "to Sheffield more than to any other place. Here were passed nearly all the days of his manhood's prime. He became famous as a poet whilst he resided in Sheffield; in connexion with Sheffield he became renowned as a politician; in Sheffield he earned the independence upon which he retired in his honourable old age; and in and immediately near Sheffield were composed many of his most celebrated works. He has pictured our hills and valleys in words of beauty and truth, so that our neighbourhood is especially and for ever linked with his name."

Ebenezer Elliott was born on the 17th of March, 1781, at Masborough, near Rotherham, where his father was a commercial clerk in the iron-works, with a salary of £70 a year, and "consequently, a rich man in those days." Ebenezer was one of eight children, and, to quote his own words, "in childhood, boyhood, and youth, was remarkable for good nature, as it is called, and a sensitiveness exceeded only by his extreme dulness, and inability to learn anything that required the least application or intellect." When he scarcely knew that two and one are three, he was put to work in the foundry, on trial whether hard labour would not induce him to learn his "counting," as arithmetic is called in Yorkshire. But families are cheqquered in brains, and Ebenezer had a bright brother, Giles, which so oppressed the future poet with a sense of his own deficiencies, that he often wept bitterly. When he came dirty out of the foundry, and saw Giles at the counting-house duties, or showing his drawings, or reading aloud to an admiring circle, Ebenezer's only resource was solitude; he would go and fly his kite, and he was the best kite-maker in the village; or he would saunter along the canal bank, swimming his ship, and he was a good ship-builder. His sadness increased; he could not post books, or write invoices, or master a sum in single division; yet, by this time, he discovered that he could do "men's work," for he could make a frying-pan. Labour, however, and the honour paid to his brother, at length led Ebenezer to make one effort more. He chanced to see in the hand of a cousin "Sowerby's English Botany," and was delighted with its beautifully coloured plates, which his aunt showed him, might be copied by holding them before a pane of glass. Dunce though he was, he found he could draw, and with such ease, that he almost thought he was a magician. He became a botanist, or, rather, a hunter of flowers. He did not remember having ever read, or liked, or thought of poetry, until he heard his brother recite that passage in Thomson's "Spring," which describes the polyanthus and anricula. His first attempt at poetry was an imitation in rhyme of Thomson's "Thunder-Storm," in which he describes a certain flock of sheep running away after they were killed by lightning! The miracle was made to fit the rhyme, but was criticised by the boy-poet's cousin with severity never forgotten.

Ebenezer's next favourite author was Milton, who slowly gave way to Shakspeare. But Elliott was altogether unimaginative, and could trace all his literary likings to physical causes. There is not a good passage in his writings which he could not trace to some real occurrence, to some object actually before his eyes, or to a passage in some other author. He claimed as a merit the power of making the thoughts of other men bread; and he was fond of pointing to four or five passages in his poems, all imitated from two lines in Cowper's "Homer."

When Elliott became a poet, he grew more and more ashamed of his deficiencies. He tried to learn French—could get his lesson with ease, but could not remember it an hour. He began Murray's "English Grammar" at the wrong end (the Key), and never reached the first page. He never thoroughly understood a single rule of grammar; yet, by thinking, he could detect grammatical errors. He had a fondness for Greek and Latin quotations, which he begged of others, for his prefaces and notes. One of his earliest productions, a poem in blank verse, on the American Revolution, was full of this borrowed learning and other odd conceits: he sent it in manuscript to Whitbread, the brewer, who returned it with a flourishing compliment. Elliott's first publication was "The Vernal Walk," written in his seventeenth year; the rough verses of which he elaborated into bombast, and so printed them.

THE LATE MR. EBENEZER ELLIOTT.

Mr. Elliott first entered into business on his own account at Rotherham, but was unsuccessful. He removed to Sheffield in 1821, at forty years of age, and there made his second start in life. He used to relate that he here began business with a borrowed £100, with which he bought a stock of iron, which "tippled right over its head," or, in other words, he sold for twice as much as it cost. He was not unduly elated with such success—for, unlike his neighbours in these times of artificial prosperity, he saw that the bubble must soon burst. He therefore prudently kept his liabilities within the narrowest possible compass, and this saved him from embarrassment, and enabled him to take advantage of "the turn of the market." At one period, so successful were his transactions, that, as he told Mr. Howitt, "he used to sit in his chair, and make his £20 a day, without ever seeing the iron he sold; for it came to the wharf, and was sold again thence, without ever coming into his warehouse or under his eye." Still, this success was the result of years of laborious industry, of acute intelligence, and business habits. There are important points in Elliott's history, showing that "trade and literature may be combined, and that a man of the right stamp may fight an up-hill battle in both fields of enterprise, and win in both."

We have now to regard Elliott as a man of letters and a politician. The following passages, extracted from an article from his pen, in Tait's Magazine for 1840, afford a key to much of his career:—

"It is now about forty-six years [being then thirteen years old] since I quarrelled with my father, because he denied that one Englishman could thrash five Frenchmen. His little preaching parlour (he preached for love, not money) was adorned with equestrian prints of Oliver Cromwell, Israel Putnam, John Hampden, and George Washington, and the glorious victories of Lexington and Bunker's Hill. The good man (he was an old Cameronian and born rebel) did not fail to tell me what sort of victories these were. Still, I was slow to believe that we did not win. * * I am fifty-eight years old, and have been forty-three a scribbler [since 1797]. * * I do not remember the time when I was not dissatisfied with the condition of society. Without ever envying any man his wealth or power, I have always wondered why the strong oppress the weak."

Soon after the publication of the "Vernal Walk," appeared "Night," which we have now only a portion republished, as the "Legend of Wharncliffe," It was severely criticised by the Monthly Review and the Monthly Magazine. At that time, however, Mr. Elliott was much cheered by Southey, who delighted in taking up "uneducated poets." Next appeared a volume of poems, with a preface of defiance to the critics. It had no success; though Southey prophetically consoled the poet by writing—"There is power in the least of these tales, but the higher you pitch your tune the better you succeed. Thirty years ago they would have made your reputation; thirty years hence the world will wonder that they did not do so."

Elliott's next essay was the poem of "Love," to which he prefixed "The Giaour," a vehement satire upon Lord Byron, who Elliott fancied had looked scornfully at him in adversity. The attack, however, did not provoke reply which was the object of the assailant.

Mr. Elliott next appeared as the fierce opponent of the laws relating to the importation of Corn, in "Corn-Law Rhymes," printed, with "The Ranter," in one volume; and noticed by the Eclectic Review and Blackwood's Magazine. In 1829 came "The Village Patriarch," which was praised by the Westminster Review. The poet was, however, still but known as "the Corn-Law Rhymer." In 1830-31 Dr. Bowring first saw him, and introduced him to Wordsworth and William Howitt. The Doctor next showed Elliott's poems to Mr. Bulwer, then editor of the New Monthly Magazine, wherein they were noticed anonymously, in "A Letter to Dr. Southey, &c. &c., Poet Laureate, respecting a remarkable Poem by a Mechanic." A few quotations were made from the poem, pointing out some of their beauties, their "extraordinary energy;" "the beauty and skill visible in the phraseology," and "the eloquence and power" with which "poetry can clothe" arguments for free exchange in trade, and illustrations of the pacific influence of commerce.

Following up this good opinion, Mr. Elliott contributed to the New Monthly Magazine for December, 1831, a Spenserian poem, entitled "Byron and Napoleon; or, they Met in Heaven." The full tide of the poet's popularity had now set in, and we find the New Monthly Magazine claiming the honour of having been "the first journal that attracted the attention of the public to the genius of the poem called "Corn-Law Rhymes," and remarked how, since the New Monthly noticed it, other periodicals had taken up the previously neglected poem."

Elliott now collected his poems, and they re-appeared in three volumes, in 1833, 1834, and 1835; and in 1840 another edition was printed in one volume, with additions, which has had a large sale. The favourite vehicle for the poet's new productions for many years was Tait's Magazine; and the "Poets' Corner" of the Sheffield and Rotherham Independent has often been enriched by his contributions the latest of which appeared on the 24th ult.

The great object of Mr. Elliott's political life was the abolition of the Corn-Laws; and almost from the first appearance of the "Rhymes," until the repeal of, as he indignantly phrased it, "the Accursed Bread Tax," did he pour forth his hard-hitting verse and diatribe; and he formed a local society for promoting this object.

After a lull of a few years in the public on this great question, in 1838 they were again induced to move; and then commenced the agitation of the Corn-law League, and also that for the Charter. Of the success of the latter measure he had greater hopes than of the former, principally from some influential Birmingham Reformers taking part in the Charter movement. In Sept., 1838, Mr. Elliott attended a conference in London; and in the same month he presided at a public meeting in Sheffield, when the Charter was brought forward. In the succeeding January, however, when the Chartists put themselves in opposition at an Anti-Corn-law meeting, Mr. Elliott supported the measure which they opposed. He did not, however, complete y separate himself from them until the events of the winter of 1839-40 satisfied him that the Chartist cause was in wrong hands.

In 1841, Mr. Elliott retired from business, and from active interference in politics, to spend his last years at Great Houghton, near Barnsley, where he built a house upon a small estate of his own. He now wrote and published little, and he betook himself to the quiet enjoyment of the country.

Mr. Elliott's last illness was of several weeks duration: he was anxious that the marriage of his daughter with John Watkins, Esq., of Clapham, should be solemnised during his life; it therefore took place on the 17th ult., though it had been fixed for Christmas Day. As the newly-married pair passed Argill-hi.l, Mr. Elliott was raised up in bed to see them pass the window; when he desired that he might be buried at Darfield church, where they had been married.

Mr. Elliott died on the 1st inst., and was buried at Darfield church on the 6th. He has left a wife and five sons and two daughters. While on his death-bed, he dictated the following lines:—

> Thy notes, sweet Robin, soft as dew,
> Heard soon or late, are dear to me,
> To Music I could bid adieu,
> But not to thee.
>
> When from my eyes this lifeful throng
> Has passed away, no more to be,
> Then autumn's primrose, Robin's song,
> Return to me.

These lines were written at the request of the poet's daughters, to suit the air "'Tis time this heart should be unmoved."

A few days since, the writer of the memoir in the Sheffield and Rotherham Independant was favoured with a letter from the venerable poet James Montgomery, in which he bears this testimony to Elliott's poetic talent:—"I am quite willing to hazard any critical credit, by avowing my persuasion, that in originality, power, and even beauty, when he chose to be beautiful, he might have measured hands beside Byron in tremendous energy, Crabbe in graphic description, and Coleridge in effusions of domestic tenderness; while in intense sympathy with the poor, in whatever he deemed their wrongs or their sufferings, he excelled them all—and perhaps everybody else among contemporaries, in prose or verse. He was, in a transcendental sense, the Poet of the Poor, whom, if not always 'ready,' I at least dare not say, he loved 'too well.' Another characteristic feature, and his genius would require, and they deserve, a full investigation, as furnishing an extraordinary study of human nature."

Elliott has been aptly designated the Poet of Yorkshire; and his descriptions of its heights and dales, its woods and streams, and "broad towns," will long be fondly cherished.

His modesty and sincerity are conveyed in a preface, dated 1835, wherein he expresses fears if as "sufficiently rewarded if my poetry has had one poor despairing victim of misrule from the ale-house to the fields; if I have been chosen of God to show his desolated heart, that, though his wrongs have been heavy, and his lot deep, and though the spoiler is yet abroad, and the storm lasts, and England the plumross is bowing, and on the mountain top the lonely fir is pouting with her many fingers to our Father in Heaven."

The accompanying Portrait is from a picture in the possession of Thomas Badger, Esq., of Rotherham, to whose courtesy we are indebted for permission to transfer so striking a likeness to our pages. It was painted some 20 years since.

THE MOON AND JUPITER,

AS SEEN THROUGH A THREE-FOOT TELESCOPE, OF CARY'S, ON FRIDAY MORNING, DEC. 7, 1849, IN CONNAUGHT-SQUARE, LONDON, BY C. S.

THESE Diagrams represent the Moon and Planet Jupiter, as they appeared on Friday morning, Dec. 7, 1849, through a three-foot telescope of Cary's, not inverted, in their course through the heavens—No. 1 Diagram showing Jupiter at a few hours after midnight as he rode over the houses on the eastern side of Connaught-square, with the Moon above him; No. 2, at half-past 3 A.M., near the Moon; and No. 3, at half-past 6 A.M., when both Jupiter and the Moon culminated, and as they descended towards the horizon. Unfortunately, as the daylight increased, the clouds collected, and so completely obscured the planets as to prevent my observing the rate at which they separated. From the time of their rising, it appeared as if they were running a race until they arrived at their ties in the Moon detached; and then as if the Moon had made a signal, Jupiter meridian, when Jupiter had approached so near the western edge of the southern unenlightened limb of the Moon as to appear as one of the large cavities started off on a tangent towards the horizon, leaving the Moon to follow at her usual comparatively slow rate. It was evident that Jupiter was at an immense distance from the Moon, from the circumstance of there being no diminution of his brightness, or any shade on him; although to the eye he appeared as near the Moon as if he had been a detached part of it.

REFRACTING TELESCOPE.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

In confirmation of a statement of M. Luvini, of Turin, which appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for November 3, 1849, relative to the "Use of Coloured Glasses to assist the View in Fogs," I have taken the liberty of writing on the subject. Some two years ago, when I first made the discovery, I tried what effect a coloured glass would have on the organ of vision, and I found, by applying a piece of amber-colour glass to the naked eye, a sort of artificial sunshine (if I may use the expression) was cast on the horizon, or in other words the field of view became illuminated, so that distant objects could be seen better. On that account I used the same glass on a telescope; I accordingly fitted it to the conical part of the eye-end of an achromatic refractor of forty five inches in length, in conjunction with the eye-lenses of the instrument, and when the telescope was directed to the horizon, by the aid of the glass the outlines of surrounding objects were more distinct by the aid of the coloured glass than without it, although the atmosphere at the time was very hazy.

R. WOTTON.

Gigal House, Tiverton, November 26, 1849.

ORIENTAL ARCH.—At a recent meeting of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society, the Master of Jesus College, President, in the chair, Mr. C. C. Babington, of St. John's College, exhibited a sketch of a Saracenic arch, separating the nave from the chancel of Garway Church, in Herefordshire. He called attention to the fact that this church was built by the Knights Templars, and that its accounted for the introduction of so Oriental a feature into an English church.—Professor Wilson remarked that he did not remember a similar instance in England, and that he believed the arch to be truly of Saracenic type, and that it was not to be found except in places where that people had had influence.—Mr. Babington also directed attention to some recently discovered sculptures on the chancel arch and east wall of the nave of Rolleston Church, in Herefordshire, resembling in some respects those of Kilpeck Church, in that county. He suggested that the presence of a cross semmee in the hands of the figures might lead to the idea that the church had been erected under the influence of the Templars of the neighbouring preceptory of Garway, since such a cross was the badge of that order of knights. The drawings of these sculptures, having been made for the Archæological Institute, will be immediately forwarded to that body.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MR. HUDSON AND THE YORK, NEWCASTLE, AND BERWICK.—Mr. Hudson paid to this company £75,000 last week, in quittance of all claims on him, except a balance of interest of some £10,000, which it is supposed the company will either give or divide between them and Mr. Hudson. This includes his bill for forty odd thousand pounds for the Sunderland Docks.

AUDIT OF RAILWAY ACCOUNTS.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in acknowledging the receipt of the two reports on the recent meeting of railway proprietors at Liverpool, on the subject of a general audit of railway accounts, has intimated that the representations contained in them will receive the best attention. The answer to the circular of inquiries from the Board of Trade posed bill come in but slowly from the different railway companies. Monday last was the day on which they were all returnable, but up to that period scarcely more than one-half had been transmitted, though it is expected that the remainder, or majority, will all be in by the 19th

SCOTTISH MIDLAND JUNCTION.—Arrangements have been made for the running of a through train to Aberdeen, in connexion with this railway and the Scottish Central. The trains from Glasgow start from the Caledonian terminus, Buchanan-street, at noon, each day. The journey between Aberdeen and Glasgow, by this route, may now be performed in seven hours and threequarters.

THE EAST LANCASHIRE RAILWAY COMPANY.—We understand that the men who struck have resumed their duties on the line, the directors undertaking to yield to the demand for the dismissal of Mr. Royle, the inspector—to obviate this having been apparently the chief object of the men.

REDUCTION IN RAILWAY FARES.—CHEAP TRANSIT.—A contractor with the railway company for excursion trains has announced his intention of taking passengers, "if less than a halfpenny at the time a halfpenny per second class for about a farthing!" From Leeds and Birm ngham, 230 miles, the fare is to be, first class, 8s. 6d., and second class, 5s. 6d., allowing six hours in Birmingham, or the privilege of returning on the following day for an extra 1s. At the ordinary rates of travelling, the journey could not be accomplished for less than between £3 and £4, and at 1d. a mile would amount to a few pence short of £1.

ACCIDENT ON THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.—On Monday last an accident of a serious nature took place on this line. The up-train from London, due at Boston at 11.15 A.M., had reached the first semaphore from Boston, from which place there is only a distance of about 1 per cent, when the up Boston is reached, when a luggage train was seen approaching in the opposite direction, which the fog had before prevented the driver from seeing. The breaks were instantly applied to the London train, but, owing to the slippery state of the wheels, they had very little effect, and, in consequence, a collision took place. The engine and part of the trucks had luckily got on the up line, but the engine of the down-train caught the fifth truck, broke the connecting links, and threw the truck off the line, and the remaining four trucks were smashed to pieces, the splinters flying about in all directions. No lives were lost, and the engine of the up-train escaped with little damage, except breaking one buffer. Several of the passengers were more or less bruised by the shock of the collision. Several of the rails were displaced, but a strong body of workmen were quickly dispatched to the spot, who cleared away the fragments and replaced the rails, so that no impediment was offered to the traffic.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The buoyancy of the week preceding again characterised the market of the past week. Consols on Monday opened at 96¾ to ¾, advanced to 97¼, closing "buyers" at that quotation. On Tuesday prices further advanced to 97⅜; but when the news transpired that Russia had positively demanded the expulsion from Turkey of the Polish refugees, a reaction to 96¾ occurred, afterwards rallying to 97⅜. The settlement of the accounts on Wednesday passed off tolerably well, the continuation being from ⅛ to 5-16 per cent, afterwards declining 3-16 per cent. Consols opened at a rise of about ¼ per cent, closing about ¼ per cent. upon the preceding day's prices. Thursday was "pay day," when two failures of importance occurred, coupled with an extensive misappropration. Sales of Stock for Money on account of the public doubtless realising after the late rise, caused a reaction in prices to 96⅞. New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents continue to improve, quoting a relative value with Consols. Attention has been directed, during the period, as pointed out in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, to the favourable investment Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents have hitherto offered, in comparison with Consols. The opportunity now, however, no longer exists. The intention of interference on the part of the Government to reduce the interest on Consols has not been so active within the last few days. When the amount of the Three per Cent. Government Stocks (five hundred and ten millions) is considered, the difficulty of finding funds for the dissentients must be of a formidable character, in addition to the outcry that such a breach of faith would on all sides produce. It is not, however, credited where the best information is usually found. At the close of the week a slight flatness prevailed, as the following prices evidence:—Bank Stock, 203; Reduced, 95½; Consols, 96¾; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 97⅛; Long Annuities, to expire Jan., 1860, 6⅛; Ditto, 30 years, Oct. 10, 1859, 5 5-16; Ditto, 30 years, Jan. 5, 1860, 8⅜; South Sea Stock, Old Annuities, 96⅝; Consols for Account, 97⅛; Exchequer Bills, £1,000, June, 54 pm; £500, June, 54 pm; Small, June, 54 pm.

The Foreign Market has not partaken of the buoyancy of the English, and prices are generally flatter. Business has not, however, been important, nor have prices materially receded, as the following list will show:—Danish Bonds, 1826, 3 per Cent., 73; Ditto, 5 per Cent., 99½; Equador Bonds, 3⅞; Grenada Bonds, 1 per Cent., 16⅝; Mexican, 5 per Cent., 1846, ex. Jan. Coupons, 28½; Ditto, Account, 28⅝; Peruvian Bonds, 4 per Cent., 54; Portuguese, 4 per Cent., 46; Spanish, 5 per Cent., Active, 19½; Ditto, 1 per Cent. 38¼; Belgian, 4½ per Cent. 87⅛, Dutch, 2½ per Cent., 12 Guild., 55⅞; Ditto, 4 per Cent., Certificates, 84⅜.

Shares, as the week advanced, became flatter, prices receding slightly towards the close. The last quotations are—For Berks and Hants Extension (Great Western Pref. 5 per Cent.), 3; Caledonian, 11⅛; Ditto, New, £10, Pref., 8½; Eastern Counties, 7⅛; Ditto, New, Guaranteed 5 per Cent., 11½; East Lancashire, 11⅝; East Lincolnshire, 23½; Great Northern, 7⅞; Great Western, 58; Ditto, Half Shares, 27½; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 13½; Ditto, Fifths, 11; Ditto, New, £17, 6½; Leeds and Bradford, 100; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 89½; Ditto, New, £5 Guaranteed 6 per Cent., 10½; London and North-Western, 112⅜; Ditto, New Quarters, 19½; Ditto, Fifths, 8½; Ditto, £10 (M. and B.) C., 2½; Lon. and S. Coast Ry. Co. Shares, 21½; Do., New Scrip, 18-18, Pref. 7 per Cent., 6½; Midland, 48½; Ditto, Consol. Pref., £50 Shares, 8½; Ditto, Consol. Bristol and Birmingham, Six per Cent., 124; Norfolk, Guaranteed Five per Cent., 17½; North British, 11; Ditto, Halves, 5; North Staffordshire, 8½; Royston and Hitchin, 4½; Scottish Central, 15; South-Eastern, 19; Ditto, Scrip, No. 4, 6½; South Wales, 15½; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 17½; Ditto, 6 N.C. Preference, 8½; York and North Midland, 17½; Ditto, Preference, 6; Boulogne and Amiens, 6½; Great Indian Peninsular, 5½; Northern of France, 1½ dis.—Brazilian, St. Johndel Rey Mine, 10½.—Union of London Bank, 12½.

On Friday, only a moderate business was transacted in the Consol Market, yet prices were well supported. The Three-per-Cents—money—were done at 96⅞, at for the next account, 97⅛. The Limited Bank was generally firm. Foreign Bonds ruled steady. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 58½; Portuguese, 36½; Spanish Three-per-Cents, 38¼. Railway Shares moved off slowly. In prices, however, no material change took place.

John Hugh Smyth Pigott, Esq., lord of the manor, has, in addition to the many handsome gifts made to the institutions of Weston-super-Mare, just intimated his intention of presenting the rector and churchwardens with the splendid organ lately used in the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, for the use of the parish church there. The old organ at present used in the church is to be removed to the national school-room for the use of weekly meetings, &c. This instrument, also, was given to the parish by a distinguished member of the same family, and originally was in the possession of George III.

Lieutenant Lynch, of the United States navy, has volunteered to head an expedition in the ensuing spring in search of Sir John Franklin, if the Government will equip the expedition Lieutenant Lynch commanded the late "Dead Sea Exploring Expedition."

FOREIGN CORN.—The consumption of wheat for London in one month is 127,000 quarters, out of which quantity 112,000 were imported from foreign countries for the month ending the 17th ult.

The vessel San Sheridicon, of Greece, has arrived in the dock from Athens, having on board 1900 quarters of wheat, comprising the entire cargo, of Grecian produce.

Mr. Beckwith, late secretary to the Leeds Infirmary, has been sentenced to seven years' transportation, for embezzling upwards of £1000 from the funds of t at institution.

ENORMOUS INCREASE OF THE IRON BUSINESS IN WALES.—The increase of the iron business is probably, unexampled in the his ory of the world. The population, during the 40 years from 1801 to 1841, increased, in Newport, from 1423 to 13,766; in Tredegar, from 1742 to 14,942; Aberystwith, from 805 to 11,272; Beaufort, from 618 to 23,413. This is the progress in Monmouthshire; in Glamorgan the increase has been, if not in the same enormous proportion, still enormous in itself. Thus, during the same period, the increase at Merthyr has been from 7705 to 46,378; at Aberdare, from 1177; at Merthyr, from 6531 to 15,787. The progress in the actual trade is shown by the returns to be equally astonishing: in 1790, the iron sent from the worker for shipment to Newport was 48,452 tons; in 1847, 340,537. The quantity at Cardiff, in 1820, was 30,157 tons; in 1840, it was 229,053; and this is exclusive of a quantity of iron shipped from smaller ports, while a new their existence to the last 20 years. We scarcely believe that any other country would show a similar result in one branch of business. The quantity of coal sent in 1846 from the four ports of Cardiff, Swansea, Llanelly, and Newport amounted to 1,847,918 tons. The value of the shipments of iron alone from the counties of Monmouth, Glamorgan, and Carmarthen was estimated in 1847 at four millions sterling.—Economist.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—The present week's arrival of English wheat for our market, inclusive, is as amounted to 7720 quarters, chiefly from Essex. By last carriage the remarks have been very moderate. To-day the show of samples of both red and white was small, yet it was quite equal to the wants of the buyers, whose a tendance was far from numerous. In prices we have not the slightest alteration to notice. No 1 to 2 000 quarters of foreign wheat have come to hand, mostly from the Baltic. Rea. ing qualities sold at Monday's quotations. No inferior maltings were very full, at barely late rates. The show of Essex barley was small—that of foreign large. Malting parcels 2s 6d at full prices. Other grinding sorts were somewhat easier to purchase. No change deserving that the supply of malt ready for delivery was trifling that article moved off heavy, at the late decline. Good sound oats were quite as dear as on Monday. The grinding qualities supported previous quotations. Beans, peas, and Indian corn were very dull. Fine flour was scarce, and quite as dear.

ARRIVALS. English: wheat, 3420; barley, 2270; malt, 1490; oats, 860; flour, 9060. Irish: wheat, ——; barley, ——; oats, 1350. Foreign: wheat, 14,310; barley, 17,500; oats, 13,600. Flour: —— quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 37s to 40s, ditto, white, 40s to 43s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 37s to 40s, ditto, white, 42s to 44s; rye, 22s to 24s; grinding barley, 21s to 23s, distilling ditto, 24s to 26s; malting ditto, 26s to 30s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 53s to 56s; Ware, Kingston and Ware, 54s to 57s; Chevalier, 57s to 59s, Yorkshire and Lincolnshire red oats, 14s to 15s; potato ditto, 15s to 21s; Youghal and Cork, black, 12s to 13s; ditto, white, 14s to 15s; tick beans, new, 28s to 31s; ditto, old, 30s to 33s; grey peas, 27s to 28s; maple, 28s to 30s; white, 30s to 32s; boilers, 33s to 37s per quarter Town-made flour, 35s to 42s; Suffolk, 30s to 33s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 30s to 35s per 280 lb.

Foreign.—Wheat, free, —— qrs.; red wheat, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; malt, —s to —s; beans, —— to ——s. peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 21s to 24s per barrel; Baltic, —s to —s per load. —— quarters.

Tea Sale-Market.—Not the slightest change has taken place in the demand for, or prices of, any kind of goods. Cake and pearl tea very dull.

Beef, English, sinking, 3d to 3½d. Irish, fresh, 3d to 4d. Mutton, English, 3d to 4d. Irish, 3d to 4d. Veal, 3d to 4d. Pork, 3d to 4d per stone of 8 lbs. Bacon, 50s to 56s per cwt. Irish, 48s to 52s. Lamb, 5s to 6s per quarter.

Hops.—Sussex pockets, 80s to 90s; ditto, white, 92s to 98s; Kent, 80s to 90s; Farnham, 100s to 120s; Mid. and East Kent, 90s to 110s; Weald of

NEW BOOKS, &c.

A CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

Second Edition, in 1 vol. 12mo, cloth, price 5s. 6d.,

HOME INFLUENCE. A Tale for Mothers and Daughters. By GRACE AGUILAR

[illegible]

THE NILE BOAT; or, Glimpses of the Land

[illegible]

[illegible]

Hall, Virtue, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

Large 8vo Price 5s. 6d., with a Map,

SUPPLY OF WATER TO THE METROPOLIS.—A Proposal for the Improved Drainage of the Metropolis, and an Improved Supply of Water to its Inhabitants, addressed [illegible] Commissioners of Sewers. By LADISLAS [illegible]

[illegible] Parliament-street.

WANTED A WIFE! A New Work, price 1s., by post for fourteen stamps, from W. F. Cobb, Printer 16, Duke street, Bloomsbury.—Lond on: KENT and RICHARDS [illegible]

READ CHARLES MACKAY'S "RHYMES OF [illegible]

[illegible] above thirty highly-interesting Articles, by Richard Ambers, embellished by Four Beautiful Engravings. Price 7d.

London: WILLOUGHBY and Co., Warwick-lane and Smithfield.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "JANE EYRE."

In 2 vols. post 8vo, 21 11s 6d cloth,

SHIRLEY: a Tale. By CURRER BELL.

"Shirley produces a highly favourable impression. The power of the author is felt throughout. The work is strongly indicative [illegible] originality, and has the stamp of truth."—Spectator.

"Shirley is a work which [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and

MR. G. WALMSLEY'S LEICESTER WETHER, £20 PRIZE, AND SILVER AND GOLD MEDALS.

EXTRA STOCK.—NO. 125.—MR. S. GOOCH'S SHORT-HORNED OX.—SILVER MEDAL.

CLASS XV.—NO. 188.—MR. W. RIGDEN'S SOUTH DOWN WETHER. £20 PRIZE, AND SILVER AND GOLD MEDALS.

SMITHFIELD CLUB CATTLE SHOW.

(Continued from page 396.)

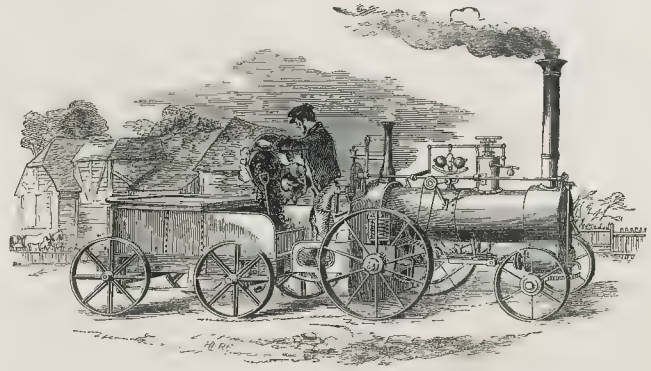
EXTRA STOCK.

The silver medal for the best beast in extra stock to No. 125, viz. to Mr. S. Gooch, of Heningham, near Norwich.

The silver medal or the best short-woolled sheep in extra stock to No. 220, viz. to Mr. W. Sainsbury, of West Lavington, Devizes.

The silver medal for the best cross-bred sheep in extra stock to No. 168, viz. to the Earl of Leicester, of Holkham-hall, Norfolk.

The silver medal for the best pig in extra stock to No. 264, viz. to the Messrs. Beachlock, Hornchurch, Essex.



RANSOMES' AND MAY'S PORTABLE LOCOMOTIVE STEAM-ENGINE.

The silver medal for the best long-woolled sheep in extra stock to No. 160, viz. to Mr. G. Walmsley, of Radston, near Bridlington.

THE IMPLEMENTS.

The Implement department was unusually crowded with almost every variety of the most valuable machines in use on the farm, and which fully maintained the reputation of the makers generally, in the quality and style of material and workmanship.

Amongst the novelties were the "Royal Albert Scarifier," made (under the direction of General Wemyss) by Mr. Smith, of Uxbridge. Messrs. Clayton and Shuttleworth, of Lincoln, and Messrs. Barrett, Exall, and Andrewes, of Reading, each exhibited a portable steam-engine—the former having obtained the second prize at Norwich last July.

We subjoin Illustrations of two of the Norwich Prizes, which we were prevented from inserting in our Journal at the time of the Meeting. They are—

RANSOMES' AND MAY'S PORTABLE AND LOCOMOTIVE STEAM-ENGINE (the joint invention of Messrs. E. B. Wilson and Co., of Leeds, and the above eminent firm). This engine can be worked from four to seven horse power, according to the pressure of steam employed. It is furnished with a tender, and is locomotive on a common road; it requires no other fly-wheel than those on the binder axis, which act also as carrying wheels, when travelling. As the processes of grinding, chaff-cutting, and thrashing require very different rates of revolution, the power can be taken off from the crank-shaft, the wheel-shaft, or the edge of the driving wheels; and, by altering the gearing connecting the crank-shaft with the shaft of the driving wheels, two changes of velocity may be made.

PAUL'S DEEP-DRAINING MACHINE may be worked with three or more horses, and, by a single operation, will cut a drain, from three to four feet in depth, at the rate of 300 feet per hour, leaving a level bottom for the tiles to rest upon. It is also calculated for raising sub-soil to the surface for the purpose of clayingl ands; and when the clay is in a plastic state, will raise from four to five cwt. per minute. It may be used to greatest advantage when the surface of the soil may have become so hard, either from frost or dry weather, as to render it impracticable to accomplish the cutting of drains by manual labour. The utility of this implement, when it is required to cut drains on clover lands in course for wheat crops, and from which the first crop has been taken, is clearly seen; as the clay, from being immediately spread upon the surface, becomes thoroughly pulverized, and comes into immediate operation for the succeeding crop.

THE FALL OF EMPIRES.—There are four unmistakeable symptoms of a nation verging to its fall:—When every class of a nation, whether by extravagance, or speculation, or calamity, is burdened and entangled with debt: when every day there widens the breach between the two divisions of the people; not the noble and the mean, not the powerful and the weak, not the good and the bad, not the educated and the ignorant, but between the rich and the poor—the rich becoming richer, and the poor becoming poorer: when the empire has swelled out to comprehend such a variety of distinct peoples, characters, and religions, that the necessities of Government compel a compromise and a negation of principle; that what is proclaimed to be true in one province is repudiated as falsehood in another: and when the helmsman of the State, terrified by the noise of the waves and the madness of the people, can think of nothing but to let the vessel drive before the wind—the end of that empire is at hand.—The Rev. W. Scott's Sermon before the University of Oxford on the Day o Thanksgiving.

PAUL'S DEEP DRAINING MACHINE.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, December 15, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 404.—VOL. XV.] SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1849. [NUMBER AND SUPPLEMENT, 1s.

SIGNS OF DECAY.

We are told, on high authority, that there is nothing new under the sun—that what has been may be again—that all things revolve in an old appointed circle—that for empires as well as for individuals there is a period of growth and a period of decay—and that neither the mighty nor the humble can escape the operation of the invariable law which fixes a penalty for every transgression, and which punishes with the same severity the high and the lowly.

A modern writer, struck with the power of these old truths, and tracing in the past and present history of Great Britain the operation of causes which must, in the fullness of time, produce its fall, has drawn a vivid picture of a New Zealander, sitting upon a ruined arch of London-bridge, and moralizing upon the fate of the once mighty empire, become as much a thing of the past as Rome, Greece, and Assyria. But when we read the eloquent page, we smile at the prediction of the writer. We cannot believe that "Babylon, that mighty city, who glorified herself and lived deliciously," who said in her heart, "I sit as a Queen and shall see no sorrow," shall ever fall from her high estate. We think of the wealth, the enterprize, the indomitable courage, the intelligence, the zeal, and the piety of her sons—we see her wondrous progress in arts that Greek and Roman never knew—the triumphs of her science, and the blessings of a civilization superior to any ever enjoyed by the earlier ages of the world, and we fancy that in all these things there are germs of stability and progress which shall grow up and flourish in after time, bearing the name and fame, the power and the glory, of Great Britain to the remotest generations.

It is well, however, that we should sometimes view the other side of the picture, and ask ourselves more calmly whether our empire is indeed so firmly rooted—so endeared to the world by its justice, humility, and beneficence—so supported by its own integrity—so much removed from all possibility of rivalry, as to defy the agencies of decay and ruin, and stand to the most distant times the Queen and the Model of Nations. The picture is not quite so brilliant when it is thus considered. The golden image is found to have feet of clay. The fair peach of prosperity is seen to have a worm within it, and the mighty empire to be menaced with perils from within and from without. We see that we have no exclusive claim to the possession of the virtues which have raised us to the high position that we hold; that what we have, we share; that men of our own blood and language have permeated with our intelligence, our industry, and our enterprise, the remotest ends of the earth; that our sons have founded new empires, at present as brilliant, and promising in the future to be more brilliant, than our own. If we calculate the growth of population, we shall find that, in fifty or twenty years hence, or even earlier, Great Britain will no longer be the principal seat of the vigorous race of the Anglo-Saxons; and that, although that race may continue to rule the world, it may not be from the banks of the Thames, or from any part of the old country that gave them birth. An empire twenty, thirty, or fifty times as extensive, and as rich as ours, has already arisen on the other side of the Atlantic, to entice into its bosom the best blood which remains to us. The young, the hardy, the persevering of our country, and of all the countries of Europe, that groan under the weight of debt, of difficulty, and of a surplus population, and that cannot say to their sons, as the New World does, that every man is a man, welcome, for the sake of his manhood, to the great feast of Nature, where there is enough and to spare for the meanest, are daily invited to leave the shores of effete Europe, and settle in more vigorous America. The growth of the United States is, in reality, the downfall of Great Britain. All the unhappy circumstances that are of prejudice to us, are of benefit to them. With us, the mouths that clamour to be fed are causes of decay. With them, every additional mouth is an additional pair of hands, and every additional pair of hands is an increase of wealth, power, and influence. Let us pour our millions into the great valley of the Mississippi, and it will hold and feed them all, were their numbers quadrupled. Such is our great rival in the West. In the South there is another rival almost equally formidable, equally splendid, fed in the same manner from our entrails, and rising daily upon our fall. Who shall fix the bounds of the future prosperity of the great Australian continent? While in this old country the pauper vegetates or dies, accursed of the land that produced him, in that new country the pauper becomes a labourer; he no longer vegetates, but lives; and if he lives long enough, he may become a patriarch, sitting under the shade of his own fig-tree, and counting by thousands and tens of thousands his flocks and herds—a new Job in a land of plenty. Fertile soil, delicious climate, elbow room, and freedom from taxation—these are the blessings of the Australian. The Englishman enjoys the first two in an imperfect manner; the last are aliens—he knows them not, and will never know them while England holds her place among the nations.

IMPORTATION OF FRUIT FOR CHRISTMAS.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Nor are these the only dangers which menace us. Although our empire stretches to the east and to the west, to the north and to the south though we have lands in Asia, our feet in Africa, our arms in America and the South Pacific Ocean, our own peculiar territory is but a small spot in a remote corner of Europe. We have only held that corner by the enormous sacrifices we have made. It was our ambition to become a ruling power—giving the law to the world—and we became so; but it was at a cost of a debt of £800,000,000, that paupericse our population, and lies like a perpetual and killing weight upon the energy of all classes. In addition to this stupendous evil, we share the effeteness of all Europe. There is but one empire within European boundaries that is not worn out and pauperised by debt and extravagance: that empire is Russia; and she is the enemy of all the rest, and desires to rise upon their ruins. Destiny seems to have traced her path as it has traced ours. The Sclavonian races will inevitably be the new lords of Europe. The Anglo-Saxon race must be contented to be the lords of the larger and more splendid inheritance of America and Australia. In this case, what becomes of the empire of Great Britain? It falls to the ground, and exists only—like other Powers and Potentates of the world—in the bones and sinews of its sons and successors, transferred to a new soil, and enjoying privileges, blessings, and opportunities from which their forefathers were excluded.

Let those who dream of a perpetual Britain, think upon these things. The signs of decay are around us on every side. In our fall we shall have few friends. In prosperity we have not comported ourselves, as to be justified in the expectation of sympathy or aid from any quarter. Our very excellence has made us foes, and our violence and cupidity have estranged the nations. We may have peopled the earth; we may have spread far and wide our arts and our arms—our commerce and our civilization, but we have not had standing room for our own pretensions. Events are more powerful than we are. We must, sooner or later, yield our place to the more prudent, the less embarrassed, and the more vigorous offshoots of our race, and consign to history the easy chair of our senility. Nor is there anything to regret in this. What is there in our corner of the globe that it should for ever expect to give the law to all others? The civilization that is removed is not destroyed; and the genius of our people can exert itself as well on the banks of the Ohio, or the Mississippi, as on the banks of the Thames; and rule the world from the White House at Washington, with as much propriety as from the Palace of St. James's.

We live, indeed, in a remarkable period of the world's history—a period in which new empires take the place of old ones with wonderful rapidity; and in which old empires are paying the penalty of transgressions against the laws of morality and social well-being committed by them during many generations. Europe has enjoyed power and has abused it, and the sceptre of the world's dominion is passing from her grasp. Civilisation, as of old, is following the course of the sun, and the destinies of humanity will work themselves out in a new field and on a larger scale. The world is, as it were, starting afresh, and from a more favourable starting-point. The lover of humanity can but hope that the new civilisation which may arise will take warning from the errors of the old; and that, in the decay and fall of empires, humanity itself will emerge from each change in brighter lustre, wiser and juster, more peaceable and more religious, and doing as much as man can do to aid the coming of the prophecied time when "the people shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; when nation shall not lift up the sword against nation, nor learn war any more."

CHRISTMAS FRUIT.

THE dry fruit trade of the port of London is in full activity about a month before Christmas. There are few who need be told that it comprises figs, raisins, currants, prunes, and the fine variety of plums from France, packed in boxes tastefully decorated, and embellished with pictures of a festive character. This fruit is principally brought by English vessels; and the principal places of importation are Cox's Wharf, Fresh Wharf, and Hammond's Quay, Upper Thames-street. We have engraved Cox's Wharf, immediately adjoining the Adelaide Hotel, where a multitude of packages of fruit as drums of figs, barrels of currants, boxes of raisins, and chests of oranges are shown in such multitudes as, in the days of boyhood, would impress us with other ideas than the commerce of Great Britain. The scene was sketched, in all its Christmas bustle, a few days since.

We gather some interesting details from the "Price Current of Fruit." The clearance of currants in London for home consumption, from October 21 to November 20, 1848, were 1000 tons, the largest ever on record; but they have been exceeded by those of the like period of this year, which have reached 2100 tons. It is computed that the increase in the consumption of 1848 will not be far short of 4000 tons, which is equal to thirty cargoes, or nearly one-third of the total import of last year. The consumption, from reduced duty, has doubled within seven years.

The crop of Valentia Raisins has, as yet, proved somewhat short. The total import this season, to November 29, has been, by thirty-one ships, 72,899 boxes and 34,516 half boxes, or 2250 tons; against 120,640 boxes and 65,132 half-boxes, or 3800 tons, to the like period of last year. Our import, therefore, has been 1550 tons less than that of last season to this date. With a positively short supply of raisins, the consumption must run more largely than ever upon currants.

Of figs the supply has also been somewhat short; and great quantities were out of condition, from the length of voyage.

Oranges belong to the green fruit-trade. The number annually imported into this country is stated at 250,000,000; and in one day nearly 6,000,000 have been landed. The supply this season is remarkably fine and abundant.

The fruit-vessels (schooners) are splendid craft, sail well, dashing through all, carry a heavy press of canvas, and no fines are allowed on demurrage; occasionally, for the purpose of cooking, lest the heat should affect the cargo.

When eighteen ten of these vessels are discharging at one time at London-bridge, the scene is very animated.

A clever Engraving of one of the Schooners will be found in No. 113 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH THE EAST AND WEST INDIES.—The following notice has been issued by the authorities of the Post Office:—"The practice of steering letters, passing to and from the East and West Indies, and other hot climates, with wax not properly prepared for such climates, being attended with much inconvenience, and frequently with serious injury to the correspondence, in consequence of the melting of the wax and adhesion of the letters to each other; the public are recommended in all possible cases to use either prepared wax or wafers in sealing their letters sent to India, or other hot climates; and also, to advise their correspondents in those countries to pursue the same course."

SMUGGLING.—Her Majesty's revenue cutter Vigilant, Captain Richard Gowland, captured, a few nights ago, in the Leach in the Thames, a sprit-sail barge, about sixty tons burden, having on board a crew of five persons, and a contraband cargo, consisting of 280 lbs of tobacco, about 50 lb. each, concealed under straw stacked on her deck. The barge was proceeding up the river in the usual manner as a coaster with straw for the London market; and had the smugglers been successful in escaping the protective force, between six and seven tons of tobacco would have been run, to defraud the revenue, and thereby lost the amount of duty. We believe this to be the largest seizure of tobacco that has been made in the Thames for the past thirty years.

IMPORTATION OF POULTRY.—Very large importations of poultry are taking place from the Belgian ports at the present time, the produce of that country. The steamer Sir Edward Banks, from Ostend, has brought 94 packages, and the steamer Triton, arrived from the same port, has brought 135 cases of poultry, of various kinds, the produce of Belgium. Another arrival of 103 cases has taken place from the same port, and one of 110 cases, also of Belgian produce. These supplies from Belgium comprise large quantities of rabbits, with which that country greatly abounds; and we understand, on good authority, that the importations of the same from Belgium, particularly towards the close of the week, are greatly looked for, and regularly purchased, by the humbler portion of the community in various parts of the metropolis.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.—With a view to raise the standard of professional education, the Council of the Royal College of Surgeons have decided that in future candidates for the fellowship of the Institution shall undergo additional examinations in mathematics, and the Greek, Latin, and French languages.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

From Paris we have nothing but anticipations of the festivities of the season. In the political world the only feature calling for notice is the victory of Ministers in the Chamber on the Potash & Liquors Bill. On Tuesday, after six days' debate, the general discussion on the bill was closed. Its object is to re-establish the impost on potable liquors, which the Provisional Government had taken off. On a division, the House affirmed the resolution, by a majority of 446 to 226, that it should proceed to the discussion of the articles of the bill. This proceeding in the French Assembly is equivalent to what in the British Parliament would be the passing of the second reading of the bill and the going into committee. The measure has thus been adopted in principle, and all that has to be now settled is, the details by which that principle is to be carried out. Several amendments proposed by the opponents of the measure have been rejected.

It has been observed during the week, as "a sign of the times," that the words "Liquoiture Française, Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité," which figured on the palace of the Elysée (the residence of the President of the Republic), and on all the other public buildings in Paris, have disappeared from the Elysée. It was certainly time to get rid of them, since the cry of "Vive la République!" and "Vive la Constitution!" are considered seditious.

ITALIAN STATES.

ROME. Accounts from the Papal States to the 15th inst. mention that outbreaks of the peasantry had occurred in several of the villages and small towns, on account of the re-establishment of the odious tax on the grinding of corn, by which the price of bread is increased. In some of the places where French troops are stationed, they remained passive for three days, while the peasantry were mustering, armed with pitchforks and clubs, threatening to take vengeance on the authors of the measure; but at length they received orders to enforce tranquility, and at the same time he announced that the Commander-in-Chief took upon himself to suspend the tax until he could represent to the Roman Government the excitement that it occasioned, and induce the Pope to give orders for its abolition.

The period of the return of the Pope to the capital was still involved in doubt and uncertainty. It is said that General Baraguay d'Hilliers has signified his intimation to the Pope, and prescribed a period for his return to Rome, after which the French authorities would, in case of his non-compliance, proclaim a Provisional Government.

PIEDMONT.—The new Legislative Assembly is likely to co-operate better with the Ministry than that lately dissolved. The result of 178 elections was known at Turin on the 15th instant. 116 colleges had returned Ministerialists, 45 members of the Left, and 17 friends of the Left Centre. The proportion had lost 47 members, and the Conservative party only 2. It was expected that the 24 deputies to be returned by Sardinia would be mostly Conservatives.

SPAIN.

We learn from Spain of the 13th instant that M. Sanchez Silva's bill for consolidating all the debt into Two per Cent. Stock has been rejected by the Chamber of Deputies.

The diplomatic relations between England and Spain being suspended, the latter Government has not received any official communication of the decease of the Queen Dowager, but the Court, it is said, will go into mourning for some days, and the balls, concerts, and theatrical entertainments will be suspended until the early part of next month.

GERMAN STATES.

The accounts from central Europe are all blank, as far as politics are concerned.

Some of the German papers speculate upon the probability of a rupture between Austria and Prussia, on the score of the latter power pressing to completion the scheme of a German Diet at Erfurt, but the chances of dissension between these powers on such a subject are very small indeed.

TURKEY.

The differences between the Porte and the allied Imperial Courts of St. Petersburg and Vienna are said to be still in an unsettled state; and, in consequence of that, the new French fleet has caused surprise as well as dissatisfaction at the Ottoman Court, as its presence, along with the English fleet, was regarded in the light of a demonstration in support of Turkey

The British fleet, under the command of Sir William Parker, was still at anchor at Basika Bay on the 6th instant. It had been joined by the Firebrand and the Spiteful steamers from England. The Oberon steamer arrived at Basika Bay on the 30th ult., with despatches from Malta. A Turkish steam-frigate had arrived at Basika Bay, having on board the new second in command of the Turkish fleet, who was sent by the Sultan to compliment the Admiral. The Ganges (84) was expected to reinforce the fleet.

UNITED STATES.

Accounts from New York to the 4th, Boston to the 5th, and Halifax to the 7th instant have been received via Liverpool.

The principal intelligence is that of the meeting of Congress on the 3rd inst., at Washington. The Senate was organised, after which an adjournment took place.

The House of Representatives met on the same day, when a ballot took place for the speakership. For this post there appeared Mr. Winthrop on the Whig, and Mr. Cobbe on the Free-soil—Democratic, interest. After three unsuccessful ballotings, the numbers stood:—For Winthrop, 95; Cobbe, 102; various, 23. In consequence of no decision on this point, the House could not be organised, and the President did not, therefore, deliver his message.

The annual report of the Postmaster-General recommends the introduction of an uniform rate of postage of 5 cents on each letter. The high condition of the department renders such reduction safe.

The New York papers had published the remarks made by Mr. Rivers, on presenting his credentials as Minister from the United States to the Government of France, together with the reply made thereto by the President of the French Republic; both of which had caused very considerable satisfaction, as they were deemed to prove the re-establishment of friendly relations between the two governments.

In Boston the utmost excitement prevailed, in consequence of the murder of Dr. Parkman. Dr. John Webster, Professor of Chemistry in the Medical School of the Howard College, and a gentleman connected by marriage with some of the most distinguished American families, had been arrested and imprisoned on the charge of being the murderer.

CANADA.

The news from Canada by the present arrival is altogether without novelty. All is apathy, even upon the annexation question.

INDIA.

Accounts anticipatory of the Overland Mail—from Bombay, of the 17th, and Calcutta, of the 7th ult.—have been received by extraordinary express. The intelligence thus conveyed is of little interest. The health of the Marquis of Dalhousie is said to be still further failing him, and it is not thought improbable he may, at the end of next month, bid adieu to India. He was on his way from Simla towards the plains, whence he would visit Lahore, and probably Peshawur, Cashmere, Mooltan, &c., and Bombay.

Sir C. Napier arrived at Delhi on the 30th Oct., on his tour of inspection. A guard of honour was in attendance to receive him, but the gallant Commander-in-Chief dispensed with the ceremonial. The Indian papers complain of his neglect of form and state, and insist that a more imposing progress would give him greater hold upon the native mind. Sir Charles had departed for Agra.

The accounts from the Punjaub have grown as vapid and uninteresting as those from Scinde. The country is perfectly tranquil, and there seems every reason to suppose it will continue so.

Some further reference is made in the local papers to the seizure of the Sikh chieftains, who, at the conclusion of the last campaign, had been permitted to retire to their respective villages under pledges of good behaviour, but, would probably be transported for life to safe keeping on this side the Indus. With their imprisonment all disaffection has disappeared.

CHINA.

The accounts from China mention the death of Rear-Admiral Sir Francis Collier, naval Commander-in-Chief in the East, on the 28th October, from an apoplectic fit with which he was seized on the 23rd of that month. He was previously, however, much enfeebled from a protracted illness. His body was buried on the 29th, with all suitable honours, amidst the respect and grief of all who followed him to his tomb.

A formidable fleet of war junks had been boldly and successfully attacked in the beginning of October, by her Majesty's brig Columbine and her Majesty's steamer Fury. They were totally destroyed by fire, and of 1800 men who manned them about 600 were killed, and the remainder made their escape. The loss to the British vessels was exceedingly trifling.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Accounts from the Cape to the 28th of October have come to hand. The state of the public mind on the all-exciting topic of convict colonisation had undergone no change. It was expected by the Cape colonists that we will have no spot of their country's blood on their own hands, by aiding the Government, directly or indirectly, in branding the character of the colony as a general settlement by the arrival of the Neptune with her convict cargo within its limits. That they refuse all compromise, and that they reject with just indignation the hypocritical suggestion of a "middle course" from quarters where promises and pledges have been violated, ambiguous words used with the effect of deception, and from which false and malicious slanders have been poured upon their reputation. Our colonial contemporary tells us that the only reply which his Excellency the Governor, Sir H. Smith, will receive, from one end of the colony to the other, to any proposition he may offer on this subject will be, "Send the Neptune away." The feeling of the Cape people has in no degree moderated on this feverish business, and the obstinacy of Earl Grey evidently tends to embarrass, in a most painful degree, the measures of that most popular officer, Sir H. Smith.

The following is a copy of a petition to the Governor from the inhabitants of Hottentots' Holland:—

TO HIS EXCELLENCY SIR HARRY SMITH K.C.B. GOVERNOR OF THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

[illegible] the inhabitants of Hottentots' Holland.

[illegible] October, 1849.

[illegible] Majesty's Ship Neptune [illegible] Bay, and we desire to assure your Excellency, that, while convinced that your Excellency sincerely wishes, and has strenuously endeavoured to obtain, the deliverance of this colony from the calamity which threatens it, the inhabitants are far from being satisfied with the present prospects of the colony in this respect, inasmuch as there have no official assurances that the Neptune, with her cargo, will be sent away, and without such official assurance they can have no confidence that it [illegible] not be landed, in opposition to your Excellency's wish, and in defiance of the [illegible]

Your memorialists beg to assure your Excellency that it is not without [illegible] most painful feelings that we have been led to submit a list of [illegible] which may cause inconvenience individuals who [illegible] upon, and to embarrass certain [illegible] ments whose services we thankfully acknowledge. We desire [illegible] to express [illegible] the strength of Earl Grey's, private letter, take the responsibility [illegible] lar away the [illegible] thereby relieving the [illegible] to [illegible] of [illegible]

And your memorialists, &c.

IRELAND.

KILRUSH.—On the subject of the poor-law in this union, the Freeman's Journal has a statement to show that it is not true that such enormous rates as is pretended have been levied there, and, consequently, the paupers of the union are starved without the excuse which the guardians plead for themselves. The Freeman says:—"The total amount of rates struck for the half-year ended the 25th of Michaelmas was £1,178, or less than one-fifth of the net annual property of the union, while the amount of all rates uncollected since the formation of the union is only £8803. In 1848, as we have remarked, the year only a three-shilling rate, while the vice-guardians, by some singular economy, contrived to incur debts to an amount exceeding £13,000. This proves clearly enough that if debts have been contracted, it is not because the property of the union has been subjected to a pressure which it was unable to withstand, because for a period of two years and a half the aggregate rates imposed amounted only to 11s. 8d.

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—On Monday, at Conciliation Hall, there was a very thin attendance. The rent was £0 13s.

THE PROTECTION MOVEMENT.—A requisition is in course of signature in Trinity College for a meeting to petition Parliament in favour of protection for agriculture.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

LAUNCH OF A STEAM-SLOOP AT PORTSMOUTH.—On Saturday morning, about half-past eleven, another steamer was added to the fleet by the launch of her Majesty's steamer Argus, built, in the last eighteen months, at the yard, by Mr. John Pincham, the master-shipwright thereof, from designs furnished by himself. The Hon. Lady Capel performed the ceremony of christening, and afterwards drank success to the vessel at the attendant déjeûner. Admiral the Hon. Sir T. B. Capel, K.C.B., with a brilliant train of naval officers and a goodly muster of spectators, were present at the interesting spectacle, which was a good launch. The following are the chief dimensions of the vessel, which is upon the paddle principle, and to have engines by Penn, of 300 horse power.—Length between the perpendiculars, 190ft.; keel for tonnage, 168ft. 4in.; breadth extreme, 33ft.; breadth moulded, 32ft. 4in.; depth of hold, 20ft. 11in.; burthen, 971 tons.

GOVERNMENT SHIP-BUILDING.—The Royal Sovereign, three-decker, will be at once commenced on the stocks from which the Argus has been launched, and to be completed in the course of the end of March next. The Perseus, another steam-sloop, by the same designer as the Argus (Mr. J. Fincham), is building on the adjoining slip, and will be ready for launching in about three months, when the Marlborough, another three-decker, of 120 guns, will be commenced on that slip. Portsmouth yard will thus present the somewhat extraordinary novelty of four three-deckers building within a few feet of each other—the Royal Prince, Prince of Wales, Royal Sovereign, and Marlborough.

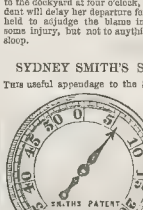
A COLLISION BETWEEN HER MAJESTY'S STEAM-YACHT "FAIRY" AND HER MAJESTY'S SLOOP "CONTEST".—On Wednesday afternoon, about half-past one o'clock, as her Majesty's steamer Fairy, Captain Crispin, was proceeding to her moorings in the harbour of Portsmouth, after landing her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent at the Woovil Victualling-yard, she ran foul of the Contest, 15-gun sloop, commanded by the Hon. J. W. Spencer, lying at a buoy in the channel, and about to leave, during the flood, for the Western Coast of Africa station, to which she is appointed to sail on the 1st proximo, with the mail. The shock was great; the sloop being inactive, offering no resistance to the knife-like iron cutwater of the Royal yacht, the consequence was, the former has sustained considerable damage, the hammock berthing on the side struck (starboard) being cut away, the main channels cut through, also the rigging, the first port abaft the mainmast, and the planksheer of the sloop down to the copper. The Contest was hauled up to the dockyard at four o'clock, for the purpose of being repaired. The accident will delay her departure for the coast of Africa. A court of inquiry will be held to adjudge the blame in the matter. The Fairy has also sustained some injury, but not to anything like the extent of that inflicted upon the sloop.

SYDNEY SMITH'S STEAM-PRESSURE INDICATOR.

THIS useful appendage to the Steam-Engine, to a great extent, removes the risk of those fearful accidents too common to the boiler. It consists of a dial and hand, like that of a clock; its internal construction being similar to a spring weighing machine. The spring is acted on by a piston, to ensure the free working of which, and to keep it perfect y water-tight, a thin piece of vulcanized India-rubber cloth is attached at to receive the pressure (through the medium of a column of water), and transmits it to the piston. The instrument is then graduated to the highest point of pressure. It is not affected by the motion even of a locomotive engine, and possesses the great advantage of being equally susceptible when fixed at any distance from the boiler, and connected by a small tube. They are adapted to ensure safety to steamboats—the pressure being at all times indicated uncontrolled by the engine; at the same time producing economy of fuel, as the fireman can, at all times, see the exact state of the steam in the boiler.



We are informed by the patentees, Messrs. Ramsbottom, engineers, of Woolwich, and 167, Fenchurch-street, that the Indicators have been upwards of two years in constant work at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, without any alteration or apparent wear.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The Steeple-Chase calendar at present holds out very feeble attractions, the only fixtures between the present time and the 2nd January being "Banwell" (of the whereabouts of which we confess our ignorance), for Friday next. Coursing will not be interrupted by the Christmas festivities, as we had first feared for Wednesday, not having come off on that day originally appointed; and Ravenstonedale, Cleveley, and the Amicable, on Thursday: the last-mentioned club will not finish their meeting until Friday.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—A good deal of money was laid out on Bolingbroke, The Nigger, and Voltaguer, at the odds returned below the supporting parties sh wing an unmistakable disposition to "go and do" likewise. Bayonet was also in favour, but did not improve on the previous quotation. Latest prices:

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS STAKES

2 to 1 agst Boc-Hunter	6 to 1 agst Hardinge	8 to 1 agst Brother to Epi-

CHESTER CUP.

5to 1 agst Lisn-ahago (t)	66 to 1 agst Vesta	100 to 1 agst Sir Rodcrd (t)
50 to 1 —— Lady Evelyn	66 to 1 —— Idle Boy	100 to 1 —— Hotspur (t)

DERBY.

9 to 1 agst Bolingbroke (t)	25 to 1 agst Johnny Grant	100 to 1 agst Brother to Epi-
11 to 1 —— Childe Cattish (t)	30 to 1 —— Chanter (t)
11 to 1 —— The Duke of Avenel	33 to 1 —— Idstone	40 to 1 —— Bo-
16 to 1 —— The Italian	33 to 1 agst William the Con-	50 to 1 —— Windcanel
20 to 1 —— Th Nigger (t)	queror	1000 to 15 —— Mt. of Gwynne
25 to 1 —— Voltiguer (t)	33 to 1 —— Mavors (t)

DERBY, 1850.

66 to 1 agst Hippolytus 66 to 1 agst Hatherton

THURSDAY.—The betting this afternoon, as is usual at this season, was dull, and important only as showing a further improvement in The Nigger and Voltiguer. We give the last prices:

CHESTER CUP

1000 to 15 agst Douglas	1000 to 10 agst Ruby	2000 to 25 agst Idle Boy
1000 to 15 —— Chanticleer	1000 to 10 —— Hotspur	1000 to 8 —— Emma
1000 to 15 —— Richard	1000 to 10 —— Pugleman
1000 to 15 —— Lost	1000 to 10 —— Kensington	All the above bets were taken

DERBY.

11 to 1 agst Knight of Avenel	25 to 1 agst Mildew (t)	50 to 1 agst Windbound
17 to 1 —— The Nigger	30 to 1 —— Chanter (t)	1000 to 15 —— New Tree
20 to 1 —— Voltiguer (t)	40 to 1 —— Brother to Ephraim

DERBY, 1850.

50 to 1 agst Hippolytus

Thomas H. Graham, Esq., of Edmond Castle, Cumberland, has received an intimation from Sir William Donville, Bart., and Henry Denton, Esq., trustees of the late Rev. George Atwick, of Cumberland-street, Portman-square, London, that they have selected the Cumberland Infirmary to receive the benefit of £1000 Three-and-a-Quarter-per Cent. stock, under the benevolent provisions of his will, which will be forthwith transferred to the trustees of this institution.

DURING the four days of the show of cattle last week in Birmingham, not fewer than between 50,000 and 60,000 persons were admitted to the exhibition. Nearly £1000 was received from tickets, and subscriptions, coupled with subscriptions and entrance fees paid by exhibitors, will, it is understood, amply [illegible] incurred. Under the presidency of Lord Hatherton, the exhibition of next year promises to exceed the one just terminated.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.

A public meeting was held on Monday evening at Ebenezer Chapel, Shoreditch, for the purpose of receiving a deputation from the central society. There was a very crowded attendance. Mr. W. A. H. Hows presided; and the deputation consisted of Mr. George Thompson, M.P.; Mr. W. J. Hall, Mr. T. M'Grath, and Mr. J. Beggs, who having severally addressed the meeting, the following resolutions were carried to

1. That whilst this meeting is deeply convinced that a great reduction of the national expenditure and a more equitable adjustment of the burdens of taxation are imperatively necessary, and almost universally demanded, it cannot see any reasonable hope of permanently securing those important objects until such a measure of electoral reformation has been obtained as shall give the people a direct control over the taxes which they are required to pay.

2. That this meeting most cordially approves of the principles on which the National Reform Association is based, and desires its unqualified confidence in its president and council, and the meeting rejoices in the hope that a hearty union between the middle and working classes has at length been effected, and strongly enforces on all who complain of any grievances in the national affairs, the importance of all their energies in the constitution of such a reformed in Parliament as shall deal out full and impartial justice to all classes of her Majesty's subjects.

METROPOLITAN SEWERS COMMISSION.—On Saturday a general court of commissioners assembled at the offices, Greek-street, Soho. Present: Lord Ebrington, M.P. (presiding), Sir John Burgoyne, Captain Vetch, and Messrs. Hawes, Lawes, and Cubitt.—Unauthorised Publication of an Official Document.—Suspension of the Surveyor.—Lord Ebrington said it would be in the recollection of the court what he had yesterday stated in reference to Mr. Hale. A paper had been addressed by that gentleman, bearing his own signature, and dated from 1, Greek-street, Soho, December 4, to the editor of the Mechanics' Magazine, and published in that journal. The commissioners saw Mr. Hale before them, and he had acknowledged the authorship of this statement, which was headed "Experiments on the discharge of sewage water in pipes, made under the sanction of the Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers;" and he had given no explanation whatever that could be considered satisfactory to the commissioners. The court were of opinion that it was desirable that this breach of discipline and decided irregularity and impropriety of conduct should be punished. He (the chairman) would, therefore, move that the salary of Mr. Hale be suspended till the end of the time for which he was originally engaged. It would be in the remembrance of the court, that, upon the occasion of their first meeting, they had agreed to re-engage the services of the corresponding clerks, secretary, and others, without mentioning any particular term for their re-engagement, but they had reappointed the whole of the surveyors' department, with the distinct announcement that they were not bound by the appointment for three months only, as it was the intention of the commissioners to revise that department. Without making any further observations, he would propose, "That, as Mr. Hale caused to be published in the Mechanics' Magazine a paper giving an account of experiments performed at the expense of the Commissioners of Sewers, what-at official in their service, not only without the permission of the Court, but before an account of their experiments had been presented to it, he be suspended till the end of the time for which he was originally engaged. It would be in the remembrance of the court, that, upon the occasion of their first meeting, they had agreed to re-engage the services of the corresponding clerks, secretary, and others, without mentioning any particular term for their re-engagement, but they had reappointed the whole of the surveyors' department, with the distinct announcement that they were not bound by the appointment for three months only, as it was the intention of the commissioners to revise that department. Without making any further observations, he would propose, "That, as Mr. Hale caused to be published in the Mechanics' Magazine a paper giving an account of experiments performed at the expense of the Commissioners of Sewers, what-at official in their service, not only without the permission of the Court, but before an account of their experiments had been presented to it, he be suspended till the end of the time for which he was originally engaged." Mr. Hardwicke seconded the motion.—Mr. Hale requested to be allowed time to put certain explanations upon paper, and that he might be permitted to hold his appointment to the end of the week.—Ebrington thought the best course would be to receive any explanations Mr. Hale might deem it right to put forward, but, as to the latter part of his application, he did not think it could be complied with, because, by such a step, the official could prolong the term of service indefinitely.—After some discussion Lord Ebrington put the motion, which was unanimously agreed to, remarking, at the same time, that it would afford him great pleasure to see Mr. Hale completely justified.—The Court then formed itself into a committee, and the chairman had received the sum of £374 14s. 1d., which, together with arrears due, made £777 14s. 1d., with part of which the directors had been enabled, during the past year, to advance 80 shares. Under the profit account the treasurer had received the sum of £374 14s. 1d., which, together with arrears due, made £777 14s. 1d. With

MISS KENNEDY DISTRIBUTING CLOTHING AT KILRUSH.

CONDITION OF IRELAND.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE NEW POOR-LAW.

(Continued from page 394.)

Having last week introduced this important subject to our readers, and given them some of the statistics of Kilrush, we shall henceforward allow our Correspondent to speak for himself:—

I assure you (he says) that the objects of which I send you Sketches are not sought after—I do not go out of my way to find them; and other travellers who have gone in the same direction, such as Lord Adair, the Earl of Surrey, and Mr. Horsman, will vouch, I am sure, for the accuracy of my delineations. The Sketch of Moveen, to which I now call your attention, is that of another ruined village in the Union of Kilrush. It is a specimen of the dilapidation I behold all around. There is nothing but devastation, while the soil is of the finest description, capable of yielding as much as any land in the empire. Here, at Tullig, and other places, the ruthless destroyer, as if he delighted in seeing the monuments of his skill, has left the walls of the houses standing, while he has unroofed them and taken away all shelter from the people. They look like the tombs of a departed race, rather than the recent abodes of a yet living people, and I felt actually relieved at seeing one or two half-clad spectres gliding about, as an evidence that I was not in the land of the dead. You may inquire, perhaps, and I am sure your readers will wish to know, why it is that the people have of late been turned out of their houses in such great numbers, and their houses just at this time pulled down, and I will give you my explanation of this fact.

The public records, my own eyes, a piercing wail of woe throughout the land—all testify to the vast extent of the evictions at the present time. Sixteen thousand and odd persons unhoused in the Union of Kilrush before the month of June in the present year; seventy-one thousand one hundred and thirty holdings done away in Ireland, and nearly as many houses destroyed, in 1848; two hundred and fifty-four thousand holdings of more than one acre and less than five acres, put an end to between 1841 and 1848: six-tenths, in fact, of the lowest class of tenantry driven from their now roofless or annihilated cabins and houses, makes up the general description of that desolation of which Tullig and Moveen are examples. The ruin is great and complete. The blow that effected it was irresistible. It came in the guise of charity and benevolence; it assumed the character of the last and best friend of the peasantry, and it has struck them to the heart. They are prostrate and helpless. The once frolicsome people—even the saucy beggars—have disappeared, and given place to wan and haggard objects, who are so resigned to their doom, that they no longer expect relief. One beholds only shrunken frames scarcely covered with flesh—crawling skeletons, who appear to have risen from their graves, and are ready to return frightened to that abode. They have little other covering than that nature has bestowed on the human body—a poor protection against inclement weather; and, now that the only hand from which they expected help is turned against them, even hope is departed, and they are filled with despair. Than the present Earl of Carlisle there is not a more humane nor a kinder-hearted nobleman in the kingdom; he is of high honour and unsullied reputation; yet the Poor-law he was mainly the means of establishing for Ireland, with the best intentions, has been one of the chief causes of the people being at this time turned out of their homes, and forced to burrow in holes, and share, till they are discovered, the ditches and the bogs with otters and snipes.

BRIDGET O'DONNEL AND CHILDREN.

SCALPEEN OF TIM DOWNS, AT DUNMORE.

The instant the Poor-law was passed, and property was made responsible for poverty, the whole of the landowners, who had before been careless about the people, and often allowed them to plant themselves on untenanted spots, or divide their tenancies—delighted to get the promise of a little additional rent—immediately became deeply interested in preventing that, and in keeping down the number of the people. Before they had rates to pay, they cared nothing for them; but the law and their self-interest made them care, and made them extirpators. Nothing less than some general desire like that of cupidity falling in with an enactment, and justified by a theory nothing less than a passion which works silently in all, and safely under under the sanction of a law—could have effected such wide-spread destruction. Even humanity was enlisted by the Poor-law on the side of extirpation. As long as there was no legal provision for the poor, a landlord had some repugnance to drive them from every shelter; but the instant the law took them under its protection, and forced the landowner to pay a rate to provide for them, repugnance ceased: they had a legal home, however inefficient, to go to; and eviction began. Even the growth of toleration seems to have worked to the same end. Till the Catholics were emancipated, they were all—rich and poor, priests and peasants—united by a common bond; and Protestant landlords beginning evictions on a great scale, would have roused against them the whole Catholic nation. It would have been taken up as a religious question, as well as a question of the poor, prior to 1829. Subsequent to that time—with a Whig Administration, with all offices open to Catholics—no religious feelings could mingle with the matter: eviction became a pure question of interest; and while the priests took now, perhaps, as much to the Government as to their flocks for support, Catholic landlords are not behind Protestant landlords in clearing their estates. English notions and English habits, without any reference to the causes of English greatness—which are not to be found in a Poor-law and farms of a particular size—impressed law-makers and the landlords of Ireland with a strong desire to enlarge and consolidate farms, and clear them of the squatters and subtenants, who had formerly been permitted, if not encouraged. With a Poor-law, that desire could be safely acted on, and so it supplies a temptation and the means to carry eviction extensively into effect.

VILLAGE OF MOVEEN.

SEARCHING FOR POTATOES IN A STUBBLE FIELD.

The evictions were numerous before the potato rot. It was not that great calamity, therefore, that superinduced them, or was the chief cause of the present desolation. The potato harvest and harvests of every kind have been lost many times before 1846, without reducing the people to their present misery. But that calamity threw the people at the mercy of the Government, and the Government used its power directly and indirectly, in accordance with the theory, to clear the land. Out-door relief was established in that season of distress, and relief altogether was coupled with the resignation of the land. The poor were required to give up their heritage, small though it were, for less than a mess of pottage. A law was passed, the 11 and 12 Vic. c. 47, entitled, "An Act for the Protection and Relief of the Destitute Poor Evicted from their Dwellings," which provided a means of evicting them, subjecting the landlords to the necessity of giving notice to Poor-law guardians, and to the share of a common burden. Under such stimuli and such auspices, the clearing process has gone on in an accelerated ratio, and Ireland is now dotted with ruined villages, and filled with a starving population, besieging the doors of crowded workhouses, and creeping into the halls and chambers of the deserted mansions of the nobility and gentry. A gentleman's mansion turned into a poor-house, is a fit emblem of the decay that a mistaken policy has brought on all classes. The system intended to relieve the poor, by making the landlords responsible for their welfare, has at once made it the interest, and therefore the duty, of the landlords to get rid of them. Extirpation is accordingly going forward at a rapid rate; and the evidence of that is now placed before the eyes and the understanding of the readers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

I will give you, by-and-bye, some notices of driving for rent, of landowners impoverished by rates, and of bankrupt unions; but at present I must draw attention to some of the other Sketches I send. The Scalp of Brian Connor (here represented) has been already described; it is another illustration of the worse than pig-sty habitations of those who did live in the now roofless cottages. Another Sketch follows (of Miss Kennedy), which shows that amidst this world of wretchedness, all is not misery and guilt. Indeed, it is a part of our nature that the sufferings of some should be the occasion for the exercise of virtue in others. Miss Kennedy (about seven years old) is the daughter of Captain Kennedy, the Poor-law Inspector of the Kilrush Union. She is represented as engaged in her daily occupation of distributing clothing to the wretched children brought around her by their more wretched parents. In the front of the group I noticed one woman crouching like a monkey, and drawing around her the only rag she had left to conceal her nudity. A big tear was rolling down her cheek, with gratitude for the gifts the innocent child was distributing. The effect was heightened by the chilliness and dreariness of a November evening, and by the wet and mire in which the naked feet of the crowd were immersed. On Captain Kennedy being appointed to the Union, his daughter was much affected by the misery of the poor children she saw; and so completely did it occupy her thoughts, that, with the consent of her parents, she gave up her time and her own little means to relieve them. She gave away her own clothes—she was allowed to bestow part of her mother's—and she then purchased coarse materials, and made up clothing for children of her own age; she was encouraged by her father and some philanthropic strangers, from whom she received sums of money, and whose example will no doubt be followed by those who possess property in the neighbourhood; and she devoted herself with all the energy and perseverance of a mature and staid matron to the holy office she has undertaken. The Sketch will, I hope, immortalize the beneficent child, who is filling the place of a saint, and performing the duties of a patriot.

On all sides I hear praises of the amiable child and her excellent father, and this is not without a moral for the landlords. The public officers who are appointed to administer and control the relief of the poor, have it in their power to do much for the people. Mere kindness of manner, though they render no substantial assistance, endears them to the suffering crowd. Captain Kennedy is at once kind, charitable, and judicious. He is at the head of the Union. He fills for the people the most important office in the district. He is the great man of the place. It must be so in other districts. The funds are contributed by the landowners, but they are distributed by public officers. Thus the Poor-law, which disposes of the landowners' property, also deprives them of the pleasure and the burden of distributing it themselves. A public officer is made, in fact, to administer their estates, and he stands between them and their compulsory bounties, securing the respect and confidence which they might and ought to have. The more the subject is examined, the more, I have no doubt, it will be found that the Poor-law is as injurious to the landlords as it is to the people.

SCALP OF BRIAN CONNOR, NEAR KILRUSH UNION-HOUSE.

Searching for Potatoes is one of the occupations of those who cannot obtain out door relief. It is gleaning in a potato-field and now few are left after the potatoes are dug, must be known to every one who has ever seen the field cleared. What the people were digging and hunting for, like dogs after truffles, I could not imagine, till I went into the field, and then I found them patiently turning over the whole ground, in the hopes of finding the few potatoes the owner might have overlooked. Gleaning in a potato-field seems somet.ing like shearing hogs, but it is the only means by which the gleaners could hope to get a meal.

The Sketch of a Woman and Children represents Bridget O'Donnel. Her story is briefly this:—"I lived," she said, "on the lands of Gurranenatuha. My husband held four acres and a half of land, and three acres of bog land; our yearly rent was £7 4s.; we were just hard set last November; he owed some rent. We got thirty stone of oats from Mr. Marcus Keane, for seed. My husband gave some writing for it: he was paid for it. He paid ten shillings for reaping the oats. As soon as it was stacked Dan Shealey and Bilge took the oats from, who was put to watch it, took it away in to his own haggard and kept it there for a fortnight by Dan Sheedey's orders. They then thrashed it in Frank Lalla's barn. I was at this time in bed with my son. Dan Sheedy and five or six men came to tumble my house; they wanted me to give possession. I said that I would not; I had fever, and was within two months of my down-lying (confinement); they commenced knocking down the house, and had half of it knocked down when two neighbours, women, Nell Spelasley and Kate How, carried me out. I had the priest and doctor to attend me shortly after. Father Meehan anointed me. I was carried into a cabin, and lay there for eight days, when I had the creature (the child) born dead. I lay for three weeks after that. The whole of my family got the fever, and one boy thirteen years old died with want and with hunger while we were lying sick. Dan Shealey and Bilge took the cows into Kinrush, and sold it. I don't know what they got for it. I had not a bit for my children to eat when they took it from me."

The last Sketch shows the Sculptors of Tyn Lynne, at Dunmore, in the parish of Kellard, where himself and his ancestors readed on this spot for over a century, with renewal of their lease in 1845. He neither owed rent arrears or taxes up to the present moment, and yet he was pitched out on the roadside, and saw his other houses, with his own, levelled at one fell swoop on the spot, the ruins of some of which are seen in this Sketch. None of them were mud cabins, but all capital stone-built houses.

I must conclude my present communication with an account of a great catastrophe, which has hurried 37 of the poor wretches that depended on the Union of Kilrush, with four other persons, into eternity. The Union will be relieved by an accident at which humanity mourns:—

"On the evening of Wednesday week intelligence reached the town of Kilrush that a large number of persons, most of whom were paupers, who had been seeking out-door relief at Kilrush, were drowned while crossing the ferry on their return to Moyarta. No less than 33 dead bodies were washed ashore on the northern side of the ferry. They were removed to an adjacent field, and the coroner, Mr. Frank O'Grady, arriving soon after from Kilrake, an inquest was held on the wretched remains. It appeared upon the inquiry that no less than 43 or 45 persons (for they could not tell the exact number), were allowed to crowd into a crazy and rotten boat, which has been plying on this ferry for the last forty years. The boat moved on as far as the middle of the ferry, when a sea broke over her stern, and filled her at once, the wind blowing strong from the south-west at the time. She upset instantly, and her miserable living freight were immersed in the merciless waters, while four (who were eventually saved) clung to her until a boat from Captain Cox's men came to their assistance. The verdict of the coroner's jury was Accidental Death. In such cases, but imputing gross neglect, and attaching censure to the owners of the boat, for admitting such a number of persons into so frail a craft. With the exception of the victims who were drowned, all the others frequently come into the town in vain to seek out-door relief, and were returning that sad evening to their wretched hovels in the parishes of Moyarta and Kilbaliyowen."

(To be continued next week.)

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Dec. 23.—Fourth Sunday in Advent. Moon's First Quarter, 7h. 40m. P.M.
MONDAY, 24.—Christmas-Eve. Sun rises 8h. 7m ; sets 3h. 52m.
TUESDAY, 25.—Christmas Day.
WEDNESDAY, 26.—St. Stephen. Sun rises 8h. 7m., sets 3h. 53m.
THURSDAY, 27.—St. John the Evangelist.
FRIDAY, 28.—Innocents. Sun rises 8h. 8m., sets 3h. 55m.
SATURDAY, 29. Thomas Becket killed, 1171.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,

FOR THE WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 29, 1849.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A. M. h. m.	M. A. M. h. m.	M. A. M. h. m.	M. A. M. h. m.	M. A. M. h. m.	M. A. M. h. m.	M. A. M. h. m.
7 30	8 0	8 50	9 10	9 40	10 15	10 50
11 25	11 55	Tide	0 30	0 47	1 15	1 40

FRENCH PLAYS and OPERA COMIQUE, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Mr MITCHELL begs respectfully to announce the following arrangements for the ensuing season of French Performances at the St. James's Theatre.

Engagements for Opening.—Mdlle Clarisse Miroy, Mdlle Jane Essler (pupil of the Conservatoire, Paris), M Chollet (of the Theatre de l'Opera Comique, Paris first appearance) M Lae (premier tenor of the Theatre Royal'en and Ghent—his first appearance), M Nathan (premier basso of the Opera Comique, Paris—his first appearance), M Bacquet (pupil of the Conservatoire Paris—his first appearance), Mdlle Guichard, M Bogues, M Chatenafort, Mdme Stancud, Mdlle Guyot, M Dauvert, Mdlle Gotti, &c.

FOR THE COMEDY AND VAUDEVILLE.—M Samson (of the Theatre Francais, Paris—his first appearance in this country), M le Baron (of the Theatre Royal, Milan), M Nathan (premier comique of the Theatre Francais, Paris), Mdlle Dupuis (was last accepted a farewell engagement in this country), M Lafont, Mdlle Pagnie (of the Theatre du Vaudeville), Mdlle Rose (of the Theatre des Variétés), Mdlle Constance (of the Theatre du Gymnase), Mdlle Baptiste (of the Theatre de l'Odeon)

Mr. Mitchell is also entered into with the eminent tragedienne, Mdlle Rachel with whose performances the season will terminate.

Mr MITCHELL begs further to submit an outline of the general arrangements.—The season will commence on MONDAY, January 7, 1850, by the production of a New Opera, in three acts entitled LE VAL D'ANDORRE, produced in Paris at the end of last year, and since at the Opera Comique. Paris, more than 100 nights, and at the principal theatres of the country with the greatest success. The music by M F Halevy; the libretto by M de Saint-Georges, with the following distribution of the principal characters.—Stephan (jeune chasseur des Pyrenees), M Lae, Le Seigneur (capitaine de chasseurs des Pyrenees), M Chollet (who has obligingly undertaken the part for the more effective production of the opera); Saturnin (garde-poche du Gave) M Quilly Lavoy; Jacques Siroux (vieux chevrier), M Nathan (their first appearances in this country); Firmin (premier de Val d'Andorre), Mdlle Guichard; Georgette (cousine de Stephan), Mdlle Gotti; and Rose de Mai (servante de Theresa), Mdlle Charton. The second production will be Herold's grand opera, in three acts, ZAMPA, in which M Chollet will personate the character of Zampa as originally performed by him at the Opera Comique, Paris; Alphonsine Varlet will be given as Rose Friquet. In two acts, entitled LE CAID, by the pp ular composer, Ambroise Thomas And also, Auber's last New Opera of HAYDEE The character of Haydee (Mdlle Charton) has been entrusted and accepted from the following. Jeannot et Colin, Nicolo. Le Rod d'Yvetot, Adolphe Adam; Le Chevet de Bronze, Auber; Le Rod a Aubet, Le Brun; Le Maitre en Droit, Nicolo; La Perruche, Capliain. Le Valet de Chambre Carafa, Une Folie, Bichut. With the occasional performance of some of the most popular operas produced last season.

According to present arrangements the representation of Opera Comique will be limited to the months of January, February, and March, terminating the season before Easter. At the re-opening of the Theatre, on Monday, after Easter, on Monday, April 15, Rachel (from Paris) will have the honour of making his fi st appearance in this country, and will perform with Mdlle Rose (from the Theatre of the Varieties at Paris) in the new comedy of the French stage; and subsequently M degnier and Mddle Nathalie (both artistes of the Theatre Francais) will appear in several of the most favourite pieces now running and produced in Paris. At the end of May, Mdlle Dejazet, whose re-appearance at the Theatre des Varietes, after a severe and protracted indisposition, has been attended with her accustomed and unrivalled success, will appear in several new Vaudevilles, as Le Marquis de Lauzun, Le Mousin a Paroles, La Jeunesse de Lolle, &c

The performances of Comedy and Vaudeville will be supported by M. Lafont (of the Theatre des Varietes), Mdlle Pigeon, Mdlle Constance, M. Armaud, Mdlle Page, Mdlle Baptiste, M Leon, and a numerous company.

The engagement of Mdlle RACHEL will commence at the end of June, by her appearance in M Scribe's new play of "ADRIENNE LECOUVREUR," a production which has received more than ordinary admiration Mdlle Rachel will also perform, for the first time, in Dumas's celebrated play of "Mademoiselle de Belle-Isle," and in Voltaire's tragedy, in one act, entitled "Le Moliere de Lesbie," by Armand Bertier. And by the occasional representation each for one night only, of the classical tragedies of "Phedre," "Les Horaces," "Andromaque," and "Rejasat," the season will terminate.

The Orchestra will be composed of the same eminent professors engaged for the Opera last season, including M Tolbecque, M Alard, M Delloha, M Sevelam, M Sarrat, M Baumann, M Piot, M Vaudelland, M Rebmael, M Lazarus, M Nicholson, M Larkin, M C Harper, M J Harper, M Campanini, and M T Wright, Jun. The Director of the Music and Chef d'Orchestre M Chor ot Hanssens

Subscribers of the past season are solicited to make known their desire of renewing their subscriptions on or before the 1st of January next. Arrangements for season subscriptions may be made at Mr. Mitchell's Library, 33, Old Bond street, Mr Sams's Library, 1, St James s-street, Messrs Andrews's New Bond street; Rosey's, and Hookham's, Old Bond-street. The Box-office of the Theatre will be opened on the 1st of January.

THEATRE-ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. JAMES ANDERSON. The Public is respectfully informed that the Dramatic Season will commence on WEDNESDAY, Dec. 26, in which occasion will be presented, for the Majesty's pervants, Shakspeare's Play of the MERCHANT OF VENICE. Antonio, Mr Cooper, Bassanio, Mr. G Vincent, Shylock, Mr. Anderson (whose debut, Mr. W. H. Angel; Portia, Miss Laura Addison After which, a Grand New Comic PANTOMIME, by the Author of "Jack and the Beanstalk," and HARLEQUIN and GOLDEN QUEEN NEES; or, Harvie King of the Gold Mines. Harlequin Mr Ja-ques Pantaloon, Mr J Bellin Clown Mr Ben Wright Pantaloon, Mr Theodore Priese of Admission: Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 12s 6d., £2 2s., £1 11s 6d.; £1 1s. Stalls, 8s each. Boxes, 6s. Pit 3s. Lower Gallery, 1s. Upper Gallery, 6d. Half-price to all parts but Upper Gallery.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. W BATTY.—Great attraction for the Christmas Holiday rrangement will be produced on MONDAY, the 24th inst., a Grand Equestrian Drama, entitled the ENCHANTED ISLAND, or, the Lake of the Lily of the Valley, or, the Fairy of Love, in which that Celebrated Actor, Mr N T Hicks, will for the last time appear. To be succeeded by the most Novel and Brilliant SCENES of the ARENA, including, for the first time in this country, the Wonderful Performances of the Two Clowns with many new and Laughable Entrees. Concluding with the Grand Military Spectacle and YANKEE DOODLE who came to town, which will be produced with the most Brilliant embellishment in the Metropolis.

TURLBERG, LISNT, BRIDGE, FRODSHAM, and [illegible] 25, will be held the [illegible] Mrs A Newton, [illegible] Mr Lodger, and Mr. Percy Roberts. Mr. Loffler, and Herr Formes. [illegible] Miss Dolby, Miss Messent Ward Tiekens, le and Sir Reserved Seats, 4s; Stalls, 7. May be had of Mr. LAMBERTH, at the Office of the Concerts, 4, Exeter Hall; and of all Music-sellers.

SUPPLEMENT GRATIS !

On SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1850, will be GIVEN

A SUPPLEMENT

TO THE

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,

With the First Number for the Year, commencing a New Volume.

NOTICE.—The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS and CHRISTMAS SUPPLEMENT, for DECEMBER 22, 1849, are charged together ONE SHILLING, and cannot be had separately.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1849.

THE enormous defalcations of Mr. Haworth, the late manager of the Rochdale Savings-Bank, are yet in process of investigation. The loss sustained by the poor depositors is variously estimated at from £73,000 to £100,000. Either total must have caused a large amount of suffering, privation, and distress amongst a class of the population deserving of the utmost sympathy in their misfortune, and of the utmost respect for the provident and careful habits which originally elevated them into the rank of capitalists. A local effort has been made to raise funds sufficient to make good all the losses sustained; and thirteen of the trustees of the Bank have severally subscribed the sum of £1000 for that purpose. We trust the effort will be commensurate not only with the necessity, but with the strict sense of honour and law of the case. If that the £13,000 will eventually swell into the £100,000 needed. We trust, at the same time, that the attention of the Legislature will be directed to these institutions, with the view of placing them on a more satisfactory basis. The solvency of these popular banks is a matter of the greatest importance to the most numerous and most valuable class of the community. To encourage in the poor the habits of forethought and economy, is one of the most obvious duties of every Government. A prosperous people, with money as command, gives no trouble. We question greatly whether any Government has ever done its whole duty in this respect; and whether, if greater facilities for the investment of the savings of the humble had been afforded, the growth of the general prosperity of the country would not have been greatly increased. When Savings-Banks were originally instituted, a notion was widely diffused throughout the popular mind, and is still existent, that they were placed under the protection and security of the State, and that the poor man's few shillings or pounds were quite as safe in the local Savings-Banks as the thousands of the rich man invested in the purchase of Consols. There can be no question that such ought to be the case, and that it would be to the interest of the whole community if any plan could be devised whereby Savings-Banks might be made as safe as the Bank of England, and the trustees held responsible to the uttermost farthing for any defalcations that may arise from the misconduct of their paid servants. According to the theory of the present act under which Savings-Banks are conducted, it is not in the power of any individual to inflict such misery and wrong as have been inflicted by Mr. Haworth. It is the duty of the trustees to take care that the money deposited in any Savings-Bank shall be invested in the Bank of England in the name of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt. The trustees of the Rochdale Savings-Bank did not look with sufficient care to the conduct of their paid agent; and in strict justice, if not by the express terms of the Act, they are bound to make good the loss they incurred. If they desire a remedy, they have it against the estate of the defaulter. The increase of Savings-Banks within the last twenty years has been very great. Any blow to their credit is a public calamity. On the 20th of November, 1833, there were 385 Savings-Banks in England, holding balances amounting to £13,973,243, belonging to 404,014 depositors. On the 20th of November, 1844, the depositors had increased to 813,601 persons, and their investments reached the magnificent sum of £23,469,371—being at the rate of £28 for each depositor. These figures show the importance of the subject. It is, doubtless, a hard case for the rich trustees of the Rochdale Bank to make up so large a sum, but they have been placed in this position by their own neglect. The act expressly provides that no person being a trustee, treasurer, or manager of a Savings-Bank shall derive any emolument, direct or indirect, from its funds; and that the treasurer and paid officers of the society shall give adequate security for the faithful execution of their trust. If the Rochdale trustees had no such security in the case of Mr. Haworth, it is their fault as well as their misfortune, and they must bear the brunt of it. It is much better that they should suffer than that the poor of a whole district should be involved in misery, or that the public faith in these valuable institutions should be shaken, however slightly.

M. F. BARROT, the new French Minister of the Interior, has endeavoured to fulfil a promise held out by the Provisional Government. He has announced his intention to abolish the passport system; and, although there are some difficulties in the way, arising principally from the claim for compensation made by the swarms of hungry and locust-like officials that hang upon the prefectures, he doubtless will carry it into effect. If France should gain nothing else by her Revolution than this, she will at least have something to show for her sacrifices. No country deserves to be called free that denies the right of locomotion to her people, or fetters the exercise of the right with restrictions and passports. What Englishman would endure a Government that should make him take out a passport if he wanted to go from London to Birmingham? Yet such is the tyranny that the French, and indeed all the Continental nations, have long borne, and which, in all their revolutions, they have left untouched. The French Government have resolved that this great reform shall begin with travellers from England. We are certain that the concession will cement all previously existing good feeling between the two countries, and that it will be a real peace movement, of which both will reap the fruits in extended intercourse and increased trade, and augumented respect for one another.

GREAT INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION OF 1851.—We understand that a Royal circular for inquiring into the best mode of carrying out the Exhibition of Industry of all Nations, in 1851, will shortly be issued, and is likely to consist of heads of parties and interests, members of the late and present administration, representatives of agriculture, art, science, mechanics, and manufactures. It is proposed, in addition, to nominate any number of local commissioners desirable to represent all interests both at home and abroad.

An anonymous donor presented to the church of St. Nicholas, Worcester, on the late Thanksgiving-day, the sum of £2500, for such enlargement and improvement of this church as shall ultimately be decided upon. The following memoranda accompanied the gift:—The donor has no desire for his name to be blazoned abroad. Without imposing passive stipulations, he has expressed the following wishes; viz.—1. That as many free sittings as practicable shall be made on the ground floor. 2. That if any pews be erected in any new part of the church, they may, by faculty from the Lord Bishop of the diocese, be made over, as rentable property, to the rector of the parish for the time being.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

BANGO—By the 56 Geo 3, cap. 68, gold coin is declared to be the only legal tender; and no tender of silver coin is to be legal beyond forty shillings. By the proclamation of Charles II 1672 which established copper coin, it was ordered to be received in all payments under the value of sixpence, and not otherwise Gold is the standard to any amount

ARMBRUSTER—The quarters or Plate, of sectional, are "Arg. a saltire gu., in chief a bugle horn stringed sa. Crest: A Swan's head erased arg."

ELLIS—Arg a lion rampant sa. between three crescents gu., a crescent for difference. Crest: A lion rampant sa. holding between his paws a crescent gu. The lion in the arms reversed—would utter the whole character of the arms

HARRY I—The device is clearly armorial, and would render the bearer liable to the tax

E L L—The arms required are, "Arg. a saltire engr. sa. between a crescent in chief, and three mullets, two in fesse and one in base gu." We can trace no sort of law at all resembling that depicted on the tombstone in question

A J—Wilson, 2nd Viscount Ashbrook, grandfather of the present one, married, in 1756, Elisabeth Ridge; which lady married, secondly, after the Lordship's decease, the Rev John Jones, D D

ARMIGER—There is a family of Skipton seated at Beech Hill, county Londonderry, Ireland. Their arms are—"Arg. an anchor gu. Crest: a dexter arm, armed, hand holding a dagger ppr. Motto: Pro Aris et Focis." The first settler in Ireland appears to have been a Captain Skipton, who was sent over by Queen Elizabeth to command a fort in Donegal. The last direct male heir, Thomas Skipton, Esq, of Beech Hill, dying without heirs male, in 1807, bequeathed his property to his cousin and brother-in-law, George Crookshank Kennedy, Esq, who adopted, in consequence, the surname and arms of Skipton, and married Cassidy M'Causland Skipton, Esq, of Beech Hill, High Sheriff of the county of Londonderry in 1814

J K—We are strongly inclined to adhere to the rule of precedence laid down by Heraldicus in our Paper of the 17th Nov, viz. that "Precedence ceases from the second degree"

J B, Newcastle—The sitting of Parliament can be had at 4 o'clock

WALES—The transaction would certainly be illegal

A SUBSCRIBER, Cheltenham—The Islington Cattle Market was first opened about 1836

CONSOLIDATOR—Works on Civilisation have appeared by M Guizot, and Mr Mackinnon, M P

J M, Barnsley—We advise you to seek self-evident matters

PENDERIS—Apply first to the Secretary of the College

N P—The arms of the family of Paulet, of Hinton, co. Somerset, are—"Arg. a chevron gu. between three roses of the last, seeded and leaved ppr. Crest: A square beacon ppr chain, on two wheels or, fitted with fire ppr Motto: Pro aris et focis." The family is one of considerable antiquity and eminence. Sir Amyas Paulet was Governor of Jersey. Sir Hugh Paulet, Kt. Master of the Rolls, and Speaker of the House of Commons, temp. Queen Elizabeth, fourth son of Thomas Paulet, Esq, of Hinton, co Somerset. The baths was originally written Philippa

A CONSTANT SUBSCRIBER—Lisburne is a town in Ireland

H M F, Exeter—A cap of maintenance is only used when the party is entitled to it, by descent or grant. A coronet or the device (except Knights of the Garter, Knights of the Bath, and Knights Grand Crosses of St Michael and St. George) can only become attached to supporters by specific grant. The definition of a gentleman, heraldically speaking, is that which can be had at 4 each

A CORRESPONDENT—Heraldry is from Terra (Gr) order, and dormio skin

A Constant Subscriber—A gentleman may enter, without difficulty, at the Temple, by merely paying the required charges. Studying under a pleader is not necessary for a Barrister at Law, but it should be spent in the chambers of a conveyancer and equity draughtsman. A special pleader's tuition is required by a student destined for the common law bar. Three months nearly divide the practitioner's connexion, influence, and ability. An income of £300 can easily be made by a barrister in practice

HEARTSEASE—The late Sir Charles Forbes, Bart, of Newe, of Dunearn, bore in the centre of four shields of arms a crescent, for difference

THISTLE—He ought to have a crescent for difference, on a seal, would not be considered "armorial," and would not render the wearer liable to the tax on armorial bearings If the device is "Arg. a saltire gu." it would be "armorial" and liable to the tax

J A, Ainwyck—In all criminal cases of personal injuries committed by the husband or with against each other, the injured person is an admissible witness against the other. In the case of high treason, by the statute 7 Will. III. c. 3, s. 1, it is enacted that "in case any husband like case, a wife shall be admitted as a witness against her husband, because the tie of allegiance is more obligatory upon her. By the 2 cent Connty Courts Act, the 9 and 10 Vict. c 95, s 83, the wives of parties to actions are not to be examined either on behalf of the plaintiff or defendant

ROYALTY—Prince Albert's descent from King Henry II, of England, can be clearly shown. His Royal Highness is great grandnephew of the fa ous general, Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick, the hero of Minden

W H M—The readings of the barometer are reduced to 32 deg; they are independent of the height of the mercury in the cistern

SIMPLEX—Christmas-Day falls a day of the week later every year, because the year consists of 52 weeks and one day

W—The meaning of "without fluid," as applied to the barometer, is, "without fluid"

H B, Brompton, is thanked for his letters, which we would print did our arrangements admit of doing so

J S—Pillips's Fire Annihilator is described in No 339 of our Journal

It is not a matter of importance to us, as Publishers, what Paper you use

G S, Dover—Apply to Messrs Hugh. ey, publishers, Fleet-street

AN AGRICULTURIST should apply at Wright's Agricultural Library, Haymarket

A. E. J, New Peckham—We cannot tell you the whereabouts of Hubner's picture, it is not named in Dr Waagen's Manual of the great painter

X Y Z, Bunnington—Apply at the Stamp Office, Somerset House, Old Jewry

J B D Thg s to Gertrude is hard. The Tracts are by various hands

CONSTANT READER—Apply to Messrs Longman and Co., publishers

NELL GWYNNE See "Mores High. ey, publishers, Fleet-street

A SUBSCRIBER—Apply at Wright's Agricultural Library, Haymarket

A. E. J, New Peckham—We cannot tell you the whereabouts of Hubner's picture, it is not named in Dr Waagen's Manual of the great painter

X Y Z, Bunnington—Apply at the Stamp Office

POSTSCRIPT.

THE DEAN OF HEREFORD.—We regret to find that the Dean of Hereford continues seriously ill, and is likely to be for some time to come. He has not been able to leave his apartment for more than a month.

CORPORATION OF COMMON COUNCILMEN.—Friday (yesterday) being St. Thomas's Day, the annual election of members for the Common Council took place. In some wardmotes no opposition was offered; in others there was a contest. The wardmotes were in general held early in the day, in consequence of the act 11 and 12 Vic., cap. 94, which limits the polling to one day, instead of three, as heretofore.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.—On Thursday evening, Mr. Wilson, broker, of Great Queen-street, smelling the gas escaping from some of his pipes, went below to the meter, to ascertain the cause. He was suddenly blown up (having accidentally taken a candle with him) thrown to the ground by the explosion which followed. In an instant, the rafters of the floor of the shop, with the ceiling of the kitchen, were blown up, and the glass smashed throughout the house. The shopman was completely lifted off his legs by the heaving of the flooring, and had his face so severely burnt that he was immediately taken to King's College Hospital. Mr. Wilson, jun., was also thrown off his legs a flight of steps, but fortunately escaped from any serious injury; a cat, which was asleep under the pipe which was burst, was blown completely through a square of glass, breaking one of its legs by the concussion. It is feared that the unfortunate shopman will never again recover his eyesight, the explosion having blinded him the moment it occurred, and Mr. Wilson's face was so severely burnt as to be obliged to send immediately for medical assistance. Two other domestics were severely contused by being dashed from one side of the room to the other. The engines were sent for, but their services were not required, no ignition having taken place.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE

Accounts from Paris, received yesterday evening, mention that all the adverse amendments proposed to the bill for re-imposing the Potable Liquor tax having been rejected by great majorities, a division took place on the entire bill, when the numbers were:—For the measure, 418; against it, 245: giving Ministers a majority of 173. The bill, therefore, passed.

M. Crémieux, M. Favre, and others, have deserted the cause of their clients at Versailles, at the late state trials, have been censured by the Order of Advocates.

From the report of Customs Duties, just published, we find that the return of receipts for the last eleven months exceeds by 37,039,443f. that of the corresponding periods of 1848.

Some differences which were said to have existed between the President of the Republic and M. Thiers, have been, according to general report, amicably adjusted.

SPAIN.

Accounts from Madrid of the 14th state that the Government is going to raise 6000 troops for the Pope, by whom they are to be paid for their services.

AGRICULTURAL PROTECTION IN LINCOLNSHIRE.

The agriculturists of Lincolnshire have begun to bestir themselves in common with their brethren of other counties, in the expectation of recovering by "agitation" that protection of which "agitation" (by the Free-taders) has deprived them. We subjoin a somewhat fuller report than is usual in our columns of their meeting at Lincoln, on Monday last, as the "set-to" (in a double sense) between the advocates and opponents of Protection on that occasion foreshadows the character of the contest which will be entered upon in the next session of Parliament.

The meeting consisted of landowners, tenant farmers, and tradesmen, and was held under the presidency of the Mayor of the ancient city of Lincoln, in a large cobinet apartment of the new Corn Exchange, capable of holding from 1500 to 2000 persons. Across the end, over the entrance, is a narrow gallery, and on the south side, equidistant from the ends, is a permanent platform, in front of which was a long detail table, mounted upon sturdy trestles, for the use of the reporters. These details are necessary, in order to form an idea of what took place. The hall at the commencement of the meeting was filled with tenant farmers, and on the platform were Colonel Sibthorp, M.P.; Mr. R. A. Christopher, M.P.; Sir M. J. Cholmeley, M.P.; the Hon. Sir H. Dymoke, Sir J. Nelthorpe, Sir Charles Anderson, Mr. C. Chaplin, Mr. S. Stenhope, Major Ellison, Mr. Brown, Major of Lincoln; Mr. J. (a S. Smith, Mr. R. Worthington, Mr. Swan, the Hon. A. L. Melville, Mr. J. G. Stevenson, the Rev. F. Scott, Mr. John Norton, a wealthy draper of Lincoln, and a strenuous supporter of Free Trade, &c.

On the motion of Mr. Christopher, seconded by Colonel Sibthorp, the mayor was unanimously called to the chair.

Mr Christopher, M.P., then came forward, and was received with loud and enthusiastic cheering. He said that a resolution had been put into his hands which he had great pleasure in submitting to the meeting. He congratulated the assembly on the fact that it was presided over by the chief magistrate of the city of Lincoln, because the parties engaged in the farming interest, those which were truly national and perfectly distinct from all the ordinary topics of political contention and party strife. (Cheers.) He was glad they were there assembled under the auspices of the chief magistrate of the city, because it would be a ground to see around him not only those who had entrusted to him the representation of their political interests in Parliament, but so many of the respectable tradesmen and other persons connected with the city of Lincoln, who were joining hand in hand with the agriculturists, and thus showing that they were convinced that the measures, falsely called measures of Free-Trade, operated prejudicially not only upon the agriculturists, but upon all the other classes of the United Kingdom. (Cheers.) He also saw there many gentlemen who were considered, by the best judges of farming, to be the leading practical agriculturists of the United Kingdom—men thoroughly acquainted with their profession. They had no reason to transack the cloisters of Westminster Abbey—(a laugh) or to send to Dorsetshire for an agricultural clergyman—(cheers)—or rake the purlieus of Leadenhall-street for an agricultural razor-maker—(roars of laughter)—to instruct them in their business. (Loud cheers.) It was admitted that they thoroughly understood, in Lincolnshire, the business of farming; and he saw before him individuals who had reclaimed the fens and the heaths of Worcestershire, and

THE PROCESSION THROUGH UXBRIDGE.

FUNERAL OF HER LATE MAJESTY THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

THE funeral of the lamented Queen Adelaide took place on Thursday week, the 13th inst., and, although the ceremony was shorn of the pageantry of state, such as has hitherto characterised the Royal interments in England, the spectacle we are about to describe rendered it the more touching and interesting by its simplicity, and by the absence of what has been expressively termed "the pomp of death."

The scene at Stanmore is thus described in the Times' report:—

"The morning broke drearily. A thick dark mist hung close to the earth the roads and fields were crisp and slippery with a black frost, which slowly yielded before the advancing day, and then left the streets and highways in a puddle of mud. But long before dawn, the little village of Stanmore showed unusual signs of activity. Lights glanced from window to window. The trampling of chargers resounded along the pavement, and the church bell tolled solemnly through the darkness. Groups of the inhabitants of the district—to whose memory her Majesty had endeared herself by acts of kindness, charity, and consideration while living among them, were early on foot, groping their way towards the Priory, while it was yet dark as pitch. Some of the country people were assembled round the inn, staring at the preparations of the undertakers, who looked more than usually gloomy in their scarfs and weepers by candlelight, or watching the train of black horses as they were harnessed to the hearse and various carriages. By a quarter past seven o'clock, all the persons who had to take part in the proceedings had left Stanmore on their way to Bentley Priory, which is scarcely half a mile from the village. The same air of gloom was visible here. The thick plantations of fir which line the avenues and surround the house were dripping with fog-damp. On the lawn before the principal entrance a guard of honour, composed of a troop of Life Guards, was drawn up. The standard was veiled with crape; the same emblem of mourning covered the helmets of the officers, and was bound round their left arms. A dark stream of undertakers was pouring into the house, and opposite the door the hearse was in attendance. The domestics of her late Majesty, in deep mourning, were also busy in fulfilling their parts in the melancholy duties of the day. About an hour was consumed in preliminary arrangements, during which some few persons were admitted to see the coffin, which, covered by a pall, lay in the library. All the noblemen, ladies, and gentlemen in attendance on the late Queen Dowager were present, and appeared deeply to feel her loss."

At a few minutes after eight o'clock, the coffin, covered with a plain velvet pall, with white satin edging, emblazoned with her late Majesty's arms, was borne from the mansion to the hearse. The instant the horses began to move, the trumpeters of the Guards blew a Royal flourish, customary on such solemn occasions; and mournfully it echoed far and near through the woods. The soldiers of the guard fell into their places, and the procession wound its way slowly through the avenue to the Harrowwald-gate. A considerable number of persons, in deep mourning, as well as the servants, were assembled at the Priory, to see the departure of the procession; and the long avenue was studded with groups of tradespeople and labourers, who watched it pass with mournful gravity.

The following was the order in which the Procession was formed:—

A Mourning Coach, drawn by four horses,
Conveying Mr. John Shoemack, senior page: Miss Heath, Miss Arnold, dressers: and Miss Randall, wardrobe-maid to her late Majesty.
A Mourning Coach drawn by four horses,
Conveying Lord Edward Fitzalan Howard, Vice-Chamberlain to her Majesty's Household, and General Sir Andrew Barnard, G C B., Clerk-Marshal to her late Majesty.
A Mourning Coach drawn by four horses,
Conveying the Earl of Denbigh, G C H., Master of the Horse: Earl Howe, G C H., Lord-Chamberlain; the Hon W. Ashley, Vice-Chamberlain, and Colonel Cornwall, Equerry-in-Waiting to her late Majesty
Captain Taylor, Equerry, bearing the Crown of her late Majesty on a velvet cushion, in her late Majesty's State carriage, drawn by six horses
The Hearse, adorned with ten escutcheons, and drawn by eight horses.
The Guard of Honour: two and two.

At the Harrowwald-lodge-gate, a large concourse of gentlemen, ladies, and country people collected, and there were also some private vehicles and equestrians in waiting. For some distance, the roads were lined by respectable spectators. Passing down to the Pinner-road, at one time in a walk and now rapidly, as the state of the way varied, the procession turned to the right, and proceeded towards Ruislip. At the cross-roads, a number of the Harrow boys, in cap and gown accompanied by several of the masters, were stationed, in company with a large assemblage of men and women, nearly all of whom wore some mark of mourning. The church bells tolled continuously along the route, and some of the towers displayed the Royal standard hoisted half-way up the flagstaff, and drooping stiffly in the mist. There was nothing to vary the monotony of the scene bounded as it was by hedgerows or by the thick vapour, except the shifting of the procession itself, as it wound up some short hill, or glanced through the bough-bare trees in an angle of the roads the white plumes, red coats, and burnished helmets, sabres, and cuirasses of the Guards contrasting strangely with the sable feathers which nodded on the dismal hearse, and with the crapes and hatbands of the mutes attending it. Now and then, a short halt was called by sound of trumpet. At Ruislip, a body of police, mounted and on foot, was drawn up to receive the procession, and to keep the way clear through the people. The streets were crowded—every shop was closed. Here the cavalcade made a short stay to refresh the horses; and, proceeding somewhat more rapidly through the intermediate hamlets, where a repetition of the same marks of respect and regret took place on a smaller scale, arrived at Uxbridge about half-past ten o'clock.

At Uxbridge the shops were closed, and the whole population, rich and poor, were in the street, except such persons as were stationed at the windows; while the church bells filled the air with their lugubrious clang. A large green banner was displayed in front of the almshouses, on which was inscribed in letters of gold: "Peace and goodwill on earth to men. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this—to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. Sacred to the memory of the good Queen Adelaide."

At the market-place the body guard defiled right and left, and drew up to let the carriage past, and their place was taken by a more numerous detachment of the same regiment. As the hearse went by, the Royal flourish was repeated by the trumpeters. Our first illustration shows the procession turning by the market-place into Windsor-street.

Leaving Uxbridge at a tolerable pace, the funeral passed with increased speed through Upton to Stoke and Slough, having been joined by several vehicles in the rear of the escort on its way.

Shortly before twelve o'clock the cortège halted at Slough to receive the Royal carriages from Windsor. At about half-past twelve o'clock the procession left Slough, having been joined by the Queen's carriages as follows:—

THE PROCESSION THROUGH ETON.

FUNERAL OF HER LATE MAJESTY THE QUEEN DOWAGER—THE PROCESSION TO ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL, WINDSOR.

First Royal Carriage—Lord Marcus Hill, acting for the Lord-Steward of her Majesty's Household; Marcus A. Beaudebaron, K. L. Lord-Chamberlain of her Majesty's Household.
Duke of Norfolk, K.G., Master of the Hor[illegible] Waiting to her Majesty; Marchioness of [illegible]—Waiting.
Duke [illegible] Marchioness [illegible]
Last Royal Carriage—[illegible] Hon. Miss Macdonald, Hon. Miss Murray, Maids-of-Honour.
A Master of the Ceremonies—Viscount Combermere, Chamberwoman to her Majesty.
A Master of the Ceremonies—Viscount Combermere, Chamberwoman to her Majesty.
A Groom of the Bedchamber—Viscount Combermere, Chamberwoman to her Majesty.
A Gentleman Usher

COUNTRY NEWS.

LIGHTS AND FIRES ON BOARD SHIPS IN THE LIVERPOOL DOCKS.

A grievance which is general among sailors frequenting the port of Liverpool, namely, the non-allowance of fires and lights on board their ships while in the docks of Liverpool, has at length aroused the sympathies of the merchants and shipowners there

With a view of obtaining the abrogation of such law, or an extensive improvement therein, a meeting was held in the Cotton Sale room, on Monday afternoon. The attendance was very respectable, and included some of the leading merchants and shipowners of Liverpool, and several captains in the American and other foreign trades.

The chair was taken by William Rathbone, Esq., who briefly explained the nature and objects of the meeting.

After an introductory prayer from the Rev. Mr. Maynard, Mr. Rathbone admitted that they had a few difficulties to overcome. The subject had his warmest sympathies, and he trusted that they would be successful in their exertions.

Captain Knight, of the packet-ship New World, proposed the first resolution, which was to the following effect:—"That Christianity and humanity alike demand the use of fires and lights on board vessels while in the docks at Liverpool, and that a prompt compliance with such demands would be safe and politic." Captain Knight referred to the safety and policy of the course recommended. He said that, no matter what was the policy adopted at other ports, Liverpool, from its extensive maritime interests, ought to take the lead in such questions; and that, notwithstanding the rules in other ports, Liverpool ought to do right; but it was not so—for in St. Katharine's Docks, in London, and in New York, fire and lights were allowed, within certain limits.

The Rev. Mr. Maynard, minister of the Mariners' Church, seconded the motion, and urged the great moral benefits arising from an alteration in the present system. He also depicted in very forcible terms the enormous amount of misery and wickedness which took place owing to the poor sailor being obliged to turn out of his ship at sunset, in consequence of there being no light or fire to cheer him in the dark and colds of winter.

Mr. Mayer, of the firm of Laurie and Co., of Boston, addressed the meeting in support of the resolution, which was passed unanimously.

Captain Bursley proposed the adoption of the memorials to the Dock Committee, calling upon that body to rescind the present regulation; and, in seeking that favour, stated that he was prepared to show that the want alluded to made Liverpool the most expensive port in the kingdom, and demoralised the seamen to an extent which could not be described.

The Rev. Mr. Buck, in a lengthened and eloquent speech, seconded the memorial.

Mr. H. C. Chapman moved that Mr. Rathbone be requested to sign the memorial on behalf of the meeting, and that the movers and seconders of the resolutions should accompany him to present the same.

The meeting then separated.

ADDRESS TO JOHN BRIGHT, ESQ., M.P., FROM THE IRISHMEN OF MANCHESTER.—It is the intention of the Irishmen of Manchester and Salford shortly to present to Mr. Bright an address, thanking him for the able manner in which he laid the true, but wretched condition of Ireland before the English people, at the late meeting held in the Free Trade Hall. The meeting for the presentation of the address will be held in the Corn Exchange, on Wednesday, January 2nd. The list of the gentlemen composing the committee of management comprises the names of many highly respectable Irish residents in Manchester.

PROTECTIONIST MEETING IN KENT.—On Wednesday afternoon a large and influential meeting, for the purpose of securing to the British agriculturist protection from the influence of foreign competition, was held at Canterbrook, at which the Right Hon. Earl Stanhope presided. The noble Earl, in the course of his speech, recommended a petition to the Queen for the dissolution of Parliament, as, under present circumstances, it was quite hopeless to apply to the House of Commons.

FREEHOLD LAND MOVEMENT.—On Monday evening a public meeting was held in the Town-hall, Hemel Hempstead, in connexion with the Herts and Beds Freehold Land Society. The hall was well filled; and Mr. James Taylor, of the Birmingham society, having fully explained the nature of the movement, several parties were enrolled, and early on Tuesday morning many applications were made for rules, &c.

THE FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETY.—The allotments on the fourth estate purchased by the Birmingham Freehold Land Society were balloted for last week. The estate contains about thirty acres, and has cost the society £9000. It is situate in an improving locality, in the fashionable suburbs of the town, being within one mile and a half from its centre. The total number of allotments divided amongst the members in this estate is 398, each of which will be large enough to erect a respectable house, and allow for a small piece of garden. This is the second estate purchased in this division of the county, and will virtually place the future elections for North Warwick in the hands of the industrious artizans of Birmingham.

THE Cumberland Pacquet states that a gentleman in that county fatted twenty-five large hogs last season on barley merely broken in a malt-kiln, and given dry in a trough by itself, beans being another trough by themselves. He expresses himself satisfied as to its economy and success. He fancies four bushels of barley eaten in this way will go as far as five when ground into meal; besides which, in the case referred to, he saved £5 in grinding.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY.—The principal Bankers in Bristol have acceded to the requisition to close their establishments the day before Christmas-Day. To the memorial presented to the right worshipful the Mayor, he wrote the following reply:—"I agree with the foregoing, and hope all the other influential gentlemen connected with the city will accede to the request.—JOHN KERR HASKFIELD, Mayor of Bristol."

Mr. Francis Bayley, the revising barrister, son of the late Mr. Justice Bayley, has been appointed, by the Lord Chancellor, Judge of the Westminster County Court, in the room of the late Mr. Moylan

THE HUNGARIAN REFUGEES IN SCOTLAND.—The Mountstuart Elphinstone, a number of the Hungarian refugees on board, arrived in Cassgow harbour on Monday afternoon, at one o'clock. There was a large concourse of spectators present, who warmly expressed their sympathy with the exiles as the vessel got under way.

LIBERATION OF CHARTIST CONVICTS FROM HORSEMONGER-LANE GAOL.—On Wednesday afternoon, three of the Chartist prisoners convicted at the Old Bailey in 1848, were liberated, by order of the Secretary of State for the Home Department, from Horsemonger-lane Gaol, where they have been incarcerated fourteen months. Their names are Thomas Irons, William Poole, and Thomas Herbert. Within these last six months they have expressed such contrition as to their offences, that the Secretary of State commuted their sentence to fourteen months' imprisonment, which expired on that day, and the required sureties being approved of by the Home Department, they were ordered to be liberated.

GREAT SLAUGHTER AT LOUTH.—On Friday week, Mr. Valentine Sell, poulterer, of Louth, near Boston, assisted by forty-five persons, commenced his annual slaughtering of poultry for the London Christmas market. No fewer than 4000 geese, which had been for several months fattening in a farm at Withcall, and which were afterwards penned and fattened at a farmstead at Monk's dyke, as well as 1000 ducks, turkeys, and fowls, comprised the number to be slaughtered. They were all consigned to Leadenhall-market, and were calculated to weigh upwards of thirty tons. Many of the geese were of a remarkably large kind, and weighed from 16lb. to 20lb each. The weekly consumption of corn by this immense flock, belonging to a single poulterer, has been no less than 110 quarters

THE ROCHDALE SAVINGS-BANK.—Further investigations into the accounts of the Rochdale Savings-Bank are stated to reveal deficiencies to the extent of £15,000, and although various gentlemen have subscribed each several sums of £1000, yet the ultimate losses will prove enormous. The widow of the late manager has offered to surrender everything to the trustees of the bank, however, provided that she is indemnified for the consequences of her having to a Leeds contemporary, hundreds of people do not believe that the delinquent is dead, regarding the whole as a deception to blind depositors, whilst he escapes with the money. On Saturday evening a special meeting of the members of the unenrolled friendly societies interested in the bank was held in Rochdale, Mr. Livesay in the chair. The meeting was very numerous, its object being to adopt measures for bringing the various claimants of the money in question to the trustees and managers of the bank. Resolutions were passed appointing a committee of five members of the unenrolled societies, together with a treasurer, president, and secretary, to confer with the trustees; and also arranging that a subscription of one halfpenny in the pound, according to the sum invested, be contributed by the societies towards defraying the necessary expenses. The subscription also referred to are those of gentlemen who have subscribed each several sums of £1000, yet the ultimate losses will prove enormous. The widow of the late manager has offered to surrender everything to the trustees of the bank, however, provided that she is indemnified for the consequences of her having to a Leeds contemporary, hundreds of people do not believe that the delinquent is dead, regarding the whole as a deception to blind depositors, whilst he escapes with the money. On Saturday evening a special meeting of the members of the unenrolled friendly societies interested in the bank was held in Rochdale, Mr. Livesay in the chair. The meeting was very numerous, its object being to adopt measures for bringing the various claimants of the money in question to the trustees and managers of the bank. Resolutions were passed appointing a committee of five members of the unenrolled societies, together with a treasurer, president, and secretary, to confer with the trustees; and also arranging that a subscription of one halfpenny in the pound, according to the sum invested, be contributed by the societies towards defraying the necessary expenses. The subscription also referred to are those of gentlemen who have subscribed each several sums of £1000, yet the ultimate losses will prove enormous. The widow of the late manager has offered to surrender everything to the trustees of the bank, however, provided that she is indemnified for the consequences of her having

THE RECENT FIRE AT HOUNSLOW.—On Tuesday evening, between six and seven o'clock, an explosion took place at Messrs Curtis and Harvey's powder-mills, Hounslow-heath, which was heard as far distant as Richmond. The explosion was confined to a drying house, in which a quantity of gunpowder in an unfinished state, called a "green charge," had by some unknown cause ignited, and blown the roof of the building off. The amount of damage has not been stated.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

ONCEON is evidently incredulous of the case with which every Problem submitted to this paper is examined We have compared the second version of his "trifle" with the former. If he will do the same, he will find the impracticability of the first arose from his placing a Kt at R 7th instead of R 8th. His second edition is correct

HERR RIES, of Stuttgardt, will perceive that we have made some additions to his two last problems. These, he will find, on examination, were indispensable to prevent either and much easier solutions than are given

REV H S—We are glad to learn that the peculiar of playing little matches for sets of chess-men, or for classical works on the game, is gaining ground in our ideas. It will tend, in a great measure, to obviate the necessity of a money stake, except in contests of particular importance.

SCHOLASTICUS.—Chi-hexate, as we call the final term in the game, is, with the French, Echec mat, with the Italians, Scacco matto; in Portuguese and Spanish, Xaque (the X being guttural, we have here the Arabic Shack); in Castilian, Jaque mate; in German, Schach matt; in ancient Norwegian, Skr-hr (we give check). Matte by five mate; in Turkish, Schah mat; Schah itself is the given checkmate, and Schah mat schah the has been checkmated; in Persian, Schah vesi Aindeh To give checkmate, and Schah mat schahin To be checkmated The origin of these terms will probably be found in the Parsian language, where Schah signifies King, as I most esteemed, exhausted, reduced to extremity

THEO. O L, MR PITT—See our notice to W E H in the last Number

CARLISLE C G is thanked for the information he has politely favoured us with

L D N—A new edition of four hundred Chess Problems will probably obtain the rules from Lowchess, the Chess and Draught-board manufacturer, in Piccadilly

W S D You have failed in Enigma 306. The other solution is correct

R D. PEDOSE—The 13th volume of the Chess-Player's Chronicle can now be got complete of any bookseller, and contains an apparently inexhaustable fund of entertainment and instruction for amateurs of the game. For La Regence you must apply to a foreign bookseller

CARLO FOLIERO. No 1 seems correct No 2 however, requires only two instead of four moves viz. 1 Kt to K 3d (ch), 2. R to K 8th or Q 8th (mate).

BOHEMIAN. There is a Chess Club at Carlisle, which meets on Tuesday and Friday evenings, at Woodrow's Hotel, English-street. Apply to the secretary, Mr W Fairlie

M P, Traveller Club-house—The number of members to the St George's Chess Club is limited to 300; no time should therefore be lost. Address the secretary, Mr Longbottom, 5, Cavendish-square

F H—Very neat and pretty

J G W—We said "ineligible," not "illegible." The position was written out plainly enough, but there is no point, interest, or difficulty about it.

T L, Trinity College, Dublin—For the prize and other particulars of Mr Lonsbars' very beautiful chess-board, we must refer you to his advertisement in another part of our paper

Solutions by F G R, M P, Rev. S L. D D, Oxford; Rugby-boy, Collegian, S U M, Trinity College, Dublin; Wrangler, Brutus, Mr Pips, I N L, Bellary, J, G F P, G W T, F W, S S, are correct. Those by Tyro, Valleyfield, Milo, Rubenelor, F R S, Eleonore, are wrong

* * Any Amateur, of not more than two years' Chess-standing, desirous of a Game by Correspondence, may hear of a competitor by addressing "Chessiliss, 27, King William-street, Charing-cross." The stake to be an Ivory Set of the STAUNTON CHESS-MEN. A member of a University, or of some public School, will be preferred.

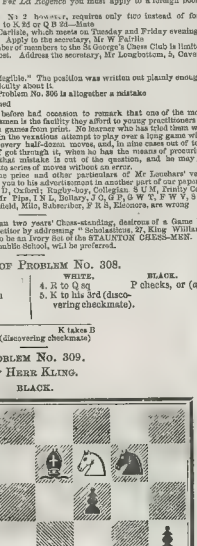
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 308.

WHITE.	BLACK.	BLACK.
1. B to Q 8th (discovering ch)	K to his 4th	4. R to Q sq — P checks, or (a)
2. Kt takes B (ch)	K to Q 5th	5. K to his 3rd (discovering checkmate).
3. R to Q 2d	P takes P

(a) 4. K takes B
5. K to his 3d (discovering checkmate)

PROBLEM NO. 309.
By HERR KLING.

BLACK.



WHITE

White to play, and mate in three moves.

CHESS IN THE METROPOLIS.

Mr. STAUNTON gives Mr. G. MEDLEY the odds of the Pawn and two moves.
(Remove Black's K B Pawn from the board.)

WHITE (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)	WHITE (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)
1. P to K 4th		19. P to Q 4th	P to K 4th
2. P to Q 4th	P to K 3d	20. P to Q R 5th	K R to K sq
3. K B to Q 3d	Q to K 2d (a)	21. P to Q Kt 6th	Q B P takes P
4. Kt to B 3d	P to Q 3d	22. P takes P	P takes P
5. P to K 5th	Q Kt to B 3d	23. P to Q B 3d	Q to her B 4th
6. K Kt to his 5th (b)	P to K Kt 3d	24 B to K 4th	K to Q B 2d (d)
7. K Kt to B 3d	K B to K R 3d	25. K R to Q Kt sq	Q R to his sq
8. Q Kt to B 3d	Q B to Q 3d	26. Q to her B 3d	B to Q B 3d
9. Q Kt to K 4th	P takes K P	27 K R to K sq	P to Q Kt 4th
10. P takes P	Castles on Q's side	28. P to K R 3d	Q R to his 5th
11. B takes B	K Kt takes B	29. P to Q 6 4th	Q R takes P
12. Q to K 2d	K Kt to his 5th	30. B to Q 3d	R to Q B 6th (e)
13. Q Kt to Q 2d	Q to her B 4th	31. K R to Q B sq	P to Q Kt 5th
14. P to K 6th	Q to her B 5th	32. R takes B	P takes R
15. Castles on K's side	K Kt takes K P	33. Q to her B 2d	P to Q Kt 4th
16. P to Q Kt 5th	K Kt takes Kt (ch)	34. K to Q B sq	P to Q Kt 5th
17. Kt takes Kt	Kt to Q 5th	35. Q to her Kt 3d	Q to her 4th
18. Kt takes Kt	Q takes Kt	36. Q takes Q	B takes Q and White resigned.

(a) This novel defence to the Pawn and two moves attack appears to be growing rapidly into favour.

(b) Playing the Kt this is an effective move, when Black has advanced his Q P to Q 4th; but in the present case it is only lost time.

(c) An ingenious attempt to divert the attack from his centre Pawn.

(d) If to Q Kt 4th would have been useless, as White could answer with Q to K Kt 4th, giving check.

(e) If Q to her 4th, White would have retreated his B to Bishop's sq.

LIVELY EXAMPLE OF THE SCOTCH OPENING, PLAYED BETWEEN TWO EMINENT LONDON PLAYERS.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	12. Q to Q Kt 3d	R takes K P
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	13. P to K 5 3d (b)	Q B to K 3d (c)
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P	14. Q to Q 2d	K to K 4th
4. Kt takes P	K B to Q B 4th	15. Q B to K B 4th	R takes Kt
5. Kt to K B 3th	Q to K B 3d	16. P takes R	Q takes P
6. Q Kt to B 3d	K Kt to K 2d	17. Q to her 2d	Kt to Q 4th
7. Q Kt to Q 5th	Kt takes Q Kt	18. P to K R 3d	Kt takes B
8. Q takes Kt	P to Q 3d	19. B to Q 3d	Kt takes B
9. K B to Q Kt 5th	Castles	20. Q takes Kt	B to Q B 5th
10. P to K Kt 4th	K R to K sq	White surrenders.
11. K to B sq (a)	Q Kt to Kt 5th

(a) This opening is not well played on White's side. (b) An irreparable mistake (c) Black neglects to avail himself of all the advantages presented by his opponent's error, he ought to have taken the Kt with his Bishop—for example:

13 Q B takes Kt
14. Q to K R's 5th

14. P takes B (best) And White has no resource

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 312.—By W. G., York.

White: K at his B 6th, B at Q R 6th, Kts at K 7th and Q B 5th.
Black: K at Q sq.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 313.—By the Rev. S. Nash.

White · K at Q Kt 7th, R at K sq, B at Q 4th and Q Kt 3d, P at K 4th.
Black · K at Q 3d; Ps at K B 4th and 5th, Q Kt 3d and 6th, and Q 5 6th.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

No. 314.—By J. C. R., of the "Philidorian."

White: K at his B sq, Q at her 8th, Kts at K B 3d and K 8th, P at K Kt 2d.
Black: K at his R 4th, Q at K Kt 3d, Rs at K R sq and K R 3d.

White to play, and mate in two moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

At a special meeting of the "Society for the Protection of Agriculture and British Industry," which was attended by a deputation from the National Association for the Protection of British Industry and Capital," held at the close of last week, it was unanimously resolved that the two societies be united, and a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

The functions of the three abolished law courts—namely, the Marshalsea, Palace, and Peverel Courts—will cease and determine from and after the 31st inst.

The domestic servants of the late Queen Dowager have received notice that their services will be dispensed with on the 1st of next month. On the 7th proximo, a sale of her Maj-sty's stud will take place. It is rumoured that her late Majesty has left a number of articles of interest and value to different ladies and gentlemen of her household.

The Constitutionnel says:—"The following anecdote was related yesterday in the Salle des Pas Perdus of the National Assembly: Some ex-deputies, who signed the impeachment of M. Guizot, asked what he found changed in France. 'Nothing,' replied M. Guizot, 'nothing—except as regards the dynasty. But I have found hatred stronger, and the obstinacy of men of certain parties greater than ever."

General Herbillon has just sent to Paris three Arab standards, which were taken by the French after the assault of Zaatcha. They are to be placed in the Invalides.

The French Minister of Commerce has charged M. T. Marzan, representative of the people, to proceed to Belgium to ascertain the progress made in the cultivation and manufacturing of flax. M. Marzan is a chief of an important manufactory at Montagne (Vendée).

The Cambridge Freehold Land Scheme progresses favourably, and the committee have nearly completed the rules of the society. 200 members have now placed their names on the list in Cambridge.

In Aberdeen, the streets are swept every day, at an annual cost of £1000, and the refuse brings in £3000 a year. In Perth the scavenging costs £1300 per annum, and the manure sells for £1730.

The Southampton Freehold Land Association is about to be brought prominently before the public. Some delay has occurred, from a desire on the part of the promoters to start fairly, with a well-digested code of rules, suitable for the practicable working of the society. A considerable number of shares have been taken, and a public meeting to inaugurate the society will be held at an early day.

The ice in the Elbe is upwards of five inches thick, and sailing vessels cannot be got through.

On Monday last a sailor named W. Lathom, on board the sloop Turner, lying at Dundon Sands, near Carlisle, took out a plug in the vessel's bottom, in order to allow the leakage water to escape. He neglected to replace the plug, and went to bed. During the night, as the tide rose, the vessel filled with water, and drowned the poor fellow in his bed.

Mr. Garcia is appointed Solicitor-General at Trinadad.

The Government Commission of Inquiry into the mode of conducting the Irish Stock Exchange recommended that, without serving an apprenticeship, any respectable person should be licensed by the Lord-Lieutenant to act as a stock-broker, on an entrance fee of ten guineas.

Mr. Corballis, Q.C., has resigned the offices of Commissioner of National Education, and Commissioner of the Board of Charitable Bequests in Ireland.

Mr. Henry Grattan, in a letter to Lord Clarendon, proposes that the inmates of Irish workhouses be set to work as speedily as possible in making clothes for the poor, who, as he has observed in a recent tour through many parts of Ireland, are now reduced to a state of almost absolute nudity. Such scenes, he observes, could be witnessed nowhere but in Ireland.

Most of the burial clubs in the vicinity of Chelmsford have been broken up since the proceedings in Tendring Hundred showed the crimes they might instigate. The system was to pay 6d. each on the death of a member; and parties in this neighbourhood state they occasionally called on for 8s., at a time, and had paid considerable sums in this way, all of which is of course lost to them.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Portsmouth Garrison, Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, has made application to the Portsmouth Literary and Philosophical Society for the occasional use of the theatre of that institution, for the delivery of a course of lectures on "Fortification and Military Tactics," to the soldiers under his command.

On Saturday, the 8th instant, Captain Pitzairn Campbell, of the 23d Fusiliers, killed a royal stag and a roebuck, by double shot, in the Applecross Forest, Inverness, and on the same day Captain Rutherford, R.N., brought down a royal stag of deer, running in the same forest. Captain Rutherford had never fired at a deer before.

From the official returns just published it appears that the number of deaths in Paris from cholera amounted to 19,560, or, inclusive of those which took place in the civil and military hospitals, to 20,000. The most fatal month was June, when 8769 perished. In London the most fatal month was September, when 5644 fell victims.

A letter from Montpelier, of the 12th inst., states that the demagogues, who formed the majority of the population of the neighbouring town of Marsillarques, having attacked the authorities, and wounded them in the Hôtel de Ville, it became necessary to send 400 troops of the line against them from Montpelier. On the arrival of the troops at Marsillarques, order was restored, and the chiefs of the insurgents were arrested.

A young man, now serving as a private soldier in the 7th dragoon guards, has lately come into possession of landed property in Ireland to the value of £12,000 per annum, in addition to a large amount of cash. He became of age in a few months, when he will quit the profession of arms for the quietude of civil life.

The provincial papers mention no less than six incendiary fires which took place last week in different parts of the country; viz. at Wantage (Berks), Darton (Bucks), Wallingford, Drayton (Dorset) Hungerford and White Farm (near Cardiff), at which considerable damage was done.

The parish church of Newton-upon-Ouse, which has been entirely rebuilt, with the exception of the ancient tower, at the sole expense of the Hon. Miss Dawnay, of Beningbrough Hall, was re-opened for divine worship on Sunday last. The service was performed by the Rev. John Gazenby, the incumbent, and a very numerous congregation assembled on the occasion.

A vessel just arrived in the docks from Hong Kong has brought the very large number of 340,000 sacks as a portion of her cargo. The ship we last week brought the large number of 320 packages of soy of Chinese produce

On Saturday night, no less than seven tons of the finest leaf tobacco were stolen from Captain Gowland, R.N., of the revenue cutter Vigilant, on board a vessel in the Medway. Two men and a boy were found in charge, who were yesterday taken before the magistrates at Rochester, and severally fined £100, or in default committed to Maidstone Gaol. The seizure was, of course condemned.

The exhibition of manufactures at Birmingham closed on Saturday. It was opened on the 2nd of September, and during the time has been visited by more than 100,000 persons. In the last week there were 19,000 admissions.

In the year 1836 there were 2200 voters in the Queen's County, Ireland; at present there are 547. Nor do we believe the Queen's County to be a solitary instance of such a decrease in the number of electors. There has also been a great falling off in Kildare; and we daily see complaints in our contemporaries of the prevalence of such self-disfranchisement.

By a Treasury minute recently issued, Fleetwood will become, after the 6th of January next, an independent port. It belongs at present to the port of Preston.

The deliveries of tea in the City last week were good, though not quite so large as in the preceding week, being, from the London warehouses, 542,965 lb.

The Paris Moniteur publishes a circular, signed by M. Thayer, the Postmaster-General, addressed to all the inspectors and directors of post-offices, announcing that he has been informed that several postmen in the rural districts have distributed political tracts which have not passed through the post-office. He consequently desires that measures be adopted to put an end to that practice.

The fine estate of Summerhill Park, near Tunbridge Wells, has been purchased by the Rev. E. O. F. Owen, of Bettws, Montgomeryshire.

The Countess of Landsfeldt, accompanied by her husband, Mr. Heald, embarked at Barcelona on the 6th inst., for Cadiz, in the Dart steamer.

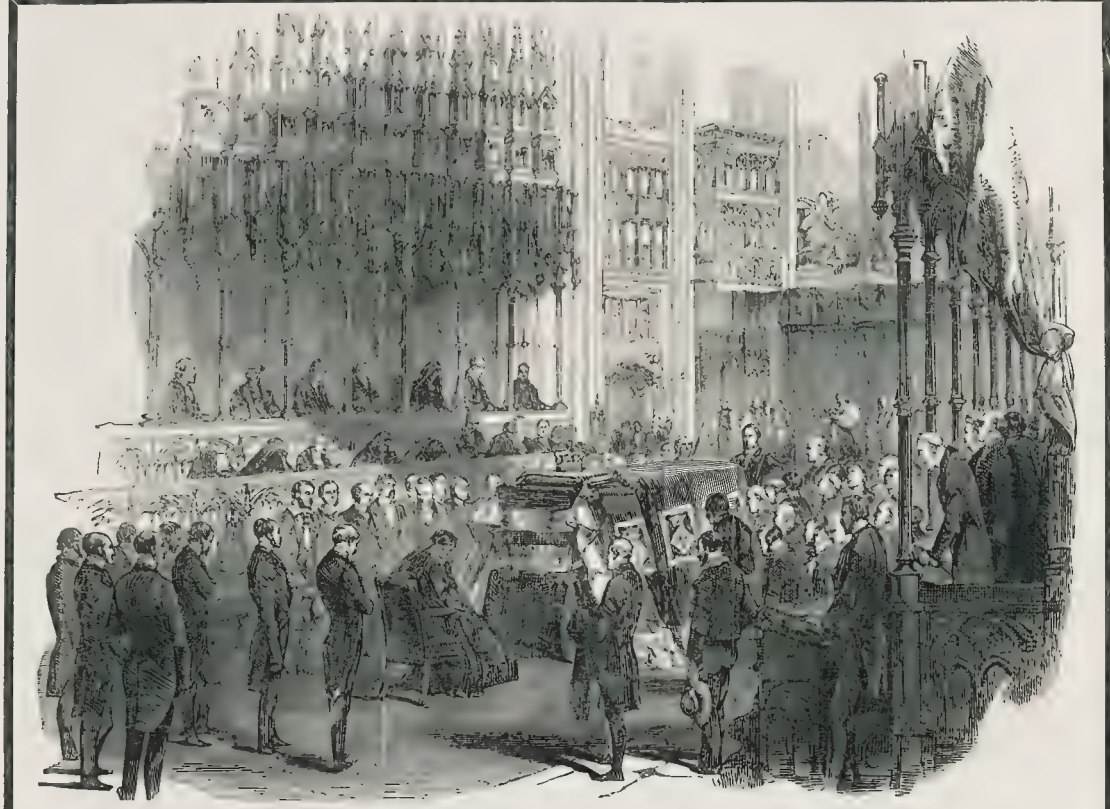
Last week, the King of the Belgians entered his 60th year. The public buildings of Brussels were decked with flags, the bells of the churches rang joyful peals, a Te Deum was celebrated at the Cathedral, and the staff of the Civic Guard had a grand banquet.

The Corfu Gazette, of the 1st, announces the arrival of Mr. Thomas John Osborne, Secretary to the Senate of the Ionian Isles for the General Department.

The vessel Seloyian, which has just arrived in the docks from Hong Kong, has brought fifty-nine boxes of treasure, as a portion of the cargo consigned to order.

A subscription has been opened among the underwriters here (Glasgow) on behalf of the widows and orphans of the twenty Tyne pilots who, a short time since, lost their lives while gallantly endeavouring to rescue the crew of a stranded vessel. The subscriptions are coming in liberally, and we doubt not that a handsome sum will be transmitted.

The late easterly winds have [illegible] all large vessels [illegible] shipping, owing to some fresh [illegible] their ports on account of ice. The same winds having operated against the departure of vessels, the docks there are now inconveniently crowded, and the blue flag, signifying that the dock is full, has been flying some days.



THE FUNERAL CEREMONY IN ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL.

FUNERAL OF HER LATE MAJESTY THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

(Continued from page 410.)

crimson silk velvet, richly studded with gilt furniture. A double row of burnished gold nails formed the outline; and the compartments were shaped by a triple row of small nails. The sides were relieved by massive gold handles, and the corners were of the same, ornamented by an engraved crown. The lid, in its upper compartment, had a large raised regal crown, and in its lower division a reversed torch. The inscription ran

Depositum
Serenissimæ Principessæ
Adelaidæ
Reginæ Londinensi
Obiit IIIo die Decembris,
Anno Domini MDCCCXLIX.
Ætatis Suæ LVIII

This state coffin enclosed the leaden coffin with its mahogany case, and within this the shell, made of polished Spanish mahogany, lined with white satin, and having a satin pillow.

Then was sung the anthem, "When the ear heard her, then it blessed her." While this was being performed, the coffin was very gradually and gently lowered. The sentences beginning, "Man that is born of a woman hath but a short time to live," were then sung by the choir.

The Archbishop, then coming down to the mouth of the tomb, accompanied by the two senior canons, Mr. Cust and Mr. Markham, pronounced the committal of the body to the ground, "Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust;" the verger performing the accustomed and significant action of casting earth upon the body.

Then was sung the sentence, "I heard a voice from Heaven," &c. The Lord's Prayer, which followed, was repeated by the congregation after the Archbishop. The first collect was then read by the most rev. prelate.

Another anthem was sung, "Her body is buried in peace, but her name liveth evermore."

Then the Archbishop read the last collect, and pronounced the benediction.

After a few moments' pause for the private devotions of the congregation, Garter King of Arms, standing near the grave, pronounced the style of her late Majesty, as follows:—"Thus it hath pleased Almighty God to take out of this transitory life unto His divine mercy the late Most High, Most Mighty, and Most Excellent Princess Adelaide, the Queen Dowager, relict of His Majesty King William the Fourth, uncle to Her Most Excellent Majesty Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain Queen, Defender of the Faith, whom God bless and preserve with long life, health, honour, and all worldly happiness."

The Lord-Chamberlain and the Vice-Chamberlain of her late Majesty's household then stepped to the mouth of the tomb, and, amidst a profound silence, broke their staves of office, and, kneeling, deposited them upon the coffin.

The ceremonial was then concluded. The chief mourner was conducted out of the choir by the eastern door, followed by the other mourners, all passing the grave in their way. Prince Albert went to the Duke of Wellington, and shook hands with him, and then joined the Duke of Cambridge, who was also proceeding towards the eastern door, but who paused a moment to look into the open grave. The Rev. Mr Wood, and some others of her late Majesty's household, afterwards went down into the vault to see where the body had been laid.

No particular order was observed in the departure from the chapel of the several personages who took part in the funeral; but it is right to say that the whole ceremonial was extremely well conducted. It terminated at a quarter-past two o'clock.

THE ROYAL VAULT.

Queen Adelaide's coffin has been placed by the side of her Royal husband's; both of them resting on a long stone platform, about eighteen inches high and five or six feet broad, erected on the middle of the floor of the vault. Beyond them, on this platform, the coffin of George IV. is placed, and, beyond this, at the extremity of the mausoleum, on a massive stone shelf, lie the remains of George III. The crowns set upon the coffins indicate to the eye immediately that they contain the remains of those who once were Monarchs. On the one side of George III. repose the bodies of Queen Charlotte and Prince Alfred; on the other side, those of the Princess Amelia and Prince Octavius. Great stone shelves are erected along the sides of the vault; but very little of the space has yet been occupied. On the left of William IV. and Queen Adelaide, by the wall, is the coffin of their infant child, the Princess Elizabeth; and hard by, rest the Duke of York, the infant child of the Duke of Cumberland, the Duchess of Brunswick, the Princess Charlotte and her infant, the Duke of Kent, and the Princess Augusta.

THE ROYAL VAULT.

The Royal tomb-house, or Cardinal Wolsey's Chapel, by which name it is so well known, was erected by Henry the Eighth as a burial-place for himself and his successors. Upon his subsequent preference of Westminster Abbey for that purpose, the building remained neglected until Cardinal Wolsey obtained a grant of it from Henry the Eighth. With the same profusion of expense which marked all the public acts of his life, he began to prepare it as a receptacle for his own remains; but, at the confiscation of his property, it reverted to the Crown. Charles the First intended to fit up the structure as a Royal mausoleum, but the civil wars interposed, and in 1646 it was plundered by the Republican army. On the accession of James II., that Monarch had it converted into a chapel, and Antonio Verrio was employed to execute a richly ornamental ceiling; but in a popular commotion that soon after ensued, caused by the King publicly entertaining the Pope's Nuncio, the windows and internal decorations were destroyed. It thus remained till the reign of George III., when it was determined to construct a Royal cemetery beneath it. For this purpose an excavation was made in the chalk forming the foundation, to the depth of 15 feet, and corresponding in length and width with the dimensions of the building. On each side are the receptacles for the bodies, formed by Gothic octagonal pillars, supporting a range of four shelves. The entrance to the mausoleum is in the choir of St. George's Chapel, a short distance from the steps of the altar, as already described.

Lords Frederick and Adolphus Fitzclarence were very much affected during the service; and many of the mourners appeared to be greatly distressed by the excess of their emotion at the loss of one so deeply valued and beloved by all to whom she was known. After the ceremony, the two Lords Fitzclarence descended into the Royal Vault, to see the coffin of their Royal father, by the side of which that of the good Queen Adelaide now rests.

We have authority to state that the following pious avowal of true faith and hope was appended to the memorandum respecting her interment, and left by the late Queen Adelaide in her will. It will afford consolation to the many who now mourn the irreparable loss they have sustained: "I shall die in peace with all the world, full of gratitude for all the kindness that was ever shown to me, and in full reliance on the mercy of our Saviour Jesus Christ, into whose hands I commit my soul."

Thus has passed from among us—but to live in the grateful memory of thousands—the good Queen Adelaide; a Princess whose many virtues endeared her to her family and to all ranks—whose Christian humility and patient endurance of long suffering, and whose gentle nature and unobtrusive character, will long be enshrined in the hearts and affections of the people of this country.

The Royal funeral was conducted by Messrs. Banting, of St. James's-street.

The coffins were made by Messrs. Tupprell and Holland, of Marylebone-street.

The escutcheons were painted by Messrs. Bishop, of Bennett's-hill, Doctors'-commons, herald-painters to her Majesty; who also furnished the crown and cushion placed upon the coffin, and the achievements for Marlborough House and Bushy.

OBSERVANCE OF THE DAY OF THE FUNERAL.

The day was observed throughout London in such a way as to show how much attached the inhabitants were to the late Queen Dowager. The bell of St. Paul's, and those of the different churches, commenced tolling at eight o'clock in the morning. Many shops were closed. In Kensington all business was suspended for the day. The blinds were drawn at the club-houses and residences of the nobility and gentry. Minute guns were fired at the Tower, where the Royal standard was hoisted half-staff high. The attendance of the band in mounting guard at St. James's and the Horse Guards was dispensed with, and the regimental colours were covered with crape, which was worn by the officers on their caps, swords, and left arms. The National Gallery, the British Museum, and other scientific institutions were closed, and all the theatres were shut. The shipping in the river and docks h[illegible] high.

The following are the names [illegible] of the ten seamen and petty officers [illegible] of Queen Adelaide to the tomb: Samuel Long, quar[illegible]; [illegible] to the deceased Queen's barge when cruising in her Majesty's ship Hastings, 74; John Hayles, able seaman; James Berry, boatswain's mate; Henry Hi[illegible], quartermaster; Jeremiah Glanville, boatswain's mate. Hickford Hill, boatswain's mate. Phillip Perry, captain's coxswain; John [illegible], able seaman; James Grady, yeoman of the signals; and John Glass, able seaman. They all wore their service medals and good-conduct badges.

Registration of the Death. Bentley Priory being in the parish of Harrow-on-the-Hill, the Registrar of the district, Mr. William Winkley, on the 6th instant, registered the lamented death of her late Majesty the Queen Dowager. Mr. Winkley was accompanied by Major Graham, the Registrar-General, and the duty was performed in the presence of Earl Howe (her late Majesty's Lord Chamberlain), Sir David Davies, Sir Andrew Barnard, and Captain Bedford.

SNIPE SHOOTING.—DRAWN BY HARRISON WEIR.

SNIPE SHOOTING.

SNIPE Shooting, though it may find little favour in eyes accustomed to the dazzle of the battue, or with such as can compass the princely pastime of "stalking"—

> Where the hunter of deer, and the warrior, trode
> To his kills that encircle the sea—

belongs, nevertheless, to the legitimate class of British Field Sports. The snipe, albeit ranking far below the pheasant, the grouse, and the partridge, has one claim to social sympathy which the higher branches of the game family do not possess. It is wholly exempt from the moral mischief which is charged—fairly or unfairly—against the system of preserving: no premium for poaching is offered by the solitary of the moor and marsh. This feathered wanderer—for the snipe is a migratory bird—is found in every portion of the British islands. It breeds in this country, but in small numbers, and partially—the regular supply arriving with the other winged winter visitants, late in the autumn. Its geographical range is still a question undisposed of by naturalists. Jardine says it breeds in Lapland. Mr. Yarrell gives it birth among the alpine districts of Norway and Sweden. Pennant ascribes it to Russia and Siberia; and many authorities state it to be a native of the East. It is, so to speak, the earliest herald of rural progress, retreating before the first step in agricultural improvement—draining. Moreover, the snipe is, beyond all others of the bipes plumæ, capricious of place, changing its abode with almost every vicissitude of wind and weather. Occasionally, there is not an individual of the species to be met with in its most accustomed haunts. Anon the sportsman finds himself beset with a crowd where one had never before been heard of "by the oldest inhabitant." Said we this was caprice? Nature! ten thousand pardons. No, no; when you miss him in his familiar rounds, be sure it is because there is something wrong in the cuvis. Your snipe is born an epicure: that long tapering bill wherewith he caters for the creature comforts is "every inch palate." What would Quin have given for such a tube!

Without offence—after what has been promised touching local adaptation—it will be imagined that Ireland is the best district of this kingdom for the sport under discussion. Cambridge and Lincoln shires are not bad; and, advancing northwards, even to the Western Isles of Scotland, the scolopax will reward the sportman's research. He is, however, a various vagabond, and, with the appliances and means at hand, the pursuit, as they say in France, "vaut les chandelles." Suppose yourself within reach of some such place as that set forth by the Artist, whose design forms the subject of our Engraving; with your leave, we will suggest how the accident might be turned to account.

Some people call Snipe Shooting a "knack:" all we say is, acquire it, then, as soon as you can; you won't feel the least inconvenience from it, either among the heather of the Highlands or the stubbles of Norfolk. Bear in mind, when beating for them, that snipes, on windy, cloudy, or close days, are as easy of approach as "cheepers" in July. With a bright frost, and a clear, calm atmosphere, away they dart like messages by electric telegraph. An ancient pointer, familiar with their scent, is the only dog to be commissioned for such occasions. By all means let him also be taught to retrieve: it's just as well not to walk up to the arm-pits in a morass when the mercury is at "set freezing." Among sedges by river-sides, spaniels will do best service. When your snipe springs, don't be in a hurry; endeavour to fire just as he is approaching the distance where, from your knowledge of your gun, the shot will have the widest spread consistent with effective execution. Of course, this will depend a good deal upon the charge being of loose shot or cartridge. It is not true that this bird is to be bagged upon the slightest touch. He will often fly beyond sight after more than one pellet has passed "clean through" him, as Sir Lucius O'Trigger says. If you think he is hit, and cannot mark him down, beat very closely where you saw him last of him. Beat your ground with patience, returning in the afternoon to spots drawn blank in the morning. Snipes have seasons for frequenting feeding-places the. a sportsman will never be able to anticipate until he can interpret their reasons. "They lie best," according to Captain Lacy, one of the most practical writers on shooting birds which are not game, "in windy weather, when the shooter should always be down wind, as the birds, when sprung, generally face it, and thus present finer, and often cross shots. But in boisterous weather, though their flight be slower, it is more irregular; and therefore the aim is more difficult to take. Some recommend hunting up wind, and heeding the dog at a point, instead of walking up in the usual way. But the birds rarely allow of such a liberty being taken with them, to say nothing of fresh birds being thus disturbed. With a scientific snipe-dog—that is, one which, on your walking down wind, quarters his ground regularly before you, with his nose in the wind, making short turns from right to left, at thirty or forty yards on each side of you—there is no plan like walking with the wind."

There are several varieties of the Snipe—the common, or Scolopax gallinago, weighing about four ounces, length twelve inches. In running, it has a peculiar jerk of the tail; its flight is rapid, but full of gyrations. It is in high season just now; and, provided condition and cuisine be of the first quality, constitutes a plat by no means despicable in a supplemental course. Lord Byron tells us that "pleasure was born a twin." It is pleasant to go forth, on a crisp, clear, morning in Christmas-tide, and, by the margin of some brooklet as yet unshackled by the frost, bag a brace or two of the graceful creatures that glean and glance through the sunshine like spirits of the air. It is pleasant to sit beside some well-spread board on an evening of Christmas-tide, while the yule-log sparkles on the hearth, and taste the savoury spoil curiously displayed upon nut-brown toast ("always serve upon toast"). Try the experiment: haply you shall find that the philosophy of the poet points, not in vain, the moral of SNIPE SHOOTING.

THE THEATRES.

HAYMARKET.

"The Loving Woman" is the attractive title of a new and original drama, in three acts, by Mr. Mark Lemon. Like all his dramas, it shews great stage skill; it is also written with evident care, contains some fine poetry, and much musical blank verse. But it is founded on a crotchet—the author's prejudice, to wit, against the use of marriage settlements. The locale of the drama is Prague, and the heroine a maiden named Ottilia (Mrs. C. Kean), under the guardianship of a miser, Wolfert (Mr. Howe), who insists upon the settlement of her property being made in her favour, previous to her marriage with one Rosen (Mr. C. Kean). This condition, it turns out, is imposed upon the parties from interested motives—Wolfert himself being in love with his ward. Rejected the old curmudgeon vows revenge; for which purpose, he purchases up certain bonds with which Rosen's deceased mother had charged her small estate, the house and goods which Rosen has inherited, and puts them in execution on the bridal morn, taking with him a bergar in his rags, one Hermann (Mr. Wallack), to add insult to injury. The miser is, however, defeated in his immediate purpose, as Rosen is not forsaken by his friends, and his bride avails herself of the opportunity to make demonstration of her love. But, in the course of time, this very love becomes burdensome to the husband, who feels himself dependant on his wife's fortune for their mutual means of subsistence, a state of feeling fomented by the artifices of Wolfert, who causes ballads to be made on Rosen's circumstances, which he induces him to believe are sung in taverns, on his downfall. Suspicions of his wife's fidelity, also, are insinuated; and, at length, matters come to such a pass, that the lady resorts to her legal adviser, and afterwards to Wielfert himself, to relieve her from her difficulty. The laws of Prague permitting divorce, a remedy is found. Both parties are willing to separate, and sign the necessary documents; which done, the marriage settlement is given up to be cancelled. Ottilia destroys it on the spot, and immediately re-offers her hand to her husband, unconditionally. At this moment the beggar, who is also supposed to be a criminal, claims Rosen for his son, and Ottilia's love is confirmed anew by her submitting without a murmur to the shame of such a connexion, for his sake. In the end, Hermann establishes his innocence, and prevents his ruin at the beginning of the week, and it was only effected, or "billed," in your theatrical parlance, three days, and yet such a house was scarcely ever before witnessed, and the reserved places fetched large premiums.

THE NEW DRAMA OF "THE LOVING WOMAN," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.—ACT II., SCENE LAST.

The great fame acquired by the second act of Halévy's "Juive," the last act of "Lucia," and in the third act of "Otello:" in the last selection he sang in Italian, Madame Viardot being the Desdemona. There were also dramatic pieces on the occasion, and the bel ensemble from Auber's "Gustave;" but Duprez and Viardot were the attractions of the evening. It was midnight before they commenced their terrible scene from Rossini's "Otello;" but the audience never moved, and their enthusiasm at the end of the act knew no bounds. Duprez was splendid: it was "Rome in ruins:" but his grandeur and passion were not extinguished by the decay of his physical powers. No language can describe the sensation created by Viardot's acting and singing. After the romance of "Saul," which was vocalised with indescribable pathos, her histrionic genius in Desdemona's struggles with Otello rose to sublimity. This part is one of Viardot's great creations; and it is admitted by those amateurs who recollect her sister Malibran in Desdemona, that Viardot's assumption is more intensely dramatic and overwhelming. Duprez was less successful in Edgardo's final scene—his character by the way was written expressly for him at Naples, by Donizetti—than in the "Juive;" but in Eleazar he forcibly recalled to memory Kean's Shylock, of which I have a vivid, albeit a very juvenile, reminiscence. Duprez's malediction was surprisingly fine. Stage it cannot be his farewell appearance; even with his broken voice, he has sublime moments, and there is no one yet who can fill his place. Mdme. Castellan sang the music of "Rachel" cleverly; and a pupil of Duprez, Mdlle. Fedi from Florence, made a brilliant début as Ninetta. Bouché, the basso, who was for some years at the Grand Opera, returned last Monday week, and appeared as Bertram, in Meyerbeer's "Robert le Diable;" but his voice, through straining, at the end of the third act was hoarse, and another singer had to finish the opera. Gueymard was the Robert, and Mdme. Castellan Alice. Before Mdme. Viardot's departure for Berlin, she is to appear as Valentine, in the "Huguenots," and Roger is to be her Raoul. Mdme. Laborde, who was so popular in London, when the Belgian company was at Drury-Lane Theatre, is to appear as Marguerite, in which her vocalization is quite marvellous. Meyerbeer has composed some new ballet music for the third act. The "Ra lan plan" conplets will be sung by Gueymard.

Auber's new opera, "L'Enfant Prodigue," is in active rehearsal.

Massé is singing at Lyons.

Meyerbeer's "Prophète" will be produced on the 15th of January, at Vienna. Madame Lagrange will be Fides.

The Revue and Gazette Musicale announce that Standigl has quitted the stage, and has purchased an estate, near Brunn, in Moravia, for 80,000 florins (about £3300).

Of the début of Lucchesi, the new tenor, in Rossini's "Matilda di Shabran," / vil report in due course.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—Handel's oratorio, "Joshua," was performed on Monday night, at Exeter Hall, by the London Sacred Harmonic Society. Mr Surman, conductor.——At Wily's second concert of classical chamber music, took place on Monday, at St. Martin's Hall, Long-acre. The executants were Sterndale Bennett, Pasti, Willy, Weiske, Zerbini, Reed, &c.; and the Misses A. and M. Williams were the vocalists.——Mdme. Sontag, with Miss Whitnall, Signori Calsolari and F. Lablache, sang at a concert at the Theatre Royal, Liverpool, last Monday.——On Tuesday night, Miss Dolby gave her third and last grande musicale, at her residence in Rhode-street, assisted by the Misses Birch and Thornton, Messrs. Benson, Segnin, H. Phillips, Lindsay Sloper, Blagrove, Gattie, Dando, and Lucas.——The ninth of the London Wednesday Concerts took place on the 19th, with Ernst and the Distins for solo instrumentalists, and Misses Poole, Eyles, Keli, R. Isaacs, Mrs. A. Newton, Herr Formes, Messrs. Land, Frodsham, and Leffler as vocalists.——At the Marylebone Literary and Scientific Institution, under the direction of Mr. J. Thomas, of the Royal Italian Opera chorus, a series of concerts, uniting the "pleasing with the classical," has been commenced. The performers are Messrs. E. W. Thomas, Watson, Weslake, Guest, and Miss Kate Loder.——Mr. A. Sedgwick, the vocalist, gave his annual concert on Monday night at the Western Literary Institution, assisted by Viotti Collins (violin), G. Collins (violoncello), with a phalanx of concertinaists to Messrs. Lake, Buckley, Chidley, Jones, and Richardson. Barnett, Salaman, and Co. Lyon, M. Cooke, Collins, Wells, J. Wells, Pearce, E. Collins; Misses Genge, Sporle, F. Smith, Stuart, Godden, Nappi, and W. Ball.——The Lucombes, Sims Reeves, and Whitworth sang in the Creation at Bristol on Tuesday evening, and will give a published statement of the Hull manager, broken their engagement with him, for which he threatens legal proceedings.——The oratorio of Handel, the "Messiah," was performed in the Cathedral at Exeter, on Sunday night, conducted by Costa, with Misses Birch and Dolby, Messrs. Lockey and Phillips, as principal vocalists.——Miss Anne Romer, who made such a successful début, some season ago, at the Princess' Theatre, as Adelgisa, has been playing at Liverpool, Amina, in the "Somnambula;" Arline, in the "Bohemian Girl;" Maria, in the "Daughter of the Regiment;" Clara, &c., and has been received with the greatest enthusiasm. Her acting, as well as her vocalisation, is warmly eulogised by the local journals.——At a soirée, organised by Mr. Ella, the director of the Musical Union, the celebrated pianist and composer, Stephen Heller, was heard for the first time in this country, before a select circle of accomplished amateurs. His playing was pronounced by all under his fascination was amply merited. Heller, with Ernst, in some of their joint productions, quite delighted the assemblage.

The pupils of King's College School, Norwich, have, through the High Sheriff of Norfolk, presented the principal, the Rev. Dr. Brewer, of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, with a magnificent organ (built by Mr. Copse at the cost of £170), as a testimonial of respect. The choice of the gift originated in the encouragement given to the study of ecclesiastical music in this school, where between 60 and 70 pupils are candidates for the various prizes founded by Colonel Mason, of Necton Hall. The organ has been erected in the great school-room.

Mr. Samuel Rogers' New Workhouse, in the Commercial Road, from warehouse is now in the course of construction by Messrs. Cate, Miller, and Co, of Liverpool. It is intended for exportation to California. The whole building, which is sixty feet in length by forty feet in width, is constructed on a framework of wood and iron, and entirely sheeted, sides as well as roof, with patent corrugated galvanised iron. The extreme height of the warehouse, by gable measurement, is 26 feet at the gables, and about 20 feet 6 inches at the eaves, and is divided into three stories, the first of which is eleven feet in height, the second nine feet, and the third eight feet. Though every attention has been paid to strength, it is somewhat remarkable that the weight of the whole will little exceed thirty tons.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS FOR THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The English Market was again buoyant on Monday, and a rise of one-half per cent. was registered during the day. Consols closed at 96¾ ⅝ for the January Account, ex div. A further rise of ¼ per cent. marked the opening on Tuesday, but was not maintained. This was followed by a reaction of ¼ per cent. on Wednesday; but on Thursday the tide of favour was in full flow, and having quoted 96¾-⅝ div., declined to 96¾. It would, consequently, appear that the most extensive speculation for the rise has for the present reached its height. Should, before the next settlement, any political event, abroad or at home, tend to disturb confidence, it is fearful to contemplate the frightful reaction that must occur, as well as the ruin of the speculators without the market. And their agents will be. There is no doubt that the present high quotation has not been equalled in extent for several years. Exchequer Bills again quote an advance, and Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents have been largely dealt in. India Bonds are about ¼. At the close of the week the market was flat, at the following prices:—Bank Stock, 203¾; Reduced, 96¼; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annu., 97⅛; Long Annu., to expire Jan. 1885, 8 5-16; Ditto, 30 years, Jan. 10, 1856, 8⅛; India Bonds, £1000, 99 p; Ditto, under £1,000, 99p; Consols for Account, 96⅞; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 57 p; £500, June, 57 p; Small, June, 57 p.

The Foreign Market was unusually animated on Monday, Spanish Five per Cents advancing 1 per cent., Mexican to 30¼. These prices, although not fully maintained, left a comparatively strong market on Tuesday; but as the day advanced business slackened, and prices declined. Mexican, on Wednesday, fell from ¾ per money for account to Spanish Five per Cents to 19. Since that alteration has since occurred, the last prices of the week being:—For Brazilian Bonds, 88¾; Ditto, Small, 87; Mexican, Five per Cent., 30¼, Account, 30¾; Peruvian Bonds, Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Annu., 101; Spanish, 5 per Cent., 1840, Account, 19; Do., Passive, 4; 3 per Cent., Account, 38¾; Venezuela Bonds, Two-and-a-Quarter per Cent., 27½; Belgium, Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 87⅛; Dutch, Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 61; Ditto, New Four per Cent., 89¾.

Shares are again depressed. The dividend on the London and North-Western will, it is understood, not exceed five per cent., which has tended to revive the public alarm, from the supposition that Sir Robert Peel has the paring power at that line. The accompanying list will best display the state of the market: Aberdeen, 14¼; Do., Preference, 1 dis.; Birmingham and Oxford Junction, calls all paid, or with a premium, 28¾; Buckinghamshire, 16¼; Caledonian, 11¼; Do., New, £10 Pref., 8¾; Chester and Holyhead, 9¾; Do., Pref., 10; East Anglian, £3 10s., Pref., 1¼; Eastern Counties, 6¼; Do., New, Guar. 6 per Cent., 1¼; Do., Extens., 5 per Cent. No. 1, ¾ pm; East Lancasn., 11¼; East Lincolnsh., 28, Great Northern, 5 per Cent. Pref., 74; G. W. Western (Ireland), 36¾; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 11¾; Ditto, No. New, £17, 7; Lancashire and Yorkshire, Fifths, 8¾; Ditto, Thirds, 6¾; Ditto (West Riding Union), 3¾; Ditto (Preston and Wyre), 30; Lancaster and Bradford, 10½, London and Blackwall, 3¾; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 78¾; London and North-Western, 111; Ditto, New Quarters, 12½; Ditto, £10 (M. and B.) C., 8¾; London and South-Western, 80; Ditto, New, Scrip, 1845, Pref. 7 per Cent., 95¾; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, New, £10 Pref., 8¾; Midland, 66¾; Ditto, ditto, £50 Shares, 8; Ditto, Birmingham and Derby, 21; Ditto, Consol. Bristol and Birmingham, 6 per Cent., 131¾; North British, Quarters, 2¾; Ditto, Thirds, 3¾; North Staffordshire, 7¾; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 1⅝; Royston and Hitchin, 4¾; West Valley, Six per [illegible]; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, G.N.E. Preference, 3⅝; [illegible], Boulogne and Amiens, 7¾; Namur and Liege, 6¾; Northern of France, [illegible]; Rouen and Havre, 9¾.——Brazilian Imperial, 5.——John Dal Roy (Mine), 10¾

SATURDAY MORNING.—The Consol Market was flat yesterday, 96¾ ⅝ being the quotation for the next Account, after declining from 96¾. New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents declined to 97⅛. Long Annuities sold at 8 5-16. In the Foreign house, Mexican was dull, at a decline to 28¾. Shares continued depressed.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE, Friday).—The quantity of English wheat received up to our market this week, constwise, has not exceeded 4600 quarters. By land carriage and samples, very little more is known. To-day, the stands were very sparingly supplied; yet the demand for all kinds of wheat of home produce was exceedingly inactive, at Monday's quotations. From abroad only 600 quarters of wheat have come in. The finest parcels sold steadily, at full prices. In the middling and inferior kinds very few transactions took place. [illegible] scarcely any English barley was on offer; and the supply of foreign was [illegible]. Malting samples were quite as dear. Grinding and distilling sort ruled dull. The supply of which was small—moved off heavily, at the late decline. The market was very sparingly supplied with all kinds of oats, most particularly Irish, which ruled steadily, at [illegible] was steady. In all other articles, next to nothing doing.

ARRIVALS.—English wheat, 1980; barley, 570; malt, 1793; oats, 750; flour, [illegible]. Foreign, wheat, 620 [illegible] oats, 530 quarters.

ENGLISH.—Wheat, [illegible] to 44s per quarter; ditto, white, 42s to 48s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 37 [illegible] ditto, white, 42s to 44s; grinding barley, 22s to 23s; distilling [illegible] malting ditto, 28s to 30s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 50s to 56s; ditto, white, 48s to 54s; Kingston and Ware, 56s to 58s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 15s to 16s; potato ditto, 18s to 19s; Youghal and Cork, black, 15s to 15s 6d; ditto, white, 16s to 16s 6d; Sligo, ditto, 16s to 16s 6d; Limerick, 15s 6d to 16s; Londonderry, 17s to 18s; ditto, foreign, £5 0s to £7 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, £4 4s to £4 4s per ton; clover seed, fine, 36s to 46s; ditto, coarse, 24s to 32s; trefoil, 22s to —s; ribgrass, 32s to —s; canary, 52s to —s. Foreign, rod, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s. Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 6½d to 7½d per 4lb loaf of household ditto, 6d to 6½d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 38s 9d; barley, 25s 9d; oats, 16s 6d; rye, 22s 6d; beans, 28s 1d; peas, 28s 1d.

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 39s 11d; barley, 27s 11d; oats, 16s 7d; rye, 23s 5d; beans, 28s 7d; peas, 30s 3d.

THAMES.—Public sales of 16,000 packages took place on Thursday. Only about 2200 sold, at [illegible] quotations. Privately, little business is reported.

SUGAR.—Most kinds of West India sugar have sold somewhat freely this week, at an advance of 6d per cwt. Mauritius and Bengal have also sold rather higher. Refined goods have been firm—brown lumps at 56s, and fair grocery 56s 6d to 57s 6d per cwt. English crushed, first, at 62s 6d to 63s 6d per cwt.

COFFEE.—A speculative demand for Ceylon has fallen off, and prices have declined 6d to 1s per cwt. In all other kinds of coffee only a limited business is doing.

RICE.—Good sorts have a ready sale at the highest, and the low to go cold white. In other kinds very few transactions have taken place.

PROVISIONS.—Although the demand for Irish butter has fallen off, prices are fairly supported. Fine Friss and and Kiel is selling at 80s to 84s, and other qualities 44s to 88s per cwt. In bits a decline of 2s to 4s per cwt has been submitted to. Bacon is quoted as follows:—Irish Carlow, firsts, landed, 74s to 77s; Cork 69s to 71s. Waterford, 69s to 67s; and Limerick, 64s to 66s per cwt. The supply of English butter is falling off, and the trade is very steady, and quite as dear. In other kinds no change to report. Fine weeky Dorset, 94s to 96s; middling and inferior, 60s to 80s; fine Devon, 90s to 94s per cwt, fresh, 9s to 12s per dozen lbs. Irish bacon is very dull, and quiet. Prime small Waterford, landed, is 46s to 48s; fine, 46s to 48s per cwt. All other kinds of provisions are very dull.

TALLOW.—The demand for most kinds is steady, at 38s 6d to 39s for P Y C on the spot. For forward delivery, contracts have been made at 38s 6d per cwt. Town tallow, 39s 6d per cwt, last week; rough fat, 2s 3d per 8 lbs.

OILS.—Sperm oil has advanced to £85 per ton Otherwise, the market is steady Spirits.—Rum is dull to 1s per gallon lower. Brandy is without a slight improvement in prices. No change in Geneva or corn spirits.

Hay and Straw.—Meadow hay, £2 6s to £3 10s; clover ditto, £3 0s to £4 8s; and straw, £1 1s to £1 8s per load.

Coals (Friday).—Old Tanfield, 14s 6d; Hetton's, 17s South Durham, 17s 3d per ton.

Wool (Friday).—We have no change to notice in the value of this article. Fine hogs of the present and last year's growth are scarce and quite as dear. In all other kinds only a moderate demand for any description is to be noted.

NEW MILK and EARLY CHICKENS.—Supplies of new Welsh of Kent Cattle, £6 5s to £6 15s; Devon, £6 5s to £6 15s; Scots, £12 0s to £13 0s; Yearling Calves, £3 0s to £4 10s; Yearling Sheep, £2 8s to £3 17s; Old hogs, £— 0s to £4 0s.

Smithfield (Friday).—A large supply of beasts, a good condition, was exhibited in Smithfield to-day. As the attendance of both buyers and country sellers was small the beef trade ruled heavy, at a decline in the prices of Monday of 2d per 8 lbs at which a clearance was effected. The primest Scots sold at 3s 10d per 8 lbs. The sheep trade ruled very dull in sale, at most nominal currencies [illegible] general quality of the sheep was prime, although there was a pretty good show. Prime was in request with sellers, but the demand for which was in a very sluggish state, on somewhat lower terms. In pigs next to nothing doing. Calves, in moderate supply, from 3s 6d to 4s 2d per 8 lbs. Lambs, including their small calf.

PORK.—Dublin, Cork, and Limerick.—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; second quality ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime large oxen, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; prime Scots, &c., 4s 2d to 4s 4d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; second quality ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; prime Southdown ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; large coarse calves, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; prime small ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; large hogs, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; neat small porkers, 3s 10d to 4s 0d. Suckling calves, 18s to 22s. Total supplies of the week:—Beasts, 178 to 228. Total supplies, Beasts, 3281; cows, 32; sheep, 30291; calves, 310; pigs, 296. Foreign supplies: Beasts 98; sheep, 695.

Vegetable and Fruit.—These markets were very heavily supplied with each kind of fruit; and the trade ruled very heavy, at the following rates:—

POTATOES.—Regents, beef, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; middling ditto, 2s 10d to 3s 0d; prime large ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; Scotch ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 10d; Lincoln pork, 2s 8d to 3s 6d; common ditto, 2s 8d to 3s 10d; middling ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 4d; prime ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 10d; yams, 3s 0d to 3s 4d; small pork, 3s 6d to 4s 2d.

ROBT HEBERT

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, DEC. 18.

WHITEHALL, DEC. 7.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed John Merrit Shaw, of Portsmouth, in the county of Southampton, Gentleman, to be a Master Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

DEC. 14.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Colonel John Kincaid, Esq., to be an Inspector of Factories, in the room of James Stuart Esq., deceased.

WHITEHALL, DEC. 21.

1st Regiment of Dragoons Cornet J Ainslie to be Lieutenant, vice Sir C W C Burton, Bart. who retires upon half-pay 7th Foot Ensign Wm Gossip Carter to be Lieutenant, vice Burch. 17th Foot Ensign J Barthorp to be Lieut, vice Pollard. 19th Ens ign H H Dawson to be Lieut, vice Braddell, H T Dawson, Ensign, vice Dawson, who resigns. 24th Foot Lieut Wm Hall to be Lieut Col [illegible] Capt O H Elliot to be Major, vice Brown, Lieut J B Thelwall to be Capt, vice [illegible] Ensign G Waddelow to be Lieut, vice Thelwall. Ensign J C Cruickshank to be Ensign, vice W H [illegible] 60th Foot Lieut Edward D Pennefather to be Lieut, vice Wilson 66th Second Lieut R Brooke First Lieut, vice Payne ADMIRALTY, DEC. 20.

The following promotions have taken place, consequent on the death of Rear-Admiral of the White, Sir J. Gore, K.C.B.:—

Rear-Admiral of the Blue, Stanley Hall Dixon, to be Rear-Admiral of the White.

Commander Alexander Milne, to be Rear-Admiral of the Blue.

COMMISSION SIGNED BY THE LORD-LIEUTENANT.

DUBLIN, DEC. 21.—Denbigh Royal Hills Regiment of Militia—Ist Foot [illegible] Earl, to be First Lieut. vice Capper.

BANKRUPTS

C W DAVIS, Brownlow-street, Holborn, Bookseller. J H GLEGG, Heyton, Lancashire, cotton-spinner. R VENNING, Totnes, Devonshire, cyder-merchant

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS

J FINDLAY, Cambridge, grocer. P BRIHAN, Inverkeithing, Stirling, farmer. H GAIR, Tain, Ross-shire, farmer. A SMITH, Dumbreckhead, Strathblane, Stirl [illegible] J HUGHES, Nowton Stewart, draper. A BURNES, Montrose, writ

BIRTHS

At [illegible] Mrs R H [illegible] Allen, of Linton Chapel, Islington, of a daughter.

At [illegible] the wife of [illegible] Lancaster, Esq., of a son.——In Portland-place, the wife of the Rev Charles I. Royds, of a

MARRIAGES.

At Brocklehill, in the county of Northumberland, John Edmonstone Muncaton, Esq., of the 2nd Madras [illegible] cavalry, to Julia, second daughter of Colonel Thornton, C.B. formerly of her Majesty's 46th Regiment.——At the Church of St Luke, Chelsea, the Rev Thomas Raymond Barker, rector of Halstead, Essex, to Caroline Augusta, third daughter of the late Rear-Admiral [illegible]——Dec 13th, at St Peter's Church, Dublin, Peter Vickers, Esq, youngest son of the late Admiral [illegible] to Alicia Anne, youngest daughter of the late Hon Mosert Lowson, of the Thorn, Cant - rland, and granddaughter of the Right Hon. Earl of Milltown.

DEATHS.

On the 11th inst. at Chatham, in the 3rd year of his age, Edward John Christmas, relict of the Rev. John Dodgin, D.D, vicar of Bonham Valence, Berks, sister to the late Nathaniel Wells, Esq., late of Bombay Civil Service, and junior member of the Madras Civil Service; also to the late Samuel Wells, of Henbury Hill House, Esq., forty years a highly respectable magistrate for the county of Gloucester.——At Ishtiff in the Bombay Presidency, Harriette, wife of Lieut Burns, of the Bombay Army, eldest daughter of R Pa ton, Esq, Commander of H M S Archer.——At the Rhos, Ruthin, Denbighshire, Ann widow of Lieut-Col Cox, of the 8th Bengal Cavalry, and formerly Captain of the Governor General's Body Guard.——At Hastings, the Rev Edith Maxwell, the only child and heiress of the Rev L J Lowden.——At the Navy House Gosport, Mary Ann, wife of the Rev [illegible] Rector of Great Gransford Manor, late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and formerly Curate in the Royal Chapel [illegible] Portsea.——At 2 Elm-place Ashton-under-Lyne, the Rev Edward Greenwood Parker M.A. Vicar and Lecturer of Ashton, [illegible] ——Dec 18th, at John-street, London-wall, Hackney, the wife of Mr W. H. Bishop, in her 30th year.——On the 19th inst, Mr John Lascelles, of Great Guildford-street, Southwark, in the 86th year of his age.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

INTERESTING LITERARY GIFTS AS PRESENT.
Now ready, 2 vols. with Illustrations, 2s. bound
LIVES of the PRINCESSES of ENGLAND,
By Mrs EVERETT GREEN.
Editor of the "Letters of Royal and Illustrious Ladies."
"A valuable addition to the historical library, and forms a most handsome for the works of Miss Strickland, to which, indeed, it is an indispensable, though subsidiary. The author has executed her task with great skill and fidelity. There is a graceful combination of sound historical erudition, with an air of romance and adventure that is highly pleasing."—Britannia.
Also, just ready,
THE LIFE OF TASSO.
By the Rev. R. MILMAN. 2 vols. post 8vo.
Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

COUNTESS (The), and other Tales. By Mrs. NORTON, Author of "The Wife and Woman's Reward." With 10 Illustrations
WINTER'S WREATH (The), a Literary Album. With 10 Illustrations.
LOVER'S LEAF (The), and other Tales. By RITCHIE HITCHIE, Mrs. NORTON, Mrs. S. C. HALL, &c. Two Illustrations.
TEGG and Co., Cheapside; and all Booksellers

CHEAP MUSIC.—New Music, bound in volume form, 8½ at marks, price selling at 8s. Lindsay, Lorell, Rosalind, and all the first [illegible] of all new pieces as issue that defy competition. Price of good cheap music kept, all warranted correct. Catalogues, 19 pages, sent on WALKER'S, 17, Soho-square, the old cheap shop, [illegible] 30 years. New Catalogue by post on receipt of two [illegible]

ANCIENT COINS and MEDALS.—Mr. PETER WILLIAM SEAN, 36, opposite the British Museum, has Novelties on sale at very moderate prices. Fine Greek, and 1st and 2nd brass Roman Coins, from 6d each. Antique Bronzes, Rings, and Etruscan Vases on sale. Assignals of the French Revolution from the two issues. A fine Silver Medal of Napoleon, the 1st Consul, 1803. Specimens, in each Coins, Antiquities, &c. purchased to any amount for cash, and a handsome price given when thousand and rarity are offered. Please copy the name. The above are adapted for Christmas Presents

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWINGROOM, HALL, and DINING-ROOM.—Mr. TENNANT, 149, Strand, near Somerset House, has just received a new and elegant assortment of Statuary, Figures, Vases, Alabaster, Bronzes, and Ormolu Goods. Inlaid Tables, Paper-weights, &c., in Italian Alabaster, Marble, Bronze, &c.

PIANOFORTES.—TOLKIEN'S splendid-toned Pianofos, with 6g octaves. O. G. Pall, Mozatto Plate, only 25 guineas. Parties requiring Instruments for a little time, do well to purchase at TOLKIEN'S 6g established house, 376, and 38, Kings Willow-street. Every description of the Instruments sent post free. Old instruments taken in exchange

PIANOFORTES for SALE, HIRE, and EXPORTATION.—The Cheapest House in London for Pianofortes of unrivalled excellence, with all the recent improvements, is at WALTER'S old established Manufactory, No. 29, Upper Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square. Merchants, Dealers, and others desirous of a genuine instrument, are invited to inspect the extensive stock, as every instrument is warranted, and exchanged if not approved.

THE STAUNTON CHESSMEN and BOARDS.—W. LEUCHARS begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, that he has now completed a very elegant BOARD for the Chess men of the above name, viz. Staunton, which is ornamented in a very corresponding in design, and material with the unique box belonging to them. This box has already gained universal admiration.—the most ensemble forming the most ornamental suite of the kind extant. Forty-square Boards, Desks, and other Games of a fashionable entertainment

SCENE FROM THE CHRISTMAS PANTOMIME OF "MOON QUEEN AND KING NIGHT," AT THE SURREY THEATRE.—ARRIVAL OF THE BARON.

THE CHRISTMAS PANTOMIMES.

We are enabled, by the activity of our Artists, to present two anticipatory scenes from two of the Pantomimes to be produced for the gratification of her Majesty's liege subjects on Wednesday next.

First is Alfred Crowquill's "Moon Queen and King Night; or, Harlequin Twilight," at the Surrey Theatre, where of late years some very good harlequinades have been produced.

The "Moon Queen" opens with a Prologue, spoken by Burlesque and Pantaloon; a scuffle ensues, and the latter shouts his triumph thus:—

> No fustian now—no mighty paradoxes
> Shall puzzle pit, or gallery, or boxes,
> But good, old, joyous English Pantomime;
> And let us hope that it will last our time,
> Bringing together in a circle here
> All that was scatter'd by the bygone year.
> Not wiser than our fathers, let us fairly laugh;
> "Care," says the song, "is but a silly calf!"
> I wave my wand—(comes boot-jack!) let it not be in vain:
> Beneath my spell be children all again!

The personages in the opening are—Immortals: King Night, Mr. J. W. Collier; the Moon Queen, Miss E. Bromley; Silver Ray, Miss Laporte; Silver Ripple, Miss Daly; Light the Lake, Miss Bloomfield; and other little Rays that the Moon can raise at any time; an Electric Light, Mons. J. Lupino. The "mortals most immortally bothered" are: Baron Blazenoff (afterwards Pantaloon), Mr. Naylor; Kurleywiggins (the Baron's barber), Mr. Rogers; vassals, retainers, slaves, &c. Myrra (a miller's daughter, afterwards Columbine), Mdlle. Luiza; Frio (the lover, afterwards Harlequin), Mons. Lupino; Grandumkyn (the miller, afterwards Clown), Mr. Dewhurst; Huskyprom (his man), Mr. Rivers.

The opening scene is the cavern of Night. A lurid hue is thrown upon the grotesque figures hewn out of the rocks. In the centre of the stage is a gigantic chamber candlestick, with an extinguisher, which rises slowly and discovers King Night upon his throne—sitting cross-legged upon the sconce. His helmet is an extinguisher, encircled by a bright and glittering diadem. His sceptre is a latch-key. He descends from his seat with a solemn air, and waves his latch-key sceptre. His dark troops rise through the candlestick, and form into line. A comic review here takes place, after which King Night addresses his troops. After a chorus, the troops return to the candlestick légèrement, King Night seats himself upon his own sconce, the extinguisher descends and covers him. The candlestick floats away, to slow music. A rise and sink discovers a wild, romantic pass. Towering, snow-capped mountains—moonlight, but no moon seen—music. "The young May-moon." The scene moves slowly, until it becomes the starlit hemisphere. In the centre a gigantic moon; in the midst, the Queen Moon seated on a jewelled throne—her Court enters—they have silver bows and arrows. The Queen comes forward and sings. After a dance, with bows and arrows, the Queen addresses her Court, and then they disappear, dancing.

Next is the Hall of Baron Blazenoff; then the Miller's House, where the miller, his daughter, and her lover, have a chase with the antagonistic Baron, who arrives in a Hansom's cab.

The change is to a fairy bower and lake. The lovers are together in a car; the Fairy Court of the Queen are floating about in nautilus shells, with wreaths attached to the car. The Baron and his followers are seen through a grating in the bower. A bevy of nymphs rush from the bowers. A dance ensues. As the lovers are being borne off in triumph, King Night rises from the Lake and severs the wreaths attached to the car; darkness immediately hides the scene. The Baron rushes from his confinement. All is closed in by a very savage rocky landscape. Enter Silver Ripple, Silver Ray, and Light the Lake; the scene becomes much lighter; they look as if followed. King Night rushes on; the scene becomes dark again, and, after a struggle, the lovers are dragged in by Night's attendants, and the maid is handed over to Blazenoff.

The scene changes to the Celestial Hemisphere, with Queen Moon, and her Nymphs; and the transformations take place. The comic business then begins; and, judging from the programme before us, the pantomime will be replete with fun.

ASTLEY'S.

The Pantomime at this theatre is by Mr. Nelson Lee; it is entitled "Yankee Doodle on his Pretty Little Pony, or, Harlequin how many Horses has your Father got in his Stable?" The following is a Sketch of the opening incidents:—

Scene 1 commences with fairy hall of Plenty. The Fairy Fame requires the presence of Plenty, and calls to his aid Mirth and Sport (two sprites), who discover her retreat. It being the fairy Queen Britannia's intention to hold a Court, they suddenly change the scene, when all the fays are assembled to do homage to their Queen with their fairy fetes and emblematic cars, &c. Hope, too, joins them; and Britannia arriving, and being at a loss for a hero for her Christmas sports, she is informed that Yankee Doodle would entrap Miss Innah from Young England, who is discovered in a desponding state by one of the fairies; and being brought before Britannia, she bids him be of good cheer, and seek out Old Sambo. He thanks her, and departs.

Scene 2.—Old Sambo's House at Bow.—Young England obtains an interview with Dinah, but is interrupted by Old Sambo, who thrusts his daughter in the house, and England from the door. Young England throws himself down in despair, Hope appears, and presents him with a silver pipe to aid him; he departs delighted. Yankee Doodle arrives upon his little pony with a letter of introduction from the President to Old Sambo. Sam Slick follows, who is ordered by Yankee Doodle to dispose of the pony, and he takes him away for that purpose. Yankee Doodle and Sambo meet under unfortunate circumstances: Sambo apologises, and introduces him to Miss Lucy Long (his other daughter) as his intended son-in-law "The marriage shall take place this very day."

Scene 3.—Tattersall's: Horse Sale, &c. going on. Yankee Doodle and Sam Slick arrive to sell the pony, and get sold in buying a horse.

Scene 4. Near Hyde-park Corner.—The purchase proves still more unsatisfactory.

Scene 5. Sambo's House, with preparations for the wedding.—Yankee Doodle's horse having bolted, gallops in and throws him; the horse is disposed of by Sam Slick. Miss Dinah is most reluctant to become the bride of Yankee Doodle. All are ready for the dance, but the village piper falls dead drunk. What's to be done? Fortunately, one is found near at hand, and is brought in. It is Young England, who has disguised himself; and, playing upon his magic pipe, all begin dancing involuntarily. During this he manages to discover himself to Dinah: other sports are determined upon, among which is blindman's-buff. Yankee Doodle is blindfolded; and, as the game proceeds, Young England and Dinah escape together. Yankee Doodle catches Miss Lucy Long, thinking it Dinah. Finding his mistake, a search is made for her; when Dinah and Young England return from the church married. Yankee Doodle, Sambo, and Lucy Long's rage knows no bounds—the bride and bridegroom are seized. At this moment the entire scene changes: Britannia appears and settles the dispute for the present, by changing Yankee Doodle to Clown, England to Harlequin, Old Sambo to Pantaloon, and Miss Dinah to Columbine. Then follows the harlequinade, with bits at past and passing events, &c.

There appears to be a good deal of drollery in this pantomime—equine and otherwise.

SCENE FROM THE CHRISTMAS PANTOMIME OF "YANKEE DOODLE ON HIS LITTLE PONY," AT ASTLEY'S.—APPEARANCE OF BRITANNIA.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

COTHERSTONE, SOMERSETSHIRE.

Few of our counties have been so inadequately chronicled as that of Somerset, although it may be considered to possess abundant materials, especially such as refer to a remote period, of interest both to the historian and the archæologist. But it is to be hoped this desideratum is in the way of being supplied by the results which may be anticipated from the exertions of a society lately embodied in Taunton, for the furtherance of archæological inquiry; and that it may not be long ere remains so ancient and curious as those of Cotherstone shall be illustrated by associations more stirring than a mere list of the names of those who have possessed its domains, and yet of a nature more definite than the questionable pictures which romance has founded upon its tradition. According to the latter, Cotherstone claims an origin long prior to the Conquest, when a Saxon King and Queen are said to have been its founders, and to have secluded themselves within its walls, in fulfilment of a vow undertaken at the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem. This ancient edifice, it may be observed, presents in its arrangement the aspect of a religious house much more than that of such a stronghold as might be supposed to have appertained to Adam de Stawell, who held it in the time of the Conqueror. The old house is situated on the southern slope of the Quantock Hills, about seven miles north-west from Taunton. It is used as a farm-house; and the various ancient outbuildings have become stables, cow-houses, sties, cider-mill, &c. Among these, evidences of masonry probably much earlier than the Conquest are visible.

The approach to the house is by a handsome gate of the time of James I., flanked by turrets and a curtain wall. In the front of the house itself the architectural features are late, having been constructed long after the date of the substantial walls on which they are encrusted. A coat of arms, nearly obliterated, gives a baronial character to the portal, a late depressed arch; but immediately within this appears a Norman arch, which associates well with the massiveness of the interior.

The church is close at the back of the house, and contains some features of high antiquity, especially a cylindrical pillar, of Saxon character, which supports the arches that divide the south aisle from the nave. There are two tombs of the Stawells: on one of them is the effigy of a knight in armour and his lady by his side. The tomb is panelled, with quatrefoils, in which are shields of arms, and niches. The other tomb is greatly decayed. There are, likewise, some good bench ends in carved oak, and a curious painted font.

At a little distance from the church is a well which springs under a Gothic roof, and over which a thorn has grown: this, when in blossom, contrasts beautifully with the glassy coolness within, the curled ferns rising among the moss-green stones, and the various other plants which spring within the grey walls of the fountain, and appear reproduced in its crystal waters.

Cotherstone has descended through a continued line of the Stawell family from the time of the Conqueror to the present century.

The opening of the new Coal Exchange for the transaction of public business having caused the building which was temporarily used for the purpose during the erection of the new edifice, and which was permitted, with the sanction of the Government authorities, to be built at the western end of the quay or terrace in front of the Custom-house, near London-street, to be no longer of any further public service, it is in course of being demolished, and the materials of which it was composed disposed of.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, December 22, 1849.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 405.—VOL. XV] CHRISTMAS, 1849. [NUMBER AND SUPPLEMENT, 1s.

CHRISTMAS IN TOWN AND COUNTRY.

BY THOMAS MILLER.

HUNDREDS of silver toned bells of London ring loud, deep, and clear, from tower and spire to welcome in Christmas. The far-stretching suburbs, like glad children, take up and fling back the sound over hill and valley, marsh and meadow, while steeple calls to steeple across the winding arms of the mast-crowded river, proclaiming to the heathen voyager who has brought his treasures to our coast, and who is ignorant of our religion, the approach of some great Christian festival. Through the long night of departed centuries has that old Saxon sound pealed over our ancient City—from soon after the period when Augustin and his brother monks landed in England, with the banner borne before them, on which was emblazoned the figure of the dying Redeemer, while they moved gravely along, chanting the Holy Litany. We have often paused, with closed eyes, in some star-lighted lane in the suburbs, and listened to the sound of those sweet Christmas-bells, until the imagination was borne far away to the fields of Bethlehem (flooded with heavenly light), and we fancied we again heard those angel-voices which startled the shepherds as they watched their flocks by night, while proclaiming high overhead, "Peace on earth, and goodwill towards men." We seemed again to catch glimpses of

> The star-led wizards hastening with odours sweet, as Milton beheld them with the far-seeing eye of poetry, coming

> From far upon the Eastern road, until they reached the lowly roof which sheltered the God-born child and his meek mother, when they offered up "gold, frankincense, and myrrh." Such images floated before our mental vision, as the great Rubens seized upon and transferred to his glowing canvas, and such as we have pictured in our present pages from the work of the immortal artist, with all its rich masses of flooding light and deepening shade and wanting only the matchless colouring to bring the original before the eyes of our readers. Such a splendid Illustration as we have here given needs neither the garniture of holly, ivy, nor mistletoe to render it a fitting present for the old festival of Christmas: the beauty of the Virgin Mother, the simple majesty of the Holy Child, and the pious adoration of the kneeling sage, bear the stamp of the hand of the mighty master who was alone competent to grapple with so great a subject.

MISTLETOE.

Glancing for a moment at the evergreens which are used in our Christmas decorations, we see no cause for searching in the ancient heathen rites of other countries for their origin. That the Mistletoe was held sacred by the ancient Druids, we have the authority of the classic Roman historian to prove, and which no one has ever doubted. The altars of Thor and Woden were not overthrown in a day: those who worshipped the true God were at first compelled to kneel before these heathen shrines. Redwald, the King of East Anglia, had two altars in his temple, one to Woden and the other to the Almighty; for although his heart yearned towards the true God, he was afraid of the vengeance of the imaginary idol he had so long bowed before. Amid pagan altars and hideous images, the early Christians knelt: and the beautiful Bertha (through whose meek persuasion Ethelbert was converted to the true faith) first worshipped beneath the roof of one of these old heathen temples in which the mistletoe was hung; and where the grim images of Thor and Woden frowned from the walls, there did she kneel and offer up her prayers to heaven. The far-seeing Pope Gregory attempted not to abolish these heathen rites altogether, but rightly argued that if their pagan temples were held sacred while set apart for the worship of rude shapeless images, how much more would such spots be revered when the light of the true Gospel broke through the heathen darkness. By many of the early Christians would the mistletoe be held in reverence; for, although it had hung above the heads of their idols, it was not the work of the image-maker, but a production of nature, and a native o. their own wild forests; it twined around the grey oaks under which the Roman legions had marched, and was, perhaps, the only remnant they at last retained of their old idolatry—the only link that remained between Christianity and Heathenism.

THE CHRISTMAS PUDDING.—DRAWN BY KENNY MEADOWS.—(SEE PAGE 419.)

HOLLY.

The very beauty of the green-leaved and red-berried Holly would recommend it as a fitting ornament for the great Christmas Festival. What the oak is to the summer wood, the pride and ornament of the grove, such is the holly in the land of trees, amid the nakedness of winter. When the mountain ash has shed its rich garniture of green and crimson on the funeral pyre of autumn (that pile kindled with all the gaudy hues of the decaying flowers and bowers of summer), the holly stands unchanged amid the death and desolation of the landscape, and seems sole King of the outstretched forest. While far and wide the woods are covered with snow, looking as if Winter lay asleep beneath the leafless trees in such a spot we have seen the holly crowning some eminence (the pillow or head of the sleeper), as if wreathing his grey old locks wit.. a gar and of evergreen and flaming rubies.

IVY.

The ancient emblem of friendship, seems sacred to time and old ruins. It grows about our churches, and droops above the weather-stained windows, where it hangs waving between us and the outer light, as if to force itself upon our notice. It climbs around our country-houses, and grows above the churchyard graves, as if it claimed kindred with the living and the dead. Whether it winds its way to the topmost boughs of a tree, the battlemented tower of some sacred edifice, or around the twisted chimneys of the manor-house, it tells a tale of bygone years, and of the many old Christmases which have passed away since it first shot up its wiry stem, and threw out its few green leaves below, unnoticed by human eye. We cannot gaze on it without thinking of the many Christmas feasts it has decorated; how year after year eager hands gathered its dark-waving trails; how eyes once bright looked upon it, and fond hearts heaved and fluttered as they bore home the winter garland—eyes now dark, and hearts for ever cold, which once beamed and beat in the midst of old festivities, but will never more brighten nor bound to the merry ringing of the Christmas bells. These reflections make Christmas a solemn time; and when we think of the awful year now fast fading away, a deep shadow throws itself over our pages—the Shadow of the Valley of Death.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

To brighter scenes will we now turn—to the life and happiness which Merry Old Christmas brings to millions of human hearts, while he throws a sunshine, brighter than that of summer, over thousands of English hearths. Pleasant memories are brought to the mind by the interchange of presents at this hospitable season. London pours into the country its treasures of wines, spirits, foreign fruit, and fish; while from many an ancient hamlet and old thatched grange are sent back the produce of field and farm. Fowls from the inland mere and rushy pools; game from many a secluded woodland, dell, and wild moor, are offered up on the great altar of Christmas, until the sacrifice of Friendship throws its delightful odour throughout the whole length and breadth of the land. The swift-winged railway-carriages groan beneath the heavy loads of good things which they are doomed to drag to and fro; while the streets of busy London are filled with carriers' carts; and Parcel-Delivery-men flit hither and thither, the attendants of Plenty, clothed in decent livery, and occupying the place of those rude nymphs whom ancient fables portrayed as attendants upon the ever-bountiful goddess.

OLD CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS.

Although the Great Fire of London destroyed thousands of houses whose roofs were blackened by the smoke of many a huge yule-clog, a few of the old edifices still remain which have looked down on the merry Christmases of other days, when

> Pomp and feast, and revelry,
> With masque and antique pageantry, broke the silence which now reigns around their ancient walls. Nor is the yule-clog yet extinct; for there are still many old-fashioned families in England, who would never fancy that it was Christmas, unless the huge tree-root blazed on the hearth, and shot its tongue of flame high

> Up the huge chimney gaping wide.

In the country, long before it is light, you hear the voices of children going from house to house on Christmas-Day morning, and repeating the simple old couplet—

> I wish you a merry Christmas
> And a happy new year;
> A pocket full of money,
> And a cellar full of beer!

when, perhaps, instead of receiving the Christmas-box, for which they thus earnestly plead, a voice is heard from within the house (by the door of which they stand) exclaiming "The same to you, my lad!" A poor recompense for rising so early, and braving the wintry cold before day-dawn. In town and country we have still the Waits playing in the streets, and breaking the deep midnight silence with much sweeter music than that of the rude pipe and tabor which disturbed the sound slumber of our simple forefathers. Though the boar's head and the huge wassail-bowl have vanished from our feasts, and there are fewer ceremonies and outward shows to usher in Merry Old Christmas than formerly, there is nothing to regret in the decay of many of those barbaric customs which gave pleasure to our laughter-loving ancestors. Such masques and mummings as were the delight of an old English Baron's retainers, and were well adapted for the rude revelry of the huge baronial hall, are no more suited to our modern tastes, than the rush-strown floors and chimneyless apartments would be to the wants of an English lady in the present day.

There is no more to deplore in the absence of Friar Tuck, Maid Marian, Robin Hood, with all his merry men, the huge dragon, and the hobby-horses, than there is in the extinction of the old moralities, whose places are now supplied by the dramas of Shakspeare, and others which have appeared since he first wrote. Christmas has outlived all antique mummery, and is all the better for having shaken off his ancient and faded trappings. His great spirit still survives, unchanged by time; and, with few exceptions, he is received with the same hospitality as he was of old. His mighty soul still lives, and for one day in the year he throws the light of his bluff, hearty, old English countenance over the meagre board of the hungry workhouse, and the gloomy walls of the debtor's prison. True, there are no longer the gates of the monastery, abbey, or castle thrown open, as of old, for the relief of "loop'd and window'd raggedness" on Christmas-Day, when none were permitted, at that holy time, to go away hungry, thirsty, nor empty-handed. Alas! the houseless beggar is too often left to stand shivering in the all but empty streets—

> Homeless, beside a thousand hearths.

CHRISTMAS CHARITIES.

But open-handed Charity, thank God! still walks abroad at this inclement season of the year; and in no country in the world does she scatter her gifts more profusely than in England—for, surrounded as we are by poverty and misery, millions are paid and given away annually to the poor. The picture has its bright and dark sides; and to-day we will turn the gloomy part to the wall, with a sigh. Charity has, for one day in the year, caused the poor pauper to forget his poverty, and he again smiles as he sits before the board which she has so bountifully spread. His thoughts wander back to the happy Christmas dinners over which he once presided, when he had a home which he proudly called his own. Memory pictures the past—his wife, his children; some now dead—others scattered over the world, he knows not whither. He sees old faces glittering in the bright holly berries—he hears old voices in the cheerful crackling of the fire, and smiles faintly while his thoughts wander to the days of other years; and he talks over these old times to his companion in adversity—to one who, perchance, like himself, has seen happier and better days. Wealth has ever at its command the power of dispensing such pleasures as these over the land; nor would any feeling man who pays a poor-rate begrudge an extra shilling or two to make the inmates of the workhouse happy on such an occasion as this—even though he himself is poor. With what a zest a man sits down to his Christmas dinner, when he knows that he has made some poor family happy by having provided for them on this day—whether it be to subscribe to some coal charity, such as our Engraving represents; or only to throw in his mite towards purchasing blankets for the poor, or supplying them once a day with soup. And oh! how little is required to throw the sunshine of happiness around some miserable abode—to scatter smiles where tears and sighs are too often found; and to know that, instead of a sorrowful group, huddling around the all but fireless grate, the little pudding is boiling in the pot, and the small joint turning on its worsted jack, from the fork stuck into the mantelpiece above the fire—that there is a happy light dancing in the children's eyes—a clapping of little hands every time the saucepan lid is uplifted—and that five paltry shillings purchased all this happiness. Trifles such as these make both the giver and the receiver happy; and though, without, "all aloud the wind doth blow," there is within the breast "a peace that surpasseth all riches." If we sigh for the Christmases of the olden time, it is because Charity then overflowed the land. From the Court, the glad stream ran through abbey and baronial hall, into the lowliest cottage and the humblest shed: even the serf, who was sold like a slave with the soil, shared the feast amid the general rejoicing, though he sat far below the salt, and, through the reeking and savoury odours, obtained but a dim glimpse of the lordly dais, overhung by armour and sylvan trophies. Honest old Thomas Tusser, in his "Hundreth Good Poyntes of Husbandrie," first printed in 1557, says—

> At Christmas be merry, and thank God for all,
> And feast thy poor neighbours, the great with the small.

And the author of the "Sketch-Book," in a few brief, happy sentences, says those were good times "when the old halls of castles and manor-houses were thrown open at daylight; when the tables were covered with brawn and beef, and humming ale; when the harp and the carol resounded all day long, and when rich and poor were alike welcome to enter and make merry; when the Old English Gentleman, on Christmas-Day in the morning, had all his tenants and neighbours at his hall by daybreak; when the strong beer was broached, and the black-jacks went plentifully about with toast, sugar, and nutmeg, and good Cheshire cheese; when the great sausage was boiled by daybreak, or else two young men took the cook by the arms and ran her round the village-green until she was ashamed of her laziness." The Picture shows one of the many "Distributions" that are made in the metropolis at this festive season.—(See page 424)

CHRISTMAS-EVE IN YORKSHIRE.—(See page 420.)

This Sketch, drawn on the spot by Dodgson, is a representation of a Merry-Making on Christmas-Eve in one of our northern counties. The scene is one of those large kitchens which are only to be found in some old English manor-house. Supper is over, and all cleared away for the dance, drinking will go on until the Waits come, which will be long after midnight, when the large table will once more be spread with refreshments, and the cup will continue to circulate until morning. Elder wine, spiced ale, and "egg-hot" are the principal beverages drunk in the north of England on Christmas-Eve. The fiddler is generally some old man who attends all the wakes, feasts, statutes, harvest-homes, and sheep-shearing feasts for miles around. He plays only old English tunes: were you to ask him to play some polka, ten to one he would open his eyes in astonishment, and say, "Is it owt good to yeat?" He hates all sorts of "new-fangled tunes" as he calls them, and would not give a straw to play to dancers who do not shake the house, and all but drive the floor in through stamping on it. He sighs for the good old times when gentlemen danced in top-boots, and wore spurs, and says, "Looks! there woresum fun then." Nor does there appear to be any want of it in the Sketch which our Artist has here placed before us. There is sure to be a smash amongst the crockery before the laughing girl on the dresser is caught, or the kiss is obtained, which they have overturned the chair in struggling for. The old woman seated in the arm-chair by the fire looks on the scene with delight, and perhaps recals the time when she was as merry a romp as any in the group before her. She who is drawn under the mistletoe-bough half averts her head, and seemingly grants with reluctance the kiss which her heart flutters to receive. Even the boy, who has helped to capture the fair prisoner, appears to chuckle again, as he beholds the pleasant penance she is undergoing. The "toddling child" is also "timing its footsteps" to the dance at the very moment the words "Hands across" have been uttered by the old fiddler, who acts the part of musician and master of the ceremonies, and "rates" the rustic dancers in no very measured terms when they miss what he calls "the figure."

THE GAME OF FORFEITS.—(See page 428.)

We have here a Sketch by the far-famed Kenny Meadows, who stands second to none in his delineations of character; other proofs of which we also present in his "Game of Blind-Man's Buff," and his inimitable "Christmas Pudding"—two subjects belonging to another portion of our description of Christmas. The Game of Forfeits is now, we believe, very rare in London: it is too romping and noisy an amusement for the chilling atmosphere and somewhat too stately decorum of our modern drawing-rooms; so we must confine our description to what we have seen in the free-and-easy country. While gazing on this picture, the curtain seems once more uplifted which had closed over and shrouded the merry Christmas revels we joined in twenty years ago. faces and forms well-remembered are again thrown upon the mirror of Memory; and instead of the happy group here presented, we are once more under the roof of the old thatched grange, among > Honest lads and bonnie lassies.

The Game of Forfeits commenced by spinning a wooden trencher or dish, and was called "Turn-Trencher." We took our seats round the room, when one of the party stepped forward and spun the trencher on the floor. No one could tell who would be called upon to catch it while spinning, until the name was proclaimed by the spinner, which was seldom done until the trencher appeared ready to fall. If not caught before it fell, we had to pay a forfeit. The girls gave up their purses, necklaces, gloves; the young men their watches, pencil-cases, nay, even coats and hats, if nothing better could be obtained; for not one in five caught the trencher while spinning, though we were all eye, all ear, and up in a moment. When "turn-trencher" ended, the real fun commenced by redeeming the forfeits, which stood piled high on the table. We well knew that some kind of freemasonry existed between the bonny girl who held up the forfeit and the sly gipsy that knelt down, as if pretending not to know to whom the pledge belonged, while she passed sentence with her face buried in the lap of her laughing companion. There was something only known to themselves in the way of introducing "the pretty thing, or the very pretty thing," by which the kneeling sybil was as well able to identify the party to whom the pledge belonged as if she looked him fully in the face; and what hearty roars of laughter pealed through the room when the modest Mr. Simpkins was sentenced to kiss some blushing damsel through the tongs before he could redeem the article he had forfeited; then his endeavouring to look sentimental all the while he stood looking through the tongs, as if screwed in an iron pillory; and the "Oh, dear! it was so ridiculous, she could not think of such a thing;" so, after much intercession, poor Simpkins was let off, after having kissed the knob of the poker three times. Then the tall, starched Mr. Prim, who would have fainted had there been a crease in his neckcloth or a wrinkle in his tightly-strapped trousers, what must he do to redeem the gold watch which everybody knew he forfeited only to let it be known that he had one? The pretty gipsy on her bended knees titters: there is mischief brewing; he must touch the hearth three times with his nose. They say he wears stays. You would as soon think of the Monument bowing to you as of Mr. Prim stooping so low as the hearth. Mercy on us! he smirks and kneels; and bang goes one strap—his knee has also gone through, and he is off like a shot. Pride has indeed had a fall. Or picture yourself having to whistle some tune through the key-hole without once laughing—you, whose roar is ever ready if you only see some grotesque head on the knocker of a door; or to look fixedly at the candle five minutes without once smiling, and that too when one of your companions, renowned for his long face, is puckering up his mouth like a pair of old-fashioned nut-crackers: or perchance you are sentenced to kiss some crusty old aunt through the chair-back, it being well known that you have not been on speaking terms with her for nearly twelve months. Then there is such a good-natured smile in the dear old lady's face, as she kneels behind the chair-back, that you see at the first glance all is forgotten and forgiven, and you date the commencement of a life-lasting friendship from that merry Christmas-Eve, and noisy Game of Forfeits. Dear Harriet, Rose, Julia, Sarah with the mild hazel eyes, and thou, sweet May, whose very name was "lover's own poetry"—oh! whither have ye fled? Alas! hushed are many of the "daughters of music," whose blythe carols made glad the merry Christmases of other days—voices which we hope are now heard among the angel-ranks of heaven, far away beyond that wing-swept pathway above the silvery shivering of the stars. May, with her golden hair veiling her face, and kneeling with folded wings beside the Stream of Life, and looking at her own shadow like another Eve in the "glassy, cool, pellucid wave." Grim old Scythe-Bearer, thou hast cut down a flower here and there, and left the garden in which we once delighted naked and desolate, and as to sigh alone amid the desert waste. Instead of the fresh dews of morning, thy grey wings are wet with bitter tears; thou art indeed the "Mower whose name is Death!" But the course of time is marked by changes; the ups and downs of life are the mile-posts that dot the road over which we travel, each telling us that we are drawing nearer to our journey's end.

BLINDMAN'S-BUFF.—(See page 428.)

Clear the decks! and leave us ample space enough for this thorough old English game. Turn up the largest table, with the leaf towards the fire, and remember that it is not fair to hide behind it: let us be wise in the midst of our harmless folly, and avoid danger. But what has Meadows introduced here?—the old grandfathers and grandmothers amongst the children! "The child is father of the man," says Wordsworth; and there can be no harm in the bald-headed old sire stepping back again into the spirit of childhood. What a touch of nature is that, where the dear old lady, having all but lost her cap, is trying to save her perake or false front! Not for worlds would she be seen with her top—

> Bare through hoar antiquity.

Rely upon it, her bald-pate is a secret to all, saving the hearty old fellow (no doubt, her husband) who enters into the joke, and seems to exclaim, "Pull away, and then you will see the nakedness of the land;" for Time has left him a few "sad grey hairs" behind, and he wears them with pride and honour. What a merry, mischievous leer there is in his dim old eye; and what sly jokes he will crack all the remainder of the year about the narrow escape she had at Christmas! And some of the hearty old blades will, perhaps, write to her, and beg a lock of her hair; and, though angry for the moment, she will at last join in the laugh against herself, and talk about her poor bald pate. Long may your graceful ringlets throw their shadows on your damask cheeks, my dear young ladies; and you live to laugh, as you do now, at the bewilderment of the dear old woman. How eagerly the sweet children enter into the sport, except the least of all, that lies squalling and neglected on the floor, and cannot make its tiny voice heard above the uproarious laughter. What an expression of delight there is on the boy's sweet countenance, who is looking up to the portly gentleman that is the cause of so much merriment. Sadly is he disfiguring the "thick rotundity" of the stout old lady with her back to us, at the great amusement of the old man who stands with one leg drawn up, and with whose countenance we seem to have been familiar from childhood. But oh! the shouts of delight when three or four children who have huddled together in one corner, are caught by Blindman's Buff: their struggle to escape as they tumble head-over-heels, one over the other—this with a torn frock, that with a shoe off, the other with its little round fat arm clear out of its dress. That is sport indeed, and their dear, merry voices seem to ring like music through our hearts weeks and months after the festival of Christmas.

It seems but as yesterday when we assembled in the large old parlour to play at Blindman's-Buff: when the huge bunch of everlasting flowers was removed from its accustomed place on the ceiling to make room for the mistletoe bough, whose berries we should as soon think numbering as the kisses which were given and received beneath them. What sweet faces did the huge yula-clog flash upon on that merry night! what eyes, "which ever loved the ground," saving when glancing upon that mysterious bough, amid whose leaves and pale berries some spell seemed to be secreted! Often do they still rise before us in the still midnight—their shadows appearing to fall, as of old, upon the walls—long locks and swan-like necks ever shifting like pillars of light, as we sit and dream of the past. In the low tongues of flame that babble in the barred grate, they at times seem speaking to us of old festivals and merry days that can never more return—subdued kisses, smothered before they found utterance, and driven back upon the heart, like bees flattering among flowers, from which they have not the power to escape. But we will no longer look upon those forms

Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns.

THE CHRISTMAS PUDDING.—(See page 417.)

We miss the father in this eager, hungry-looking picture; and if he has gone out to dine anywhere on such a day as this, he ought to be ashamed of himself. Perhaps Meadows intended conveying some such rebuke, for it seems difficult to keep the children in order, nor does the lady look at all pleased at having to serve so many. The little thing holding the plate beside the mother ought, in our opinion, to have been served first, as it is, to all appearance, the youngest. That beautiful girl seated at the end of the table will wait patiently until the last, and then her eye will often wander to her little sisters, to see that they are not eating too fast, or burning themselves. Master Freddy, in the plaid frock, should wait awhile, if we had him to deal with, for pushing himself and plate so forward. Master Jack has stuck a piece much too large for a single mouthful on his fork, and is also holding up his leg in a very unbecoming manner. As for Bid, he seems to be eating with two spoons at once: that boy will make himself ill, depend upon it, for, after having been served twice, he is sure to ask for more. Bill and Jack look like two mischievous young rascals, and we would wager a trifle that, if their pockets were searched, crackers would be found there; and that, if their mother's back were turned for a moment, they wouldn't at all mind throwing one into the fire, and making the little creatures who are eating their pudding beside the fender jump again. A pretty life do those young dogs lead that servant; and, unless their father is a little more at home, the neighbours say they do not know what will become of them. There is not a cat about the place but what they are after it; and they are constantly firing little cannons through keyholes, and frightening the people "out of their wits." It was only the other day that Master Jackey shoved a paper full of gunpowder under the pan in which an old woman roasted her chestnuts, at an apple-stall at the end of the street, and blew up her whole establishment. He would not have had any pudding at all if his father had been at home. Those boys, if left to themselves, would make a tremendous hole in the pudding before they left off, and, very probably, be under the doctor's hands on the following day.

But there is something delightful, after all, in seeing children enjoy themselves, in watching their little eyes sparkle, noticing them pause for a moment or two to recover breath, then try again: slower and at longer intervals are the pieces of pudding now taken up—the dear rosy lips have scarcely any motion, and at last the sweet rounded mouth is at rest, for, wrong as it is, they have eaten until they are surfeited. Pretty dears, if they are ill, Christmas only comes once a year; and although they will kick and scream dreadfully when compelled to swallow the physic, they have enjoyed themselves beforehand, and there is no real pleasure without a little pain. We know no readier way of turning little "babbles" into angels than allowing them to gorge themselves with Christmas pudding: all good mothers know that such heavy dainties ought to be dealt out with a sparing hand. We hope that many of the Master Jackies and Billies will read this portion of our article on Christmas, and bear in mind that even pudding carries its own punishment when swallowed to excess.

CHRISTMAS PRIZE CATTLE.

Although we are not amongst the admirers of unnatural fatness, we cannot refrain from visiting the Cattle Show, nor peeping into the butchers' shops at Christmas. We know no country that could pasture such bulk and bone as we there behold, except England, nor any stomachs that could digest such rich bilious food except those of Englishmen. We have seen some of our huge London draymen and sinewy coal-heavers pick out the fattest portions they could find, seeming to regret that there was a single strips of lean in the whole joint. Fine Laplanders would those fellows make, and do ample justice to a banquet of whale's blubber. They would glory in a portion of a bullock that was fed only on chopped suet and oil-cake. What monstrous pigs do we also see at this season of the year! if they ever walked at all, they must, like Falstaff, have "larded the lean earth" over which they passed. As for the sheep, we can scarcely fancy that such huge legs of mutton ever moved, but by some secret process must have been dipped as they dip candles, layer upon layer, then left to cool before they were again immersed, until they finally attained their unnatural thickness and fatness. There we see calves that may have been suckled by elephants, and that seem to have shared in the bulky proportions of their gigantic foster-mothers. Alive, they look clean and beautiful; but when slaughtered and hung up, we should intercede for the levelling of a few of those useless mountains of fat before we were tempted to become purchasers. After all, a sirloin of Christmas beef is a noble adjunct to the table, and is generally valued all the more if it has been cut from a prize ox. The roast beef of Old England was the boast of our forefathers, and our national pride will never degenerate or permit any other nation to bear away this trophy.

GOOSE-CLUBS

are held at hundreds of the public-houses in London. The members pay a shilling a week for eight or ten weeks before Christmas, and, in addition to a goose, are generally entitled to a bottle of gin for their ten shillings. Those who pay but sixpence weekly have a piece of beef: tea and sugar for the women are also amongst these Christmas prizes. These clubs are got up "to benefit the house," as it is called; and there is but little doubt that, with the money spent over the meetings, every goose costs at least a pound in the end. Right proud is the landlord to show his prize geese to his customers; and great delight does he take in telling them about the number of miles he travelled by rail, of the bargain he made weeks before to be supplied with geese of the first quality at so much per head, and how, "not to be done," he examined them all; and that, when the time came for fetching them away, the goose-feeder said that he shouldn't mind "giving him a five-pun' note for his bargain." He tells you that they were stubble fed in autumn; that up to Christmas they had—he can hardly tell you what—but you almost believe, while you listen, that when roasted, they will, without any addition of any kind whatsoever, have the flavour of apple-sauce, sage and onions, and fine mealy potatoes. But he always advises those who carry off a fine goose to take with them a bottle of spirits, for "goose is rich," he says, "and spirits are always handy in a house, especially at Christmas time, for goose will sometimes disagree with the strongest of persons;" in a word, he is as kind as a father to his customers. A perfect babel of sounds is a public-house on Christmas-Eve when the prizes are drawn, and many a pint of gin is won and lost about the weight of the different geese before the members separate for the night.

MEETING OF FAMILIES AT CHRISTMAS.

One of the greatest pleasures Christmas brings is, the assembling of members of families—the bringing together once more all "the old familiar faces" around the household hearth. To see the venerable father and mother still occupying their old arm-chairs; to sit at the same place at the table which they formerly claimed as their own, beside the sister with whom they once kissed and quarrelled a dozen times a day, yet loved all the more after each childish squabble—these are the little home touches that send a silent thrill through the heart, and force tears into the eyes unawares: to see the old man still hale and hearty, though bearing the marks of the winter of age in his silver hairs—his eye scarcely dimmed, though he cannot see to read such small print as he formerly read; his whole countenance brightened up by that light from within, which proclaims a clear conscience and "a heart at peace with all mankind." To see the tears gathering in his eye, as with tremulous voice he uplifts his glass after the Christmas dinner is over and the dessert placed on the table, while in a few apt words he expresses his delight at seeing them all again, and ends by praying God to bless them all; words which unloosen the fountains of every heart, and fill each eye with tears of gentle joy, causing them to weep "at what they are glad of," as the great Shaksparare has expressed this silent language of the heart. And she who parchance at that moment sits beside him, her gentle eyes beaming with the light of love—who has shared his pilgrimage for fifty long years, slides her hand gently into his own, and by that silent pressure proclaims how much she feels; then glancing through her tears on all the beloved faces which surround her, breathes an inward prayer to be united to them for ever in heaven; for dearly does she love them all, and calmly awaits the hour when she must lead the way along that path which, sooner or later, they must all tread. Then there are the little grandchildren, all wearing something of the old family likeness, and the married sons and daughters see them seated on the grandfather's knee—on the knee where they once sat—playing with the large gold seal which they can just remember to have played with, or listening to the ticking of the great gold watch, which they, when children, believed to be alive. Then come the little histories of those who are absent, who have got on but indifferently in the world, who have made good or bad marriages; and there sometimes reigns a silence for several moments, as they recal the faces of those whom they have so often met around that hearth. The image of some pretty cousin rises up, who was the pride of their Christmas parties—the very life of their childish amusements; and tender is the appeal of some one present (one, perhaps, in whose heart she once fondly reigned), when he speaks of her unfortunate marriage, her poverty, and her sufferings—how she now dwells in an attic or a cellar in some distant town—and they are again made to feel how all loved her; a tear is shed over the recital of her misfortunes, and in a day or two after this meeting amongst those who can never wholly forget her, she receives some present which almost breaks her heart through very joy—that joy which is the grief of gladness.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON, PAST AND PRESENT.

BY THOMAS MILLER.

CHAPTER XIX.

A LONDON FOG.—(See page 432.)

SUCH of our country readers as have never been in town about this season of the year, can scarcely imagine what it is to grope their way through a downright thorough London Fog. It is something like being imbedded in a dilution of yellow peas-pudding, just thick enough to get through it without being wholly choked or completely suffocated. You can just see through the yard of it which, at the next stride, you are doomed to swallow, and that is all. It is a kind of meat and drink, and very sorry sustenance for those who are asthmatical, as you may tell by hearing one old cough answering to another from opposite sides of the street, and which, although you cannot see the passengers, you can tell, from their grumbling, that they do not like the fare at all. You have the same soft-soapy atmosphere served up at breakfast, dinner, tea, and supper; every time you open your mouth you partake of it, and all day long you are compelled to burn lights, and, in addition to the fog, inhale the fumes from gas, candle, or lamp, which have no more chance of escape than you have, so burn on dim, yellow, and sulkily, as if the very lights needed all the warmth they could obtain, and thus confine themselves to illuminating the smallest possible space. The whole city seems covered with a crust, and all the light you can see beneath it appears as if struggling through the huge yellow basin it overspreads. You fancy that all the smoke which had ascended for years from the thousands of London chimneys, had fallen down all at once, after having rotted somewhere above the clouds; smelling as if it had been kept too long, and making you wheeze and sneeze, as if all the colds in the world were rushing into your head for warmth, and did not care a straw about killing a few thousands of people, so long as they could but lodge comfortably for a few hours anywhere. You blow like a grampus in a quicksand, with the zeal of a seventy-four on his trunk, and get about as much fresh air as if you were in his situation: a pair of bellows with a hole in the side, through which you might cram your double fist, would make perfect music, when blown, compared to the noise of your own breathing. You seem as if you had swallowed six broad-winded horses; that they were inside of you alive and kicking; and, for the soul of you, you cannot get rid of one.

You step gingerly along, feeling your way beside the walls, windows, and doors, whenever you can, until at last you fumble headlong into some cellar—perhaps on the shoulders of the little cobbler who is at work below, and who chances to have his sharp awl uplifted at the moment; or, perhaps, it is an underground coal-shed, and you alight on the back of the black-looking woman weighing coals, and double her up in her own scale—receiving, in return, a couple of black eyes from her husband. After a hearty drubbing, you escape once more into the street; and, as you cannot see a yard before you, break your shins over a milkman's can, and upset the contents on the greasy pavement; he tries to collar you, but your blood is now up, and you give him a "straight armer," which sends him into the area, upsetting the fat cook as he flies. You then run for it, and come full butt against the "bow-window" of a respectable old gentleman, with whom you have a roll or two in the gutter, thankful that you did not fall on the other side, and stave in the shop-front. You shake yourself, and are glad that you are as you are—for a foot beyond where you felt there yawns an open grating, beneath which runs the huge sewer that empties itself into the Thames—and you wonder how many have slipped in during the day. You tumble into a heap of unslacked lime; but that you think nothing of, too thankful to find it was not a fire. You turn up what seems to be a court, to give yourself a rub-down, and run your head against a pail of whitewash, which hangs suspended from a ladder: the whole contents flow over you; and, before you can see where you are, you fall over a sweep, who is tying up his blanket of soot, roll into the midst of it, and come out a pretty picture—something like the inside of an old chimney, and the outside of a rough-cast wall, just mortared.

Some good Samaritan in the court takes pity on you by leading you a town; and furnishing you with a pail of water, and you make the best of a bad job, by cleansing yourself as you can. This done, you sally out again, more cautious than ever—the deep yellow darkness meantime increasing: you proceed slowly, and feel every foot of your way, for seeing is out of the question beyond arm's-length. Cautiously you grope along by the board of a fishmonger's shop, on which lie three or four large black live lobsters; one with his claws open closes on your hand like a vice, and you run shrieking for very life. The fishmonger catches sight of the lobster dangling from your hand, and, believing you have stolen it, follows with a loud cry of "Stop thief!" He is brought up, with his head in the tar-barrel, at the front of his neighbour the oilman's door; and the monster, by being banged against the wall, having by this time loosed his hold, you go along writhing and groaning, and wondering what will next befal you.

Porters with heavy burthens, women and men with fish, water-cresses, &c., you run against every few minutes, and think nothing of that. Sometimes you are knocked down, then again it is their lot to fall, and finding that the average runs pretty fair for and against the fallers and the fallen, you rest contented on that score—considering the running of the edges of half a dozen umbrellas into your mouth as so many little open ins. If you mistake a dimly-lighted shop-front for some turning, and chance to shove your head through a pane of glass, all you can do is to walk as quietly on as if nothing were amiss—two strides and you are in safety, and as far out of sight as if buried in Egyptian darkness; and they are sure to seize the first unfortunate fellow they can lay hands upon, who might have been just as likely to have made the mistake as yourself; to know which is of some comfort. That two or three dogs have run full gallop between your legs and thrown you down as many times, are accidents too common to need recording. As for your watch, that of course went before you had walked one hundred yards—you see the fellow's arm that dragged it out of your pocket, and that was all; it was a jerk amid the deep fog, a rush, in which your nose came against a dead wall, and by the time you had rubbed the grazed tip a little, you thought that you might as well hunt for a needle in a bottle of hay, as attempt to follow the thief in that dusky, woolly, and deceptive light.

With great difficulty, and after many enquiries, you find a tavern; for you know no more than the man-in-the moon what part of London you are in. You enter a dim cheerless room without a fire, in which the gas burns faintly, as if unable to pierce the fleecy fog which surrounds it. You wonder whether the peg on which you hang your hat would bear your weight; and, as you lay hold of the bell-rope, cannot help trying the strength of it: the height of the ceiling also catches your eye, and you marvel that more people do not hang themselves in such a day. The very poker in the fireless grate has a cold, clammy, and murderous look; and when the waiter enters, you fancy that he has just been cut down. You light a cigar, and begin to think a little better of matters, and to reckon how many glasses of hot brandy-and-water would throw you into a state of oblivion—that is, leave you dead drunk until the dawning of another day. These thoughts vanish with a second glass, and you again venture forth, resolved this time to get into an omnibus, should one be found bold enough to venture out on such a day. After waiting for some time, and hailing (by mistake half-a-dozen coal-waggons and carriers' carts, you perceive an omnibus creeping by at a snail's pace; enter, and squeeze yourself into a seat beside the door. You cannot see to the top of it for the fog, so have no fear of your tailor recognising you, should he happen to be inside—one comfort out of so many evils. While you are sitting, and congratulating yourself that you have escaped so well, up comes a cab-horse with his head through the open door, and his hot nostrils on your face. A few rough compliments are exchanged between the cab-driver and the conductor, during which something is said about the glanders, which haunts you for days after; the more so through your nose being red and raw, by grazing it against the wall when the thief ran away with your watch. To what quarter the omnibus is going gives you no concern, for you are glad to get anywhere to be out of the way on such a day. Great, however, is your indignation, after having been carried some three-score yards, to find that you are at the Cross Keys, in Fleet-street, having got in at the corner of Bride-court, and that the omnibus goes no further. You pay your threepence with a protest, and are thankful that you cannot see the passengers, who are laughing at you. You have, however, the satisfaction of seeing a heavy old gentleman plant one foot into a basket of oranges on the edge of the pavement, and that puts you into a little better humour, especially when, at the next step, he plunges his head into the window of a book-shop, and knocks down the middle of three rows of richly-bound volumes, besides smashing no end of panes of glass.

On such a day, the man who milks his cow in the street is compelled to lay hold of her tail, for fear of losing sight of her; while the butcher-boy who carries out meat is often minus a joint or two when he reaches the door at which his orders ought to have been delivered. Should such a day be Smithfield Market, all the cellar-flaps in the little by-streets are left open, in the hopes of catching a few stray sheep, and losing a stock of mutton for nothing: should a prize bullock [illegible] they make no bones of him, but salt down what is left, and [illegible] the fog for supplying them with so much excellent beef.

A stranger to London, when the fog sets in at night, and he looks upon it for the first time, fancies his apartments filled with smoke, and begins by throwing open his doors and windows—thus making bad worse, by destroying all the warm air in the rooms. Even one well accustomed to the ins and outs of our far-stretching city is strangely deceived in distance, and by the size objects assume, as they loom in dim and gigantic dimensions through the heavy fog. The gas-lamps appear as if placed three-story high, unless you stand close beneath them for what light they emit is nearly all thrown upward; while a cab comes bearing up (to appearance) as large as a huge caravan which Wombwell formerly used for the conveyance of his stupendous elephant. Once take a wrong turning, and you may consider yourself very fortunate if you ever discover the right road again within three hours; for the houses wear a different appearance, and the streets appear to be all at "sixes and sevens."

Although a real Londoner looks upon a dense December fog as a common occurrence, and lights up his premises with as little ceremony as he would do at the close of the day, yet, to one unused to such a scene, there is something startling in the appearance of a vast city wrapt in a kind of darkness which seems neither to belong to the day nor the night, at the mid-noon hour, while the gas is burning in the windows of long miles of streets. The greatest marvel, after all, is that so few accidents happen in this dim, unnatural light, in the midst of which business seems to go on as usual, and would do, we believe, were the whole of London buried in midnight darkness at noonday, which would only be looked upon as a further deepening of the overhanging gloom. The number of lighted torches which are carried and waved at the corners and crossings of the streets add greatly to the wild and picturesque effect of the scene, as they flash redly upon the countenances of the passengers, and, in the distance, have the effect of a city enveloped in a dense mass of smoke, through which the smouldering flames endeavour in vain to penetrate.

During a heavy fog many accidents occur on the river, through barges running foul of each other, or vessels coming athwart the bridges—or there is no seeing the opening arch from the rock-like buttress at the whole river looks like one huge bed of dense stagnant smoke, through which no human eye can penetrate. If you lean over the balustrades of the bridge, you cannot see the vessel which may at that moment be passing beneath, so heavy is the cloudy curtain which covers the water. At such times the steam-boats cease running, and rest quietly at their moorings, for the man at the wheel would be unable to see half the length of his vessel. Sometimes a steamer, coming up the river, takes a fancy to a shorter cut, by trying to clear Blackwall Reach, and come overland through the Marshes below Greenwich, or by running her head into the Isle of Dogs, where she lies aground until the next tide.

Many lives have been lost through foot-passengers mistaking the steps at the foot of some of the bridges for the opening of the bridge itself, and, ere they were aware of it, rolling head-foremost into the river. Strong iron-railings have been erected during the last few years, and have put an end to such dreadful accidents; but at the foot of Blackfriars Bridge, many, we have heard, thus lost their lives.

At this time the pavement is greasy, and, though you keep lifting up your legs, you are hardly positive whether or not you are making any progress. You seem to go as much backward as forward; and some old Cockneys do aver that she surest way of reaching Temple Bar from Charing Cross would be to start off with your face turned towards King Charles's statue, to walk away manfully without once turning your head, and that, by the end of three hours, you would be pretty sure of reaching the point aimed at, should you not be run over.

CHRISTMAS-EVE IN YORKSHIRE.—DRAWN BY DODGSON.—(SEE PAGE 418.)

BRIGHTON FISHERMEN CAROL SINGING.

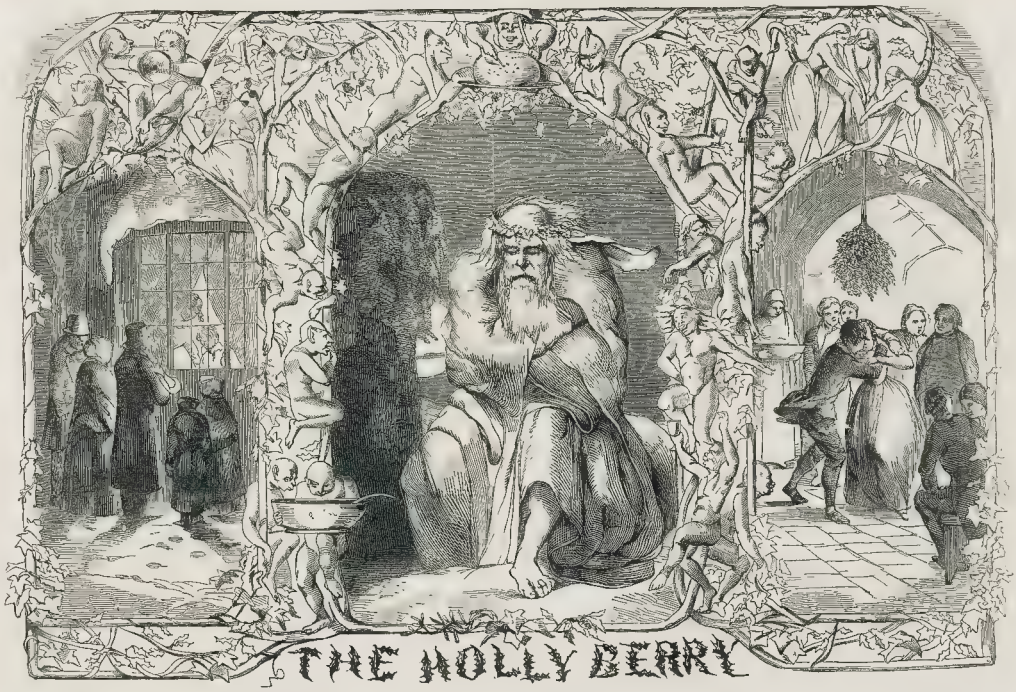
In concluding our Christmas article, we must introduce a group of Brighton Fishermen Singing Carols, from a sketch by Mr. Hine, together with the following notice, which he has also furnished:—

The fishermen of Brighton are said to be the descendants of a party of Spanish refugees, who settled there in the reign of Elizabeth, and were presented by her with certain land, for drying nets and other purposes connected with fisheries. Some of the names most common among them—as Mighell, Gunn, Jaspar—are also said to be written Miguel, Juan, Gaspard, &c. in the older parish records. Be this as it may, it is certain that they possess characteristics in feature and custom not met with amongst other classes in the town, or amid the peasantry in the neighbourhood. Black eyes and hair, and a clear brown complexion, are common amongst them, and seem to favour the idea of their southern origin. About twenty years ago, when the Old Steyne (to which they claim a traditional right) was about to be enclosed by iron railings, they drew to the contested ground some of their heaviest mackarel boats, capstans, &c., and armed with oars, spars, axes, and other implements of their trade, placed themselves in battle array to resist the proposed encroachment—pleading the rights granted to them originally by Queen Elizabeth. Nor was it until the authorities had admitted these claims, and promised that the gates should be made wide enough to admit the larger boats, in case of need, that they consented to allow the work to be completed.

Although uncouth in manners, they are industrious and inoffensive, holding but little intercourse, except in the way of business, with the townspeople, whom they generally designate "farringers" (Anglicè foreigners). Their prevailing weakness is one for beer, and, under its influence, they sometimes become rather uproarious; yet, as they live make love, marry, and fight amongst themselves, other classes of the community are not much affected by their peculiarities. The present festive season has the effect, however, of relaxing for a time their exclusive prejudices; and, forming themselves into groups of carol-singers—or, as they term themselves, "wassailers"—they enter the hotels and private dwelling-houses, and there sing their ancient carols.

After the lapse of nearly three centuries, they may be fairly considered to belong to England; and happy we are to make honourable mention of them in our Christmas columns.

[CHRISTMAS CAROL SINGING, BY BRIGHTON FISHERMEN.—DRAWN BY HINE.



THE HOLLY BERRY

A CHRISTMAS CHIME.

WORDS BY THOMAS MILLER. MUSIC BY JOHN BARNETT.

Allegretto con spirito.

f p

ff cres. ff

Gone are the sum - mer hours, The birds have left their bowers; While the hol - ly true re - tains his hue, Nor ff

chang - es like the flowers. Gone are the sum - mer hours, The birds have left their bowers; While the pp

2.

Above all cold affections,
Like pa.sant recollections,
The ivy grows, and a deep veil throws
O'er all Time's imperfections;
The mould'ring column screening,
The naked gate-way greening,
While the failing arch of oak doth entwine
Like a heart that at a homeward reasing.
Then drink to the holly-berry
With hey down, hey down derry;
The mistletoe we'll pledge also,
And at Christmas all be merry.

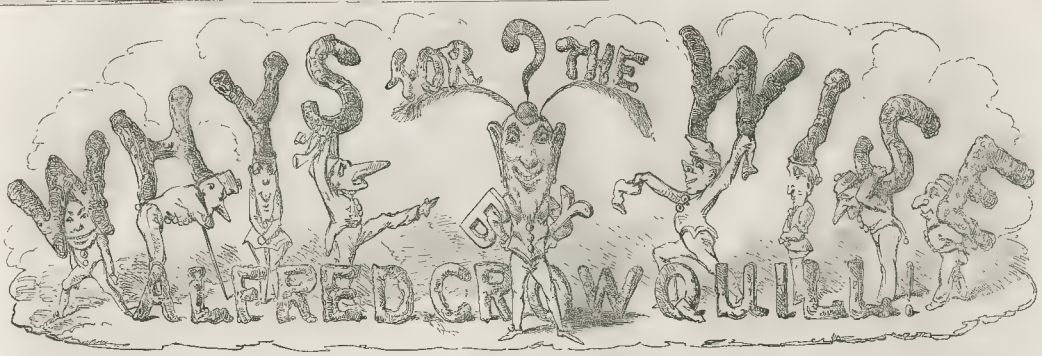
3.

We read in ancient story,
How the Druids in their glory
March'd forth of old, with hooks of gold,
To forests dim and hoary;
The giant oak ascended,
Then from its branches rended
The mistletoe, long long ago,
By maidens fair attended.
Then drink to the holly-berry
With hey down, hey down derry;
The mistletoe we'll pledge also,
And at Christmas all be merry

4.

Each thorpe and grange surrounding,
The waits to music bounding,
Aroused the cock, that hoarse night smoke
Ere the early cock was sounding.
For all the land was merry,
And rang with "Hey down derry."
While in castle hall and cottage small
There glitter'd the holly-berry
Then drink to the holly-berry
With hey down, hey down derry,
The mistletoe we'll pledge also,
And at Christmas all be merry.

 In the absence of a Chorus, the upper notes of the top line may be sung as a melody.



1. Why is this man like the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS?

2. Why is this like a Prime Minister?

3. Why can you only make half-a-sovereign with that which represents a sovereign?

4. Why is this like the present political arrangements?

5. Why is this like a London gent?

6. Why ought he to keep this hat, although it does not fit him?

7. Why is this thimble like a lawyer?

8. Why is this like a divinity?

9. Why would this make a good jockey?

10. Why is this like China?

11. Why is this like a notice of a house to let?

12. Why is this like Louis Napoleon?

13. Why is this like prudence?

14. Why is this superior to Cobden?

15. Why is this like a lady's seal?

16. Why is this like a counterpane?

17. Why is this like Bulwer's last novel?

18. Why is this like a successful opposition?

19. Why are these skates like gruel?

20. Why is this, although the giver of courage to others, a great coward?

21. Why does this always claim precedence?

22. Why is this opera-hood like a bad husband?

23. Why ought this man never to be snubbed for looking after the girls?

24. Why is this like an ambitious man?

25. Why is this like England?

26. Why is this like a Bank clerk at one o'clock?

27. Why is this like your wife in a passion?

28. Why is this like a man offering you a ten-pound note?

29. Why is this like a rich man?

30. Why ought the donkey never to be a creditor?

31. Why does this show the folly of accommodation?

32. Why is this like a creditor?

33. Why is this like a King?

34. Why is this like a negative?

35. Why is he certain of results?

36. Why is she like a man used to get drunk?

37. Why is this like the Prince of Wales?

38. Why is this not fit to commence an action with?

39. Why is this like ignorance?

40. Why is this like Turner's "Venice?"

41. Why is this like Rothschild

42. Why is this like a good General?

43. Why does this man never do?

44. Why is this man like a cat?

45. Why is this like love?

46. Why is this like an inconstant?

47. Why is this like Jenny Lind?

48. Why are these bellows like slander?

49. Why is Cupid like an overseer

50. Why is this an emblem of man's continual errors?

51. Why is this like the endeavour to discover the Pole?

52. Why is this like charity?

53. Why is this like Louis Philippe?

54. Why is it useless to send this bird a bushel of beans?

55. Why is this like Christmas?

56. Why is this like Ireland?

* The Answers to the above will be given next week.

WINTER.—DRAWN BY FOSTER.

WINTER.

THE snow lies thick upon the ground,
In coat of mail the pools are bound;
The hungry rooks in squadrons fly,
And winds are slumb'ring in the sky.

Drowsily the snow-flakes fall;
The robin on the garden wall
Looks wistful at our window-pane,
The customary crumb to gain.

On barn, and thatch, and leafless tree
The frost has hung embroidery,
Fringe of ice, and pendants fine,
Of filagree and crystaline.

The sheep, well clad in garment warm,
Feed unobservant of the storm;
And sleepy Dobbin hangs his head,
Or winks and dozes in his shed.

But nought care we, though o'er the wold
The Winter lays his fingers cold;
We still enjoy the roughest day,
And find December good as May.

Pile up the fire! the winter wind,
Although it nip, is not unkind;
And dark mid-winter days can bring
As many pleasures as the spring.

If not the flow'ret budding fair,
And mild effulgence of the air,
They give the glow of in-door mirth,
And social comfort round the hearth.

Pile up the fire! when storms are rude,
We feel the joy of gratitude;
And, thankful for the good possess'd,
Have welcomes for the poorest guest.

The gloomy Winter—who is he?
I never saw him on the lea,
I never met him on my path,
Or trow'd old stories of his wrath.

The Winter is a friend of mine,
His step is light, his eye-balls shine;
His cheek is ruddy as the morn,
He carols like the lark in corn.

His tread is brisk upon the snows—
His pulses gallop as he goes;
He hath a smile upon his lips,
With songs and welcome, jests and quips.

A charitable soul is he,
His heart is large, his hand is free;
He brings the beggar to his door,
And feeds the needy from his store.

The friend of every living thing,
Old Winter—sire of youthful Spring—
The glooms upon his brow that dwell,
Are glories when we know them well.

'Tis he that feeds the April buds,
'Tis he that clothes the summer woods;
'Tis he makes plump the autumn grain,
And loads with wealth the creaking wain.

Pile up the fire! and ere he go,
Our blessings in his head shall flow.
The hale old Winter, bleak and sere,
The friend and father of the year.

C. M

CHRISTMAS DISTRIBUTION OF COALS.—DRAWN BY FOSTER.—(SEE PAGE 418.)

THE ADORATION OF THE MAGI."—PAINTED BY RUBENS.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

THE ADORATION OF THE MAGI.

PAINTED BY RUBENS.

The stable and the manger hide
His glory from His own: but these,
Though strangers, His resplendent rayes
Of majestie divine have spy'd.

Gold, frankincense, and myrrhe they give,
And worshiping Him plainly show
That unto Him they all things owe,
By whose free gift it is they live.

CHRISTOPHER HARVEY.

This magnificent picture, unquestionably the finest of its class which Rubens ever painted, is in the Royal Museum of Madrid. In this instance, as well as in that of the celebrated picture in the Capitolo Prioral of the Escurial, the Virgin, contrary to all custom, is not seated, but standing; and, in the words of Dr. Waagen, "the heavenly beauty of the features, and, still more, the dignity of the form, with the benign and graceful inclination of the body, render it exceedingly attractive."

The two paintings present other corresponding points of excellence. The Virgin is a tall, dignified figure; the rays of glory just touch her head. Of the work in the Escurial, Madame de Humboldt observes:—"The picture is so beautiful, in such noble keeping, and so free from that disagreeable voluptuousness which characterises Rubens's females in general, that it can be contemplated and dwelt on with delight, although hanging on the same wall with a Raphael and a Guido; while it possesses all the advantages which belonged so exclusively to the manner of Rubens—the most blooming flesh tints, the loveliest colouring."

Rubens painted the "Adoration of the Magi, or Three Kings," before he began his journey to Italy, in the year 1600. He is said to have added the right portion to this picture on one of his visits to Madrid, and also to have introduced his own portrait.

"The Adoration" has been commemorated in many a sweet and fervid strain of poetry—olden and contemporary. George Wither has the following Song:—

That so thy blessed birth, oh Christ,
Might through the world be spread about.

Thy Starre appeared in the East,
Whereby the Gentiles found thee out;
And, off'ring Thee Myrrh, Incense, God,
Thy sweetfold Office did unfold.

Sweet Jesus, let that Starre of Thine,
Thy Grace, which guides to find out Thee,
Within our hearts for ever shine,
That Thou of us found out mai st bee:
And Thou shalt be our King, therefore,
Our Priest, and Prophet evermore.

Teares that from true repentance drop,
Instead of Myrrhe, present will we:
For Incense, we will offar up
Our Prairs and Praises unto Thee;
And bring for Gold each pious deed,
Which doth from saving faith proceed.

And as those Wisemen never went
To visit Herod any more;
So, finding Thee, we will repent
Our courses follow'd heretofore:
And that we homeward may retire,
Our way by Thee we will enquire.

The pious Bishop Heber has left us these impassioned lines:—

Bright beaming through the sky,
Burst in full blaze the Day-spring from on high;
Earth's utmost tales exulted at the sight,
And crowding nations drank the orient light.
Lo, star-led chiefs Assyrian odours bring,
And bending Magi seek their infant King!
Mark'd ye where, hovering o'er His radiant head,
The dove's white wings celestial glory shed?
Daughter of Sion! virgin Queen! rejoice!
Clap the glad hand and lift thy exulting voice!
He comes, but not in regal splendour dress'd,
The haughty diadem, the Tyrian vest;
Not arm'd in flame, all-glorious from afar,
Of hosts the chief! sin, and the lord of war:
Messiah comes! i. furious discord cease;
Be peace on earth before the Prince of Peace!
Disease and anguish feel His blest controul,
And bowling fear is release the tortured soul;
The beams of gladness hail's dark caves illume,
And Mercy broods above the distant gloom.

The following passage is from "Lines suggested by a Picture of the Adoration of the Magians," by Richard C. Trench:—

But of all this scanty state
That upon His steps might wait,
Dearest are those Magian Kings,
With their far-brought offerings.
From what region of the morn
Are ye come, thus travel-worn,
With those boxes pearl-embost,
Caskets rare, and gifts of cost?
While your swarth attendants wait
At the stable's outer gate,
And the camels lift their head
High above the lowly shed;
Or are seen, a long-drawn train,
Winding down into the plain,
From below the light-blue line
Of the hills in distance fine,
Dear for your own sake, whence are ye?
Dearer for the mystery
That is round you—on what skies
Gazing, saw you first arise,
Thro' the darkness, that clear star,
Which has marshall'd you so far,
Even unto this strawy tent,
Dancing up the Orient?
Shall we name you Kings indeed,
Or is this our idle creed?
Kings of Seba, with the gold
And the incense long foretold?
Would the Gentile world by you
First-fruits pay of tribute due;
Or have Israel's waiter'd race,
From their unknown hiding-place,
Sent to claim their part and right
In the Child new-born to-night?
* * * *
Thus so soon as far apart
From the proud world's mart in our heart,
As in stable dark defiled,
There is born the Eternal Child.
May to Him the Spirit's kings
Bear their choicest offerings;
May the Affections, Reason, Will,
Wait upon Him to fulfil
His behests, and early pay
Homage to His natal day.

For the ready quotation of these illustrative extracts, our acknowledgment is due to the Editor of a seasonable volume, just published, entitled "Christmas Tyde:" containing about one hundred "Festival Hymnes," and "Carolls," Odes, and Spiritual Songs, classified in Three Parts—the Advent, the Birth, and the Infancy, in addition to Descriptive Pieces on subjects associated with Christmas Tyde; from the earliest poets to those of our own time. The inscription page bears the following:—

To Dame Emma Dorothea, wife of Sir Francis Astley, Bart., these Memorials of Christmas are presented, in remembrance of her love for such hallowed themes, and her appreciative enjoyment of Christian art.

The book is produced in Mr. Pickering's characteristic style of appropriateness; printed in olden type, and illustrated from one of Raffaelle's masterpieces.

NEW MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.

SACRED MUSIC.

1. Church Anthems. Composed by Dr. W. R. Bexfield. J. A. Novelle.
2. The Psalter Notes, and Accompanying Harmonies to the Psalter Notes. By the Rev. Thomas Helmore, M.A. J. A. Novello.
3. Christmas Carols, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4. J. Masters.
4. Last Night I lay a-sleeping. Composed by H. J. Gauntlett, Mus. Doc. J. Masters.

The improvement of Ecclesiastical Music is evidently occupying the attention of the admirers of the sacred school of composition. To elevate the character of the music, to improve the execution of the musical service in our cathedrals, and to promote congregational singing in parts in our churches, many eminent professors and amateurs are now making strenuous efforts. In the provinces, religious art is more cultivated, and is making greater progress, than in the metropolitan diocese. We were much struck during the last Norwich Festival with the careful rendering of the services at the Cathedral in that town. Mr. Buck, the organist, takes especial pains in the important matter, and the majesty of the musical service is maintained by his discipline. One of his pupils, Dr. Bexfield, organist of St. Helen's, in the City, appears desirous of emulating the example of his respected master. A volume of Anthems, which have appeared from time to time in a detached form, are now before us, and prove the musical acquirements of this young and rising musician. In this collection there are seven full anthems—three in five parts, three in four, and one in eight parts. The words of the first anthem, "Hear my Prayer," from the Psalms, have been before treated, by Kent: it was the anthem performed at the funeral of the Princess Charlotte. The anthem, "Hide thy face from my sins," in four parts, has also been treated by Farrant. Dr. Bexfield follows in the wake of Croft, Boyce, Greene, &c., preserving the grave and devotional style and characteristics of our peculiarly national school of anthem writing. He has left nothing to the imagination of the organ-players in the accompaniments a line being devoted to the pedal passages. Dr. Bexfield displays a feeling for graceful and expressive harmony; his knowledge of contrapuntal treatment is evident, his symphonies are well designed, and the vocal parts move freely and flowingly. The canon in the "Glory to God" is a satisfactory specimen of Dr Bexfield's erudition; and, as an upholder of the English sacred school, his anthems are deserving of every praise.

The work of the Rev. T. Helmore (Priest in Ordinary to the Queen, Precentor of St. Mark's College, Chelsea, and Master of the Children of H. M. Chapels Royal) is after the manner of "Marbeck's Prayer-Book, Noted," every syllable being set to a note or notes. In Marbeck only general directions being given for the chanting of the Psalms, the present undertaking supplies the gap. The ancient notation has been followed—easily understood with the perusal of Mr. Helmore's preliminary explanations. For the use of churches in which there is no organ, or where harmonised vocal music is preferred to the unison, a second book, entitled "Accompanying Harmonies," has been published. The rev. author devotes the profits of these very useful and praiseworthy publications to the Metropolitan Church-Building Fund.

The Carols contain five "Once, in Royal David's City," "As Joseph was a-walking," "Upon the Snow-clad Earth without," and "There were Shepherds once abiding." Dr. Gauntlett's carol is an original composition, the words of which are by the author of "The Island Choir." The composer and organist is one of the most distinguished theorists and writers on musical matters this country has produced, and as a lecturer has no rival. His works on congregational singing have exercised the most beneficial influence.

THE MUSICAL ANNUALS.

1. Album Jullien, 1850. Edited by Thomas Baker. Jullien and Co.
2. The Musical Bijou: an Album of Music and Poetry for 1850. Edited by Fr. Bunney. D'Almaine and Co.

Jullien's musical library has produced, as usual, a splendid album, gorgeous in the illustrating department, and rich in musical attractions. The covers in gold and colours, with the presentation page, are elaborate and tasteful. Brandard's frontispieces, lithographed in colours, are portraits of Jetty Treffz as Arline, in Balfe's "Bohemian Girl," and Sontag as Desdemona. The association of the two German artistes is scarcely fair, Sontag being infinitely superior to the Viennese vocalist, who, in fact, cannot be even compared with many of our own native singers. There are sixteen vocal and fifteen instrumental pieces. Amongst the former are two airs (one from the "Prophète") by Meyerbeer, three ballads by Edward Loder, two by Angelina, two by Lamoureux, two by T. Baker (the editor), and the others are by Balfe, Landpainter, H. Smart, Linley, Roch-Albert (Jullien). The words of these compositions are written by Mrs. Corbould, Mrs. Hemans, Messrs. E. J. Gill, A. Crowquill, G. Linley, W. H. Bellamy, Palgrave Simpson, Shirley Brooks, Lowe, and A. Waymark. The instrumental works include a fantasia, "Solitude," by W. V. Wallace, the "Prophète Quadrilles," the "Masaniello Quadrille," the "Drum Polka," the "Prophète Waltz," "Palmyra Quadrille," by Jullien, with other dance pieces by Koenig, Barret, Laveau, and by a son of Prince Metternich. With the names we have enumerated, it may be readily concluded that there is much pleasing music in the selection.

The "Bijou" maintains its fame as the gem of musical illustration. The covers, the frontispiece, the title and border, and presentation plate, printed at the chrome-lithographic press of D'Almaine and Co., have been magnificently executed, from designs by eminent artists. There are eight illustrations for the musical morceaux; some of the drawings are graceful and characteristic; and the whole is of average merit. The vocal contributors are G. H. Rodwell, Stephen Glover, A. Lee, F. N. Crouch, C. Morton, A. Wilson, and W. Palmer; the poetry is by Mrs. Crawford, H. Sinclair, L. Rolfe, E. J. Gill, J. F. Smith, and J. E. Carpenter; the instrumental writers are Ricardo Linter, S. Glover, A. Norman, Herr Lebe, E. Schwartz, and H. Bardoni. There are fourteen vocal and eight instrumental pieces. The "Musical Bijou" is altogether a splendid annual.

VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

1. Winter's Warm Fireside. Music by W. T. Wrighton. C. and R. Ollivier.
2. Fleur de Marie. Music by G. Barker. Cocks and Co.
3. The Last Meeting. By Linter. D'Almaine and Co.
4. Victoria and our Native Land. By S. Nelson. Cocks and Co.
5. Hungarian Serenade. By M. A. Young. Addison and Co.
6. The Sister Isle. By Mr. C. Beale and Signor Lanza. C. Beale.
7. The Little Moles. Poetry by C. Mackay, Esq., Music by G. Talhurst. J. Blackman.
8. Come, Come to the Willow Dell. Vocal Duet. By G. Herbert Rodwell. Cocks and Co.
9. Little Songs for Little Singers, easy to sing and easy to play. Little Tunes for Little Players, arranged to suit small hands. G. H. Davidson.
10. Come away, Love. Spring. By F. Hinsbury. Addison and Co.
11. Why do you watch the lone, lone Deep? Duet. By Stephen Glover. Cocks and Co.
12. Gyllott's Family Preceptor. Webb.

No. 1 is a seasonable song, in four flats, illustrated by the interior of an old baronial hall, with a Christmas party round the yule-log, welcoming the arrival of the pudding. After such an appeal, the charm of music would be irresistible.—No. 2, in four flats, three-four time, is an expressive melody. The words are by Mr G. J Cook, and were suggested by the engraving of "Fleur de Marie," after she had taken the veil.—No 3 is one of the series of the legends of Italy. The poetry is by Mrs. Crawford; and the music is graceful, and well adapted for a contralto voice.—No. 4, Mr. Nelson's loyal effusion, the words by J. W. Lake, is adapted for public dinners.—The Serenade, No. 5, is elegant.—No. 6 is another national song, suggested by her Majesty's visit to Ireland. No. 7 is a political ditty, the refrain of which is, "Grub, little moles, grub under ground—there's sunshine in the sky," the words are racy and spirited, like all Mr Mackay's songs for the people.—Mr. Rodwell's duet (No. 8) is fresh and pleasing.—The two volumes (No. 9) form the sixth and 18 of Davidson's Musical Treasury, and are well adapted for the rising generation—the "little dears" who are making early efforts to sing and play. The music is by the most eminent composers, nicely arranged for the juvenile students.—No. 10. The two songs by Mr. Kingsbury are smooth and melodious.—The duet (No. 11) is clever and musician-like.—No 12, the "Family Preceptor," is an easy guide: it is not crowded with difficulties in the progressive lessons for the piano; and as a school-book to begin with the rudiments, has been carefully compiled.

DANCE MUSIC.

1. Alice Polka. Des Wanderers Lebewohl. March of the Royal Horse Guards. Composed by Johann Strauss. Cocks and Co.
2. The Mistletoe Schottische, and Three New Polkas. By W. H. B. D'Almaine and Co.
3. The Brunswick Polka. By Miss A. S. Mounsey. Charles and Robert Ollivier.
4. The Sea-Serpent Polka. By Ellen L. Glasscock. S. H. Webb.
5. The Madras Fusilier Galop. By H. Brinley Richards. Hammond.
6. A Set of Six Waltzes. By R. A. Morton. Addison and Co.

The revolution effected in dance music by the compositions of Strauss and Lanner was noticed recently in our obituary of the former celebrated composer. Labitzksy, Musard, and Jullien have followed in the wake of the Viennese musicians, and now the present race of writers for dance purposes essay to imitate their predecessors in the use of inspiring themes, passionate melodies, caprice of rhythm, and finesse in the details. The Polka and the Waltz were placed in Strauss's coffin at his funeral; and the March—a very spirited one—was composed for his last matinée musicale in this country, last summer; thus investing these works with a melancholy interest, independently of their musical merits. The other compositions we have enumerated above have all considerable merit, particularly the "Schottische," with the inviting title of the "Missletoe"—certainly a heart-jumping as well as feet-stirring title. The composer, W. H. B., was the writer of the Christmas Polka, which appeared in the Illustrated London News last year. His subjects are catching and pleasing; and the devotees of the light fantastic toe will be gratified with the sparkling and well-accented polkas which accompany the "Missletoe Schottische."

CHRISTMAS BOOKS.

Christmas, this year, has not produced the usual crop of gift-books. There is a blight upon these ephemera: the public is weary of inanities, whether presented in the form of Books of Beauty, or of imitations of Chimes and Christmas Carols. The Annuals are all but defunct. The once abundant supply of Keepsakes, Amulets, and Forget-Me-Nots has begun to fail, and the buds have dropped off, one by one, never to bloom again. Mr. Dickens's stories have no longer the gloss of novelty; and such a swarm of imitators have rushed into the field after him—not because they have had merit or talent, but because he has been successful—that the very name of a Christmas Book has become distasteful. Publishers, in default of other attractions at Christmas time, have taken to re-printing standard works; and, by the aid of fine paper and type, and the elegances of binding, have managed to make old friends look better than new, and to provide gift-books suitable for all tastes. Possibly, at some future time, novelty will again be in request, and a new form of annual story-book, or poem, will bud forth amid the winter snows, and draw the coin from the pockets of those who wish to make literary presents. Until that time, we suppose we must be contented with what we have got.

Fisher's Drawingroom Scrap-Book—the oldest and most gorgeous of the Annuals—has been already noticed in our columns; but we return to it again, in order that the subject of Christmas Books may not be rendered incomplete in this place by its omission from among its fellows. It appears this year under the editorship of Mr. Charles Mackay, who has succeeded the Hon. Mrs. Norton in that somewhat difficult post. In his hands we do not think its usefulness or its beauty likely to be diminished. The following verses afford a fair sample of its poetry:—

THE FLAG OF ENGLAND.

Raise high the Flag of England—
The banner of the brave!
But not to desolate the world,
To conquer or enslave;
And not for civil warfare,
As in the days of yore,
When British steel beneath its folds
Was bathed in British gore.
Each flaunting rag,
A nation's flag,
May boast of deeds like these;
But we men,
The free men,
Claim nobler victories.

Raise high the flag of England!
At sound the battle crash
Its only triumphs had been won,
An Englishman might blush.
If by aggressive armies
Its brightest fame was bought,
We'd groan to think our fathers wrong,
And deem its glories nought;
We'd weep to own
Our power misgrown,
And to the world proclaim,
That we men,
The free men,
Would earn a better fame.

Raise high the flag of England—
The meteor of the fight!
That never flash'd on battle-field
Except to lead the right;
That never graced the triumphs
Of Cæsars, or their hosts;
Or carried rapine and revenge
To unoffending coasts.
Unfurl it high
In purity—
The flag without a stain!
That we men,
The free men,
May swear by it again.

Wherever it has floated,
Upon the sea or land,
There world-adorning Trade has stretch'd
Her civilising hand;
There Enterprise has ventured
Her argosies high-piled;
There Science strew'd the earth with flowers,
And kindly Knowledge smiled.
O'er deeds like these,
In storm and breeze,
Our flag has been unfurl'd;
And we men,
The free men,
Can show them to the world.

It led our sons undaunted,
With earnest souls sublime,
To track the bounds of earthly space
Through every zone and clime.
Through savage lands death-haunted,
Where southern oceans roll,
Through swamps and deserts of the line,
Or ice-fields of the Pole.
Wherever Trade
Or Science bade,
Discovery turned her prow,
That we men,
The free men,
Might glory in it now.

Be these thy triumphs ever,
Oh banner of our sires!
May never war unfurl thy cross
To gleam above her fires.
May civil strife ne'er plant thee
Upon the plain or hill,
But Peace, Discovery, Love, and Joy,
Exalt and wave thee still.
O'er smiling downs,
And prosperous towns,
Float, banner, as of yore,
That we men,
The free men,
May love thee evermore.

The Keepsake is almost the sole survivor of its class. It bears this year upon its title-page the name of the Countess of Blessington, but was only partially edited by that lamented lady. The preface gives the following modest account, by her successor, of the circumstances under which her task was undertaken:—

"For some months previous to her lamented death, Lady Blessington had been contemplating the completion of this work, and had designed for its pages one of her latest productions. When the career of her under whose brilliant auspices this periodical had so often appeared was suddenly brought to a close, the proprietor, unwilling to keep back a volume which he felt was invested with so peculiar and melancholy an interest, ventured to trust its conclusion to one who, however deficient she may be in those qualifications which so eminently fitted Lady Blessington to produce a work of this nature, has at least had the advantage of being thoroughly acquainted with the system of management pursued by the late editress; who had even assisted in her labours, and who was in communication with the contributors whose names—many of them long known and highly esteemed in the literary world—appear in the following pages. Having bestowed her best attention on the present volume of the 'Keepsake,' she trusts it will be allowed to bear comparison with its predecessors; or that, if it be found in any degree wanting, the very peculiar circumstances under which it was brought out will be accepted by an indulgent public in extenuation of the deficiency."

The engravings are of various orders of merit. Among our favourites are "May Cumming," by J. B. Smith, a beautiful study of a Scottish lass, with her water-pitcher, standing at a mountain rill; "Elfrida," by E. Corbould; and the "Exile's Wife," by T. F. Marshall.

The list of contributors is large, but not eminent, and includes a swarm of the minnows of literature, with only one or two tritons among them. In the latter class we must rank Barry Cornwall and Mrs. S. C. Hall. Barry Cornwall's contribution is the most striking in the book: rough, but vigorous—prosaic, yet poetical—homely and affecting in its way—and with a touch of real tragedy:—

VERDICT, "FOUND DEAD."

About ten years ago, a paragraph appeared in some of the daily newspapers, giving an account of an Inquest held on the body of a young woman "found dead" in some obscure street or lane in London. The body was discovered frightfully emaciated, scantily clothed, and in a poor garret, which was entirely destitute of every article of furniture, comfort, or otherwise, except a few ragged love-letters, which she had preserved through every privation. According to the evidence, she had been at one time a person of considerable beauty, and had evidently died of hunger.

'Twas on a dark December's evening,
Loud the blast, and bitter cold;
Downwards came the whirling waters,
Deep and black the river roll'd;
Not a dog beneath the tempest—
Not a beggar upon his beat;
Wind and rain, and cold and darkness,
Swept through ev'ry desert street.

Muffled to the teeth, that evening
I was struggling in the storm,
Through pestilent lanes and hungry alleys;
Suddenly, an ancient form
Peer'd from out a gloomy doorway,
And, with trembling croak, it said,
"In the left-hand empty garret
You will find a woman—dead!

"Never stepp'd a finer creature,
When she was a simple maid;
But she did like many others—
Loved a man and was betray'd.
I have seen her in her carriage
Riding, diamonds in her hair;
And I've seen her starving (starving!
Do you hear?), and now—she's there!"

Up the worn and slippery staircase
With a quicken'd pulse I sprung;
Famine, Filth, and mean Despair
Round about the darkness hung:
No kind vision met my glances—
Friend or helper of the poor,
So the crazy room I enter'd,
And look'd down upon the floor.

There, on the rough and naked boards,
A long, gaunt, wasted figure lay,
Murder'd in its youth by Hunger—
All its beauty—wrinkled clay.
Life's poor wants had left her nothing—
Clothes nor fuel, food nor bed;
Nothing, save some ragged letters,
Whereon lay the ghastly head!

Nothing! yet, what more could Pity
Crave for one about to die,
Than sweet words from one she worship'd
(Sweet, though every word a lie)?
In the morning of her pleasure,
In the midnight of her pain,
They were all her wealth, her comfort,
Treasured, ay, and not in vain.

And with her they now lie mouldering—
And a date upon a stone
Telleth where (to end the story)
Love's poor outcast sleeps alone.
Mourn not; for at length she sleepeth
The soft slumber of the dead,
Resting on her loved love-letters—
Last, fit pillow for her head!

Mrs. Hall's story of the "Wild Rose of Rosstrevor" is beautifully and simply told. We wish it were not too long for quotation in our columns. The other articles are of the ultra-mediocre school, and require no further notice.

The Court Album is a nondescript volume, neither annual nor periodical, and looking as little like a Christmas book in anything save gilding and binding, as can well be imagined. It contains fourteen portraits of the female aristocracy, with short prose notices, written at, rather than upon, the lovely subjects. The ladies whose portraits are presented are, the Marchioness of Ormonde, Miss Georgina Lygon, Miss Edith Mercer, Lady Clementina Villiers, Lady Elizabeth Villiers, Lady Adela Ibbetson, the Countess of Essex, Mrs. Charles Cavendish, Miss Ogilvie, Princess Nicholas Esterhazy, the Viscountess Drumlanrig, Lady Frances Russell, the Hon. Caroline Dawson, and the Hon. Matilda Paget. The English aristocracy, that can boast among its members such flowers of loveliness as these, deserves the character it has acquired, of being the handsomest aristocracy in the world. The letterpress which accompanies the exquisite portrait of the fascinating Princess Esterhazy will show how little this beautiful volume owes to its editor, and how difficult it is to write aside of a subject—at it, and not of it. The extract affords a fair sample of the literature of the volume:—

PRINCESS NICHOLAS ESTERHAZY.

For the world—we mean the world which lies without the latitude and longitudes of informed society—the idea connected with the name of Esterhazy is quite curious enough to warrant its being transfixed and pinned down upon paper, as one selects a specimen of entomological eccentricity. The leading notion is "something about diamonds." Othello's barbarian estimate of the way to make a valuable world—"of one entire and perfect chrysolite" (a thought which always appeared to us as having slipped, by mistake, out of the part of Shylock), resembles the ordinary opinion in that matter. The tradition of the "jacket of jackets," so full of precious stones so previously appended, that "a thousand pounds' worth drop off every time its wearer puts it on," is as firmly fixed in the popular mind as the legend of the telescope-maker's mark half-way up the south front of Somerset House—an object which all London believes is the watch of a man who was repairing the building, who fell, and who, being saved by his chain catching a nail, left the article as a "votive offering." Napoleon d'Abrantes did something towards confirming this faith when he wrote his lively narrative of the procession of the Fête Dieu, at Vienna. "One of the finest objects in this ceremony is the detachment of the Hungarian Guard, commanded by Prince Esterhazy. Nothing can give an idea of the pomp of this corps—nothing can make you understand the appearance of its Chief. All the diamonds of the house of Esterhazy, entailed thereon like an estate, sparkled that day on the Prince, as all those upon the house of Cadaval upon St. George's hat at Lisbon. His costume, which is the national Hungarian one, consists of a pelisse and loose cloak, each plate of which is of fine pearls, and every button a diamond: his horse's martingale is one stream of diamonds." And then another legend is rife, which states that a Scotch nobleman, showing the ambassador his estate, said, "I have four thousand sheep." "But you have mentioned the number of my shepherds," was the reply. Uniting these ideas with a general impression of awe and admiration with which the brilliant career of a successful European diplomatist inspires the public, the result is, that any nobleman who for years may bear the name of Esterhazy, will be looked upon as the minister who ought to have been present when Aladdin's mother brought the baskets full of huge jewels to the Sultan, as such a counsellor would first have diplomatically arranged a wager of dropping alternate diamonds, stone against stone (as the Beggar of Bethnal green did with money), for his daughter's hand; and would, secondly, have magnificently flung down showers of luminous legends from his own treasure-house, enriching his master, and utterly bewildering the base-born pretender to a Royal alliance.

And there may be some being in public faith, after all—there usually is; for, "rich jewels, diamonds, cash, and credit" are at the illustrious and most ancient house of Esterhazy, on a wealthy beyond a count, in nobler jewels—intellect, high honour, and unswerving loyalty. It is even less necessary to add that the house of Esterhazy has been still further enriched by an alliance with the noble English family of Jersey.

The Babes in the Wood, a reprint of the touching old ballad, is a reissue of a beautiful little volume that made its first appearance last year, and excited much admiration for the charming tenderness and simplicity of its illustrations. They are from the hand of the Marchioness of Waterford, and reflect much honour on her Ladyship's taste, feeling, and accomplishment. The book is quite a gem of typography and embellishment, and is sure to become a favourite wherever it is known. The illustrations have been executed by Mr. Brandard, from thirteen stones, so as to produce the requisite effect, without one touch of hand workmanship.

The Book of Ruth is issued by the same publisher. It is a black-letter reprint of that affecting book of Holy Writ, with profuse illustrations by the Lady Augusta Cadogan. The designs are very effective.

The Episodes of Insect Life, by Acheta Domestica, is not, strictly speaking, a Christmas book, but it is something better. It is a book for all seasons, and will be as welcome to all true lovers of nature in midsummer as in midwinter. Its design is a happy one. The author, or authoress (we think we are not wrong in attributing the work to a lady) enters into the closest arcana of insect life; and, by exaggerating their proportions in reference to the world in which they move, makes us acquainted with their habits in a manner as original as it is charming. There is no formidable array of scientific nomenclature to repel the reader—all is clear, simple, and intelligible, and we feel that in such companionship solitude is populous

"With fairy-form'd and many-colour'd things
That innocently open their glad wings,
Fearless and full of life."

What, for instance, can be better than the opening chapter on the Lady-bird?

"THE LADY-BIRD OF OUR CHILDHOOD.'

Give me leave
To eat my fill, and I will through and through Cleanse the foul surface of the infected leaf.

"Many who exterminate spiders as a matter of merit, crush earwigs without remorse, and hold Black-beetles in abhorrence, look with involuntary kindness on the little red-beetle styled the Lady-bird. For this especial favour she stands indebted partly to her pretty spotted gown, and partly to her being associated with the earliest recollections of our childhood. A word or two, en passant, on nursery rhymes, on that one at least which is pertinent to our subject:—

'Lady-bird! Lady-bird! fly away home,
Your house is on fire and your children alone!'

Now, in reality, instead of flying to the rescue of her own innocents, her business is most probably to murder and devour a score of other innocents, clustered together on a hop or rose-leaf; or, in other words, to make a luscious meal of Aphides or Honey-dew Insects, of whom her Lady-birdship is exceedingly fond—fond as a wolf of a flock of sheep.

"So stands the fact; and the nursery fiction may, perhaps, in these matter-of-fact times, be impugned for giving a notion purely imaginary concerning the Lady-bird's 'house and children,' and her probable course and business when released from her captor's grasp. Yet what matters it? The simple couplet may implant a wrong notion, but that is soon corrected; and it may implant, also, a right feeling likely to abide. It urges to humanity at the expense of selfishness; to set at liberty the pretty prisoner, of which the childish captor is so proud, that it may go to the rescue of its distressed little ones. Such, at least, is the spirit in which we imagine this address to the Lady-bird to have been originally dictated to some little child long since grown grey and mouldered into earth.

"The Lady-bird, or Coccinella, has many claims upon our kindness in addition to those which it possesses as the favourite of our childhood. Of our manhood it is also the useful friend, however little we may so regard it; and it is, par excellence, a friend in all weathers. It greets us in early spring, enjoys the summer with us, stays by us through the fall of the leaf, and even in mid-winter can emerge from its hybernal retreat, as if on purpose to remind us of more cheerful seasons, past and to come. Perhaps on account of its hardihood—an endowment for which it is no doubt in some measure indebted to its highly varnished covering—the Lady-bird has acquired amongst our Catholic neighbours the appellations of Vache à Dieu, and Bête de la Vierge, as though it were a creature especially favoured by providential care. These names, however, are somewhat more applicable if the insect be regarded as one of those little, but not unimportant agents whereby the king Creator is accustomed to confer benefits; and that for such we are indebted to the Coccinella is a fact with which every gardener—every one at least who knows how to distinguish between friend and foe—is practically acquainted. He sees his rose trees and honeysuckles, and other favourites of his care, laden with blight insects (the Aphides, or Plant-lice, whose history we need not now repeat); and on finding their multitudes gradually thinned, he knows that he is mainly indebted for their riddance to exterminating Lady-birds, which, aided by two or three allies, confer on the hop-grower a similar benefit.

"By entomologists, the Lady-bird is regarded as a beautiful example of his favourite order of Beetles (Coleoptera); when the pencil of nature furnishes him with a rare or newly-colored variety, he looks upon it as a prize. It was the striking prettiness of a black and yellow Lady-bird, added to its extraordinary vitality in flying away after an immersion of four-and-twenty hours in ardent spirits, which first attracted the attention of Kirby, and led him, for the amusement and benefit of thousands, to adopt the study of insects. Yet of the millions who are well enough acquainted, by sight, with this common Beetle, so gaily distinguished from the darker brethren of its order, how few know a single word about its history, or suspect that, besides being a pretty, it is a useful, little animal.

"Nearly everybody has a knowledge, more or less accurate, of the transformations undergone by Moths and Butterflies (the Lepidoptera of naturalists), but not many, perhaps, are aware that most other insects go through similar changes. Those of the Lady-bird are very curious; and the difference of form between its long fat figure in the first or larva stage of being, and its half-spherical shape as a winged Beetle, is scarcely less striking than that betwixt the Butterfly and the Caterpillar from which it has expanded."

The chapter on "Insect Magicians" affords another proof of the skill with which the author of this volume contrives to convey information:—

"INSECT MAGICIANS.

"Lo! at their fairy touch at once springs forth
A magic growth of seeming fruits and flowers,
Fair to the eye, and animate within
By more than vegetative life.

"The day approaches on which oak-apples, bearing their gilded honours, will perpetuate the memory of those their ancestral fruits, which hung, in company with a hunted Monarch, on the tree of Boscobel. Whether dress'd in tinsel, or adorned by Nature's painting, these apples of Royalty are pretty things to look at; and against the coming anniversary (the 29th of May), which will bring the a witnin the reach of all, it may be worth inquiring whether they have aught within deserving notice; or whether, as with the Merry Monarch's self, they are to be estimated only for their outward bravery.

"Pleasant to the taste these fair fruits are not (as well we know by bitter experiences of childhood); so, not daring to bite, let us pull one of them asunder, or, dividing it with a knife, reveal its secrets. We now see, surrounded and bounded by a mugy pulp, a set of cells, each with its solitary living occupant, for whose safe keeping, and that of his fellows, this fruit-like tenement was called into existence, not by the labours of a trifling artificer, but by the touch of a flying fairy. The insect tenants of these pulpy palaces are not unlike, in one condition of their being, to the scions of Royal houses. It is not unpossible that before one of them has attained to the majority of its winged estate, all may be despoiled of their inheritance by a host of usurping parasites, such as, in palaces reared by hands, have often enacted a resembling part.

"The above description of a common oak-apple, its Gall-fly occupant, and Ichneumon intruder, may seem over-fanciful; but in writing of Galls, our pen may possibly be carried from the dry land of simple fact by some spirit of fiction in our ink—an infusion, it is likely, of gallnuts, the produce of the East, the very region of romance. With graver pens than ours fancies would seem, indeed, to have been the very growth of Galls; for, descanting on their origin, an Italian entomologist, an observant naturalist—one who waged war, moreover, with popular fallacies—imagines that Oak-apples and Galls were animated, nay, brought into being, by a soul—not an animal, but a vegetative and sensitive one—in the plant itself. To account for the mysterious entrance of an insect into the centre of an impenetrable ball, he might just as well have adopted, and slightly modified to suit his purpose, the no less imaginative notion of some learned Jewish Rabbins, who believed, or not believing, taught that human souls transmigrate after death into leaves and buds. 'For certain crimes,' they would have it, 'a soul goes into the leaf of a tree; the wind then rises, and, shaking it about, causes great torment. This punishment ceases when the leaf falls to the ground: though sometimes, indeed, such a soul passes from leaf to leaf through several.'

"Before we throw these learned bubbles entirely away, suppose we, in sport, toss up the last of them, just to make with it another random hit at the origin of life in the oak-apple. Let us fancy, with the sagacious Rabbins, an erring soul incarcerate within a single leaf, or wandering from one green prison to another. A portion of its guilt thus expiated, we may imagine it in remittance of punishment, and, as a first step towards restoration, permitted to throw aside its mere vegetable skin, and to put on an animal form (albeit one of the very lowest), as the grub, or even egg of a gall-nut insect. Under a transition so important as the recovery of an animal shape, however insignificant, could a poor soul do otherwise than cause a most irregular disturbance amongst the contiguous vegetable juices—which, forthwith beginning to ferment, an i rise, and consolidate around it, soon constitute again its vegetable prison—a prison of no larger dimensions than the narrow circle of an oak apple, or a currant-leaf gall."

We will simply add, that the illustrations are as interesting as the letterpress; and we leave the Episodes of Insect Life to the popularity that is sure to attend them.

The Strange Adventures of Kit Bam, Mariner, by Mrs. Cowden Clarke, is a book of last year; but it is likely, we should think, to be a favourite as long as "Gulliver" or "Sinbad the Sailor." That is saying a great deal for its numerous merits. Kit is sure to recommend himself to the young.

"'Twere a pity
To stint the wonders to the known, and leave
Imagination not a world to conquer."

So say the notes to the volume. We entirely agree in its wisdom, and think the authoress deserves the gratitude of all boys and girls for her story; and of grown-up people too, if they would only be modest enough to avow that they delight in such pleasant and instructive mixtures of truth and fiction.

The Lady's Album of Fancy Work is not exactly a book for the reading public; but the working public, or that portion of it whose nimble fingers supply the lords of the creation with the nick-nacks that affection loves to give and receive, will no doubt find it valuable. The following extract from the preface is the only passage likely to interest those who read. The workers will find interest in every page.

"The exercise of the needle has been from time immemorial a favourite occupation with the females of every country; and the allusions to the subject from cotemporary historians and poets evince that this feminine pursuit was regarded with approval and respect. The invention of embroidery is ascribed to the Phrygians; and we also learn from ancient authors, that the Sidonians particularly excelled in this beautiful art of decorative needlework; it must have also made considerable progress in this country soon after the Norman Conquest, from the accounts that are recorded of the robes embroidered in gold and silver, generally worn by persons of rank at that period. The Bayeau Tapestry also remains to us as a lasting trophy of the skill and industry of Queen Matilda and the ladies of her court, and is not more interesting as a historical record than as a specimen of the needlework of the mediæval age. The introduction of knitting into this country is comparatively of modern date—so late as the middle of the sixteenth century. The invention of the art is usually ascribed to the Spaniards; though the Scotch, with some appearance of justice, assert their claims as its originators. Like all inventions, knitting has undergone wonderful improvement since it was first simply used for stocking-making; and the value attached to stockings so made may be judged from the fact, that a pair were presented as a fitting present from one sovereign to another. A pair of knitted hose was amongst the gifts received by that lover of finery, Queen Elizabeth; but no record remains to show if these were preserved with the three thousand robes which were found after her death in the wardrobe of England's Maiden Queen.

"This love for domestic occupations, which is so admirable a trait in the character of our country women, has often been a subject of gratulation; and that female ingenuity and skill may continue to be employed in embellishing the drawingroom, rather than in directing the political intrigues of the salon, must be desired by all interested in the preservation of those domestic attributes which give so pleasing a charm to home, and secure the comfort of all around.

"The taste which her Majesty Queen Victoria evinces for feminine pursuits and occupations has naturally exercised considerable influence in preserving habits of industry amongst her female subjects; and to her Majesty's example, and that of the amiable Queen Dowager, may be ascribed that the labours of the English embroideress are now justly appreciated, and her work esteemed as in no respects inferior to the produce of foreign ingenuity."

What have we we here? Verily, "Old Friends with New Faces"—one-and-twenty stories of our childhood—with more than one hundred illustrations by John Absolon and Harrison Weir, under the title of "A Treasury of Pleasure—Books for Young People," and seasonable as a Christmas addition to the nursery or play-room. Here are Little Bo-Peep, Simple Simon, Mother Goose, the House that Jack Built, Cock Robin, Mother Hubbard, the Three Bears, Fox and Geese, Tom the Piper's Son, Goody Two Shoes, and other little histories, too numerous for us to mention. Some bibliographical skill has been shown by including in the collection The Wonderful Story of Henny-Penny, and The Robin's Yule Song—which are told by nurses in Scotland; and Southey's version of the story of the Three Bears. The woodcuts are not the grotesque and unlifelike designs formerly common in books of this class, but they are pretty and graceful realities. The men, women, and children, drawn by Mr. Absolon, wear the costume of the last century, but are pleasant people; and the quadrupeds and birds (always an excellent feature in children's books) are from the well-practised pencil of Mr. Weir. There is, by the way, in both classes of subjects a rural and picturesque character of simplicity—the fittest charm for childhood. The binding of the book is an elegant design, in blue and gold, by Mr. Owen Jones.

BLINDMAN'S-BUFF.—DRAWN BY KENNY MEADOWS.—(SEE PAGE 418.)

FORFEITS.—DRAWN BY KENNY MEADOWS.—(SEE PAGE 418.)

THE FEAR OF THE WORLD;

OR, LIVING FOR APPEARANCES.

BY THE BROTHERS MAYHEW,

Authors of "The Greatest Plague of Life," &c.

CHAPTER I.

"THEN! seulement une sole frite! C'est bienheureux, ma chère, que je n'a pas demandé de mes amis à dîner. Tu auras du me le dire ce matin."

Mr. Wellesley Nicholls always made it a point of speaking to his wife in French upon such subjects as he did not wish to come to the servant's ears; and, upon this occasion, owing to the presence of the page-boy Parker, who, in his white cotton gloves, stood at the sideboard, waiting at their early three o'clock dinner, Mr. Wellesley Nicholls translated into that language the feelings he experienced on lifting up the cover before him, and finding only a fried sole, which he knew to be the usual family apology for cold meat.

Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls not being so expert a linguist as her husband, objected to argue the point in a foreign tongue; so answering simply "Oui," she told the page to pull down the blinds, and that he need not stop, as she would ring when he was wanted; and that, if any one called, they had gone for a drive in the Park.

The boy left, and she proceeded:—"As for telling you, my dear, that we should only have a make-up dinner to-day, why, of course, I thought you would recollect we were going to the Chief Baron's to-night, and I never dreamt that you would be so foolish as to bring anybody home with you. Besides, surely cold meat ought to be good enough for us when we are by ourselves."

"My dear Sara," answered Wellesley, "I'm not grumbling about the cold meat, only I can't be expected to carry all these arrangements in my head, and you should have told me, my love; for suppose I had brought any one home, now, how pretty it would have looked!"

"As for that," returned Sara, "we might have said it was lunch. But I should have had to take all my hair out, and a pretty figure I should have looked by the time we got to the Chief Baron's. I never knew any one so thoughtless as you, Wellesley dear."

Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls had the misfortune to be what is called a showy woman—that is to say, she was tall and stontish, of a dark complexion, and had a well-rounded shoulder, which her husband loved at evening parties to behold in contrast with a black velvet dress; and, moreover, she was unlucky enough to be blest with a remarkably fine head of black hair: so that, for the satisfaction of allowing her friends to see her ringlets twisting nearly down to her waist, she passed the better part of her existence in curl-papers; in which, indeed, she would have fainted to have been discovered.

This fine head of hair and that well-rounded shoulder—now nearly ten years ago—had won the heart of Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, a young barrister, with an allowance—till his profession enabled him to dispense with it—of £500 a year from his father, Sir Giles Nicholls, who held a lucrative Government situation at Newcastle upon-Tyne, and had been knighted, owing to the lucky accident of his having, as Mayor of that town, been called upon to present some "humble and loyal address" to the King at some particular period. As the only son and heir of the Knight, Mr. Wellesley Nicholls thought it his duty to uphold the dignity of the family in as noble and fashionable a manner as he could; and, though his friendly briefs and motions-of-course only enabled him to defray his clerk's wages and rent of chambers, yet the showy charms of his wife, and the paternal title, had induced him to keep up an establishment, and launch out into parties, in a style that had long ago made his friends set him down as a man of at least treble as much as his income really was.

Indeed, the main object of Mr. Wellesley Nicholl's life was to be considered by what he called "the world" as a much richer, nobler, and worthier man than he had any pretensions to be. His whole life was one round of schemes and tricks to gain the applause of "the world." He furnished his house, not for himself, but for "the world;" he kept servants for "the world;" he clothed himself, his wife and children, for "the world." He gave champagne parties for the praise of "the world," and stinted himself, when at home, in fear of it. He had married his showy wife to gain the admiration of "the world," and had cut her humble relations through the dread of its sneers. He was publicly generous and charitable, while, secretly, he was mean, false, and unjust. He was ever trying to plate truth with appearances. In a word, he lived and lied for "the world," and "the world" returned it by laughing at him for his pains. And to-day Mr. Wellesley Nicholls has drawn down the blinds for fear that "the world" might come and look in at the window, to enquire what he was eating for dinner.

While they were still busy with their solitary fried sole, they were alarmed by a double knock at the door.

"There, now! Who can that be?" exclaimed Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls. "But it is always the case: if you happen to have a dinner you're all ashamed of, half a dozen people are sure to call. Try if you can see who it is, Wellesley."

Mr. Nicholls accordingly advanced to the window, and, pulling the blind cautiously aside, endeavoured to command a complete view of the door-step, but in vain; while Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls, when she heard the page coming up, opened the parlour door a little way, as gently as she could, and said in a whisper, "Hush—ah—sh! Mind, Parker, we're gone out for a drive in the Park;" and then, closing it, she stood listening at it, begging her husband, for goodness' sake, not to make any noise.

All that Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls was able to catch, however, was the sound of the door closing and of footsteps ascending the stairs, until, at length, she plainly heard them treading overhead.

"Why, I declare if he hasn't shown them up into the drawing-room!" then cried the horror-stricken Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls. "That boy must be half foolish! I thought we should never be able to keep him long. You must go up, my dear. I wouldn't be seen in these papers for I don't know what," she added, with a sly glance at the looking-glass.

"It's impossible, Sara; I really can't go up, smelling of fish and porter as I must. It's impossible; I really can't."

At this juncture the page Parker entered.

"I thought your mistress told you we had gone out for a drive in the Park?" began Mr. Wellesley Nicholls.

"I told the gentleman so, sir," answered the boy; "but he said he would step in, and wait till you came back, sir."

"Did he give you any card?" asked Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls.

"No, ma'am. He said the name wasn't of any consequence," returned the boy.

"What kind of a looking gentleman is he?" inquired Mr. Wellesley Nicholls.

"He a'nt exactly a gentleman, sir," replied the page; "he's a countryfied farmer-looking person, in top-boots, if you please, sir. He asked to see missus, sir."

"Y a-t-ce que vous connaissez quelqu'un comme celui-là?" asked Mr. Wellesley Nicholls of Mrs. W. N.

"That will do, Parker; you can go," said Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls, avoiding a reply in French. And when Parker had gone, she added in a low voice, "The only person I can imagine it to be is the butcher, my dear."

"The butcher!" echoed Mr. Wellesley Nicholls. "Impossible, my dear! He could never have the impudence to come with a double knock to my door." And, remembering that his father was a Knight, he jerked his head back with becoming dignity.

"There's no answering for the airs that tradesmen give themselves now-a-days," returned Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls. "He's been after his money two or three times before, and behaved very insolently; only I didn't like to annoy you, my dear, by telling you of it at the time."

"Ah! but you should, my love!" peevishly replied Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, "you should. You forget I've my pecuniary arrangements to make, and you see the difficulties you get me into now, by keeping the applications of these people from me. For I don't like, my dear, to overdraw my account at the banker's, and I'm sure my balance there at present is not large enough to pay him. You must go up yourself, Sara, and get him to wait until the next quarter comes round. For I know, if I go, I shall get knocking the fellow down, and it's better to avoid such scenes before the servants."

Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls prepared to comply with her husband's request, by arranging her cap in the glass, and then went up-stairs, planning to herself what excuse she could make.

"Hush—sh—sh! Mind, Parker, we're gone for a drive in the Park."

When she entered the room her annoyance was in no way relieved on finding that the supposed butcher was none other than her only brother, Farmer Reuben Marsh, of Farnham, Surrey. Not that she had any dislike to her brother: indeed, it would have been strange if she had; for it was he who had supported her after her father's death, and who had cheerfully shared with her the few comforts of his home at a time when, owing to the embarrassed state of the family affairs, Reuben had found it difficult to keep the farm in his hands. But his manners and habits were so much at variance with those of the circle in which his sister now moved, that she and her husband were in constant dread lest it should be known that the fashionable Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls were in any way akin to the unpolished Reuben Marsh.

"What, Reuben! is it you, dear? Oh, I am so glad to see you!" she cried, running up to him. "Well, this is an unexpected pleasure, to be sure," and she kissed him in a manner that showed that she no longer relished the rustic perfume of the farm-yard that hung about his clothes.

"Ah! I knew my plump sister Sally would be glad to see a body again—I knew thee thee would, girl," answered Reuben, returning his sister's embrace with such hearty warmth that the little lace cap she had pinned on to the back of her head fell on the carpet. "Why, thee beest twice as buxom, Sally, as when I see'd thee afore, at the time I was up in London for the cattle show—now five year ago, that it be. Well, I thought I'd take thee by surprise, gal. But that boy of yours all over buttons, as if thee'd fastened his jacket on with brass-headed nails like, said thee'd gone for a drive in the Park, and thee wast at home after all. Why, what a lying young rogue he be, to be sure!"

"He didn't know you, Reuben, and we are out to all visitors to-day," answered Mrs. Nicholls.

"What! out when thee beest at home, Sally?" exclaimed her brother.

"No, but you don't understand these things, Reuben," she replied. "It's the fashion, when you don't want to see any of your friends, to say that you are out. They know what one means."

"Then, if thy friends know thee beest lying, gal, what a fool thee must be not to tell the truth. And pretty friends they must be, too, that thee don't care to see! Ah, Sally, Sally, when thee wast at Farnham, thee'dst always a bite and a sup for thy friends, instead of an untruth to turn them from the door with."

"Yes, but, Reuben, suppose you're not dressed to receive company," she continued.

"Why, then, dang it!" answered Reuben, "can't thee ask the folk to sit down whilst thee goest and cleanest thyself, as thee hast done, gal, many a time and oft before now?"

"Yes, but in London, Reuben," she added, "we can't do as you can in the country. You see, one's friends judge so from appearances here."

"'Pearances! Yes I know you mean the look of the thing like," returned Reuben. "Now, I'll tell thee what it be, Sally. T'other day I went to Farmer Griffiths—him as bought our black cow the year afore you left us: well, I see'd on the table in their best parlour, you know, a beautiful orange—quite a pictur' it was, with such a beautiful gold coat of his own, surely! The old gentleman see'd me looking at it, and says he, 'Will you have an orange, Reuben?' 'Thank you,' says I, 'I don't know as I won't, if I been't a robbing on you.' So I takes it up, and when I comes to try it, dang'd if I didn't nearly break a tooth You'll laugh, like the old gentleman did, when I tell you, for, bless you, it warn't nothing but stone! So, that's what comes, you see, of trusting to 'pearances. Now, listen to me, Sally, if thee goest choosing thy friends by the fine looks of the cloth of their coats, they'll serve thee as the orange did thy brother Reuben; for, when thee comest to try them, thee'lt find them nothing but stone after all. So, look about thee, gal! look about thee!"

"Yes, yes, I understand," answered Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls, growing fidgetty at her brother's lengthened visit, and fearing every minute that he would be asking to see her husband. "Well, now, dear Reuben, that you are here, I hope you're come to stop. Wellesley would so like to see you when he comes home."

"Oh, then, he's out too, eh?" replied Reuben. "Ah, I know what you mean now. It's the fashion, as thee said, when thee doesn't want to see thy friends, to say thee'rt out. I am getting quite a London man, you see, Sally."

"Why, what a strange person you're grown, Reuben," remarked Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls. "You will take everything wrongly. Now, do let me order something for you, if it's only a glass of wine and a biscuit."

"No, thank thee, Sally, girl," returned Reuben. "You see, I passed my word to dine at the Black Ram with neighbour Williams, as stood godfather, you know, to my little Tommy. And, to tell thee the truth, I should not be much at my ease here, for I be quite afraid to move for the crockery and things."

"Oh, you needn't be frightened of that, Reuben," answered Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls, "for we don't take our meals in this room."

"Ah! then, thee beest frightened to use it thyself, eh?" returned Reuben. "Well, Sally, it be plaguey fine, gal, sartinly. They say a body had better not spile the ship for a hap'orth of tar; but I be afraid, lass, thee beest a-spiling her here with too much on't. And look thee, Sally," he continued, lifting up the brown holland covering to the ottoman on which he was seated, "where be the use of these grand satin covers, if thee beest obliged to hide them under these here pinafores, eh?"

"You see they are too good for every-day use, Reuben," answered Mrs Wellesley Nicholls, "and so we keep them covered up; that is what is called a housewife's prudence."

"Well, but it seems a queer kind of prudence," he returned, "to have two covers to do the work of one. I always thought that was what folks meant by extravagance."

"Yes, but don't you see, Reuben," she continued, "the one is for every-

She looked much younger than when he had married her day use, as I said before, and the other for grand occasions—when our friends come."

"Then London folks must be very generous people," replied her brother, "to put them-selves to so much expense for their friends. Why, they tell me London were a wicked place, but I find it be quite another sort of a thing. Yes. I be sure on it now; because afore thee came up, Sally, I were a-looking at this book here about the Orphans' Asylum, and I see thee hast given the poor babes five guineas for these four years past; but thee spells thy name without cre an 'h' now Sal-y; what be that for?"

"Oh, that's only one of Wellesley's fancies," she answered, smiling, whilst inwardly she writhed under her brother's rude sarcasms. But you surely can't be going to find fault with my subscribing to the Orphans' Asylum?"

"No, Sally, gal, I be main glad to see thee do it, and find that after thee has done so much here for thy friends, thee hast got summit left for the poor fatherless things; though it strikes me I should have loved thee better, gal, if, among all thy charity, thee hadst offered to help a body with even a pound or two towards poor father's debts. I've had a hard time on it, Sally, to pay them all; but, though I would not have taken your husband's money, yet I should have blest both of ye for doing all ye could for the honour of the poor old man when he were dead and gone. It were a deuce of a struggle, Sally, but I ha' got through it all now, thank goodness, and paid the last three and twenty pounds two years come Michaelmas; so that thee needn't be ashamed of thy relations now, Sally, thee needn't."

"Wel, but Reuben," she said, kissing him, "I am sure I was never ashamed of my relations. But calm yourself, and don't talk so loud, there's a good brother, for I know you wouldn't like the servants to hear all about dear father's difficulties."

"No, sister Sally, not for the poor old man's sake, I wouldn't. Now, listen to me, dear," he continued, taking her hand; "maybe, I've been rough and hard with thee, but I was angered, gal. When thee lived with I and Molly, at Farnham, thee wast a different lass. Then thee spoke as thee thought, and thee loved thy brother as much as he loved thee, and thee were proud on him for a l he had battled through, and used to tell my Molly there wer'nt a squire round to be put beside him. And when counsellor Nicholls asked me to gie thee to him, though I felt loth to part with thee, Sally girl, yet I thought ye loved one another; and as he had twice the means that I had to make thee happy, I gave thee away to him, and that's now near upon ten years ago. And since then I've seed thee three times, and each of them were of my own seeking; and thy husband but once, and thy little ones ne'er a once at all."

"Yes, but, dear Reuben," she answered, with downcast eyes, not liking to look him in the face, "you know when you called you would never stay till they could be brought down to you."

"No, Sally, girl, I never were at my ease in thy house yet," he added, "for thee always put thy brother in a grand gilt, cold room, by him-self, and true wast a quarter of an hour before thee came to him, and then thee seemed so stuck up like, that I were almost freez'd when I kissed thee; and though my Molly always sent thee the fattest of the turkeys and good things at Christmas-tide, yet thy letters were only full of thanks, and never said a word about coming to see a bo-by."

"Yes; but you forget, Reuben," she interrupted, whilst a tear trickled down her cheeks, "my husband's busi ess always keeps him in London."

"Well, Sally, g'rl," he continued, kissing her, "I'm glad to hear it; I feared it were otherwise. But even now, when I come to see thee, thee meet me with a lie on thy door-step, and set me in a room with ruin written in gilt letters all about it, and covered over with a fine carpet that I be afeard to put my hobnails upon; so that a body can't help thinking how long it will be afore I see it with an auction bill on it, hanging out of the window. There! thee needn't start, girl: they be hard words to fling at thee, but they be the truest and the kindest meant; there's heard thee two years; for I know what £500 a year can do better than thee canst. Tell me, Sally, and I'm as sartain sure as if I seed the bills, that more than half these gewgaws be not paid for; and that thee beest like the play-actors, dressed in a lot of finery that don't belong to thee."

"Mr. Nicholls, Reuben, will attend to his own affairs," she answered, rising; "and perhaps it would be better if other people followed his example."

"Ah! I know what thee meanest," he continued; "but I've reproached myself for not warning thee many a year before; for, depend on it, no good will come on it, gal. Ah! poor Sally, Sally, thee'st got a bitter winter to go through, and maybe that thee'll be glad to come down then to see thy brother. There! there! come, give us thy hand, gal, for Reuben, though he do say it, be the best friend thee'st got in the world; so don't let us part otherwise."

Kissing her even more fondly and ruddy than when he entered, he left the room; whilst Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls haughtily rang the bell for the page to usher her brother out; and then, sinking on a sofa, the storm that she had kept suppressed within her burst out, and she sobbed as though she stid had a heart to break.

CHAPTER II.

Mr. Wellesley Nicholls—who, during the preceding scene in the drawingroom, had been vainly endeavouring, in the parlour, to inter st himself with "the morning paper," while his whole attention was fixed upon the angry tone of the visitor's voice overhead—felt considerably relieved when he heard the bell ring to announce the intruder's departure, and the street-door slam to, in confirmation of it. And then Mr. Nicholls became excessively impatient to learn what arrangement his wife had come to with the supposed butcher; but, finding she did not come down, and not hearing her move about, he grew alarmed, and ran upstairs to inquire into the matter.

He was surprised to find his wife in tears; and, taking her hand, said, in a tender voice, "Why, Sara, my love, what is the meaning of all this? Has that scoundrel been insulting you? Why not have called me, eh?"

"It was not the butcher," answered Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls, from beneath her handkerchief; "it was my brother Reuben; and he's been going on in such a dreadful way at everything in the house. He said we were going to rack and ruin."

"Your brother Reuben, was it? And he said we were going to rack and ruin, did he?" returned Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, between his teeth. "Very like a brother, indeed. And, even if we were, I should like to know what the deuce Mr. Reuben Marsh has got to do with it?"

"And so I said to him; and he went away in a passion," replied Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls.

"Perhaps it would be better if he stopped in the country, along with his pigs. What does he want prying here?" inquired Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, indignantly. "If he knew anything of society, he must have seen, from our never returning his visits, that we didn't wish to have anything to do with him."

"He said you had always avoided him," continued the sobbing Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls. "He seems to be dreadfully altered of late. I declare he did nothing but find fault from the very moment he came in."

"Of course, the boor did," continued Mr. Nicholls. "He'd have been smooth-faced enough to me, though, I'll be bound. I suppose you objected to let him spit in the bright stove, or else wanted to smoke his clay pipe up here—eh? A low, beer-drinking, chaw-bacon farmer! It's no reason, because I made you my wife, that I should be obliged to marry the whole family. And he shall see that I won't, either; for I'll take good care that he never sets foot in my house again."

"You are forgetting yourself, Wellesley," exclaimed Mrs. Nicholls, at the same time rising and shutting the door which her husband had left ajar. "My brother Reuben may be plain-spoken; but he is not one, nor is he a chaw-bacon. And, even supposing he were, I do not think that it exactly becomes his sister's husband to publish it to all the servants. Besides, his greatest enemy could not say that he doesn't mean well."

"Means well!" exclaimed Mr. Wellesley Nicholls: "certainly, and so does your whole Indian savage when he-a—when he-a—but no matter; we had better change the subject, my dear. Of course, your brother Reuben, having been bred in the country, can know nothing of London life; and when he comes up here from his humble fireside, and sees a house elegantly furnished, I dare say it does strike him as extravagance. But you know as well as I do, my dear, that, from the position we hold in society, there is not a single article here that we could dispense with; and that these looking-glasses, and ottomans, and tables, and china ornaments, and what not, are as necessary to us, in our station, as his ploughs, and carts, and horses are to him."

"Of course they are, Wellesley dear," answered Mrs. Nicholls. "And, besides, I should like to know how Reuben can tell whether we can afford it or not."

"Yes, my dear, it's the way of the vulgar world," replied her husband, with a look of disgust. "People always will know more about your own affairs than you do yourself. Now, you are as well aware as I am, that our greatest, indeed our only serious, expense has been our furnishing; and, thank goodness, we have got as elegant a house over our heads as any of our acquaintances; and, what is more, I am proud to say it is nearly all paid for. How we have done it, I can't imagine. It seems almost like a dream to me. But this I will say, Sara, my love, that, if it had not been for your excellent management and rigid economy, I don't suppose I should have been here at this moment. But the struggle is over, thank Heaven, and we have now only got to retrench, and cut down every little expense at home that we can possibly do without, to clear off the few remaining debts that are hanging over our heads."

"Yes, Wellesley, my dear, I am sure I will do everything in my power," answered Mrs. W. N.; "though at present I certainly do not see how the housekeeping expenses can be reduced."

"Nor I, my sweetest. Understand me, Sara, my love, I am not finding fault," continued Mr. Wellesley Nicholls. "You are a wonderful woman, and deserve the highest credit; for I am sure the table you have managed to keep upon the small allowance you have had is perfectly extraordinary. Indeed, people, my dear, imagine, from the style we live in, that I am a man of more than a thousand a year. But when I speak of retrenchment, my love, I only mean that we must not give so many parties, and not invite as set of people whose houses we never set foot into. For I can assure you, Sara, no one can imagine my state of mind when I thought I heard the butcher abusing you for his money: and, to tell you the truth, I made a vow that I never would expose myself to the same indignity again; and never incur a debt, however small it might be, without having the money to discharge it—or first seeing my way clear, which is the same thing, you know."

"It's the best plan, you may depend upon it, Wellesley," returned Mrs. W. N.

"You're quite right, my poppit," continued Mr. Nicholls; "for I've been casting up everything in my mind, and I find that it will take exactly three quarters of my father Sir Giles's allowance to put us all straight and comfortable again. So cry up your tears," he added, seating himself by her side on the sofa, and kissing her, "and bathe your eyes with some eau de Cologne, there's an angel, or you won't be fit to be seen to-night, I declare. Come, now, I have got a little surprise for you, something that is sure to put you in a good humour."

"Now, Wellesley, love," expostulated Mrs Wellesley Nicholls, with a smile, "after all you have been saying, I hope you have not been running into any fresh expense by buying me a new dress. It would be so foolish of you, for I'm sure I don't want it."

"No, my dear," answered the husband; "your black velvet is quite good enough. You know you've only worn it three times, or four at the most; and that would be extravagance, if you like. But you see, Sara, I've long wanted to get into the Chief Baron's set—it's such a passport to one; and you know, my darling, my chief pride has always been to hear you acknowledged to be, wherever you went, the best-dressed person in the room—and diamonds do give such style to a woman; and, with your black velvet dress, they would look positively superb. So I've ordered the jeweller to come here about six, and show you some."

"Really, Wellesley dear, you should think of what you are doing," Mrs. Nicholls returned, kissing him. "It annoys me to refuse you, but you know we cannot afford it; and I am sure my aquamarines would do very well. It is so imprudent of you, darling. You let your affection lead you astray."

"You see, my poppit, you don't understand these things," replied Mr. Wellesley Nicholls. "Diamonds, although they are the dearest articles you can buy, are really the least expensive in the end. It is merely an investment of capital; for they are things that never wear out, and are always worth their money. And aquamarines, to say the truth, don't become you. A fine woman like you, Sara, requires something more rich and distinguè."

"Lor, Wellesley, how can you go on so? And perhaps the jeweller would make some allowance for the aquamarines," suggested Mrs. W. N.

"Why, I think you had better keep them, my dear; they will always come in handy, you know, on many occasions. At first, I thought of hiring you a suite for the night, Sara; but, on second thoughts, I couldn't bear the idea of your going about in borrowed plumes; and I knew the jeweller wouldn't bother me for the money—indeed, my father has dealt with him for years; so that you see, my love, there's no occasion for you to alarm yourself about the expense."

"Go along with you, Wellesley. You're a foolish, good-natured, extravagant rogue of a husband, that you are," said Mrs. W. N. "I declare there's no use talking to you. You were made for a barrister; you can persuade any one to do anything."

"Oh, by the bye," he added suddenly, exclaimed Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, "I forgot to tell you Lively Harry's coming here to-night."

"What, Mr. Harry Chandos?" inquired Mrs. Nicholls.

"Yes, my love," answered her husband; "I met him to-day in the Temple, and he told me he was going to the Baron's to-night, but that he had to be at a dinner-party first in Sussex-terrace. So I asked him, as he would be in the neighbourhood, if he would take a seat in our brougham, and he said he would be with us about eleven o'clock."

"I declare that man goes everywhere," exclaimed Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls, "I don't think I ever went to a party without meeting him. He certainly is a very agreeable man; he knows everybody and everything, and always has such a deal to say for himself. I suppose that's why you call him Lively, Wellesley?"

"It's a nickname his friends have given him, my dear," answered Mr. Nicholls; "he certainly has got into very good society, and how the deuce he has managed it I can't tell; I fancy it's the nice pleasant way the fellow has got of his own."

"Do you know what he is, Wellesley dear?" enquired Mrs. Nicholls.

"Why, a gentleman, I suppose," answered her husband.

"Yes, but how does he live, that is, what property has he got?" continued the lady.

"Really, I don't know, my dear," replied Mr. Wellesley Nicholls; "that's his affair, not mine."

"But, I mean, what was his father?" asked the lady.

"Why, I never heard him speak of him," returned Mr. W. N. "But Harry will be here to-night, my love, and then you can ask him all about it."

"My dear Wellesley," exclaimed the lady, indignantly, "how can you think I could do such a thing? Only it is so strange, isn't it; he's everywhere, yet nobody knows anything about him. I never even heard where he lives yet."

"No, nor any one else, Sara," answered Mr. N. "He has all his letters addressed to his club; and he's a very agreeable, honourable, and good-natured fellow, and people don't trouble their heads any further about him."

And so it was; Mr. Henry Chandos—or Lively Harry, as he was called—was one of the many human mysteries as frequently met with in London: in fact, he was one of the fashionable peripatetics known as men about town. He was neither good nor ill looking, nor dashing, nor witty; but he had a good set of teeth, and consequently was always smiling, which made people think him more good-natured than he really was. He played whist, and was a good hand at cards—though, to do him justice, he did not make a practice of either. He was what the ladies called a "quiz," and possessed a large fund of "small talk," which he told in so rattling and pleasant a manner, that many of his young companions considered him a wit; for, though no diamonds fell from his mouth when he spoke, still he sent forth a good imitation "paste," which sparkled nearly as well. Moreover, he was just the fellow to keep a dinner-party in good humour; and he had a good figure for a ball-room, waltzed well, sung prettily, and was a universal favourite with children. He had been engaged as second in two or three "affairs of honour," and was a member of men in the army; had few enemies, and always some money in his purse. In a word, he was a good companion and a great riddle.

Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls had scarcely finished their conversation about the above gentleman, when the page Parker informed them that a person from the jeweller's was waiting below; and going down, they found that the jeweller had sent the two diamond bracelets as ordered, for Mrs. Nicholls to tell which she preferred and another, which was such "a bargain," that the man had brought it "just for them to look at."

Mrs. Nicholls thought the first very beautiful—it was only fifty guineas. The second was very splendid, and the stones were larger; but she thought it was not so well worth eighty guineas as the first one was fifty. Besides, the setting was not so tasty.

All this the jeweller's young man admitted, adding that it was merely the difference in the size of the stones, and that the fifty guinea one certainly did look quite as good as the other; and any one unacquainted with the value of brilliants would not be able to tell the difference. This decided Mrs. Nicholls, and she was resolved to fix upon the fifty guinea article, until the jeweller's young man opened the red morocco case containing the "bargain," which threw both Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls into raptures of admiration.

It was a bracelet, and brooch to match, which the jeweller assured the lady and gentleman he could afford to let them have "at the excessingly low price of one hundred and twenty guineas;" adding that, if the articles were broken up, the stones alone would be worth the money, only it was an old pattern, for which there was no demand at present.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls, although not deeply skilled in the market value of brilliants, were perfectly astonished at the lowness of the price, and agreed with the tradesman that they never could have been made for less than double the money. Mr. Nicholls declared that they were much cheaper than the fifty guinea bracelet, and thought he must be tempted to take them; although he told the young man, in a jocular way, that his master must not blame him (Mr. Wellesley Nicholls) if he never got the money; at the idea of which the young man laughed, and said that Mr. Nicholls's father, Sir Giles, had dealt with them so long, that they would not have the least fear about their money if it were ten times the amount.

Mrs. Nicholls, seeing that her husband had set his mind upon the bracelet and brooch, touched his foot under the table, as if to say that they could not afford them; on which Mr. Nicholls again said that they were so wonderfully cheap and superb, and things that you only wanted to buy once in a lifetime, that the young man, seeing that Mrs. Nicholl's love of economy still made her cling to the fifty guinea ornament, requested permission to be allowed to try the effect of the articles on the lady. And when he had put them on, Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls went and looked at herself in the long glass between the parlour windows, while she twisted her arm and body about so as to make the jewels sparkle, and smilingly confessed that they certainly did look very handsome. Her husband said he never, in all his life, saw diamonds become a woman so well; and then he recollected that she had no brooch fit to match the brilliants, and that it would be impossible for her to go out without any; and, besides, on her black velvet body the diamond one certainly would look magnificent. When the jeweller's young man expressed a similar opinion, Mr. Nicholls, despite the black looks of his dear Sara, decided upon having the "bargain," and the young man packed up the two which had been selected in the morning, and took his departure.

By eleven o'clock Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls was dressed, and looking as handsome as her long ringlets, and black velvet dress, and the diamonds could make her; and her husband passed the time while they were awaiting the arrival of "Lively Harry" in making her walk up and down the parlour, while he observed the effect, and declared that he felt quite proud of her appearance, and that she looked much younger than when he had married her.

Presently the brougham which they had hired for the night came to the door, and Mr. Nicholls told the boy Parker to see that the lamps were right, and Mrs. Nicholls hoped that the coachman looked respectable, for that last time she went in the Park anybody might have told, from the man's appearance, that the conveyance was hired.

It was not long before Mr. "Lively Harry" made his appearance, and having stated that it would never do to go to the Chief Baron's for the usual hour, commenced giving Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls a graphic description of the dinner party with a lot of fine and people who had lost their livers and their tempers; next he talked of all the people he had met in the Park that day, and told Mrs. Nicholls a little bit of scandal that was going the round of the clubs. Then he gave them a funny description of the last new sentimental novel, and amused Nicholls with the whole of the splendid three hours' run he had had with the Surrey hounds. He favoured them with a list of all the fashionable marriages that were on the tapis, and confided to Mr. Nicholls the name of the horse that he had heard was to win the next Derby; then he told them how extraordinary dull Brighton was, and informed them of the latest improvements made by Lord Rosse's telescope; and also of a large failure in the City, which he had heard of that day; and a well-authenticated anecdote of the Prince of Wales; and then one of a common railway navvy in the north who had suddenly come into an immense fortune; and, moreover, he communicated to them a list of all the new pieces that were to appear at the Opera next season. Whereupon he said, "By the bye, Nicholls, talking of the Opera, you know Lady Verulam, don't you?" Her daughter aried young Grigg, of the Guards, last season. Her town house is in May Fair. Well, I met her at Almack's a few nights back, and an awfully dull evening we had, I can tell you: solemn as Exeter Hall—ha! ha! ha! I don't know whether you have ever ventured an oratorio there, Mrs. Nicholls. It's very scientific and very sleepy—ha! ha! ha! Well, to return to Lady Verulam. She's not exactly a Croesus in petticoats, you see; and is, unfortunately for herself, afflicted with a strong penchant for the Opera, having got a brace of dancers to marry; and I'm afraid the girls, Mrs. Nicholls, love her so much that they'll never leave her—ha! ha! Well, she's taken a box there for next season—a snug one for her Ladyship to sleep in; and as she only wants it on the Saturday nights, she's asked me if I knew any body that would be likely to take it for the Tuesdays. It's not dear—only £1200—and a snug thing for the Opera—ha! ha! ha! —so as I thought it would be just the thing for Mrs Nicholls and yourself, I gave her your address at a card-case as an introduction, and she's going to call to-morrow or the next day."

"It's very good of you, Harry," answered Nicholls, "and I'm sure my wife will be delighted; only, to tell you the truth, Mrs. Nicholls doesn't like the Tuesday nights."

"Oh, if that's all, I'll warrant the old dowager wouldn't stand out about that; or, I dare say, she'd agree for you to have it one Saturday, and she the other. You leave me to settle the matter. I know her ladyship's weak side. If I was you, Mrs. Nicholls, I wouldn't allow my husband to keep me locked up here all my life."

"I'm sure we are very much obliged to you, Mr. Chandos, for thinking of us," replied Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls, with a smile, while she inwardly shuddered at the idea of being forced by his officiousness into the extra expense of an opera-box.

"Not at all, not at all; I know it would just suit you—it gives one such a standing in society, you know, Nicholls. But hadn't we better be en route, eh? It's nearly twelve, by Jupiter. Allow me to help you on with your shawl, and cover up those charming brilliants of yours, for I declare they have quite made my eyes ache looking at them."

"Ah, ah, ah!" affectedly laughed Mrs. W. N. "Do you like them, Mr. Chandos?"

"They are very chaste," he replied; "chaste as an angel's tears, or, what is the same thing, your own, Mrs. Nicholls. Do you hear what I'm saying to your wife, Nicholls, eh?"

"Yes, I hear you, Harry. Go on; don't mind me," answered Mr. W. N

"The setting is not of the newest pattern, it is true," continued Mrs. Wellesley, anxious to return to the subject of the diamonds.

"The fact is," quickly added her husband, "they are some of her poor dear mother's, and on that account we don't like to have the setting altered. They have been in the family so long."

"Certainly; very right—shows feeling, and that's better than fashion any day," answered Lively Harry.

While Nicholls was directing Parker to see if the brougham was at the door, the agreeable Mr. Chandos shewed Mrs. N. a new glove button, the last French invention, which a friend of his had just brought over from Paris; and then requesting her acceptance of the trifle, he took her arm and led her to the brougham.

When Parker asked "Where to?" Lively Harry shouted out loud enough for the neighbours to have heard him, "To the Lord Chief Baron's." And Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls felt supremely happy; though all the way there Chandos had the talk entirely to himself, for they were each of them busy thinking what excuse they could make to Lady Verulam when she called on them about the opera-box. Of one thing, however, they felt convinced—that they must not dream of taking it.

(To be continued.)

NEW BOOKS. 6d.

NEW and POPULAR PRESENT BOOKS
WITH THE TOKEN.
A TREASURY of PLEASURE BOOKS
FOR YOUNG CHILDREN. With 160 Illustrations, by J. Absolon and H. Weir. 5s. cloth extra, gilt edges.
The Same, 7s. cd. bound in Morocco.
Upon 800 pages, 7s. cd. bound, 12s coloured
TALES of SCHOOL LIFE. By AGNES LOUDON. Author of "Tales for Boys and Girls." Illustrated by J. Absolon. Royal 16mo., 3s. cd. plain, 4s. cd. coloured.
THE WONDERS of HOME, in Eleven Stories. By GRANDFATHER WHITE. With Engravings. Royal 16mo., 3s. cd. plain, 4s. cd. coloured.
THE BRITISH SINBAD.
KIT BAM'S ADVENTURES; or, The Yarns of an Old Mariner. By MARY COWDEN CLARKE, Author of the "Concordance to Shakspeare." With Illustrations by C. Bennett. Rhmk. 12mo., 3s. cloth
"A most captivating volume for juvenile recreative reading we never remember to have seen."—Journal of Freedom.
"Cruikshank's plates are worthy of his genius."—Examiner.
FACTS from the WORLD of NATURE, Adam to and Inanimate. By Mrs. LOUDON. With numerous Engravings, fcap. 8vo., 5s. cloth, gilt edges
"A work as charming as it is useful."—Church and State Gazette.
THE MODERN BRITISH PLUTARCH; or, Lives of Men distinguished in the recent History of our Country. By the late Dr W. J. TAYLOR. Second Thousand, with a new steel Frontispiece. 12mo., 7s. cd. cloth.
THE AFRICAN WANDERERS; or, The Adventures of Carlos and Antonio among the Western Tribes. By Mrs R. LEE (formerly Mrs P. E. Bowditch). 2nd Edition, fcap. 8vo., with Engravings. Price 5s. cloth
"A charming book, which, while it is perfectly free from all affectation, or attempt at display, possesses in a remarkable degree the rare merit of descriptive accuracy in the amount of information which it affords, and in the moral lesson which it teaches, all the fascinating fonds, and in the moral lesson which it teaches, all the fascinating fonds, and in the moral lesson which it teaches, all the fascinating fonds

CHRISTMAS IN FRANCE.

"BONHOMME NOEL."

In France, as well as in every country upon which Christianity has shed its holy light, the festival of Christmas is a source of great joy to childhood; and the season has here, as elsewhere, its customs hallowed in the lapse of ages. Among these is an old domestic tradition called the Bonhomme Noël: it consists in the belief that if a shoe be put in the chimney-corner, the "Papa Noël," if satisfied with the conduct of his children, will during the night fill the shoe with toys; so that, in the morning, there is a grand scramble to get to the treasures, and have the first of the presents, which, by the way, is a successful incitement to early rising. The shoe, however, is only a nominal feature in the affair; for it implies any receptacle for the toys.

In the Illustration, some of the children have secured several presents, and others are looking in the chimney for more.

The Christmas-Eve billet is common in France; and in some parts, at about six o'clock in the evening, an enormous log is placed upon the fire, the burning of which was once believed to keep away pestilence from all who were seated around it—this protection extending throughout the year.

Among many pleasing festal customs in France are the following:—When Christmas draws near, every family in easy circumstances sends for a cask of wine, and lays in a stock of southern fruits, which, as they arrive, may be seen on the quay in large quantities. In the flower-market, orange branches, with fruit or blossoms, in elegant tubs; as also all kinds of toys for children, and laurel-trees, hung with various kinds of southern fruits; rose-trees in beautiful pots, &c., are set out for sale. The Christmas evening is devoted to universal joy and festivity; every booth, cellar, coffee-house, &c., is illuminated, and the table of the poor chesnut roaster has an additional lamp. The theatres give grand ballets; the gaming-houses, balls and soupers; and the streets are crowded during the whole night with people and bands of music. That which strangers most admire, and no provincial person ever forgets, even when at the greatest distance from his country, is a sort of sacred entertainment, at which the whole family is present. The relations who have been absent from each other, perhaps during the whole year, are to meet on this evening; those who have been the greatest enemies pardon each other at Christmas; marriages are fixed; married pairs who have been separated are at this time again united; the shyest lover becomes eloquent, and the most coy fair one becomes kind; every heart dilates with good-will, love, and tenderness, on Christmas evening.

A LONDON FOG.—(SEE PAGE 419.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, December 22, 1849.—Supplement.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 406.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

RETROSPECT OF THE YEAR.

THE year 1849 approaches to its close; and men and nations begin to reflect upon its history, and to recal the lessons which it was its privilege to teach. It was essentially a year of subsidence—a time of reaction—a period immediately succeeding a great physical and moral convulsion, when men, alarmed at the progress of innovation, held back and asked themselves whither they were going, and what was the ultimate goal of the revolutions that had been effected.

It was not possible that the violent commotions of 1848 could be suffered to continue. In every part of Europe, the scattered, dismayed, and discomfited party whose material interests had been damaged, whose love of order had been outraged, and whose old ideas had been shocked by the progress of revolution, took heart once more, and joined their forces to stay the march of evil. Success rewarded their efforts; and society having been held together, and prevented from a collapse, by the physical force of standing armies, the nations of the Continent had leisure to ask themselves whether they were in reality ripe for the liberty they desired, and to debate upon the measures to be taken for giving stability to newer institutions, and preventing liberty from degenerating into licentiousness and anarchy. Real liberty has lost nothing by the delay. Reflection has brought wisdom: the violent and the premature have learned to watch and to wait; the over-sanguine have become convinced of the foolishness of hasty theory; and men have been forced to confess that order is not only the first law of Heaven, but the first law of nature and humanity.

If we look around us, we see that in every country of Europe where there was revolution in 1848, there has been reaction in 1849. France, groaning under the weight of an enormous national debt, a yearly increasing deficit in her revenues, an unproductive and much-consuming army of half a million of men, and a general stagnation of trade and commerce, saw no other hope than in order and repose, and the consequent diminution of this fearful police of 500,000 men arrayed by society against itself. The Republic being a fact, was accepted as a fact, and the best men in the country devoted their energies to its consolidation. Germany, torn by factions, her chief cities at the mercy of mobs, her Kings playing at cross-purposes with each other, saw amid all the confusion, which well nigh blinded the eyes of her best and clearest-sighted men, that the time for theorising had not come; that the world was not ready for a free and united Teutonic empire, and that in Prussia, in Austria, in Bavaria—in every state of the confederation—order was the first necessity of political existence. As in France, order was only secured by the force of standing armies. In Italy we see the same spectacle, though rendered somewhat more difficult and complex by the participation of an alien force in the struggles between a Sovereign and his people. It is, nevertheless, the same story: Liberty made rampant—losing her way—degenerating into anarchy; and, as a last resource, an overwhelming army welcomed in to prevent the total dissolution of society. Yet, in none of these countries has there in reality been a retrogression. Physical force can never wholly rule the world; and moral force is accumulating in each, which will one day restore the equilibrium which has been lost, and secure to each nation such liberty, and no more, as it can understand and appreciate.

Great Britain has been spared these struggles; but she has had other difficulties to contend with of almost equal magnitude. A period of unparalleled commercial distress reached its climax in the year which has just passed. Ireland, which ought to be our strength and our security, was reduced to the lowest ebb of suffering; her peasantry became more wretched than the most degraded savages that roam over the wilds of an uncultivated country; and the experiment of a Poor-law, tried for their benefit with the most humane intentions, became a source of aggravated oppression and misery. The great and healing measure by which the commerce of this country was freed from restrictions that impeded its expansion, and whose timely concession, there is every reason to believe, saved us from as violent a revolution as any that took place on the continent of Europe, weakened the force of the calamities that beset us, and enabled us to bear up under a weight of difficulty much greater than any that had ever before afflicted this country. Under its operation, trade began to mend, the losses of bad seasons recovered, and the recoil of Continental difficulty stopped at our shores. The year 1850 opens under happier auspices. Confidence has been restored; and, although the voice of complaint from that large, important, and interesting part of the community, whose business is the cultivation of the land, is still raised, there can be no doubt that it will enjoy its due share of the prosperity which must follow past depression, and of which the signs and symptoms are everywhere visible around us. The Agricultural party maintained, in the heat of the Corn-law controversy, that the operation of Free-Trade would inevitably drain the Bank of England of its bullion—that foreign corn would be paid for [illegible] the manufactures of Yorkshire and Lancashire, but in [illegible]—and that the country would, in consequence, be ruined. Experience has proved the assertion to be groundless. Under the operation of Free-Trade, the gold in the Bank of England amounted, on Saturday, the 22nd of December last, to the unprecedented sum of £16,991,261—larger by £352,261 than the largest accumulation of specie ever before known in the coffers of that establishment. Of course, those who are pledged to the correctness of [illegible]sertion they have so often hazarded, will endeavour to find some explanation of this circumstance more in accordance with their foregone conclusions, and will strive to twist the stubborn and unmanageable fact into the service of their theory. The fact, however, will remain a gratifying proof of the correctness of the principles on which the grand measure of Free-Trade was founded. The dangers of the approaching year seem to be, not the dangers of adversity, but of prosperity. We are at our appointed place in an old and perpetually recurring cycle, and have to beware of the greediness of gain far more than of depression and stagnation. "The history of what we are in the habit of calling the state of trade," says Mr. Jones Lloyd, "is an instructive lesson. We find it subject to various conditions which are perpetually recurring. It revolves, apparently, in a established cycle. First, we find it in a state of quiescence, next improvement, growing confidence, prosperity, excitement, overtrading, convulsion, pressure, stagnation, and distress, ending again in quiescence." We have at present reached the third of the stages so forcibly enumerated; the rest are all before us. The Bank is gorged with millions finding no profitable investment, or they would not be there; and all the dangers of cheap money will press upon us in due time. It is to be hoped that we shall be warned by the errors of the past, and that a mania for railways, for Californian acres, for Irish bogs, or any other bottomless gulf of speculation, will not bring us once again to the dark side of the circle, and throw us back to the point from which we started.

CELEBRATION OF NEW YEAR'S DAY IN PARIS.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

For individuals and for the country, for manufacturers, for commerce, and for agriculture—for all interests in the State—let us hope that the new year will be better than the old—that employment will increase, and pauperism diminish; and that 1850 will shine brightly in history when compared with 1849.—In conclusion, we bear for each and all of our readers the cordial good-wishes of the season, and to each fire-side

"A Happy New Year."

THE NEW YEAR IN PARIS.

However Time may have thinned the calendar of its festal observances in France, it has spared the very pleasing custom of making New Year's Gifts, and thus propitiating the twelve months by kindly effect at the very commencement of the year.

In England, it was anciently a custom at Court, at this season, both for the Sovereign to receive and give New Year's gifts; and, six centuries ago, we find Henry III. extorting such gifts from the citizens of London. At Paris, for 240 years, the Festival of Fools was celebrated with outrageous absurdities. Its memories have, however, long since been swept away by the better intelligence of mankind.

Paris, we are glad to hear from our Artistic Correspondent, is very gay; the shops are as full as they have been at any period of the year; and the business season promises to be the best that the shopkeepers have had for these twenty years. The streets and boulevards, with their gay and luxurious taste, have rarely been so full; and the theatres are crowded nightly.

The purchase of New-Year's gifts brings out hosts of company. The magasins, or shops, are crowded every night with the élite of the fashionable world of Paris and London. Our Artist has pictured one of these shops for the benefit of Parisian industry and taste—in the Rue du Coq St. Honoré. The scene is one of fairy-like elegance: the costly assemblage of pictures, bronzes, and articles of vertu, is marvellous; the display of ornamental furniture astonishes us with its elegant forms—borrowed, it is true, from other ages, but admirably meeting the imagined wants of our own; and the toy department, with its numberless ingenuities, attracts crowds of all growths. The whole scene forms a striking spectacle, when lit by gas in superb chandeliers.

Geographical Discovery in South Africa.—The South African Commercial Advertiser of the 3rd November contains the following interesting information:—"Among the opening prospects of Africa—if Lord Grey's blight can be arrested—the grandest geographical discovery of modern times has just been announced—that, namely, of the Great Inland Lake so long supposed to exist, to the north of the Cape. The following extract of a letter from the Rev. Mr. Moffat or Mr. Rutherfoord, announcing this discovery, has been kindly given for general information:—'I embrace the few minutes which remain before sending a packet to Colesberg, to inform you of friend Oswell and companions. I shall give you the substance of a short letter received by me dated the 2nd of August. It only came last night, and has afforded us real pleasure, as it will doubtless do to yourself. Mr. L. calls the lake Noka, or Nama, or Ngama. We passed this lake two or two ago, after a journey of about 556 miles from Kolobeng, and feel thankful that our path has been one of safety and pleasure. We are now at the Batauana town, and yesterday rode down about six miles to look on the broad blue waters of the lake. We cannot tell how broad it may be, for we could not see a horizon, except one of water, on the south and west. We traversed through much desert country, and were looking for the lake for 200 miles before we came to it. We traversed about 200 miles along the banks of a large river which runs S.S.E. a beautiful stream, in some parts very like the Clyde, but frequently broader. The water was rising, and seems to come from the north, from melted snows—it is so clear and soft. Two large rivers run into the lake, both from the north. The Batauana are a numerous tribe—the chief a youth. Many Makoba or Bayeiye fish and hunt on the river; darker in complexion than Bechuanas, and speak a language within but a slight kin. Canoes hollowed out of one tree, very fine scenery on the banks of the river, splendid trees, mostly new to me—one, the fruit has a small, yellow pumpkin, about three inches in diameter. Mr. Oswell and I go on horseback. Are waggons go on with Mr. Murray. We follow on the track when we have seen Sebetoane's tribe. The Bayeiye are numerous, but villages all small. Last observation of sun gave about 19 degs. 7 mins. We are S.W. of Kolobeng, but expect when at Sebetoane's to be considerably farther north. I may add to the above, by way of explanation, that the Batauana tribe are Bechuanas, and originally of the Bamanoato tribe, which lie eight days' journey north of the Kolobeng, among whom Mr. Livingstone has his station (Kolobeng). The tribe of Sebetoana (the chief's name) are also Bechuanas; the Makoba (which means slaves) are a different race. They possess no cattle, but live on fish. Bayeiye seems to mean eaters. Mr. L. says that he expected they would reach Kolobeng in two months. I am sending direct to Colesberg, in order to forward a letter from Mr. Murray to Mrs. Murray, care of Messrs. Arbuthnot & Co., Cape Town, to be expected at Cape in November or December. The party were very friendly received at the lake. Mr. L. says the canoes are poor things—very numerous—they go pretty quickly in them, and cook and sleep in them. [illegible] Makoba). They have it very cold all the way. Country neighbourhood of the lake beautiful and fertile. All peace in that part of the world."

Peruvian Potatoes.—At a council of the Royal Agricultural Society of England, lately held in Hanover-square, Mr. H. Manning communicated the following result of his cultivation of potatoes from South American seeds:—The Peruvian potato seed was set in ordinary garden-ground at Shackwell in 1848, and in due course showed fair stems and leaf; but, on opening the ground last autumn, the result was found to be only a few balls, about the size of very small marbles, which, consequently, were disregarded. This year, however, from the seed left accidentally in the ground, there sprang up several vigorous stems, some of which had leaves of extraordinary size; the plants flowered in a variety of colours. The yield from these, considering the small set, was large, and the size of tubers considerably increased.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The aspect of things is beginning to look very anti-republican as far as concerns the President, M. Louis Napoleon. Felicitations from crowned heads have begun to pour in upon him because of his staunch support of "order."

The Emperor of Austria has sent his portrait, richly framed, as a present to the President of the Republic, accompanied by an autograph letter, in which he compliments him on the important services he has rendered the cause of order and society. The President has commanded the portrait to be placed in the most conspicuous position in the grand salon of the Elysée.

The President has likewise received an autograph letter from the Pope, in which his Holiness thanks him for the protection he grants to Rome, and thanks him for having freed his dominions from the oppression of an anarchical and an anti-Christian faction.

Christmas-Day being kept a close holiday in Paris, the Legislative Assembly did not meet; and the public administrations, the Courts of Justice, and the Bourse remained closed. The churches were unusually crowded. At St. Sulpice, St. Roch, and La Madeleine, where the solemnity of the service and the exquisite music attract the greatest multitude, police and Republican guards were stationed in the interior to keep the passage free and prevent confusion.

In all the churches, midnight mass ushered in the great festival. The effect produced by the illumination of the various chapels and altars in each was magnificent.

Nothing has transpired as yet to confirm the words of Louis Napoleon to the committee of the Boulogne Railroad, "Les passeports sont abolis." Letters from Boulogne and Calais state that there has been neither abolition nor modification, and no orders for either one or the other have been received from the Minister of the Interior or the Prefecture of Police. It is stated, however, on good authority, that the principle of abolition has been decided upon by the Cabinet, but subject to variations according to the frontier, and it is probable that the application of the principle as regards British subjects has been merely delayed by unavoidable formalities.

The Réforme was seized on Monday, by order of the Attorney-General, for having copied from the Northern Star the address of Ledru Rollin, and his companions in exile, to the Democrats of Great Britain.

In consequence of Christmas-Day being observed strictly by the compositors and printers, few of the Paris papers were published on Tuesday morning, and those that did appear were destitute of news.

The business transacted in the Assembly on Wednesday was unimportant; but, during the discussion of the budget, a scene occurred of a most disgraceful nature, which induced the President to call him to order, when the speaker openly insulted that honourable officer, who immediately put on his hat, and suspended the sitting.

Socialist principles are rapidly extending at Montpellier; and so bold and outrageous are the defenders of these doctrines, that great alarm is excited in the minds of the peaceable and well-disposed, lest violence should follow.

Accounts from Toulon, dated the 22nd inst., mention that the Mediterranean squadron, on its return, is to be dismantled.

The editor of the Tracassière de l'Indre, having published that paper contrary to the regulations established for the government of such journals, has been tried, found guilty, sentenced to pay a fine of 5000f., and to be imprisoned for twelve months.

The President of the Republic has conferred on the Marquis Emmanuel d'Azeglio, at present Sardinian Chargé d'Affaires in London, the Cross of Commander of the Legion of Honour. This distinction is intended to mark the President's satisfaction at the manner in which the Marquis d'Azeglio performed, ad interim, the duties of Minister in Paris.

Prince Frederick of Prussia has arrived in Paris.

ITALIAN STATES.

Piedmont.—The Sardinian Parliament was opened on the 20th, at Turin, with a speech from the throne by the King in person, as follows:—

Gentlemen of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies,—The circumstances which induced me to dissolve the Parliament, and which, after an appeal to the country, have led me to convoke a new one, are not of a nature to impress us with sorrow. They have matured for that school in which alone political life is to be learnt—the school of experience. They have afforded to a noble example of faith and concord existing between a people and its ruler. They have offered to the country an opportunity of proving that it is able to maintain its political institutions, and worthy of its liberty. Our condition, which I described as serious about four months ago, is not much changed in but our relations with friendly Powers have become less difficult, and our credit has recovered; still, the most important questions, both foreign and domestic, are yet pending. This essential state would, if it were lasting, impair our reputation in the eyes of other nations, and would, as I have before intimated, be unable to promote good administration and progress, would appear to have caused disorder in the former, and impeded the latter. It is for you to stop these fatal consequences. A new and grave emergence within me concerning the future destiny of the country and of our institutions. The offers have listened to my voice—they have hastened in numbers to give their votes. It is with heartfelt satisfaction I express my gratitude to them on this solemn occasion. I consider the service they have done the country as a service done to myself. In a dearer and more acceptable to me, as I am more anxious for the public weal than for myself. I need not allude to the questions which, on account of their urgency, require an immediate solution. They are sufficiently known to you. All I need say, therefore, is, that I have confessed a project entrusted them to your prudence.

Gentlemen of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies,—I have done all in my power to strengthen the political institutions founded by Charles Albert, my father, of august memory But the will or decree of a King is not sufficient to [illegible] and beneficial to the hearts and wills of the people, unless it be proved that it [illegible] and beneficial to the practical application. This indispensable sanction is now entrusted to your wisdom. I must remind you that a greater opportunity never occurred for honour and, in the name of that fatherland which we all bear in our hearts, I urge you to banish every other thought than that of healing the wounds and restoring the well-being of the country.

Tuscany.—The Tuscan Government intends convoking the Chambers about the beginning of February. The Minister of Finance has decided that no more Treasury Bonds for two years shall be sold under 90 per cent. This decision is to be attributed to the offer of a great foreign establishment to buy all the remaining bonds at that price.

Venice.—Accounts from Venice of the 17th announce that the Italian Tyrol is to be united to the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom.

Rome.—If we are to believe the rumours that come out Paris from the "Eternal City," the Pope's return may be speedily expected. Reports, however, of quite an opposite character generally rife, and nothing can be relied on as that or any point of Roman politics. On the 17th inst., General Baraguay d'Hilliers passed a review of troops going to relieve the garrisons of Albano, Frascati, and Tivoli.

Naples.—According to advices dated the 17th inst., the whole Neapolitan population is made to feel the oppressive hand of the Bomba-King. A new list of nearly 150 names was in the hands of the Executive, whilst Naples was already deprived of nearly every liberal minded citizen it possessed. All who contributed to the constitutional journals were under the dread of arrest. Vengeance is the order of the day; the Government gains courage as it advances, and every new capture but adds to its thirst for more victims.

GERMAN STATES.

On the 20th instant the Archduke John, the Reichsverweser, ceased to control the affairs of the German central power, having, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, in the Palace of his Highness at Frankfort, transferred the German central power into the hands of the Austrian and Prussian Plenipotentiaries, in accordance with the treaty of the 30th September. The following is the official minute of the proceedings:—

Done at Frankfort-on-the-Maine, in the Palace of his Highness the Archduke Reichsverweser, on Thursday, the 20th December, 1849.

His Imperial Highness the Archduke Reichsverweser having repeatedly expressed a wish to resign the charge of Germany as Reichsverweser, and having negotiated, in accordance with the treaty of the 30th September, 1848, between the Austrian and Prussian Governments, for the creation of a new central power, having resulted in an agreement between those powers, and the governments of Germany having approved of that agreement, and his Majesty the Emperor of Austria having appointed the Privy Councillor and Lieutenant-Marshal von Schmerling, and the Privy Councillor and Chancellor of the Legation, Charles Ferdinand Count Buol-Schauenstein, and His Majesty the King of Prussia having also appointed Lieut.-Gen. von Radowitz and Prussian Minister Count von Pourtalès Commissioners, in accordance with the said agreement, and they having produced the full powers to act as such, the Commissioners above mentioned, the commissioners mentioned above met together on the invitation of his Highness the Archduke Reichsverweser, in order to receive and treat upon the question of that object.

At one o'clock his Highness the Archduke Reichsverweser entered the saloon, attended by his Ministers—Baron Schmerling, Privy Councillor, Minister of the Interior and Minister of War; Herr Jochmus, Minister for Foreign Affairs and the Marine; Herr Detwold, Minister of Commerce and Public Works; and Herr Bruck, Minister of Finance.

[illegible] 20th September, 1848, between the Austrian and Prussian governments, for the purpose of creating a new federal central power, together with documents ratifying it, were produced by the respective Ministers of the respective powers, together with the declarations of adhesion of the whole of the Governments of Germany, with the exception of Germany, which has, however, sent in preliminary assurance of its adhesion, and of Luxemburg—the adhesion of which state was, however, not doubted, as the Grand Duke had already given his consent to it, as Duke of Limburg.

These documents together with the powers accorded to the commissioners by their respective sovereigns, were added to the protocol.

His Imperial Highness the Archduke Reichsverweser then delivered a dignified address, suited to the occasion, and the Imperial Austrian Privy Councillor, Freiherr Kübeck-Kübau, having replied, the protocol was signed by all parties present.

PRUSSIA.

The Berlin official Gazette contains a Royal proclamation of the 21st inst., remodelling and fixing the rates of postage throughout the kingdom of Prussia. The postage for a letter weighing less than half an ounce is fixed at 2d. for distances of 10 leagues; at 2d. for 20 leagues; and at 3d. for any distance exceeding 20 leagues. Pre-pay stamps for these respective sums are being introduced into the Prussian postal system, to come into force on and from the 1st of January, 1850.

From a report of the expenditure of the Prussian State, we learn that the sum which is annually devoted to the civil department amounts to 53,605,851 dollars. Among the various items of the account we find an annual grant of 20,000 dollars devoted to purposes of Protestant worship, while the Roman Catholic church has a grant of 7,000 dollars. The civil list is fixed at 2 Ministers of State are 98 200 dollars, and those of 195 directors and councillors, 462,750 dollars.

An interesting part of the report is the statement of the expenses of the military department; according to which the total number of the Line amounts to 121,861 men, and their pay to the sum of 9,084,180 dollars

The pay of the Landwehr is 733,036 dollars; making a total for pay of Landwehr and Line of 9,821,216 dollars. The annual allowance for uniforms for the Line and Landwehr is 1,427,371 dollars.

A letter from Berlin of the 21st inst., in the Cologne Gazette, states, that Russia, France, and England have declared for Prussia in the difference with the Austrian Court.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

The Military Governor of Hungary, Baron Haynau, is endeavouring to become popular; he has founded an institution at Pesth, to be called the "Haynau-Stiftung," for the relief of the Imperial soldiers and Honveds wounded during the late war. In the programme issued on the occasion, the Commander-in-Chief speaks of his former Honved opponents as of "misguided," not rebellious men.

A deputation from Hungary lately arrived at Vienna, to petition Government to take some measures towards the payment of Kossuth notes. Although it was acknowledged the case was a hard one, the petition was rejected, and it was again positively declared that the revolutionary paper in question must be considered as totally invalid.

UNITED STATES.

Intelligence to the 12th inst from New York has come to hand.

The American President's message, so anxiously looked for, was not delivered, owing to the House of Representatives not having elected a Speaker. The thirty-first balloting took place on the 10th, with no better success than before. The opposing candidates are Mr. Winthrop (the Speaker of the last House) and Mr. Cobb, of Ohio (put forward by the Locofocos). The latter gentleman has been at length withdrawn, in favour of Mr. Potter, of Ohio. Two thirds of the House are necessary to elect a Speaker, and of this number Mr. Winthrop has been ten or twelve short. Yesterday Mr. Isaac Morse proposed a summary solution of the difficulty in the following resolution:

"Resolved—That the names of Howell Cobb and Robert C. Winthrop be placed in a box, and the first name drawn (by a page of the House) shall be Speaker."

Mr. Morse: The plan which I have proposed, it occurs to me, is the most rational as well as the most feasible one to put an end to a contest which is now regarded by men of all parties as partaking largely of the character of the ridiculous. We cannot longer trifle with the wishes or interests of our constituents. They look to us to proceed with the business of the country with all practical despatch, and cannot see no good reason why we should be further delay in the organisation of this House. Members may endeavour to console themselves with the difficulties of 1839 as a precedent; but the cases are not parallel. At that time the delay was occasioned, not by the Speaker's election, but by the disputed seats of the New Jersey election. As the case now stands, the obstinacy of one or two individuals may prevent for ever an organisation; and it is, therefore, due to the legislation of the country, that the Whigs and Democrats—the two great parties—should unite on some plan to put down that disorganising spirit which has manifested itself.

Fourth ballot on the 10th:—Winthrop, of Massachusetts (Whig), 101; Brown, of Indiana (Locofoco), 53; other votes, 70.

This is the latest intelligence brought by the packet on the subject of the election. The manner will be seen in all probability, was in possession of the result, and with it, very likely, the President's message, which could not be delivered, nor the business of Congress proceeded with, until the House had made its selection. The Opposition has a decided majority in the House, but it is composed of the most discordant elements.

CENTRAL AMERICA AND MEXICO.

Considerable excitement was said to prevail at Nicaragua, according to the latest accounts which are dated November 8th. Mr. Chatfield, on the part of the British Government, had taken possession of the island of Tigre. He landed an armed force on the island about the middle of October, tore down the flag of Honduras, and ran up that of England in its place. Mr. Squier, the American Minister, promptly protested against the transaction, and a spirited correspondence ensued. Other acts of a similar character are stated to have been committed. The islands of the Gulf belonging to Honduras and San Salvador have been seized, and also the ports of Trujillo and Omoa.

Affairs in Mexico are quiet, and Herrera, the President, is popular. Several small attempts had been made at revolution, but they proved signal failures. Santa Anna has no prospect of resuming his former position in Mexico. The road from Vera Cruz to Mexico is now well guarded, and no robberies have lately been committed on the diligences. A grant has lately been made by the Mexican Congress to establish telegraphs throughout the Republic. A proposal is also before the Congress, made by an American citizen, to build a railroad from Vera Cruz to Acapulco, on the Pacific, passing through the city of Mexico.

The French Consul at Matamoras had become embroiled with the authorities. He was accused of writing articles in a public journal of an unfriendly bearing on the authorities. Although he disclaimed the imputation, he was arrested, and held to answer to allegations which were to be preferred against him by General Avalos, the Mexican Commander on the Rio Grande.

A battle has taken place on the plains in the vicinity of Fort Kearney, between a band of Pawnee Indians and a company of the United States Dragoons, under Lieutenant Ogle. The result of an encounter of this kind, and a large number wounded. Seven of the dragoons were wounded, two of them, it is supposed, fatally.

In Texas, the Legislature was proceeding with the despatch of business, but nothing of any special record has occurred.

CANADA.

The annexation movement in Canada is steadily advancing. An apparent defection was given in by the ministerial party, but public opinion remains unchanged. The Indian troubles at Lake Superior have gone no further. The troops sent up have not been heard from, but no further outrages have been committed.

CALIFORNIA.

The dates from San Francisco are to the 1st of November. At that time there were not less than 100 British vessels in the harbour. A large number of arrivals from England and the United States were making daily entry. The present population of San Francisco, at the most moderate estimate, is reckoned at least 15,000. One year since it was not over 500. Since October 1, the population of California has been increased by about 19,000 emigrants, 4000 of whom arrived at San Francisco by sea.

The constitution adopted by the Convention at Monterey was completed on the 11th of October, and was to be laid before the people for their final ratification on the 13th of November. The public opinion was nearly unanimous in its favour, and it has, no doubt, been accepted by the people with no important opposition.

The following summary embraces the principal features in the new state document:—Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except for the punishment of crime, can be tolerated within the state. The full use and enjoyment of religious worship, without distinction of sect or creed, is guaranteed; nor shall any person be rendered incompetent as a witness on account of his religious opinions. Imprisonment for debt, except in cases of fraud. Foreigners actually residing within the limits of the state shall enjoy the same rights of property as native citizens. No lottery shall be authorised by the State, nor the sale of lottery tickets be permitted. No person, company, or corporation shall be allowed to exercise the privilege of banking or to create paper money as a circulating medium. All office-, judicial and administrative, are to be filled by the votes of the people. The property of married women, owned by them before marriage, and that acquired afterwards by gift or inheritance, is secured to them independent of their husbands. The Legislature is to enact provisions for the protection of the homestead from forces sale on legal process. The power of the Legislature to enact laws relating to rights or contracts. Duelling is made a disqualification to elect or to be elected. A school fund on a liberal scale is to be provided.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE

The latest information from the Cape is to the 3rd of November. The colonists were animated by the same spirit as before, and their refractory resistance was seriously influencing the health of the Governor

The Cape Frontier Times of the 2nd of November says:—"The news from Cape Town received last night will produce feelings of the most painful excitement throughout the colony. The Governor is evidently labouring under a very unanxious discontent produced by severe opposition, the possible results of which cannot be contemplated without serious alarm; or he is, unhappily, in the hands of evil councillors who are enemies to the public weal, and bent on disturbing the public peace of the colony."

At Cape Town the resistance was sustained with the greatest determination. On the evening of the 1st of November all male inhabitants between a certain age were invited to attend at the Town-hall, for the purpose of being enrolled as special constables.

The Anti-Convict Associations were carrying on their successful agitation. Violent addresses were being made to the rural population, in which the conduct of Sir H. Smith was denounced in the most unmeasured terms.

It was alleged that some persons connected even with the Anti-Convict Association had, when it suited pecuniary views, entered into trading operations with the Government authorities, although under a pledge not to contract or otherwise have business with them, and these allegations had brought about a recriminatory correspondence in the newspapers.

WEST INDIES.

We have advices this week from Jamaica to the 22nd ult. The Legislature of the island continued in session, and its proceedings were of the same unsatisfactory character as at the date of the previous accounts. The House of Assembly had passed a series of resolutions, declaratory of the right of the house to direct, limit, and appropriate the public money and defending the course lately pursued by the country party. These resolutions, upon being reported to the Council, had drawn forth from that body a series of counter resolutions.

The excitement upon the subject of retrenchment had in no way abated The Council had unanimously rejected a bill contemplating a decrease in the salaries of the public officers, which had passed the Assembly. It was stated that the Government party was anxious to provoke another dissolution of the House of Assembly.

Notice of a motion for the imposition of an income tax in order to equalize the revenue with the expenditure of the island had been given by a member of the Government party. The proposition would, doubtless, be rejected.

The Hon. Mr. Stanley had arrived in Jamaica on his tour of inspection

There had been some disturbances in the parish of Manchester, and the Governor had sent a detachment of military to the district. Happily, nothing serious occurred, except a slight outbreak on the part of the black population, instigated by a famous "Ocean man."

The island was healthy.

The dates from Havanna are to the 7th ult. The Government regulations were becoming very strictat that place The Dee mail steamer was not allowed to enter the harbour in the night. If three persons were found together in the streets after 11 at night, they were arrested. No European was allowed to carry arms.

Barbadoes, Trinidad, Demerara, and all the Windward Islands, presented a very favourable appearance. At Antigua the yellow fever was raging amongst the troops; Deputy Commissary General Price had been carried off by it.

The advices from Hayti state that his sable Majesty the Emperor Faustin, at the war had been renewed with the Republic of St. Domingo, was, on the 18th of November, to march to the frontier with his entire army. The Haytian fleet had sailed with provisions for the same destination. The License Tax for foreign merchants had been raised from 500 to 1800 dollars Spanish, and for clerks had been made 1000 dollars. Nearly eighty houses were destroyed by fire at Port-au-Prince on the 16th ult.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE CHRISTMAS RAILWAY TRAFFIC.

Christmas-Day brought with it an extraordinary amount of railway traffic, seeming in and out of the chief metropolitan termini. On that festive day the Euston Station of the London and North-Western Railway was the scene of incessant occupation. Arrangements were made by Captain Huish, the general manager, and Mr. Brooks, the traffic superintendent, in connexion with the delivery agents, Messrs. Chaplin and Horne, whereby the greatest expedition in delivery was obtained; and to the means by which it was accomplished we are not generally known, it may be interesting to describe the arrangements adopted, so that no one consignment of the immense mass was allowed, if possible, to be lost or miscarry. On the arrival side of the station was a large temporary tent, supplied with half a dozen fires, its dimensions 20 feet high by 60 wide, being lit up with gas laid on for the purpose, and into which, as the various mail and merchandise trains have up alongside, their contents were taken out and temporarily stowed. Here, during the morning, and from noon also Saturday, between fifty and sixty of the railway porters were engaged day and night handling the hampers, &c. out of the goods vans, and handing them across the rails to a number of men employed by the company's carrying agents in the delivery, who, with the "sorters," arranged them into their particular compartments in front of the station-wall, on which were written the different districts or destinations, separate compartments being assigned for "the City," "Strand," "the Square," "Over the Water," "Islington," "East End," "Pinsbury," "West End," "Kingsland," "Clerkenwell," &c.; at each of which points between two and three carriages and vans stood in the process of being loaded. The various consignments were checked by the company's clerks at their desks; and this having been done, as soon as filled, the 30 or 40 conveyances drove off without delay with their destined, consisting of barrels of oysters and baskets of fish, fruit, game, and other Christmas presents. The immense contents of the mail and other trains arriving on Monday and Tuesday at half-past four A.M. were disposed of in this manner by ten o'clock, at which time the station was cleared. On Sunday morning the man remained at work, and the conveyance vans were in all parts of the town by nine. Policemen were about to prevent pilfering. On the departure side of the station extra clerks and porters were employed day and night with the transmissions, by the trains, to the various manufacturing towns; and it is calculated that the number of packages and consignments of all descriptions going "down" the line could not be four days have amounted to less than twenty thousand, and those coming in, to less than fifteen thousand. There were also several hundred wagons of live and dead stock; and a great influx of passengers to and fro was occasioned, the company having issued double-journey tickets, available from Saturday to Wednesday.

On the Great Western, Eastern Counties, and South-Western, the same expeditious system of delivery was adopted, the arrangements being the same. The number of consignments over the Great Western, during the four days, is computed at 18,000 "down," and some 8000 "up." On Saturday the trains on this line are said to have been "tremendous," with people going in and out of town—the luggage such as had never been seen before. Extra carriages had to be put on to the express and ordinary trains, the arrangements of which were under the superintendence of Mr. Seymour Clarke, the manager, and Mr. Palmer, the traffic superintendent.

On the Eastern Counties' an immense tent was constructed for the purpose, the arrangements and staff, under Mr. Snow, being of a similar description with those at Euston-square, with this addition, that on the arrival of the line the shoals of packages were backed out of the trains into the tents by means of a huge sliding platform; while upon the "down" side was a sort of dock, into which the railway carriages were run, and conveniently loaded on the line with their cargoes. The consignments by this line, taking in, as it does, the great game and agricultural districts, more particularly in live and dead stock, during the preceding week, were enormous.

The South-Western, South-Eastern, and Brighton each had their proportionate amount of traffic, more particularly in passengers, owing to the facilities given for extending the return journey to Wednesday, which was the case on many of the provincial railways.

ROYAL CHARITIES.—Her Majesty's Royal charities, to above 700 aged and infirm poor, were distributed on Monday, at the almonry, Whitehall, by the Lord High Almoner (the Bishop of Oxford), the Sub-Almoner, and the yeoman of the Almonry. Each indigent person received 5s. The Royal Gatealms were at the same time awarded to above 150 poor persons, many of whom are blind and suffer under bodily affliction.—The annual distribution of the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert's bounties to the aged poor and needy families of the Royal borough of Windsor, will take place on Tuesday next, (Monday, being Christmas-day). Blankets, as well as a bountiful supply of excellent provisions and coals, will be given away to a large number of the poor resident in that locality.

CHRISTMAS DAY AT THE MANSION HOUSE.—The Lord Mayor provided a handsome dinner of cold English fare, together with turkeys, geese, and all the luxuries of this festive season, for his numerous domestics, with their wives, families, and friends, on Tuesday last. The worthy chief magistrate of this London metropolis is conspicuous for his hospitality in one of the banqueting-halls, where there was an unlimited supply of ale and wine.

ROYAL BOUNTY AT KEW.—A donation of £50 from his Majesty the King of Hanover, towards the relief of the destitute and deserving poor of this hamlet, was judiciously and impartially distributed on Monday, in beef, bread, and beer, by Lieutenant Colonel Girardot and Mr. Costelow, the two churchwardens, and Mr. Cartwright, one of the overseers. The whole of the boys of the Queen's Free School appeared on their way to church on Christmas-Day in a new suit of clothes, with new caps, given by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, and the girls were dressed, at the same time, by the bounty and liberality of the Duchess of Cambridge, in new frocks, bonnets, cloaks, &c. The Grand Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz (previous to their leaving Kew for the Continent) sent ten sovereigns to the vicar, to be by him distributed among the necessitous poor of the place.

CHRISTMAS AT THE PUBLIC OFFICES.—Tuesday, being Christmas Day, was, as usual, observed as a strict holiday at the several offices of Government, the public establishments, and also at the several docks and places on the river side devoted to the shipping and import trade of the port of London. The only exception to the general rule was the Post-office. The metropolitan district receipt and delivery of letters took place at the usual hours, after which there were no deliveries. The receipt and delivery of the morning mails from the country, and the despatch of letters, &c., from London in the evening, was, however, effected in the usual manner.

CHRISTMAS FARE AT THE ROYAL FREE HOSPITAL, GRAY'S INN-ROAD. The convalescent patients in this excellent institution were regaled on Tuesday with roast beef, plum pudding, and porter, by order of the governors.

CHRISTMAS-DAY IN THE WORKHOUSES.—DIMINUTION OF PAUPERISM. On Tuesday, according to annual custom, the pauper inmates of the metropolitan workhouses were provided by the respective parochial authorities with a sumptuous dinner, consisting of roast beef, plum pudding, and beer, and accompanied in several instances by an extra allowance of tea, tobacco, snuff, &c. The following statement exhibits the number of inmates in the principal workhouses on Christmas-Day, 1849, and 1848:—

WORKHOUSE.	1849.		1848.
	Inmates.	Outdoor.	Inmates.	Outdoor.
St. Pancras	1360	7054	1462	7283
Marylebone	1989	6500	2222	7230
Hanover-sq.	650	600	660	875
City of London Union	900	3000	1123	3496
Strand Union	644	1529	611	1748
St. Mary, Islington ..	420	No Return	480	No Return
St. Luke, Chelsea ..	515	2723	541	3196
Bagnigge Wells Union	1209	3869	1314	3650
St. Leonard's, Shoreditch ..	787	..	870	..
St. James, Clerkenwell ..	470	2035	537	1365
St. Olave's, Southwark ..	354	No Return	No Return	No Return
St. Mary's, Lambeth	1028	..	1035	..
St. Mary Magdalen, Bermondsey ..	630	..	664	..
Poplar Union	574	2283	651	2413
Whitechapel	1013	2258	647	2413
Edmonton	410	..	428	..
St. Mary, Newington ..	364	1792	348	2092
Holborn	708	..	918	..
Wandsworth	487	..	551	..
Kensington	319	1481	267	980
West London	495	..	450	..
St. James's, Westminster ..	700	700	713	724
St. George-in-the-East ..	300	..	347	..

It was not possible to obtain returns from some of the parishes, but the foregoing proves the satisfactory circumstance that there is a vast decrease in pauperism, with about two exceptions, in every parish in the metropolis, amounting in the aggregate to about 5000. It also appears that there are from 90,000 to 100,000 in the Metropolis who are dependent on parochial bounty for their Christmas-Day dinner. It must be remarked that the number of persons in the workhouses on Christmas-Day must not be taken as a criterion of the number usually therein, the inclemency of the weather and the certainty of a Christmas dinner being a strong incentive to persons to claim parochial relief.

THE POOR IN THE CITY.—In the course of Monday the officers of the different wards in the City were busily employed in distributing the Christmas alms to the poor residing within their respective limits. The relief was dispensed in money and coals, and in some instances bread. In addition to this seasonable aid the clergymen of many of the parishes, through the benevolence of their congregations, were enabled to relieve a number of poor distressed objects. Most of the civic companies also contributed a large amount of Christmas fare, which was liberally distributed amongst the poor recipients. During Saturday and Monday several hundred relief tickets for five shillings, in accordance with the vote of the Court of Common Council, were distributed amongst the widows and distressed relatives of deceased freemen. The Aldermen and members of the Common Council have frequently had cause for bestowing this charity. The tickets, on being presented at the Chamberlain's Office, entitled the holders to five shillings in money. The usual Christmas fare was liberally apportioned to the inmates of the City workhouses. In Newgate, Giltspur-street Bridewell, Borough Compter, Coldbath-fields, and the other metropolitan prisons, the unfortunate occupants were allowed a substantial meal of roast beef, potatoes, and plum-pudding, each adult being served with a pint of beer.

CHRISTMAS-DAY AT THE LEICESTER-SQUARE SOUP KITCHEN.—The committee provided soup and bread, and beef and plum-pudding, for 1146 destitute persons, many of whom were widows with large families, whose husbands had fallen victims to the late prevailing epidemic.

ORPHAN WORKING SCHOOL, HAVERSTOCK-HILL.—The children—now upwards of 200—of this school were regaled, as usual, on Christmas-Day, with roast beef and plum-pudding, after which they were liberally supplied with oranges. A large number of the governors visited the institution during the day.

RAINE'S CHARITIES.—On Wednesday, the annual general meeting of the trustees and friends of this institution was held in the board-room of the asylum, St. George's-in-the-East, Middlesex; Mr. M. J. Rippingham in the chair. There was a large attendance of ladies present. The treasurer, Mr. Richardson, laid before the meeting the objects of the charity:—The schools were originally built by Mr. Henry Raine, a large brewer, in 1719, for the purpose of clothing and educating 50 boys and 50 girls, and for the entire maintenance, clothing, and education of 40 girls, and giving "marriage portions" of £10 each to a hundred pounds. The children, who must be the offspring of parishioners of St. George's-in-the-East, enter the schools at the age of—males, nine years, and females, seven—in which the latter remain until such period as they are drafted into the asylum, when they become candidates for the hundred pounds marriage portion. In the asylum they remain for four years, during the last of which they are instructed in the duties of domestic servants; they then go out to service, and, at the age of 22, are entitled, on production of satisfactory testimonials from their employers, to draw lots for the prize. During their term in the schools and asylum they are educated in the principles of the Church of England, which they must still retain to enable them to be eligible as candidates for the marriage portion. Mr. Richardson concluded by expressing a feeling of deep regret that so valuable a charity should be circumscribed as it is by poverty, and compelled to appeal annually for donations to carry out the benevolent intentions of the founder, who, had he lived but a few years longer, would have made any such appeal unnecessary. The following officers were elected:—A dowment having consisted partly of leasehold property, of which the leases have expired, amounts to nearly £200. A formal report for the past year having been agreed upon, the ceremony of drawing the marriage lots for the ensuing year with. All the girls of the establishment were then seated around the table on which the ballot-boxes were placed, and those who were to draw took their seats at the head, while those who had drawn and received the prize faced them at the bottom of the table. The number of candidates on the present occasion were six, and the fortunate one will be married to a person, who must be a member of the Church of England, and approved of by the trustees, on the 1st of May next. The others continue to draw till all also succeed.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—The number of visitors to this national institution on Wed-sday was 13,986, being an increase, as compared with Boxing-day last year, of 7111, when the number was 6875. Specimens were also added to A division of police, under the directions of Sergeant Neale, were in attendance; and, although the increase of visitors was so much beyond the usual average, the greatest order and decorum was observed throughout the day.

AMALGAMATION OF PROTECTIONIST SOCIETIES.—The committees of the society in Bond-street, and of the National Society for Protection to British Capital and Industry, met on Monday, and made final arrangements for combining and giving full effect to the energies of the two bodies, by constituting them in one grand united confederation, under the title of "The National Association for the Protection of Industry and Capital throughout the British Empire."

MERCHANT SEAMEN'S SOCIETY.—On Monday, a quarterly general court of the Governors of this charitable corporation was held at the Society's offices, Birchin-lane, Cornhill, Mr. George Lindsay in the chair. The applications of upwards of fifty claimants for relief were considered, and nineteen of the most deserving were relieved.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.—A meeting of commercial travellers was held at the London Tavern, on Thursday, when it was resolved to establish an institution under the above title, to assist commercial travellers of ten years' or more standing in their old age; and a committee was appointed to lay down the necessary rules for carrying out the proposed object. Already about six hundred commercial travellers have expressed their willingness to join the institution.

THE NAVAL PRISONERS IN THE QUEEN'S BENCH.—Lieutenant Graham and Mr. Elliott, who, it will be recollected, were found guilty on their own confession of deserting from the Chatham, and who immediately thereupon were tried, after a lengthened investigation, by the court-martial to be cashiered, to be tyrannical and unbearable—these gentlemen, after having been brought from Exeter Gaol to the Queen's Prison, and placed by the governor in the best ward of the prison, where they can have the companionship of the most respectable inmates, and enjoy a sufficient space for exercise and recreation, were on Thursday last, under the orders of the Secretary of State of the Home Department, placed in the misdemeanants' ward, where prisoners of the most disreputable character, and every comfort which they have hitherto been permitted to enjoy, are forcibly taken from them. Prior to their removal, they addressed a protest to the governor of the prison, and a letter to the Secretary to the Admiralty on the subject, to neither of which has an answer been returned.

CASE OF MR. DYCE SOMBRE.—It is rumoured in the Court of Chancery, that this singular case is likely to be again made the subject of inquiry. It is stated, upon good authority, that the Lord Chancellor will propose that Dr. Seymour, Mr. Lawrence, and Dr. Forbes Winslow be appointed, in conjunction with one of his own physicians, either Dr. Bright or Dr. Southey, to consider the matter in all its details, and report to the court. Prior to the former inquiry, Mr. Dyce Sombre himself selected Dr. Winslow, Mr. Lawrence, and Dr. Seymour as his judges, and expressed himself willing to abide by their decision; but these gentlemen declined the question without the previous knowledge and consent of the Lord Chancellor (the legal guardian of Mr. Dyce Sombre), and having access to the important documents in possession of the Court of Chancery. Mr. Dyce Sombre then appointed four other gentlemen, who saw Mr. D. Sombre and made a report in his favour. The matter came before the Court of Chancery, and the petition was dismissed. Mr. Dyce Sombre is entitled to a pension, and is therefore supposed to be in receipt of that income. Nothwithstanding this he is under no kind of surveillance, has at command nearly £10,000 per annum, and is permitted to leave the country, and reside on the Continent. If he be a lunatic, it is said, why is this liberty allowed? Either his person ought to be under control, or he is fit to be at large, and have the management of his own affairs. He is the wealthiest person connected with the Court of Chancery placed in this peculiar and anomalous position. It is understood that Mr. Dyce Sombre has strongly expressed his readiness to abide by the medical opinion of Dr. Seymour, Mr. Lawrence, and Dr. Winslow.

CALIGRAPHY.—A very curious specimen of the pen art has been recently produced, after eighteen months' labour, by a Mr. John Packerd, of No. 3, Church-passage, Basinghall-street. It consists of devices and emblems most elaborately drawn with pen and ink, and comprising, amounting to nearly 18,000. Every letter is unique, and every embellishment entirely sui generis. The drawings are in good taste, the larger letters extremely bold and well formed, and the minute writing almost microscopic, yet clearly legible. The labour of the artist must have been intense, and it is to be hoped the result of his efforts and diligence will be properly estimated by those best qualified to patronise such skill.

FIRE AT ROLLS CHAMBERS.—On Saturday night, about half-past eight o'clock, a fire, which caused considerable damage, although of short duration, broke out in the premises termed Rolls Chambers, situate at 80, Chancery-lane. The premises, which had a frontage in Chancery-lane by only sixteen feet, being occupied as the Patent Journal Office), extended backwards upwards of 150 feet into Chancery-court; and from the fact of the houses in Carey-street, and numerous others, abutting upon that portion of the building, considerable alarm was expected. With the exception of the front shop before alluded to, the whole of the upper floors were occupied by gentlemen connected with the law, as chambers, and in almost of the apartments have extensively suffered. The fire, the water thrown by the engines into the flames has penetrated every room, and done, apparently, an incalculable amount of mischief. Before the firemen arrived the flames had broken through the window of that part of the premises in Chancery-court, and had extended into the apartments in Chancery-lane. Plenty of water having been soon obtained, the engines were set to work, the hose being conveyed up the staircase of the premises on fire, and also up Chancery-court, and by that means the firemen were enabled to encompass the flames at every point; and before half-past ten o'clock, less than one hour from the time the outbreak commenced, the conflagration was entirely subdued. The damage done by fire is confined to the destruction of several chambers in the upper part of the building, and the lower floors are severely damaged by water. As to the origin of the fire nothing that can be depended upon could be learned, further could it be ascertained whether the premises were insured or not.

THE LATE BERMONDSEY MURDER.—The Secretary of State has allowed the following rewards to the parties employed in the detection and conviction of Mr. and Mrs. Manning, the perpetrators of the murder of Mr. Patrick O'Connor:—Inspector Field, £15; Sergeants Langley, Witcher, and Thornton, £10 each; Shaw, Kendal, and Smith, £8 each; Andrews, £5; Constables Barnes, £10; Barton, £8; and Lockyer, £5.

STATISTICS OF CHOLERA IN THE METROPOLIS.—The most important particulars registered of each case of cholera were published, week by week, in the tables, as late not only as visited the various officers engaged in preventing and treating the disease, but put the facts within the reach of all those who were studying the nature and causes of the epidemic. Data were thus published which will show the influence of sex, age, season, locality, water, drainage, occupation, wealth or poverty. It is gratifying to find that, in addition to the analyses which have been already drawn up at the General Register Office others have been undertaken by private inquirers; and Dr. Guy has favoured the Registrar-General with the following account of the professions or occupations of 4312 men of the age of 15 and upwards who were destroyed by cholera. It will be seen that the disease, in London, was not only fatal to the poor, but to many artizans, tradesmen, shopkeepers, professional people, and persons of independent means. Of the men who died of cholera, 135 were returned simply as gentlemen or of independent means, 6 were clergymen or ministers of religion, 16 medical men, 13 magistrates or lawyers, 11 architects or engineers, 11 merchants, 11 officers in the army and navy, 25 master mariners, 100 clerks or accountants, 11 Custom-house, 7 Excise officers, 14 bankers, 7 law-stationers, &c., 14 carpenters, undertakers, &c., 13 cheesemongers, 17 drapers, &c., 11 fishmongers, 12 fruiterers, 20 grocers, 10 oilmen, 42 licensed victuallers, 5 wine merchants, 8 master shoemakers, 6 master tailors, 5 tobacconists, 19 travellers. Of the classes returned as artizans and labourers, 52 were bakers, 32 butchers, 102 weavers, 83 tailors, 151 shoemakers, 47 bricklayers, 17 masons, 20 plasterers, 70 cabinetmakers, 111 carpenters, 38 coopers, 73 painters and glaziers, 33 brewers, 20 shipwrights, 32 tanners, 18 turners, 16 coachmakers, 30 cabmen, 57 coachmen and cabmen, 15 saddlers, 52 carmen and carriers, 37 grooms and ostlers, 6 stone-masons, 14 engineers, 10 railway guards, 13 stokers, 75 letter-carriers and porters, 24 watermen or lightermen, 7 watchmen, 52 soldiers, 299 sailors and Greenwich pensioners, 27 waitermen, 18 bargemen, 7 ballast heavers, 53 coal-porters and coal-heavers, 25 footmen and manservants; 755 labourers are returned. Dr. Guy has given in the table a rough approximation to the ratio which the deaths bear to the living" in the several occupations. This determination is as difficult as it is interesting. The occupations were only returned for the metropolis in a very general way by the Census Commissioners in 1841, and in which the trades masters were not distinguished from men. The results which deserve most attention are those which relate to "gentlemen," "independent," numerous occupations. "Labourer," "Artizan," "Man-servant," are terms very loosely employed, but the statement that 1 in 67 labourers, 1 in 200 gentlemen, and 1 in 1872 men-servants, including footmen, died of cholera, expresses something near the truth incurred by the three classes in the epidemic. The domestic man-servants of London were 39,300 in 1841, and 25 died of cholera; the clergy, doctors, and lawyers did not exceed 12,000, yet 35 persons belonging to the learned profession died of cholera in 1849. In the weekly returns, from which the statements is drawn up, the professions were not uniformly given; but the abstract will be made more complete afterwards from the register-books.

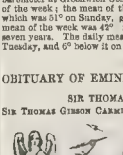
DISTRICT AND DEATHS.—In the metropolitan districts the deaths registered in the week ending last Saturday were 1643; the weekly average of the last quarter of five previous years, corrected for increase of population, is 1162. In the corresponding week of the year 1848, 276 deaths were registered; in that of 1847, 1946 deaths, when the mortality was increased by influenza; and in the same week of 1843, the deaths were 1119. But though still considerably less than usual, the present weekly contingent now shows a tendency to rise to the winter rate of mortality; and the present return shows an increase of 41 on the deaths of the previous week. In three successive weeks, ending Dec. 15, the deaths from bronchitis were respectively 60, 86, 89; last week they rose to 114, while the average is only 68; from asthma there were 21, 16, 26, and 19 in the last four weeks; and from pneumonia (or inflammation of the lungs), 94, 88, 90, and 81. The mortality from pneumonia, which is less than the average, occurs to a much greater extent among children than aged persons; and the latter class are now the principal sufferers from the increased coldness of the weather. Three men and five women died last week at 90 and upwards; two of the women had turned 95 years. Diarrhœa and dysentery deaths were 19; a woman of 70 died on the 16th December, in Great Pulteney-street, from debility, which succeeded an attack of cholera. All epidemics are less fatal than usual, except measles, which rather exceeds the average. The births during the week were 1315

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean daily reading of the barometer at Greenwich Observatory was above 30 inches on the last three days of the week; the mean of the week was 29·952. The daily mean temperature, which was 51° on Sunday, gradually fe l to 33° on Friday and Saturday; the mean of the week was 41·2°, being 1·2° above the average of the nine weeks in seven years. The daily mean was about 10° above the average on Sunday and Tuesday, and 6° below it on Friday.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

SIR THOMAS GIBSON CARMICHAEL, BART.

SIR THOMAS GIBSON CARMICHAEL, of Skirling, in the county of Peebles, succeeded his brother, Sir John Gibson Carmichael, as tenth Baronet. Sir Thomas was married, first, April 11, 1811, to Harriet, daughter of the late Major-General Dundas, of Flogask; and, secondly, on the 8th June, 1816, to Miss Jane Napier, daughter of Francis seventh Lord Napier. He leaves issue, besides three daughters, a son, Alexander, born in 1820, now the eleventh Baronet. Sir Thomas died at Naples, on the 13th inst.



The family of Sir Gibson Carmichael is of distinguished and honourable descent. The first Baronet, Sir Alexander Gibson, whose patent of creation dates as far back as 1628, was an eminent lawyer, and Lord President of the Court of Session, in the reign of James I. The wife of Carmichael was assumed by the ninth Baronet on the occasion of his marriage with Helen Carmichael, granddaughter of the first Earl of Hyndford.

JOHN LORD COLVILLE, OF CULROSS, ADMIRAL OF THE WHITE.

THIS nobleman, whose death has just occurred, at the advanced age of eighty-one, entered the Royal Navy very early in life, and thus included in his naval career a very full portion of his country's maritime glory. In 1781, he served as midshipman in the Conqueror at Rodney's great victory over Count de Grasse; in 1793, he obtained his lieutenancy; in 1794, assisted, as first lieutenant of the Lively, at Martinique, at the capture of the French West India Islands, in 1795, took a privateer, the Coup d'Essai; and in 1796 was promoted to post rank. Passing over a few years, we find the gallant officer commanding the Heroine, 74, in the expedition against Copenhagen, in 1807, and accompanying home from Lisbon the surrendered Russian fleet, in 1808. In 1819 he became rear-admiral, and was commander-in-chief at the Cork station from 1837 to 1839. His lordship succeeded to his family honours at the decease of his father, John, ninth Baron, in 1811. He married, 14th October, 1790, Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Ford, Esq., and had by her (who died in 1839, an only child, Amelia, who died young. His Lordship married, secondly, 13th October, 1841, the Hon. Anne Law, fourth daughter of Edward, first Lord Ellenborough, but by her had no child. As he thus dies without issue, the title and honours devolve on his nephew, Charles John, now Lord Colville, of Culross, who is son of the late gallant and highly distinguished General Sir Charles Colville, G.C.B.

BISHOP COLERIDGE.

THE Right Rev. William Hart Coleridge, D.D., late Bishop of Barbadoes, was the only son of Luke Herman Coleridge, Esq., of Thoverton, Devonshire. He was born in 1789, and received his earlier education at the King's Grammar School, St. Mary, Devon; he after that went to Oxford, and was successively student and tutor of Christchurch. His appointments in the Church during the course of his good and useful life, were the perpetual curacy of Cowley, Oxon, the Curacy and Lectureship of St. Andrew's, Holborn; the Preachership of the National Society's Chapel, in Ely-place; and lastly, in 1824, the Bishopric of Barbadoes. This Bishopric he resigned in 1842, when a reduction was made of the diocese. The Bishop's brother, Mr. Prelsto was also Warden of St. Augustin's College, Canterbury.

He married, in 1825, the eldest daughter of the Very Rev. Thomas Rennell, D.D. (Dean of Winchester, and Master of the Temple), and grandniece of the celebrated Sir William Blackstone. Bishop Coleridge, who was much respected and revered, died suddenly of disease of the heart, on the 21st inst., at his seat, Salston, Otley St. Mary, Devon. He was in the 61st year of his age.

ARCHDEACON JENNINGS.

THE Venerable Philip Jennings, D.D., Archdeacon of Norfolk, was for many years Assistant Minister of St. James' Chapel, Westminster-road, Pentonville, and he ascended to the incumbency of that place a few weeks ago, on the death of the Rev. Thomas White, M.A. Dr. Jennings was made an Archdeacon in 1847, by the late Bishop of Norwich, Dr. Stanley. The recent demise of Archdeacon Jennings causes deep regret amongst the clergy of the diocese of Norwich

REV. DR. RUDGE.—The report of the decease of this gentleman (which has appeared in several papers, though not in our Journal), who for many years was so well known in London as the clergyman of Limehouse, and the Sunday evening Preacher of St. Sepulchre's, is happily incorrect. It is, however, true that he has had a paralytic stroke, and has been seriously unwell; but his numerous friends will be glad to learn that he has nearly recovered from this severe attack, and is on the point of resuming the duties of the parish of which he is the Rector

A MODEL CITY.—The city of Utica, New York, does not owe a single cent of public debt, and has money in bank, besides taxes due and collectable. It has an abundant supply of water brought into the houses of the citizens, fresh from the mountain springs. It is lighted by gas of pure and excellent quality; has the best appointed and most effective fire department of any city of its size in America, and is the only city in the state which wholly escaped the ravages of the cholera last summer.

SCENE FROM THE PANTOMIME OF "HARLEQUIN AND GOOD QUEEN BESS," AT DRURY-LANE THEATRE.

CHRISTMAS PANTOMIMES AND EXTRAVAGANZAS.

DRURY-LANE.

The most important event of boxing-night was the re-opening of this theatre, under the management of Mr. James Anderson; and the public, evidently entertaining this view, crowded to it in extraordinary numbers. Much confusion was the consequence of the inconvenience accordingly felt; and the lessee had to address his audience four times in the course of the evening—now expressing his gratification, now exhibiting his anger, now threatening the gallery with a rise of prices, and finally winding up (after the fall of the curtain) with a speech in a better temper. The play was the "Merchant of Venice," Shylock being performed by the manager, who naturally wished to be heard in his first essay in such a character before a London audience. Miss Laura Addison was Portia; Miss Clara Tellett, Nerissa; and Miss Huddart, Jessica.

The pantomime, attractively entitled "Harlequin and good Queen Bess," introduced to the Christmas audience at this theatre the Messrs. Denlin as Harlequin and Pantaloon, and Mr. C. Stitt as Clown. The introduction travesties the story of Amy Robsart and the Earl of Leicester; wherein Queen Elizabeth is absurdly caricatured in costume and person by Mr R. Romer. The inventor of pantomimes is also called into the field, the Spirit of John Bach (Mr. Darcie), who contends with the Spirit of High Tragedy (Mr. J. Parry), and succeeds in redeeming Amy and the Earl from a tragic fate, converting them into Harlequin and Columbine. The latter was elegantly personated by Mdlle. Théodore. The tricks of the pantomime contain some good hits, those at the Smithfield nuisance and the Peace Society being the most palpable. It concludes with a diorama, presenting the Queen's visit to Ireland. Though exceedingly long, the whole went off with spirit; and it may be justly conceded that Mr. Anderson has commenced his experiment with a fair amount of encouragement, and that the public are ready to believe that it is the lessee's intention to deserve success. At any rate, they gave him on this occasion, what is properly acknowledged as a "noble house-warming."

The scene engraved is Queen Elizabeth's interview with her several lovers, in the gardens of Kenilworth.

PRINCESS'S.

After the opera of "Don Giovanni," a new and very eccentric pantomime, by Mr. G. H. Rodwell, entitled "King Jamie; or, Harlequin and the Magic Fiddle," was produced. Here, in the Hall of Evil Spirits, we are introduced to Alcohol (Mr. Stacey), exiled by Father Mathew and the Water Cure, who conspires against the peace of King James (Mr. Honey), ending his many plots with the Gunpowder Plot. Guy Faux and his party are frightened away by Old Seymour, the Scotch blind fiddler, who escapes with his Royal companion. The opening of Parliament then succeeds; the fun consisting in representing the statesmen of the present day in grotesque masks. The audience were uproarious in applause. After a few more palpable hits of a similar kind, the changes occur—Harlequin, Mr. Bologna; Columbine, Miss Fawcett; Pantaloon, Mr. Paulo; Clown, Mr. Flexmore. In addition to these are Sprites, by Messrs. Le Bar and Wright. The rapidity and bustle of this pantomime are unrivalled, and many of the tricks are admirable. The scenery well merits high commendation; while the acting (for it deserves no lower word) of Mr. Flexmore was of rare excellence. The house, we regret to add, was over noisy; particularly that portion of it which, in its thunder, as well as its elevation, represents Olympus.

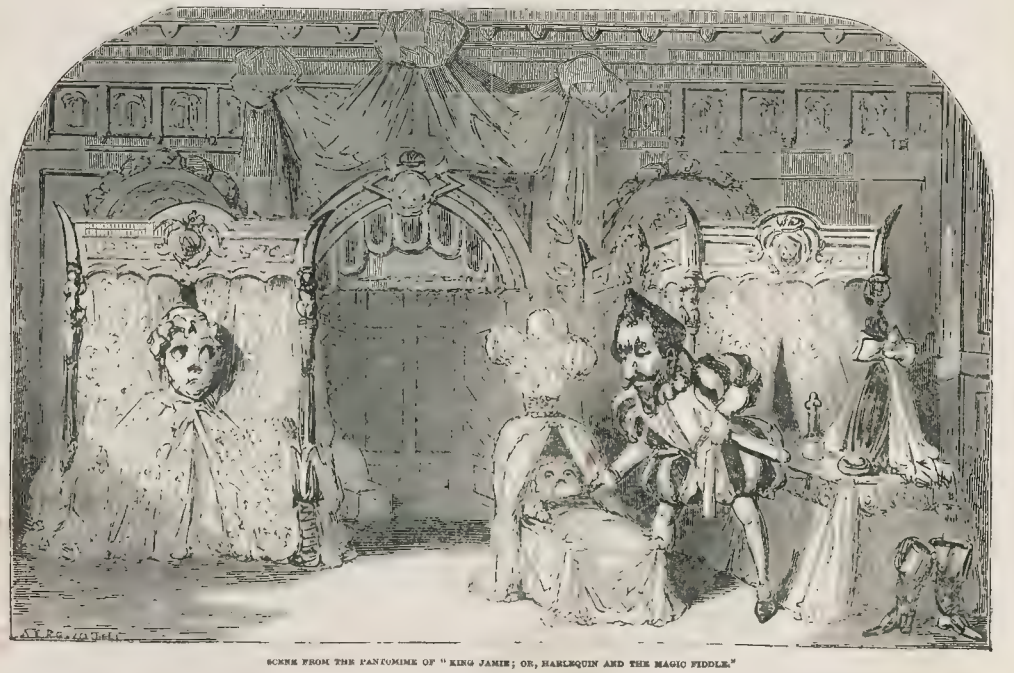
The scene engraved is the Royal bedroom, with the refractory Royal Babes Charles very unruly in his cradle.

OLYMPIC.

This theatre, newly built and decorated, commences the season in gallant style. Mrs. Mowatt opened the house with an appropriate address, which was admirably delivered; after which, the National Anthem was sung; and then "The Two Gentlemen of Verona" acted. The selection of this play may be accepted as an example of the elegant taste which is likely to preside over its management. Mr. Davenport made an excellent Valentine; Protens was by Mr. Ryder; and Miss F. Vining appeared as Julia.

Then came the Pantomime, "Laugh and Grow Fat; or, Harlequin Nutcracker"—a highly whimsical mélange, contrived by Mr. Nelson Lee, in which the fun begins even before the piece—a special drop-curtain having been provided for the occasion, pictured over with "Nuts to Crack" in abundance. The halls of Merry Christmas and Good Cheer are visited by Old Time, who is told that Nutcracker, stoker to the engine of Fun, is engaged for the festive season, charged with instructions to upset King Humbug, and secure Conseni; for which purpose he is provided with a provisional army, and a kitchen corps. The palace of Humbug is visited, where the sprite Gammon counsels the bloated Monarch on the means of obtaining the hand of the Princess Conseni, the daughter of King Nonsense. A council is next held in the Pearl Palace of the Water Nafads by the Fairy Queen Sincerity, touching a project for aiding Christmas and assisting young Merth, too long hidden under a shade, by sending to earth the fairy Joy with a golden pencil. Nutcracker immediately afterwards appearing, affords sport to the Eighth Monarch. A change from sunlight to moonlight is here accomplished in the scene—an original effect, due to Mr. Dayes, the principal artist; and the march of Nutcracker is impeded by the darkness, who, with his army, falls asleep; whereupon they are annoyed by a host of wandering cats, attracted to the spot by the provender. Nutcracker, awaking, exclaims, "Up, guards, and at 'em!" and, after a terrific conflict, secures a victory. Sunlight returns; and then, what with the Palace of Nonsense and the Chamber of Whimsicalities, the success, which forms the theme of the piece, is realised namely, abundance of laughter; in the midst of which the transformations occur—the clown being performed by Mr. T. Matthews, who in the Hall of Twelfth-Cakes, wins a prize, with which the piece concludes. The whole getting-up is excellent; the scenery being, in fact, nothing less than superb. We must not omit, in our great admiration of Mr. T. Matthews, to record that Mr. Cormack was the Harlequin, Miss Malcolm the Columbine, and Mr. Morris the Pantaloon. All did their spiriting with precision, force, and grace.

The house was crowded with a highly fashionable audience; and the whole performance testified to the liberality of the management, giving an earnest assurance of success, as well as of determination to deserve it.



SCENE FROM THE PANTOMIME OF "KING JAMIE; OR, HARLEQUIN AND THE MAGIC FIDDLE."

SCENE FROM THE EXTRAVAGANZA OF "THE NINTH STATUE; OR, THE JEWELS AND THE GEM," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.

ADELPHI.

"Frankenstein; or, the Model Man," is the name of the extravaganza produced at this theatre; the Model Man being none other than Mr. Paul Bedford himself, and his Frankenstein Mr. Wright, Senior Wrangler of Brasenface College, in the University of Krackenjausen, who, being in love, has a rival in Otto of Rosenberg (Miss Woolgar). The demon Zamiel (O. Smith) and a Master of the Ceremonies (by Freeborn) perform prominent rôles in the burlesque. The former puts life into the "What is it?" or Frankenstein monster, which then pursues its creator into the ball-room, and, but for a benevolent fairy, who contrives to subdue the mis-created by the force of music, might have effected wide-spread desolation. Already, indeed, a conflagration has spread in the baronial hall, only extinguished by the agency of Undine, the Spirit of the Flood, who finally conquers Zamiel, and delivers Frankenstein.

The jokes, thickly strewn over the dialogue, were of the broadest; but an Adelphi audience expect always the colossal in the extravagant; and in this burlesque they have most assuredly not been disappointed.

HAYMARKET.

After the "Loving Woman," and "King René's Daughter," a grand extravaganza, entitled the "Ninth Statue; or, the Jewels and the Gem," by the Messrs. Brough, was produced. Alasnam (Miss F. Horton), over-fond, though a King, of beer, is subject to a visionary state of mind, and dreams of a grotto with eight statues in it—such grotto, with its superabundant wealth, having its correspondent reality in the waking world. By means of a subterranean passage, Alasnam finds his way to it, and there meets with Rumfogs (Mr. Bland), the chief Monarch of the genii, who proposes to add a ninth statue to the group, on condition that Alasnam provides him with a faultless maiden. Ultimately, he fulfils this condition by selecting Zuleika (Miss Kathleen Fitzwilliam), whose modesty and personal charms succeed in attracting his own heart; but Rumfogs is inflexible, and has her carried off by violence, leaving his subject Monarch to melancholy and despair, and the reproaches of an angry mother, who thinks that the loss of a wife is not a thing to grieve for. Rumfogs, however, at length settles all differences like a gentle genl, shewing Zuleika on the pedestal as the ninth statue, and bestowing her on her once disappointed but now happy lover.

Miss Kathleen Fitzwilliam made her first appearance here in the character of the faultless maiden, and played enchantingly. Of Mr. Bland and Miss Horton, it is sufficient to state that they threw their usual exuberance of spirit into their respective parts. Mr. Munyard, also, as secretary to the amorous Monarch, had some humorous business to do, and some burlesque parodies to sing, which proved highly amusing. The audience was respectable as well as numerous, and the evening passed off without the slightest disturbance. It was composed of the class who could afford to be wise as well as merry.

The scene engraved is the entrance of Alasnam, the young King, into the grotto of eight statues.

LYCEUM.

The extravaganza at this theatre—written, of course, by Mr. Planché—is entitled "The Island of Jewels." The King and Queen of Pharisis are the parents of two daughters—one ugly, and one beautiful, through the spells of the fairy Magotina, who had been forgotten at their christening. Bellotta (Miss Kenworthy) is the name of the lovely, and Laidronetta (Miss Julia St. George) that of the hideous sister. The former has a lover, one Prince Pritzphello; and, at their marriage ceremony, Laidronetta and her confidante, Fidelia, are refused admittance, and, being fain to return to the Lone Tower, are wrecked at sea on the Island of Jewels, the King of which has been changed into a green serpent, and his people into precious stones. The Princess, of course, finds a husband in King Emerald, as may be seen set forth more at large in the Countess D'Anois' story of "Serpentine Vert."

Of all Mr. Planché's burlesques, the present is, perhaps, the most elegant ever witnessed, and the way in which it has been produced the most gorgeous imaginable. An incidental ballet, on the subject of "Cupid and Psyche," was introduced into the action with fine effect. The concluding scene—discovering, in the midst of an unfolded column of palm leaves, seven nymphs supporting the crown jewels on a cushion—is indescribably magnificent. The whole, also, was in perfect taste; and the piece must be pronounced a crowning triumph in the art of burlesque.

The scene engraved is the Lone Tower, with Magotina raising the storm at sea, with the saving intervention of the serpent.

SADLER'S WELLS.

After "Venice Preserved," a new pantomime, by Mr. Greenwood, was produced, entitled "Harlequin and the Dragon of Wantley; or, Moore of Moore Hall and Mother Shipton's Black Dog." Old Age, in the regions of Decay, laments the dissolution of the ancient works of art, but Youth and his attendant Beauties enter, and, to raise his spirits, propose a Christmas pantomime, in which he is assisted by Folly and Mother Shipton. The site of Moore Hall is the village of Rotherham, in Yorkshire; and here the Dragon of Wantley is in due course destroyed by the valiant owner of the mansion, and the consequent transformations succeed, Mr. T. Ridgway being the Clown, Mr. Fenton the Harlequin, Mr. Thorne the Sprite, Mr. Grammain Pantaloon, and Miss Kirby Columbine. The grace of Miss Kirby and the agility of Mr. Thorne commanded the admiration of a crowded house, which, nevertheless, listened to the tragedy with extraordinary attention, a circumstance probably due to the impressive acting of Miss Glyn in Belvidera.

MARYLEBONE.

This theatre, under the management of Mr. E. Stirling, leads off with an original drama, entitled "Clara Charette; or, a Daughter's Sacrifice"—a piece of domestic interest—criticism on which we must defer, not having been able to gather the dialogue, owing to the noise in the gallery. After this was produced a new pantomime, called "Harlequin Faëry-Land, the Princess Zela, and her Magic Wishes Three." It is the joint production of Mr. Watts and Nelson Lee. The fairy court in the pale moonlight opens the piece with poetic sentimentality. Fortune brings to Fairy-Land the sleeping Princess Zela, who had refused to wed for gold, and is then returned to earth, gifted with a magic branch. The lady's hand is ultimately put up to be disposed of in the grand halls of Katchkill Castle. At the auction are three special bidders—the Knight of Gold, the Demon of Gold, and the Prince of Poverty. The last offers all he is worth his love—and is accepted; for which piece of audacity he is sent to prison. Subsequently, by aid of a magic glass, all three lovers are transported to California, where the miseries of the diggers are exhibited. A golden palace and a cot of happiness succeed, the requisite consent is obtained, and the transformations take place, Mr. Paul Pietro being the Clown.

SCENE FROM THE EXTRAVAGANZA OF "THE ISLAND OF JEWELS," AT THE LYCEUM THEATRE.

STRAND.

After "King René's Daughter," a burlesque called "Diogenes and his Lantern; or, the True Use and Cry after Honesty," was produced, in which it must be confessed that the whole strength of Mr. Farren's excellent company is engaged. The conduct of the well-known plot is of a mythological cast. We have an Olympian synod, with Minerva announcing her descent to help Diogenes in his search after an honest man, and suffering, on that account, the ridicule of the gods, which, however, she repays with interest. They, in return, disguise themselves, and also their search, bent on frustrating her design, in which they succeed. The composition of the piece is throughout in good taste; and there are many lines which are exquisitely pointed.

When we add that, in this little piece, Mrs. Stirling, Miss Rebecca Isaacs, Mrs. Leigh Murray and her husband, with the two junior Farrens, and Messrs Butler and Bender have not disdained to play, it may be readily conceived that the general effect is striking, and richly deserving of support.

SURREY.

Colman's play of "The Mountaineers" is the leading piece for the holidays, and well chosen for the occasion. Octavian was admirably performed by Mr. Mead. This was followed by a pantomime, somewhat elegantly entitled "The Moon Queen and King Night." An account of which was given in our last Number. It is by Alfred Crowquill, and is altogether as elegant as it is amusing. Some portions of it, however, will bear abridgment. Mdlle. Luiza as Columbine, M. Lupino as Harlequin, Mr. Dawbon as Clown, Mr. Neyton as Pantaloon, and Mr. J. Lupino as the attendant Sprite, were excellent representatives of the respective characters.

ASTLEY'S.

The grand equestrian spectacle of the "Knight of the Eagle Crest, or the Tourney of Love," with the scenes in the circle, introducing, for the first time, Mdlle. Angèle and her highly trained steeds, preceded, at this theatre, a new pantomime, by Mr. Nelson Lee, entitled "Harlequin Yankee Doodle." We gave an account of the plot in our last Number. The scenery is exceedingly brilliant, and the whole arrangement highly creditable to the skill and artistic feeling of all engaged.

NEW PANORAMIC EXHIBITIONS

Arctic Expeditions.—A moving panorama is exhibiting at the Haymarket-rooms, combining the results of the principal Arctic navigators. The latest taken in the fate of Sir John Franklin crafts the most conspicuous of these Polar regions popular. The illustrations in the panorama are authentically rendered from original drawings by Sir James Ross, and Captains Lyon and Beechey. The uniform desolation of those tracts gives an air of monotony to the view; but their grandeur and beauty will doubtless be accepted as amply compensating for their want of variety.

New Zealand.—Mr. Bree's Panorama of New Zealand, in Leicester-square, is a highly interesting and well-painted series of views, animated with colonists and natives, and rendered illustrative of their habits and customs, being replete also with remarkable objects and incidents. We are thus made pictorially acquainted with life in the colony and in the bush. It deserves to be mentioned that the lecturer gives personal experiences in the explanations with which he accompanies the exhibition—verifying the accuracy of his drawings (which were made on the spot) by remarks and anecdotes, full of intelligence and point. The views are principally taken from the Port Nicholson district, and are presented under an aspect peculiarly encouraging to the intending emigrant.

Ohio River.—Mr. Banvard's Panorama of this river was opened on Wednesday, at the Egyptian Hall, and presents a fine series of views, exhibiting the Queen City of the West, Cincinnati, and other scenery onward to the Mississippi and the City of New Orleans. The river is exceedingly animated, and the banks are varied with highly interesting groups and objects. The whole is intensely American, and is so elaborately painted that the characteristic peculiarities are uniformly brought out.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

In my last week's communication I promised an account of the début of Lurchesi, the new tenor from the Milan Scala. He has been singing in Rossini's "Matilda di Shabran," to the observer of Correspondance, opera now composed for the Carnival of Rome in 1821, and was produced at the Apollo Theatre, the composer having completed the work only just previously to the closing of the season, so that merely two rehearsals took place, and the leader of the band, taking fright at the difficulties in the score, was replaced by the celebrated Paganini, to oblige Rossini. The amateurs received "Matilda" on its revival with the greatest delight, and the success of the new tenor was complete. He is essentially a tenor of the Rosslnian school, with an agreeable organ of no great power, but possessing executive facility of which modern tenors of the cavara or shouting school are knowers no longer; he therefore, be a valuable acquisition under any circumstances, but he must be heard in other parts before his precise position can be indicated. The impression in his favour is generally very great, and a tenor with agility and volubility is too rare not to be highly prized. The opera was very well executed altogether. If not equal to the "Barbière," it is quite as fresh and captivating in melody as the "Cenerentola," and more attractive than "Turco in Italia," "Italiana in Algeri," &c. Matilda is one of Madame Persiani's most brilliant triumphs, and she quite electrified the audiences by her wonderful tours de force Mdlle. Vera sings the music of the page very nicely. Morelli was the chief basso, and Ronconi enacted the poet with the most unctuous humour. The production of "Matilda" has been quite an event for his management; he has fought a most difficult battle to maintain the Italian Opera House, since the Revolution: for of all establishments, the undertaking the most demand aristocratic resource, suffered the most by the change of government. Ronconi has, however, exhibited much perseverance and tact, and the boxes and stalls begin to display something like the elegant coup-d'œil of the saloon

Cerito and St. Leon have returned to their engagement at the Grand Opera. Carlotta Grisi has her leave of absence the end of this month, and will go to Germany, and perhaps to England. "La Peyrou" has now been played thirty-seven times, and the receipts have been nearly £15,000.

Musical Events.—There were three concerts on Boxing-night, one at Ex ter Hall, being the tenth of the London Wednesday Concerts; Ernst and Thalberg, and Master Ward (concertina), were the instrumentalists, and Mrs A. Newton, Misses Eyles and Poole, Messrs. Land and Smyth, on the vocalists. The second was at the Sussex Hall, given by the vocalists the Misses A. and H. Alexander, assisted by the Misses Cabitt, L. Pettigrew, E. Ward, Messrs. H. Russell, Mattocks, Genge, G. Case, and Davies; and the third, Mr. J. Lowry's concert, at the National Hall, Holborn with Mrs. Temple, Misses Cubitt and Felton, Messrs. Genge, G. Robinson, F. Smith and Ford.——The meetings of the Melodists' Club will commence for the season, on the last Tuesday in January, Mr. James King has succeeded Mr. Hobbs as secretary.——The Round, Catch, and Canon Club, instituted 1843, and the Glee Club (1787), have begun their meetings—The anniversary festival of the Madrigal Society (1741) will be celebrated on the third Thursday in January, Lord Saltoun in the chair, Sir A. Barnard, G.C.B., vice-president, and T. Oliphant, Esq., secretary The next meeting of the Western Madrigal Society will take place on the 5th of January ——The Philharmonic Concerts will take place on the Mondays, March 4 and 18, April 22; May 6 and 20; June 3 and 17. Mr. Costa, conductor; Mr. G. Budd, secretary and librarian; Mr. Anderson, bon. treasurer; and M. Salmton and H. Blagrove alternately first violins. The choir consists of the Misses G. Anderson, Lucas, J. H. Griesbach, C. Neate, J. Calken, J. B. Chatterton, and J. Macmurdie. There will be a new symphony by Molique, and, it is to be hoped, one by Berlioz.——The Choral Harmonists will resume their concerts at the London Tavern in the season.——The third of Mr. Willey's classical concerts will take place on Monday, at St. Martin's Hall.

ANSWERS TO "WHYS FOR THE WISE,"

AT PAGE 423.

1. Because he is illustrated with cuts taken on the spot.
2. From his position in life, he is liable to a tax.
3. When met, it is only putting one crown on another.
4. It won't hold. It is seen through.
5. Is it a nobbyness never borne by gentlemen.
6. He has already worn it above two years.
7. Made to carry a point through.
8. It is placed above man.
9. It makes things fast.
10. Easily beaten.
11. It is read outside.
12. It is substitute, where there has been no ragging lately.
13. It is unlike the waist (waste) of your youth.
14. By one act it lowers the corn.
15. It is capable of making an impression with wax (wax).
16. It goes over the sleepers.
17. There is a great deal of fiction on a very thin sheet.
18. It is carried by the Noes (nose).
19. They are to be taken when the cold is severe.
20. It takes a blow from any one.
21. It goes before Everything and Everybody.
22. It hides the woman
23. Because the Commissioners put a number round his neck.
24. It is bent upon getting to the top.
25. Because by its gentle revolution it opens the door to greater things.
26. Waiting for a shop.
27. Because it is decidedly put out.
28. It is a leg-all (legal) tender.
29. It gets trussed (trust) when it does not want it.
30. It never gets anything in the pound.
31. He is in "trouble" through a bill.
32. It is sure to come after you (u)
33. It is nothing without it's thrown (thrown).
34. It has a neigh (nay) for everything
35. Everything is a matter of course with him
36. There's a great deal in the habit.
37. It's the boy's parent.
38. It's a bill quite out of date.
39. Whatever it does, it must be tolled (told) to the time.
40. There's a Bridge of Size in it.
41. Constantly on the 'Change.
42. It goes to the head and settles the point of a tack (attack)
43. He never does more than try.
44. His is the fee line (feline).
45. It assists in sweetening everything.
46. It burns for a number.
47. It is positively a great singer (grate singer).
48. It blows upon everything.
49. He continually sends poor devils to the Hall (haul).
50. He is always putting his foot in it.
51. It is bodies.
52. He considers it part of his duty to relieve his comrades.
53. He had a reverse, by being bent on a measure.
54. He only takes it in by the peck
55. It brings the little branches together.
56. It's been in a row, and you can't collect the rents.

IMPORTANT TO NEWSPAPER PURCHASERS.

Early in the New Year, 1850, will be given a

SPLENDID VIEW OF ROME

To all Regular Subscribers to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from this date. This View of Rome has been carefully drawn by Artists specially engaged in that City; and the utmost care has been taken to have the Drawings Engraved in the best manner.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

Sunday, Dec. 30.—First Sunday after Christmas.
Monday, 31.—Silvester. Sun rises 8h. 9m., sets 3h. 58m.
Tuesday, Jan. 1, 1850.—Circumcision. Sun rises 8h. 8m., sets 4h. 0m.
Wednesday, 2.—Length of day 7h. 53m.
Thursday, 3.—Day breaks 6h. 3m. A.M.
Friday, 4.—Twilight ends 6h 6m. P.M.
Saturday, 5.—Moon's Last Quarter 8h. 37m. A.M.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JANUARY 5, 1850.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h	m	h	m	h	m	h	m	h	m	h	m	h	m
2	5	3	0	3	25	3	45	4	10	4	30	5	0
5	20	5	40	6	0	6	20	6	40	7	0	7	25

FRENCH PLAYS and OPERA COMIQUE, ST. JAMES'S

THEATRE. Mr. MITCHELL respectfully announces that the Season will commence on MONDAY, JANUARY 7th, by the production of a new opera, in three acts, entitled LE VAL D'ANDORE, by the Maestro composer Halevy, the Libretto by M. de St. Georges. Principal Characters by Mademoiselle Charton, Mdlle Guichard, Mons Chollet of the Opera Comique, Paris—his first appearance in this country; Mons Lut (of the Theatre, Brussels and Ghent—his first appearance); M Quilly Le Roy (Pupil of the Conservatoire, Paris—his first appearance), and Mons Wallace (premier Basse of the Opera Comique, Paris—his first appearance). Herold's celebrated opera of ZAMPA is also in preparation, and will be produced during the following week. Prospectus of the general arrangements, with Terms of the Season Subscription, may be obtained at Mr. MITCHELL'S Royal Library, 33, Old Bond street, and at the Box-office of the Theatre, which will be opened on Tuesday next, Jan 1.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. W.

BATTY.—Glorious Success of the New Grand Christmas Comic Pantomime, which was received with shouts of applause and tears of laughter from the rising to the fall of the curtain, by a house crowded to the very ceiling.—On MONDAY, DEC. 31, the Entertainments will commence at 6 o'clock, with the highly-successful and magnificent Chivalric Spectacle of the KNIGHT of the EAGLE CREST, or, the TOURNEY of LOVE, in which Mdlle. ANGELE, from the Hippodrome, Paris, who has been the powerfully attractive Novelties in the Arena, supported by the talented Artistes of the Establishment, and introducing, for the Fifth time, Mdlle ANGELE, from the Hippodrome, Paris, who has been received with the greatest enthusiasm. Engagement for the extraordinary Boy dancer, Mdlle CODONE. To conclude with the unprecedentedly successful New Grand Comic Pantomime of HARLEQUIN YANKEE DOODLE Come to Town upon his little Pony

SIMS REEVES, ERNST, and THALBERG.—On WED-

NESDAY NEXT, JAN 2nd, will be held the ELEVENTH of the LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS (and will be the last but four of the series). Vocal Performers: Mrs A Newton, Miss Lucombe, Miss Eyles, Miss Poole, and Miss Dolby, Mr Sims Reeves, and Mr Leffler Solo Violin, Herr Ernst. Grand Pianoforte, M Thalberg—Tickets, 1s and 2s: Reserved Seats, 3s; Stalls, 7s may be had of Mr STAMMERS, at the office of the Concerts, No. 4 Exeter Hall; and of all Music-sellers.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The First of a

Series of ILLUSTRATED LECTURES by Dr. Bachhoffner, on the PHILOSOPHY of SCIENTIFIC RECREATION, daily at two o'clock, and in the evenings at eight. An entirely new set of DISSOLVING VIEWS of LONDON in the SIXTEENTH CENTURY and AS IT NOW IS, with a descriptive Lecture, daily at half past four, and in the evening at half-past to ten.—The VIEWS of ROME, including new views of the Interior and Exterior of St. Pet r's, with Dresses Worn and Customs observed daily at Rome.—Lectures on Chemistry, with brilliant experiments by Mr Ashley—Experiments with the Diver and Diving Bell. New Exhibits n of Circumstances.—The Machinery, Models, &c explained.—Admission, 1s; Schools, half price.

BANVARD'S OHIO AND MISSISSIPPI RIVERS,

EGYPTIAN HALL, PICCADILLY, Panorama of Miles of American Scenery, extending through the heart of America, exhibiting Cincinnati the Queen City of the West, the beautiful Falls of the Ohio, the noble scenery to the Mississippi, thence to the city of New Orleans.—Open every Morning at Half-past Two; Evening at Seven.—Admission—Lower Seats, 2s; Gallery, 1s. "Mr. Banvard is the FIRST PROJECTOR of the enormous paintings of the class."

ART-UNION of LONDON.—Incorporated by Royal Charter.

—The SUBSCRIPTION LIST for the Current Year is NOW OPEN Each Subscriber of One Guinea will receive, in addition to one Share in the next Annual Distribution of Prizes, a Set of Line Engravings, after MACLISE, R.A., MULREADY, R.A., EASTLAKE, R.A., and "THE FROWN," WHICH MAY BE HAD AT THE TIME OF PAYING THE SUBSCRIPTION; and a Series of Etchings, after D. Maclise, R.A., illustrating Shakspeare's "Seven Ages."

GEORGE GODWIN, } Honorary
LEWIS POCOCK, } Secretaries

444, West Strand.

ROYAL FREE HOSPITAL, Gray's-inn-road: Open Day and Night for the Admission of the Destitute Sick, without letter of recommendation, or any other preliminary form.

The Weekly Board have the satisfaction to announce, that, by the liberality of the Public, they have been enabled to re-open one of the large wards, which want of funds alone obliged them for so long a time to keep closed. A considerable number of beds will also be available to the weekly expenses of the Charity, the Weekly Board earnestly contract the aid of the charitable and humane. The Committee would also remind the benefactors of this Charity to the poor objects who, more especially at this season, daily present themselves at the gates of the Hospital.

Contributions received by the Treasurer, John Masterman, Esq.; M P, Nicholas-lane; also by Messrs Coutts and Co., Strand; Messrs Ransom, Bouverie, and Co.; Messrs Ransom and Co.; Prescott, Grote, and Co., Smith, Payne, and Co., Glyn and Co.; Jones Loyd and Co; Barclay and Co; Denison and Co.; Williams, Deacon, and Co; Current, Gurney, and Co; Nisbet and Co; Bosanes street, Masterman and Co; and at the Hospital.

By order of the Weekly Board,

DWD RICE, D.D., Chairman.

N.B. The Committee meet in the Board-room every Wednesday, at Seven o'clock to manage and direct all the affairs of the Charity, which meetings the subscribers are invited to attend, and the hospital is at all times open to the inspection of the public. Cast-off apparel, nails and female, also old linen rags, will be gratefully acknowledged.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A Constant Reader, Nottingham—Send your coin to Mr Webster, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent-garden

H. Higham—Westminster Abbey has some of the finest specimens of Early English architecture in existence

W H—See the article "Wales" in the "Penny Cyclopædia," or the published Tours in the Principality, or Sir Thomas Phillipps's History

A W T—Perhaps the popular work for your purpose would be Pearson's "Practical Astronomy," with Tables, and its price, we believe, is £3 3s. We cannot enumerate all the works used in the various colleges for mathematical instruction: they are, however, mentioned in the preface to that work

The Bishop Luke is accurately described in our Paper of the 24th ult, but its locality is erroneously stated. It will be about 33 miles west of the Land's End, and 5 to 6 miles west of St Mary's, the nearest of the Scilly Islands

A X—Bernard de Newmarch bore for arms, "Gu. five fusils englised in fesse or." Apply to Mr H Bohn, York street, Covent-garden, for the work required

A Subscriber, Bungay—Mr Hume, M.P., holds no appointment under Government

C M H—Dr Wilberforce was consecrated Bishop of Oxford in 1845

D D, Scotland—Where a Peerage is dormant or extinct the name to be is known by

Tu-Tu—See Burke's "Armoury"

R A W—The arms of Bentley are, "Or three bends sa. Crest—A spaniel dog passant arg."

Lycurgus—A motto may be adopted at pleasure

J K—The estate says Mr. Hallam, a few years more may be safely added

J G A—The violoncello is better than the piano to obtain the correct tone for the bass voice

A Constant Subscriber—The assertion can be maintained without a master, and so can any instrument, if the player has genius: refer to a music-seller

F T—There is the difference of a quarter of a tone, as will be proved on the violin

Hamlet—Rabbis is living in Italy. The passage is from "Twelfth Night"

Credo—See the article, "New Routes and Mail Contracts," in our Journal for December 8

R C M—Unless your mother was a heiress or co-heiress, you are not entitled to quarter her arms

L N—We apprehend that Prince Albert has no surname. His family was of Sovereign degree at the time names were first assumed

Aretus—Application should be made to the Secretary of the Royal Academy The Dukes of Bedford and Buccleuch have brought a duel

K. Canterbury—We cannot give the heraldic description of arms, of the arms be registered at the Heralds' college, where such information can be had

M. L. [illegible]—Anderson, Anderson, Sutherland, &c.—Sa. three shackle-bolts arg two and one; the arms of Anderson, of Anderston, in Lanarkshire, &c.—Sa a chev between three shackle-bolts arg

A Subscriber—No one has a right to adopt a coat of arms, or a crest, unless legally entitled. Apply to the Officers in Waiting, Heralds' Office, Doctors' Commons.

Alan Scott, Brighton—Apply to Mr Van Voorst, publisher, 1, Paternoster-row

B R—Founders's Kinsfolk Dictionary, 2 vols 8vo, or 1 vol 8vo

M S B, Leamington—The changes of the Court mourning will be on January 6, 13, and 20

C H, Kent's-road—We cannot comply with your request

A Lesbury Subscriber may learn from any list of hackney-carriage fares

P S—Your collection must be a very valuable one

A Poor Scholar—Apply at the Government School of Design, Somerset-house

W P, Dun—The "Characteristics" is by the great Lord Shaftesbury

[illegible]—Ovalo and (penny) Gothic

[illegible]—We cannot precisely inform you

[illegible]—A paper was lately read on the Panama question at the Institution of Civil Engineers and is reported in the Athenæum

A Subscriber, Brighton—We do not recommend binding our Journal in annual volumes

[illegible]—The cockpit will not render you liable

[illegible]—Mr Hall, of New York is No 230 of our Journal

Rev Rector, Crawford Dr Golding Bird's work on Natural Philosophy is published by Churchill, Princes-street, Soho

J—The Arrochyte—or 3 a bovine animal, found fossil in alluvion. (See a brief memoir in No 286 of our Journal)

[illegible]—Is a flat in question is a promising patient. For his address, see the Arts for [illegible] week for 1850

[illegible]K Dublin—The best way to ascertain will be to advertise

[illegible]—would see the Rise book on the National Debt, published by Wilson, Royal Exchange

[illegible]—The husband of an heiress is entitled to bear on an escutcheon of pretence the arms of his wife during the lifetime of the lady's father, as well as after his death. As believe, to heraldry, is a lady who has no brother or whose brothers have died without issue. The inheritance of property is often one-quarter. The lion sejant rather than quarterings should be black. The tinctures and colours of the Royal shield are—"Gold," argent, "blue," gules; "sable," silver. We will try to answer satisfactorily our correspondent's enquiry regarding the Pitt arms

Geraldus Cambrensis—A light shade of green

A World-be Pupil—The Ladies' College is at 47, Bedford-square

E M S, Barking—Harvard College is three miles from Boston, U.S. Apply to any Postmaster for the rest

A Subscriber, Richmond—The Servants' Provident Society's Office is at 8, Cork-street Burlington-gardens

R C D—Address, Near Savage, Salop We do not know of any other book for the purpose in question

To Branch-fire See "Penny Cyclopædia," art. Wha ea, p. 297

J S B, Dunfermline—We cannot state rates for the Address

Optical Cobbler—"Lichtenberg," (Longmans)

W. Glasgow—We must decline giving any opinion in the matter

A Constant Subscriber—Is "Knight Bachelor" the same as "Knight of the Bath?" Is there a Dictionary of Heraldry?

A [illegible]—We do not undertake to answer

[illegible]—Scallop-shells

L B C, Dudley—Mail, as thanked, but we have no room, save for an extract of immediate interest

Classicus is thanked; the subject, from the architect's drawing, is already in our engraver's hands

F G, Stratford-on-Avon—Is not the "relic" a cribbage-board?

J O L, Newbury—See the "London University Calendar," published by Taylor, Walton, and Co, Gower-street

A Z, Stipo—Sextasters and their costume date from the reign of Henry VIII. The name, in all probability, is corrupted from Sextarius the premier of the guard who waited at the Royal table, and wore ranged near the buffets, or sideboards

Joaquin The property will go to the next of kin, according to the will

Edith, Dublin—Apply to Mr Thomas, newspaper agent, Catherine-street, Strand

R L, Falkirk—Your bookbinder in the town should order the work

B F—The incident of Una and the Lion is from Spenser

A Constant Subscriber—We know nothing of the Company in question

Tolpuddle—The novel of "French Fatigue" is by Neagle, W L, Glasgow: Jessy Jones, 8 S re-publishing in parts F G S—Declined

Zadkiel will be liable L O D—We cannot comply with your request

[illegible]s lines are declined E G O, Lanyort, should advertise

A Subscriber, Clifton—Address, Strand B F—Apply to Ackermann and Co, Strand

Subscriber, Mr matache Medicus—The Sketches have been received

F M W L—We have not time to search A L J, Chester—Thanks

J B, Birmingham—The signs are copyright Fire Fly—We think not

J H—The lines are ineligible E F—Next week

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Webster's Royal Red-Book.——Crowquill's Christmas Pieces.——Crowquill's Pantomime.——Young Troublesome.——Mr. Pips bya Diary.

Music.—The O.d Dragoon Polka.——Consider the Lilies.——The First and Last Dear Thing I was fond to Love.——Monte Christo Polka.——Strathmore Quadrille.——The Court Waltzes.——The Catalan Polka.

 We are compelled, by press of other seasonable Illustrations, to omit the Engraving of the late Protectionist Meeting at Lincoln, fully reported in the Illustrated London News of last week.

SUPPLEMENT GRATIS!

On SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1850, will be GIVEN

A SUPPLEMENT

TO THE

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

With the First Number for the Year, commencing a New Volume.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1849.

The French Legislative Assembly has done a bold and necessary, though very unpopular act, in re-imposing the duty on potable liquors. The late Constituent Assembly, the very day before its legal expiry, and almost without the form of deliberation, abolished the duty, though amounting to 100,000,000 of francs, and though the Exchequer was virtually bankrupt at the time, without any other apparent motive than the very unworthy and disgraceful one of embarrassing its successors. In re-imposing the duty, in spite of the unpopularity of the proceeding, the present Assembly has performed a very necessary though unpleasant duty, and deserves the thanks of every man in France, who values the national honour more than temporary expediency. In such unhappy circumstances as those of France, with a large deficit in the revenue, and without present means of inventing new taxes to supply the void, the first duty of men in power is to diminish expenditure; the second is to hold firm by what they have got, and to repeal no tax of such productive magnitude until they have provided a substitute. In this respect the financial economists of the Republic are at their wits' end. The country is taxed to the uttermost farthing that it can bear; and even the re-imposition of the tax on liquors, necessary as it is, is a proceeding by no means unattended with danger both in the present and the future. The first grave inconvenience remains. No country can prosper with a standing army of 500,000 men. That is the sore in the body politic of the Republic; and until means are found to reduce the army at least one half, France will continue to groan in the agonies of financial difficulty. In the meantime, the re-imposition of the wine-tax is likely to tell against the Government. The rural voters will remember at the next election two facts—that the ultra-Republicans relieved them of an odious, oppressive, and anti-commercial impost, and that the moderates re-imposed it. The consequence will be an infusion of Red Republicanism into the next Assembly, or into the present one, whenever, by death or otherwise, any vacancies shall occur.

The advocates of reform in our fiscal system have begun to sound the note of preparation; and the symptoms of a well-organized agitation for the repeal or modification of taxes that interfere unduly with trade or commerce, are becoming apparent, prior to the meeting of Parliament. It is not likely, in the present state of the Revenue, that the most productive branches of the Excise or Customs can be interfered with. The Malt Duty, which yielded £4,285,887 in England, and £546,345 in Scotland, in 1844, cannot be spared; the Duty on Spirits, which yielded from these two divisions of the country, in the same period, £4,227,077, is equally essential to the Budget; and both duties—if duties must be levied at all—are as fair and inoppressive as can well be imagined. The Malt Duty is alleged to bear with undue severity upon the Agricultural interest; but its repeal would not benefit agriculture to anything like the extent of the tax; and it must be borne in mind, that the ultimate weight of it falls, not upon the farmer, but upon the consumer of beer and ale—upon the people of large towns—upon labourers—upon gentlemen—and even upon our colonies and possessions abroad, that take annually such large quantities of our Guinness's stout, our Barclay and Perkins's porter, and our Bass's ale. We anticipate, however, that greater success will attend the efforts of those who urge the readjustment and reduction of the Tea Duties. The Tea Duty produces about one-twelfth of the annual revenue of the United Kingdom; but it is universally allowed to be too high, and to press with undue severity upon the inferior sorts of tea, and upon the most harmless and exhilirating beverage of the people.

The question for the consideration of economists is, whether a judicious reduction of duty would not lead to a largely increased consumption, and the eventual attainment of as great a revenue as is at present derived from the article; and whether, at the same time, the increased intercourse with the richest and most populous country in the world, which would be the necessary consequence, would not be a clear gain to all the interests of the state, and give a mightier impetus to our commerce than it has received within the memory of this generation. We know of no reform in our financial system of more importance than this. Happily, no class or party interests are involved in the question; it is simply a consideration of revenue, and an experiment which the country may make without any overwhelming risk. Our merchants and manufacturers require new markets; our labouring population requires a tea not more highly taxed in proportion than the rich man's finer descriptions of the article: and if both these objects can be attained by a reduction of duty—with a probability that, in the long run, the revenue will not be a loser by the alteration—Great Britain is happily in no such pecuniary difficulty as to forbid the trial. We believe that this subject will be among the first that will await decision in the approaching Session.

The tea consumed in the country which is not extremely productive, but which in its operation places the manufacturer of this country at a great disadvantage. We allude to the excise duty on paper—a tax upon knowledge and upon literature, a tax upon commerce, and a grievous impediment in the way of many honourable professions and pursuits of life. The sum yielded is comparatively trifling—little more than half a million—and offers nothing like an equivalent to the State for the injury it inflicts. We propose hereafter to return to this subject; and trust in the meantime that the efforts of financial reformers will be steadily directed towards it. There is a rumour abroad that the Ministry only require a little gentle pressure to yield the point. We trust the rumour will prove true, and shall do our utmost to aid the consummation.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

Her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by the Royal Family, and attended by the Marchioness of Douro, the Hon. Miss Lennox, Lord Alfred Paget, Col. Bouverie, and General Bowles, arrived at Windsor Castle at twenty-five minutes past one o'clock on Saturday last, from Osborne. The Royal party travelled by a special train on the South-Western Railway to Basingstoke, and from thence by the Great Western Railway to Windsor, reaching the former station at which place, they were received by a guard of honour of the Grenadier Guards, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Hamilton.

The usual Court festivities of the season have been altogether omitted during the week, owing to the recent demise of the Queen Dowager. The only visitors at the Castle have been the Duchess Ida, and the Princes and Princesses of Saxe-Weimar, and the Duchess of Kent, all of whom arrived at the Castle shortly after the Court reached it on Saturday.

On Sunday morning the Queen and Prince Albert, with her Royal Highness the Princess Royal, her Serene Highness the Duchess of Saxe-Weimar, their Serene Highnesses the Princesses Anne and Amelia of Saxe-Weimar, and Prince Edward and Prince Gustavus of Saxe-Weimar, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household, attended divine service in the private chapel of the Castle.

On Monday the Duchess Ida, with the Princes and Princesses of Saxe-Weimar, took leave of her Majesty, and returned to Marlborough House.

On Christmas Day her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, her Royal Highness the Princess Royal, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household, attended divine service in the private chapel. The Hon. and Rev. G. Wellesley officiated. In the evening of the same day the Duchess of Kent dined with the Queen. The only other guests at the Royal table were the Dowager Lady Lyttleton and the Honourable Miss Lyttleton, Colonel the Hon. C. B. and Mrs. Phipps, and Colonel the Hon. Charles and Mrs. Grey.

The Royal dinner party on Thursday included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, General and Lady Isabella Wemyss, and Sir George and Lady Cowper.

The fine weather during the week has enabled her Majesty and the Prince to take their accustomed early walking exercise almost daily. The Royal children have also taken frequent riding and walking exercise.

Her Serene Highness the Duchess Ida of Saxe-Weimar, with the Princesses Anne and Amelia, dined with her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester on Thursday, at Gloucester House.

Lord Elphinstone has relieved the Earl of Morley in his duty as Lord in Waiting to the Queen, and Colonel Berkeley Drummond has relieved Mr. Ormsby Gore in his duty as Groom in Waiting to her Majesty.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Anglesey are at Beaudesert, the family seat, near Lichfield, surrounded by a select part, including the Earl and Countess of Shaftesbury, the Earl of Uxbridge, Viscount and Viscountess Sydney, Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, Lord and Lady Templemore, Lord Alfred Paget, &c.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Abercorn and family have left Chesterfield House for Barons Court, county Tyrone.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Salisbury are entertaining a select party at Hatfield House.

The Earl Granville has arrived at Woburn Abbey, on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Bedford.

The Viscountess Nevill was safely delivered of a daughter at Hackness Hall, Yorkshire, on Christmas-Day.

Lord and Lady John Russell returned to Pembroke Lodge on Wednesday, from a visit to the Earl of Lansdowne, at Bowood.

The Lady Burghley was safely delivered of a son and heir on Thursday week, in Bruton-street.

Lady Mary Fox has arrived at Nice from Paris.

The Lady Lindsay was safely delivered of a daughter on Saturday morning, at the Earl of Balcarres's residence, in Berkeley-square.

His Excellency Mr. Abbott Laurence, Minister from the United States, has quitted the Clarendon Hotel, where he has been sojourning during the last four months, and entered upon the Ambassadorial residence in Piccadilly.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

THE EDINBURGH AND PERTH RAILWAY AND THE POST-OFFICE.—In consequence of this company having declined to accede to the terms, £700 per annum, for carrying the mails over the 78 miles of their line, and requiring £1000 per annum for such service, the Post-office sent a guard as a second-class passenger to deliver and receive the mail-bags at the stations. The company have objected to this, and the Post-office authorities charge them with an attempt to impede the public service. The company refer to submit the question to arbitration, giving the Post-office in the meantime complete use of the line; but this the latter decline to consent to, and the question in all probability will be brought before a court of law.

OXFORD, WORCESTER, AND WOLVERHAMPTON RAILWAY.—It is stated that the Railway Commissioners have decided upon calling upon the Great Western Company to complete the above line of railway, without delay, under the provisions of the act.

SHREWSBURY AND HEREFORD.—At a public meeting of the inhabitants of Radnorshire, held at Knighton, last week, a series of resolutions was passed, pledging those present to use every exertion to procure the construction of this line.

VALE OF NEATH.—The directors, at their last meeting, determined on proceeding with the line with all speed to Aberdare, and resolved, by a majority of 8 to 3, in continuing the services of Mr. Brunel, their engineer.

NORTH-WESTERN.—The directors announce, that, having now opened 38 miles of their line, it is not their intention for the future to pay any further interest out of capital to the holders of old stock.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—Notices of an intended application to Parliament have been given for a new telegraph company, to be called the "British Electric Telegraph Company." The extension of the telegraph to Preston is now completed.

DOVER, HASTINGS, AND BRIGHTON COMPANY.—The Master in Chancery Brougham has appointed Mr. J. H. Norris, accountant, of Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, to proceed with the winding-up of the affairs of this defunct undertaking.

BORDEAUX AND CETTE, AND LYONS AND AVIGNON.—Memorials, now being signed in the City, are about being presented to the French Government, relative to the long-existing delay in the liquidation of the cautionmoney of these lines, in connexion with the proposed line from Paris to Avignon.

CAMBRON'S COALBROOK STEAM COAL, AND SWANSEA AND LOUGHOR: Dec. 27: Special Meeting: London: G. H. Winthrop, Esq., in the chair.—The resolutions passed on the 10th inst. for making a call of £5 per share for meeting the liabilities of the company, and making a line of railway to connect the companies' collieries with Llanelly, were unanimously passed. It was explained that many parties who came into shares since they put up £5 per share (beyond the £6 called up), would be allowed to deduct it from the £3 call.

RAILWAY CALLS FOR 1849.—The total railway calls for this year amount to about £10,000,000; of which about £10,000,000 are for English, Irish, and Scotch, and £2,000,000 for foreign railways subscribed for in Eng and. The total amount of railway calls in 1848 was £33,000 000, and in 1847, £42,000,000.

Mr. John Wheatcroft, C.E., one of the contractors for the High Tor tunnels at Matlock Bath, and who ably conducted the engineering department of those works, has taken the contract for the cuttings and tunnel of an extension line of railway from Crooksiands to Lindal Lane, situate on the extreme border of Lancashire, and nearly adjoining Cumberland. Mr. W. has taken a number of Derbyshire miners with him to the works, and it is expected that many more will be required in the spring.

THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL SOCIETY.—It is understood that this society (which, it will be remembered, assembled three months since at Chester) will hold their annual meeting for 1850 in Lancashire. They have elected James Heywood, Esq., M.P., F.R.S., &c., their president, and they will visit both Manchester and Lancaster, though it is not yet fixed which of the two places will have the greatest share of their attention.

POSTSCRIPT.

THE NATIONAL SOCIETY AND THE COMMITTEE OF COUNCIL ON EDUCATION.—The National Society has closed i correspondence with the Committee of Council on Education, and rejected the conditions which that committee have sought to impose on all Church schools In the final letter the society says, that, since they find, "to their deep regret and disappointment, that, if they are to co-operate with their Lordships in constituting school trusts, they must be prepared to set aside the general principle of local freedom, and to treat the proposed clauses as indispensable to the efficiency of all Church schools, they consider themselves under the necessity of resuming their original position. Leaving, therefore, to the Legislature the settlement of the terms on which the parliamentary vote shall be distributed, they see no other course for themselves, under existing circumstances, than to continue to vote grants according to the charter of the society, and, without joining in any recommendation of management, to learn the promotion of schools either so aided, or to decline, the proposed Government clauses, provided they constitute their schools in a manner consistent with the society's terms of union "

The Rev. J. C. Bentley, M.A., of St. John's College, Oxford, formerly first Master of the Stockwell Proprietary Grammar School, has been elected by the trustees of the Lichfield Free Grammar School to the Head Mastership of that school.

THE QUEEN'S COLLEGE IN GALWAY.—The Presidentship of the Galway College has become vacant by the death of the Very Rev. Dean Kirwan. The deceased had long been ailing.

We have heard from authority, upon which reliance can be placed, that the contemplated reduction of the army will be to the extent of 10,000 men; but the details of the manner in which it is proposed to effect it have not transpired —Morning Chronicle.

ATTEMPT TO ENCLOSE PLUMSTEAD AND BOSTOL COMMONS.—Considerable excitement has been produced in Woolwich and Plumstead by an attempt which is now making by a few freeholders belonging to the parish of Plumstead to enclose those beautiful tracts of land known as Plumstead and Bostol Commons, which, from their immediate proximity to the metropolis and the town of Woolwich, have become the favourite resorts of pleasure-seekers. The Assistant Enclosure Commissioner, Mr. Martin, held his court on Thursday, at the Pines of Feathers, Plumstead. The court was numerously attended by those who opposed and those who supported the enclosure of the common. A letter was read from Mr. Clarke, solicitor to the Board of Ordnance, stating that that body would oppose the passing of any bill through Parliament having for its object the inclosure of the common. Evidence at great length was given to show that no possible advantage could arise from inclosing the common, which is a barren, arid soil, that the only use that could be made of it would be for building purposes; that it would be injurious to the property already existing around the common, and would shut up the only open spot of ground available for the health and recreation of a crowded population of upwards of 50,000 inhabitants. At the conclusion of the inquiry the court stood adjourned for a month, when it will be ascertained whether two-thirds of the freeholders are in favour of the measure, as, if they are not, the matter will fall to the ground.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

Yesterday's post from Paris brings no news of interest. A commission has been appointed by the President of the Republic to examine the ministerial accounts for 1849.

The directors of the Bank of France have declared a dividend of 62f. per share for the half-year ending the 31st December, 1849.

Eight Socialists condemned in prison at Lyons have effected their escape.

The Republican and Democratic Almanack has been seized by order of the Government.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

Congregations will be holden for the purpose of granting graces and conferring degrees on the following days in the ensuing term; viz. Monday, Jan. 14; Thursday, Jan. 24; Thursday, Feb. 7; Thursday, Feb. 21; Thursday, March 7; Thursday, March 14; Saturday, March 23. No person will be admitted as a candidate for any degree whose name is not entered in the book kept for that purpose at the Vice-Chancellor's house on or before the day preceding the day of congregation. On Tuesday, Feb. 12, a congregation will be holden, as provided in the dispensation for dispensing the forms and exercises of determination, solely for the purpose of receiving from the deans or other officers of their respective colleges or halls the names of such Bachelors of Arts as have not yet determined; and their names having been so signified to the Vice-Chancellor, upon inserted in the register of congregation, they may at any time in the same or in any future term be admitted to all the rights and privileges to which they would have been entitled by the intermitted forms and exercises. And every Bachelor of Arts is desired to take notice that no grace will be proceeded to for a degree on or before Thursday, February 7, his name cannot be inserted in the register of congregation during the present year. F. C. PLUMPTRE, Vice-Chancellor. University College, Dec. 21, 1849.

CAMBRIDGE.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, Chancellor of the University being pleased to give annually a gold medal for the encouragement of English poetry, the prize will be given this year to such resident undergraduate as shall compose the best elegiac poem on the late Queen Adelaide. The exercises are not to exceed 200 lines in length.

The Most Noble the Marquis Camden being pleased to give annually a gold medal as a prize for the best exercise in Latin hexameter verse, the subject for the present year is "Mare Arcticum." The exercises are not to exceed 100 lines in length. All undergraduates who shall have resided not less than two terms before the day on which the exercises must be sent in, or who shall at least be then in the course of their second term of residence, may be candidates for this medal.

The Representatives in Parliament for this University being pleased to give annually two prizes, of fifteen guineas each, for the encouragement of Latin prose composition, to be open to all Bachelors of Arts, without distinction of years, who are not of sufficient standing to take the degree of Master of Arts; and two other prizes, of fifteen guineas each, to be open to all undergraduates, who shall have resided not less than seven terms at the time when the exercises are to be sent in; the subjects for the present year are, for the Bachelors, "Monumenta prisca artis in Assyria nuper reperta;" for the undergraduates, "Honores et Shakesperiani interse collati."

Sir William Brown having bequeathed three gold medals, of the value of five guineas each, to such resident graduates as shall compose the best Greek ode in imitation of Sappho; the best Latin ode in imitation of Horace; the best Greek epigram after the model of the Anthologia; and the best Latin epigram after the model of Martial; the subjects for the present year are—for the Greek ode, "Ninus;" for the Latin ode, "Regina Hiberniam visit;" for the Latin epigram, "Cœlum, non animum mutant, qui trans mare currunt; for the Greek epigram, "Ἔστιν πτερόεντα. The Greek ode is not to exceed twenty-five, nor the Latin ode thirty stanzas. The Greek ode must be accompanied by a literal Latin prose version.

The Porson prize is the interest of £400 stock, to be annually employed in the purchase of one or more Greek books, to be given to such resident undergraduate as shall make the best translation of a proposed passage in Shakspeare, Ben Jonson, Massinger, or Beaumont and Fletcher, into Greek verse. The subject for the present year is Shakspeare, "Merchant of Venice," act V, scene 1: Lorenzo—"How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!" to the words "Let no such man be trusted." The metre to be used is iambus trimetrum acatalectesum. The exercises are to be accentuated and accompanied by a literal Latin prose version.

All the above exercises are to be sent in to the Vice-Chancellor privately, before the 30th of March, 1850.

PREFERMENTS.—Rev. J. Adcock, to Gretham R., Lincolnshire; value £278; patron, Bishop of Lincoln. Rev. T. Jackson, Principal of the Training College, Battersea, to a Canonry in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul; patron, Bishop of London. Rev. J. Moir to the Deanery of Brechin, N.B. Rev. T. Fulcher, to Old Buckenham, R. C., Norfolk, diocese of Norwich; value £80; patrons, the inhabitants. Rev. J. H. Thompson, to Middleton P. C., Rothwell, Yorkshire. Rev. Stephen Allen, M.A., Trinity College (Dec. 7), by the Bishop of Aberdeen, to the Senior Presidency of St. Andrew's, Aberdeen. The Rev. George Fyler Townsel, M.A., Trinity College, V. of Brandingham, Yorkshire, has been appointed Domestic Chaplain to the Duke of Northumberland. The Rev. W. C. Le Breton is appointed Dean of Jersey. The Rev. James Burrows is appointed Colonial Chaplain at the Gambia. The Rev. Reginald Robert Bradley is appointed Colonial Chaplain at the Gold Coast.

VACANCIES.—Clibeau with Aby R., county and diocese Lincoln; value, £300; patron, Bishop of Lincoln. Llangibby (Cressy); Rev. W. J. F. Burrell, deceased. Greenford (Great) R., Middlesex, diocese of London; value, £560, with residence; patrons, Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge; Rev. J. Tomkyns, deceased. Hampton in Arden, Warwick, St. Bendict's, diocese Ely; value, £162, with residence; patron, Lord Chancellor; Rev. F. Bourdillon, resigned. Llanthaser-yn-Noohmant V., Denbighshire and Monmouthshire; diocese, St. Asaph; value, £500, with residence; patron, Bishop of St. Asaph; Rev. Walter Davies, deceased. Luton V., Beds; diocese Ely; value, £1350, with residence; patron, John King, Esq.; Rev. W. M'Donal, deceased. Skillington V., county and diocese Lincoln; value, £103; patron, D. and C. of Lincoln; Rev. J. Adcock, promoted. Oxford St Cross or Holywell P. C.; value, £80; patrons, Merton College; Rev E. M. Goulburn, promoted. Ysyvity-Ivan P. C., Denbighshire; diocese St. Asaph; value, £100; patron, Bishop of St. Asaph; Rev. J. Adcock, resigned.

THE BISHOP OF MANCHESTER AND THE VICAR OF LEIGH.—The Bishop of Manchester has issued a commission to Archdeacon Rushton and four beneficed clergymen of the diocese, to inquire into certain charges preferred against the Rev. Mr. Irving, Vicar of Leigh, under the Church Discipline Act, 3rd and 4th Victoria, c. 86, as a preliminary to further proceedings. The following are the alleged facts upon which the charges are founded:—Some weeks ago, two of Mr. Irving's parishioners, James and Jane Turner, presented their child to him at the font to be christened, when he declined to perform the ceremony, on the ground that the sponsors were not communicants of the Church. The parties, who are Dissenters, obtained the Bishop's interference, after which the child was again presented at the font on the 2nd inst., and the sponsors, acting upon advice, declined to answer the vicar's question as to their being communicants. The vicar thereupon again refused to baptize, and explained to the congregation that he did not refuse the office to the child, but only deferred it till the sponsors were in a condition to give an affirmative answer to his question. Three formal complaints have been lodged against Mr. Irvine:—The first, for having, contrary to the 68th canon, delayed the christening; the second, for having required answers from the sponsors, contrary both to the 29th and 68th canon; the third, for accompanying such delay by remarks addressed to the congregation aloud, to the disturbance of due order and solemnity in the church.

ORDINATION.—On Sunday the Lord Bishop of London held a general ordination at the Chapel Royal, Whitehall, at which several gentlemen were admitted into holy orders

TESTIMONIAL.—The following clergymen have recently received testimonials of esteem and affection:—The Rev George Dover, lately perpetual curate of St. Bartholomew, Naylor street, Liverpool, from that congregation; and the Rev the Misses Barron, from some of the ladies of his congregation; from the parishioners of Overton, to the Rev. Charles Severn Absolom; from the inhabitants of the united parishes of St. Mary and St. Benedict, Huntingdon, to the Rev. Hamish Beardilon; to the Rev. A. Hopkins, from the inhabitants of Weyabury, amongst whom his ministerial labours have been exercised upwards of twenty years.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE REV. ROBERT WHISTON.—On Thursday week, of some of the senior pupils of the Cathedral Grammar School at Rochester, being about to leave for college, and anxious to testify their esteem for their master, the Rev. R. Whiston, for his kindness to them while under his care, together with their fellow-scholars, entered into a subscription for the purpose of presenting that gentleman with a massive and valuable tea-service, manufactured by Messrs. Elkington and Company, of Birmingham, as a token of their sincere gratitude. Each piece of the service contained an inscription in Latin, of which the following is a translation:—"Presented to the Rev. Robert Whiston, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and head master of the King's School, Rochester, by his pupils, gratefully remembering the past, praying success for the future."

CATASTROPHE.—On Monday morning the family of the Rev. T. H. Davies, incumbent of Trinity Church, Nottingham, but residing at Sherwood, about two miles from that town, were astonished to find, shortly after rising from their beds, that their two maid-servants, who the previous evening had retired to rest apparently in good health, had been discovered in their beds in a state of insensibility. The room in which they lay was filled with smoke, and in one corner was a portable fire-grate, containing some dead coke. Mr. Joseph Thompson, surgeon, was sent for, and was quickly in attendance, but one of the women, Ellen Brown, aged about thirty years, died shortly after her arrival. The other woman, who is named English, and is also about thirty years old, has been partially restored, and hopes are entertained of her ultimate recovery. It is supposed that the coals had been placed on the fire for the purpose of warming the room, the night being severely cold. There was a fire-place in the room, the chimney to which, however, had been stopped up by the women, in their ignorance of the consequences, to prevent the heat escaping.

REFUSAL TO MARRY BY A CLERGYMAN.—The Liverpool Standard of Tuesday last says:—" We are informed that the Government solicitor, Mr. Reynolds, instructed his agents at Liverpool to present an indictment, at the present assizes, against the Rev. Moorhouse James, M.A. (B.A. 1830), formerly of Jesus College, incumbent of Bedford, near Leigh, for refusing to marry Henry Fisher and another. The superintendent-registrar of the district was examined before the Grand Jury at Liverpool, on Wednesday, and a true bill has been returned into court. The trial will take place at the March assizes."

ANOMALIES IN THE CRIMINAL LAW OF PRUSSIA.—The late Chief Burgomaster of Brandenburgh, M. Ziegler, who was a short time since condemned to six months' imprisonment and the loss of his civil rights for inciting the people to revolt by publishing the tax-refusing resolution of the National Assembly, it at present in Berlin, prosecuting an appeal against the sentence. When a sentence of imprisonment for a short term, is not immediately enforced, the person is not at liberty till he is summoned to begin his punishment. It is a curious anomaly of the Prussian criminal system, that a man is kept in close imprisonment when he is only suspected, and is set free when he is found guilty. The previous arrest is often reckoned as having fulfilled the sentence, though that is not the case in the present instance.

THE WOLVERTON MECHANICS' INSTITUTION.

WOLVERTON, it may be known to all our readers, as it certainly is to all railway travellers, is a railway town, called into existence by the London and North-Western Company, and inhabited almost exclusively by their servants and workpeople. Whatever jealousies may exist at times between the employers and employed in other parts of the country, and in other trades, professions, and pursuits of life, no feeling of the kind exists at Wolverton. The Company have, for many years past, taken a friendly, if not parental, interest in the comfort and welfare of the numerous body of men whom they employ; and the workmen have repaid the care by a zealous devotion to the interest of their employers, and the assidious discharge of their many arduous and responsible duties. It is pleasing to witness the friendships of such feelings of mutual confidence and good will. We only wish the case were more common, and that masters and servants, employers and employed, would universally learn to respect and care for each other. Strikes, combinations, turn-outs, and other expressions of labour against capital, would then cease on the one hand; and the reckless, heartless, and unChristian system of screwing down the labourer to the starvation point (or beneath it) would cease on the other—to the manifest advantage of all classes of the community. Such a consummation is, perhaps, too much to hope for; but every good example given is an approximation towards it, deserving of the cordial support of all well-wishers of the industrial classes.

The anniversary meeting of the Wolverton Mechanics' Institution, which took place on Friday evening last, in the large Engine-room of the Station, and which has led us to make these few preliminary observations, was in every respect an interesting celebration. The Company, having built a church and schools for their work-people, followed up their good work by a handsome donation to the Mechanics' Institution. Though established for nine years, or upwards, the last-named institution had not in any respect proved so successful as to satisfy the wishes of its founders; and it was, therefore, resolved this year to add its funds by a public entertainment or soirée, to which all in the vicinity, with their wives and families, should be invited, together with such influential persons from the neighbourhood, or from London, as could be induced, in their love for the cause of education, and the self-elevation of the working classes, to assist at their anniversary. The arrangements were admirably planned, we believe, by Mr. J. E. MacConnell, the superintendent of the locomotive department for the southern division of the railway, whose headquarters are at Wolverton. The directors granted the use of the large engine-room for the occasion, which, being cleared of its usual contents—of forges, and engines in course of construction or repair—was laid out for the accommodation of a very magnificent tea-party of fifteen hundred persons. The guests, amounting to at least that number, had assembled by six o'clock, and made a very gay and very happy-looking picture. The room was brilliantly lighted with gas, which, at every convenient corner, was twisted into stars and wreaths, festoons and cornucopias. The large pillars and joists were festooned with laurel and other evergreens; and flags waved and dangled from all parts of the room over the heads of the assembled spectators and guests. The only drawback that attended the meeting were not so numerous as they might have been, for, besides the chairman, Mr. G. C. Glyn, M.P., and other directors and officials of the railway, there were none of any note present, with the exception of George Crinkshank and Mr Charles Mackay. The chair of the meeting was taken by Mr. MacConnell. We have no intention to reproduce any report of the speeches made upon the occasion; but some of the railway statistics which Mr. MacConnell be cited to show, not simply the greatness of the undertaking, and the simplicity and regularity of its working, but the good understanding between employers and employed, to which we have already adverted; and the continued exercise of which is so essential, not alone to the interest of railway proprietors, but to the convenience and safety of the travelling public. Mr. MacConnell stated that 300 mechanics were constantly employed in the repair of engines. The character of these people, he said, most exemplary: they conducted themselves peaceably and orderly at all times, and manifested the best of dispositions for their own elevation—religious, moral, and intellectual, and for the education of their children. Captain Hall, the superintendent of the company, stated that on the line rather more than 10,000 men were constantly employed; 140 000 passengers were carried along the line every week, carrying with them about half-a-million of property, and hundreds of tons; and when he reminded them that a great portion of these were ladies, who almost invariably left everything behind them, and that not once in three months were the board called to pay for any baggage they would see how many thousands per annum were handed to those 10,000 men for their care and attention. He further reminded them that since the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway, one hundred millions of passengers had been carried over the British lines, and with the exception of the melancholy accident which happ ned only a few paces from the spot where he was standing, he might say there had scarcely been an accident on the company's lines. This was more remarkable, as there were no fewer than 900 policemen employed, careless-ness on the part of any one of whom might produce a fatal accident.

Mr. Glyn, in addressing the meeting on the management of the railway, and no less creditable to the army of industry which they employ. Mr. Glyn, the chairman of the company, took occasion, in the course of the evening, to deprecate the unfair criticism to which railways and their management were subjected by an influential portion of the press; and complained of the injustice of submitting to the same indiscriminate abuse the men who carried on these great undertakings for legitimate commercial ends, and the men who had abused their position as trustees of the property of others, and had worked railways for their private objects, without a thought of the public, or of those proprietors whom they sacrificed. Mr. Glyn may, however, rest assured that the public is wiser than such newspapers, and that it fully appreciates the talents, energies, and public spirit of men like himself, who have matured the railway system, and brought it to its present perfection.

After the company had listened for a time sufficiently long to the speechification provided for the amusement of the male part of the auditory, the doors of another large room, similarly lighted and ornamented, were thrown open for the amusement of the fairer and more interesting portion of the guests. Dancing commenced shortly after ten o'clock, and was kept up until we know not what hour in the morning. The whole of the proceedings gave the greatest satisfaction to all concerned; and we trust the result will be sufficiently productive to warrant the repetition of the festivities upon another anniversary.

THE WOLVERTON MECHANICS' INSTITUTE SOIREE.

GALLANT CAPTURE OF A SLAVER, BY H.M.S. "RATTLER."

(From a Correspondent.)

Through the kindness of a friend, I am enabled to transmit the accompanying Sketch of the Rattler in pursuit of the notorious piratical slave schooner, Andorinha, on the western coast of Africa. As a brief account of the chase, capture, and previous history of this remarkable vessel may not prove uninteresting to your readers, I subjoin a few particulars.

At five o'clock on the morning of the 5th of August, a strange and suspicious-looking vessel was descried from the mast-head of the Rattler, which, upon being carefully scrutinized, was pronounced to be a large fore-and-aft schooner, under easy sail. Orders were immediately issued to get up the steam, make all sail, give chase, &c. Scarcely, however, had a part of the orders been complied with, than the movement was observed by the stranger, and the example promptly followed. An animated contest ensued, the crews of both, doubtless, being influenced by very different feelings. The breeze now freshened, and thereby considerably favoured the pretensions of the slaver. Notwithstanding, we gained upon her, but almost imperceptibly

About two o'clock we were nearly within gun-shot of her, when—alas! how uncertain are the things of this life!—a dense mist set in, which obscured the whole horizon, and rendered her for a time invisible. Before the lapse of many minutes, however, she was again sighted by the officer of the watch; and as we had by this time gained so much upon her as to bring her within the range of our guns, we discharged three rounds from a sixty-eight pounder, the last of which, having fallen in rather dangerous proximity to her stern, caused her to heave to, after a most interesting and exciting chase of nine hours' duration.

Thus terminated the career of a vessel whose success is without a parallel in the annals of this revolting traffic. In the early part of the chase, and when the issue of the struggle appeared doubtful, she cast adrift her only boat, unshackled her cable, which she let go with her anchor, and had recourse to every other measure which was in the slightest degree calculated to increase her buoyancy and facilitate her escape. Sixty stand of muskets and several cutlasses were thrown overboard likewise, which circumstance tends to the supposition that the crew was well prepared, ay, and determined, too, to resist the attack of a less formidable opponent than the Rattler. This vessel was manned by a motley crew, consisting of 39 cut-throat looking fellows, exclusive of her commander, who was a Brazilian of note, and a Spaniard of distinction, nominally as a passenger.

It was subsequently ascertained that this large American-built schooner, which exceeded 200 tons burden, had made eleven successful trips, and had treble that number of escapes. She had been chased from time to time by most of the English and other cruisers stationed in the Bight of Benin, including some of our fastest sailing-vessels, and a few steamers, whose pretensions she did not appear disposed to recognise. This, it appears, was to have been her last voyage; and, in the event of her escaping, the proprietors contemplated erecting her into a model for their future guidance in architecture.

CAPTURE OF A BRAZILIAN SLAVER BY H.M.S. "RATTLER," OFF LAGOS.

GREEK STATUE RECENTLY DISCOVERED IN ROME.

This beautiful work of ancient art was recently discovered in the excavations of the Vicolo della Palma, in Trastevere (Palm-lane, beyond the Tiber), in Rome. It is supposed to be the statue described by Pliny in the thirty-fourth book of his "Natural History," the production of Lisippus, and is esteemed little inferior to the Apollo and other masterpieces of Grecian sculpture.

The figure—that of an athleta, or wrestler—is semi-colossal in size. The head is a little less than the regular proportion, and in that respect only the statue comes within the class of the beau ideal; but the brow covers the eye well, the short upper lip is full of resolution, the general expression is one of calm determination, and the snake head of the pugillar is instantly recognised. The foot is ungracefully long, though it is sculptured with the minutest care; and the calf is diminished in proportion to the length of the foot. This is an anatomical truth, but it appears almost a blemish in the figure, and the high-blooded refinements of a small foot and hand are rejected, possibly as inappropriate to the profession of the athlete. The feet and legs may indeed be termed ugly, and the whole skill of the sculptor has evidently been devoted to the upper part of the statue. The attitude of the figure is of extreme simplicity. The wrestler, scraping off the perspiration occasioned by a recent struggle, or by exercise, extends the right arm, holding a die between the index and thumb of the same hand, as if about to decide by chance the time and place of a combat. A smile of confidence is slightly perceptible on the lips, while the bent brow announces a haughty triumph. The left hand holds the strigil, with which he scrapes off the perspiration from the right arm: thus the upright position of the whole person is preserved, whilst the body, slightly inclined on the left hip, allows the play of the muscles to be seen, and the anatomy of the back to be exhibited in the most brilliant manner.

STATUE RECENTLY FOUND IN THE TRASTEVERE, AT ROME.

A piece of stone which supported the extended arm was found broken; and from it, and the grain of the whole mass, we can judge that the statue is of the finest Parian marble: this adds to the evidence afforded by the Greek outline of the face, and the perfection of the limbs, that the statue was produced during the golden age of art, and by one of the most eminent masters. It is said that several drawings of a similar work exist, and that its outlines have been more than once repeated in Etruscan vases; but this is the only marble known of this particular form. The enthusiastic admirers who crowd to see it every day assert that it was fully described by Pliny, and that the Emperor Tiberius was so enchanted by its beauty that he caused it to be removed from the baths o Agrippa, where it originally stood, to his own palace.

ROYAL ACADEMY PRIZES.

HISTORICAL COMPOSITION IN PAINTING, BY J. A. VINTER.—"AN ACT OF MERCY"—BLANCHE OF CASTILE, QUEEN REGENT OF FRANCE, LIBERATING THE PRISONERS CONFINED BY THE CHAPTER OF PARIS, IN 1512.

On Monday, the 10th instant (the anniversary of the foundation of the Royal Academy), took place the triennial distribution of the premiums for original compositions in Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture, competed for by the students of the Institution. The number of prizes given was greater than usual, the powers of the competitors being more nearly balanced. We have engraved the prizes for Historical Composition in Painting, and for Architectural Design; for each of which a gold medal was awarded.

We have much pleasure in engraving the "Painting"—not merely as the successful picture, and the best of the three in competition; but from the promise it gives of future excellence on the part of the painter, Mr. J. A. Vinter. The subject given was "An Act of Mercy;" and the artist has chosen in illustration thereof, an incident in Sismondi's "History of France"—Blanche, of Castile, Queen Regent of France releasing the prisoners confined by the Chapter of Paris, A.D. 1512. In its treatment, the painter has exercised considerable judgment; the simple, yet graceful action of the Queen contrasts finely with the eager, careworn forms of the unhappy prisoners, who, with upturned heads and anxious looks, supplicate the aid of the fair being whose errand of mercy has brought her to their dismal prison. No less worthy of commendation is the stalwart figure of the soldier who is removing the fetters from the legs of one of the prisoners in the foreground. The chiaroscuro of the picture is broad and effective, and the colouring of a subdued richness but seldom met with in works from so young a hand.

ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN, BY MR. ARTHUR ALLOM.

The other compositions for this Medal were "Adam and Eve" (a scene from Genesis, chap. iii. v. 21), and "Christ casting out the Evil Spirits."

The Architectural Prize was awarded to Mr. Arthur Allom, for his "Design for a National Gallery," or an embellished adaptation of the present unsatisfactory office. Mr. Allom's work is elegant and harmonious, and remarkably well drawn. Amongst the recipients of Silver Medals was Mr. A. F. Young, for the best drawings of the south portico of St. Paul's Cathedral.

The subject of the Gold Medal for Historical Sculpture—a bas-relief—was "The Rape of Proserpine." This prize was awarded to Mr. E. J. Physick, jun.—printed "Phisick" in our Journal of the 15th. The model represents Pluto carrying Proserpine out of the garden; a reclining figure before him in vain endeavours to stay his progress; whilst another from behind has essayed her strength by seizing Pluto on the shoulder. In the distance, Cupid is seen urging on the horses belonging to the chariot into which Pluto is in the act of stepping. Altogether, this is a very pleasing and delicate composition.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The Royal Sovereign yacht, lately bearing the Commodore-Superintendent's broad pendant at Pembroke, is being broken up at that port, where another frigate of 60 guns, to be named the Immortalité, has been laid down. The building of the Valorous, steam-frigate, is rapidly proceeding at the same yard.

INSPECTING FIELD OFFICER, GLASGOW.—Lieutenant-Colonel Slade, 90th Foot, is named as likely to succeed the late Lieutenant-Colonel Barnwell in this staff appointment.

THE TROOPS IN THE PUNJAUB, BENGAL, AND BOMBAY.—The reliefs for the armies of Bengal and Bombay are out. The Punjaub is to be garrisoned exclusively by Bengal troops. No extra allowances are to be made to those serving within the country of the Five Rivers, though they are employed in the extreme frontier beyond the Indus. In Bengal the relief involves the movement of 22 regiments of cavalry, 59 of native and 3 of British infantry; in Bombay, of 3 regiments of cavalry, 2 of European and 3 of native infantry; or, a grand total of 85 regiments of infantry and 25 of cavalry, besides upwards of 30 troops and companies of artillery. This entails an extra charge of £600 a month for each regiment on the march, and, as the average over all is probably about 60 marches, the move will cost about £30,000. The station of Mhow, now held by Bengal troops, is to be made over to Madras, those of Neemuch and Nusseerabad to Bombay. The present relief is one of the most extensive that has ever occurred in the army. The order for the distribution of six months' batta to the troops who took part in the Punjaub campaign has been issued; it is to be payable on and after Jan. 1, 1850.

NAVAL PROMOTIONS AND PENSIONS.—By the death of Rear-Admiral Sir Francis Collier, C.B., the following promotions take place:—Rear-Admiral of the Blue, Manley Hall Dixon, to be Rear-Admiral of the White; Captain Fairfax Moresby, C.B., to be Rear-Admiral of the Blue. Captain Sir H. Blackwood attains the half-pay of 14s. 6d. per diem, and Captain H. D. Trotter the half-pay of 12s. 6d. per diem. A good service pension becomes vacant on the promotion of Captain (now Rear-Admiral) Moresby; as well as a Companionship of the Bath, by the demise of Sir Francis Collier. The two Captains' good service pensions vacant by the promotions of Rear-Admirals Sir David Dunn and Fairfax Moresby, C.B., have been conferred on Captain John Hindmarsh, K.H. (1831), and Captain Sir James Clark Ross (1834). The following promotions are consequent on the death of Admiral Lord Colville: The Right Hon. James Maxwell Wemyss, G.C.H., Admiral of the Blue, to be Admiral of the White; Sir George Mundy, K C B., Vice-Admiral of the Red, to be Admiral of the Blue; Sir Charles Bullen, K.C.B., K.C.H., Vice-Admiral of the White, to be Vice-Admiral of the Red; the Hon. Frederick William Aylmer, C.B., Vice-Admiral of the Blue, to be Vice-Admiral of the White; John Aysough, Esq., Rear-Admiral of the Red, to be Vice-Admiral of the Blue; Charles Gordon, Esq., C.B., Rear-Admiral of the White, to be Rear-Admiral of the Red; the Hon. Alexander Jones, Rear-Admiral of the Blue, to be Rear-Admiral of the White; the Right Hon. George Anson Lord Byron, Captain (1814), to be Rear-Admiral of the Blue.

The Master-General of the Ordnance has been pleased to appoint Lieutenant-Colonel Warde to the command of the Royal Artillery at Malta

THE CHINA STATION.—The appointment of Commander in-Chief of the India and China squadrons, vacated by the death of Rear-Admiral Sir Francis Collier, it is said will be conferred upon Rear-Admiral the Hon. Sir Fleetwood Broughton Reynolds Pellew, C.B., K.C.H.

THE 3RD DRAGOON GUARDS.—We have reason to believe that all differences have been made up in this regiment, and that Col. Arthur is to continue in the command

ANOTHER NORTH-WEST EXPEDITION.—Reports are rife that an expedition, to be promoted and set on foot by private enterprise, is to be got up, and the direction of it to be given to Sir John Ross, who is even now still boasts of his vigour and capability of withstanding the rigours of an ice campaign. This expedition is to push forward through Barrow's Straits to Wellington Sound and Melville Island. Whether this report will be verified or not, remains to be seen.

MILITARY LAW.—Assistant-Surgeon Douglas, of the 26th (Cameronian) Regiment, has been arrested and the cause brought against him in the recent court-martial. He has been in arrest from the 11th of September to the 19th of December. The court-martial terminated its proceedings on the 2nd of November, and, consequently, the assistant-surgeon has been seven weeks in arrest since his acquittal!

CHEAP WAR-STEAMERS.—Her Majesty's steam-sloop Dædalus, that had a thorough repair a few years since, after which she had been in commission about two years and a half, has been under repair in dock at Portsmouth for one year. Taking the cost of dock accommodation at £20 a day, which is cheaper than the Government charge to the merchant service, it will amount to £6700

OFFICIAL APPRECIATION OF GOOD SERVICE.—We have much gratification in announcing that the Lords of the Admiralty, appreciating the immense labours of Mr. William O'Byrne, in his more effective compilation of his "Naval Biographical Dictionary," comprising the life and services of every living officer in her Majesty's Navy, from the rank of Admiral of the Fleet to that of Lieutenant inclusive, have presented him with an acknowledgment of £100.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The movements in the coursing districts since our last have been barren of interest; and steeple-chasing, owing to the postponement of the Banwell meeting to Friday—the only event to-day—has been altogether "blank. The "long tail" gatherings in the ensuing week will be confined to the Lembourn on Tuesday and Wednesday, and Aske on Wednesday; the former, from its "appropriately," and the celebrity of the coursing ground in the neighbourhood, will repay the trouble and expense of the journey.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—Notwithstanding it was Christmas Eve, a fair amount of business was transacted at the under-mentioned prices.

CHESTER CUP.

50 to 1 agst Llamabaco (t)	66 to 1 agst Hannah (t)	100 to 1 agst Gisella (t)
50 to 1 — Essedarius	80 to 1 — Idle Boy (t)	100 to 1 — Thringarth (t)
50 to 1 — Dough	100 to 1 — Hot-pur (t)	100 to 1 — Chatterer (t)
50 to 1 — Mad Monk	100 to 1 — Ruby (t)	100 to 1 — Snipe (t)
66 to 1 — Vivian	100 to 1 — Cockermouth (t)	100 to 1 — Snowstorm (t)

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS STAKES

8 to 1 agst Ben Hunter	20 to 1 agst Ghia (t)

DERBY.

17 to 2 agst Rolleybroke	20 to 1 agst Voltigeur (t)	40 to 1 agst Hardinge
11 to 1 — Ghillie Callum	25 to 1 — Sweetheart	50 to 1 — Whitehound (t)
11 to 1 — Knight of Arvard	28 to 1 — John-o'-Groat	66 to 1 — Yew Tree (t)
16 to 1 — The Italian	30 to 1 — Wrinkle Compserre	100 to 1 — Bye to Dough (t)
17 to 1 — The Nigger	30 to 1 — Mavore (t)	139 to 1 — Fydon (t)

DERBY, 18.

66 to 1 agst Anchorite (t)

THURSDAY.—Business was too slack and uninteresting to require a formal quotation; we shall, therefore, content ourselves with an enumeration of the bets

CHESTER CUP.

1000 to 20 agst Chanticleer; 1000 to 15 each agst Idle Boy, Lady Sophy, and Woodbine; and 1000 to 10 each agst Ethnia, Horn of Chase, Cockermouth, and Sir Richard.

DERBY.

450 to 50 agst Rolleybroke. 1000 to 40 agst Sweetheart
600 to 50 — Ghillie Callum 500 to 1 to £50 agst The Nigger

The Spelthorne Coursing Club had a meeting at Marlborough Downs last week. To Mr. Long and Mr. Gundry many thanks are due for their kindness and liberality. Mr. J. R. Lawrence gave unexceptionable satisfaction, in his decisions as judge.

Measures are being taken and subscriptions entered into by some influential houses in Manchester and its immediate neighbourhood, with a view to obtain an expression of public opinion in that district in favour of a reduction of the duties on tea; and supported, by this expression of public opinion, it is intended to take early steps to obtain the sanction of the Legislature for reductions so necessary to the comfort of our home population and the prosperity of our eastern trade.

COUNTRY NEWS.

LIABILITY OF RAILWAY COMPANIES.—At Birmingham a public meeting was held last week—the Mayor in the chair—on the subject of a claim for compensation made by an eminent surgical operator of that town against the Midland Railway Company for an operation performed upon a man who sustained an injury on this line of railway, and which claim the railway company has success-fully resisted. The facts of the case were these:—Early in the year 1847, a poor man, named Higgins, was journeying on the Midland Railway by one of the night trains. While he was on the platform carriages attached as there should have been by this train, and Higgins was directed to get into a goods truck; in doing this, from the inconvenience of the carriage and the train being set in motion, he fell down, and his leg was so fearfully bruised by the train passing over it. Messrs. Davies, surgeons, of Coleshill, which is about two miles from the Whitacre station, where the accident occurred, were sent for, but they declared themselves unable to cope with the case, and expressed an opinion that the man would die if no operation were performed. Messrs. Davies, in this extreme emergency, suggested that an eminent consulting and operating surgeon should be called in from Birmingham. Accordingly Mr. Cox attended

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Royal baron of beef was furnished to her Majesty, at Windsor Castle, this Christmas, by Mr. Minton, one of the Royal tradesmen of Windsor.

Her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert have been graciously pleased to contribute £500 to the fund for the Promotion of Female Emigration. In forwarding this contribution, her Majesty was, we understand, graciously pleased to express the Royal approval of Mr. Sidney Herbert's practical measure for the assistance of the working classes.

On the 12th inst., a tremendous "boral"—a wind so called, which comes from the Karst mountains, a branch of the Julian Alps—raged at Trieste, and several vessels were more or less damaged. A Swedish brig, coming from Antwerp with a cargo of sugar, which ran foul of the Austrian frigate Bellona, broke away her bowsprit and lost her masts.

A committee, composed of engineers, military men, sailors, and shipowners, has been formed, by order of the Austrian Ministers of War and Trade, to consult upon the means of better fortifying the Port of Trieste towards the sea, and protecting it against the violence of the bora and sirocco winds.

The importations of poultry, which generally comprise large quantities from Belgium, the produce of that country, now also include very considerable quantities from France. A steamer just arrived from Boulogne has brought between 60 and 70 packages of poultry, consisting of turkeys, &c., the produce of France, and consigned to order for the metropolitan markets.

His Imperial Highness the Archduke Ferdinand d'Este died of typhus, in Brünn, in Moravia, at four o'clock in the morning of the 15th inst. The deceased Prince took the complaint in the hospital, where he had gone to visit the sick and wounded. His widow, the young and beautiful Archduchess Elizabeth, who is the daughter of the deceased Palatine of Hungary, the Archduke Joseph, and, consequently, sister to the late Palatine Stephen, is only 18 years of age.

From Warsaw it is stated that within a short period several wealthy French families have settled there, preferring the government of an unqualified military despotism, that prohibits all political discussion, to the storms of the French capital, where they no longer consider life and property wholly safe. Many persons who formerly lived at Dresden have also taken up their residence in Warsaw, to escape the possibility of a popular outbreak.

The political silence to which the Polish nobility are condemned by the policy of Russia, weighs so heavily on them that they willingly emigrate—so willingly, indeed, that the Government keeps them at home, by making it a matter of the greatest difficulty to procure leave to travel. A passport alone costs 100 silver roubles for each person to travel, even for a servant; for official employés, merchants, and traders, the conditions are less strict.

A letter from Toulouse of the 17th inst. states that above 300 Socialists having succeeded to celebrate, by a banquet, the acquittal of some of their companions before the Court of Assize of that town, the police entered the dining-hall as the parties were about to sit down to table, and ordered them to disperse, which order was instantly obeyed.

The Archbishop of Paris having suspended the Abbé Chantome from the exercise of his clerical functions, in consequence of his having undertaken the direction of a Democratic journal in Paris, the Pope, in a letter addressed to the Archbishop, has approved of the measure adopted by his Grace.

Alfred John Duncombe, Esq., is named a member of council at Turk's Island.

Cavaliere Agostino Portelli is appointed Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; and W. Sim and D. Henry Thornton, Esqrs., are nominated to be Companions of the Order.

Two wells in the village of Abrest, in Auvergne (France), where the inhabitants, in general, drew their water, were last week discovered to have been poisoned with verdigris. Several persons having been seized with violent vomitings, an investigation was entered into, and the state of the wells ascertained. The authorities are trying to discover the perpetrators of this atrocious act.

A person of the name of William Murray, of Kelloe, near Durham, has been committed by the county magistrates to take his trial at the assizes, charged with being concerned in uttering the forged notes of the Darlington Bank that were recently put into circulation.

By a Royal decree, all the steamers employed in a service between Holland and England shall pay only half the dues of the harbour of Nieuhiep when they do not stay there longer than twenty-four hours.

A convent at Erfurta has been chosen for the meetings of the German parliament.

The Liverpool Association for the Reduction of the Duties on Tea has resolved to commence operations.

Within the last few days (says a Birmingham paper) the Wolverhampton Operative Conservative Association has become defunct. The books, newspapers, and files of the reading-rooms are advertised for sale, and the circumstance affords the significant inference, that Conservatism in Wolverhampton is fast waning into decay, and making way for the more enlightened sentiments of Liberalism.

A public breakfast was given at Bradford on Saturday morning to R. Cobden, Esq., and Col Thompson, at the Bowling-Green, on which occasion about eighty or ninety gentlemen were present. The Mayor occupied the chair, and Mr. Aldercotton, S. Smith the vice-chair.

A fire broke out on Saturday evening at the St. John's Almshouse, Bristol, by which one of the inmates, Elizabeth Hanks, an aged woman of upwards of 80 years of age, unhappily met with her death. The fire was happily soon got under, but not till the utmost alarm and consternation had been excited among the aged inmates of the building.

It is reported that Mr. Cobden will shortly make a visit to Cambridge.

The next batch of convicts under sentence of transportation will be forwarded to the new settlement at Perth, Western Australia.

On Saturday evening last an alarming fire broke out at Hampstead Lodge, adjoining Benham and Newbury, the seat of the Earl of Craven. Owing to copious supplies of water being continually poured over the burning mass, it was at length got under, but not until the mansion and furniture had sustained considerable damage by injury.

The Master in Chancery Kindersley has appointed Mr. H. Adron, accountant, to proceed with the winding up of the Banwen Iron Company's affairs, and to call in the creditors to prove their debts, or they will otherwise be precluded the recovery thereof.

Colonel and Mrs. Challoner, with their accustomed benevolence, distributed clothes, meat, bread, and money to their numerous workmen and their families at Guisborough, at Dunsall Park.

Stackpole Court, the seat of the Earl of Cawdor, in Pembrokeshire, was on Thursday week threatened with destruction, in consequence of a fire having broken out in the music-room. The mischief was for unately discovered by one of the servants in time to prevent the spread of the flames beyond the room, which suffered some damage in its wainscoting and decorations.

Hamburgh harbour is almost clear of ice, and several vessels entered last week. There is a good deal of fresh ice forming in different parts of the Elbe.

The Lords of the Treasury have determined to abolish all gratuities, generally termed "Christmas boxes," after the present year.

A Lord of the Treasury and the Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, Sir Charles Trevelyan, are about to be appointed as members of a commities for the purpose of further revising the public departments, with the view of effecting reforms or reductions.

An Indian ship-wright, living at Bondicar, near Blyth, has, within the last few days, come into possession of vast landed and other property, exceeding in amount £80,000.

At his recent rent-day, Edward Collingwood, Esq., of Dissingley, unsolicited, very generously made a return of 15 per cent to his tenantry.

At the audit of George Marwood, Esq., of Busby Hall, at Northallerton, on Wednesday, that gentleman generously returned his tenants 20 per cent. upon their half-year's rents.

A contribution of £15 from R. M. de Blackquiere, of London, for the relief of the Kilrush poor, is acknowledged by the Irish papers.

The foundation-stone of a new bank for the use of the Carlisle City and District Banking Company was laid on Wednesday last, upon the site of that of the Old White Lion Inn, English-street, which has been taken down.

On Saturday week a button-maker, in Birmingham, for the amusement of his shopmates, suspended himself by the neck to see how long he could bear hanging. He hung a short time until black in the face, and, being then cut down, was found to be dead.

We regret to announce the death, at Malvern, on Monday last, of Mr. Patrick Fraser Tytler, the well-known historian of Scotland. By his death a literary pension reverts to the Crown.

On Wednesday last, the Gertrude, revenue cruizer, captured, near Poole, the sloop John and Samuel, of about 30 tons, belonging to Mr. Dore, of Fareham. One hundred and seventy-eight half ankers, containing more than 500 gallons of very strong foreign spirit, were found in a concealment in the vessel. The boat, cargo, and two men found on board were all delivered over to the Custom-house at Poole.

The corporation of Rochester has determined to wear appropriate official costume on all future public occasions.

On Tuesday, a man, having the appearance of a carrier, left a hamper, from one end of which a few pheasant's feathers were sticking out, at the house of a person in North-street, Whitechapel, for which he received 2s. 3d. carriage. When the parcel was opened it contained nothing but three old bricks and a quantity of straw.

E. P. Bastard, Esq., the lay rector of St. Cleer, is about to restore, at considerable expense, the chancel of the church.

John Hugh Smith Pigott, Esq., Lord of the manor of Weston-super-Mare, has presented the splendid organ which adorned the Brockley Hall mansion to the parish church of Weston-super-Mare.

Lord Stanley, of Alderley, has, at his recent rent audits, returned to his numerous tenantry 10 per cent. on their respective rentals.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

CASTLE.—Your observation is correct. There is an opinion prevalent among a certain class of chess-players that algebraics is the necessary concomitant of utility; and the more unsightly the chess-men, the more they consider them adapted for the purposes of the game. Let us be thankful that the chess in question is limited both in numbers and influence.

J. G. V., Halifax; J. G. W., Wellingham.—They shall be reported on in our next.

J. B.—There is no likelihood of the Chess Games and Problems of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS being obtainable at present, except by the purchase of the Back Numbers in which they appeared.

UNCERTA F may rest assured that Problems No 305 and 306 are perfectly correct, and cannot by solved in the way we have shown. The silly assertion of his friend, that they were capable of solution in one move, could only arise from ignorance of the rudiments of Chess.

G F T—1. The Staunton Chess-mania continues to increase in favour, and are gradually superseding the clumsy old patterns, not only in private society, but even in the Clubs.—2. The BRIGHTON CHESS CLUB, if we mistake not, is entitled to the honour of being foremost on the list of those institutions which have adopted these elegant pieces.

R V.—The arrival of Herr Lowenthal, the celebrated Hungarian Chess-Player, who, if not yet in London, may be expected daily, will impart new interest and animation to our Metropolitan Chess-circle. M. Lowenthal will be remembered as one of the distinguished Fitzwarrine who defeated the French players in the great match by correspondence between Paris and Paris, commenced in November, 1843, and concluded in February, 1846.

HON SEC. M. G., and others. The Match by Correspondence between the London and Amsterdam Chess-clubs is not likely to produce any more moves. We only wait the termination, to give the whole game in full, with very copious notes and observations

JUVENIS, ALDERSGATE.—The termination in chess, games of Mr Horwitz, George and Valtour Social C.rabdi

C F C—If B mate, in the game referred to, had played as you suggest, he would undoubtedly have had the advantage

G W R.—The solution of Enigma No 513 is as follows:—1. Kt to Q B 6th. 2. K to B 7th. 3. B to K 8 sq. 4. Kt to Q Kt 6th. 5 Kt to Q 8 6th—Mate

Solutions by M F, Derevon, Brutus, Dr. F, M R R, B A, Robert Macaire, are correct. Those by Gambit, J J, Newcastle; F C, S K G, are wrong

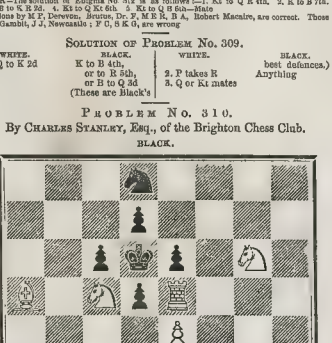
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 309.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to K 2d	K to B 4th, or to B 5th, or B to Q 3d (These are Black's	2. P takes R 3. Q or Kt mates	best defences.) Anything

PROBLEM No. 310.

By CHARLES STANLEY, Esq., of the Brighton Chess Club.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

CHESS BY CORRESPONDENCE.

The following game has lately been contested by letter between the celebrated Shrewsbury School and Brighton College.

(Sicilian Opening.)

WHITE. (Shrewsbury.)	BLACK. (Brighton College.)	WHITE. (Shrewsbury.)	BLACK. (Brighton College)
1. P to K 4th	P to Q B 4th	23. Kt to R 4th	B to Q B 3d
2. Kt to K B 3d	Kt to Q B 3d	24. Q to K 2d	Q to K sq
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P	25. Kt to Q B 3d	Kt to Q 5th (e)
4. Kt takes P	P to K 4th	26. Q to B 2d	Kt to K R 4th
5. Kt to Q Kt 3d (a)	Kt to K B 3d	27. B takes K P	R takes B P (e)
6. K B to Q 3d	K B to K 2d	28. Q to K 3d	B takes B
7. Castles	Castles	29. Kt takes B	Kt to Q B 7th (d)
8. P to Q B 4th	P to Q 3d	30. Q B takes K Kt P (ch)	K takes B
9. Kt to Q B 3d	Kt to K sq	31. Q to Q B 3d (ch)	K to K R 3d (e)
10. P to K R 3d	B to K 3d	32. Q takes Kt	Q to K Kt 3d
11. P to Q R 3d	Kt to K Kt sq	33. R to K 2d	Q R to K B sq (f)
12. Kt to Q 5th	P to K B 4th	34. Q R to Q sq	Q R to K sq
13. P to K B 4th	K B P takes P	35. Q takes Kt	Q R to K 3d
14. B takes P	Kt to K B 3d	36. Q to Q 6th	Q R to K 3d
15. Kt takes K B	Q Kt takes Kt	37. R to K 4th	Q to K Kt 3d
16. B to Q 3d	P to K 5th	38. K to R 3d	R to K B 8th
17. R to K sq	P to Q 4th	39. Q to Q 6th	K to Kt 2d
18. P takes P	B takes P	40. Q to Q 4th (ch)	K to K B 3d
19. B to Q B 2d	Q Kt to K B 4th	41. P to K 5th	K to K B 2d
20. Kt to Q B 5th	Q to K 3d	42. P takes Kt	And Black surrendered.
21. P to Q Kt 4th	Q R to Q sq
22. B to Q Kt 2d	P to Q Kt 3d

(a) See the observations on this move at p. 372 of the "Handbook."

(b) From this stage, we should take Black's game for choice; but they lose time in their after-play, and thus suffer their undeniable superiority of position to melt away a together.

(c) Taking the P with the Kt seems stronger than Chess.

(d) Kt to K B 4th would not have been so good as this, however promising it might look.

(e) If Black had returned the Kt to Q 3d, they would have been subjected to a fearful attack by their opponents playing the same manœuvre, Kt to K B 5th.

(f) Q R to K sq looks better. In that case, the following moves are probable:—

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
33.	Q R to K sq	35. Kt takes Kt	Q takes Q
34. Q to K sq	Kt to K B 4th	36. R takes Q	R takes R (ch)

And Black has the advantage.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 515.—By E. H. G.

White: K at Q 7th, Kts at Q 2d and K 6th; Ps at K B 3d, Q 3d, and Q Kt 3d.
Black: K at Q 4th, Q at Q 8th; Ps at K 4th, Q Kt 4th, and Q R 2d.
White to play, and mate in two moves.

No. 516.—By the Same.

White: K at K B 5th, B at Q 3d, Kt at Q R 5th, Ps at Q 2d and Q Kt 4th.
Black: K at Q 4th; Ps at Q 2d and 3d, Q Kt 4th, and Q R 3d.
White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 517.—By W. GRIMSHAW.

White: K at Q 4th, Q at K sq, R at Q R 6th, Kts at K 5th and K 3d, P at K Kt 3d.
Black: K at K 3d, Q at K Kt sq, R at K Kt 4th, B at K R 4th, Kt at Q 3d, P at K Kt 5th.
White to play, and mate in three moves.

No. 518.—By the Same.

White: K at K B 5th, B at Q 3d, Kt at Q R 5th, Ps at Q 2d and Q Kt 4th.
Black: K at Q 4th; Ps at Q 2d and 3d, Q Kt 4th, and Q R 3d.
White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 519.—Berliner Schachzeitung.

White: K at Q B 7th, B at Q 7th, Kt at K 5th; Ps at K B 2d and 4th, K 3d, Q B 2d, and Q Kt 4th.
Black: K at Q 4th; Ps at K B 4th, K 5th, Q B 5th, and Q B 6th.
White to play, and mate in three moves.

No. 520.—Berliner Schachzeitung.

White: K at his sq, Q at her B sq, Rs at Q R sq and Q R 5th, B at Q Kt 4th, Kt at Q B 6th.
Black: K at Q 4th, Rt at K R sq and Q R sq, B at Q B sq, Kts at K R 3d and K Kt sq; Ps at K R 6th, K Kt 3d, K B 4th, Q Kt 4th, and Q R 3d.
White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 521.—By Herr J. E. Ries, of Stuttgardt.

White: K at Q sq, Q at her R 3d, R at K 4th, B at Q R 6th, Kt at Q R 4th.
Black: K at Q 6th, Rs at K Kt sq and Q B 6th, Kt at K Kt 3d; Ps at Q 3d and 4th, Q B 2d, and Q R 4th.
White to play, and mate in four moves.

Considerable alarm has been excited by the settlement of the steeple to the new Roman Cat holic chapel, now in the course of erection on the Regent-road, Yarmouth. It was discovered, a few days since, that the upper part of the tower had considerably inclined to the east; and, on examination, it was found that the superincumbent weight had literally crushed the materials of the lower portion of the tower. Some of the inhabitants in the neighbourhood have left their dwellings in a state of alarm; but it is said the tower is now properly secured, and that it will not have to be taken down, as was at one time apprehended.

IRELAND.

AGRICULTURAL PROSPECTS AND EMIGRATION.—It has become a subject of remark about the country, that the farmers are not providing themselves with seed-wheat—that in fact there are little or no preparations making for spring wor'; and this is solely attributed to the bad understanding that exists between the farmers and the landlords, the latter still continuing to keep up the old work-rent, and refusing to give leases to any terms of tenant-right, and the former being resolved to throw up their holdings and emigrate, rather than submit any longer to the old system. The preparations for emigration are indeed quite as general as those for preserving in industry at home. And as soon as the winter has passed we may expect to see the living tide flow out of Ireland as rapidly as ever. There is also some winter emigration, but not to such an extent as during the last few years. A vessel leaves Waterford in a few days with emigrants.

PROTECTIONIST MOVEMENT.—The following is an authentic list of the noblemen who have identified themselves with the Irish Protectionist movement, by attaching their signatures to the address to the Queen:—Marquises: Downshire, Westmeath, Hertford, Waterford, and Ely. Earls: Glengall, Mayo, Roden, Bandon, Milltown, Shannon, Lucan, Donoughmore, Clonmel, Leinsterough, Castlemaine, Enniskillen, Limerick, Bantry, Strafbrooke, and Erne. Viscounts: Bangor, Bernard, Gort, Dungannon, Suirdale, Clements, Doneraile, Ashbrook, Lorton, Gormanstown, and O'Neill. Barons: Kilmaine, Dunsandle, Dunsany, Massy, Muskerry, Glenbrook, Castlon, Clanmorris, Castlemaine, Carberry, Farnham, and Riversdale. Bishop of Killaloe.

TENANT-RIGHT.—In the north, a vigorous movement in support of the principle of tenant-right has been entered upon by the tenant-farmers.

NEW TENEMENT-HOUSES AND LUNATIC ASYLUM.—The Commissioners of Customs are in treaty with the directors of the Bank of Ireland, as mortgagees of the Mountkennett mills, near the Dublin Steam Company's premises, for the purchase of them as a site for the erection of a new Custom-house for this port, and plans have been this week prepared by Mr. John Fogarty, and forwarded to the board, in relation to the project.

THE FRENCH WILL CASE.—The amount of property which reverts to Lord French's brother, the Hon. Martin French, by the verdict in the protracted will trial, is about £800 per annum, £6000 in the funds, and "trusts" of about £1600 in various securities, demised by their late brother, the Hon. Thomas French.

Conciliation Hall, on Monday, showed but "a beggarly account of empty boxes," the "rent" being only £8 12s.

The new division of Dublin into wards has been Gazetted. It is grounded on the elements of population and property, and is considered to be a most able application of scientific principles to the purpose in view. An appeal against the division, on the part of the Conservatives, was heard in the Privy Council on Monday, and decided against.

CONDITION OF IRELAND.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE NEW POOR-LAW.

(Continued from page 406.)

From the town of Kilrush to Kilkee, on the shore of the Atlantic, I passed through an unimproved district, on which nature has bestowed fertility, and man has levelled the habitations that were built in happier days. In a drive of seven miles I counted thirty-three roofless houses. Kilkee is a beautiful spot. Round a bay, from which the ground rises like an amphitheatre, are planted many villas and baths. The scenery is bold, and the waves, after rolling across the vast Atlantic, spend their last force on its rocks, dying amidst noise and foam. From its situation, it is worthy of its name, the "Western Brighton," and it is worthy of notice, shewing that nature has left nothing that can contribute to prosperity, not even a suitable bathing-place, unprovided in the Union of Kilrush. From Kilkee, through Kilard and Donoughbuy, I went to Moveen the roofless, of which I have already sent you a Sketch. I was told here a melancholy tale of the widow Hogan and her four children, who were all carried out of their cabin in a helpless state of fever, and laid down in a ditch on the opposite side of the road, where they remained several days, when a humane stranger had them carried to the hospital, eleven miles off. To Tulig from Kilkee, I counted ninety-two roofless houses. Passing afterwards through the picturesque village of Cartegahoit to Donagha and Querin, I counted 105 dwellings in ruins. Clarefield, to which I came next, baffles description. Adults, who appeared idiotic; children, wrinkled with care, so that they appeared like aged persons; and men who should not be worn out, but more helpless than children, with scarcely a rag to cover them, crowded the place. Their habitations were mere kennels. I was heart-sick, and said "Surely there cannot be such suffering and neglect in any other spot on the face of the earth!" I returned to Kilrush, glad to find a refuge even in it from the more appalling misery of the surrounding villages.

Leaving Kilrush once more, I proceeded northwards to Enaghmonmore, Derryard, and Donmore, and in this distance I counted thirty houses levelled. In the whole district there is not one respectable or even decent house. Kilard, to which I next came, is another ruined village, in which the extirpation of the old Irelanders has been complete. Afterwards I passed through the village of Doonbeg, a spot possessing very natural advantage, one half of which has been destroyed by the landlords' proceedings, and remains, with its pointed gables and few blackened rafters, a sad contrast even to the miserable houses that are left standing. The people who are yet left alive are crowded into dens, or rather dog holes, where, in a space not sufficient for two persons, twenty are glad to find shelter

Two wretched families have taken refuge under the bridge in a hole. They consist of a widow, one with three children, all ill of fever, and each other with five. The history of Judy O'Donnel, one of the widows, is worthy of being sketched. She had given evidence against a dishonest relieving officer whose relation had a power upon the soil, which she lived, and Judy's house was very soon afterwards levelled with the ground. The wreckers refuse upon it in her absence, when her son gallantly defended his home. He mounted on the roof with a bag of stones, and kept the enemy at bay till his ammunition was exhausted, when he was obliged to give in, and stand by to see the little furniture of his mother cast into the road and the house pulled down. Judy exhibited her receipts for the rent up to the last gale; and she declared the agent of the owner, to whom she had tendered what was due to him, had refused, and that she was ejected because she deposed against the dishonest public servant. Judy and Margaret O'Donnel, with their families, then retired to the hole under the bridge, represented in the sketch, and there they are now suffered to remain, holding their habitation at the mercy of the county surveyor. They are afraid of being ejected even from this spot, and dare not cross the stepping-stones shown in the Sketch lest they should be taken up for trespassing. Judy O'Donnel's son is dying of dysentery.

Before quitting Kilrush altogether, I must give you some further particulars of the Union and of its inhabitants. I must first tell you that at present the population of the Union is decreased from 89,388 in 1841 to 65,000; and, as 31,849 persons were receiving relief in June, actually 48 per cent. of the inhabitants of the workhouses, and the proportion in the rural districts would hasten to relieve. What has become of the 17,388 who, contrary to the course of nature, which everywhere delights in the increase of sentient beings, unlike warriors, who delight in destruction, has provided for the sustenance of all, I cannot precisely say. Some few, a very small fragment, may, by emigration, have escaped from the desolation, and found a refuge in England, or a happier home across the Atlantic; but the great majority has been starved out of existence.

"I see," said Captain Kennedy, writing on January 2, this year, in the papers published by the House of Commons, "masses of the people starving, and the land which could be made to feed treble the number, lying all but waste." In the special returns I find entries like this:—"This man, Michael Considine, in consequence of having land, could not be relieved. His wife and nine children died of actual want." The following table of deaths in the workhouse will throw some light on this painful subject:—

DEATHS IN KILRUSH WORKHOUSE IN THE YEARS 1847, 1848, AND ELEVEN MONTHS OF 1849

Years.	Average Number of Inhabitants.	Total Deaths.	After a residence of more than
			Three Months	One Month.	One Week.	Odd Days.
1847	922	1075	331	235	184	101
1848	1411	1209	372	298	152	61
1849*	1617	441	138	90	84	53

* Exclusive of December.

Thus, the whole number of deaths in the workhouse, in 1847, exceeded the average number of inmates by 43. It was only less than the largest number ever present (1192) by 117. In 1847, the paupers entered the workhouse only to die. In 1848, the case was not quite so bad; the deaths were 203 less than the average number present in the workhouse, and 69 less than the largest number (1678) ever present. In 1849, the mortality was much diminished, partly owing to a change in the management, under vice-guardians, who had superseded elective guardians, and partly owing to the vast number of previous deaths, which left, in 1849, fewer to die. Of all this fearful mortality I ever heard of, except that of the Black-Hole of Calcutta, or that of the fore-cabin of the Londonderry steamer, that of the Kilrush Union workhouse is the most frightful. Nor was there, according to the theory of Mr. Drinkwater, who asserts that births are in proportion to want and m sery), any increase of children to compensate. In the half-year ending March 25, 1849, there was not a single birth in the Kilrush Union; in that ending September 29, there were only four; while the average number of inmates was 2300. Neither pestilence nor war can cause depopulation like a short crop, combined with the evictions dictated by a false theory, and the belief that, under the direction of legislation, the evicted people will be benevolently provided for in a union workhouse.

The area of the Union is 178,853 acres; and in 1841, therefore, the population was in the proportion of one soul to every 2¾ acres, or far below the poet's standard of every rood of ground maintaining its man, and far below the proportion of population to acres in Lancashire. The area of that shire, according to Mr. McCulloch—for high authorities differ on such a matter of commercial measurement—is 1,130,240 acres, and its popu ation, in 1841, was 1,667,054; or, there was then 1½ souls to every acre: since then the po ulation has, no doubt, increased at least in as large a proportion as the less dense population of Kilrush has been destroyed. May I mention this contrast as some elucidation of the great question at issue in the world, as to the effects of commerce and manufactures united with agriculture, and of agriculture alone, in sustaining a population. In proportion to Lancashire, Kilrush—which consists for the most part of a very fertile soil; which is admirably situated at the mouth of a great river, possessing also a large extent of sea-coast, in the neighbourhood of an abundance of fish; whose people are actually starved out of existence—was, before the depopulation began, only one-third as densely peopled as Lancashire. The valuation of the Kilrush Union is put down at £59,449, or something more than 6s. 9d. per acre. The annual value of real property in Lancashire is put down in 1841 at £5,256,505, or upwards of £4 13s. per acre. Thus, while the population of Lancashire, per acre, is three times as great as that of Kilrush, the value of property is thirteen times as great. These little data, applicable in a great degree to the whole of agricultural Ireland, may serve to explain the different effects of commerce and manufactures as contrasted with agriculture, and the different operation of a Poor-law falling on the rapidly increasing property of commercial and prosperous England and on the poverty of agricultural and decaying Ireland.

DRIVING CATTLE FOR RENT BETWEEN OUCHTERARD AND GALWAY.

It is not my object, nor can it be yours, nor that of any reflecting man, to hold up the unfortunate landowners of this district to public indignation. They are the heirs and the victims of a vicious system. I have forborne, therefore, to mention their names in conjunction with the unfortunate creatures whose cases I have brought before you. I will, however, before I quit the subject altogether, mention that the principal proprietors and middlemen of the Union are Colonel Vandeleur, O'Gorman Mahon, John McDonnel, the Marquis of Conyngham; Messrs. Westropp, John McMahon, Blackall, Major Brooks, Charles Wilmot Smith, Hugh P. Hickman, H. Stewart Burton, Mr. Westly, and Messrs. Stackpooles, minors. I may also give you the following account of the houses levelled within the Union of Kilrush, in the last two years:—Kilmurry Strikane, 604; Kilard, 621; Moyarta, 402; Kilrush, 305; Knock and Kilmer, 111; Kilmichael, 221; Kilmacdoeane, 167; Kilballyowen, 150; Kilkee, 165; Kildysart, 80; Kilfidana, 40; Kilofin, 30: Total, 2891.

I must now take leave of Kilrush, which I left on my way to Ennistimon. Similar scenes of desolation to those I had beheld for several days continued; and on both sides of the road, as far as the eye could reach, it fell on "tumbled" and roofless houses. Now and then I saw on the borders of a bog or quagmire some of the scalps in which the people seek to preserve their lives. On arriving at the bog of Caherarmore, I alighted at the scalp shown in the Sketch, which Mr. Monsel and his companions discovered to their surprise, and found in it a woman dying of the customary fever which attends on want of food and clothing and the ordinary necessaries of life. Than this scalp, nothing could be more wretched. It was placed in a hole, surrounded by pools, and three sides of the scalp (shown in the Sketch) were dripping with water, which ran in small streams over the floor and out by the entrance. Yet, wretched as this hole is, the poor inhabitants said they would be thankful and content if the landlord would leave them there, and the Almighty would spare their lives. Its principal tenant is Margaret Vaughan, whose history has found its way before the public, and a more wretched history, even in this country of wretchedness, is scarcely to be found. Not far from her cave is the destroyed village of Kilmurry Strikane, another of those pictures of desolation of which I have already sent you too many. For the present I will leave them, and turn to a little oasis of humanity in the desert of misery.

A short drive from Kilmurry brought us to the summit of a hill where the face of the country appeared instantly to have changed. It was like passing from the Catholic to the Protestant cantons of Switzerland, or rather like a dream. At once I came on neat white-washed houses and tidy gardens, with the haggard or farm-yard inclosed, and generally containing something worth taking care of. I had entered on the domain of Colonel Windham, who is not tired of his fellow-creatures, and does not seek to exterminate them. Not a roofless house did I see here. Whether Colonel Windham have spent a large fortune on this place, or whether he have gained money while he has promoted the happiness of his tenantry, I am not informed; but when he contrasts his property with the surrounding estates, he must feel himself a proud and a happy, if not a rich, man. The whole face of the country is altered, and all the people you meet, whether men, women, or children, seem cheerful, as if they had plenty of the means of subsistence. On the very threshold of his property stands a national school, equally picturesque from its position, and admirable for its management. Though a single example is by no means conclusive of what might be equally done by all, and there never can be any just reliance on a system which places the welfare of the many at the discretion of a few, and wrecks the happiness of a whole community when the hereditary owner of a large property is a worthless extortioner and spendthrift, yet I must say the conduct of Colonel Windham adds to the loathing with which we regard many of his neighbours. More fortunate, however, than many of them, he inherited an unencumbered property and an ample fortune in England, which enabled him to spare his Irish tenants without falling a prey to exacting creditors, when the famine fell on the land.

On coming to Spanish Point, so named from a portion of the Armada having been wrecked on it, I found an enormous building, once called the Atlantic Hotel, converted into an auxiliary union workhouse. It is an emblem of what is everywhere going on: the change from productive industry, to destructive pauperism, the cessation of hope and enterprise, and the spreading of apathy and despair. I love the ocean with its incessant life, a great emblem of eternity, and I found the scenery on its shores, about Spanish Point, bold and attractive. From thence, however, to Ennistimon, through Lohynche, there is nothing so remarkable as the absence of those roofless villages and skeleton houses I had found so abundant in the districts about Kilrush.

I send you herewith a Sketch of Driving for Rent. It may serve to vary a little the miseries I have to portray.

(To be continued next week.)

SCALP AT CAHERMORE.

JUDY O'DONNEL'S HABITATION UNDER THE BRIDGE AT DOONEEG.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

THE general mourning for the lamented Queen Adelaide will deprive the January fashions of the attraction of colour; and on this account the Parisian toilettes are unavailable. We shall not, then, speak of the hues which pervade assemblies, but simply of the shapes which are most in vogue. Morning dresses are chiefly made with plain bodies, open up the front: some are worn blouse fashion but these are only tolerable by the fireside. These peignoirs have the backs tight, and the fronts loose and flowing; they are made of levantine, lined with silk, and well wadded: they are warm garments, very convenient and easy to invalid and delicate persons. Jaquettes have become so very general, that they can no longer be classed as fashions; they are nearly relinquished by the élégantes who pique themselves on the style of their toilette: they are worn of velvet, silk, cloth, merino, and even of knitted wool. Black crapes, barèges, and laristans are employed for evening dresses, which are trimmed with ribbons and flowers, either crape or jet for deep mourning, and they are very becoming. It is well known that in Spain black is chosen by ladies as a mark of elegance.

Furs are the great luxury of this month, and dresses are trimmed and cloaks lined with them. Sable is the most esteemed and the richest for walking dress; ermine is only worn in the carriage, or to evening parties. This fur is so handsome, that it requires great luxury to accompany it, to be comme il faut. The choice of furs which a woman wears is considered to indicate the rank which she holds in the aristocracy of elegance. We see Parisians attach a great importance to the furs which they wear. Some attempts have been made to ornament bonnets with bands of fur; but this heavy, ungraceful trimming has not been adopted.

Bonnets are worn rather larger, the shape still more open than last month. Black satin drawn bonnets, trimmed very simply with a fall, are much worn: they are ornamented sometimes with a bunch of small feathers; when there is no lace fall, they put on the edge of the poke a double puffing of gauze. Black crape bonnets are likewise much worn: on the edge of the poke and on the crown is a trimming of black marabouts; this trimming is very becoming. Worsted laces are exceedingly in vogue; they are much used to ornament muslins and to edge silks; richly worked, the transparency of their tissue equals the most beautiful blonds; they are true winter trimmings.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

SALTWOOD CASTLE.

THIS fine old fortress was anciently one of the palaces of the Archbishops of Canterbury, and was then a complete stronghold. Its archiepiscopal glory, however, has long since departed, and now the Castle is used as a farm-house. The old walls are broken down, and cattle-sheds erected within their circuit. The walls enclose an elliptical area of three acres, and have several square or circular towers, now greatly dilapidated.

SALTWOOD CASTLE.

The keep, or gate-house (almost entirely rebuilt by Courtenay, Archbishop of Canterbury in the time of Richard II.), is a fine ruin, its massive towers and general character being most impressive. Though a ruin in its strict sense, as compared to its original extent and character, there are some habitable rooms in it; and the hall itself (a noble room, with a handsome stone-groined roof) is in a tolerably perfect state, but sadly shorn of its due proportions, as it has been curtailed by having a kitchen made out of a part of it. Some of the apartments are in great ruin, yet still retaining their Gothic fire-places.

The ascent to the different rooms is by a newel staircase in one of the towers; and these stairs lead to the roof of the building, whence a pleasing view of the country is obtained.

Saltwood Castle is about a mile to the north of Hythe.

THE FEAR OF THE WORLD; OR, LIVING FOR APPEARANCES.

BY THE BROTHERS MAYHEW

Authors of "The Greatest Plague of Life," &c.

CHAPTER III.

IT was nearly one o'clock before Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls came down to breakfast in the morning after the Chief Baron's party, and then the conversation turned upon the pleasant evening they had spent; and they paid agreeable compliments to one another about the effect they had created on entering the drawing-room, and what they had by accident overheard strangers say of each other.

Wellesley declared that, while he was dancing with the Hon. Miss Trelawney, she asked him who that stylish lady in black velvet, with long ringlets and the diamond brooch, was; and whether he didn't think her a remarkably fine woman: at which Mrs. Nicholls simpered, and told Wellesley that at supper-time she was seated by a lady, who enquired if she knew the name of the quiet, gentlemanly young man who was standing behind Mrs. Bosanquet. And then Mr. Nicholls told Mrs. Nicholls that he had never felt so proud of her in all his life: that really her appearance was so distingué, and everything she had about her was so good and rich, and the diamonds were so thoroughly in keeping with her tout ensemble, that he couldn't help saying to himself that there wasn't a lady of title in the room that was fit to come near her; adding, that it was very lucky he had thought of buying the brilliants, for the impression they had created was enormous. He declared to goodness, while she was sitting on the sofa in the back drawing-room, before they went down to supper, he saw an old dowager with her eyes fixed upon them for a quarter of an hour at least. Mrs. Wellesley, in the fulness of her heart, could not at the moment help tapping her husband's hand playfully, and telling him to go along with him.

After a slight pause, Mrs. Nicholls declared that she could not for the life of her get a wink of sleep all that night for the thoughts of the opera-box. It was so very awkward just at that time, and she couldn't see any way of getting out of it respectably; for, however pleasant it would be to have a box of their own there, still Wellesley knew as well as she did that they could not afford it. To which Mr. Nicholls assented most heartily, saying of course they couldn't; and although there was nothing he should like better, yet they mustn't for a moment think of taking it; so they must make some good excuse or other, and get out of it as well as they could. Whereupon Mrs. Nicholls enquired, what excuse? It would never do to go telling the truth, and letting Lady Verulam know that their means at present wouldn't admit of it. Yet it was such a pity, she added; for Lady Verulam was a very useful person to know, and her set was such a nice one to get into; besides, what on earth could she say to put her off when she called? On which Mr. Nicholls told her to say—oh! —why, say that—oh! say anything she liked. He'd leave it all to her. Whereupon Mrs. Nicholls remarked, that suppose she was forced to take it, then Wellesley would go making a noise about it. Mr. Nicholls "thought he would too," which convinced his dear Sara that it would be better for them both to see her Ladyship when she came, and then Wellesley could make his own excuse, and take it or not, just as he pleased.

Accordingly, when her Ladyship's heavy carriage rolled up to the house, and Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls saw the footman's powdered hair, and the horses' coronetted harness, they grew so proud with the idea of an equipage labelled "noble" so conspicuously, as her Ladyship was being drawn up before their door, that they felt all their prudent resolves ooze out as Lady Verulam came in. And when their noble visitor began to dilate in the drawingroom on the beauties of the Opera, and point out how necessary it was to the existence of a person of "ton," confessing that for herself she was sure she should never be able to get through a season without it, the repient Mr. Nicholls found himself precisely of the same way of thinking; and declared that one met none but the best of the land there, and all the people one cared about, and vowed that he breathed quite another atmosphere in the place; besides, considering all things, it was certainly the cheapest, and, indeed, the only amusement to his fancy. Whereupon her Ladyship hoped that she was not too late yet, and that Mr. Nicholls had not taken Mrs. Nicholls' box for the season yet. To which he replied, that he had not as yet, and that, to say the truth, his wife's health was so delicate that he did not know whether Mrs. Nicholls's physician would permit her to go there this year. On this, her Ladyship expressed great sympathy for the alleged sufferer, and recommended her physician, who, she said, had done wonders for her nerves; and then she begged to know whether Mr. Nicholls was any relation to that amiable man, Sir Giles Nicholls, whom she had had the pleasure of meeting in the north last autumn; and on hearing that he was the son of Sir Giles, her Ladyship hoped that he would be sure and remember her to the fine old gentleman the first time he had an opportunity. After which, Lady Verulam made Mrs. Nicholls promise that she would take pity on her dear girls, and call and see them, for they had heard such a deal about her that they were positively dying to make her acquaintance. So that by the time her Ladyship took her leave, Mr. Nicholls had forgotten his excuses, and consented to share the opera-box with Lady Verulam.

When Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls were alone, and began to consider what they had done, they were astonished to find that the expense of it was not so much, after all; for that last season it had cost them between twenty and thirty pounds for boxes; and now, for a trifle more than fifty pounds a year extra—in fact, a mere pound a week—they should have all the éclat of having a box of their own; and that, if Sara could only manage to save the additional pound out of the weekly housekeeping, why, they would actually be getting an opera-box for nothing!

When the season came they didn't at all regret their great bargain; for the brilliants looked superb with the lights playing upon them, and Mrs. Nicholls was delighted to see that all the loungers in the pit, as they passed by "her box," couldn't help gazing at her; nor was she less gratified to find them stopping a few paces off and taking a long peep at her through their lorgnettes. Though when the time came for her carriage to be called, her heart invariably sank within her as she jumped into "the fly" they had hired for the evening, trembling last any of her previous admirers should follow her and discover that they were not carriage people.

Every time they went to the Opera, Mr. and Mrs. W. Nicholls had some complaint or other to make about "the fly;" either the cushions were damp or covered with dust enough to spoil any dress; or the brass ornaments hadn't been cleaned; or the driver's box-coat was not fit to be seen, and all burst at the button-holes; and his hat was so shabby and bent that really he didn't look a bit better than a common cabman in the street; so that, although they were paying an enormous price, any one could see with half an eye that it wasn't their own turn-out; indeed, as far as it went, they might just as well save the expense and have a hackney-coach at once; and they only wished to goodness there was another man in the neighbourhood near at hand who let at least decent things. So they went on grumbling until the night of the Queen's Drawingroom, when Mrs. Nicholls, on her return from the opera, found that the plume that she had put in her head, so that she might not appear at the opera different from the ladies who had been to the palace, was completely tipped with dirt, from rubbing against the roof of "the nasty filthy fly;" and as black, she said, as if somebody had been sweeping a chimney with it. Then it was no longer to be borne. Really, considering the number of things that were continually being spoilt, they both agreed that they were continually paying for more than twenty carriages would cost, and, surely, it would be better to job a respectable conveyance for the season, especially as the expense could not possibly be more, if, indeed, so much, as they were put to at present.

"The loungers in the pit, as they passed 'her box,' could not help looking at her."

The next morning—just for the curiosity of the thing—they went into a calculation to see what they were paying for cab and fly hire throughout the year; when, to their astonishment, they found that what with Wellesley's "hus" to and from his chambers every day, and very often a cab home late at night; and what with "the fly," for Mrs. Nicholls, say at least twice a week, though she was certain it was often more, and the fees to the driver; and what with sundry other much more; and the cabs and omnibuses, which they could not put down as a regular expense, but which certainly, on the average, came to three, or, to be safe, say two, shillings a week, they could prove to any one beyond a doubt that it would be a saving of at least one-third, or certainly a fourth, if they jobbed a carriage of their own; and felt thoroughly satisfied in their own minds that the fly-man was making a very handsome annuity out of them. So it would be better at once to tell the man to send in his bill, and for Wellesley to go and enquire, as soon as possible, what the expense of jobbing a brougham would come to.

When Mr. Nicholls returned home the next day he brought with him several estimates from different job-masters, which coming to more than they had expected, both he and Sara didn't hesitate to set down as shameful impositions; though, of course, they said "it was natural to expect that people should make something by them." Nicholls, however, on his way home, had been turning the whole affair over in his mind, and didn't see why they should go jobbing a carriage, and putting so much money every year in the pockets of people they didn't care about, when, by buying one of their own—which they might do, second-hand, now-a-days, for little or nothing—and keeping a horse at livery—which would be the only current expense of the thing—they might save the profit that, of course, the jobmaster would get out of them, and he was sure they had no money to throw in the dirt in that manner. Besides, the purchase of a carriage was merely one expense. When you had bought it, you paid for it, why, there you were done with it. But jobbing a carriage was a constant drain, and, further to bother yourself about: and as for the keep of the horse, why, the money he paid for going backwards and forwards to chambers alone would very nearly cover that. So it was clear that they had better buy a vehicle of their own, if they were to have one at all; which, indeed, from what Mr. Nicholls had seen, he had made up his mind to, if he could manage it any way.

Then they set their heads to work, to see in what way it could be managed. He couldn't pay for it out of his next quarter's money, that was clear. Sara knew as well as he did that there were some of the tradesmen whom he must pay; and the fly-man, of course, would come down upon for his bill directly he found they had left off dealing with him; and the landlord would expect at least a part of the rent that was owing—it was impossible to think of putting that off any longer. So he must try and knock out some other mode of contriving it. To be sure, he could get the carriage on credit, but coach-builders always made you pay through the nose so exorbitantly for that; besides, he'd promised himself that, until he got clear of the furniture, he never would go to work that way again. Or, if he liked, he had no doubt he could get his bills done to ten times the sum he wanted, but he had the same aversion to that style of transaction as he had to the credit principle. At last he had it! His best plan was to send a letter to Mr. Bruff, and ask him as a favour to let him have a quarter in advance: he had never asked "the governor" such a thing before, and he had no doubt in the world the old gentleman would be quite happy to oblige him. And if he wouldn't—for he was a strange wayward man, and there was no telling —why they must do as well as they could without it. And he did.

why Sara must manage to put up with a servant less in the house, and have a woman who could act both as cook and housemaid just until they got straight again, for by his new sure their cooking was plain, easy work enough; and when they gave a party, why, they could have a cook for the day, or the pastry and made dishes sent in from a confectioner's. To all of which Mrs. Nicholls, with the prospect of a carriage before her eyes, readily assented, promising to do her best, and see how matters could be arranged.

Accordingly, Mr. Nicholls wrote his father a very dutiful and affectionate letter, in which, after stating that his practice was improving daily, but not so quickly as he could wish, he spoke of his introduction to Lady Verulam, who had met his father in the north, and who had said a quantity of fine things about him that he did not like to repeat; and he wound up his letter by stating that he hoped to be able to get away next Long Vacation, and pay his respects to his father and sister a short time. And then, in a postscript, he added a "By the bye, could you, dear father, make it convenient to let me have a quarter's allowance in advance, as, at present, I cannot get in the fees that my clerk has down in his books, and on which I had foolishly relied to meet certain family expenses falling due in about a week, which I had appended to this, "Once more, God bless you, dear father." He read the epistle to his wife, and despatched it to the post-office forthwith.

A day or two afterwards, Nicholls, on returning home to dinner, told his dear Sara that, on his way from his chambers, it struck him that he might as well walk down Long-acre, and see if there was any second-hand brougham to be picked up there; and that, with his usual luck, he had fallen upon just the very thing they wanted. It had been built for a gentleman who had gone abroad, had only been in use a few months, and was really nearly equal to new. After which, he asked his wife to guess what the price was, reminding her that it was beautifully fitted up inside with a drab linnle, and had patent axletrees, while the body was painted a light blue, picked out with white. But Mrs. Nicholls confessed that she knew very little about such matters, and that she really could not say what they might want for it. Whereupon her husband told her to name some price, and asked if she thought one hundred and fifty guineas too much. To which Mrs. Nicholls replied that she should certainly consider it, after the description he had given her, very cheap at the money. At this Mr. Nicholls laughed with great satisfaction, and demanded to know what she should think if the people only asked a hundred? to which Mrs. Nicholls answered that she should think it one of the greatest bargains she had ever heard of in all her born days. And then Mr. Nicholls laughed again, with still greater satisfaction than before, and inquired what Mrs. Nicholls would say if it was only seventy guineas? and they would alter the crest into the bargain. Mrs. Nicholls replied that she should say he was joking, as she was sure it could be built for four times the sum; and when Mr. Nicholls assured her that seventy guineas really was the price, she declared that he ought to go and secure it as soon as possible, and not let a chance like that slip through his fingers; and that she should like, above all things on earth, to go and see it herself on the morrow, when Wellesley could get away from chambers to take part with it for a week or so, until they could give him a definite answer. All of which her husband thought extremely prudent, and it was, consequently, arranged that they should both walk down and look at it the very next day.

Accordingly, on the morrow, Mr. Nicholls escorted his wife to Long-acre; and Mrs. Nicholls went into such raptures at the sight of the darling little brougham, that when the coachmaker told her that Sir Somebody Something was after it, and wanted it very much, and, in fact, was only waiting for his lady to come and decide upon it, Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls drew her husband aside, and told him that as there could be no doubt about his father letting him have the small advance he had asked for, the best way would be to close with the man at once, unless he wished to lose the chance; for he might depend upon it such a bargain as that would be snapped up in less than a week, and then they would never forgive themselves; and Wellesley could tell the man to put their crest on, and send it home in a fortnight; and by that time they would be sure to have received the hundred and twenty pounds from Sir Giles.

It didn't require much eloquence to persuade so willing a party as Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, and he consequently agreed with his wife, that, considering all things, it would perhaps be much the best to do as she advised, and settle about it on the spot.

When Mr. Nicholls had done as much, it was arranged that it was to be sent home as soon as possible, which the coachmaker thought he could not promise to do under three weeks, as the varnish took so long drying. This annoyed Mrs. Nicholls so much that she whispered in her husband's ear that he'd better ask the man if he could not let them have a carriage until their own was ready; and it was only on her husband's reminding her that they had no horse as yet that the lady was in any way calmed.

All that evening Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls did nothing but talk of "their carriage," and how much better it would look to have a conveyance of their own, instead of going riding about in those hack things which, the lady declared, she had long felt positively ashamed to be seen in. Besides, it would be so nice to go to church in it, and not to raise them so much in the estimation of the world; and she was sure that nobody would be able to tell it hadn't been built for them, it looked so perfectly new, even in its present state; and when their own crest was on, and it had been fresh varnished, as they agreed, why, she would defy even a coach-builder himself to tell that it was a secondhand one.

At last the evening arrived for the carriage for dinner from Sir Giles, and though it contained a refusal of Mr. Nicholls's request, and blamed him for attempting to forestall his only means of subsistence, and which, his father said, he felt it his duty not to permit him to do, still it made amends, by informing Wellesley that his sister was coming to London to stop a year or two at his house, as it was his father's wish that the young lady, having completed her education in the country, should have an opportunity of becoming acquainted with London society and manners. And, in order that his son might not be put to any extra expense on his sister's account, his father had ordered his bankers in town to honour Wellesley's cheque for the amount of one hundred and fifty pounds, which he was to consider only as an equivalent for his sister's first year's board and lodging with him; and he had made this payment in advance, so that Wellesley might not be inconvenienced by the unexpected increase in his family expenditure.

"There's a bit of good news for you, Sara," said Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, handing the letter to his wife; "although it nearly took my breath away at first, especially as we had bought the carriage. However, it's all right, thank goodness. And, what's more, we shall have no occasion to get rid of the housemaid."

"Get rid of her, indeed! I should think not. Rather have occasion to keep her and another into the bargain," answered Mrs. Nicholls; "though I'm sure I don't know how we shall manage to do so here, for you forget, Wellesley dear, that we haven't a single room unoccupied that we can ever put your sister into. Nor do I see, either, how we shall ever be able to make shift in this poking little place. You must see it isn't as if it was only for a week or so, Wellesley, or that we might contrive."

"Well, Sara, it's useless talking in that way," returned Mr. Nicholls. "Contrive you must, somehow; for I'm not going to be dragged into taking a new house, I can tell you, for all the sisters in the world, and just after buying a carriage, too. Now, would it be commonly prudent then to think of a baby, eh?"

"No, my dear, I don't mean to say it would," continued Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls; "only your sister will expect to have an apartment to herself, or you may be sure Sir Giles would never think of paying the price he does for mere board and lodging for her. And if you will show me a room in this house that we can give up to her, why, I won't say any more about it."

"Perhaps, my dear," said Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, half angrily, "that is the best thing you can do under any circumstances. So, if you please, we'll talk about it another time. You know, yourself, Sara, that I cannot afford to take a larger house; and, understand me plainly, once for all, I will not do it. So to-morrow we'll go over the bed-rooms upstairs together, and see what can be done."

(To be continued.)

THE "RELAY" QUESTION RAISED.—On Monday, Mr. F. Robinson solicitor, appeared before Mr. R. Brandt, the sitting magistrate, at the New Bailey, Manchester, to offer reasons why a summons should not issue, on the word, to appeal at the quarter sessions against a conviction under the Factory Act. Mr. Robinson stated that Mr. Mills had been convicted in a penalty of £5 for hanging up in his mill a notice board, which was not in conformity with the act. The form of notice involved the whole question of working by relays; and under the act of the 12th and 13th Victoria, the appellant might appeal to the Court of Exchequer. The appellant and respondent having agreed to a special case for the purpose, Mr. Mills would go to the Court of Exchequer in the next term. The judgment of that Court would be recorded at the following court of quarter sessions. Mr. Mills and two other gentlemen then entered into recognisances in £40 each to appeal, and to pay such costs as the Court might award.

A SEASONABLE GIFT.—A deputation, consisting of Mr. Morgan and Mr. Innes (churchwardens), Capt. Eldred, R.N., Capt. Sawyer, R.A., Lieut. Roberton, R.N., Mr Roff (recently churchwarden), and Mr. Henry Sheresby, assembled on Monday evening (Christmas Eve), in the vestry-room of St. Mary's Church, Wenlock, and sent a communication to the Rev. Mr. Thomas, curate to the Rev. Wm. Gresham, the parish church, requesting his attendance. The worthy curate arrived without being aware of the object for which his presence was requested, and was taken by surprise when the members of the deputation communicated to him the purpose in the name of the parishioners in the vestry, of presenting to him a purse, containing fifty guineas, the spontaneous contributions of several of the attendants of St. Mary's Church, who were gratified with his discourses and attention to the duties of his office as curate in the parish. The Rev. Mr. Thomas was so overpowered by this mark of kindness on the part of the parishioners as for some time to be unable to reply; but he subsequently, in a feeling manner, acknowledged the unexpected present which had been conferred upon him on this occasion.

The Government contract for one hundred thousand gallons of rum for the navy has been taken by Messrs. Lemon, Hart, and Son, of 89, Fenchurch-street.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The festivities of Christmas usually prove more interesting than the fluctuations of Consols, consequently the leading dealers are generally absent for the holidays of the season, unless some marked event should hasten their attendance. To this, and a continued stock of stock by the public, may be attributed the heaviness of the market this week The Consols opened on Monday at 96 to ⅞, advancing on Wednesday to 96⅛, receding, however, before the close of business, to 96⅛ to ⅜, and barely maintaining that price on Saturday. Exchequer Bills continue firm at 59 to 61, private individu la taking advantage of the late rise in the English funds to sell and buy Exchequer Bills. A large sale of New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents slightly reduced the price. India Bonds continue firm. The constant flow of stock into the market, coupled with the fact that many of the large Bull accounts were carried over at the last settling, renders a further decline in prices probable, notwithstanding the efforts of the Bull party to keep up quotations until after the dividends. Prices then are usually firm, from the amount of money stock required by the public on account of re-investments; but the slightest disturbing event may tend to defeat this intention of making the public "pay for the rise." At the close of the market quotations stood—Reduced, 96⅛; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent Annuities, 97⅛; Long Annuities, expire January, 1859, 6⅞; India Bonds, £1000, 91 p; Consols for Account, 96⅛; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 59 p; £500, June, 61 p; Small, June, 61 p.

Operations in the Foreign Market have been on a most limited scale, Mexican being the only stock in which any transactions worthy of record have occurred. On Monday the price was 28¾; on Wednesday it advanced to 28⅞, and again to 29¼. This latter improvement has been well maintained, the announcement in the Bank of England towards a dividend of 3 19,933 dollars; in addition to which, it is said, the Messrs. Schneiders hold sufficient to pay the balance of the last dividend. It must, however, in fairness, be stated, that a disputed account exists, and the Messrs Schneider deny the assertion. The speculators are very sanguine of a further advance in prices, and are carrying over largely to the next account, on the belief. At the close of the week there was but little general business doing, prices closing—for Brazilian Bonds, Small, 38; Mexican, 5 per Cent, 1846, ex Jan. Coupons, 29¼; Ditto, Account, 29¼; Peruvian Bonds, 4 per Cent., 84¼; Ditto, Account, 84⅜; Spanish, 5 per Cent., 1840, 18¼; Ditto, Passive, 4¼; Ditto, 3 per Cent. Deferred, 38; Portuguese Bonds, Deferred, 8¼.

Shares continue heavy, North-Western stock still declining upon the rumours of a decreased dividend. The South-Western proprietors have decided upon a committee of inquiry, and the shares, which are now changed into stock, quote 61 for the £100 The closing quotations are, for Aberdeen, 11¼; Ditto, Preference, ⅛ dis; Birmingham and Oxford Junction, without guarantee, 29¼; Caledonian, 12¾; Eastern Counties, 7¼; Chester and Holyhead, 9¾; Eastern Counties, 6¼; Do. No. 2, £6 13s. 4d., par; E. Union Scrip, 6 per Cent, 17¼; East Lincolnshire, 28¼; Great Northern, ¼ A, Deferred, 24½; Do. 5 per Cent., Pref, 7¼; Great Western, 58; Do, ¼ Shares, 11¾; Lancashire and Yorkshire, Fifths, 3⅜; Do. New, Guaranteed, 6 per Cent., 12¾; Leeds and Thirsk, No. 2, London and Blackwall, 3¼; London, Brighton, and South Coast, Guaranteed 5 per Cent., 104; London and North Western, 99⅝; Do. New, Quarters, 12¾; Do, Fifths, 7¼; Do. £10 (M. and B.), C, 2; London and South-Western, 61; Manchester, Buxton, and Matlock, 4; Midland, 44¾; Ditto, £50 Shares, 7¼; Ditto, Birmingham and Derby, 29¾; North British, Thirds, 2¼; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 10; Readmg, Guildford, and Reigate, 15¾; South Staffordshire, 5; Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth, 22¼; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 16½; Ditto, Newcastle Extension, 11¾; Ditto, G.N.E. Preference, 3¾; York and North Midland, 17¼; Ditto, Preference, 6½, Boulogne and Amiens, 8¼; Northern of France, 1⅛ dis.; Orleans and Bordeaux, 3½; Paris and Rouen, 22½; Sambre and Meuse, 2¼.

On Friday, the Consol Market was steady, at a slight improvement in the quotations—the Three per Cents being done at 96⅛ ⅜. The Unfunded Debt was firm, India Bonds, 90s. to 91s.; and Exchequer Bills, 60s. to 61s. premium. Railway Bonds, almost generally, were inactive. Railway Shares were dull in the extreme, and lower to purchase.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—This being almost a holiday market, the attention of buyers was very little. The arrivals of English wheat coastwise during the present week have been on found to 1750 quarters. Some by land carriage and sample very limited. A though the stands were scantily fitted with samples of both red and white, the demand for all description ra ed very inactive, at Monday's prices. The factors were decidedly firm. A fair quantity of foreign wheat—upwards of 11,000 quarters—has come in this week. To-day has been rather but moderately supplied with that grain, yet the trade was heavy with a alteration in the quotations. Barley, the show of which was not really good, was very slow in sale, at late rates. So little was of the grain sold, the supply of which was on the increase, that prices were almost nominal. The best oats and flour were held at full prices. In all o her articles scarcely a transaction took place

ARRIVALS.—English wheat, 1750 barley, 380 malt, 3790; oats, 4420; flour, 2320 Irish: oats, ——. Foreign wheat, 1,240 barley, 10,210; oats, 11,570 quarters.

ENGLISH.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 37s 44s; ditto, white, 40s to 48s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 37s to 40s; ditto, white, 42s to 44s; rye, 22s to 24s; grinding barley, 21s to 22s; distilling ditto, 23s to 25s; malting ditto, 30s to 36s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 45s to 56s; brown ditto, 45s to 48s; Kingston and Ware, 48s to 52s; Chevalier, 57s to 58s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire ditto, 48s to 52s; ditto, 52s to 54s; English Clover-seed, new, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; Foreign ditto, —s to —s; Foreign red, —s to —s; extra, —s; white, 4s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 21s to 24s per barrel; Baltic, —s to —s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—For all kinds of seeds the demand has ruled very inactive since our last report, and prices are almost nominal.

LINSEED, English, sowing, 48s to 52s; Baltic, crushing, 32s to 45s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 38s to 41s.; Hempseed, 34s to 36s per quarter; Coriander, 16s to 22s per cwt., Brown Mustard-seed, 8s to 9s.; white, 5s to 6s.; Tares, 4s 6d to 5s 6d per bushel. Rapeseed, new, £20 to £23 per last of ten quarters. Linseed cake, English, £9 0s to £9 10s; ditto, foreign, £6 0s to £7 0s per 1000; Rapeseed cakes, £4 0s to £4 4s per ton. Canary, 54s to 58s per quarter. Carraway, 30s to 32s; Coriander, 16s to 18s per cwt. Turnip-seed, —s to —s, new, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s, beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 21s to 24s per barrel; Baltic, —s to —s per barrel.

*The Meat

NEW BOOKS, &c,

NEW and POPULAR PRESENT BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG.
A TREASURY of PLEASURE BOOKS for YOUNG CHILDREN. With 100 Illustrations, by J. Absolon and H. Weir. Bound in a beautiful Cover, designed by Owen Jones. Fcap 8vo., 7s 6d plain; 12s coloured TALES of SCHOOL LIFE. By AGNES LOUDON, Author of "Tales for Young Ladies." Illustrated by J. Absolon Royal 16mo., 3s 6d plain; 4s 6d coloured.
THE WONDERS of HOME, in Eleven Books. By [illegible] With Illustrations Royal 16mo. 3s 6d plain; 4s 6d coloured.
[illegible] SINGING.
KIT BAM'S ADVENTURES; or, The Yarns of an Old Mariner By MARY COWDEN CLARKE, Author of the "Concordance to Shakspeare." With Illustrations by G Cruikshank 7s 6d cloth.
"A more captivating volume for juvenile mercantile reading we never remember to have seen."—Standard and Freedom.
"Cruikshank's plates are worthy of his genius."—Examiner
FACTS from the WORLD of NATURE, Animate and Inanimate. By MRS. LOUDON. With numerous Engravings, fcap. 8vo., 5s cloth, gilt edges
"A work as charming as it is useful."—Church and State Gazette.
THE MODERN BRITISH PLUTARCH; or Lives of Men distinguished in the recent History of our Country. By the late Dr. W. C. TAYLOR. Uniformly illustrated, with a new and Frontispiece. 18mo., price 6s cloth.
THE ARCTIC WANDERERS; or, The Adventures of Carlos and Antonio among the Western Tribes. By MRS R LEE (formerly MRS T. E. Bowditch). 2nd Edition, fcap. 8vo., with Engravings, price 5s cloth, gilt edges
"A charming book, which, while it is perfectly free from all affectation, or attempt at imitation, possesses in its narrative—in its graphic description of scenery—in the amount of information which it affords, and in the spirit of devotion which it breathes, all the fascinating power of the folktale story. Mrs Lee has brought to the task of the present work qualifications which few could now be found to excel them."—Dublin University Magazine.
HANS ANDERSEN'S DREAM of LITTLE TUK, and other TALES. Translated by CHARLES BONER. With Engravings. Fcap. 8vo., 3s 6d plain; 5s coloured.
HANS ANDERSEN'S TALES from DENMARK. Translated by C. BONER. With 50 Illustrations by Count Pocci. Small 8vo., 5s cloth, gilt edges
"We prophesy for these Tales an immortality in the nursery."—Blackwood.
THE CELESTIAL EMPIRE; or, Points and Sketches of information about China and the Chinese. With 90 Engravings. 18mo., 5s cloth.
SOLDIERS and SAILORS. By an OLD OFFICER. With 50 Engravings by Gilbert. Fcap. 8vo., 5s cloth.
THE WORKS of THEOCRITUS. Translated into English Verse by Author of Charles Douglas. By M. F. TYTLER. Illustrated by Absolon. Second Edition, fcap. 8vo., 4s 6d plain, 5s 6d coloured.
TALES to BEECHWOOD FARM. By CATHARINE M A COUPER. Illustrated by Absolon. Royal 16mo., 3s 6d plain; 4s 6d coloured.
EARLY DAYS of ENGLISH PRINCES. By MRS. RUSSELL GRAY. Illustrated by John Franklin. Royal 16mo, 4s plain 5s coloured.
GLIMPSES of NATURE, and Objects of Interest, described during a Visit to the Isle of Wight By MRS. LOUDON. 2nd Edition, with 41 Illustrations. 16mo., 3s 6d, cloth.
GRANT and GRIFFITH (successors to Harris and Newbery), 34, Paternoster-row.

THE BOOK FOR THE FIRE-SIDE OR JUVENILE PARTIES.
With an Illuminated Frontispiece, price 3s 6d (by Postage free),
HOME AMUSEMENTS; a Choice Collection of Riddles, Charades, Conundrums, Parlour Games, and Forfeits. By PETER PUZZLEWELL, Esq.
GRANT and GRIFFITH, corner of St. Paul's Churchyard.

ELEGANT and USEFUL PRESENT
Now ready, bound in a beautiful cover, printed in gold and colours. price 5s, quarto, gilt edges (3s 6d postage free),
THE LADY'S ALBUM of FANCY WORK.
NEW SERIES for 1850. Consisting of novel designs, useful Designs, printed in colours, in Knitting, Netting, Crochet, Embroidery, and Point Lace; also directions for working the patterns.
GRANT and GRIFFITH, corner of St. Paul's Churchyard.

TENTH EDITION OF 1000 EACH
Price 1s. cloth, gilt; 1s. 6d., morocco gilt,
DR. CUMMING'S APOCALYPTIC SKETCHES; or, LECTURES on the BOOK of REVELATION, delivered in Exeter Hall during the Season, to the Scriptural Church Russel-street, Covent garden. This Edition has been entirely revised by the Author, who has made important alterations, and added a comprehensive Index of Subjects.
London: A. HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHORESS OF "THE PEARL OF DAYS."
Just published, 18mo., in cloth, with Portrait and Original Engravings, price 2s,
REAL RELIGION; or, The Practical Application of Holy Scripture to the Daily Walk of Life.
Dedicated, by permission, to her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen.
"Truly practical, simple, scriptural, and well adapted to its purpose."—Record.
THE PEARL of DAYS; or, The Advantages of the Sabbath to the Working Classes. By a Labourer's Daughter
"We have received Two Thousand Copies of this Work sold in six months. In a letter received by Lord Ashley from Prince Albert, his Royal Highness observes that 'The Pearl of Days' has interested him and the Queen and myself exceedingly."
London: A. HALL, VIRTUE, and CO., Paternoster-row; and 70, Edgware road (HANBURY and Co.), Agents.

THE ST. JAMES'S MAGAZINE and RELIGIOUS REGISTER; edited by J. B. BIRKE, Esq., Author of the "Cyclopædia of Sacred Literature." Price 6s 6d., to be illustrated with two Engravings, and contains (in addition to the usual articles on History, Traditions, Genealogy, and Heraldry) Christmas Past and Present, a Paper for the Season, by the Author of "Rocsdel," entitled "The First Hour of 1850."
E. BENTON, Publisher, 76, Hollis street.

SHARPE'S MAGAZINE for JANUARY, Price 1s, with Two Steel Engravings, will contain—
GOLDSMITH and his BIOGRAPHY. By F LAWRENCE
MAIDEN and MARRIED LIFE of MARY POWELL, afterwards MRS MILTON.
The INNS of COURT and CHANCERY
LEWIS ARUNDEL. By FRANK FAIRLEIGH
A GLANCE at GIBRALTAR and the ALHAMBRA. By FRANCIS SHERERDE (With an engraving.)
REVIEWS.—COURT and REIGN of FRANCIS I, King of France —ROMANCE of PEERAGE.—Longfellow's KAVANAGH.
Vol. X.—July to December, 1849, is now ready. Price 6s 6d. cloth.
London: ARTHUR HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

Price One shilling each, by Post 1s 6d.
RAILWAY LIBRARY (THE). -NEW VOLUME, THE PURITAN AND HIS DAUGHTER. By PAUL BLAKE. Also uniform,
The Pilot | The Spy | Pride and Prejudice
Red Rover | Peveril | Tom Cringle's Log
Sense and Sensibility | Jane Eyre | Nicholas Nickleby
Last of the Mohicans | Deerslayer | Pathfinder
London. GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and CO., Soho square; and all Newsmen in Town and Country.

Now ready, in foolscap 8vo, price 6s. cloth,
THE LONDON PRISONS.
With an Account of the more Distinguished Persons who have been Confined in them. To which is added, a Goodly Company of the Chief Provincial Prisons. By HEPWORTH DIXON.
"By the author, in full-length portrait."—Spectator.
"By the author, in full-length portrait."—Spectator.
JOHN HOWARD and the PRISON WORLD of EUROPE. From Original and Authentic Documents
London: JARROLD and SONS, 12, Paternoster-row, and 5, Chureyard

BEAUTIFUL CHRISMAS PRESENT.
This day, handsomely bound and gilt, price 4s 6d., the DOMESTIC JOURNAL; and FAMILY Miscellany of Instruction and Amusement. Illustrated with upwards of THREE HUNDRED ENGRAVINGS, executed at an immense cost; comprising Original Pictures by the most eminent Artists of Public Characters; Views of Celebrated Places, Emigration Fields and Prospects; Cities and Towns, Sketches of Scenery and Adventure; Specimens of Needlework; Curiosities of Nature and Art; and a variety of other subjects, the whole presenting an Assemblage of Picturesque Illustrations never before presented to the public in a work of this kind.
The Literary contents include nearly 400 closely printed quarto pages, or 800 columns, of entertaining and instructive Tales, Sketches, Romances, and Essays, Biographical Memoirs, Voyages and Travels, Biographical Memoirs; Visits to Remarkable Sites, British and Foreign; Remarkable Days; Work Tab & Needlework; and New Domestic Receipts; the whole forming an extraordinary fund of entertainment and profitable reading for every fireside in the empire, and a most attractive Present for Christmas.
Published by W. M. CLARK, 17, Warwick-lane, Paternoster row.
Can sold by all booksellers.

NEW EDITION, 37,000.
Now ready, Price One Shilling, or Post-free, 1s. 6d.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING-BOOK
This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of SPELLING, which smoothes all difficulties acquirement by beginners, and by the PLEASING ORIGINAL READING LESSONS, which excite the learner to advance of his own accord; while the whole is ILLUSTRATED by UPWARDS OF ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects and scenes described, forming by far the most alluring introduction to reading ever published (144 Pages.)
A few Copies are coloured, price 2s extra.
Published at the Office of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London. A liberal Allowance to the Trade and to Schools. Supplied for Cash only. Remittances to be made to the Office. On application, terms may be known.

NOTICE! THE
NEW NOVEL THE WILMINGTONS.
By the Author of
"Emilia Wyndham," "Who Old Men's Tales." &c.,
Is Now Ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.
London: T. C. NEWBY, 72, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square.

THE HON C. STUART SAVILE'S NEW NOVEL, LEONARD NORMANDALE; or THE THREE BROTHERS
SILVERTHORNE. Just published, 13s., Price 13s. a Book for Christmas,
ULRIC and LILIAN, a Fairy Tale, translated from the German of PHILIP VON DEPT.
London: J. MADDEN, 8, Leadenhall-street, and all Booksellers.

[illegible] ART BOOK FOR THE SEASON
Just ready, a handsome super-royal 8vo. volume, price 16s, cloth
THE NILE BOAT; or, Glimpses of the Land of Egypt. Illustrated by Thirty-five Steel Engravings and Maps and Numerous Woodcuts. By H. BAKER, "Fifty Years in the Desert," "Walks about Jerusalem," &c
London: ARTHUR HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

Just published, price Seven pence, Parts 1 and 2, each Part containing 32 pages and 4 Steel Engravings,
THE STEWARD; a Romance of Real Life, by HENRY COCKTON, Esq. author of "Sylvester Sound," "The Love Match," "Valentine Vox," &c.
London: W. S. ORR, 5, Amen Corner, and 17, Warwick-lane, and sold by all booksellers; of whom may be had, in elegant binding, price 5s each, The Love Match" and "Valentine Vox" complete.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "HOME INFLUENCE"
Nearly ready, in one vol., foolscap 8vo.,
WOMAN'S FRIENDSHIP; a Story of DOMESTIC LIFE. By GRACE AGUILAR.
"To show us how divine a thing
A woman's friendship can be."—WORDSWORTH.
London: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, Publishers

THE PEOPLE'S MEDICAL JOURNAL and FAMILY PHYSICIAN, No. 2, price 1d (to be continued every week) will be published on SATURDAY, January 5th; containing contributions by Dr. Conquest, Dr. Yeoman, &c. &c.—London: G. PICKERS. Orders received by all Booksellers and Newsvendors throughout the kingdom. Heads of families are especially invited to order the first Number now.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK for 1850,
Being the Sixth Annual Number of the beautifully embellished and useful Almanack. Illustrated by DUNCAN and other Eminent Artists. The Notice of the Queen's Visit to LONDON; besides a variety of new and useful Tables, &c. &c. The Astronomical Department by JAMES GLAISHER, Esq., F.R.S., of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich
Published by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, London.
Can be supplied by all Booksellers, or supplied for Cash only

NEW DANCE MUSIC. By D'ALBERT.
Just published, price 4s., D'ALBUM des AMOURS, containing an entirely new Polka, Waltz, Quadrilla, Schottische and Redowa by the popular composer, with the beautiful Illustrations, coloured by hand, forming a most attractive Christmas present. Price 6s.—Also, the FAIRIES' DANCE FAIR, a beautiful set of Waltzes, exquisitely illustrated by Brandard. Price 4s.—In the press, several other new Dances, Waltzes, &c., by M. D'ALBERT.—CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond-st.

PORTRAIT of JETTY TREFFZ in the PIANISTA.—Jetty Treffz's Songs, including "Trab, trab, Napoleone," "Rondel," and two others of her most favourite Songs, are in the PIANISTA for JANUARY, No. 113, with her Portrait, drawn on Stone expressly for the "Pianista." Price 3s; postfree, 30 stamps. N B. Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 114 of the "Pianista" have been got up in form elegant presents for the season. The three Nos. post-free, 90 stamps.—Address, GEORGE RANSOM, pub lisher of "Pianista," 163, Argyll-street, Regent-street; or 67, Paternoster-row

NEW DANCE MUSIC FOR THE NEW YEAR.
THE JETTY TREFFZ, or TRAB TRAB POLKA, the Lincombe Polka (both very popular), and 16 other Polkas, and the Redowa Waltz, in the PIANISTA, No 112, embellished in gold and colours, price 2s. Post-free, 30 stamps. Mr. parker's Polka Quadrilla, and five new Polkas, published on the 20th inst., No. 114, price 2s. post-free, 30 stamps. "Pianista" No 6 West End Office, 198, Argyll-street, Regent-street, Or by ONE, 67, Paternoster-row, and by all Booksellers.

"THE INGLESIDE"—Just Published, with Embellished Title—Poetry by [illegible] Music by W. H ALLBROOK. This song [illegible] [illegible] to the present season, and may be had of all Music-sellers.—N B. Singing, with Harp, Piano, and Guitar Accompaniments, 30 stamps for order. Postage free 19, Trigon-terrace, Clapham-road. All letters must be prepaid.

CHEAP MUSIC.—New Music, bound in volumes, at one-half the price charged at market price, selling at 5s. Collection works of Herz, Labitzky, Strauss, Coote, Rosellen, and all the first masters, at half-price and quarter price. Vast choice of new pieces, at 4 and 6d. per page, and of all new songs at 1d. per page. Country orders. Every description of good cheap music kept, at warranted correct and perfect. Catalogues, 1d. each, or 50 for 2s. Subscription, the old stand, shop established 50 years. New Catalogue by post on receipt of two stamps.—J. ALFRED HILL.

BOOKS for PRESENTS.—JOHN FIELD begs to call the attention of Heads of Schools, and the Public generally, to his immense Stock of Juvenile, Miscellaneous, and Illustrated Works, suitable for Prizes and birthday presents, in neat and superior bindings, at a great reduction from the publisher, prices. Tales, Voyages, Travels, Natural History, &c., &c., may be had in sets and Scrap-books from 1s. to 4s 6d. Stationery of every description at the lowest possible prices.—60, Regent-quadrant, corner of Air-street.

TWO HUNDRED STEEL ENGRAVINGS for 8s. 6d. These beautiful plates consist of finely-executed Views, Portraits, &c., from the Illustrated London Journals. The process can be cut, and different, and admirably adapted for Albums, Scrap-books, &c., for Juvenile purposes, and form an elegant present. Sent free by Post immediately on receipt of Post-office order.
JAMES HEATHCOTE, Print Publisher, 192, Strand.

A N ELEGANT NEW YEAR'S GIFT for 1s.—HIMMEL'S PERFUMED ALMANACK, for imparting a delightful and lasting fragrance to pocket-books, card cases, workboxes, desks, &c., also to the prettiest novelties of the season. Sent by post on receipt of 13 stamps, or to be had of all perfumers and fancy dealers. Sole Proprietors, E. HIMMEL, Perfumer, 39, Broadstreet, Soho, London.—May be ordered through Messrs. Longman.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street. Every variety of cheap, second-hand, Cottage, Square, Piccolo, and Oblique Pianofortes, by Kirard, Broadwood, Collard, Wornum, &c.; also Grand Pianofortes, Harps, by Erard, for Sale or Hire, at CHAPPELL'S Musical Library, 50 New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES.—TOLKIEN'S splendidly-toned Pianofortes, with 6½ octaves, O. G. Fall, Metallic Plate, only 25 guineas. Every one warranted a first-rate instrument for a little money, will be well to purchase at TOLKIEN'S old established house, 178, 179, and 180, Tottenham-court-road. Ready for delivery to the instruments sent post free Old instruments taken in exchange.

PIANOFORTES.—Messrs. HOLDERNESSE and Co., Manufacturers, 444, New Oxford-street, London, have always on sale a large assortment of PIANOFORTES, Models, for elegance of design, beauty of tone, and durability of manufacture, cannot be surpassed. Every Pianoforte warranted, and sent to any part of the kingdom free of carriage. Prices strictly moderate. Ware rooms open from 9 till 5 o'clock.

PIANOFORTES, by CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street, Every description of Grand, Semi-Grand, Cottage, Square, Piccolo, and Oblique Pianofortes, by Erard, Broadwood, Collard, Wornum, &c.; also Grand Pianofortes, Harps, by Erard, for Sale or Hire, at CHAPPELL'S Musical Library, 50 New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES.—TOLKIEN'S splendidly-toned Pianofortes, with 6½ octaves, O. G. Fall, Metallic Plate, only 25 guineas. Every one warranted a first-rate instrument for a little money, will be well to purchase at TOLKIEN'S old established house, 178, 179, and 180, Tottenham-court-road. Ready for delivery to the instruments sent post free Old instruments taken in exchange.

PIANOFORTES.—Messrs. HOLDERNESSE and Co., Manufacturers, 444, New Oxford-street, London, have always on sale a large assortment of PIANOFORTES, Models, for elegance of design, beauty of tone, and durability of manufacture, cannot be surpassed. Every Pianoforte warranted, and sent to any part of the kingdom free of carriage. Prices strictly moderate. Ware rooms open from 9 till 5 o'clock.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street. Every variety of cheap, second-h

HUNGARIAN EMIGRANTS ON THEIR MARCH TO SHAUMLA.

SKETCHES IN HUNGARY.

(From our own Correspondent.)

I SEND YOU a Sketch of the last division of the Hungarian emigration on its march to Shaumla. It comprises portraits of Kossuth, of Count Casimir Bathyani, and of Generals Perczel and Dembinski. Kossuth wears the black felt hat and white ostrich feather, distinctive of the Magyar civil and military leaders. Bathyani and Perczel are in hussar uniforms, and the old white-bearded Dembinski is clad in the national costume of the Polish nobles. In the distance are visible the carriages of the Countesses Bathyan and Dembinski.

The Poles, under the command of Count Zamayski and of General Vysocki, left Widden on the preceding Monday (30th of October). The Italians, under Count Monti, on the Tuesday; Bem and the converts to Islamism, in all 96 in number, on the Wednesday and Thursday. On the Saturday following, the Hungarian leaders, officers, and soldiers—not a couple of score, as stated by the Times correspondent, but upwards of 600—supplied with a hundred cars and waggons, and escorted by several hundred Turkish sicims, followed the same line of march.

For the accompanying Portrait, Kossuth gave me a sitting; it is a most characteristic likeness. (A Memoir of Kossuth appeared in No. 365 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

General Guyon, who is prominent in the next Sketch, is an Englishman, the son of a post-captain in the British navy. Having attained the rank of major in the Hungarian army, and married a Hungarian lady (the Countess Spleny), he was, in 1848, residing on his estates, absorbed in field sports and agricultural pursuits. In obedience to his oath, and in fulfilment of his duty to his adopted country, he took up arms in its defence when invaded by the hordes of Jellachich, and never swerved from that moment in his devotion to the Diet.

Always popularly considered the most daring of the Magyar leaders, he is allowed by competent judges to have equally surpassed in military capacity all his fellow-commanders, with the exception of, perhaps, Bem and Damianitch. That the high reputation he enjoys should hardly render justice to his merits is attributable to the unceasing efforts of Görgey to disseminate the impression that Guyon was a mere sabreur, who owed everything to his headlong valour. At the outset of Görgey's campaigns, when manœuvring to isolate his army from the Executive and the Diet, he found in the fidelity of Guyon an obstacle to his designs. Görgey abandoned him at Tyrnau, with 1500 men, in the midst of Simonich's army, through which, contrary to all expectation, Guyon fought his way. During the north-eastward retreat of Görgey, who only fought one action, and was there defeated, Guyon, who commanded a corps of his army, was not only everywhere successful, but saved the whole corps by his complete victory over Field-Marshal Schlik, in the passes of the Tarcsai. In this action, one of the most desperate upon record, Guyon, with the loss of 4000 out of 10,000 which he commanded, stormed the strongest positions in Hungary, defended by 15,000 picked Imperialists. Though the Diet decreed that Guyon's name should be inscribed on a bronze pillar, Görgey, as chief in command, reaped the credit of this successful march and junction.

When Guyon, denouncing him as a traitor or a coward, refused to serve another hour under his orders, he was persuaded to silence, and appointed to the command of Comorn. This fortress, then invested by the enemy, he succeeded, after the most romantic adventures, in entering, with twenty horsemen, with which he surprised and took prisoners one detachment of 120 men, and cut to pieces another of equal number.

Amongst the most remarkable of his actions must be accounted the storming of Mansworth, in Austria, previous to the repulse at Swechat, in the beginning of the war; and, towards its close, his utter defeat of the Ban Jellachich, whom he drove finally from the Banat with prodigious slaughter.

After the defection of Görgey, when the Hungarian armies were everywhere magically dissolving, Guyon rejected all proposals of surrender, and led the wreck of his corps escorting Kossuth to Widin.

General Guyon is about thirty-five years of age; short in stature, but light and active, with fair hair and beard, and light blue eyes. One would hardly augur, from the placidity of his tone and manner, the unflinching resolution which induced him to ride into the midst of armed mutineers and to shoot down their ringleader, or to direct his artillery to mow down with grape the laggards in the rear, when he led his desperate assaults on seemingly impregnable positions.

In the accompanying Sketch, an incident of General Guyon's last campaign is pourtrayed; when, cut off by the Austrian cavalry, he defended himself on foot, with his back to a waggon, for several minutes, killing one and disabling several of his assailants; till Mr. Longworth, the Circassian traveller, a captain on his staff, spurred up with a party of hussars to the rescue of his chief.

GENERAL GUYON DEFENDING HIMSELF.

General Haynau's morbid cruelty and thirst for blood it is perhaps only charitable to attribute to a defective or diseased organisation. To preside at executions and massacres, and perpetrate little acts of brutality, constitutes his chief delight; whilst afterwards he spends hours and days in tears in a wretched state of nervous excitement. His eyes are often red with weeping; and his old head, shaking with a palsied motion on his long neck, affords a pitiable spectacle. Only known by the storming of Brescia, and by his ruthless massacre of the inhabitants, he had been always unfortunate till the battle of Temeswar, where, notwithstanding Russian aid, till four in the afternoon the day went against him. This victory, if it could so be called, owed all its results to subsequent accidents and to the surrender of Görgey. Haynau has since avowed the intention to revenge, through the scaffold, his own and all the Austrian discomfitures in arms. According to common rumour, he declared in council, a short time since, that retribution had to be dealt for the 60,000 Austrians slain in battle by the Magyars. Nevertheless, a Hungarian who has suffered in his own family from the hyena-like ferocity of Haynau, observes that all he should feel justified in doing if he had him in his power, would be to shave his head, blister the nape of his neck, and place him on a cooling diet.

KOSSUTH, FROM AN ORIGINAL SKETCH.

(A Portrait of General Haynau appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for Dec. 8.)

In Stuttgardt, two late deputies of the Frankfort Assembly (Kalaczek and Hagen) have announced a new monthly Journal, to appear with the new year, devoted to the interest of the Volks-partei; its programme states that it will present the principles of the party to the public "in their political, scientific, historical, critical, and esthetical relations." If the principles themselves outlive the right of illustration to be thrown on them, they must possess excessive

London: Printed and published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1849.

THE FEAR OF THE WORLD; OR, LIVING FOR APPEARANCES.

BY THE BROTHERS MAHEW.

AUTHORS OF "THE GREATEST PLAGUE OF LIFE," ETC.

(Continued from page 446.)

CHAPTER IV.

THE next morning Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls, according to agreement, went over the upper part of the house, to see which room could be given up to Wellesley's sister. First one plan was proposed, and then another. Now the nursery was to be given up; but then it was impossible, for there must be a separate room at the top of the house for the children to play in. And now the cook and the housemaid were to sleep together in the back kitchen, which Wellesley said could easily be fitted up as a bedroom for them: but then Mrs. Nicholls wanted to know how the house could ever be managed without a back kitchen; and, moreover, she asked where Parker's press-bedstead was to go to—he must have a room to himself. Then Wellesley proposed that they should hire a bedroom for him at some house close by, just for the time, and so the maids could have Parker's room, and the nurse and the children could leave the bed-room at the back of theirs, and go up into the maids' room, in the back attic, and the front attic might still remain as the nursery. But this profound plan Mrs. Nicholls overruled by inquiring, if Parker slept out, at what time Wellesley thought he would be coming in to do his work in the morning? Besides, it would never do. Then, Wellesley didn't see why Parker shouldn't sleep in the front kitchen, if that was all. Whereupon Mrs. Nicholls exclaimed, "What! in the place where their dinners were cooked?" So that Wellesley, finding that he could devise no feasible method for getting out of their difficulty, grew angry, and said that his wife might arrange it just as she liked, but arranged it must be, somehow or other—for, as he had said before, he was not going to be dragged into the expense of taking a larger house, especially as it was as much as he could do to pay the rent of the one he was in—so he begged she wouldn't speak to him any more about it: and thus the matter dropped, Mrs. Nicholls feeling considerably annoyed because her husband wouldn't take a new house, and Mr. Nicholls half vexed because he couldn't.

The carriage was to be home in about a fortnight, so it was high time to look after a horse. Nicholls had seen one or two, but the animals didn't step out well, and carried their heads badly, and, in fact, were not sufficiently showy for what he wanted. Luckily, however, his friend Lively Harry came to his aid; for, one afternoon, while he was at Anderson's, looking at a horse, which he was having trotted up and down, that ubiquitous gentleman strolled through the yard; and, seeing what Nicholls was after, advised him not on any account to buy that creature, for it was an old stager, and he had known it on town for ten years at least, during which time it had had double as many masters. Last season young Greville bought it. Of course, he continued, Nicholls knew young Greville—he was in the Thames Yacht Club, and had won the cup the year Cerito came out. Then Lively Harry hoped Mrs. Nicholls didn't catch cold last Tuesday night; and told Wellesley, after he had left them, he had gone to supper with a friend, who assured him, on the best authority, that there was about to be another change in the Ministry. Next he asked Nicholls whether he had read Disraeli's last new novel, and what he thought of it? The people were all talking about it, he said, at Fred Gordon's the other night—he meant Fred Gordon that had carried off Baron Rathbone's eldest daughter. And then he exclaimed, "By the by, Nicholls, Gordon has a chesnut mare that he wants to part with that would just suit you; so, if you like, I'll just step round with you and introduce you. He's a decued nice fellow for a man to know, and gives capital parties, I can tell you; and then we can all go and look at the animal together."

And so they did, and Wellesley was so taken with the paces and whole appearance of the mare, that he made her his own by giving Mr. Gordon his bill for fifty pounds, at a month, and left directions that the horse should be sent home on the morrow.

At dinner he told his wife all that he had done, and remarked how well the horse would look in their carriage, for chesnut was such a nice gentlemanly colour; and that he was sure that when she saw it in the brougham, she would say that any one would take it to be a nobleman's turn-out, along that he had given a bit at a month, which was unusual, because by that time his quarter's allowance would be due. All of which pleased Mrs. Nicholls exceedingly; but, reverting in her own mind to the house, she asked Wellesley where he was going to put the horse? to which Mr. Nicholls replied, that perhaps it would be better to let it stand at livery for a time at the fly-master's stables, as that would keep the fellow from bothering him about his account. Whereupon Mrs. Nicholls begged of her husband to think of what he was about to do; and, just to prove to him the foolish, imprudent way in which he was going to act, she pointed out how he would have to pay at least thirty shillings a week for the horse and carriage at livery, and from five to seven shillings a week for a bedroom for Parker out of the house—making, with one thing and another, near upon two pounds, or better than a hundred a year, addition to his present expences. And all that he would go and incur just because he was so obstinate as not to take a new house, and where he could have his own stables, and live in a more fashionable part of the town, for very little more than they were at present paying for the out-of-the-way little place they lived in.

This was a home thrust to Nicholls's pocket and vanity, for he began to see that by moving, as his wife had pleasantly said, to a more fashionable part of the town, he could make a twin as stylish appearance for little more than half of what it cost him in the humble retirement of St. John's Wood. Still, he trembled lest he should not be able to find a tenant for the remainder of his lease; and he expressed to his wife the fears he had on that score. Whereupon Mrs. Nicholls assured him that, after the improvements they had made, and the manner in which they had beautified the place, they should be able to let it directly, and, so far as that went, at an increased rent into the bargain; adding that, either it was very foolish to have ever bought the carriage at all, or else having done so, it was worse than madness to think of stopping in a place where there were no stables, and nobody near that you care about to see it, and where it was positively little or no credit at all to one. And how a man, she continued, with the income which he now had, could hesitate for a moment about going into a better part of the town, was, she must confess, far beyond her comprehension. Why, there was he, receiving five hundred a year from his father, and say a hundred a year from his business, and a hundred and sixty from his sister, making his income altogether near upon eight hundred pounds, to say nothing of what he would save by the stables, and the increase of rent they were to get for their present house—and yet he was frightened to death about going into a place that couldn't, even in the most expensive quarter of London, cost him more than fifty pounds a year beyond what he was then paying.

Wellesley at once saw the correctness of the statement, and observed that, to be sure, it was not as if they would have to buy new furniture, for what he had got he was certain was good enough for anywhere. So that, after a little further consideration of the matter, it was arranged that Wellesley should look out and see what could be done.

Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, having once made up his mind to leave, wasn't long in finding a house quite equal, if not superior, to his improved circumstances. It was delightfully situated within the most aristocratic walk of Hyde Park, with excellent stabling, all complete, and offered every convenience to a family of the highest respectability; and what made it far more desirable in the eyes of both Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls was, that their sideboard fitted the recess in the dining-room to a hair, and their drawing-room carpet was very little too large, and could easily be cut down for the little sitting-room at the back. They both of them agreed, as usual, that it was quite a bargain at a hundred and twenty pounds a year, especially as there was no premium to pay, and the fixtures were to be taken at a valuation, and they couldn't come to much. Though when, in about a fortnight afterwards, Mr. Nicholls went to "settle and sign," he was astonished to find, that what with the expenses of preparing the lease, and the broker's valuation of the fixtures, "that couldn't come to much," he had eighty-seven pounds odd to pay before entering the premises. However, he had a perfect gentleman to deal with, who took short bills for the fixtures, and consequently he had only the legal expenses to get rid off.

Nicholls chose a beautiful apartment for his sister, and he thanked his stars that, with the exception of fitting that up, and a carpet or two for the principal rooms, he should be put to little or no expense at all. Though, when they called in the upholsterer, it was astonishing to see how mistaken they had been in this respect likewise, as the man soon proved to them that there was scarcely a room in the new house that didn't require something or other to be made for it, for the whole place was so much larger, that it would look nearly naked without it. There must be half-a-dozen new chairs and a couple of what-not's for the dining-room, to make it look anything like, and another sofa and ottoman for the back drawingroom; and the upholsterer would also recommend a pier-glass or two and some card-tables for the front drawingroom; and then the curtains they had at present would look terribly scanty, and cost almost as much to alter as a new set would come to; and, moreover, there was the little back sitting-room—that would have to be entirely new furnished, and which, strange to say, had totally escaped Mr. Nicholls's notice. But the upholsterer was in a very large way of business, and he had furnished Wellesley's house before, and had never pressed much for his money; so Mr. Nicholls agreed with the man, that, while he was about it, it would be better not "to spoil the ship for a ha'porth o' tar," especially as it was a thing they didn't do every day; and, besides, what would his friends say, when they came and saw a large handsome room only half filled with furniture. Consequently, the orders were given, and in a month's time the house was to be all ready to receive them.

Previous to leaving St. John's-wood, Mr. Nicholls found several other little difficulties arise which had not entered into his calculation; for the tradesmen, hearing that he was about to quit the neighbourhood, began to grow rather persevering about the settlement of their bills; and by the time he had quitted them and paid for the carriage, he found that a considerable hole had been made in the hundred and fifty pounds he had received on account of his sister's first year's board and lodging. However, in a week he would have his quarter's money again, which, together with the ten or twelve pounds that remained in hand, he reckoned would enable him to pay up all his back rent, and stop the mouth of that bothering fly-man with something on account; and then, if he could only manage to put off some of the other things that were not so particularly pressing, he had no doubt he should be able to carry on the war. For it was not as if he was going into a worse house: and then creditors never annoyed a man when they saw that he was getting up in the world; so that, after all, he was only worrying himself about trifles, and felt convinced that in a year or two (with proper management) he should find himself much better off than ever he had been.

"Say that you've been prevented by illness from writing before."

One day when Nicholls came home from business, he was astonished to learn from Mrs. Nicholls that the flyman had objected to take the ten pounds on account, observing that, as the bill had been running on for near upon a year, and they were about quitting the neighbourhood, he didn't see why he shouldn't be paid in full, as the other tradesmen had been. Whereupon, Mr. Nicholls said the fly-man was an impudent scoundrel, and told his wife how he would just serve the gentleman. He shouldn't have a sixpence until the rest had been paid; and when he called again, Mrs. Nicholls might tell him as much. But Mrs. Nicholls begged of her husband not to be too hard upon the man, for he seemed to be well disposed, and, as the poor fellow had said, he'd got a large family to support, and he was obliged to pay ready money for everything he had, and that she really thought he pressed so hard for his money merely because he couldn't afford to wait for it, and that he had said as much, indeed. To all of which Mr. Nicholls merely replied by asking his wife what the man's large family was to him? That surely was the man's look-out, he said, not his. Besides, even if he felt disposed to take the man's necessities into consideration, how on earth was it possible for him to do so? He'd merely ask her if Gordon's bill for the horse wasn't coming due in a day or two's time; and did she think it would ever do for him to let that go back? No! not for all the men with large families in the kingdom, he could tell her! Wasn't he bound, as a man of honour, to attend to that; for a pretty thing it would be indeed to have it rumoured about town that Wellesley Nicholls had done Fred Gordon out of his horse. People might say, perhaps, that he was imprudent, but, thank heaven, no one could say, and he'd take precious good care no one ever should say, that he was dishonourable!

To these sentiments Mrs. Nicholls gave her warmest approbation, and said she only wanted her husband to do all he possibly could for the poor man, and Wellesley to see if he couldn't spare the poor fellow half of his bill, just for the present. Whereupon Mr. Nicholls could contain himself no longer, and remarked how foolish his wife talked, and that she would go speaking without thinking. She knew as well as he did, that, when he went for his quarter's money the day after to-morrow, he must pay out of it Gordon's bill, fifty pounds, and half a year's rent, thirty pounds, and that scoundrel of a butcher the remainder of his account, which was twelve pounds; and then there were the expenses of moving—and they'd be a ten-pound note if they were a penny; and did she think he was going into a new house without a sixpence, or to leave himself to go about like a beggar, without a penny in his pocket? No, not for a whole regiment of flymen! Besides, it would be a good lesson to the fellow, and teach him to be more civil to gentlemen for the future.

When they were fairly in the new residence, Nicholls laid in a store of corn and hay, and sent his groom for the horse, with a letter, stating that the fly-man's bill should be attended to as soon as Mr. Nicholls could make it convenient. But when the groom returned, and told his master that the fly-man refused to part with the animal until his account was settled, Mr. Nicholls's rage knew no bounds; and Mrs. Nicholls declared that she had never heard of such shameful conduct in all her days; adding, that surely the man had no right to do it. To which her husband answered, that of course he hadn't; and that he would certainly commence an action against him the very next day, if it wasn't that the fellow was a positive pauper; and where was the good of going to law with a scoundrel that wasn't worth powder and shot? and, of course, that was the reason why he imposed upon gentlemen. But he'd be too many for the rogue now; for he'd take a policeman, and jump into a cab, and go up and formally demand the animal of the man—and, if he refused, why, he'd give the fellow in charge for felony on the spot, and then he should see how he liked that. Mrs. Nicholls, however, said that though it would serve the ungrateful man perfectly right, still, she did not think it would be quite prudent of Nicholls, under the circumstances, to do so; for the whole affair would be certain to get into the papers, and then there'd be a pretty exposure—letting the whole world know they couldn't pay a bill of thirty-seven pounds. So she thought the best plan, after all, would be to try and borrow some money somewhere, and pay the man, and have done with him.

When Mr. Nicholls got a little cooler, and came to turn the matter over in his mind, he agreed with his wife that it did appear to him to be the more advisable course to take, only he didn't exactly see whom he could go to and ask for the money.

After the governor's letter, it was clear there was no hope in that quarter. To be sure, he observed, he might be able to get a bill done, though he didn't like getting friends to lend their acceptances, and, in fact, he would much rather ask them for the money at once. And then, after knitting his brows and biting his lips for a time, he said to his wife, "By-the-by, Sara, don't you think your brother Reuben would be likely to lend it?"

"Why," answered Mrs. Nicholls, "I don't know; you see, you have always slighted him so, Wellesley, and it would look so odd going and asking favours of him after that. Besides, I haven't written to him for so long, that I shouldn't like to let him imagine that I only wrote when I wanted something."

"Pack o' nonsense," replied Wellesley; "why, isn't it easy enough for you to say that you've been prevented by illness from writing before; and that you have got a milliner's bill to pay that you've contracted unknown to me, and that I should make a dreadful noise about it if it came to my ears; and that, if he will only assist you this once, of course you'll promise him never to do the like again."

"Well, but," answered Mrs. Nicholls, "won't it seem strange, after all he said when he was last in town about our extravagance, to go telling him that I owe near upon forty pounds for dresses and things."

"Forty pounds, indeed," indignantly exclaimed Mr. Wellesley Nicholls. "You don't, I hope, for one moment imagine that I am going to let your brother Reuben know that we can't pay forty pounds? That would, if you like, be making him fancy that his words were coming true, and that we're going to the dogs with a vengeance. Besides, to be poor and seem poor is the very deuce, as the saying goes. No, my dear, the very least that we can ask him for with any credit to ourselves is a hundred pounds."

"What! a hundred pounds for ordinary?" cried Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls. "Oh! whatever will Reuben think of me, Wellesley dear?"

"Think?" replied Mr. Nicholls; "why, think it a very moderate sum for a person in your station in life; you forget who you are, my love. Besides, if you're frightened at all about that, you can spread it over two or three years, you know, and throw the children into the bargain."

At length the matter was settled? and as Mrs. Nicholls sat down to write the letter, her husband reminded her that she might as well ask her brother Reuben and his wife to come and stop a few days in town with them, as it would make it look all the more friendly, and there wasn't any chance of his accepting it. Besides, after an invitation like that, he didn't see how master Reuben could well get off lending the money, especially as he had always seemed so anxious to keep up the acquaintance.

When the letter had gone, Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls were all impatience for the answer, which they kept hoping each day's post would bring them, for, the worst of it was, Nicholls wanted the horse particularly to fetch his sister from the railway station in his own carriage.

CHAPTER V.

MRS. REUBEN MARSH, with her bare arms all white with flour, was busily employed preparing her one o'clock dinner, when Barnes, the postman, called, on his rounds, with the letter from Farnham, and left a scented note, bearing the London post-mark, for her husband. Having drunk off a glass of ale—which, together with the fee of one penny, was his usual perquisite for delivering all letters out of the town—the postman inquired after the state of the crops and the children, and took his departure; while Mrs. Marsh, carefully holding the letter between her pasty fingers, turned it over and over again, to see if she could tell from where it came; and then, sniffing the perfume that still hung about it, she wondered whether it could be from their Sally. It were very like her fine writing; but Reuben hadn't sent them any present lately, so it couldn't be from her, that were clear. To satisfy her curiosity, she shouted to one of the boys in the yard, and told him to go over to the barn, and tell his master that there were a letter for him from London, and that he must come over directly. Then off the boy ran, making the poultry fly cackling and gobbling away in all directions, as he dashed in among them, and scampered across the yard.

In a few minutes Reuben made his appearance, with his black hat all over dust (for they had been winnowing), while his grey shooting-jacket and brown leather gaiters were covered with husks.

"Why, Molly, it be a letter from our Sally," cried Reuben, as soon as he saw the handwriting. "What be in the wind now? The letter ain't in mourning, or I should have thought some on 'em in London had gone dead, it's such a rare thing for sister to write to body. Come, take my hat, Molly, and give us a mug of beer, for my throat is full of chucks, and I can read it to ye, girl, while ye be getting the dinner ready."

Then, sitting down, he opened the letter, and cried to his wife—"Why, Molly, they be gone away from St. Wood's-wood, and danged if they ben't living in Hyde Park! Well, I only hope it will last, girl; but it strikes me that they be like many others, and don't know which side their bread be buttered on. Depend upon it, Molly, their next move will be either to St. James's Palace or the Queen's Bench Prison. Five hundred a year be only five hundred a year, wife; and they hadn't more than they knew what to do with in t'other place. This living for show, Molly, be to my mind just like your Brummagem plated goods—uncommon grand for a time, but not at all likely to last; and the first hard rub they gets, why—off goes all the silver, and there be nothing but copper left for a body to put up with. Howsomever, let's go on with the letter. Well, come! Sally be a good-natured lass at heart, after all. She do say, she and Wellesley be main grieved they've been turning their backs upon us, and do want us to go and pass a week with 'em in London. It be very good on 'em, ben't it, Molly?"

"Ah! replied Molly," shaking her head, "I always told thee she were a good lass; and thee should read, husband, before thee condemn'st."

"Whew!" whistled Reuben, scratching his head; "listen here, Molly. What do you think? why, danged if that extravagant young hussey of a sister of mine aint been and run up a bill of one hundred pounds—do you hear that, girl? One hundred pounds, and all for dresses, and ribbons, and fine things; and unbeknown to her husband, too, as I'm her brother! And now the audacious bit of goods be afeard on its coming to Nicholls's ears, and do want me to lend her the money! Did thee ever hear the likes of it?"

"One hundred pounds!" exclaimed Mrs. Marsh. "Ah, well, I ben't astonished! I ben't astonished! for, when she were down here she were uncommon fond of fine things, and many a time I've told her it 'ud bring trouble on her; and you see I weren't far out, was I, good man? But she were such a comely lass, and had such a purty face of her own, that it were, as a body u'd say, quite natural to her. But a hundred pounds for fine things, Reuben! Bless us and save us, one hundred pounds! Why, what will the poor thing come to?"

"Want, I be afeard, Molly," returned Reuben. "Want for them, and bad times for us; for it be as much as a hard-working man can do to keep his own family clean and decent now-a-days, let alone other people's; but that's what we shall have to do before long, Molly, take my bare word for it. It 'ud be a wrong thing, I know, to go paying that hundred pounds for Miss Sally; and yet, dang it, it 'ud never do, girl, to see Nicholls ruined by one's own sister. You see, if I do pay it, why the foolish, conceited thing will only go doing the likes again to-morrow; and yet if I don't, why, I suppose there'll be the bailies in the place, and all along of Sally. Come, give us a word, wife; what say ye, eh?"

SUPPLEMENT GRATIS.)

"Why, I tell thes what, Reuben," answered his wife. "Can't thes allow the bailies to come in, so as to let them have a taste of trouble first, and then give the hundred pounds and pay them out. It'll be a lesson to them, like."

"Yes, wife," rejoined Reuben, "it 'ud be a lesson to 'em, surely; but the bailies, Molly, do charge so plaguy dear for their schooling, that I shouldn't wonder now if that little bit of larning were to stand them in near upon another hundred pounds at least; so I'll tell thes what I'll do, Molly. I'll pay the money for her without any fuss this once; for, you see, we've got before the world a little bit now, and Sally's been off our hands some time, and never had anything to talk of from us; besides, to speak the plain truth, I like the girl's principle about wishing to pay it back; and maybe the poor lass is main sorry for what she's been a-doing; though, to be sure, I should have been twice as well pleased if she hadn't gone asking us to pass a week with her at her fine place in London. You see, Molly, it doesn't look straightforward like; and what a plaguy fool of a brother she must think she ha' got to fancy we shouldn't see through that there—eh, wife?"

"Yes," answered Molly; "and the stupid thing ought to have remembered, that it be the first time she ha' ever done as much to'ards us. Still, never fash thyself about that Reuben, but pay the money; and what be more, pay it thyself, for it be clear Sally don't know the value on it, and ben't in a fit state to be trusted with it, and would only go spending it on other things maybe."

"Well said our side, Molly!" returned Reuben; "leave thes alone for keeping all thy eyes about thes. So I'll do as thes sayest, girl, and write to foolish Sally for the name of the body who she do owe the hundred pounds to, and larn where she do live; and then I'll go up to London and pay it myself, and make sister happy in her mind again."

So saying, he told Molly to put the dinner back a bit, and sat down and wrote his letter to Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls. When he had done so, he read it to his wife, and, calling one of the boys, told him to put a saddle on Jack, and make haste over to Farnham with it as quickly as he could.

The next day, when Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls came down to breakfast, Reuben's letter lay upon the table. Nicholls, before handing it to his wife to open, bent it backwards and forwards to see if he could detect any enclosure, and gave it to her, saying that he was afraid there was neither cheque nor note in it.

"One hundred pounds! and all for dresses!"

When Mrs. Nicholls read the first part of the letter, in which Reuben, after scolding her, said that he would pay the money for her this once, Nicholls said, he had always thought her brother a fine fellow at heart, and he was glad to find that he was not mistaken. On hearing, however, that Reuben would only do so on condition of his being allowed to discharge the alleged bill himself, Nicholls called him a suspicious lout, and said it was clear the fellow didn't believe that Sara owed the money, and that he had half a mind to wring the clodhopper's nose for doubting his wife's word, adding, that he should like to catch himself giving Mr. Reuben Marsh the chance of doing them a good turn again.

"Yes, I told you how it would be," answered Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls; "and that it would look so bad, saying that I wanted it to pay a bill for millinery."

"Psha!" replied Mr. Nicholls. "I've told you over and over again it would never have done for me to have asked for the money after the way in which we slighted the man. No, my dear. The fact is, that, though he is your brother, he's a mean fellow, and of course, from the manner in which he has been brought up, cannot understand the feelings of a gentleman. But I will soon let him see that he's not the only friend we've got in the world. I'll go to Lively Harry this very day, and get him to lend me his acceptance, for it's impossible to do without the horse, and that rogue of a fly-man doesn't seem at all inclined to give him up without his money; so you can just scribble a letter to your brother while I go and ferret out Harry. And mind, now, don't you go fawning to Mr. Reuben Marsh, but speak out like a woman, and give him to understand that you think he has acted in the business anything but like a brother; and tell him that, under your present feelings, the less you see of one another for the future, the better."

Mr. Nicholls found Lively Harry quite a different sort of person from Reuben Marsh; indeed, as Wellesley afterwards told his wife, he behaved throughout the whole transaction like a perfect gentleman; for he told him he was a man of the world and understood those things, and was always very ready to oblige a friend in so trifling a matter as his acceptance; indeed, for his own part, Lively Harry said he didn't see the use of limiting the commerce of the country to the amount of bullion in the kingdom, and had always been a man who had advocated the use of paper. But, though Mr. Nicholls soon became a convert to Lively Harry's lucid arguments on the currency, still he was disgusted to find that the men in the City were so far from being in the same way of thinking; for it took him nearly half the day before he could discover any gentleman who was sufficiently enterprising to look upon the small piece of paper to which Lively Harry had affixed his name, and made payable at his fellow-townsman's, in Lombard-street, in the light of money.

At last, however, his wine-merchant gave him a letter to a gentleman of the legal profession and Jewish persuasion, who obliged him by converting the bill into as much gold as he said he could afford to give; whereupon Mr. Nicholls jumped into a cab, dashed up to the fly-man, paid his bill with all the dignity of a millionaire, and ordered the fellow to give the mare to his groom when he called. On reaching home again, he threw himself on the sofa, and told his wife he felt quite a new man; for, thank Heaven! that was settled.

However, Mr. Nicholls was no sooner out of one difficulty than he found himself in another; for, in two or three days' time, his wife informed him that the man who had supplied the carpets had sent a letter requesting the amount of his bill, as the goods had been sold for ready money. But Wellesley only answered that the carpet-man must wait until he had let his old house; and that with the premium he expected to get there he would pay him, for he had directed the housegarnet to ask £200 premium for it, which, he was sure, was little enough, as he had laid out nearly double the sum in that place. So that, though the man was very assiduous in his calls, still, no matter at what time he came, he invariably found that Mr. Nicholls was "out." Until, at length, worn out of patience by his fruitless visits, the carpet-man sent a gentleman, who, not being known to the servants, obtained an interview with Mr. Nicholls, and took the liberty of presenting him with the copy of a writ.

Nicholls knew enough of his profession not to be frightened by such things as the first steps to a lawsuit, although, as he told his wife, he was annoyed at the man's confounded impudence; but, as the fellow had chosen to go to law, why he might make the most of it; and he'd take precious good care to keep him out of his money as long as he could. To be sure, it would be a trifling extra expense to him, but it would be worth that to punish the vagabond, and especially at the present moment, when Mr. Nicholls himself only wanted a little time to get round—so that he didn't mind what he paid for it. Sara was as well aware as he was that there would be the first quarter's rent, and one of the bills he had given for the fixtures, and Lively Harry's acceptance, together with the rent of the other house, all coming due in about six weeks' time, and he had calculated that they would just about swallow up his next quarter's money. Consequently, it wasn't likely that he was going to pay a rascally carpet-dealer, and leave a man who had behaved thoroughly like a gentleman as his landlord had, unsatisfied. Besides, whatever he did, the first quarter's rent and the bill for the fixtures must be paid; and Lively Harry's acceptance was a matter of honour, that he could not put off—though the rent of the house in St. John's-wood he didn't care so much about, and he would let that stand over a bit. So perhaps, after all, it was much better for him that the carpet-man had done as he had; for now, thank Heaven! he shouldn't have that man coming and knocking at his door every day. However, he begged his wife on no account to let his sister know anything about the writ.

For about a fortnight Mr. Nicholls enjoyed perfect family bliss—driving in the Park every afternoon with his wife and sister; seeing sights in the morning, and visiting the Opera or the theatre at night. And then, feeling himself called upon to give what he styled "a house-warming" in his new residence, he issued cards of invitation for a grand party, which he arranged to come off a few days after he should have received the next instalment of his allowance.

When, however, Sir Giles's remittance came to hand, Nicholls found that by the time he had paid the landlord's rent, and the first of the bills for fixtures, and given ready money for several trifling articles which were required for his evening party, and which he could not obtain upon credit, the remainder of his quarterly allowance was only sufficient to enable him to carry on the housekeeping for the next three months; and he was in sad tribulation on account of Lively Harry's acceptance. But he would go and see the holder of it, and get him to renew the bill, which he had no doubt he would do for a five-pound note or two; though, upon second thoughts, it struck him that, instead of asking favours of a money-lender, it would be more advisable to get Lively Harry to lend his name to another and larger bill, and so take up the one falling due in three or four days, and stop the carpet-man's action, which he now began to feel rather uneasy about. Besides, he agreed with himself that it would look much better to take up the first bill that he had discounted with the gentleman in the City; and that, by doing so, he would so establish his credit with him—that of course the man wouldn't object to do another for double or treble the amount, at any future time that he might be in want of such a thing.

But Nicholls, unfortunately, was reckoning without his host, and when he went to seek for his friend, he found him not quite so easy to be met with. He haunted Lively Harry at his club, and at all his different haunts, but in each place the gentleman had not been seen or heard of for more than a week; and Mr. Nicholls being as ignorant as every one else as to the exact locality of his friend's domicile, he returned home that evening before the bill became due, miserable, tired, worried, and surly, for he knew not how to manage.

At dinner he scarcely spoke to his wife. When she tried to divert his thoughts by any trivial conversation, he gave short, snappish answers; and it was only the presence of his sister and the servants that prevented him from transgressing the forms of politeness.

As he sat alone sipping his wine, after his wife and sister had retired to the drawing-room, he kept twisting over and over in his mind the different means by which he thought he might save himself from the dishonour of letting his friend's bills go back unpaid on the morrow. At last he rang the bell, and told the page to tell Mrs. Nicholls that he wished to speak with her.

When his wife made her appearance, he began by apologising to her for any little rudeness he might have been guilty of towards her at dinner-time, saying that he was worried out of his life about that confounded acceptance of Lively Harry's, and that he was a ruined man if it was dishonoured. She knew what a chatterer the man was, and that he would be sure to go gossipping about it wherever he went; and then they would find that, after all the privations they had undergone to get to their present standing in society, they would be avoided and cut by everybody. He only saw, he said, one way of getting out of it at all, and asked his wife whether she would assist him in it. Whereupon Mrs. Nicholls said she would help in any way that lay in her power; but what could she do?

"Why, my dear," answered Mr. Nicholls, "you see, if I could only manage to take up this bill, the same party, you know, would, of course, be too glad to do another for me to any amount; and then, with that I could pay off the carpet man, and we should be all straight again; for the premium we shall get for the other house will just come in handy to take up the next bill. So that you see, Sara, we shall be certain to be all right for the future, if we can only get over this confounded temporary difficulty."

Mrs. Nicholls agreed with him perfectly, and said, she thought she knew what he meant; adding, that she should never like to write to Reuben for money again.

"Oh no! of course not, my dear," returned her husband; "nor should I wish you to stoop so low as that. What I mean is this, Sara—you see there is one thing that I think you can present me with use to you just now. You can have no occasion for them for a week or so."

"My dear Wellesley!" cried Mrs. Nicholls; "you forget our evening party takes place in three days' time, and I must wear them then."

"Tut! tut! tut!" responded Mr. Nicholls. "How foolish you do talk, Sara. I really thought that by this time I had made you understand the usages of polite society better. Don't you know that it's considered etiquette for the lady of the house, when she has a party, to let her dress be as simple and quiet as she can, so that her guests may have an opportunity of displaying their attractions? I'm sure your 'aquamarines' are as neat and chaste and ladylike as anything you could put on, or I should never have dreamt of making the proposal."

"As you may be," replied Mrs. Nicholls; "but, after the diamonds, I'm sure I shouldn't be able to bear the look of myself in the other things; and, if it comes to that, why I'd sooner not wear any."

"Well, my dear," answered her husband, "you can suit yourself about it. All I know is, I must have your diamonds for a few days—unless, indeed, you prefer both of us being ruined, and that while my very sister is under my roof. So it's no use your pouting, Sara; but go up-stairs, like a good girl, and get them for me directly; for I can easily raise money enough upon them to get out of this fix, and let you have them back again as soon as I can lay hold of Lively Harry."

After a little further persuasion, Mr. Nicholls got the diamonds, and, shortly afterwards, the money, and in the morning he took up Lively Harry's acceptance; so that on the night of his party no one would have thought, from the happiness of his face, and the splendour and profusion of the entertainment, that he had ever been distressed for the want of a few pounds. Mrs. Nicholls looked splendid, even in her "aquamarines," and Wellesley's sister was an universal favourite. The rooms were crowded to suffocation, and the presence of Lady Verulam gave a stamp to the "réunion," which Nicholls said he had been battling for all his life. In fact, ever since the opera-box, Mrs. Nicholls had been so assiduous in her attentions, both to her Ladyship and her "charming girls," that the acquaintance had rapidly ripened into a fashionable friendship; indeed, so much so, that Mrs. Nicholls, when the guests had left, and she was alone with her husband in the drawing-room, told Wellesley that while she was talking with Lady Verulam, her Ladyship had asked her whether she had received an invitation to her Georgiani's approaching wedding; and that when she assured her Ladyship that she had not, her Ladyship said it was very strange, for the cards had been sent, she should say, quite three weeks ago, as her dear girls had set their hearts upon her coming, and would never forgive her if she didn't; and that her Ladyship had made her promise to be sure and be there; and that the wedding was to take place in eight days, at St. George's, Hanover-square. Whereupon, Mr. Nicholls, in the pride of his heart, told his wife that she had only got to thank him for his having taken the opera-box. But Mrs. Nicholls begged to ask who it was that had first advised him to have a carriage of his own; adding, that she should like to know if they would ever have been invited to the marriage if they had still been going about in that filthy fly of theirs. So dividing the honours, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls went to bed quite happy.

All the next day, Wellesley and his wife did nothing but talk about their good fortune in getting asked to so fashionable a wedding. O course, he said, the whole account of the proceedings, and a list of the guests present, would be given in the papers; and they would be published to the world as moving in a circle that it had been the ambition of his life to reach. Sara must get a splendid new dress for the occasion; and he'd hunt up Lively Harry, and get a fresh bill from him, by which he could get her diamonds back again, and he had no doubt she would create quite a sensation there.

But, unluckily for Mr. Nicholls's projects, and to Mrs. Nicholls's extreme annoyance, Lively Harry was still nowhere to be found; whereupon, Sara didn't hesitate to declare that it would be impossible for her to think of appearing at so grand an assembly without her brilliants. However, her husband made her mind easy by bringing her home on the evening before the marriage a much more splendid suite of diamonds than her own, which, "like a good soul," he had hired for the occasion.

When they were ready dressed on the morrow, and Nicholls had sent for the carriage, he was astonished at the time the groom took in bringing it round; and, after a little while, grew so impatient that he went into the stables by the back way. On entering them, he found that his brougham and horse had been seized in execution for the debt of "that scoundrelly carpet-dealer," who, in person, had accompanied the bailiff, and refused to let it go out of the place unless Mr. Nicholls came down to pay down the debt and costs.

Mr. Nicholls inwardly thanked his stars that, even in this trying dilemma, he knew how to behave himself like a gentleman. So, refusing to bandy words with the tradesman, he turned his back upon the fellow, and, stamming the door in his face, returned to his wife, to break to her the terrible news.

It had so startling an effect on Mrs. Nicholls, that no sooner had she heard what had happened, than she fell into hysterics, and sobbed and laughed so loudly, that, much to Mr. Nicholls's annoyance, his wife's cries brought his sister and the servants to her aid; and he saw that there was little chance of the seizure being kept a secret.

When they had let the beastined and bejewelled Mrs. Nicholls up to her room, Wellesley pulled off his white kid gloves, and wrote a letter to Lady Verulam, in which he told her that, owing to the sudden and dangerous illness of one of his dear children, he regretted that their duties as parents would prevent Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls being present at the Honourable Miss Georgiana Verulam's wedding that morning. And then, despatching the note by the groom, he turned round in his chair, and, fixing his eyes on the ceiling, busied himself with thinking how on earth he could prevent his carriage being "sold by order of the sheriff."

CHAPTER VI.

LIVELY HARRY was still not to be heard of at his club, and at last after wasting two days, Mr. Nicholls was informed by his friend Fred Gordon, that he had gone into the north, grouse shooting though he did not know exactly where, so there was no hope of recall in that quarter.

Both Wellesley and his wife puzzled their brains to discover some plan which was to save them and their carriage; and Nicholls, at her suggestion, tried to borrow the money from one or two of their fashionable friends, stating that he had unexpectedly been called upon to pay a large sum, for which, "in a moment of foolish generosity," he had made himself responsible for a friend; and that he would esteem it a great favour if they could let him have fifty pounds for a few weeks, to make up the amount, until he could receive an answer from his father, Sir Giles. But one was about making a trip on the Continent, and had obtained letters of credit abroad for all the money he had at his banker's; and another had paid a heavy bill the very day before; and a third had all his money locked up in speculation. but they were all extremely sorry, and begged to be allowed to sympathise with Mr. Nicholls in his misfortune.

When it came to the day before the sale, Mr. Nicholls grew so desperate that he agreed with his wife that anything would be preferable to having their brougham taken from them. He had no time to raise any money on his furniture; and somehow or other everybody seemed to turn their backs upon him—even the very people who had been feasting and dancing in his house a week or two ago. It would never do to let the carriage be sold. It would be all over the neighbourhood in a few days' time, and then he was a ruined man. Of course, it would tell every one as plainly as it could speak, that he couldn't afford to keep it, and stamp him as a beggar to the whole world. After all it had done for them, too! Was it likely that Lady Verulam would have asked them to her daughter's wedding, if they hadn't been "carriage people?" And, as he paced up and down the room, his wife asked him if he didn't think Lady Verulam would assist them? Her Ladyship had always been very kind to her, she said, and had made a good deal of her, and she didn't mind writing to her; for, looking at it again, she really thought her Ladyship would lend them the money. They could make the same excuse as before, and there could be no harm in trying.

Nicholls said, yes, but there would be harm; and if her Ladyship were to refuse, he would never forgive himself—for there would be an end, of course, to one of their best acquaintances. And yet, he felt, he oughtn't to leave a stone unturned so long as there was a chance left; though he would be d—d if he'd ask a favour of the kind. Though, to be sure, it wouldn't look so very bad, after all; for Sara could say that he had a particular payment of five hundred pounds to make the next day, and she could score under "particular," to make it seem as if it were a debt of honour, and that he had only got £450 at his banker's. And as gentlemen had been such, that, ah—that she—ah—he forgot, a holiday at the Bank of England on the morrow; for, of course, Lady Verulam would never know whether it was a holiday or not. On which his wife observed, that, under those circumstances, she thought the story would appear more true if he wrote the letter himself. And Wellesley, on second thoughts, being of the same opinion, sat down; and, having written as much to her Ladyship, despatched it by the groom, directing him to wait for an answer.

When Nicholls read her Ladyship's reply, he crumpled it up savagely in his hand, and flung it, with an oath, in the fire, saying that the carriage might go, and the house and furniture as well, as he supposed it would soon; adding (like most gentlemen who get into difficulties of their own making), that there seemed to be a fate hanging over him, and that it was useless to attempt to stand up against it.

As soon as Mr. Nicholls had cooled down a little, his wife—who, of late, had grown somewhat afraid of speaking to her husband when he was in one of those fits of passion which every day now became more frequent—gained courage sufficient to ask him what were the contents of her Ladyship's note. Wellesley told her it was a mere put-off—a trumpery excuse, saying that the expense of her daughter's wedding and marriage settlements had been such, that, ah—that she—ah—he forgot, the exact words—but the long and short of it was, she either couldn't or, more likely, wouldn't do it. But, he continued, he wouldn't have cared so much about that. What annoyed him the most was, she said she was so short of money for the moment, that, at the very time my letter arrived, she was about writing to me for the £90 for the opera box. However, he added, the mean old rouged-up thing can't have it yet awhile, so she must wait; saying her Ladyship might take it just as she liked, and it didn't matter to him two straws how. All he wished to heaven was, that he had never seen the opera-box or Lady Verulam, or carriage, or horse, or furniture, or anything at all, and the sooner he was clear of them all the better. On Mrs. Nicholls trying to soothe him, by assuring him that everything would turn out for the best, he only grew more wild, and upbraided her as the cause of all his distress; so that they passed the remainder of the evening, she in tears and he in surly silence.

The carriage was sold in due course, and Nicholls, to brave it out, hired a fly and horse as much like his own as possible, and made a point of going into the Park for several days afterwards. For, in the importance which he attached to himself, he made certain that everybody in town must have heard of the seizure, and he wished to show them that the report was nothing more than a malicious slander.

In one of his afternoon drives he passed Lady Verulam's carriage, and was wounded to the very quick of his pride on seeing her Ladyship turn her head in an opposite direction.

Mr. Nicholls's tradesmen, however, taking a greater interest in him than the rest of the world, soon became acquainted with the circumstance of the seizure and sale; and, growing alarmed about the safety of their money, kept obliging him one after another with copies of their accounts, and requesting immediate payment, as they had all—strange to say—heavy bills to meet in a few days' time; so that Mr. Nicholls, finding his credit stopped in the neighbourhood, was not sorry when a letter arrived informing him that Sir Giles had suddenly been seized with illness, and requesting Miss Nicholls to return home as soon as possible.

Luckily for Mr. Nicholls, the return of Lively Harry to town enabled him to get another bill cashed, and so provided him with the means of paying ready money for such household articles as he had previously been in the habit of procuring on credit; while, by the aid of dexterous excuses and faithful promises of speedy payment, he managed to prevent his tradesmen from resorting to quicker and harsher means of obtaining their money.

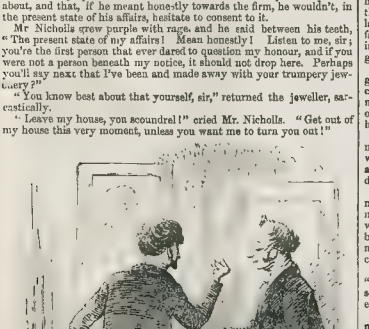
Mr. Nicholls now began to hope that he should be able to weather out the storm until his next quarter came round, or at least until he could find a tenant for his old house, and so get the £200 premium, which would put him all right with the world again. But, unfortunately, his golden dreams were all dissipated by a visit from the jeweller. The firm had twice sent in his account, and called two or three times for their money; but Mr. Nicholls not considering the claim a very pressing one, had never troubled him-elf about attending to it. He had expected, at the least, one, if indeed he were not entitled to two years' credit; and he couldn't for the life of him understand what they meant by dunning him in that way.

When Mr. Nicholls saw the jeweller, he didn't hesitate to tell the man as much; on which the jeweller said that he had to apologise for troubling him so soon, but the firm had a large payment to make towards the end of the week, and they thought they might venture to ask Mr. Nicholls, as a favour, to let them have fifty pounds on account. Whereupon Mr. Nicholls replied very abruptly that he certainly should not think of doing anything of the kind, and that he had his payments to make, and that he should take the same credit as his father always had. On this the jeweller expostulated, saying that really the diamonds had been sold such a bargain that the firm had always looked upon it as a ready money transaction, and had expected to receive the amount of their bill long before this; which threw Mr. Nicholls into a great passion; and he said that he could not understand what the firm meant, for he had told their young man at the time, and as plainly as he could speak, that they would have to wait for their money; the young man had said that they had no fear about that, even if it were ten times the amount. To which the jeweller hesitatingly replied, that they certainly had no fear then. Whereupon, Mr. Wellesley Nicholls threw down the morning paper, and, rising up in his chair, inquired of the jeweller what he meant by his having no fear then. Did he mean to infer that he had any fear now? This made the jeweller stammer as he told Mr. Nicholls that he didn't exactly wish to be understood in that light; but that all gentlemen, the firm were well aware, were subject to misfortunes; and that they had been deeply grieved to hear of the seizure of Mr. Nicholls's carriage for a trifling amount; and they thought that, as they had had dealings with his respected father so long, Mr. Nicholls wouldn't allow them to suffer; and that, though they were perfectly satisfied with his honour, still, under the circumstances, from what had come to their ears, they were afraid that all—that is—it was an extremely unpleasant business to speak about, and he trusted Mr. Nicholls would make every allowance. But, to be plain, the firm had come to the conclusion that they would be happy to forego their account if Mr. Nicholls would let them have the diamonds back, and that then they would not think of charging him anything for the use of them. Mr. Nicholls bit his lips and trembled with passion and fear as he heard the man stammer out the proposal which he knew it was out of his power to comply with; and, drawing up himself haughtily, he looked sternly at the jeweller, and demanded how he dare come into his house and make such a proposal to the son of one of their oldest customers. But they should repent the day as long as they lived. And then, observing the man about to reply, he commanded him not to say another syllable, but to leave the house directly. Whereupon, the jeweller mutteringly observed that he didn't see that the proposal was one that Mr. Nicholls need fly into a passion about, and that, if he meant honestly towards the firm, he wouldn't, in the present state of his affairs, hesitate to consent to it.

Mr Nicholls grew purple with rage, and he said between his teeth, "The present state of my affairs! Mean honestly! Listen to me, sir; you're the first person that ever dared to question my honour, and if you were not a person beneath my notice, it should not drop here. Perhaps you'll say next that I've been and made away with your trumpery jewellery?"

"You know best about that yourself, sir," returned the jeweller, sarcastically.

"Leave my house, you scoundrel!" cried Mr. Nicholls. "Get out of my house this very moment, unless you want me to turn you out!"



He commanded him not to say another syllable; but to leave the house directly.

"Oh, you needn't put yourself to that trouble, sir," said the jeweller, doggedly, "I'll send somebody else to you, to whom, perhaps, you will learn to be at least civil. And, what's more, I'll soon find out whether the jewels are in your possession or not—for I'll go round to all the pawnbrokers in the neighbourhood; and, if I find out that you've been making away with our property, I'll publish the whole transaction to the world, and ruin you at once." And then, slamming the street door after him, he left the house rapidly.

For a few minutes Mr. Nicholls sat in his chair motionless, doubting whether the jeweller would put his threat into execution, and dreading the death-blow that he felt it would be to his reputation if he did. And he cursed himself and his own thoughtlessness. But there was no time for remorse. He must stir himself, and try to prevent the discovery. He had between twenty and thirty pounds in the house, and, what with his own and his wife's watch, and her trinkets, he could scrape together a sum large enough to get the diamonds back again before the fellow found out where they were pledged, and then he'd go to the jeweller's shop and fling them at his head, and give him to understand that he was a different man from what he seemed to take him for.

Hastily collecting the several articles together, Mr. Nicholls rushed out of the house, and made his way as fast as he could to the shop where the brilliants were in pledge, having, on the road, pulled his hat over his eyes and turned up his coat collar, so as to avoid recognition. When he reached the shop, having looked cautiously round to see that no one who knew him was near, he darted in, and, to his horror, discovered the jeweller himself in close conference with the man behind the counter. The noise of the door swinging to made the jeweller turn round, and, when he saw Mr. Nicholls, he burst into a contemptuous laugh, and looked at him from head to foot, with a sneer on his lips.

"So, I wasn't far out, my fine gentleman, after all, eh?" began the jeweller, "though I am the first person that ever dared to question your honour. But I'll take good care that I won't be the last; for if I don't make the whole neighbourhood ring with your roguery, why I'll forgive you the debt. You turn me out of your house, will you? I can tell you what it is, Mr. Wellesley Nicholls; it shan't be long before I turn you out of it."

"He took the two little boys, put one on each knee, and kept telling them that he knew they were the boys for pudding."

Mr. Nicholls, without waiting to hear any further, turned on his heel, and made for the street; but the enraged jeweller, determined not to leave him, followed quickly after, abusing him as he went, and calling him "Swindler!" "Rogue!" "Impostor!" "Scoundrel!" and declaring that he would publish the whole transaction to the world in a court of law, and that he was glad to lose the jewels, if it was only for the satisfaction of exposing him. So that Mr. Nicholls, finding a crowd collecting at his heels, was glad to jump into the first cab he met, in order to get rid of his troublesome companion.

On reaching home, rushing up into his wife's room, he told her to get everything as quickly as she could, for he must get out of the confounded house and into the country somewhere, or he was a ruined man. When his wife inquired the reason, he told her to mind her own business, and to do her duty and get the things ready, as he had directed.

"But what have I done, Wellesley, that you should fly out at me so?" returned Mrs. Nicholls, half frightened at her husband's wild appearance. "I declare, you are quite an altered man of late, and one can't open one's mouth without your getting into a passion directly."

"No, I've not altered, Sara; it's my circumstances that have altered, not me," answered Nicholls, throwing himself on the sofa, and dashing his long hair from his forehead. "But you don't know how I'm worried, and hunted, and maddened by a pack of hounds of creditors barking and yelping at my heels. Turn which way I will, there are nothing but Bills! bills! bills!' Oh God! oh God! what will become of us all?"

"Come, Wellesley dear," expostulated Mrs. Nicholls, kissing him; "Come," don't give way in this manner. Let me go and fetch you some wine—it will revive you. Why, whatever can have happened—eh, dear?"

"Oh! nothing, nothing!" replied Nicholls. "There, don't speak to me about it, unless you want to drive me wild. Let's talk about something else; and ring the bell for a glass of water for me, for I'm ready to drop."

"Well, then," replied Mrs. Nicholls, turning the conversation with an assumed cheerfulness, "where do you think of going to in the country—eh, Wellesley dear?"

"Oh! anywhere—anywhere!" answered Mr. Nicholls, "so long as it's out of the way, and those dogs of creditors won't be able to track me. We've got no money to go fooling away at Brighton, or Hastings, or on the Continent—though that would be the safest place, after all. So we must find out some little poking country place, where we can hide in security until the storm has blown over."

"Well, then," returned Mrs. Nicholls, "I tell you what, Wellesley, we had much better go down to Reuben; for, you know, he's always bothering us about our never going down to see him; and we could take the children and stop a month there well, without any expense. Besides, he'd take it quite as an honour your visiting him, and would be so pleased to see us."

"Yes," answered Nicholls, with a sigh, "that would have been the very place for us, certainly! But, hang it! there's that letter you sent him; it would never do to go fawning and cringing to a man whom we insulted only a week or two ago."

However, to his great delight, his wife told him that she had thought it best, after Reuben's offer—which, to say the least, had been kindly meant—to write a grateful letter to him, instead of the one Wellesley had wished her to send; alleging, by way of an excuse, that her husband found out all about the debt, and had paid the bill for her. Whereupon, Mr. Nicholls kissed his wife, and said she was a dear, good girl, and had quite put him in good spirits again; and told her to write to her brother that very evening, to know whether it would be convenient for him to receive them; and, if so, to say that they would be with him on Sunday next. For Wellesley informed his wife that, as matters stood at present, it wouldn't be prudent for him to put himself in the way of being served with a writ by venturing outside the house on a week day.

Directly Mrs. Nicholls had written and sent the letter, she (at her husband's suggestion) set to work and covered up the blinds with old newspapers, and closed the shutters in front of the house, so that it might appear as if the family were out of town, which he directed the servants to say to everybody that called.

To avoid being seen, they lived in the back drawingroom, trembling at every knock that came to the door, and passing the time in continual bickerings, for with his growing distresses Mr. Nicholls had become too distracted to be civil.

However, Reuben's answer was so full of kindness and hearty friendship, that the prospect of their speedy deliverance from their troubles made them both brighten up a little, and five amicably until the Sunday arrived. Then they were up before it was light, and out long before any one was stirring, on their way to Nine Elms, so as to catch the first train to Farnham.

But though their spirits rose as they left London—the scene of their troubles—behind them, still they both inwardly felt considerable uneasiness at the idea of meeting a brother whom they had almost spurned, and they pondered over what excuses they could make on seeing him.

CHAPTER VII.

THE homestead of Reuben Marsh was situated a few miles on the other side of Farnham; so that when Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls arrived at the nearest railway station, they had still some distance to go, and therefore resolved to take breakfast at the Railway Hotel, and then have a post-chaise—as it would never do to let Reuben fancy that their circumstances were in any way altered, or that their difficulties were the cause of their coming to visit him.

It was twelve o'clock before they reached the gate of the farm, when they found that the whole family had gone to church, and there was only the maid to receive them—who had quite as much as she could do to keep the dogs quiet, for they would come yelping and sniffing round them, as if they were strangers.

Mrs. Nicholls was almost delighted at the absence of Reuben and his wife; for she half dreaded to meet her brother, and was glad to have the welcomes deferred for a short time; although Wellesley looked upon the family's being out in rather a different light: for he said if he had known that there would have been nobody at home to receive them, he should never have gone putting himself to the expense of a post-chaise.

Sara felt a melancholy pleasure on returning to the place where she had passed her simple, unpretending girlhood; and, as she looked around, every object had connected with it some pleasant—and yet, she could not help feeling, some humiliating—associations. At the sight of every familiar object, there was a battle in her breast between her pride and her affection. It was pleasant to have each little incident of her happy youth brought back so vividly to her mind; and yet it was almost painful—for she dreaded that it might some day come to the ears of her fashionable friends that the elegant Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls had been born and bred in such a place.

There were the bright tins and coppers, as usual, arranged over the mantelpiece, polished like mirrors; and they gave her a slight thrill as she thought that her hands had once cleaned and brightened them up every Saturday morning for ten years at least; but she couldn't help wondering who did it now. The tiles of the floor, too, were as red as ever; and so were the old geranium pots—what a time they had had those geraniums! She declared that there was the nettle—one that young James Walker, of the "Poplar," had given her on her seventeenth birthday. And then, if there were not as many as seven hams hanging up! Why, they never killed more than two pigs a year when she was with them; and she wondered who helped Molly to cure the hams now, and how the last they had done together had turned out and how red it used to make her hands look. Over the mantelpiece, too, there was still poor father's sword that he had worn when he was a volunteer; but her eye quickly turned from this, for she remembered what Reuben had told her of his strugglings to pay the old man's debts, and how she had never helped him even with a sixpence; so she went towards the window, with its red curtains, and began examining some of the cards and bills that were stuck in the little lozenge-shaped panes. So Reuben still had his malt from Edwards, of Farnham; and she wondered whether his son was married yet; and what an annoyance it would be if she were to meet them there—she must be friendly to them, and then Wellesley would think she was lowering herself. And then she wandered back to the chimney-piece, and found the little black velvet sweep that she remembered cutting out, now near thirteen years ago; and there were the little straw ornaments, tied up with blue ribbons that she had made to hold Reuben's pipe-lights; but she was a new country girl then, and had no notion of taste: and she was roused from her reverie by old "Wolf," the sheep-dog, standing watching her, as if he knew her: he was quite a pup when Mr. M'Neil, the cattle dealer, gave it to them; and how ugly he had grown, and how dirty he looked; how could she ever have noticed such a thing as that? Then she went into the farm-yard to look for her husband, whom she found in the stables with one of the men, looking at Reuben's nag, Jack, which he said was a capital, serviceable beast enough, no doubt, and he dare say a good trotter; though he added, with a laugh, that it wouldn't make much of a figure in Hyde Park.

When Reuben came back he was main glad, as he said, to see the pair on 'em, and he half crushed his sister's bonnet kissing her, and shook Nicholls so violently by the hand that his fingers were numbed by the grip; nor would he hear a word of the excuses they had arranged, and were stammering out, telling them that now they had come it was all past and done with, and to let bygones be bygones; and told them that now he had got them there, he would keep them; and Molly said that Reuben might do what he liked with Nicholls, but she would have Sally all to herself, and that she would warrant she'd bring the colour back to her pretty cheeks again, for she had got plenty for both her and the blessed little bairns to do. And then they both wanted to see the children; and on hearing from Mrs. Nicholls that they were up-stairs with the maid to have their hair done, Reuben said, "Stuff and nonsense!" and sent Molly up-stairs to bring them down, just as they were, to see their old uncle Ren. And when they came, he took the two little boys, and put one on each knee, and kept telling them, much to Nicholls's horror, who smiled all the while, that he knew they were the boys for pudding; and whether they liked apple-pie and custards, for they were going to have some for dinner that day; and whether they would go milking the cows on the morrow morning, and have some nice hot milk; and whether they had ever made any hay, for he wanted some labourers, and he would give them a halfpenny a day and their beer; or whether they would ride the pony—but he knew they would like the hay best. The boys, however, blushed, and said they should like the pony best; but Reuben would have it that they preferred the haymaking, and that he would make their purty little laughing faces as brown as berries before he had done with them; and then he told Nicholls and Sally that he had made up his mind to get all the neighbours over to meet them, and have a country dance or two, for he knew that Sally would be glad to see all her old friends and sweethearts again; which in no way pleased either Sally or her husband, though they both smiled, and said it was very good of him, they were sure.

While the cloth was being laid for dinner, Molly asked Nicholls if he drank ale; because, if not, she had got some excellent currant and cowslip wine, whichever he liked; but Nicholls said that there was nothing he liked so much as good country ale, which put Reuben in such spirits that he told him that he would give him a glass that he couldn't get for miles round; and how long it had been brewed; and how much malt and hops he generally put in; and that he needn't be afraid of it, for there wasn't a headache in a hogshead of such as that.

After dinner he told Molly to take the lass and the bairns into the meadow and round the yard a bit, and show 'em the little lambs, and the calf, and the poultry, and other sights, while he and Nicholls sat and chatted awhile; and when they had gone, he pressed Nicholls to take a cigar, for he suppos'd a pipe would be more than a Londoner could manage; on which the polite Mr. Nicholls said, yes, he was afraid it would be too much for him, though he wished to heaven he could get over it, for he had heard old smokers say that the flavour was so much better than that of a cigar. And then he asked him if he had brought his gun with him, for he could give him some prime shooting, as he got him permission to shoot over neighbour Wheetley's farm—and he had more land than any one that side of Farnham; and then there was his own farm, too; so that he might reckon upon good sport. On which Nicholls asked him whether the birds were plentiful that year; on which Reuben told him that that very morning, going to church across the eight-acre field, his little spaniel, Dash, had started a covey of as fine birds as he ever seed in his life; he should say there was as many as twelve partridges in it at least. And then he told him, if he was fond of coursing, that now the hop-poles were down he could have some fine sport, for he got young Jack Wheler, of the Poplars, to send to be a sweetheart of Sally's, to promise to lend him his greyhounds: one of them run uncommon cunning, to be sure; the black 'un, Nero, had beaten all the matches round about, and there wasn't a hound in all the country that could come nigh him, and that he had spiked himself twice, and wasn't a bit the worse for it.

At tea he asked Mr. and Mrs. Wellesley Nicholls if they thought they should be able to get down in the morning before dinner-time, and it shouldn't be any fault of his if they didn't, for he would come with the horn that he called his men in to their meals with, and blow it right against the door at six o'clock to a minute, and give them a run out in the fields before breakfast, and he'd warrant that Sally should come back with an appetite for breakfast that she hadn't had ever since she left them: and she could get Molly to show her where she used to make the bread—and he wondered what kind of a loaf she could make now; and she should try her hand at a bit of churning again; and kept reminding Mrs. Nicholls, to her great annoyance, of several other little humble offices, that, ten years ago, had been her special care, so that she and her husband were not sorry when the time came for retiring for the night.

In the morning, being very fine, Reuben took Nicholls over his fields, to show him his fine stock and crops, and pointed out to him such a field of turnips as would do a man good to look at; so that by the time he had got back, Reuben laughingly told him that they must have gone five miles if they had gone a step, and asked him whether he felt shaky about the knees, and whether he'd prefer ale instead of tea with his cold meat for breakfast.

And so nearly a week went by, Nicholls now shooting and riding about the country, or fishing in the trout stream close by; Mrs. Nicholls, going about with Molly, and half reluctantly helping in her various homely duties; whilst the children, when they had tired out the pony, went jumping and halloing about the earth, so happy and rosy that, as Reuben said, it was worth while walking ten miles any day to see, and he must keep them down there and make young farmers of them.

One afternoon, as Mr. Nicholls was fishing in the stream, which was about five fields distant from Reuben's house, his attention was taken off the trout that had risen once or twice to his fly, by hearing his own name shouted out in a voice that broke upon the stillness of the place so abruptly, that it quite startled him. On turning round, he saw Reuben trudging along the turnip-field, and a stranger, in a surtout, with a coat upon his arm, clambering over the gate after him. As Reuben advanced towards him, he kept calling out, "Nicholls, Nicholls, here be a young friend of thine come to see thee."

When the young friend drew near, Nicholls judged from his dress that he was from London, and, not remembering to have ever seen his features before, he turned slightly pale, for he had his misgivings that his whereabouts had become known.

Reuben told Wellesley, that, as the gentleman had come down on particular business, he thought he had better bring him over to him directly, especially as the gentleman wouldn't stop and take a bed, but wanted to get back to town that night.

The gentleman then approached Mr. Nicholls, and, drawing him aside, told him that he was sorry to say that he had got a copy of a writ for him, at the suit of Messrs. Soane and Co., the jewellers. The blood mounted to Mr. Nicholls's face as the young man handed to him the small slip of paper, and, eyeing him scornfully from head to toe, he asked him how he dare intrude upon his privacy, and told him that these employers were a pack of scoundrels not to have written to him before taking any proceedings against him. The young man was beginning to tell Mr. Nicholls that he need not vent his rage upon him, as he was merely doing his duty as a clerk, when Mr. Nicholls told him sharply, that he wanted to handy no words with a fellow like him, and that he had better be off, or he would give him such a ducking in the stream that he wouldn't forget in a hurry; whereupon the young gentleman threw himself into an attitude of defence, and said he should like to see him do it.

At this juncture Reuben stept forward and enquired what was the matter; and when the young man told him that Mr. Nicholls had insulted him because he had served him with a writ that he had come down there to keep out of the way of, Reuben said it was no fault of the lad's, and that Mr. Nicholls ought to remember that, however unpleasant the matter might be to him, still the poor lad wasn't exactly the party that he should go abusing; and then telling the young gentleman to go back to the farm and get himself something to eat, which, however, he declined, and took his departure, leaving Mr. Nicholls alone with Reuben, who smiled half contemptuously, as he now saw the cause of his brother-in-law's first visit to him these ten years. "Well, Mr. Nicholls," began Reuben, slowly, "did ye ever know the feelings of a man who, when a body do lead him to believe that he be wishing to make a friend on him, finds out that the fellow only wanted to make a tool on him, after all?"

"What do you mean?" asked Mr. Nicholls, pretending to be so busily engaged in disentangling his line that he could not take his eyes from it, even to look at his brother-in-law as he put the question to him.

"This be what I mean," answered Reuben. "For ten years gone thee and thy wife, my own dear sister Sally, did turn thy backs upon me and Molly, as if thee wert ashamed on us; and now, when the bailies are after thee, and thee be wanting a place to hide thy head in, thee can think it worth thy while to come smiling and scraping to us, as if thee had come in love to me and not in mercy to thyself."

Mr. Nicholls, stung to find that the motives of his visit were detected, dropped his line, and, drawing himself up haughtily, said, "Mr. Reuben Marsh, if you can think me capable of making your home my house of refuge, the sooner I leave it, the better; so, if you please, we will return to town this evening."

"No thee shan't, Wellesley," replied Reuben—"no thee shan't; thee knowest thee hast made it a house of refuge for thee, and thy brother will make it thy home. Now come, man, look in my face and say was Reuben ever slow to serve thee; then why mistrust his friendship, and come to his door with a lie on thy lips?"

"A lie!" echoed Mr. Wellesley Nicholls. "If you were not the brother, sir, of my wife, your blood should blot out the stain."

"Yes, I know all about that," answered Reuben; "but you see, Mr. Nicholls, as I be the brother of your wife, I don't mind about speaking the plain truth to thee. So come, none of your tantrums, man; Reuben be thy friend, and a truer un than thee hast in all thy Londonish folk. So come, let us know what that there writ be about, and may be we can set it all straight for thee."

"When I ask you for your assistance," replied Mr. Nicholls, with a sneer, "then it will be quite time enough for you to proffer it."

"Nay, nay," continued Reuben, "it be a poor friend that wait till he be asked. So come, let's see what it be for;" and picking the writ up from the ground where Mr. Nicholls had thrown it, he was about to read it, when Wellesley snatched it from his hand, saying that it was an unwarrantable liberty, and one that no gentleman would be guilty of.

This made Reuben half angry, but he only replied, "Out upon thee, man! thee beest stupid, and so main proud, that danged if thee dount make a favour of having a good turn done thee. Come, man, be plain, will a hundred pound serve thee? for I did tell Sally I would gie her as much some weeks gone, and maybe the bill thee paid for her has made thy money run short; so come, will thee please to let me serve thee?"

When Mr. Nicholls heard this, he gradually relaxed his dignified bearing, saying, "Please! You might have spared me that, Reuben. Do not imagine that I'm too proud to be insensible to kindness, though I certainly must own that I am still proud enough to avoid pressuring upon it. I may have behaved somewhat underhandedly to you, and I can readily understand your feelings on the discovery of it; but still you should remember that a man naturally wishes to keep his misfortunes as much to himself as possible; besides, I knew your goodness at heart, and consequently was the more anxious to prevent your becoming acquainted with my distress, lest I might encroach upon the kindness which you now so generously force upon me. But come, Reuben," he continued, holding out his hand, "let us forget the past, and be better friends for the future."

As they walked homewards, Mr. Nicholls informed Reuben how the writ was for a debt that he owed a jeweller for some diamonds which his dear Sara—foolish, vain girl—would go falling in love with, and which he should have been able to pay had it not been that he accidentally learnt that Sara had written to Reuben to borrow a hundred and odd pounds to discharge a bill that his stupid little pet had contracted unknown to him, and which he paid with the money that he had set aside for the diamonds; for, as he told her at the time, he could never think of allowing her to become a burthen to her kind brother, however ready he might be to help her; indeed, the whole affair had preyed upon his mind for some time past, and he had lost through it he was really afraid to say how much money; in fact, he had nuuuuss at that very moment—business in town of a most pressing nature, and which, of course, he must have thrown up if it had not been for Reuben's kindness.

Poor Reuben was delighted to hear all this, and immediately on his return home gave Nicholls a cheque for the amount of the writ, telling him to get back to his business, and when he could find a spare week or two, to remember that there was always a bed and a hearty welcome waiting for him at Farnham.

The next morning Nicholls and his family started for town, and the first thing he did on arriving there was to get the cheque changed, after which he sat down to write a letter to the jeweller's lawyers, telling them to send for the money. Whilst he was doing so a knock came to the door, which Mr. Nicholls no sooner heard than he took the notes from his pocket-book, and, spreading them out on the table before him, awaited the entrance of the visitor.

It was Lively Harry, who, being in the neighbourhood, had just called to see if he had returned to town, and, taking the easy chair, he asked Wellesley where he had been staying; and on learning from him that he had just taken a run down to Harrowgate with Mrs. Nicholls for the benefit of the waters, Lively Harry had got something to say about every one there; and in the midst of one of his stories, seeing the display of notes on the table, he broke off by saying, "By the by, Nicholls, my boy, do you feel inclined to do a bit of sporting?" and on Mr. Nicholls inquiring into the nature of the sport, Lively Harry informed him that he had got up a pigeon match at the club for five-and-twenty pounds a side, with a young fellow there who was cockering himself up with the idea that he was a crack shot, though he would bet three hats to one any day to give him his two barrels, and then beat him. It was to come off at the Red House, and all the nobs would be there, and, if he liked, Nicholls might back him. Young Lord Cressey backed the other fellow, and it would be just the thing for Nicholls, for he would introduce him to some of the best men in London there, and he was sure of his money; besides, what was twenty-five pounds to Nicholls, even for one moment supposing that that young muff should win the match, which it was next to impossible that he should, with such an old hand as himself against him. So if Wellesley would, he had better give him the money, and Lively Harry would go and hand it over to the stakeholders, and then Nicholls could go with him and meet Lord Cressey in the evening, and arrange all about the time and distance, &c.

Elated at the idea of being mixed up with the fine people Lively Harry had spoken of, and seeing such a safe prospect of so speedily doubling the money he risked, Nicholls handed Lively Harry the notes; and when he heard the street door slam to as the gentleman left, he threw himself back in his chair, and saw that unless he could come to some terms with the lawyers, he was a ruined man.

CHAPTER VIII.

BURIED in his arm-chair, the young barrister, motionless as a sitting hen, passed a quiet half-hour in assuring himself that he was ruined—ruined—without hope ruined; until, as if enraged at meeting with no contradiction, he rose suddenly, and, pushing his chair violently from him, paced nervously up and down the room, stamping clouds of dust out of the roses in his Brussells.

When the clean-Berlined Parker, with his hair freshly wetted, opened the door to announce that "dinner was on table," he found his master stretched at full length upon the sofa, and in such deep thought, that it took three coughs and a sneeze before the boy could make his presence known.

Then, with an effort, Mr. Wellesley Nicholls called home his thoughts, which, in his pecuniary distress, had strayed as far as Boulogne—that haven from which so few travellers return; and thinking it would be a good way of breaking the melancholy news to his Sara, whose opinion on the subject he rather dreaded—he dismissed the boy, saying he would rather not take any dinner, and that his mistress was to sit down without him.

Just as he had imagined, in about two minutes he heard the rustling of Mrs. N.'s silk dress on the stairs, and, jumping from the sofa, he again commenced his violent exercise of pacing the room at the rate of five miles per hour.

Mrs. Nicholls had rushed up-stairs in the full belief that her Wellesley, to refuse his dinner, must have been suddenly seized with illness. But when, on opening the door, she beheld him with his hair hanging over his forehead, and his shirt all crumpled, rushing about the room like a madman, she saw in an instant that it was his mind, and not his body, that was upset. To add to her misery, he would every now and then take up one of the best rosewood chairs, and, as he dashed it down again, call himself either a fool or an ass, or some other equally flattering epithet.

Though cut to the quick about her chairs, still Mrs. N., seeing something awful had occurred, thought it more prudent to remain silent until the storm had blown over a little. But when she saw her Wellesley, in his fury, take from the table the open volume of "Court Beauties," and calling himself "a born idiot," dash it with a good aim, and all his might, against the pink rosette of her grand upright, her woman's patience could go no further; and, trembling for the shepherds and shepherdesses on the mantelpiece, she determined, come what might, to put an end to the scene. Besides, although Mr. Nicholls grew no cooler, the dinner did every minute. So, with a soothing voice, she advanced cautiously towards him, saying, in her most winning way, "Why, Wellesley my dear—my dear Wellesley, what to goodness is the matter?"

But what was her horror when Mr. Wellesley Nicholls, untouched by her gentle tone and manner, turned sharply round and asked her, as he wildly passed his fingers through his hair, "how she would like to go to the workhouse?" and considering that not two hours back he had in that same room asked her "how she would like to go to the Opera?" the poor lady might well feel some little alarm.

The first thing that struck Mrs. Nicholls, on recovering from her surprise, was that she had left the door open. One graceful bound, and it was closed. Then turning to her husband—who, terrified at the idea that Parker might have heard him, had suddenly grown quite calm—she very soon drew from him the full, true, and particular account of his last piece of folly.

"And how on earth I could ever have been such a fool, my dear, I can't tell," exclaimed the gentleman, as he concluded the story of his sufferings. "Five-and-twenty pounds! And what the deuce did it matter to me who shot the pigeons? Well, my pet, the only thing I can see is, that the children must be ill again, and we must all go out of town as quickly as possible."

"How ridiculously you do talk, Wellesley dear," replied Mrs. Nicholls, remembering she had two invitations for the following week. "Haven't the children been ill already twice this season? There—come down stairs, and eat the dinner whilst it's hot; and, after a glass of wine, you'll be able to find out fifty different ways, without going out of town. But, first, do put your hair in order—there's a dear; or the servants will be fancying all sorts of things."

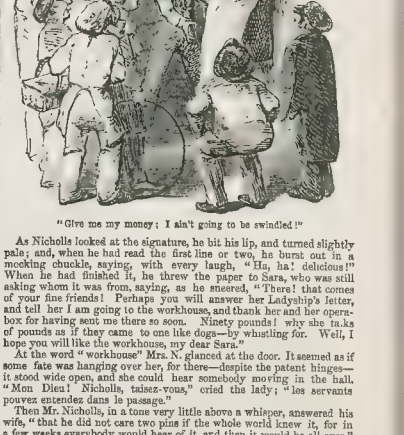
She gave him one of her side-combs, and, when he had completed his toilet, led him down stairs to the dining-room.

As the chicken and the sherry disappeared, the barrister's spirits rose—until at last, with the cheese, all his difficulties had vanished, and he had a hundred different schemes to set matters all right again once more.

Directly after the cloth was cleared, he told his wife what he had determined on doing. He would go down to that jeweller's shop himself, and make the scoundrel a kind of half apology to wipe out all ill feeling between them. Then, taking advantage of the moment when the apology had done its work, he would take out his pocket-book and offer the villain one-half his bill in notes. A tradesman never refused money; and, of course, would, after receiving half his bill, come to any terms he liked for the payment of the remainder.

Just as Nicholls was on the point of starting, there came to the door one of those nasty single knocks that sound so much like a bill. Mrs. N., who, after her experience of late, was very clever in these matters, immediately jumped up, and with a kind of presentiment that it was the butterman, rushed to the stairs.

But this time she was too late; and before she could say "Gone to the opera," the door was opened by one of the maids, who had a cousin in the police. It was an oblong, pink, violet-smelling note, brought by a young man in a claret livery. He was waiting for the answer, too. So Nicholls broke the seal directly; whilst Sara, confident that it was another invitation, kept asking him, "Whom can it be from, my dear? Whom can it be from?"



"Give me my money: I ain't going to be swindled!"

As Nicholls looked at the signature, he bit his lip, and turned slightly pale; and, when he had read the first line or two, he burst out in a mocking chuckle, saying, with every laugh, "Ha, ha! delicious!" When he had finished it, he threw the paper to Sara, who was still asking whom it was from, saying, as he sneered, "There! that comes of your fine friends! Perhaps you will answer her Ladyship's letter, and tell her I am going to the workhouse, and thank her and her opera-box for having sent me there so soon. Ninety pounds! why she talks of pounds as if they came to one like dogs—by whistling for. Well, I hope you will like the workhouse, my dear Sara."

At the word "workhouse" Mrs. N. glanced at the door. It seemed as if some fate was hanging over her, for there—despite the patent hinges—it stood wide open, and she could hear somebody moving in the hall. "Mon Dieu! Nicholls, taisez-vous," cried the lady; "les servants pouvez entendez dans le passage."

Then Mr. Nicholls, in a tone very little above a whisper, answered his wife, "that he did not care two pins if the whole world knew it, for in a few weeks everybody would hear of it, and then it would be all over." And, as he saw that Sara evidently didn't like the turn the conversation had taken, he went on to tell her, as he bathed his forehead with eau de Cologne, how the best thing he could do would be to get a broom, and sweep a crossing, or get a situation with some of his friends as footman; and concluded by requesting Sara to write a note to her Ladyship, stating, that he had not yet returned home from a very important consultation he had that evening at his chambers, but that, as soon as he did, the letter should be given to him, and an answer sent.

Without deigning an answer, the lady obeyed, and filled a sheet of cream-laid, at the rate of two words in a line; and immediately afterwards, seeing that her Wellesley was in one of his nasty melancholy fits, she was seized with a sudden headache, which enabled her to effect an honourable retreat from the misery that Nicholls was dealing out so plentifully to herself and children.

(To be continued.)

INDEX.

'ACT of Mercy"—Prize Picture, 441
Adelaide (Queen), Funeral of, 391, 408
——— Memoir of, 377
——— Orders for Mourning for, 374
Adre-ura, Brush, 241
Africa, Discovery of a Lake in, 434
Agricultural Society of England (Royal), Annual Exhibition, 60, 431
Agricultural Society (Royal Northern), Cattle Show, 197
Airlie (Earl of), Memoir of, 131
Air-Syphon Ventilator, 287
Ajax, Steam Guard-ship, Trial of, 103
"Alarming Sacrifice" (Haymarket), 56
Albemarle (Earl of), Memoir of, 307
Aldborough (Earl of), Memoir of, 299
Alfred Medal, 86
Algeria, Crime in, 220
Alvanley (Lord), Memoir of, 327
Anson (G. E., Esq.), Memoir of, 407
——— (Gen. Sir G.), Memoir of, 307
'Antony and Cleopatra" (Sadler's Wells), 285
Archæological Association (British), Meeting of, at Chester, 75
Archæological Institute, Annual Meeting of, 38
Archduke John resigned, 434
Archery Society (Castellew's), 176
Arches (Railway), Fall of, at Camden Town 302
Arctic Expedition, Sir J. Richardson on the, 186
——— Sketches of the, 360
Artesian Wells, Inutility of, 346
Artillery (Royal) Regulations, 230
Artist, Melancholy Death of an, 171
Arts, Meeting of the Society of, 311
Ash. Retreat of Imperialists from, 18
Aurora, Extraordinary, 232
Australia: An moe ty towards the Convict Scheme, 130, 210, 274
——— Melancholy Failure of the Exploring Expedition, 133
Austrian Dis ress Currency, 307
——— Loan, meeting to oppose the, 247
——— Recruits, 228
Autumnal Lyric, 217

"BABES in the Wood," Review of, 417
Ballantine (Major-General), Memoir of, 211
Ball room (Nassau), Accident to, 61
Ball room Island, New Lighthouse at, 270
Ballyshannon, Account of, 235
Ban, Defeat of the, 57
Bank of England New Drawing-office, 353
Baptist Noel (Hon. and Rev.), Memoir of, 141
Barnes, Railway Bridge at, 160
Barnsf Fair, 172
Ba-set (Capt. R.), Memoir of, 327
Baths and Wash-houses, Opening of the Marylebone, 380
Battery, New York, 277
Bathyany, Execution of Count Louis, 276
Bear-hunters' Return, Lines on, 345
Belfast Harbour improvements, 45
Bell, Antigua Siver, 136
Bem defeated by Russians, 118
Berm ondsey Marder, 135, 147, 151, 163, 167, 194, 213, 230
——— Trial of the Prisoners, 373, 279
——— Appeal of Mrs. Manning, 315
——— Execution of the Mannings, 330
Bess (T. P., Esq.), Memoir of, 3
B llingsgate and Neighbourhood, 317
Birds, Bower, 29
Birmingham Exposition of Arts and Manufactures, 155, 189, 213
Birmingham Musical Festival, 170
Bishop of Norwich, Memoir of, 3
Bishop's Rock Lighthouse, 340
Bla r (Major-Gen.) Memoir of, 166
Blarney Castle, 169
Board of Health (General), 231
Bonaparte (M. Pierre), Military Misconduct of, 338
Bornese Pirates, Attack on, 313
Bosphorus (Screw-propeller), Trial Trip, 135
Botanic Society (Royal), Exhibition, 10
Boa Mazz, Liberation of, 50
Bridlington Quay, Discretion of, 266
Brighton College, Description of, 245
Bristol, Murder at, 442
Britannia Bridge, Raising the Tube, 133
——— Progress of, 407
British Association at Birmingham, 190, 201
British Industry, Meeting of the Society for Protection of, 385
Brockley Hall, Curiosities of, 254
Brooke-Pechell (Rear-Admiral Sir S. J.), Memoir of, 307
Browne (Lieut.-Colonel J.), Memoir of, 358
Brunel (Sir M. I.), Memoir of, 386
Buffalo Hunt in London, 71
Buller (Gertrude Lady). Memoir of, 242
Burge (W., Esq.), Memoir of, 339
Burn.-grounds, Board of Health Orders as to, 263
Byzantine Church at Wilton, 76

CAERNARVON, Memoir of the Earl of, 386
Café Orsenhaus (Emigrant), Burning of, 371
California, Constitution of, 354, 434
——— Expansion of Chilians from, 18.
——— Iron Houses for, 20, 178
——— Letter from a Gold Seeker, 325
——— Roots in, 248
Campbell (F. W., Esq.) Memoir of, 410
Canada, Disturbances in, 242
Cardross (Lord), Memoir of, 211
Carmicnael (Sir F. G.), Memoir of, 435
Carpenters' Hall, Fire near, 256
Carrickfergus Castle, 169
Cashmere, Panorama of, 106
Catalepsy, Supposed Case of, 259
"Cead Mile Failte" (Musie), 100
Cemeteries and Graveyards compared, 190
Cenadonia, Insurrection at, 194, 210, 272
——— Amnesty to Insurgents, 338
Chapel, Catholic, Accident in, 45
Chapman (Sir J.), Memoir of, 39
Charing-cross Hospital, Meeting, 50
Charles Albert (King) ill at Oporto, 2
——— Death of, 71
——— Reception of his Remains, 278
Charles Bartlett (Emigrant) run down, 2
Chi h-um, Siege Operations at, 62
Chimney-piping Blindfold, 187, 203, 251,
Christie Church, Dorset, 285
Chinese Burial-ground, 212
Chippewa Indians and the Mining Companies, 179
Chloroform a Help to Theft, 92
Cholera, The, 177
——— Cures for, 151
——— Locality of, in London, 215
——— Metropolitan Statistics of, 435
——— Mortality in Metropolis from, 195
——— Preventive Diet, 158
Chopin (M.), Memoir of, 287
Christ Church, Battersea, 165
Christmas Charities, 435
——— Customs, 417
——— Railway Traffic, 435
Church, Meanwood, 301
Church of Valley Line of Railway, 78
"Cinderella," Lines on, 281
Circassians, Advance of, on the Russian Lines, 98
——— Defeated by Russians, 238
Circencester, Roman Remains at, 164
Cities, Wood Carving of Gothic, 385
Clarendon (Earl), Memoir of, 105
Clermont Danes (St.) Almshouses, 229
Coalfish House, Destruction of, 340
Coal, The Blo-sings of, 289
Coal Exchange, Accidents during the Royal Visit to, 291
——— Description of, 302
——— Opening to the Trade, 347
——— Opening of the New, 392
Colcerton Hall, Festivities at, 238
Coleridge (Bishop), Memoir of, 435
Collier (Rear-Admiral), Death of, 402 ——— Admiral Sir F.), Memoir of, 410
Co ombs and Convicts, 193
Colours, Presentation of, at Winchester, 43
Co.man (Mr. Justice), Memoir of, 30
Colvile (John Lord), Memoir of, 435
Common-Councilmen (London), Election of, 407
——— New Regulation as to, 403
Communists, Errors of the, 77
Comyn, Capitulation of, 242
——— Retreat of Klapka to, 146
Consecration of Bishops at Lambeth Palace, 375
Constantinople, Letter from Albert Smith, 369
——— Sketches in, 320
Convicts, What are we to do with, 337
Cossacks, The, 338
Cot ierstone, Remains of, described, 416
Cottingham, F., Esq., Memoir of, 80
"Court Album," Review of, 427
Crawley (A., Esq.), Memoir of, 35
Creyke (Capt. R.), Memo r of, 259
Cromwell Russell. (Mrs.), Memoir of, 115
Cuba, Expedition to, 194, 195, 210
——— Present State of, 324
Custodian Monument, 220
Cup, Cheshire, 242
——— Doncaster Race, 160
——— Goodwood, 74
——— Lon Kawling Challenge, 21
——— Queen Elizabeth's Drinking, 21
——— Steward's, 74
Cuvillier (Hon. Austin), Memoir of, 106

DALRYMPLE, Memoir of Commissary S r G., 394
Dartmouth (Frances Countess of), Memoir of, 115
Decay of Empires, Signs of, 401
Deer-stalking, 167
"Delicate Ground" (Lyceum), 362
Denison (W. J., Esq.), Memoir of, 106
"Dewan Mooltaj," Lines on, 169
Dewan Mooltaj, Trial of, 148
Dibdin's House, Description of, 181
Dick (Sir R.), Memoir of, 410
Disraeli's Plan for Agricultural Relief, 258
Doly's Bros, Affray at, 39
——— Inquiry into, 99
Doncaster Races, 184
Dostal (Captain), Portrait of, 253
Douglas (Brigadier-General), Memoir of, 339
"Down, Return of the," Lines on, 360
"Drawingroom Scrap-Book," Review of, 266, 426
Drinking-horn at Queen's College, Oxford, 30.
Dublin Chapel Royal, 108
Duel between Thiers and Bixio, 274
Duke (Lord Mayor Sir James), Election of as M.P. for London, 54
Dumas (Alexandre) and the Mannings, 201
——— Proeress of, 407
EGYPT, Discovery of Coal in, 178
——— Racing Challenge from, 254
Egyptian Animals, Collection of, at Regent's park, 76
Kistedvoodd, Royal Aberfraw, 149
Election, West Surrey, 252
Elgin, Statue of the Countess of, 269
Elliott, Memoir of Ebenezer, 307
Ems, Duke of Bordeaux at, 162
"English Monarchs in Ireland," Lines on, 91
Enigmas, 4 Page of, 428
——— Answers to, 438
Etchings, Royal., 182
Eton College, "Election Saturday," 75
Ety (Mr.), Death of, 227
——— Memoir of, 339
Eviction of Irish Peasantry, 243, 257
Exchange, New Edinburgh Corn, Described, 373
Exhibition, Industrial, of 1851, Report on, 376
Exposition, French National, 3
——— Distribution of Prizes for, 194

"FANCY-WORK, Lady's Album of," Review of, 427
Farm Buildings at Liscard, Description of, 369
Farmers' Club, Meeting of the, 386
Fashions (Paris) for August, 51
——— for September, 156
——— for October, 221
——— for November, 301
——— for December, 366
——— for New Year, 445
Fear of the World—a Novel, 429, 445
Fire Annihilator, Phillips's, 172
Fire-work Explosion at Bermondsey, 243
Fishermen, Account of Brighton, 420
Fitzalan (Lord Sir N.), Memoir of, 195
Fitzwilliam (Earl) on Protection, 442
Flax 5 clety (Ireland), Annual Meeting of, 394
Forth, The new Silver, 133
"Flower Spirits" (Music), 268
Fog, Disastrous, in London, 419
Foley (Lord), Marriage of, 43
Follett (Sir W.), Marble Statue of, 164
Forbes (Sir C.), Memoir of, 339
France:—
Amnesty to 1200 June Insurgents, 329
Commotion in the Chambers on M. Raspail's motion, 338
Dismissal of the Ministry, 290
Ministerial (New) Programme, 306
Opening of the Assembly, 235
Prefects, Dismissal of, 338
Potable Liquors Tax carried, 407
Prorogation of National Assembly, 66
Prospects of, 305
Franklin Expedition, 99
——— Esquimaux Account of, 231, 250
——— Clairvoyance respecting, 231
Frederica, Defeat of Holstein troops by Garrison of, 18
Freemasons, Asylum for Decayed, Annual Meeting, 23
French Industry, Exposition of, 357
Fruit, Christmas Trade in, 402

"GARCIA" (Sadlers' Wells), 397
Garibaldi and his Negro, 36
Gas-explosion (Great Queen-street), 407
Gas-light Apparatus, Domestic, 106
German Difficulty, The, 353
Germany, State of Western, 179
Girardin (M. Emile de), Power as a Writer, 172
Glasgow National Bank, 11
Glasgow to Iona, 135
Glinka, Prince of Prussia's Palace at, 178
Gloucester House, Pike to her Majesty, 8
Goblin Tapestry, 330, 344
Godson (R., Esq.), Memoir of, 105
Gold, Arrival of, at the Bank, 209
Goodwin Sands, Beacon for, 10
Gorgey's Surrender, Army, 130
Gorham v. Bishop of Exeter, 387, 403
Goring (Charles, Esq.), Memoir of, 339
Graham (Lieut.) and Elliott (Mr.), Court-martial on, 131
Grammar-School (Queen Elizabeth's), at Wimborne, 309
Granada (New), Wantlwind in, 3
Greaves (J., Esq.), Memoir of, 35
Greenwich Hospital, Pictures for, 316
Guyon, Account of Gen., 448

HALO, Fine Solar, 29
Ham, Visit of the French President to the Castle of, 50
Hamburgh, Riot at, 118
Hamilton (Sir C.) Memoir of, 206
Hamilton, Testimonia. to the Duke of, 28
"Handbook for London," Review of, 175
Hanwell Lunatic Asylum, Pike at, 26
Harvest of 1849: 182
Harvest-Home, Irish, 188
Hastings, Description of 167
Haughton (Sir G.), Memoir of, 166
Havre, Speech of the Deputy Mayor of, 114
Haynan's savage Proclamation, 55
Haynau (Gen.), Memoir, &c. of, 373, 448
Hayti, Emperor of, 338
"Hearts are Trumps" (Strand), 74
Her Majesty's Theatre, Close of the Season, 133
Hermanstadt, Imperial successes at, 98
Hever Castle, Account of, 310
High-Level Bridge, Newcastle, 150
Honolulu (Prince), Memoir of, 338
Holidays for the Poor, 111
"Holly Berry," The (Music), 421
Holy Trinity Church, Laying Foundation-stone, 334
Hop-growers' Deputation, 215
Horberry Chapel, 181
Horn (C., Esq.), Memoir of, 307
Horticultural Society's Gardens, Last Pike at, 21
Hospital, General Lying-in, Quarterly Meeting, 34
Hudson (Mr.), Determination to bring Actions against, 39
Humane Society (Royal), Report of, 7
Humboldt (Baron), Memoir of, 206
Humsums Hotel (New), Fire at, 375
Hunting Season, The, 348
Hungarian Refugees depart for Shumla, 38
——— Refugees in Leith, 394
——— War, The, 97
——— War Whip, 98
Hungary, Executions in, 220
——— Lord Palmerston's Speech on the Affairs of, 58
——— M. P.'s Petition on the Affairs of, 379
——— Position of the Contending Armies, 46
——— Sketches in, 9, 448
Hussars (Hungarian) at Folkestone, 46
Hydrophobia, Alleged Cure for, 354

ICEBERGS near Labrador, 344
Iguana, The, 341
India, Carriage Sailing-Boats for, 149
Indian Paintings, 173
"Insect Life," Episodes of (Review), 427
Inskip (I., Esq.), Memoir of, 182
Intramural Interments, 163, 187
Ireland, Cultivation of Flax in, 112
——— Hope for, 17
——— Last Royal Visit to, 92
——— Peat Bogs of, 94
——— Source of the Wrongs of, 307
——— State of, 94
Ireland, Queen's Visit to, 65, 81
Embarkation, 65
Arrival at Cork, 82
Departure from Cove, 82
Royal Feast at Waterford Harbour, 82
Arrival in Kingstown Harbour, 83
Landing at Kingstown, 83
Presentation of the Keys of Dublin, 84
Procession through the City, 85
Illuminations, 86
Visit to Bank of Ireland, 87
Visit to Trinity College, 87
Review in Phœnix Park, 117
The Levee, 91
Departure from Dublin, 91
Departure from Kingstown, 125
Landing at Belfast, 121
Visit to the Linen-hall, 114
Embarkation for Scotland, 122
Irish Members, Civic Banquet to, 55
——— Poor-Laws, 94
——— Town, a Day in, 49
Iron Screen in Westminster Abbey, 235
——— Trade, Increase of, 338

JACKEY JACKEY, Account of, 325
Jamaica House of Assembly Dissolved, 90
Joejeebhoy Dadabhoy, Memoir of, 77
Jennings (Archdeacon), Memoir of, 435
Jerningham (Hon. E. S.), Memoir of, 59
Jesuit Church, Opening of a New, in Mayfair, 71
Judges, Installation of French, 306
Julien's Concerts, 314, 395

KENNY (James, Esq.), Memoir of, 59
Kestrel Steam-ship, Loss of, 150
Key (Aston, Esq.), Memoir of, 146
Kilgarvey, Excursion to the Lakes of, 40, 51, 66
——— Lord-Lieutenant at, 217
Kil ooghy, Fatal Affray at, 270
Kilrush, General State of, 393, 404, 448
"King Charles the Second" (Princess'), 294
King (Sir J. D.), Memoir of, 275
King's College Athenæum, Election of Officers, 39
"Kit Bam's Adventures," Review of, 427
Kossuth, Flight of, into Turkey, 130

"LADY in Difficulties" (Lyceum), 266
Lamb (run down), 178
Lancaster North-Western Railway, Opening of, 201
Land Question in France and Ireland, 161
"Laughing Hyæna" (Haymarket), 314
Lawrence (Hon. Abbett), Memoir of, 252
Lawes (Serjeant), Memoir of, 358
Leaving Church, 329
Leeds, Mr. Cobden on Protection at, 407
Legitimist Conspirators Arrested, 354, 370
"Le Prophète" (Royal Italian Opera), 56
Leslie (Rev. Sir H.), Memoir of, 410
Liverpool, Wreck of, 344
Lethbridge (Sir T. B.), Memoir of, 275
Lewin, Candelabrum presented to Mr., 176
Leverstock-Green, New Church at, 317
Lincoln, Protectionist Meeting at, 407
Lindsay (Lady C.), Memoir of, 259
Lion and Bull Fight at Madrid, 193
Lister Kaye (Lady A.), Memoir of, 299
Litchfield (Captain), Plate presented to, 358
"Little Savage," Review of, 106
Liverpool Musical Festival, 153, 154
Llandaff (Bishop of), Memoir of, 259
Lloyd (J. P., Esq.), Memoir of, 311
Lockey (H. F., Esq.), Memoir of, 273
Lodging-house, Old Model London, 341
Loft (Lieut.-Gen.), Memoir of, 59
Lola Montes and her Husband, 290
——— Charged with Bigamy, 103
——— Marriage of, 39
London, Comparative Mortality of, 403
——— Election of Sheriff for, 39
Lord Mayor's Day, 311
Lord Mayor, Swearing in of, 295
Louis (St.), Fire at, 115
"Loving Woman" (Haymarket), 413
Lyell (C., Esq.), Memoir of, 227

MACAO, Assassination of the Governor of, 290, 308
Macdonald, Statue of, 229
Mackenzie (J. Hay, Esq.), Memoir of, 30
Mackinnon (W. A., Esq.), Memoir of, 44
Macready at the Haymarket, 353
Madersbach (Mdme.), Letter of, 242
Madras, Disturbance at, 250
Magdalen Hospital, Annual, 221
Magi, Adoration of the—Rubens's Pictures, 436
Magyar Communication, 130
Maize Crop in St. James's Park, 256
——— Mr. Keene's Letter on, 269
Malahide (Lord Talbot de), Memoir of, 307
"Malvolio t the Sun" (Painting), 72
Manchester, Railway Express Steamboat, 26
Manchester Waterworks, Flood at, 243
Manning Case, Remarks on, 329
Mardin's (St.) Hall, Concerts at, 382
Mary Elizabeth, Wreck of, 199
Marylebone Cemetery, Closing of, 394
Mathew (Father), Enthusiastic Welcome to, in New York, 80
——— Return to New York, 34
Matlock Railway, 332
Maunsell (Lieut.-Col. G.), Memoir of, 182
Maximilian (King of Bavaria), Memoir of, 197
Mead (Major Roche), Memoir of, 339
Mediterranean Squadron, The, 354
Medway, Convict Mutiny on Board the, 50
Meeting-room (New Railway), at the Euston-square Terminus, 181
Mehemet Ali, Memoir of, 131
Melbourne, Lord, Memoir of, 166
Methuen (Right Hon. Lord), Memoir of, 306
"Methinks I see my Father" (Lyceum), 314
Metropolitan Water Supply, 170
Meyagscah, Church at, 134
Mexico, Convent of Lo Merced, 269
Michael's Church (St.), Fire at, 334
Millbank Prison, Cholera in, 10
——— Murder in, 3.4, 335
Milman (Rev. H. H.), Memoir of, 336
"Mina," Performance of, at Princess', 294
Minerva, Blowing up of, 197
Mitchell (Mr.), Testimonial to, 61
Model Cottages, 305
"Modern Housewife," Review of, 346
Moltke (Marshal), Memoir of, 71
Montemar Baron, Account of, 238
Montreal Riot, at, 164
Moon and Jupiter, Positions of, 398
Mortality in London and Paris, 147
——— Origin of Bills of, 183
Morton (Countess Dowager), Memoir of, 71
Morton (T., Esq.), Memoir of, 299
——— Suicide of, 291
Mosa.s, Pompeian, 59
Mourning, Orders for Court, 410
Moylan (D. C., Esq.), Memoir of, 339
"Mr. Briggs" (Astley's), 330
"Mr. Bunbury's Spoons" (Adelphi), 266
Mummy Wheat, 197
"Murderers of Thomas Chase," 57
Musical Publications, Review of New, 426
Musket, New Prussian, 130
Musters (J., Esq.), Memoir of, 182

NAPIER (Sir C.), Banquet to, at Simla, 391
Napoleon, Bed and Chair of, 316
Nation, State of the, 1
——— State of, Debate on, 2
National Gallery Improved, 441
Naval Asylum (King William), Penge, 378
"Naval Biography" (Byrne's), Review of, 266
Naval (Royal) Female School Examination, 403
Navigation Laws and the Government, 1
——— Abolished as to Britain by U. S., 290
Neave (Hon. Lady), Memoir of, 166
Needlewomen, Remedy for the Distresses of the London, 369
Nelson, Alto-relievo of the Death of, 332
Neuenham (R. O'Callaghan, Esq.), Memoir of, 338
Newport Pagnell, Protectionist Meeting at, 382
Nicaragua, Difficulty as to, 130
"Night's Sacrifical Hymn," 361
Noël, Le Bonhomme—French Custom, 434
North Shields, Festivities at, 309
Norwich, Election of a new Bishop of, 279
Norwich and Ipswich Railway, Opening of, 331
Nottingham, Flood near, 370
——— Military Insubordination at, 270, 298

O'BRIEN (Mr. Smith) and fellow-prisoners, Departure of, from Ireland, 18
O'Callaghan (Hon. C.), Memoir of, 146
Opera, Royal Italian; Close of the Season, 138
Orange Magistrates, Dismissal of, 243
Orleans (New), Inundation at, 3
Osborne, Isle of Wight, Description of, 316
——— Rural Pike at, 59
——— Sketches at, 364
Ottley (Lady), Memoir of, 258
Owen (Admiral Sir E.), Memoir of, 259
Owen (W. M., Esq.), Memoir of, 338

PAINTINGS (Mural) in Winchfield Church, 37
Palace and Marshalsea Courts, Statistics of, 14
Panama Railroads and Mail Contracts, 371
Pantomimes, Analyses of, 414, 416, 435
Paris, New Year in, 434
Parliament, Prorogation of, 70, 339
——— Further Prorogation of, 242
Parrielde (Attempted) at Chiswick, 230, 244, 315, 403
Passengers' Pavilion to the Steamer, 34
Paterson (Sir W.), Memoir of, 231
"Patineurs, Pas de," in "Les Plaisirs d'Hiver," 29
Pauperism, Diminution of, 435
Pavement (Roman) at Circencester, 333
Peace Congress at Paris, 130, 145, 151
Peace Meeting at Exeter Hall, 291
Peacock, (Gen Sir W.) Memoir of, 146
Pearson (Sir W. Hyde), Memoir of, 30
Pellew (Hon. Lady), Memoir of, 131
Peninsular Navigation Company's Half-yearly meeting, 375
Peter-warden surrendered, 194
Pheasant-Shooting, 290
Philips (Mr. C.) and Courvoisier, 343
Phillips (Brigadier-General), Memoir of, 358
Philpotts (J. Exeq.), Memoir of, 3
Piedmont and Austria, Treaty of Peace signed, 103
"Piety," Lines on, 329
Pirates (Chinese), Destruction of, by H.M. Columbine and Fury, 402 ——— Destruction of Chinese, 371
Pitman (Commander J. C.), Court-martial on, 167, 178
"Plague Comes," &c., Lines on, 266
Poley (G. W., Esq.), Memoir of, 227
"Poetic Task-book" (Review), 190
Polar Regions, Life in, 248
Polk (President, U. S.) Death of, 2
Pompeian Illustrations (Ireland), 393, 404, 443
Poor, London Association Meeting for Relief of, 358
——— Relief Bill passed, 8, 58
Portland Breakwater, Laying of First Stone, 34
Postal Regulations with America, 238
Post-office, Sunday Labour in, 247
Potatoes (Diseased), Practices of, 434
Poultry, Importation of, 402
Prayer (Jewish form of) against Cholera, 178
Presbyterian Church (New), Birmingham, 241
Presence of Mind, Instance of, 75
President's (French) Letter to Colonel Ney, 178
Price's Candle-Works Described, 382
Primrose (J. G., Esq.), Memoir of, 410
Printers' Pension Society, Annual Dinner, 59
Prize-breaking Extraordinary, 371
"Protestations?" (Music), 15
Pulteney, Memoir of Lady, 386
Pump, Patent Floating Filtering, 199

QUEBEC, Fire at, 115
——— Riot at, 66
Queen's College (Cork), Inauguration of, 327
"Queen's Hut," Loch Muick, 172
"Quotelet on Probabilities," Review of, 346

RAAB taken by Klapka, 102
——— taken by the Austrians, 2
Railway Cash-box, Chubb's, 119
——— Companies, Liability of, 442
——— Exposure, 34
——— Great S. and W., (Ireland), opened by Lord Carendon, 274
Rahe's Charity—Marriage Portion, 435
Rain's Barometer, Memoir of, 146
Ratcliff, Baden Insurgents retreat to Fortress of, 2
Reade (J., Esq.), Memoir of, 275
——— Funeral of Sir Thomas, 132
——— Memoir of Sir Thomas, 115
Reading, Guildford, and Reigate Railway, 308
Red Men and White Men, 129
Regatta (Thames), at Putney, 32
Regatta-General's Quarterly Returns, 70, 314
Reigate, Protectionist Meeting at, 382
"Reigning Favourite" (Strand), 254
"Rémi's Daughter" (Strand), 394
Retrospect of the Year, 435
Revenue, The Quarter's, 7
Rochdale Savings-bank Defalcations, 370, 391, 411
Roche (C. J., Esq.), Memoir of, 21
Roman Question, 273
Rome, Assassination Scene in, 225
——— Entry of French into, 35
——— French Intervention at, 3
——— French at, 25
——— Revenue, Quarter's, 306
——— Last Attack of the French on, 346
——— Letter from Albert Smith, 154
——— Reception of French Troops in, 34
Ross's (Sir James) Official Report of the Arctic Expedition, 323
Ross (Sir James), Return of, 306
Rotherham, Defeat of Rent in the, 130
Royal Academy, Award of Prizes at, 387, 441
Royal Visits, Record of, 105
Russia and the Porte, 225
Russians defeated by Bem, 39
"Ruth, Book of," Review of, 427

SACRED Harmonic Society (London), Opening Concert, 314, 329
Salt-cellar, Antique, 228
Saltwood Castle described, 445
Samuel Enderby, Sailing of, for Auckland Islands, 132
Sandhurst Royal Military College, new Regulations, 131
Sandwich Islands Dispute with the French, 354
Sardinia (Ex-King), Memoir of, 106
Sayed Pacha, Steam-yacht, 244
Scarborough, Account of, 281
Schleswig-Holstein, Cessation of Hostilities, 34
——— Suspension of negotiations, 2
Scholefield (Mr.), Memoir of, 13
School, Birmingham Free Industrial, Bazaar for Benefit of, 37
Scotland, Queen's Visit to, 125
Arrival at Glasgow, 126
Visit to the Cathedral, 140
Arrival at Invereald, 141
——— at Balmoral, 146
Departure from Balmoral, 316
Progress to Gosport, 338, 353
Scott (Sir Samuel), Memoir of, 231
Sendamore (Sir C.), Memoir of, 106
Sentari, Affairs at, 290
Sewer, Loss of Life in, at Pimlico, 263
Sewers, Dr. Ure on the Poison of, 263
Sermon, Bishop of London's Thanksgiving, 231
Sermons not Copyright, 327
Shadwell (L. H., Esq.), Melancholy Death of, 290
Sharp (Sir Cuthbert), Memoir of, 131
Shere Singh, &c., Arrest of, 238, 345
Sheriffs, Inauguration of the New, 238
Ships, Fires and Lights on Board, 411
Shrewsbury and Birmingham Railway, Opening of, 333
Siddons (Mrs.), Statue of, 229
Silchester, Bronze found at, 373
Sisula, Inscription of, 148
Simpion, Destruction of Great Road, 98
Slave-trade, Lords' Report on, 370
Slaver captured by H.M.S. Rattler, 440
Smith (Horace, Esq.), Memoir of, 35
Smithfield Club Cattle Show, 385
——— Horse Market, 244
——— Sheep Market, Cruelties of, 244
Snipe-shooting Described, 413
Sontag (Madame), Memoir of, 13
Southampton (Ex-Mayor), Plate presented to, 365
South Districts and Cholera, 285
South Stockton, Water-logged, 326
Sportsman, Caution to, 163
Stapleton (T., Esq.), Memoir of, 386
Starkie (Le G., Esq.), Memoir of, 259
Statue found at Rome, 440
Steam-pressure Indicator (Smith's) described, 412
——— Train, Bourne's River, 109
St. Giles's and Neighbourhood, 197
St. Jean (Emigrant Ship), Wreck of, 374
St. John (Hon. S. Mildmay), Memoir of, 331
"St. Stephan's Oath," 228
St. Thomas's new Church, 258
"Strategems" (Review), 190
Strauss (Herr), Memoir of, 254
Strikes on the Midland Railway, 442
Stuart (James, Esq.), Memoir of, 339
Suburban Cemeteries and City Churchyards, 221
"Summer Shades," Lines on, 73
Sun-Sail, Large, 353
Synod of Paris, 212

TALFOURD (Mr. Justice), Memoir of, 52
——, Swearing in of, 70
Taylor (Dr. Cooke), Memoir of, 206
Telescope, Refracting, 398
Terrible, War-steamer, 224
Temeswar, Description of the Siege, 350
——— taken by Hungarians, 71
"Tewdrie, Death of" (Statuary), 109
Thames and Medway Conservancy, 37
Thames-street, Fire in, 287
Thanksgiving Day, Robberies on, 347
Thiers's Report on Roman Affairs, 148
Thunderstorm in the Metropolis, 9
"Treva ion" (Surrey), 262
Trichinopoly, Awful Catastrophe at, 308
Trindad, Serious Riot at, 306
Truxillo, Capture of the Port of, 35b
Tufton (Lady E.), Memoir of, 206
Tunbridge Wells, Inscription of, 138
Turkey refuses to give up the Hungarians, 225

UNITED STATES—Difference with the French Ambassador, 226
——— Navy Yard, New Dry Dock, 270
University (London), Acceptance of New Charter by, 38

VANDELEUR (Gen. Sir J. O.), Memoir of, 307
Vauxhall Gardens, 144
"Velasco" (Marylebone), 202
Venice, Archbishop of Paris' Letter on opened by Lord Carendon, 274
Rahe's Charity—Marriage Portion, 435
Rain's Barometer, Memoir of, 146
Ratcliff, Baden Insurgents retreat to Fortress of, 2
Reade (J., Esq.), Memoir of, 275
——— Funeral of Sir Thomas, 132
——— Memoir of Sir Thomas, 115
Reading, Guildford, and Reigate Railway, 308
Red Men and White Men, 129
Regatta (Thames), at Putney, 32
Regatta-General's Quarterly Returns, 70, 314
Reigate, Protectionist Meeting at, 382
"Reigning Favourite" (Strand), 254
"Rémi's Daughter" (Strand), 394
Retrospect of the Year, 435
Revenue, The Quarter's, 7
Rochdale Savings-bank Defalcations, 370, 391, 411
Roche (C. J., Esq.), Memoir of, 21
Roman Question, 273
Rome, Assassination Scene in, 225
——— Entry of French into, 35
——— French Intervention at, 3
——— French at, 25
——— Revenue, Quarter's, 306
——— Last Attack of the French on, 346
——— Letter from Albert Smith, 154
——— Reception of French Troops in, 34
Ross's (Sir James) Official Report of the Arctic Expedition, 323
Ross (Sir James), Return of, 306
Rotherham, Defeat of Rent in the, 130
Royal Academy, Award of Prizes at, 387, 441
Royal Visits, Record of, 105
Russia and the Porte, 225
Russians defeated by Bem, 39
"Ruth, Book of," Review of, 427

SACRED Harmonic Society (London), Opening Concert, 314, 329
Salt-cellar, Antique, 228
Saltwood Castle described, 445
Samuel Enderby, Sailing of, for Auckland Islands, 132
Sandhurst Royal Military College, new Regulations, 131
Sandwich Islands Dispute with the French, 354
Sardinia (Ex-King), Memoir of, 106
Sayed Pacha, Steam-yacht, 244
Scarborough, Account of, 281
Schleswig-Holstein, Cessation of Hostilities, 34
——— Suspension of negotiations, 2
Scholefield (Mr.), Memoir of, 13
School, Birmingham Free Industrial, Bazaar for Benefit of, 37
Scotland, Queen's Visit to, 125
Arrival at Glasgow, 126
Visit to the Cathedral, 140
Arrival at Invereald, 141
——— at Balmoral, 146
Departure from Balmoral, 316
Progress to Gosport, 338, 353
Scott (Sir Samuel), Memoir of, 231
Sendamore (Sir C.), Memoir of, 106
Sentari, Affairs at, 290
Sewer, Loss of Life in, at Pimlico, 263
Sewers, Dr. Ure on the Poison of, 263
Sermon, Bishop of London's Thanksgiving, 231
Sermons not Copyright, 327
Shadwell (L. H., Esq.), Melancholy Death of, 290
Sharp (Sir Cuthbert), Memoir of, 131
Shere Singh, &c., Arrest of, 238, 345
Sheriffs, Inauguration of the New, 238
Ships, Fires and Lights on Board, 411
Shrewsbury and Birmingham Railway, Opening of, 333
Siddons (Mrs.), Statue of, 229
Silchester, Bronze found at, 373
Sisula, Inscription of, 148
Simpion, Destruction of Great Road, 98
Slave-trade, Lords' Report on, 370
Slaver captured by H.M.S. Rattler, 440
Smith (Horace, Esq.), Memoir of, 35
Smithfield Club Cattle Show, 385
——— Horse Market, 244
——— Sheep Market, Cruelties of, 244
Snipe-shooting Described, 413
Sontag (Madame), Memoir of, 13
Southampton (Ex-Mayor), Plate presented to, 365
South Districts and Cholera, 285
South Stockton, Water-logged, 326
Sportsman, Caution to, 163
Stapleton (T., Esq.), Memoir of, 386
Starkie (Le G., Esq.), Memoir of, 259
Statue found at Rome, 440
Steam-pressure Indicator (Smith's) described, 412
——— Train, Bourne's River, 109
St. Giles's and Neighbourhood, 197
St. Jean (Emigrant Ship), Wreck of, 374
St. John (Hon. S. Mildmay), Memoir of, 331
"St. Stephan's Oath," 228
St. Thomas's new Church, 258
"Strategems" (Review), 190
Strauss (Herr), Memoir of, 254
Strikes on the Midland Railway, 442
Stuart (James, Esq.), Memoir of, 339
Suburban Cemeteries and City Churchyards, 221
"Summer Shades," Lines on, 73
Sun-Sail, Large, 353
Synod of Paris, 212

TALFOURD (Mr. Justice), Memoir of, 52
——, Swearing in of, 70
Taylor (Dr. Cooke), Memoir of, 206
Telescope, Refracting, 398
Terrible, War-steamer, 224
Temeswar, Description of the Siege, 350
——— taken by Hungarians, 71
"Tewdrie, Death of" (Statuary), 109
Thames and Medway Conservancy, 37
Thames-street, Fire in, 287
Thanksgiving Day, Robberies on, 347
Thiers's Report on Roman Affairs, 148
Thunderstorm in the Metropolis, 9
"Treva ion" (Surrey), 262
Trichinopoly, Awful Catastrophe at, 308
Trindad, Serious Riot at, 306
Truxillo, Capture of the Port of, 35b
Tufton (Lady E.), Memoir of, 206
Tunbridge Wells, Inscription of, 138
Turkey refuses to give up the Hungarians, 225

UNITED STATES—Difference with the French Ambassador, 226
——— Navy Yard, New Dry Dock, 270
University (London), Acceptance of New Charter by, 38

VANDELEUR (Gen. Sir J. O.), Memoir of, 307
Vauxhall Gardens, 144
"Velasco" (Marylebone), 202
Venice, Archbishop of Paris' Letter on opened by Lord Carendon, 274
——, Surrender of, 146
Ventilation, Dr. Arnott on, 211
Vernon (Hon. C.), Memoir of, 315
Vernon Gallery, Pictures damaged in 3.6
Versailles High Court of Justice, 242
Viceregal Lodge, Dubuin, 108
Victoria regia at Chatsworth, 324
Vintage in Tuscany, 265
"Voyage of the Air," Lines on, 218

WALDECK (M.), Acquittal of, 370
Ward (G. H., Esq.), Memoir of, 231
Warwick Race Plate, 176
Watch Memento Meri, 197
Water Supply to the Metropolis, 206
Weare (Colonel T.), Memoir of, 3
"Webster's Red-Book" (Adelphi), 26
Wednesday Concerts (London), Opening of, 281, 329
"Welshing the Deer," Critique on, 375
Wesleyan Ministers, Ordained, 187
Weston (J. J. W., Esq.), Memoir of, 275
Whale captured in the Thames, 258
"What there's a Will there's a Way" (Strand), 170
Whipple (Commander J.), Memoir of, 242
Whiston, Testimonial to Rev. Mr., 439
Whitshed (Admiral), Memoir of, 307
Whittuck (C. Esq.), Memoir of, 146
Williams (Deserter Lady Hamlyn), Memoir of, 282
——— (Sir E.), Memoir of, 410
Willoughby (H., Esq.), Memoir of, 339
Wilson (Vocalist), Death of, 50
——— Memoir of, 71
Windsor Castle, Sketches in, 263
Winter, Lines on, 424
Wire-worm, Destruction of, 131

INDEX TO ENGRAVINGS.

ABATTOIR du Roule, Paris, 46
Aberdeen, Cattle Show at, 187
* Act of Mercy," Prize Painting, 441
Adelaide (Queen), Funeral of, 408
Procession through Uxbridge, 408
Procession through Eton, 408
Procession to St. George's Chapel, Windsor, 409
Ceremony in St. George's Chapel, 412
Royal Vault, View of the, 412
Adelaide (Queen), Portrait of, 377
Adoration of the Magi," 425
Aghadoe, from the Bishop's Pulpit, Killarney, 68
Agricultural (Royal) Society's Show, Norwich, 60
Air-Syphon Ventilator, Patent, 227
Ajanta Caves, General View of, 173
Alfred Jubilee Medal, 285
Andrew's (St.) Hall, Norwich, Dinner in, 332
Angassy-bridge (Cork), Procession passing, 68
Ann's (St.) Burial-ground, Blackfriars, 192
Anson, G. E., Esq., Portrait of, 269
"Antony and Cleopatra," Scene from, 285
Archbishop of Paris, Portrait of, 152
Ajanta Caves, General View of, 173
Alfred Jubilee Medal, 285
Andrew's (St.) Hall, Norwich, Dinner in, 332
Angassy-bridge (Cork), Procession passing, 68
Ann's (St.) Burial-ground, Blackfriars, 192
Anson, G. E., Esq., Portrait of, 269
"Antony and Cleopatra," Scene from, 285
Archbishop of Paris, Portrait of, 152
Archer's (Mr. West) Triumphal Arch, 26
Arches (Railway), Fallen, at Camden Town, 364
Arches, Triumphal, in Ireland, 86, 126
Arctic Expedition, Beset in a Pack of Ice, 324
—— Chart of the, 323
—— Housed for the Winter, 324
—— Return of Sir J. Ross's, 321
—— Sentries of the, 324, 369
—— Midsummer Night, 324
—— Travelling Party, 361
Arcnstoll, View of a Mill near, 372
Artillery, Hungarian, 57
Assassination at Rome, 225
Aubusson Carpet, Piece of, 357
Audience Chamber (Queen's), Windsor, View of, 264
Aurora Borealis as seen from H.M.S. Dædalus, 252
Austrian Paper Money, 337
Autumn, a Sketch, 217

BALLA, Rajah Brooke's Fleet near, 313
Balloon Ascent from Vauxhall, 144
—— (Nassau), Accident to, 61
Ballycotton Island, New Lighthouse on, 272
Ballyshannon, View of, 288
Balmoral, View of her Majesty's Residence, 145
Barden's (Lord) Cottage, View of, 196
Bank, Glasgow National, Exterior, 12
—— Telling-room, 12
Banker's (Lord) new Drawing Office, 356
Bank of Ireland, Queen's Visit to, 116
Banting Marron, Engagement with Pirates of, 312
Barge, the Turkish Sultan's, 328
Barnet Fair, Sketch of, 176
Barnes, Railway Bridge over Thames at, 160
Battersea, Interior of New Church at, 165
Battery, New York, by Moonlight, 377
—— View of, 276
Battery (Roman) at Monte Testaccio, 25
Bavaria (King of), Portrait of, 196
Bazar at Constantinople, 261
Bear-hunt, Return from the, 345
Bedstead and Chair, Napoleon's, 316
Belfast Harbour: Opening of the New Channel, 45
Belfast, Her Majesty Landing in the Harbour of, 120
—— Lizen-hall, Queen's Visit to, 113
—— Royal Arch in the High-street, 120
—— Palace, 276
—— Interior in the High-street, 121
—— Viewed from Fort Breda, 121
Bell, Sketch of an Antique Silver, 156
Billingsgate Fish-Market, 317
Birmingham and Shrewsbury Railway, Opening of, 345
Birmingham Exposition of Arts; Specimens, 213
—— Free Industrial School, 28
Bishops, Council of, at Paris, 212
*Bishop Rock Lighthouse, 340
Blarney Castle, View of, 108
Blindman's-Buff, Game of, 428
Board of Health, Sitting of, at Gwydyrhouse, 332
Borneo, Sketches in, 312
Bosphorus (Screw Steamer), Portrait of the, 185
Botanic Gardens, Glasnevin, Queen's Visit to, 117
Bourne's River Steam Train, 109
Bower Beds at Zoological Society's Gardens, 29
Bridlington Quay, View of, 268
Brighton College, View of, 245
Britannia Bridge, Apparatus for lifting the Tube at, 133
British Association Meeting (Geological Section) in the Birmingham Grammar-school, 204
—— Scene at Birmingham, 204
Brockley Hall, Curiosities from, 284, 316
—— Group of Antique Furniture from, 284
—— View of, 284
Bronze Centre-piece, 357
Bronzes (Men-at-Arms), 357
Buckingham Palace, Chandelier for the Summer-house at, 213
Bull, Herebert, 60
Bulls, Short-Horn, 61
Burial-Ground at Constantinople, 261
—— Ch ness, at Calcutta, 212
—— Lambeth, 192
—— St. Ann's, Blackfriars, 192
—— St. Martin's, Drury-lane, 192

CAHUERMORE, Sketch of a Scalp at, 444
Calforda, Iron Storehouse for, 20
Candelabrum presented to the Duke of Hamilton, 28
—— presented to M. Lewin, Esq., 176
—— presented to Mr. Mitchell, 61
Canoes converting into Schooners, 20
Canstelow's Archery Prize Medal, 176
Cape Town, Great Meeting at, 132
Capitol, Replacement of Royal Arms at the, 129
Caravanon Regatta, Sketch at, 157
Carpet d'Aubusson, 357
Carriage Sailing-boat for Indian Rivers, 149
Carrickfergus Castle, View of, 141
Carton, Dance of Peasantry at, 125
Carton Pierre, Panel in, 5
Castle, Hever, 349
Castle, Ruins of Tunbridge, 138
—— View of Harlech, 108
—— View of Carrickfergus, 141
—— View of Saltwood, 445
Cathedral, External View of Glasgow, 140
—— View of the Crypt of Glasgow, 140
Cattle arriving at Railway Terminus, 389
—— Feeding Prize, 396
Cattle Show at Aberdeen, Sketch of, 157
—— Sketches of the Smithfield, 385
Cemetery, Highgate, View of, 221
—— Norwood, 192
Cenotaph to Capt. Drstal, 253
Chair, Ancient, 284
—— The Poet Gay's, 284
Chandelier for Buckingham Palace, 213
Chapel Royal, Dublin, View of the Interior of, 108
Charles Albert, Reception of the Remains of, 277
"Charles the Second," Scene from, 317
Chatham Lines, Successful Attempt to Escalade the Right of, 64
—— Siege Operations at, 64
Cheltenham Station, Royal Train leaving, 237
Chess Match between London and Amsterdam—Position after Move 39, 115
Chesterfield Cup, The, 73
Chettle Church, Dorset, 385
Chimney-Valve, Dr. Arnott's Ventilating, 211
Chinese Pirates, Boat Attack on, 372
Chippewa Indian Chiefs, Portraits of, 180
"Chivalry," Maclise's Picture of, 169
Chopin (M.), Portrait of, 288
Christmas Carol-singing by Brighton Fishermen, 420
—— Distribute-s of Coals, 424
—— Eve in Yorkshire, 420
—— Pudding, Carving the, 417
—— Sketches of, 417 et seq.
Church Decoration, Hardman's Works for, 189
Church, Leaving, 329
—— (New), at Leverstock-green, 317
—— New Presbyterian, at Birmingham, 341
Churnet Valley Railway, and Pandyard Reservoir, 77
"Cinderella," Pictures of, 281
Circumcetre, Roman Pavement in, 164, 333
City, Royal Visit to, 289
Cleeden House before its Destruction, 340
Cleendo-, Portrait of the Earl of, 105
Coalbrook-dale Iron-works, 213
Coal-Exchange, Opening of the New: Embarkation at Whitehall, 289
—— Procession seen from Waterloo-bridge, 292
—— Procession seen from Southwark-bridge, 292
—— Royal Barge passing London-bridge, 293
—— Arrival at the Custom House, 296
—— Debarkation at Custom House Quay, 293
—— Presentation of the Address, 300
—— View of the Exterior, 304
—— View of the Interior, 304
—— View of the Vestibule, 300
Coals, Distribution of, 424
Colcrton Hall, Plate at, 240
College, Inauguration of the Statue at Queen's (Ireland), 85
—— View of Brighton, 245
Colours, Presentation of, to 23rd Regiment, 44
Consecration of Bishops at Lambeth Palace, 276
Constantinople, Bazaar at, 261
—— Black Slave of, 260
—— Burial-ground at, 261
—— Cake-seller of, 260
—— Dogs of, 261
—— Baker of, 260
—— Sketches at, 260, 320
—— Timber-laden Mule of, 261
—— Water-carrier of, 260
Convent (Mexican), Interior of a, 269
Cookham Wood, Ceremony at the Boundary-stone, 37
—— "Immunity" at, 37
Coping-stone and Laying Apparatus, 276
Corfu, Admiral Parker leaving, for Cephalonia, 209
Cork Harbour, Royal Fleet leaving, 89
—— View of, 72
Cork, Her Majesty Landing at, 84
—— The Corporation awaiting her Majesty's Landing, 81
—— View of, 84
Corn, American, 256
—— Barbadoes, 256
Cossacks (Don), Sketch of, 208
Cotherstone, Remains of, 416
Cottingham (Mr.), Portrait of, 80
Cove, Illumination at, 85
Cows, Short-horned, 61
Culloden Moor, Proposed Monument for, 220
—— View of, 220
Cup, Loo Challenge, 21
—— Queen Elizabeth's, 21
Cupar Angus, Arrival of the Queen at, 233

DANCE of Peasantry at Carton, 125
Dardanelles, British Squadron in, 353
Day-Yard, The, 348
Deep-draining Machine, Paul's, 400
Derwash, A Dancing, 260
Devil's Punch-bowl, Killarney, 68
Dewan Moolraj, Portrait of, 148
Diana, Statue of, Found at Nemi, 284
Dibdin, House of the, at Sadler's Wells, 181
Dogana (Venice), View of the, 196
Dogs Feeding, 349
Domestic Gas-light Apparatus, Diagram of, 196
Drinking-Horn at Oxford, 301
Driving Cattle for Rent (Ireland), 444
Dublin, Her Majesty Entering the City of, 104
Dublin Castle, Scene in the Court-yard, 176
—— Scene in St. Patrick's Hall, 105
Dublin Castle, Scene in the Throne-room, 96
Dudley Cavern, Sir J. Murchison's Lecture in, 201
Dudley Ten-yard Open Coal-Seam, 201
Dunloe, Gap of, 52
Dyak and Kayan Weapons, 313
Dyak (Tattooed) of Kenowit, 312

EARTH-STOPPER, The, 349
Eccles-street, Arch in, 86
Egyptian Animals for Zoological Society, 80
Election, Scene at the West Surrey, 224
Elgin (Countess), Marble Statue of, 269
Elizabeth's (Queen) Cup, 21
Elliott, Portrait of Ebenezer, 397
Embarkation of her Majesty for Ireland, 65
Encampment during Cholera near Shrewsbury, 213
Enigmas, Pictorial, 423
Equimaux Sketch of the Arctic Expedition, 250
Europa (Steam-ship) assisting the Charles Bartlett, 1
Euston Terminus, General Meeting-room at, 181
Exchange (Edinburgh Corn), View of Exterior, 373
—— View of Interior, 373
Exposition (French), Distribution of Prizes for, 193
—— of Arts (Birmingham), Specimens, 193, 213
—— of French Industry, 357

"FALLING DEER," E. Corbould's Picture of, 168
Farm-buildings at Liscard, Plan of, 389
Fashions (Paris) for August, 52
—— for September, 156
—— for October, 221
—— for November, 301
—— for December, 365
—— for New Year, 445
Faustin I., of Hayti, in Council, 337
"Fear of the World"—Not at Home, 429
—— Full Dress, 429
—— the Opera Box, 445
Feed, Drawing Dogs to, 349
Fête at Colsorton Hall, 240
Fire in Lower Thames-street, 388
—— At St. Michael's Church, Cambridge, 336
—— Annihilator, Section of Phillips's, 172
Fish-market, Billingsgate, 317
Florin, Sketch of the New, 133
Flower-stand, Parian, 213
"Flying Dutchman," Portrait of, 185
Fog, Scene in a London, 432
Foley, Marriage of Lord, 44
Follett (Sir W.), Marble Statue of, 164
Forfeits, Game of, 428
Forty-day Maize, 256
France, Christmas Custom in, 432
Francisco (San), Sketch of the Bay of, 325
French Industry, Specimens of, 357
Fruit, Importation of Christmas, 401
Fulham and Hammersmith, New Workhouse for, 66

"GARCIA," Scene from, 397
Garibaldi and his Negro, 36
Garibaldi's Lessons, One of, 38
—— Men, 17
Gas-light Apparatus (Domestic), Diagram of a, 196
Gay's (the Poet) Chair, 284
George II., Procession passing the Statue of (Ireland), 85
Geresimus (St.), View of the Convent of, 372
Gerrits, Portrait of M., 172
Glasgow Cathedral, Royal Visit to, 140
—— Queen Landing at, 128
—— Queen passing Triumphal Arch at, 128
—— National Bank, Exterior, 12
—— Telling-room at, 12
Glasnevin, Botanic Gardens, Queen's Visit to, 117
Glass, Group of, by Harris, 189
Glindre, Palace of Prince Charles of Prussia at, 180
Gloucester, Change of Guard at, 237
—— Her Majesty's Reception by Duchess of, 8
—— House, Plate at, 8
Gobelin Tapestry from Louis Napoleon, 344
Gold (Californian), Arrival of, at the Bank of England, 200
—— Lump of, 354
Gold-washing, California, 325
Goodwood Cup, The, 76
Grammar-School (Queen Elizabeth's), at Wimborne, 309
Grand Parade (Cork), Procession passing, 88
Grape Cart, Tuscany, 265
—— Gathering, Tuscany, 265
Grenada, Storm in, 56
Guyon (Gen.) defending himself, 448
Gwent, Death of the King of (Statuary) 109,
Gwydyr House, Sitting of Board of Health at, 332

HALO, Fine Solar, 351
Hamilton, Candelabrum presented to Duke of, 28
Hammersmith and Fulham, New Workhouse for, 66
Hammersmith Iron-works (Dublin), Her Majesty passing, 93
"Harlequin and Good Queen Bess," Scene from, 436
Harp, A Silver Prize, 149
Harvest Home, An Irish, 188
Hastings, View of, 184
Haynau (Baron), Portrait of, 373
Hayti, The Emperor of, in Council, 337
Heads, Dyak Mode of Drying, 313
Herd-boy of Purple Mountain, Killarney, 69
Hereford Bull, &c., 60
Hever Castle, 349
Highgate Cemetery, 221
Highlands, Return of the Queen from, 233
High-Level Bridge, Carriage Roadway in, 149
High Tor Tunnel, 352
Holborn Estate Charity Almshouses, 229
Holydays for the Poor, Sketches of, 112
Holy Trinity (Westminster), Laying the First Stone of the Church of, 336
Horbury Chapel, Notting-hill, View of, 181
Horse-box, The Railway, 184
—— Market, Smithfield, 244
—— Van, The, 184
Horses, Agricultural, 69
Horticultural Society's Plate, 21
Hugo (Victor), Portrait of, 152
Humboldt (Baron), Portrait of, 208
Hungarian Artillery, 57
—— Emigrants marching to Shumla, 448
—— Hussars at Folkestone, 45
—— Peasant Outpost, 97
—— Shepherds, 9
—— Water-carrier, 9
—— Wine, Convoy of, 9
Hungary, Austrian Recruits for, 228
—— Map of, 46
—— Sketches in, 9
Hunting-Season, Sketches of the, 348
Hussars (Hungarian) at Folkestone, 45
Hut (Loch Muick), View of the Queen's, 172

ICE Breaking-up in the Polar Regions, 249
—— Climbing-out of, in the Polar Regions, 248
Icebergs, &c. in Arctic Regions, 249
—— near Labrador, 344
Iguana, The, 341
Infant-School, Dublin, Queen's Visit to, 117
Inniefailen, Chapel of the Abbey, 41
Invercauld, Arrival of her Majesty at, 141
Iona, Girl of, 196
—— Herd-boy of, 196
Ireland, Embarkation of her Majesty for, 65
——, Sketches of Misery in, 393, 404, 444
Irish Harvest-Home, a Sketch, 188
Iron Store-house for California, 20
"Island of Jewels" (Extravaganza), Scene from the, 437

JACKEY JACKEY, Portrait of, 325
Jago (St.) de Cuba, Sketch of, 325
Jerjeebhoy Dadabhoy, Portrait of, 77
Judges, Installation of French, 305
Jupiter and Moon, Diagram of, 398

KATE KEARNEY'S Cottage, 69
Kasper Hauser, The, 340
Kennedy, the Australian Explorer, Portrait of, 133
Kennel, The, 348
Kenowit, Daughter of the Chief of, 312
—— View of the Town of, 313
Kestrel, Wreck of the, 149
Killarney, Sketches at, 40, 49, 68
Killney Bay, Royal Squadron in, 92
Kilrush, View of, 393
King James" (Pantomime), Scene from, 436
Kingstown Harbour, Her Majesty Leaving, 117
—— Presentation of Royal Children in, 128
Kossuth, Portrait of, 448

LAMBETH Burial-ground, 192
—— Palace, Consecration at, 276
Lancers, One of Garibaldi's, 25
Laurence, Hon. A., Portrait of, 252
Leaving Church, 329
Legitimists, Arrest of, in Paris, 369
Leigh, Ceremony at the Boundary-stone, 37
Leizilp, Triumphal Arch at, 126
Leopold (Port), Sky at, 360
Leverstock-green, New Church at, 317
Lewin (M.), Candelabrum presented to Mr., 176
Lighthouse, Bishop's Rock, 340
Linen Hall, Belfast, Queen's Visit to, 113
Liscard, Farm Buildings at, Plan of, 389
Litchfield (Capt.), Plate presented to, 365
Llandaff, Portrait of the Bishop of, 376
Lodge, View of the Viceregal, 108
Lodging-house, Sketch in a, 341
London-wall, Fire at, 256
Loo Challenge Cup, 21
Lord-Lieutenant's Barge shooting the Rapids, Killarney, 217
"Loving Woman," Scene from the, 413
Lune, Viaduct over the, 301

MACAO, Assassination of the Governor of, 308
Macbeth, Marble Statue of, 229
——, Scene from the Play of, 253
Macgillicuddy's Reeks, 40
Mackinnon (Mr.), Portrait of, 44
Macready (Mr.), as Iago, 365
—— as Macbeth, 253
—— and Wallack, in "Othello," 365
Madras, Portrait of the Bishop of, 376
Magdalen College New School, Oxford, 221
Maize Crop in St. James's-park, 256
Magi, Adoration of the, 425
"Malvolio i' the Sun," from "Twelfth Night," 72
Manchester Railway Express Steamer, 28
Mangerton, Ascent of (Killarney), 69
Manning, View of the House where captured, 147
Manning's House, View of, 147
Mansion House, Grand Dinner at, 29
Mardyke, Cork, Procession passing through the, 89
Martin's (St.) Burial-ground, 192
Mary Elizabeth, Wreck of the, 200
Meanwood New Church, View of, 252
Medal Castings, Group of, 189
Mevagissey, Cholera Encampment near, 133
Michael's (St.) Church, Cambridge, Fire at, 335
Milman (Rev. H. H.), Portrait of, 336
Minstrels, Portraits of Expelled Welayan, 188
Mitchell (Mr.), Candelabrum presented to, 61
Model Cottages (Scotland), 205
Money, Distribution of, 37
Montenegrin Heads, Presentation of, 280
—— Refugees in Scutari, 228
Montenegro, View of, 228
Monte Testaccio, Roman Battery at, 25
Moolraj, Portrait of, 148
Moon and Jupiter, Diagram of, 398
Moore, Portrait of Thomas, from the, 416
Morley Testimonial, Sketch of the, 165
Morveen, View of the ruined Village of, 405
Mucross Abbey, 41
Mull, Peasant Girl of, 196
Mummy Wheat in Bar, 196
"Murderers of Thomas Chase drawing up the Letter to the Clergy," 57

NAPIER (Sir C.), Banquet to, at Simla, 392
Napoleon's Bedstead and Chair, 316
Nassau-street, Arch in, 86
National Gallery, improved by R. Allom, 441
Naval Asylum at Penge, View of the King William, 377
Navy Yard (U. S.) New Dry Dock, 276
Needham-Market Railway Station, 392
Nelson, Alto-relievo of the Death of, 392
—— Column (Dublin), Electric Light on the, 96
—— Scene at, 93
—— Volunteering to Board a Prize, 316
Newcastle-on-Tyne, Presentation of Addresses to the Queen at, 233
New Orleans, View of, 5
New Year's Day in Paris, 433
New York, Sketches at, 276, 277
"Ninth Statue" (Extravaganza), Scene from the, 437
Noah's Sacrifice, 361
Noel, Le Bouhonme, 432
Noel, Portrait of the Rev. Baptist, 141
North Shields, Incorporation Festival at, 309
Norwich and Ipswich Railway, Opening of, 352
Norwich, Portrait of the Bishop of, 376
Norwood Cemetery, 192

"OBERON," Statnette, 13
O'Donnel (Bridget) and Children, Portrait of, 404
O'Donnel's (Judy) Habitation under a Bridge, 444
O'Donoghue's Horse, 41
Orologio (Venice), Sketch of the Tower of the, 196
Osborne, Sketches of, 216, 364
——, Alcove at, 364
——, Entrance front, 364
——, Part of the Terrace at, 216
——, View of, from the Sea, 216
Ox, Hereford, 385
——, North Devon, 388
——, Short-horned, 388, 400
——, West Highland, 385

PACIFIC Mail Routes, Chart of New, 371
Paintings (Indian).
—— Indian Warrior, setting out, 173
—— Interior of an Indian Palace, 173
—— Saiva Figures, 173
Palais de Justice, Installation of Judges at, 305
Pamfili Doria Villa, Rome, 4
Panama, Chart of New Routes across, 371
Pancrazio (Porta San), Rome, 4
Paper Money, Austrian, 337
Paris Exposition; Specimens, 5
—— New Year's Day in, 433
—— Portrait of the Archbishop of, 152
"Pas de Patineurs," at H. M. Theatre, 32
Passage, View of, 85
Patrick's (St.) Hall, Dublin Castle, Scene in, 105
Pavement, Roman Tesselated (Cirencester), 333
Pavilion, Royal Landing (Kingstown), 93
Peace Congress, Meeting at Paris, 152
Peasantry (Irish) Dancing at Carton, 125
Pheasant Shooting, 272
Philharmonic Concert Hall (Liverpool), Exterior of the New, 153
—— Interior of the New, 153
Phœnix Park, Artillery advancing at Review in, 124
—— Her Majesty at the Review in, 124
—— Review in, 101
Pig, Uncurving, 396
Pirates, Engagement with Borneo, 312
—— Meteor's Boat Attack on Chinese, 372
Pitman (Commander), Court-martial on, 177
Plate, Group of, 213
Plaza del Popolo, 36
Pleasure Canal Boats: Scene at Paddington Basin, 112
—— Vans, Sketch of, 112
Polar Regions, Sketches of, 248
—— Winter Quarters in, 248
Poor-Law Sketches (Ireland), 393, 404, 444
Portcullin, Slyres, 357
Potatoes, Searching for (Ireland), 405
Prague Paper Money, 307
Presteigne, Halt near, 9
Presbyterian Church (New), Birmingham, 341
Price's Candle Factory, Sketches in, 380
—— Candle Moulding Room, 381
—— Night-Light Department, 381
—— Threading and Stripping Department, 380
—— Steam-boiling Room, &c., 380
Prisiina, the Bey of, Marching to join the Pacha, 280
Protestant Burial-ground, Rome, 4
"Prophète," Coronation Scene from, 56
Puck, Statnette, 13
Pump, Patent Feeding Filtering, 199
Pups, A Litter of, 349

QUEEN'S Hut (Loch Muick), View of, 172

RACE Plate, Sketch of the Warwick, 176
Railway Carriage, Interior of the Royal, 241
Railway, View of the Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 208
Ram's Horn Bridge, Sketch of, 187
Raymond and May's Portable Steam-engine, 400
Rattler (H. M. S.) Capturing a Slaver, 440
Reade (Sir T.), Sketch of the House of, near Tunis, 132
Reading, Guildford, and Reigate Railway, View of, 208
Recruits (Austrian) for Hungary, 228
Regatta, Start at the Caernarvon, 157
——Thames, 32
River Steam-Train, Bourne's, 109
Roche (Mr. E. B.), Portrait of, 24
Roman Pavement at Cirencester, 333
Rome, Assassination Scene at, 225
—— Entry of the French into, 36
—— General View of Siege Operations, 24
—— The Last Attack, 53
Roofing-tile (Glue's, View of, 196
Ross Castle, 40
Ross, Sir J., Return of, 321
Rotunda, Dublin, Procession passing the, 101
ROYAL-STREET (Dublin), Illuminations in, 96
Sacrifice, Noah's, 361
Salt-Cellar (Ancient) at Christ's College, Cambridge, 228
Saltmarket, Glasgow, Woman and Girl of, 196
Saltwood Castle, View of, 445
Samuel Enderby (Whale-ship), Departure of, for Auckland Isles, 132
Sardinia, Reception of the Remains of the King of, 277
Saxophone, The, 5
Sayed Pacha (Steam-yacht), 244
Scalp at Cahuermore, Sketch of a, 444
—— View of a, 405
Sculpsen of Tun Downs, View of the, 404
—— Sketch of a, 393
Scarborough, View of, 232
Schofield (Mr.), Portrait of, 13
Scottish Character, Sketches of, 196
Screen, Restored Iron, in Westminster Abbey, 305
Scutari, Montenegrin Refugees in, 228
—— Mountaineers presenting Montenegrin Heads, 280
—— Sketches at, 280
Severn, Viaduct over the, 333
Sèvres Porcelain, 357
Shumla, March of Hungarian Emigrants to, 448
Sheep, Uncarting, 396
Sheriffs, Procession of, to Westminster 240
Shields (North), Incorporation Festival at, 309
Short-Horn Bulls, 61
Siddons (Mrs.), Marble Statue of, 229
Sierra Madre, View of, 20
Silchester, Sketch of a Bronze found near, 373
Silver Fans, Group of, 213
Simla, View of, 148
Simplon, Destruction of the Great Road over the, 80
Slaver Captured by H.M.S. Rattler, 440
Smithfield Horse Market, 244
Smithfield Market.—Cows and Calves, 48
—— The Drover's Goad, 33
Snipe Shooting, a Sketch, 413
Solar Halo, Fine, 251
Soldiers (Turkish) on Drill, 320
Sontag (Mdme), Portrait of, 13
Southampton (Ex-Mayor), Plate presented to, 365
State Note, Austrian, 307
Statue found at Rome, 440
Statnettes, by Lough, 13
Steam-Engine, Ransomes and May's Portable, 400
Steam-pressure Indicator (Smith's), Diagram of, 402
Steam Train, Bourne's River, 109
St. Mary's Creek, Chatham, Formation of Pontoon Bridge over, 64
Strand, Interment Scene in the, 161
Sulpice (St.), Council of Bishops in the Chapel of, 212
Sultan's State Barge, 320
Summer Shades, a Sketch, 73
Sun-Flora, Front View of, 353
—— Side View of, 353
Sword dedicated to French Patriotism, 5

TABLE, Brass, 213
Talford (Mr. Justice), Portrait of, 92
Tamah, a Borneo, 312
Tapestry (Gobelin), from Louis Napoleon, 344
Terrace Bastion, Chatham, Breaching of, 64
Terrace (Great), Windsor, Sketch of, 264
Terrible, War-steamer, View of, 224
Tewkrie, Death of (Statuary), 169
Thames and Medway Conservancy, 37
Thames Regatta, 32
Thames-street (Lower), Fire in, 28
Throne-room, Dublin Castle, Scene in the, 96
Tiamia, Statuette, 13
Toro Cascade, Kilarney, 49
Travelling Carriage-Boat, Sketch of a, 149
Trichinopoly, Fortress and Rock of, 308
Trinidad, Riot in, 308
Trinkets (Port), Capture of, 356
Tullig, View of the Ruined Village of 393
Tunbridge Castle, Ruins of, 138
—— Wells, viewed from the Race-course, 137
Tunnel, The High Tor, 352
Turkish Cake-seller, 260
—— Children, 261
—— Soldiers on Drill, 320
Tuscany, Vintage in, 265

VAUXHALL GARDENS, Balloon Ascent from, 144.
—— Gothic Ruins at, 144
—— The Neptune Fountain at, 144
—— View of the Italian Walk in, 144
Venice, Sketches at, 196
Ventilator, Patent Air-Syphon, 227
Versailles, High Court of Justice at, 241
Vernon (Mr.), Medallion Portrait of, 245
Vesey's (Mrs.) Grounds, Gateway to, 146
Viaduct over the Lune, Lancaster, 301
—— over the Severn, 333
—— the Monard, Ireland, 273
Victor Hugo, Portrait of, 152
Vicar's Steps at Chatsworth, 328
Villa Pamfili Doria, Rome, 4
Viceregal Lodge (Dublin), View of, 108

"WALK-OUT," The, 348
Wallack (Mr.), as Macduff, 253
—— as Othello, 365
Warwick Race Plate, Sketch of the, 176
Watch Memento Mori of Mary Queen of Scots, 188
Waterloo, Dyak, 313
Wesleyan Ministers (Expelled), Portraits of, 188
West Surrey Election, Scene at, 224
Wether, Leicester, 400
—— South Down, 400
Whale captured in the Thames, 257
Wheat (Mummy) in Bar, 196
Wilton Church (Byzantine), Interior of, 76
—— Pulpit in, 77
Wimborne, Queen Elizabeth's Grammar School at, 309
Windsor Castle, Sketches of, 264
Wine-cooler, Sketch of a, 165
Winter, a Sketch, 424
Wolfe, Monument to General, 28
Wolverton Mechanics' Institute Soirée 440
Woodhay (East), New Church at, 268
Woollett the Engraver, Portrait of, 160
Worming, Viewed from Beach, 137

"YANKEE DOODLE," (Pantomime), Scene from, 416
York Station, Departure of the Queen from, 236
—— Presentation of Address to the Queen at, 236

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLER, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1850.—SUPPLEMENT.